Tony Doerr takes second place in PPK competition

Tony Doerr, 12, 2646 Cemetery Rd., took second place honors and Paul Brown, 9, took third place in this year's Punt, Pass and Kick competition held Wednesday, Oct. 3, at Flint's Atwood Stadium.

Doerr scored 249½ points in the 12-year-old competition and competed against 18 other youths.

Brown scored 163 points, competing against 15 other contestants in the nine-year-old class.

All boys who participated in the competition were local winners in competition held at the Cass City Village Park Sept. 29.

Other local contestants were Stewart Batts, 8, with 100 points; Scott Stine, 10, with 198 points; Timothy Fahrner, 11, with 235 points and Dean Alexander, 13, with 303 points.

Punt, Pass and Kick competition is sponsored annually in Cass City by Auten Motors and the Jaycees.

JV's win second against Caro

Cass City JV's made it two in a row last Thursday by defeating Caro 24-14. Cass City got out to an early lead when Caro fumbled on their 30-yard line and Cass City marched down the field to score. Clark Hillaker pounded over from the one yard line. Tom Smentek made the two-point conversion good when he and Dave Zawilinski connected on a pass play.

Cass City again received the ball on a pass interception and scored when Zawilinski passed to Rick Tuckey.

Hillaker scored the third touchdown on a three-yard run with Tuckey and Zawilinski connecting for the extra point.

Junior Red Hawk of the week is Guy Howard for making 11 tackles, defensively, and also doing some outstanding offensive blocking.

Cass City travels to Bad Axe Thursday night at 7:00 p.m.

Girl's basketball team loses first game

The Cass City Girl's basketball fortunes suffered their first loss of the season as the Frankenmuth squad downed the girls 50-25 Tuesday, Oct. 2.

Frankenmuth pulled away late in the game to put the game out of reach, bringing Cass City's record to two victories compared with one loss.

Elaine Stoutenburg was the leading scorer for the distaff Hawks with 11 points. Kathy Clarke was second with six points.

The JV squad downed the Frankenmuth JV's 26-21, with Kris Krueger scoring 10 points and Lisa Zimba eight points. In addition, Ms. Zimba pulled down 27 rebounds in the winning effort.

The girls take on Vassar at the Cass City High School gym Oct. 16.

Lose 12-7

Hawks dumped from contention by Bad Axe

Cass City will be playing the rest of the season just to have some fun, Coach Roland Pakonen said this week following his team's upset loss to the Bad Axe Hatchets Friday night, 12-7.

And the fun is due to start this Friday when the Hawks entertain the Frankenmuth Eagles another eleven that has been disappointing in the first half of the season.

We'll be trying some different things, says Pakonen, and using some different players in starting roles to see if we can get it all together for the rest of the season.

Coming on the heels of the upset victory over Caro the previous week, the loss was especially frustrating for Red Hawks fans.

The loss dropped them from contenders to also rans in the Thumb B Conference.

The Hawks had two brief moments of glory in a game where the visitors dominated most of the time.

Before the crowd had settled in the seats, Ed Stoutenburg took the opening kick-off and steamed down the left sideline behind a wall of blocks to score standing up. When Scott Hartel booted the extra point things looked rosy for Cass City. It was not to last.

The Hatchets moved to within a point of the Hawks late in the first quarter. Moving through the Hawk defense for large hunks of real estate on nearly every play the visitors marched steadily down the field. The drive was capped by Ken Sams' two-yard plunge for the touchdown. The extra point failed and the Hawks led 7-6. That's the way the first half ended.

Cass City offense and defense improved in the second half. Improved except for one play on defense when Dave Eisinger slipped behind the Hawk secondary in the left flat and gathered in a perfect toss from Dave Gay and rambled to the Cass City two before he was knocked out of bounds. From there Sams bounced over for the touchdown that spelled victory for Bad Axe.

The Hawks mounted two scoring drives of their own but mistakes aborted both of them.

Once Cass City bulled its way down field on the ground to the Bad Axe 13 with a first and 10. An attempted pass backfired and Quarterback Jerry Toner was smeared for a 10-yard loss. That ended the threat.

Another drive was stopped by an intercepted pass, one of three picked off by the visitors.

Coach Pakonen named Steve Izydorek as Red Hawk of the week for his fine defense. Steve has been one of our pleasant surprises this year, Pakonen said. He was credited with six tackles and four assists.

Chester Sieradzki again led the team on defense with 13 unassisted tackles and 11 assists.

Baguley asks board to raise salaries

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners heard a request it has heard before at its regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday—more money for increased salaries.

This time the request came from Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge Norman Baguley when he asked the board for higher salary and expense levels for court reporters.

Baguley outlined the problem by telling the commissioners that the present salary figure of $10,500 with $1,500 supplemental expense money is simply not enough to compete with other districts in the state. He said his district, which encompasses Tuscola and Lapeer counties, pays the lowest salary to court reporters of any district in the state.

Presently, the Circuit Court has one full-time court reporter and has an opening for another. Baguley told the commissioners he has been unable to fill this post because of the low salary figure he must offer.

"I have been attempting to get a court reporter," Baguley said. "I felt at the time we set the salary at $10,500, we couldn't get anyone, but I did try. I've had numerous responses but all the interviews terminate as soon as they hear our salary proposal."

Baguley called for a minimum court reporter salary of $12,000 plus $3,000 in supplemental pay benefits.

"This will still put us at about the lowest salary in the state, but it will give us a little better chance to find someone to take the job," Baguley explained.

Baguley told the commissioners he had laid the problem before the Lapeer County Commissioners who placed the blame at the doorstep of the Tuscola commissioners.

"I'm not passing the buck, gentlemen," Baguley told the solons. "I'm just bringing it upstairs."

He explained that neighboring counties and circuit courts pay court reporters' salaries ranging from $12,500 in Sanilac and Huron counties to $20,000-$25,000 in Flint.

"We just can't compete at $10,500," Baguley said.

Baguley told the commissioners that presently, he must hire court reporters from private reporting services at $85 per day. Based on a 200-day court calendar, this totals some $17,000 in payments to court reporters.

"We simply have to pay," Baguley said. "It's the old law of supply and demand."

He said there have been 45 changes in court reporters in the Tuscola Circuit Court since June.

Baguley also explained the knotty problem of transcripts. Under Michigan law, the transcript of a case belongs to the court reporter. If a copy is needed, the reporter must be located and a copy obtained.

This, Baguley explained, has involved going as far away as Texas and Florida to obtain such transcripts.

"Gentlemen, it all boils down to money," Baguley said.

He called the present situation impossible to live with and called for the commissioners to view the situation realistically.

Commissioner Charles Woodcock said he wondered how it would look if a court reporter should end up making more money than some of the circuit or district judges in the area.

Baguley replied that this has not been the case yet and does not foresee such an eventuality.

"We're competing with 47 other circuits and it's simply ridiculous to try to do so with the present court reporter salary," he said.

Board Chairman Shuford Kirk said the Tuscola board must come to an agreement with the Lapeer board before a final salary figure could be set. He recommended the matter be referred to the personnel committee, advising it to get in touch with the personnel committee of the Lapeer Board of Commissioners to settle the matter quickly.

Village completes traffic sign changes

Village Supt. Lou LaPonsie reported last week that work has been completed on several changes in Cass City's major street program as recommended by the Michigan State Highway Department.

The changes were made as the result of a survey made by Don McCarty, assistant district traffic engineer for the department. The survey was initiated after the village had asked for reclassification of Hill Street from a local to a major street.

This change would provide some $3,500 per mile in state aid for maintenance as compared with $700 for local streets.

LaPonsie also indicated that, because of changes in signing and parking, he has received approval of the village's request for reclassification of Hill Street.

The changes to date include the following:

The yield right-of-way signs on Garfield Street at West Street have been removed and replaced with stop signs on West. This makes Garfield a through street.

The yield sign at Garfield and Oak Streets has been removed and replaced by a stop sign.

A stop sign has also been removed from Garfield and placed on Maple Street at the Garfield intersection.

Yield signs have also been placed on Houghton and Third Streets at their West Street intersections, making West a through street from Main to Garfield.

At the intersection of Ale and Church Streets, the yield signs have been removed and replaced with stop signs.

Yield signs have also been removed and replaced with stop signs at the intersection of Leach and Church Streets.

LaPonsie also indicated that eventually, no parking will be allowed within 30 feet of a crosswalk. This will necessitate work crews painting out the stall next to crosswalks and removing parking meters at those locations.

The plan calls for removing the first stall on all streets with angle parking and removing two stalls on West Street near the Auten Motor Sales garage.

Additionally, the plan calls for the erection of 36-inch round warning signs about 250 feet either side of the railroad crossing.

Teacher wins settlement

Class rings: school heads defend position

Two lingering problems were resolved by the Cass City Board of Education Monday night in its regular session at Cass City High School. A third still faces action by the board at a future meeting.

It is likely that one of the decisions reached pleased members while the second did not.

For several years the board has debated how much to pay William Zimba, Deford, for the transportation of his deaf daughter to the Michigan School for the Deaf in Flint.

Now under a new state aid formula the district will pay $66 and the State $200 for transportation to and from the school on week ends.

The action of the local board pleased Zimba, but he vowed to continue his one-man crusade for equal rights for the handicapped on the State level until the deaf have all the advantages of any student attending school.

The decision that the school board made in the case of Dennis Collon of Unionville was far less pleasing to board members.

Collon was the industrial arts teacher who faced Army service, was accepted and then rejected at the last moment. He resigned because of this and a new man was hired to replace him.

When he was rejected at the last moment he wanted his job back. The board, on the recommendation of Supt. Donald Crouse, refused.

Collon, with the help of the Michigan Education Association, sued.

After a year of discussion, the school's lawyers recommended a settlement of $3,000 for the teacher and the board concurred Monday. The total pay for the teacher if he had been hired for the last half year was about $4,000. The school will pay lawyer fees in addition to the settlement amount.

SCHOOL RINGS

Principal Russell Richards and Supt. Crouse asked the board for a policy concerning school rings. They appeared with copies of ads run by McConkey Jewelry which they felt reflected on the school.

Crouse said that he felt that the school was being used.

Richards told the board that he was out for the best deal for the students. He also said that when various companies showed their wares last year there was little difference in the prices. Now, he said, the students save $20 buying through the school.

McConkey has run a continuing campaign to "get the school out of the ring business". He vowed to continue it. Taxpayers' money should be used for education, he says. He points to decisions in Ohio and Illinois where schools are moving away from participation in purchase of non-school supplies as desirable trends.

One day, he feels, all schools will not be allowed to sell or supervise the sale of rings.

Rings are now purchased from the Josten Company. Crouse wants them to continue to supply the rings until "challenged" by another company. Prices for the rings are renegotiated each year.

Athletic Director Robert Stickle presented a breakdown of the cost of athletics and the program for boys and girls to the board. It showed a deficit of about $1000.

It also indicates that boys' football and basketball are paying the freight for all sports at the school. According to the report, there were 10 sports offered for girls from Junior High through the 12th grade. Boys participate in nine different sports.

Following the action of the board Monday, there are now 11 sports offered for girls as girls' track was authorized. Cost of the track program has been estimated at $1,170.75 for the first year. It is expected to be substantially reduced after the first year as uniforms and warm-up outfits will cost $980 the first year only.

Girls' track had been actively promoted by board members Mrs. Geraldine Prieskorn and Dr. Edward Scollon. The final vote was 6-1 in favor with Trustee Bob Hirn dissenting.

OTHER BUSINESS

Another teacher's salary question was cleared by the board Monday. Mrs. Shirley Tuckey signed a 1972-73 contract that failed to allow her credit for a half year's experience teaching at Marlette.

She signed to teach during negotiations and it was not known if payment for experience in other districts would be allowed in the master contract between Cass City Education Association and the school district.

When it was allowed, it wasn't included in her contract. Supt. Crouse recommended that the $145.43 be paid but since it was for the previous fiscal year board approval was needed. There was no opposition.

New industrial arts equipment was purchased. Low among three bidders was Albee Hardware. The bid was $1,208.01. Purchased were a wood lathe, scroll saw, radial saw and router.

Bus insurance for no-fault insurance was let. State Farm Insurance was low among three bidders at a cost of $2,702.60.

Two used school buses were sold to the highest bidders. A Ford sold to Calvary Baptist Church of Holland for $915 and a Dodge to Calvary Baptist Temple of Detroit for $853.

It was disclosed that the school hot lunch program is operating in the black during the opening weeks of school.

Owen-Gage board approves budget of $570,115

The Owendale-Gagetown Board of Education approved an operating budget for the 1973-74 school year totaling $570,115.00 at its regularly scheduled Monday night meeting.

This figure compares with $540,000 for the 1972-73 school year.

Official enrollment at Owen-Gage was set at 628 students. This will generate $526 per child from local school taxes and $290 per child from state aid monies. The district operates on a total millage of 21.5 mills.

School Supt. Glen Sanford said the district will "do fine on the budget" barring any unforeseen difficulties.

Discussion centered around the school building program and specifically around a site for a proposed building. The board has a number of sites under consideration but is still awaiting final recommendations from architects before making a decision.

Specifically, the board needs answers to sanitary and storm sewer needs on the considered sites. Word is expected late this week.

Bills amounting to $3,500 were reviewed and accepted for payment.

The board also reviewed its quarterly budget.

O'Henley-Depcinski vows exchanged

Miss Linda Depcinski and Thomas O'Henley were married in a double-ring ceremony Saturday, Sept. 22, at St. John Catholic Church, Ubly.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Allen Depcinski and Mr. and Mrs. John O'Henley, all of Cass City. Rev. Bernard Skornia officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a floor-length gown of Shiffley embroidered white organza and carried a cascade of white carnations and white baby mums accented with purple statice.

Miss Karen Depcinski, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mary Depcinski, cousin of the bride, and Sharon Geiger.

Raymond O'Henley, brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Ervin Depcinski, brother of the bride, and Randy Rutkowski.

A reception was held at the Ubly Fox Hunters Club for 350 guests.

The bride is a secretary at Huron County Abstract Co., Bad Axe, and the groom works at Royster Fertilizer Plant, Owendale. Both are graduates of Ubly High School. They are living in rural Bad Axe following a wedding trip to Mackinac Island and northern Michigan.

Rabbit tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

The Lions are in the midst of their annual broom selling campaign to raise money for Sight Conservation programs. Alger Freiburger dropped in and sold the Chronicle. News editor Jim Ketchum bought a push broom for his garage.

He was carrying it with him sort of like an infantry man with a rifle at parade rest when he stopped at my desk to announce that he was about to start out on his newsy rounds.

Charge, Don Quixote, I told him.

+ + + + + + + +

Don't ask me to pronounce the name, but it's a German dog. It's a rare one, too. There is only one other like it in Michigan. It's rare you ready for this? ran Affenpinscher. A small red dog with a moustache, says Webster.

I learned about this from Janet, a Cass City High School senior who works here.

Janet is the daughter of the Herman Umpfenbachs and if I'd told you the name first there would have been no need to tell you that the dog was German.

Anyone knows that Umpfenbachs and Affenpinschers just have to go together.

+ + + + + + + +

Surprisingly enough we've heard from a lot of you good people saying that you like the tabloid size adopted by the Chronicle during the paper shortage.

There have been complaints. The one heard most often is that the print is too fine. Older folks have trouble, I'm told. Certainly the type is much smaller than we'd like (or will have when the crisis eases). We'll be back with our regular editions just as soon as conditions permit.

No one knows when that will be.

+ + + + + + + +

The most succinct remark about the new sized paper was related to me by Dale Damm. He popped in the office late last week and asked, "Will the Cass City 'Grit' be out on time this week?"

And if that doesn't make any sense to you, you've got to be a teen, or younger.

A letter from the village council was read Monday night at the regular meeting of the school board outlining the steps the village is taking for safety of students walking to school.

None includes adult crossing guards. The village is not willing and the school is not willing.

It erodes the school budget, said Supt. Donald Crouse as he read reports showing that five other area districts receive all or part of village participation in the project.

But it's changing. One village has dropped from participation in the program.

We still see no justification for charging village taxpayers only for school children's safety. Not as long as local taxpayers, including villagers, pay much of the shot for transporting rural children to homes on busses.

If the school's responsibility ends at the school's property line it should end for all children.

We don't buy that theory, of course, and urge again that the school accept the school's total responsibility and hire and pay for crossing guards.

James England, dies Thursday in Cass City

James England, Gagetown Village President, died Thursday at Hills and Dales General Hospital following a short illness. He was 69.

He had served as village president of Gagetown the last four years.

JAMES ENGLAND

Mr. England was born Sept. 24, 1904, in Wilmington, Del., son of the late Howell and Elizabeth England.

He retired in 1965 as manager of Production Control of Central Special Division of the King-Seely Co., Ypsilanti.

Later, he worked for the Walbro Corp. and served for several years as general manager of Holly Products, both in Cass City.

He had lived in Gagetown since 1965.

He married Ruth Armstrong, July 4, 1931, in Chestertown, Md.

He is survived by his widow; one daughter, Mrs. John W. Graf of Torrance, Calif.; one son, Thomas England of Lincoln, Neb.; one sister, Mrs. Karl Lohmann of Urbana, Ill., and seven grandchildren.

A memorial service sponsored by the village of Gagetown was held Monday in St. Agatha Catholic Church, with Rev. Donald Christensen, Rev. Paul Amstutz and Rev. Ray Couey officiating.

Cremation was held Saturday.

"If It Fitz . . ." Skip that color tour

BY JIM FITZGERALD

The Auto Club says I should drive north and look at the leaves before they are raked.

What gas shortage?

Has Johnny Cash been kidding us? There he is on TV every night, tying a knot in the gasoline hose. Stay home or slow down, he says. There's not enough gas to go around.

But go take a color tour anyway. See the pretty leaves. That's what Triple-A and tourist associations urge every fall. They lure us into the country with poetic descriptions of tree-filled ravines and wooded bluffs.

It was only recently that I fully understood the meaning of a "color tour." I'd heard the expression for years without paying much attention. I always thought a color tour meant something like a group of tourists filing through a Sherwin-Williams factory. Or a Greyhound bus, with Fred MacMurray at the wheel, speeding through Harlem.

I was astounded when I finally realized someone was seriously suggesting I should drive hundreds of miles for no other purpose than to look at trees. There are trees in my backyard that I have never looked at.

Don't get me wrong. I know only God could make Joyce Kilmer (and only Jeffery Lynn could play the role in the movies. Name the movie and win a cigar). I wince every time I see a tree stump. But I see most of those stumps along roadsides. The trees have been felled so the road can be widened, or so another freeway can connect 2 more Holiday Inns.

The point is obvious: There would be more trees to look at if there were not so many highways built for people who want to drive somewhere to look at trees.

This is the wrong attitude. I'm sure (I'm not really sure, but you probably are and I don't like to antagonize readers). Doctors are always prescribing a week in the country. Poets have filled books describing the beauties of getting lost in a swamp. Everyone knows Mother Nature lives outside of town and only a fool would refuse her siren invitation to come culling.

How could I be such a fool? How could I prefer subways and theatres and poolrooms to hills and dales and daisies?

Well, it used to be hard. I used to feign a flattened fibula when the rest of the kids went on a hike. I would plead pleurisy when my family went picnicking. I avoided hunting trips by telling my brave friends I suffered with the rare anti-compass disease which prevented me from going anywhere from which I could not find my way back home by following an extension cord.

But no longer need I resort to such sticky subterfuge. Now I refuse to go on a color tour because of Johnny Cash and the world's dwindling supply of gasoline.

I am not a homebound sissy. I am simply patriotically ecological, or ecologically patriotic, take your choice.

And please pull that drape. I think I just saw a tree.

FROM THE

Editor's Corner

There were more hunters than birds afield for the opening of the put and take hunting season that opened a couple of weeks ago.

If you believe the reports of the Department of Natural Resource experts, most of these nimrods were happy with the new program.

Okay. If tame bird hunting is all that's available, maybe it's better than nothing.

I know many veteran hunters who disagree. Hunters who hunted daylight to dark when wild pheasants were around but didn't bother trying the new program.

These guys were turned off by the carnival-like atmosphere of the new season. Or were afraid to hunt because of the number of hunters afield in the planted area.

It might get better when cold weather strikes. Hunting pheasants in near zero weather should eliminate all but the most ardent.

The cynical are saying that the new release program is nothing but a dodge to sell more licenses.

If this is so, I see nothing wrong with it. The persons who like this type of sport should pay for it.

Hopefully this put and take shooting will bring better results than put and take fishing.

All the major trout streams in the State at one time received thousands and thousands of legal sized trout to be harvested by anglers.

After a couple of decades of experimenting with this program, most of the stream plantings have been discontinued in northern Michigan.

The plantings now go to lakes and streams in the south, close to the metro areas. Close to the people.

The trout are dumped in and pulled out. Meanwhile, the "blue ribbon" streams of the north receive no planters. Money is spent on stream habitat improvement.

That's made more wild trout available in streams capable of supporting wild trout. The program also satisfied fishermen who don't mind catching planters in water where natural reproduction is impossible.

There's a similarity here. There are very few pheasants in the Thumb. Natural reproduction is very slight. If we're to have hunting perhaps planters are the only way.

But perhaps not. It's generally conceded that there are more wild pheasants around this fall than in the last couple of years.

With the absence of DDT and other hard pesticides, perhaps the pheasants are making a comeback. No one really knows. Just like no one really knows why the Thumb went from the best to worst for pheasant reproduction.

Still if there is a chance that research can improve wild pheasant hunting the same as research helped fishing for wild trout, perhaps some of the funds used to raise the birds to shooting size should be retained.

At best, hunting for stocked pheasants is only a pale imitation of hunting for the wonderful, wary, wild pheasant.

Your neighbor says

I'd want to know

Death is one of those subjects very few persons like to talk about. Even fewer persons want any thought of their own impending demise. Yet each year, thousands of persons face the stark realization that their days are numbered.

One person who would want to know if she were terminally ill is Mrs. James Dohn, 6911 Deckerville Rd., Deford.

"I would want to know," she said. "I would probably find it very hard to accept, but I would still want to know."

Why?

"I'd like to be able to fulfill my days completely," she said.

Mrs. Dohn said she does not know how she would take the news of a terminal illness--"No one would," she added. But knowing for her would be better than ignorance of the fact.

Mrs. Dohn and her husband have lived near Deford for about a year and plan to begin full-scale farming soon. The Dohns have two children and came originally from Warren.

Honor Stella Martus with BPW award

Mrs. Stella Martus received the second annual outstanding service award by the Cass City Business and Professional Women's Club Wednesday evening, Oct. 3, at Veronica's Restaurant.

The club presented Mrs. Martus with an engraved silver tray in recognition of her many years of service to the community.

Mrs. Martus was born in Cass City, and has been driving a school bus for the past 27 years. She is also employed as a bookkeeper at Auten Motor Sales, where she has been employed the past 15 years.

She and her husband, William, have three children: William, a mechanical engineer living in Paris, France; Robert, a teacher in Flint, and Jean, a teacher in Battle Creek.

They have eight grandchildren ranging in age from three months to 15 years.

Among the guests honoring Mrs. Martus were her three sisters, Mrs. Mary Leeson of Caseville, Mrs. Betty McLeod of Sandusky and Mrs. Fran Kehoe of Cass City.

MISS BETTY CARMER (left) presents Mrs. Stella Martus with the second annual Cass City Business and Professional Women's award Wednesday night. Mrs. Martus was honored for her many years of community service.

School Board OK's bingo by 4-3 margin

Bingo anyone? Or more to the point anyone for bingo. The Cass City School Board Monday night in a narrow 4-3 decision authorized the use of the school for bingo parties if they follow the usual school-use guidelines.

The policy was set because Supt. Donald Crouse had been requested by the Zonta Club of Cass City to stage a bingo party to raise money for the hospital.

Since bingo is legal in Michigan the majority decided to allow it. Voting in favor were Trustees Geraldine Prieskorn, Dr. Edward Scollon, Bob Hirn and Lynn Albee. Against were President Arthur Severance, Elwyn Helwig and Dean Hoag.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

The 3:15 dodge 'em act

By Jim Ketchum

Every weekday afternoon around 3:15 or so, I start to cringe. That's when school is out and that's when the daily, deadly dodge'em game begins between the kids leaving school and the drivers at the corner of Main and Oak.

As I look out my window, I wonder if this is going to be the day. I wonder if this will be the day when someone's feet don't carry them quite fast enough across the busy four-lane street.

I wonder if this will be the day the police and ambulance attendants will have to scrape some first or second-grader off the pavement, while an otherwise careful driver hangs his head in bitterness over what he has just done.

It only takes a second to happen. Just one second. A life can be altered, maimed or lost in just one second.

As still a relative new-comer to Cass City, I am told this has been going on for years. The mad dash across Main Street apparently has not killed anyone yet and I'm not even sure if a child has been injured trying.

Ask anyone in town about the situation and they will agree that something should be done. It just is not safe making those little kids try to cross a busy street without some kind of protection, they will tell you. You hear the classic "Something ought to be done" bromide until it makes you nauseous.

Trying to pin down just who ought to be doing something is another story. Some blame the village for a lack of crossing guards, maintaining that it is the municipality's responsibility to protect the health and safety of its citizens while they walk on public streets.

Others blame the school board, claiming that the school bears the responsibility for safe transportation or conduct for students to and from classes.

Both parties, village and school board, respond that it really isn't their responsibility entirely and, besides, crossing guards cost money and money is hard to come by these days.

Meanwhile, the daily death dash continues. More than once, this correspondent has been roused to attention by the screech of brakes outside the window with the thought that, surely, this is it.

The problem is obvious. What to do about it seems just as obvious. While existing safety patrol boys do the best job they can trying to regulate the flow of kids across Main Street, they can't do it alone.

An adult crossing guard, employed a total of two hours a day would do much to alleviate the problem. This seems like pretty cheap insurance. In fact, it's such damn cheap insurance that it's almost ludicrous.

The hooker in the whole problem comes, of course, when we start talking responsibility and, more importantly, salary for a guard. This stumbling block has stopped all efforts to get some protection for these kids.

So far, the kids have been lucky. So have I. I haven't had to photograph a death scene outside my window on the world yet. I just pray I never do.

But at times, I get the uneasy feeling our luck is running out.

Take care, kids.

Sanilac county sets dates for immunization

The Sanilac County Health Department will hold two immunization clinics during the month of October at the Health Department office at 115 N. Elk St., Sandusky. Parents whose last name begins with A-M should attend Tuesday, Oct. 16, and those whose last name begins with N-Z should attend Tuesday, Oct. 23.

Clinic hours for both days will be 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 1:30-4:00 p.m.

Protection against measles, whooping cough, diphtheria, tetanus, rubella and polio will be offered. Tuberculin tests will also be offered.

Children three months of age and over are invited to attend.

A parent or guardian must accompany the child. Parents are urged to bring a record of previous immunization.

Tuberculin tests will be offered only on clinic days.

Former resident dies in Flint

Funeral services for Mrs. Walt (Alice) Miller, 83, of Linden, mother of Mrs. Robert Keating and resident of Cass City from 1940 to 1955, were held Oct. 3 in the Linden United Methodist church and burial was at Gaines.

Mrs. Miller died Sept. 30 in a Flint hospital where she had been hospitalized for three weeks following a fall. The last of 12 children, she was born Oct. 2, 1889.

Surviving are her husband; three daughters, Mrs. Ivan Schram (Olga) of Pontiac, Mrs. Ralph Wilson (Jean) of Waterford and Mrs. Keating, and four grandchildren, including Philip and Edward Keating.

UGLY OR BEAUTIFUL?

It all depends on whether or not you are a lobster-lover. To those who enjoy this succulent fruit of the sea, a lobster is a thing of beauty. To others it seems incredibly ugly.

Beauty is "in the eye of the beholder," but, contrary to another old saying, it is not skin deep. True beauty often can't be seen at all. It is something you feel, something of which you are aware—not necessarily seen.

Beauty, for instance, surrounds you when you walk into a church. There is something in the atmosphere that you can't quite define. No matter what's been happening to you, in God's Home, you feel a sense of peace, of sanctuary.

Had that experience lately?

Partisan battle stalls Petroglyph Park plan

A battle between Republicans and Democrats in the Michigan Legislature over jurisdiction of Sanilac Petroglyph State Park has effectively stalled further development of the park and delayed construction of a protective roof that would halt further deterioration of ancient Indian stone carvings.

According to Rep. Quincy Hoffman, (R-Applegate) whose 77th District encompasses the park, transferring the land from the Department of Natural Resources to the Michigan Historical Commission will set back further development for an indefinite period.

Sanilac Petroglyph State Park contains the only known Indian stone carvings in Michigan.

Hoffman explained the partisan battle has also taken the Hartwick Pines and Fort Wilkins and Fayette in the Upper Peninsula from the DNR's jurisdiction to the historical commission which operates under the Secretary of State's office.

Hoffman said he has talked with Secretary of State Richard Austin who told him they should get together to lay out more precise plans for the park site but that he has heard nothing recently.

The transfer was tacked onto an appropriations bill passed in the Democratically-controlled House.

What worries Hoffman is the problem of acquiring neighboring land to complete a square-mile for the park which would include parking and hiking areas.

"As it is, with the park out of DNR jurisdiction, I can't imagine the DNR is working on land acquisition. Evidently, no one is working on it," Hoffman said.

An appropriation for a building at the petroglyph site had been made to the DNR, Hoffman said. But he said he's heard nothing of any start for such a building.

It's important for the building to be put up, as it would provide a roof and protection for the ancient Indian stone carvings, which are eroding badly in the weather. Considerable erosion has taken place in recent years as the huge rocks continue to be exposed to the weather.

It is believed that the carvings were covered with soil and humus for centuries until the Great Fire of 1881 burned that protective covering. The carvings were covered once more by large trees growing in the area not destroyed in the blaze.

The first white man known to have seen the petroglyphs was Guy Cleland who came on them in 1892. The carvings include animal tracks, human hands and feet, animals, birds, geometric patterns, interpreted as tepees and men rowing, and others.

To display these carvings to best advantage, the proposed building over the petroglyphs would include low-angle lights to highlight the ancient art works.

Don Weston, first and only park ranger at Petroglyph State Park and recently transferred to the Upper Peninsula, spent the summer surveying Indian sites in the region and came upon 41 campsights, six burial grounds and numerous pottery sites.

Trinity women learn of Japan

The October meeting of Trinity United Methodist Women was held in the fellowship hall Monday, Oct. 1, with President Mrs. Helen Baker presiding.

Approximately 40 members and guests enjoyed the program on Japan.

Mrs. Shirley Karr introduced Toshiyuki Arai, a Rotary exchange student living with the Tom Proctor family. He is a senior at Cass City High School.

His slides showed the architecture used in governmental buildings and dwellings, costumes worn at ceremonies or festivities and the beautiful flower gardens.

Mrs. Baker reminded the group of the district meeting for all areas of the church, scheduled at Lapeer Friday, Oct. 5.

There was an election of officers for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Marjorie Dickinson and Mrs. Mildred McConkey and members of Group III served a chop suey meal preceding the program.

BETTER HEALTH

Mononucleosis

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ and DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

Mononucleosis, commonly referred to by the young people most susceptible to it as "mono", was given the unlikely title of the "kissing disease" by a journalist in a popular news magazine, and the name has stuck.

It is true that this acute, infectious disease -- usually ushered in by a painful, patchy sore throat, fever, aches and pains, a tender, lumpy swelling of the lymph glands in the neck and elsewhere in the body -- may occur in epidemic proportions among young people in schools and colleges. But we really do not know how it is transmitted.

It occurs sporadically, for the most part, without any obvious exposure of the victim to someone else with the disease.

I am not aware that the students of mononucleosis seriously consider kissing as the chief mode of transmission, especially when an epidemic occurs in a boys' school, however permissive we are supposed to be these days.

One of the popular superstitions about mono among the young is that you practically never get over it, that you are plagued with fatigue long after the acuteness of the disease has passed. This is simply not so.

If, as happens in about one case in 10, the liver is infiltrated with abnormal white blood cells (the overproduction of which characterizes the disease), jaundice that is indistinguishable from infectious hepatitis may result.

If the liver channels are sufficiently blocked, the disease may be prolonged beyond its usual course of one to three weeks, and there may be several more weeks of fatigue. But this is by no means the rule.

Sometimes, to be sure, mono may present itself as hepatitis with none, or very few, swollen glands, and with only the appearance of a yellow discoloration of the skin and the whites of the eyes, loss of appetite, dark urine and greyish-white bowel movements. The diagnosis is easily made by finding the characteristic white blood cells in a suitably prepared film of blood, spread on a glass slide and examined under a microscope.

In addition, the blood serum of the patients with infectious mononucleosis, when added to a suspension of red blood cells taken from a sheep, will cause the sheep cells to clump together. This is the specific test which is diagnostic of the disease.

Curiously, this disease may cause to appear what we call a false Wassermann test -- false because it does not mean that the patient has syphilis. An occasional young man or woman with no hint of syphilis will be appalled to find that a premarital Wassermann test has come back positive, simply because of a recent attack of mononucleosis.

This can readily be checked and the situation clarified, because all doctors know that the Wassermann test very often requires verification to establish that it is syphilis, and not some other disease, that has caused the test to be reported as positive.

OES officers named Wednesday

The presentation of life memberships to Mrs. Lucille Sommers and Mrs. Hazel Whitfield, and election of officers for the coming year highlighted the monthly meeting of Echo chapter OES held Oct. 3.

Officers elected for the coming year are: worthy matron, Mrs. Betty Greenleaf; worthy patron, Keith Murphy, associate matron, Mrs. Virginia Hartwick; associate patron, Keith McConkey; secretary, Mrs. Alexia Cook; treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Neitzel, conductress, Mrs. Theda Seeger, and associate conductress, Mrs. Mabel Wright.

Alternate delegates to the 1974 Grand chapter are Mrs. Seeger, Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Donna Holm.

The above officers and appointive officers will be installed at a special meeting, Oct. 24. The ceremonies will be open to members and friends.

Annual reports were heard. The secretary, Mrs. Cook, reported that 10 regular and two special meetings were held during the year, with 35 as the average attendance. Present membership is 146 and 16 are life members. Mrs. Donna Holm reported 31 gifts and seven cards were sent during the year and that net proceeds from fund raising projects sponsored by the ways and means committee amounted to $425.26.

During the business meeting, announcement was made that the Tuscola county OES club was disbanded as of Sept. 15. Plans were made for a special meeting Oct. 17 when two candidates will receive degrees. Nov. 2 was announced as the date for installation of Gifford chapter officers at Gagetown.

Remuneration for the secretary, treasurer and organist was raised to $60, $35, and $25, respectively.

Forty one members attended the meeting and 16 officers answered roll call.

Tables in the dining room were decorated in keeping with Halloween when Charles Holm and his committee of men served apple pie a la mode at the close of the meeting.

The out-going worthy matron, Mrs. Marie Jetta, presented gifts to the officers who had served with her during the past year.

Down Memory Lane

FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

FIVE YEARS AGO

A new program for intermediate students which includes industrial arts, home economics and communications now in its second year at Cass City Schools was outlined for members of the school board Monday night at the board's regular meeting at the high school. Among other aspects, boys take home economics courses and girls learn woodshop techniques.

Development of the recently acquired new area at Cass City Recreational Park that blew up two weeks ago when it was announced that the cost of the project as outlined would be $15,000, is back on the agenda again for the village.

Although the goal is the same as it was in 1967, officials of the Elkland-Novesta Township Community Chest are anticipating a struggle to meet the quota of $8,200.

A Cass City School bus was damaged in an accident Thursday at the corner of Deckerville and Cemetery Roads, but the 40 children aboard were uninjured.

Cass City High School's football team ended its long losing streak with an 13-6 triumph over Sandusky, setting off a wild celebration through the village that lasted far into the night.

TEN YEARS AGO

Voters in Cass City will decide whether or not to franchise Southeastern Michigan Gas Co. of Port Huron in a special election Monday.

If plans proceed on schedule, the Michigan Livestock Exchange yard at the corner of M-81 and M-53 in Cass City will be open for business in about six weeks, Ike Walton, manager, said this week.

Three Cass City residents were the center of an intensive search by the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Sunday and were not found until they walked innocently into the sheriff's office in answer to a note attached to the windshield of their parked car.

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley, chairman of the Municipal Finance Commission, approved the sale of $75,000 of general obligation water bonds for Cass City.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

A joint research committee of the Cass City Rotary and Gavel Clubs will submit recommendations for the re-establishment of a local Community Chest to the Cass City Community Club at its regular meeting next Tuesday evening.

An amendment making it unlawful to stop, stand or park any vehicle on any street with its left side to the curb or to double park was approved by Village Council Tuesday.

Boy Scouts of Tuscola county held a week-end camporee at the scout grounds northeast of Caro, Saturday and Sunday.

The ministers of the local churches are cooperating in a program of systematic visitation at the local hospitals and the Stevens Convalescent Home.

Cass City Red Hawks defeated Elkton 14-0 in league play Friday.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

All tax delinquent property for 1936 and prior years will be placed on sale in Tuscola county and the other 82 county treasurers' offices throughout the state on May 2, 1939, George T. Gundry, auditor general, explained this week.

Tuscola county's quota of 10 young men for CCC work has been filled by Administrator O.D. Hill of the Emergency Relief Commission.

The first edition of the Cassmopolitan, the magazine of Cass City High School, made its appearance Tuesday.

Tuscola county supervisors met Monday in the annual October session with John McAlpine serving as chairman.

DELAYED NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Griewahn and boys of Vassar visited Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Martin and family Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Laur of Caro and Mr. and Mrs. John Sherdian and daughter of Mt. Clemens visited Mrs. Hazen Reavey Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Seeley visited Mrs. Hazen Reavey Wednesday night. Mrs. Reavey returned to her home Sunday, Sept. 30, after having surgery at Hills and Dales Hospital.

Karen, Kim, Kathy and Jim Reavey spent two weeks with their grandmother, Mrs. Lyle Roach, while their mother was recovering from surgery.

Services held Sunday for Mrs. Hill, 62

Mrs. Gladys Irene Hill, 62, a lifelong resident of Greenleaf township, died suddenly at her home Thursday, Oct. 4.

Mrs. Hill was born in Greenleaf township April 12, 1910, the daughter of the late Fred and Mae Mills Rolston.

She married Emerson Hill in Bowling Green, Ohio in August of 1929. Following their marriage, they made their home in Greenleaf township where she lived until her death.

Mrs. Hill attended Holbrook Baptist church. She was a member of the Greenleaf Extension Club.

She is survived by her husband, Emerson, two daughters, Mrs. Leonard (Betty) Spencer of Cass City and Mrs. Harold (Velda) Pettinger of Ubly; one son, Clifford of Snover; four brothers, George, Russell and Richard, all of Cass City and Stanley of Ubly; 12 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. One brother preceded her in death.

Funeral Services were conducted from Little's Funeral Home Sunday with Rev. Milton Gelatt, pastor of Holbrook Baptist Church, officiating.

Interment was in Elkland cemetery.

Fire destroys Freshman float Sunday

Fire destroyed the freshman class float as it sat parked near a Michigan Bean Co. building Sunday afternoon.

Elkland Township Fire Chief Dick Root said the department responded to the alarm at 4:45 p.m. He added that a similar incident a year ago also destroyed a class float after homecoming.

The fire, suspected work of an arsonist, is still under investigation.

A nearby building was not damaged in the blaze.

Farm Bureau holds meeting

David Loomis, president of the Tuscola County Farm Bureau, was re-elected to a three-year term on the county board as an at-large director at the 1973 Farm Bureau annual meeting Saturday in Caro.

Other directors re-elected to three-year terms were Robert H. Petzold of Vassar and A. Earl Taggett of Caro. Also confirmed to one-year terms on the board were Mrs. Richard Wiacek of Vassar, representing the County Women's Committee and Bernard Sergent of Millington, representing the Young Farmer's Committee.

At the meeting, Mr. and Mrs. M. Ford Boyne of Marlette received the "Outstanding Farm Bureau Couple" award. The County Distinguished Service to Agriculture plaque was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Sylvester of Fairgrove.

Mrs. Larry Bauer of Frankenmuth was crowned 1974 Tuscola County Farm Bureau Queen by David Sting, chairman of the Young Farmers Committee. Mrs. Bauer will represent Tuscola county in the Michigan Farm Bureau Queen contest to be held in Grand Rapids.

Neglect blamed for rise in disease rates

A new enemy is present on the scene in the age old fight against such crippling and killing diseases as polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

The enemy is neglect. Simple neglect by parents, medical people and other community leaders.

Vaccines against these diseases have been so successful that the diseases are heard of rarely in this country. The result in recent years has been substantial slackening off in the number of children receiving vaccinations against various diseases.

Health officials fear the stage is being set for an epidemic, if enough children go unvaccinated. To help change the situation, they have designated October as "Immunization Action Month".

The danger list requires six diseases which doctors want all children immunized against. They are polio, measles, German measles (rubella), diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis, also known as whooping cough.

Polio is a disease of the central nervous system which has hit in a series of epidemics in this country's history. Its most famous victim was President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

When Dr. Jonas Salk discovered a vaccine for it in 1955, the country rejoiced. There were 30,000 cases reported in 1955. Last year 17 cases were reported.

Medical officials say a survey of 6,025 children in grades kindergarten through sixth showed 52 per cent had not received the minimum three doses of oral vaccine required to immunize a person against polio. The potential this situation produces is frightening, especially to anyone who can remember the fear and terror the disease struck before the vaccine was discovered.

Measles, regarded by many as a mild disease, can cause pneumonia, hearing disorders and brain damage. Hundreds of children died each year from measles complications before a vaccine was discovered.

German measles, or rubella, isn't very serious in children. The danger is it causes birth defects and miscarriages when it strikes pregnant women.

Michigan this year has reported one-fifth of all the measles cases in the country.

Diphtheria used to be a common cause of childhood death. It attacks the throat and breathing passages, developing a membrane that obstructs breathing, choking a child to death. Tetanus is not contagious. It is caused by getting contaminated dirt into wounds. It is fatal to about half the people who develop it. Whooping cough frequently is fatal in babies.

"The recent outbreak of cholera in Italy vividly portrays the kind of situation and public panic which can occur with epidemics," says Dr. John J. Coury, President of the Michigan Medical Society.

"Our aim is to prevent any such outbreaks of the common preventable diseases by improving the immunization levels through a continuing effort. Personally, I'm concerned about the "dropout" problem. Many children start their series but only half of them finish."

The current situation, he says, "could leave us wide open for an epidemic."

Past success makes for less concern among parents about the diseases involved, since the diseases are so rare, this is the root of the problem.

But these once dreaded diseases are no less fatal or harmful today if they are contracted by children, or adults for that matter. It's just that it's been so long since they were common that people have forgotten how horrible they can be.

What the medical people hope to do is prevent another outbreak of any of these illnesses by making sure children continue to be vaccinated.

Parents unsure of how many or what kinds of vaccinations their children have had should contact their family doctor. His records will show.

Families who have moved can have their doctor check with previous doctors they have taken their children to.

It would be a real tragedy if, despite the fact simple ways exist to prevent it, an outbreak of any of these diseases were to hit Michigan. If even one child died or were forced to spend the rest of his life in an iron lung because his parents "didn't bother" to make sure he received vaccinations, that would be one too many. And it would be criminal.

Now is a good time to check and make sure your children are safe from the six diseases. Next month might be too late.

Provincial House opens doors Monday

By Jim Ketchum

Cass City's long struggle to obtain an extended care facility will officially end Monday when Provincial House opens its doors to patients.

Finishing touches were being completed this week on the million dollar complex which, when filled, will house 117 patients and provide 24-hour care. The facility will employ a staff of 80 persons on a full and part time basis.

The complex, according to Kenneth Kierstead, coordinator of the Cass City project, will open for business Monday at 8:00 a.m., barring any last-minute difficulties in arranging for furnishings.

An open house is set for Sunday at the facility to acquaint area residents with Provincial House and the services offered. Hours for the open house will be 1:30-4:00 p.m.

Kierstead emphasized the importance of the facility in the area as a place where persons come to live, not just to spend their hours alone. He explained that an extensive activities program will be developed at the facility which will involve as many persons as possible.

"We plan to develop programs involving arts and crafts, music, movies and musical programs," he said. "We encourage our patients to become involved."

Kierstead said rehabilitation is the thrust of the home's operation. He added that staff personnel encourage patients to perform as many of their normal daily activities as possible.

"They come here to live," he said.

The home is brightly decorated with colorful carpeting and patterned vinyl wallcovering designed to allay the atmosphere of a nursing home.

Two wings of the structure are completely carpeted, with the exception of wash rooms.

Rooms in this section of the building are designed specifically for patients who can get up and fend for themselves to a certain extent.

The other two wings have carpeted hallways with tiled floors in patients rooms. These will be used specifically for bedridden or semi-invalid patients.

All four wings meet at a circular nurses station. From this location, nurses can monitor activities in practically any part of the building.

Assisting in this monitoring are several electronic systems. If a patient should open an exit door at the end of a wing, a light and buzzer automatically pinpoint the wing and the door instantly.

Two switchboards allow nurses on duty to communicate with any patient room at the push of a button. Once a patient presses his call button, the nurse on duty can talk with him without the patient picking up a telephone or activating any other buttons.

A large dining room looks out on a country setting on the north side of the structure. A patio which will eventually be furnished will be provided for patients.

Kitchen facilities will provide meals for patients and guests who wish to join a friend or relative for a meal.

Kierstead explained that Provincial House accepts patients on a private pay basis, those covered under independent insurance programs and state Medicaid patients.

In a brochure published by Provincial House, the facility explains that it cannot accept Medicare patients due to the number of current regulations. It adds that often a patient is admitted to a facility by the physician only to discover that the program will not cover the costs.

Provincial House provides private rooms on request, but prefers to operate on a shared-room basis.

The Cass City facility is the 11th Provincial House to be opened in Michigan. Other locations include Lansing, Adrian, Marshall, Hastings, Kalamazoo, Alpena, Midland and Sault Ste. Marie.

Fertilizer shortage?

By William Bortel

During the past several months numerous inquiries have been received regarding the availability of fertilizer products, particularly nitrogen and phosphate. These inquiries are prompted by a very tight fertilizer supply situation that exists in today's market. Shortages exist in virtually all nitrogen and phosphate products and a few products are essentially unavailable.

The present fertilizer shortage had its beginning in the mid to late 1960's when the fertilizer industry over-expanded, resulting in the shutdown of many marginal producing plants. Subsequently, demand increased on a world-wide basis and the export market became particularly strong. With the implementation of price controls in 1972, the fertilizer moved strongly towards the export market where price controls were not in effect. This export market continues strong today, resulting in higher domestic fertilizer prices and a large quantity of material going into the export market.

The additional phosphate production capacity that has been announced for the next two to three years should alleviate the present phosphate shortage that exists in this country. Factors that created the phosphate shortage were also responsible for creating the nitrogen shortage. The long-term prospects for nitrogen are not nearly as bright as they are for phosphate.

A nationwide natural gas shortage is putting a severe strain on the nitrogen industry. Some authorities believed that in the future large supplies of nitrogen will come from overseas, either directly as ammonia or importation of natural gas to be converted to ammonia. One thing is certain--with the importation of either of these products, the cost of ammonia will increase over the next several years.

It would be advisable for next year to get firm commitments for fertilizer supplies this fall if possible. Also, as nitrogen and phosphate prices increase, it will be necessary for growers and farmers to re-evaluate their fertilizer systems to take maximum advantage of the nutrients being applied. This will be particularly true as nitrogen costs accelerate in subsequent years.

Real estate picture remains clouded in Cass City market

By Jim Ketchum

Trying to find a consensus regarding the present condition of Cass City's real estate market is about as difficult as trying to find a mortgage at six per cent.

A sampling of opinion from the various real estate agencies in the village will produce as many different responses as there are brokers.

Opinions of area brokers range from extremely optimistic to gloomily pessimistic. One point practically all real estate men agree on is their opposition to the recently passed Michigan Land Sales Act which severely regulates the sale of land involving more than 10 parcels.

The act, which took effect Monday, calls for licensing of real estate men and developers dealing in more than 10 parcels of land. All agree the language of the law is confusing and will be nothing more than a boon to lawyers, whose services will have to be used in implementing the law.

One Cass City broker said his business has been greatly affected by the act, along with rising interest rates and inflation. He explained he has had no inquiries on property, especially in undeveloped land where most of his business lies.

He explained that ads placed in Detroit area newspapers have produced no telephone or written responses in the last two weeks. Normally he receives 10-12 responses through such advertising.

Regarding the act specifically, he said he could not fill out the forms if he wanted to. He said a Detroit realtor paid out some $25,000 in attorney and staff fees just preparing for implementation of the law. He added he would attempt to continue business as usual.

The broker said he does not expect this slow condition to last much beyond the first of next year.

Another broker said the new law, inflation and rising interest rates have not had any effect on the market, claiming business is better than at any time in recent memory.

He explained that his firm is writing contracts on property for eight per cent, choosing not to deal with local banks. This broker added that he is currently receiving more inquiries each day regarding available land.

The broker said the land sales act will probably be changed by the legislature because it is simply unworkable. He said no one knows what the act is about and charged that the lawmakers did not know what they were passing when they approved the act.

He added that inflationary pressures have not hurt his market at all, claiming that persons interested in land want to buy before prices rise even higher.

Other real estate firms in Cass City look at the present market with mixed feelings. Pressure on these firms for rental property has increased over the last six months, making it nearly impossible to rent anything the size of a three-bedroom home, for example, which is in largest demand.

One firm said its business slowed for approximately two weeks but picked up again, despite interest rate increases and inflation.

The premium placed on rental property reverses the long-held opinion of many persons that costs will be less in the long run for someone if they buy property instead of renting.

Part of this change of heart stems from increasing costs of upkeep and taxes on homes today. While rents are high, the renter is spared these extra expenses.

Another reason for increased renting pressure comes from the increasing unavailability of mortgage money. In the last year, mortgage funds have dried up rapidly and interest rates have shot upwards of 10 per cent.

One thing is certain--real estate firms have felt the aftershocks of one of the most economically hectic years in recent memory.

Lending institutions are also beginning to take notice of changes in the market as well.

Local lenders are predicting a slowdown in the pace of home-buying in 1974. One official characterized 1973 as a "wild year" in the home mortgage field and predicted the interest rate crunch would begin to be felt in Cass City next year.

These institutions show jumps in the amount of money loaned on mortgages of around 33 per cent over 1970, caused by inflationary conditions and an increase in actual demand.

One lending institution in Cass City indicated it is still able to qualify most persons requesting mortgage loans, but that the situation was beginning to tighten up. Another would not comment in detail on the current home buying situation, other than to say present unstable conditions have proven there are no experts in economics, either in Cass City or Washington.

All institutions agree that business has been affected to a certain extent and that customers are searching for the most versatile type of loans to meet the changing conditions in the market.

Customers, they agree, want the best terms for the smallest down payment and are shopping around to find them.

Through the confusion of conflicting opinions, one fact does filter through--the Cass City real estate market is undergoing very real change and everyone, brokers, lending institutions and customers are attempting to cope with the situation.

Most agree that the situation will eventually stabalize, but no one is betting when.

Minor accidents plague police

A rash of minor traffic accidents plagued area police officials during the week and resulted in minor injuries and property damage.

Wednesday, cars driven by Daniel Lee Mellendorf, 6200 Main St., and Elsie Mullin, 4662 N. Seeger St., collided near the intersection of Seeger and Rose Streets.

Cass City Police investigating the accident said Mellendorf had turned onto Rose Street from Seeger just as Ms. Mullin was backing out of her driveway, colliding with Mellendorf.

No ticket was issued in the accident which occurred at 8:10 a.m. Neither driver was injured.

Friday, a car driven by an Akron man collided with a truck at the intersection of Main and Seeger.

Police said Edward Schwartz, 4243 S. Seeger, was stopped at the traffic light signaling to make a right turn from Main onto Seeger St. At that time, a car driven by Bertrom Partlo of Akron pulled forward from a parking space into the no parking area.

As Schwartz made his turn, the two vehicles collided.

Neither driver was injured and no ticket was issued. The accident took place at 11:50 a.m.

Sunday, cars driven by Evangeline Lenhard, 4690 State St., Gagetown, and Steven Dillon of Unionville collided at the intersection of Third and South Streets in Gagetown.

Tuscola County Sheriff's Deputies who investigated reported that Ms. Lenhard was traveling west on Third and stopped for the intersection at South Street. They added that she reportedly failed to yield to a closely approaching vehicle which was northbound on South.

At that point, the two vehicles came together, striking the Dillon auto in the right side.

Neither driver was injured seriously and no ticket was issued. The accident occurred at 10:50 a.m.

Also Sunday, a car driven by Darrell Maynard, Kingston, went out of control and rolled over while traveling west on Frankford Road just west of Murray Road.

Investigating deputies said the car went out of control as it came out of a curve on the road and rolled over on the north side of the road.

Maynard and a passenger in the car, Lou Ann Long of Caro, were taken to Caro Community Hospital where they were treated for cuts and bruises.

The accident took place around 7:50 p.m.

Safety patrol boys (and girls) do big job

Who takes their appointed posts in spite of rain, snow, sleet and gloom of day or darkness of early morning and doesn't deliver mail?

They are the safety patrol boys and, yes, girls too. Daily they leave classes early to take assigned corners at five busy intersections to aid students crossing those streets on their way to and from school.

It's a pretty thankless job, according to patrol supervisor Mrs. Betty Murphy. Mrs. Murphy teaches one of the five sixth grade classes participating in the safety patrol program. She must act as coordinator, supervisor and complaint department, and says so far, all has gone well.

She explained that the safety patrol program utilizes the sixth grade because class scheduling is most conducive for them. Older students in junior high often have classes through the end of school each day, while sixth graders are in one room all day and can leave at 2:55 p.m. to take their posts without too much conflict.

"It sometimes gets a little difficult though," Mrs. Murphy explained. "They get involved in something they enjoy and then have to leave in the middle of it."

Assignments rotate to a different room, one for each day. Co-captains from Mrs. Murphy's room must choose the "safeties" for that day and make sure they have their assignments. Further, they must see that each person carries out that assignment.

Intersections with safeties include Rose and Seeger, Rose and Oak, Main and Seeger, Oak and Main and Ale and Main.

Safeties are on duty about 40 minutes at the noon hour and another 30-35 minutes in the afternoon. Parents must sign a permission slip before a sixth grader may join the safety patrol.

Mrs. Murphy said so far this year, she has heard no complaints, either from parents, other students or safeties themselves regarding the conduct of patrol personnel or students.

"The safeties command respect," Mrs. Murphy said, "and they can escort certain students across the street if they think it necessary."

She explained that AAA furnishes orange belts and rain-fighting equipment for the safeties. Mrs. Murphy said the patrol recently received a shipment of belts, raincoats and pamphlets explaining the program.

Safety patrol costs the school nothing, other than the food it supplies for a picnic for the safeties at the end of the school year. This usually costs less than $100.

Two very responsible co-captains of the safety patrol are Julie Helwig and Libby Hartel. Julie can usually be found patroling the intersection of Ale and Main, while Libby patrols the Oak and Main intersection. Since the program works on a rotating basis, they do not work every day, but do put in their fair share of the effort.

Why would two sixth grade girls want to be safety patrol persons? A sense of responsibility seems to be a closer answer than feminine equality.

"I like kids and it's fun to do," Julie said. "There's responsibility too, but it's still fun."

She said she has not had to report anyone yet. Boys will respect her when she tells them to wait for cars. Her only complaint is that sometimes, the students are slow getting to the crossing.

Libby said she takes a little teasing from some of the boys but that they usually mind.

Libby said an adult crossing guard would make her job easier because occasionally, a student will try to dart out into traffic without looking or paying attention to her.

Two boys who also work the Oak and Main corner are Ernie Stoutenburg and Dana Eubank. Both said they volunteered for safety patrol because they like the idea of the responsibility and enjoy the work with the students.

They look forward each day to doing their job and command respect of their fellow students.

Mrs. Murphy said her sixth graders all seem very responsible and grown-up for their age.

"Then I see them with their parents and they seem small again," she smiled. "But they all do a good job."

SAFETY PATROL Girl Libby Hartel prepares to escort Joe Gasper, 5, across busy Main Street after school. Libby, a sixth grader, is a co-captain of the safety patrol.

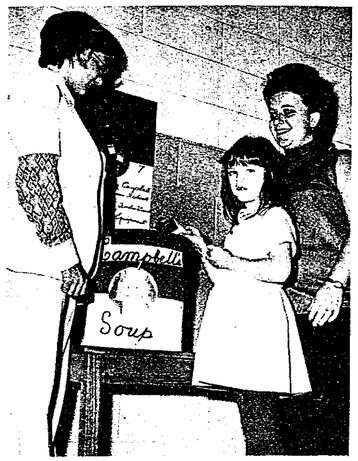
Label drive begins in area schools



SHIRLEY DADACKI, 6, contributes a label toward new audio-visual equipment at Campbell Elementary School. Looking on are Mrs. Kenneth Eisinger, elementary art teacher, (left) and Mrs. David Langenburg, coordinator of the drive.

Students at Campbell, Deford and Evergreen schools have begun a label collection program designed to provide the schools with audio-visual equipment.

The program, sponsored by Campbell Soups and the Cass City Citizens for Improved Education, is designed to collect labels from Campbell Soup products which will be redeemed for audio-visual aids such as projectors, tape recorders and record players.

Collection points will be in the three elementary schools and in area businesses.

The label redemption program runs through Dec. 7.

Mrs. David Langenburg is coordinating the label drive.

Thieves hit rural Cass City home

A rural Cass City man reported thieves broke into his home on Seeley Road and fled when they saw his car pull into the driveway.

George Hawley told Tuscola county sheriff's deputies he drove into the driveway Wednesday morning around 11:45 and spotted two males running from the back door across the yard to a car parked alongside the road.

Hawley told deputies the suspects then drove north to Dickerson Road and then headed west.

Investigation showed nothing missing from the house and no clues toward the identities of the suspects. The case remains open, pending further investigation.

VANDALISM

Vandals smashed a bedroom window at the Dailey Parrish home at 6282 Pine St. Friday night around 12:30 a.m. Mrs. Parrish told Cass City Police she heard the crash and then heard a car engine start up and a vehicle pull away.

She explained she was afraid to investigate at the time and did not turn in the complaint until Monday morning.

Police have no suspects. This is the second such incident of its kind in as many weeks. Last week, vandals broke a front door glass at the home of Vernon Bigham, 6255 Pine St.

LARCENY

Thieves struck a parked car belonging to Charles McConnell, 6721 Garfield St. sometime between Sunday night and Monday morning and siphoned 10 gallons of gasoline from the fuel tank.

McConnell told police he had parked the car in his driveway Sunday afternoon with about 10 gallons of gasoline in it. When he went out to start the car the next morning, the tank was empty.

Police have no clues and the investigation remains open.

Lions auxiliary meets Monday

The Cass City Lions Auxiliary met Monday at Veronica's Restaurant with 15 members present.

Tom Proctor addressed the group on the medical needs of Cass City and especially the need for a new clinic.

Discussion involved two fund-raising projects of the auxiliary -a raffle Dec. 10, in which a portable television will be given away and a card party Oct. 24 at White Creek Club. Linda Herron is in charge of the raffle and Eloise Keegan is in charge of the card party.

Plans were discussed for Halloween and Christmas treats for patients at Caro State Training Facility.

Ruth Grassman is chairman of this activity.

FALL IS REALLY here as Sally Ware and Rob Hartwick rake this pile of leaves Monday.
