2 KILLED, 2 HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mrs. Ben Gage and Gordon Agar Met Death Instantly on Sunday.

Two persons were killed, two seriously injured and two slightly hurt about 6:30 o'clock Sunday evening when an automobile driven by Ben Gage of Deford struck a guard rail of the overhead bridge, 1½ miles south of Metamora. The impact tore the side from the car and five of the passengers rolled down the embankment.

The dead are Mrs. Ben Gage of Deford and Gordon, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Agar of Caro.

Mr. Gage had several ribs fractured on the right side and received other injuries, and Max Agar suffered a fractured leg. His wife and her mother, Mrs. John Clark, of Deford received minor cuts and bruises. Maxine, infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Agar, was unhurt.

Mr. Agar and Mr. Gage were taken to a hospital at Lapeer. Mr. Gage is still a patient there, while Mr. Agar was brought Tuesday to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Agar, Sr., at Cass City.

The accident occurred as the party, driving home from Oxford, was about to cross the bridge over the Michigan Central railroad tracks. Seeing a car coming from the opposite direction, Mr. Gage turned farther to the right where he struck some loose gravel. The car slewed, the rear end of the machine striking the guard rail.

Mr. Gage and Gordon Agar were the only ones who were not thrown from the automobile, down the embankment.

Mrs. Ben Gage.

The funeral of Mrs. Gage was held Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. Carless of Kingston conducted the service at the Deford M. E. church. Interment was in the Novesta cemetery.

Leora McCain was born in Marlette 43 years ago and came to Deford with her parents when she was six years of age. Mrs. Gage was a member of Venus Rebekah lodge at Cass City where she held the office of vice grand.

Besides her husband, she leaves three children, Miss Bernice Gage of Deford, Mrs. Lulu Sloan of Detroit, and Wm. Gage of Onaway; her mother, Mrs. Carrie L. McCain of Oxford; two brothers, Fred McCain of Oxford and Charles McCain of Pontiac, and three sisters, Mrs. Luella Pugh of Port Huron, Mrs. Spencer of Deford, and Mrs. Carrie Goodrich of Santa Cruz, Calif.

Gordon Agar.

Funeral services for Gordon Agar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Agar, of Caro were held Wednesday afternoon from the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Agar, Sr., in Cass City.

Gordon was born Oct. 9, 1927, in Deford and passed away Sunday evening, March 27, from injuries received in the automobile accident. He leaves his parents and one sister, Maxine.

Rev. H. W. Ambrose, pastor of the Caro Baptist church, officiated at the service, and boy friends from Caro acted as pallbearers. Burial was in the Novesta cemetery.

U. T. A. A. Has New Plan for Tourneys

M. J. Crawford of the Caro school, Russell LaCronier of the Bad Axe school and Coach Hayden of the Sandusky school, representing the Upper Thumb Athletic association, met at Cass City Tuesday evening to work out a plan which would make possible representation of Class C schools at regional basketball tournaments similar to that used by Class A and Class B high schools.

If the plan is acceptable to the state athletic board, the Thumb would be divided into North and South divisions and the teams winning the highest percentage of games during the regular season would be eligible to enter the regionals. Runners-up in the two groups would also play for the honor of representing the Thumb, thus entering three teams in the regional from the Thumb district.

A majority of the voters who turned out for Marlette's election were in favor of the adoption of the primary system of nominating candidates for village office. The primary question came up as a special issue. There were 130 votes for the change and 22 against it.

A. D. GILLIES.

EARLY MERCHANT DIED HERE FRIDAY

A. D. Gillies Was Prominent in Community Activities for Many Years.

A. D. Gillies, one of the early merchants of Cass City, passed away at his farm home 1¼ miles northeast of here, on Friday afternoon, March 25, after several weeks' illness. Funeral services were conducted at the family residence on Monday afternoon by Rev. Paul J. Allured, pastor of the Cass City Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. Wm. Edwards of Harbor Beach, a former minister here. Interment was made in the Elkland cemetery.

Angus D. Gillies was born in Elgin county, Ont., where he resided until he came to Cass City in 1881. Shortly after arriving here, he engaged in the mercantile business and conducted a store here for several years. He was married to Miss Ann Elizabeth Walmsley on May 16, 1883. To this union, two children were born, Andrew Blake Gillies, now of Detroit, and Russell Harvard Gillies, who remained at home until he enlisted in the navy. He died at Great Lakes Sept. 23, 1918. In 1910, Mr. and Mrs. Gillies moved to the farm where they have since resided.

Mr. Gillies served Elkland township as clerk for several terms and held the office of justice of the peace here for more years than any other man in the township.

Mr. Gillies was always deeply interested in everything that was for the betterment of the place in which he lived. He loved his friends and at no time was he as happy as when entertaining friends in his home.

Mr. Gillies' interest in the modernization of the highway system of the state was evidenced as early as 1905. In July of that year, he introduced the motion that an application be made by the Elkland township board which resulted in an appropriation being made which was used in constructing the first mile of state reward road in Michigan, located one mile east of the Elkland cemetery. The resolution, adopted unanimously by the board, read: "Moved by A. D. Gillies and seconded by R. S. Brown, that we, the township board of the Township of Elkland, make application to the state highway commissioner, Horatio S. Earle, for five hundred dollars' appropriation by Act No. 125, of the Public Acts of 1905, to be used for the construction of one mile of road in the Township of Elkland."

Friends and relatives from a distance who came to attend the funeral here on Monday were: Mr. and Mrs. John Thatcher and daughter, Shirley, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Gillies and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Kierman, all of Plymouth; Mr. and Mrs. Blake Gillies, Mrs. Wm. Lesperance, Mrs. Frank Krause, Mr. and Mrs. F. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Kelley and son, Blake, and Miss Myrtle Orr, all of Detroit; Miss Clare G. Roe and Mrs. Trimbly, both of Flint; Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Edwards of Harbor Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Dowling, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Ross and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tonkins, all of Fairgrove; Mrs. Belle W. Giles of Maplewood, New Jersey, and Robt. Orr of Pigeon.

To the Voters of Tuscola County: I will be a candidate for the nomination for the election to the office of Register of Deeds of Tuscola County at the Republican primaries to be held in September. Your support and influence in my behalf will be greatly appreciated.

LEGLISATURE TO SEEK TAX RELIEF

Law Makers Begin Special Session Due To Depression.

Lansing, Mich., March 31.—Michigan's legislature is now in session in the old historic state house of the Wolverine state to consider the gravest and most important question that ever confronted any group of law makers since the organization of the state.

The representatives and senators are gathered here because the newspapers of Michigan, the weekly press, have had an answer to their demands for legislative action to save if possible Michigan property owners from loss of their homes and firesides by confiscatory taxation.

When Thomas Conlin, veteran editor of the Crystal Falls Diamond Drill and one of Michigan's outstanding tax authorities, last winter at the annual session of the Michigan Press association, declared the time had come for immediate action if Michigan was to be saved from a calamity, his appeal found a state wide response. Even Governor Wilber Brucker who told the editors at the same convention he was not sure a special session would be of benefit, in recent weeks gave attentive consideration to the suggestions of Michigan newspaper editors and finally called the special session that before it ends will doubtless write into Michigan history one of its most interesting chapters.

Alert to the serious situation of their readers, Michigan weekly publishers kept up the demand for legislative action and the annual newspaper convention was followed by the appointment of a special taxation committee consisting of George Averill of Birmingham as chairman, State Representative Vern Brown of Mason, State Representative Frank Brown of Bellevue and Editor Conlin. This committee in co-operation with the association advisory committee consisting of Phil H. Rich of Midland, Schuyler Marshall of St. Johns and Joseph Haas of Holly has twice conferred with Governor Brucker about the tax situation, the last conference being given over entirely to points in the governor's message.

In this message the governor has opened many avenues for the law makers to travel and it is believed that through the wide latitude he has given that some good will come from the session. Never before in Michigan history has its legislature been summoned together for the purpose of finding relief for an overburdened tax paying public.

Ten important subjects are given by the governor for consideration, by the legislature.

He lists the unemployment question first. This he declares is not a state problem but one to be dealt with by cities, townships and counties. He recommends the broadening of the law pertaining to the issuance of "calamity" bonds by these smaller government subdivisions so that they might have sufficient funds to take care of their unemployed.

Delinquent Taxes.

For the relief of the property owners who are unable to meet their tax payments the special message asks the legislature to provide a legal way for tax payments to be made on the installment plan. Not only does he recommend installment payment of taxes but he asks the legislature to extend the period for the redemption of property upon which taxes have not been paid since 1927.

Banking.

Numerous changes are recommended in laws governing banks. The governor recommends that banks which have been closed be permitted to reopen under a depositors' agreement signed by 85 per cent of the depositors. This would prevent a few from blocking reorganization plans of a number of banks now closed. The present provision makes it necessary that 95 per cent of the depositors sign.

He would give the legislative bodies of school districts, townships and villages the right to sign these depositors' agreements if necessary in order to open a closed bank, where public funds are on deposit.

Another important change recommended is the transfer of bonded responsibility from township, village, city and school treasurers to the depositories that might be named by the proper legislative bodies of these smaller political units of the state.

It is also recommended that the state banking department's authority be broadened and that the state banking laws be made to conform to the national banking laws which makes possible a more advisable system for the liquidation of a closed bank.

Real Estate Bonds.

A temporary commission consisting of three state officials is recommended for the purpose of assuming authority over the handling of defaulted real estate bond issues and to assist in the organization of bondholders' committees. The object, he explains, of this recommended legislation is to bring to light affairs of this class of business.

U. S. Amendment.

The legislature is asked to consider the proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States which, if passed, would do away with the so-called "lame duck" sessions of congress.

Refunding of Local Debt Changes.

It is recommended that the smaller political units of the state be granted authority to provide for the refunding of bond and note obligations, subject to the approval

4 ELMWOOD PEOPLE IN AUTO SMASH

Two Received Severe Scalp Wounds in Accident Near Frankenmuth.

Four Elmwood township people were injured, two quite seriously, late Sunday when three automobiles figured in a collision three miles south of Frankenmuth junction on the Dixie highway. The injured are: Mrs. Delbert Thane, head injuries; Delbert Thane, scalp wounds; Mrs. Clarence Healy, nose injuries; Clarence Healy, slightly bruised; Ira E. Van Valkenburg, Detroit, head injuries.

Van Valkenburg was taken to the Woman's hospital at Saginaw for treatment. Mr. and Mrs. Thane and Mrs. Healy were taken to the Saginaw General hospital where they received medical attention. Ten stitches were required to close the scalp wounds of Mrs. Thane and eight for those of her husband.

According to reports at the sheriff's department, a car driven by Norman Jensinius, 31 years old, 22003 Rosedale avenue, Detroit, which was going south on the Dixie highway, cut out to pass an automobile driven by Floyd Libcke, 14567 Kentfield avenue, Detroit, and crashed into th car driven by Miss Lucille Thane. Stilson Farm Home Burned

"Papa, the dining room is all full of smoke," exclaimed one of the little children of Douglas Stilson as he rushed excitedly from the house to his father in the yard on Wednesday. Mr. Stilson, on reaching the residence, found it full of smoke and he had considerable difficulty in reaching the bedroom and rescuing the baby from its bed. The fire had gained such headway that none of the household goods could be saved. Mrs. Stilson was away from home at the time of the fire.

The Stilson family live on the Conley & Marshall farm, three miles south and one-half mile east of Cass City.

Their household goods was partially insured.

At a meeting of the Brown City school board some drastic cuts were made in teachers' salaries. Reductions, amounting to thirteen and one-half per cent, range from $100 to $225 and will result in a total saving of more than $1,700 in school expenses. All members of the faculty have been offered contracts.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the office of Representative in the State Legislature at the Sept. primaries. Your support will be appreciated.

B. Y. P. U. HELD DIST. MEET HERE TUESDAY

One Hundred Ten Came from Nine Towns to Attend Banquet Program.

The Baptist Young People's union of the Huron Baptist association met Tuesday evening, Mar. 29, in the Cass City Baptist church. The theme of this meeting was "Spiritual Anchors."

The banquet was served by the ladies of the local church. The dining room was beautifully decorated in emerald green and white and presented a festive appearance with green and white streamers falling from the lights, each holding an anchor, large green anchors against the white background at the windows, nut cups in green, bearing white anchors, and a lighted ship at the speaker's table.

The banquet was served at seven o'clock and the program followed. Wesley Purkiss of Port Huron acted as toastmaster and Richard Storey of Brown City was song leader. Rev. A. D. Shay of Port Huron was the speaker of the evening and used for his subject "The Place to Anchor." Toasts given were:

"Anchors of Friendship," Port Huron.

"Anchors of Prayer," Harold Younglove, Brown City.

"Anchors of Reading," Edna Pearce, St. Clair.

"Anchors of Service," Irene McComb, Cass City.

A presentation and discussion of the area plan was given by "Bud" Orchard of Jackson, State B. Y. P. U. president.

One hundred ten were present from Port Huron, Capac, Harbor Beach, Deckerville, St. Clair, Bad Axe, Brown City, Caro and Cass City.

St. Clair carried home the banner. The church having the greatest number present multiplied by the number of miles they have to travel to attend the meeting is entitled to the banner.

This was one of the most successful meetings of the society yet held and all carried home the thought that "ideals are easy to think about, but they are worthless unless translated into our smallest acts."

CASS CITY STUDENTS WIN MANY HONORS

M. S. C. Publication Tells About Activities of Future Farmers of Community.

The March number of the Michigan Agriculturist, a Michigan State college publication, should really have been called the "Cass City Edition" because of the frequent and complimentary mention that was made of activities of present and former students of the Cass City high school.

Frank DuByne is the author of a three-column article, "Vocational Boy Leads with Lambs," which is a story of Harry J. Crandell, Jr., who won the state livestock project contest for 1930-1931 with a flock of 30 Southdowns. The story deals with Harry's trip to the American Royal Livestock show at Kansas City, Mo., and his exhibits there.

Another article tells of the selection of Clarence Merchant as national champion 4-H Holstein boy for 1931.

Clifton Heller, recognized as an outstanding student in horticulture at Michigan State college, has been initiated into two societies—the Pi Alpha Xi, national honorary floriculture fraternity, and Beta Alpha Sigma, a local honorary landscape and art fraternity.

Mention is made that Bruce Hoadley and Claude Mitchell were notified by the war department that they were to be given commissions in the reserve quartermaster's corps of second lieutenants in the U. S. Army. The commissions come as a result of Hoadley and Mitchell participating in the livestock judging contests at the International Livestock exposition. This is the first year that this innovation has been offered to judging team members.

Claude Mitchell was the recipient of one of the two cups given to the two highest ranking Ag. seniors at M. S. C. He received the scholarship-activity cup.

The Bethel Home Furnishing group met at the home of Mrs. Delbert Profit on Tuesday, Mar. 29. Each member came attired in Colonial costume which added a zest of former days to the merry party. The hostesses, Mrs. Archie McLachlan, Mrs. Frank McCauley, Mrs. Alton Mark and Mrs. Delbert Profit, furnished games and contests which kept the members interested and happy throughout the day.

Among those winning prizes in games were Mrs. A. H. Maharg and Mrs. Delbert Profit. Mrs. Edward Knight won the prize for wearing the most amusing ensemble.

A delicious pot luck lunch was served at noon after which the business meeting was conducted by the chairman, Mrs. Wm. Profit. The following officers were elected for next year: Chairman, Mrs. Archie McLachlan; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Alton Mark; leaders, Mrs. T. J. Heron and Mrs. Delbert Profit.

After the election of officers, sides were chosen for games by captains, Mrs. John Marshall and Mrs. John Doerr, Jr. Mrs. Doerr's side proved to be the winners and the losing group decided to entertain them at the home of Mrs. T. J. Heron on April 12. This will be the completion of the events for the year and the members of the club feel it has been a year well spent as they will exhibit about 20 rugs at achievement day held at Caro May 10.

MANY FARMERS SUFFERING FROM CROP FAILURES AND ECONOMIC CONDITIONS WILL EXPERIENCE DIFFICULTIES IN BUYING SEED AND OTHER MATERIALS FOR PLANTING THEIR 1932 CROPS. FEDERAL SEED LOANS ARE DESIGNED TO RELIEVE THIS SITUATION.

Who May Secure Loans:

Any farmer may make application for a seed loan to purchase seed, fertilizer, spraying and dusting materials, feed for work animals, and fuel for tractors used for crop production under the following conditions:

Farmers without the means or unable to obtain a loan from other sources for crop production purposes.

Farmers who operated a farm in 1931 and whose only means of livelihood is farming.

Farmers must agree to use seed and methods approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, and to plant a garden for home use and a sufficient acreage to feed crops to supply feed for his live stock.

The Amount Which May Be Borrowed

The amount to be loaned to one farmer will depend upon the size of his farm and the nature of the crops to be planted, but in no case to exceed $400.

In counties where fertilizer is not commonly used, the amount of the loan will be based upon the approximate cost of the seed and supplies required, but not to exceed $3.00 per acre. For truck crops including potatoes, the maximum loan will be $12.00 per acre.

In counties where the use of fertilizer is deemed necessary by representatives of the Department of Agriculture, the basis for the loan will be the approximate cost of the seed and supplies required, including fertilizer, but not exceeding $6.00 per acre. For tobacco production the maximum is $10.00 per acre; truck crops including potatoes maximum $20.00 per acre.

In addition to the foregoing, loans will be made in amounts not to exceed $2.00 an acre for the purchase of spraying materials to protect tobacco from insects and plant diseases; $4.00 per acre for spraying and dusting materials for truck crops; $25.00 per acre for fertilizer and spraying and dusting materials for bearing fruit trees and vineyards.

Loans will not be made for the production of crops in excess of the average of the acreage planted by the borrower in 1930 and 1931.

Loans will not be made for the purchase of machinery or livestock, or for the feeding of livestock other than work stock used for crop production, nor for the payment of taxes, debts or interest on debts.

How to Make a Seed Loan

Applications for loans must be made only to the Advisory Loan Committee to be established in each county ON FORMS TO BE SUPPLIED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Applications for loans must be accompanied by an agreement in accordance with prescribed regulations.

Upon approval of the application by the County Advisory Loan Committee and the Regional loan office for that district, a check drawn on the Treasury of the United States will be sent to the borrower.

The right is reserved to the Secretary of Agriculture to lower the loan rate per acre, to make payment of the loan in installments, to amend or supplement the regulations for loans or to withdraw the regulations at any time without notice.

Repayment of Loan

Seed loans will be made upon the promissory note of the borrower, to be payable on or before November 30th, 1932, with interest at 5½% per annum, and to be secured by a first mortgage or lien upon the crops to be planted.

LEGISLATURE TO SEEK TAX RELIEF

Soldier Bonus Bonds.

To provide for the payment of $5,000,000 soldier bonus bonds due in July, he recommends that $1,000,000 be paid and that the state plan to refund the remaining balance for the next four years, taking $1,000,000 out of the annual tax levy each year to pay the balance.

State Government Expenses.

He recommends that legislation, where needed, be passed to permit the reduction of all personal service expense of the state 15 per cent beginning with July 1. He would cut 15 per cent from the salaries of all state officials and employes which are subject to legisative control. He proposes a reduction in the totals of all supplies, material and contractural service expenses as set up in the budget.

For the University of Michigan and the Michigan State college he recommends a 15 per cent cut beginning with the fiscal year in July from the amount fixed in the mill tax acts of 1931.

There is also recommended a cancellation of all appropriations for capital outlay and a 15 per cent reduction of the amount appropriated for state services.

He recommends increased control over the state payrolls by the creation of a Personnel Commission, consisting of members of the house and senate and three appointed by the governor.

Local School Budgets.

He recommends that local school budgets throughout the state be cut at least 15 per cent and that the legislature submit to the voters the questions of a constitutional amendment which will give the legislature authority to provide for an income tax to replace the property tax that is now used to support the school system of the state.

Highway Taxation.

The legislature is asked to enact a law which will permit the return of the entire weight tax collected by the state to the various counties, a plan frequently advocated by previous legislatures. The legislature is also requested to retain control to a very large extent of the ways these funds shall be expended by the counties, cities and villages.

It is under this section of his message that the legislature will give consideration to the relief of Covert road assessment districts, the reduction of county mill tax levied upon property, the maintenance of county highways, the refunding of outstanding bonds and numerous other highway and bridge problems.

ELKLAND ROLLER MILLS TOLD BY ROY

Vol. 7. April 1, 1932. No. 39.

Published in the interest of the People of Cass City and vicinity by the Elkland Roller Mills Edited by Roy April — the month of showers. It's usually all wet, but we like it just the same.

They seldom give you the wrong number when you ask for 15. Try it and see!

We mean what we say! You'll never find a better value in a Brooder Stove than a Jamesway or Buckeye.

Our idea of a real monopolist is the guy who captures both arms of his theatre seat.

In making your plans for the future, by all means include a barrel of Cream of Wheat Flour. It's the first step toward a happy wedded life.

It won't do any good to spank a girl after she's sixteen, but it must be lots of fun.

N. Straky bought a new Jamesway Brooder Stove this week.

It will pay you to burn Cavalier Coal. We know that's a fact. It saves your furnace, makes less smoke and soot, and yet heats the house perfectly in the coldest weather!

One of our neighbors saw an advertisement not long ago of how to make money fast. He sent $1 for information and received this reply: "Nail your money to the floor."

Easy To Feed.

Wayne All Mash Starter is fed just as it comes from the bag. Keep plenty of it before your chicks all the time (after the first week) and your feeding job is done. Feeding directions in every bag.

There's one thing sure: Cavalier Coal will give you more heat satisfaction than you've ever had for the money before. That's our promise to you.

When the tired business man can retire to the farm and the tired farmer can retire to the city, both believe they will be happy—but they won't.

Wish you could have been here last week when John Atfield was telling about the results he gets with our Wayne Broiler Ration. You'll be pleased with it, too. He is feeding 2,000 chicks.

Team and work harness for sale.

Safety hint: Never stop to tie your shoe string while going through a revolving door.

Baptist Church—Sunday was a great day at the Baptist church. At the morning session, special attention was given the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, after which five candidates were baptized. The High Y were our guests. In the evening the Bible drama entitled, "Sunrise in the Garden" was given by members of the Sunday School, assisted by the choir. A beautiful background was arranged by a crayon drawing, picturing a mountain scene, with a rising sun and a rock garden leading down to the water. Banks of grass rugs helped the scene to look very natural. The tomb was very real and the background was helped by a liberal number of evergreen branches. Special Easter flowers added to the beauty, while very helpful to it all were the changing lights of various colors. Good audiences were present at all services.

These are not special Models brought out for "bargain sale" purposes, but the 17 Models of the regular 1932 Kelvinator line, first offered to the public less than 45 days ago. They are Kelvinators —of Kelvinator quality all the way through—the product of the longest experience in the industry.

With this substantial reduction, and on the ReLiaCo Monthly Budget Plan, the cost of a Kelvinator is so low that the purchase can now be made without materially affecting your budget.

The new low prices—the lowest in Kelvinator history—are now in effect. Come in and let us show you the big saving you now make. SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods, and befriended, by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan) is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake.

CHAPTER II. — Shad cleverly eludes his father, Colonel Blake, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. The colonel secures him a situation in the village of Amity Dam. He becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, a village character, considered by the straitlaced people of Amity Dam as a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety. With Bony, Shad is a frequent visitor to the picturesque shack which Brown calls home, known in the vicinity as the "Fun Shop." Bat Morryson comes to Amity Dam, with determination to take his son back to his own dissolute life.

CHAPTER III

A Day at the Fun Shop.

FROM the rear room of the store Shad ran downstairs to the cellar and out of its open hatchway. He went directly to the Smithers' house. The merchant, now familiar with the history of Shad, was at home. Learning the truth, he said to the boy:

"You disappear until the colonel comes. I'll telephone him. I don't want to know where you are."

He hurried to the store. Shad went to the loft in the barn and spread a blanket on the haymow and lay down.

Mr. Smithers found the Cyclopean Bat swearing mad. Shad's father and the constable were in the store. The latter introduced Mr. Smithers.

"Where is that boy?"

"I don't know."

"You're a d—d liar."

"I don't allow swearing in this store," said Mr. Smithers in that gentle tone which he used in selling ribbons to a lady. "If you'll sit down I'll consult my attorney on the telephone and ask him what ought to be done."

He called Colonel Blake, who said, "Tell the man that I'll meet him at your store tomorrow at eleven o'clock."

The interview next morning was very brief.

"Morryson, I know all about you," said the colonel. "You ought to be in jail. I shall see that you are put there and tried for brutality to your children if you do not get out of this country today and stay out of it. Don't irritate me by talk or tarrying. I want you to start now."

Bat started. He had heard of the district attorney of St. Lawrence county, the terror of all the lawbreakers of the north country. He would make no words with him. The colonel set out for home.

At last Shad was free. He celebrated his emancipation with a social adventure. It marks the beginning of the second act of this drama of country life.

"It'll be Sunday tomorrow—lord, how I dread it!" said Bony. "The bells an' the yells an' the stillness an' the sleepiness an' helpin' Miss Spenlow pick flowers an' then the walk in the cemetery to the graves of her cruel ancestors. Let's break away an' pike off to Bumpy Brown's. I'll paddle down today an' tell him we're comin'."

Now, Mrs. Smithers was a worker in the church. Shad had sat in the Smithers pew every Sunday with her and her husband. His compliance with their wishes had pleased them. The long prayers and sermons, the singing and incomprehensible shouting had generally given him a pain in the head. Shad's sense of rectitude was being slowly undermined by this ordeal. Soon he would be willing to lie to escape it.

That Sunday morning he told Mrs. Smithers that he was going for a walk to see the country and to think up things to write in a letter. He would not come home for dinner.

"I'll pray for you," said the good woman.

At the store he met Bony.

"I suppose that Sister Smithers wanted you to go to the Sob Works?" said Bony.

"The Sob Works!"

"The meetin' house," Bony explained. Always he called it "The Sob Works."

"She's good to me," said Shad, remembering her kindness.

They walked down the river road together. "What does Bumpy Brown do?" Shad asked.

"Kind of a tinker—mends umbrellas an' clocks an' tin pans an' most anything. He's got a funny bird that talks."

By and by they left the road and took a well-trod path that led into a thicket of evergreens. Beyond this on the high bank of the river was the curious little home of old Bumpy Brown. It was built of small logs stranded in his cove when the high water of the spring went down. A few shapely cedar trees stood around it. Bumpy used to say of his acre on the river shore that it was "God's Fair Ground." A man of imagination going to the lonely little house on a clear June morning would have called it the capital of Fairyland and chiefly because of the many voices in the reedy marsh and the woods and the flower-strewn grasses near it.

Bumpy was wont to call the birds his chickens. He fed them with crumbs from his table.

With his own hands he had completed the picturesque little house. It was snuggled into the river bank. Its curving roof had a wide overhang. Its windows were almost flush with the ground toward the trail. Its floor was somewhat below the level of the ground on three sides. Its south side toward the river had a door and two windows, opening on a flat rock ledge. Beyond them was a fine stretch of still water. The roof was partly covered with overlapping cedar strips from an abandoned launch, a patch of shingles, a patch of rusty tin, and a patch of tar paper.

The windows and doors differed in shape and size. They had come from abandoned mills and houses.

The snug and shapely structure, about sixteen feet square, gave one the impression that it had grown out of the ground. Though delightful in form, it was a thing of shreds and patches.

"It's a sight to see you workin'," said Bony.

"Say, by Jeedix! When I've swung an ax a while I git a grudge ag'in' Adam fer eating that apple."

Bony introduced his young friend.

"Say, boys, what be you expectin'?"

The boys did not quite understand his query and were silent.

"We'll have a good visit an' a reg'lar Chris'mus dinner. Come down to the spring a minute. I want to show ye suthin' calculated to improve the condition o' the poor."

They descended from the high ground to a wooded ravine. A covered dishpan was sunk in its cold spring. It held a small dressed turkey.

"My friend Muggins brought that to me, knowin' I expected company," Bumpy explained. "It makes him feel bad to see young turkeys sleepin' out-o'-doors, in a tree, these frosty nights. They ain't comf'table He puts 'em out o' their misery."

The old man laughed as he added: "There ain't a-goin' to be no sufferin' here if I can help it."

He walked with a knotty crooked stick cut in the woods. His artificial leg squeaked at every step. He limped a little but he could travel at a good pace. As they entered the house a strange gentle voice called out:

"Hello pard! Are you happy?"

"Yes, Dick," Bumpy answered.

"Praise the Lord!" the voice exclaimed.

It came from a yellow-headed parrot in a cage that rested among some potted ferns on a windowsill. The floor was well swept. The whole interior of the little house was noticeably clean. A crayon portrait of a plain looking woman hung on the wall.

"That's her—my wife," said the old man proudly as he stood looking at the portrait. "Just as nat'ral as can be—and is made from a photygraft. Alwus lookin' at me—the best woman that ever lived. Died ten years ago, this comin' fall—September seventeenth, at four ten in the mornin' exac'ly."

He wiped his eyes with a faded bandanna handkerchief and went to the woodbox. He began to whittle kindling for the stove. He stopped and looked up at the boys and added: "I said she died but she's still here—alwus speaks to me when I come home an' we talk things over same as we used to."

He hurried out-of-doors.

Bumpy returned with an armful of wood. He turned to Bony and said:

"Say, listen to me. Ol' Bumpy Brown has quite drinkin'. No more whisky fer him—not never no more! By Jeedix! I mean it. The las' time I come near breakin' my good leg an' then my wife an' I had a talk about it. She argued it out plain. An' then I had a dream an' I heard her voice. She screamed to me, an' she said: 'Look out, Bill, look out!' I was scairt!"

"If you ever see me drunk ag'in, you can take off my wooden leg an' split it up fer kindlin's. I guess that d—n' thing would burn well."

The parrot broke into laughter and then said in a gentle voice, "God is love."

"My wife taught him that," said Bumpy. "He's good company. Dear me, Suz! Guess I'd 'a' caved in long ago without him."

It would seem that the bird performed an important service in that little home. It was like the spirit of the dead.

"Nobody ever see you drinkin'," said Bony. "I suppose you get drunk thinkin' o' Cy Doolittle an' the scenery."

"Well, it's all over, an' I just as soon tell you boys suthin' if you'll keep it a secret. It's very private."

The boys indicated their respect for his confidence with unusual emphasis. Bumpy winked and sat down and pulled up his right trousers leg to the knee, exposing most of his wooden member. On one side was a little shelf with a hole in it and a cork in the hole.

"Ye see, all I had to do was buy a bottle o' whisky an' fill up my leg with it. That ol' leg holds enough to see snakes with. When I wanted a drink I'd lift my pants leg an' stick a straw in the hole an' shift a part o' the load a little higher up. I call it my happy New Year leg."

The boys laughed.

"Yes, sir, my ol' leg an' me is goin' to behave."

He took down a fiddle hanging on the wall and said: "Here's the main shaft o' the fun works."

He tuned its strings and played "Money Musk" and "The Sailor's Hornpipe." The bird sang joyously and Bony danced a jig as Bumpy played. He hung up the fiddle and said to Bony:

"If you'll run down an' bring up that turkey an' the butter, I'll start the doin's."

The boy ran and fetched them.

The bird indulged in a weird chortle.

Her Manner Was Haughty When She Said, "I Want to See Mr. Brown."

Bumpy smiled and said:

"Well, Dick, you've never learnt how to make a fool o' yerself as I have. I've got a maggot in my brain."

Bumpy picked up a broom, shouldered it and marched briskly across the room as if obeying the call. Returning to his task he said:

"We have great times—that bird an' me. When I go a-tinkerin' I take him with me, carry him on a stick behind me, fastened to my pack. He amuses the fam'ly while I work. Everybody loves him."

Bumpy had a jolly way of bullying the boys.

"Go an' wash yer hands an' comb yer hair," he said. "By Jeedix! Anybody would think that you was settin' down with common folks to a plain dinner. If any o' my rich friends should come I want ye to look right."

Bony had a nervous habit of winking and wrinkling his brow when amused.

"Stop screwin' up yer face that way," Bumpy would command. "Lord! Seems so the devil had stepped on yer big toe. It makes ye look like Mrs. Smelts."

"Who is Mrs. Smelts?" Bony asked.

"Well, sir, I reckon she's the humliest woman in the world. Lives in Pitcairn. She'd wilt ye down. Smelts is dead. He must 'a' died lookin' at her."

So the time went until the turkey, well browned, and baked potatoes and fried fish were on the table all smoking hot. Then Bumpy brought to the banquet a pot of delicious coffee and a jug of cider "with a little edge on it." The feast began.

Bumpy kept the boys laughing with an account of the singular adventures of Dick and himself on the road. In telling these stories he was wont to use the first person plural. Even when speaking of his own thoughts he said "we" as if out of respect for his comrade. It was different when he told of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg and of crawling into a clump of bushes with a bullet in his breast at Cold Harbor. There was generally a note of vanity in his stories. Some of them gave the impression that he was a man of amazing courage and fortitude. Then the scars!

By and by Bony had his turn. He knew all the droll sayings and misdeeds of Amity Dam. While Bumpy was filling his pipe he turned to Shad Morryson and said: "Boy, you ain't done a thing but laugh an' listen. Slip yer belt on the pulley an' keep the works a-goin'."

It was then that Shad's remarkable gift for imitation was discovered. He told a number of the stories of Phide Scott, reproducing the droll dialect so faithfully that his friends roared with laughter. They sat talking the hours away until the sun was low. Suddenly Bumpy arose and began to pick up the dishes, saying: "And there lay round upon the ground great heaps of so'gers."

Bumpy used this rhymed picture as a kind of tailpiece to every situation. There was a touch of satirical humor in it. Doubtless at the lodge and at other places where old soldiers were wont to gather he had been fed up with bloody tales of the great conflict.

There was a rap at the door. Shad opened it. A well-dressed, handsome young lady about twenty years old stood looking at the boy with an expression of astonishment in her face. She uttered no word of greeting.

Her manner was haughty when she said: "I want to see Mr. Brown."

She turned away as she spoke. Bumpy changed color. With a look of surprise and embarrassment he said:

"All right. I'll be with you in a minute."

The girl descended the steps and disappeared. Bumpy put on his coat and hurried out-of-doors saying:

"Set down, boys. I'll be with you soon."

He closed the door behind him and followed the young lady. Through a window the boys saw them walk together into the edge of the thicket where they stood talking.

"Who is that?" Shad asked.

"Darned if I know," was Bumpy's answer. "But I'd like to set an' look at her for a week."

"She is pretty—no mistake," Shad agreed.

Soon the girl went away.

Returning Bumpy stopped in front of the shack. The boys went out to him. He did not speak of his mysterious caller. He finished his work. He put some tools and clothing in his pack basket.

"Well, boys, we'll go along with ye," he said cheerfully. "Dick an' me are goin' to Bolton tonight so we can begin work in the mornin'."

Two small green sticks having four crotches were lashed on either side of the basket. They sloped upward and backward. A lashed rod lay in the lower crotches. This was Dick's saddle. The rim of the basket helped the bird to balance himself when necessary. Released from his cage, Dick laughed joyously and shouted "Come on," and flew to his perch behind the pack basket now on the back of his master. In a moment, settled on his perch he soberly declared:

"Money makes the mare go."

The boys laughed. It was indeed an outfit as curious and as amusing as any that ever took to the road. Bumpy stopped suddenly and turned to his two companions and said:

"By Jeedix, boys! We've had fun an' we'll have some more. I like you. If ary one o' you ever needs a friend er a home, come to me."

When he had returned that evening Shad succeeded in writing a letter to Ruth Blake in which he felt a sense of pride and satisfaction. It told of his day with Bumpy Brown. Its spelling and grammar would later have made him wince, but not in his best days could he have improved its humor.

FERGUSON SCHOOL.

Teacher, Marie O'Dell.

We are having some nice spring weather.

We are very sorry to have Lawrence Auten and Albert Englehart ill and absent from school.

The seventh grade have completed their geography books.

Last Friday we had spelling contests with three different schools, Bingham, Gagetown and McHugh. From Bingham and Gagetown, we won the first and third prizes. Our winners were Clark Churchill, Elizabeth Wrobel and Lila Chapman. We also won from McHugh. We lost to the McHugh school in an arithmetic match. The score was 19 to 9.

Last week Tuesday we had no school. The snow was too bad.

Our visitors were Mrytle Dodge and Mrs. O'Dell.

Reporters, Helen Englehart and Verneta Auten.

Our motto: "If it is not right, do not do it. If it is not true, do not say it."—Henry W. Longfellow.

Because so many are finishing their books, we have begun to realize that our school year will soon be over.

Those who were neither absent nor tardy for this month are: Violet Hathaway, Ella Hewitt, Lavara, Junior, Mildred and Wm. Morrish and Loreta Jackson. Jas. Hewitt was not absent but was tardy. Loraine Moss and Richard Rolston were absent just one day on account of snow banks.

Wm. Morrish and Loreta Jackson will receive seven months' certificates. There are seven others who have a chance of winning one.

There were about 23 parents and friends who attended our Easter party on Friday afternoon. A short program was given and refreshments were served. We were well pleased that so many came, and we invite you all to come again. We hope the mothers will visit us more often.

LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for April 3

GOD IN CREATION

LESSON TEXT — Genesis 1:1-5, 26-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—In the beginning—God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God the Creator.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Maker of All Things.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God in Creation.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, human institutions, and human relations. Without it we would be absolutely ignorant as to the origin of these fundamental things. The first chapter of the book from which our lesson is taken is one of the most wonderful in the Bible

I. God (v. 1).

He was before all things. He had no beginning. Everything but God had a beginning. God, the uncaused cause, is the cause of all things. "Before the mountains were brought forth or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God" (Ps. 90:2).

II. The Origin of thhe Universe (v. 1).

It was created by God. All things came into being by the will and act of a personal God. "Create" means "to bring into existence that which had no previous existence." The Hebrew word translated "create," according to reliable authority, is the strongest word which the Hebrew language has to express the idea of the origination of substance. This opening sentence is one of tremendous weight. Of it Doctor Murphy says, "It denies Atheism for it assumes the being of God. It denies Polytheism for it confesses the one eternal Creator. It denies Materialism for it asserts the creation of matter. It denies Pantheism for it assumes the existence of God before all things and apart from them. It denies Fatalism for it involves the freedom of Eternal Beings." The first four words of the Bible exhibit the one fundamental, all-pervasive principle of philosophy of every right life. In the beginning of the universe—God. In the beginning of all science and philosophy—God. In the beginning of every life—God. In the beginning of every year—God. In the beginning of every day—God. In the beginning of every business—God. In the beginning of every human relationship—God. In the beginning of every thought—God.

III. The Degeneration of the Earth (v. 21).

Between verses one and two is a clearly marked interval of perhaps long duration. The earth which was created by God was later overtaken in a cataclysmic judgment. The Hebrew word for "was" might just as well have been translated "became." Instead, therefore, the earth having been created a void or chaos, we see that it became chaos through a judgment. In Isaiah 45:18 the prophet expressly declares that God did not create the earth's waste, but that he formed it to be inhabited.

IV. The Regeneration of the Earth (vv. 3-25).

As previously noted, the second verse of Genesis does not describe the state of the earth when it first came from the Creator's hands, but a changed condition which took place subsequenty thereto. The following verses reveal a new effort of creative power by which the earth is again fitted up for the habitation of man. The power active in this reorganization of the Holy Spirit. On the first day the voice of the Almighty was heard saying, "Let there be light," and the darkness was dispelled by the light. In the second day the expanse or firmament was made which separates the waters above the firmament from those below it. The third day dry land appeared clothed with vegetation. The fourth day witnessed the appearance of the lightholders, the sun, moon, and stars. They were not created then, but set free from darkness and ruin. On the fifth day fish and birds were created and on the sixth day cattle, creeping things, beasts of the field, and man.

V. The Origin of Man (vv. 26-31).

He was created by God. This precludes the foolish idea that man ascended from or through the brute. He came into being through a special creative act of God. This image and likeness is not physical or bodily, but intellectual and moral (Eph. 4:24; Col. 8:10). God's likeness is reflected in man's threefold nature. Man is spirit, soul, and body (I Thess. 5:23). As there is a trinity and unity in God so there is a trinity in man. Spirit is that part of man by which he has the power to know God. Soul is self-conscious life, the seat of man's emotions and desires. The body is the seat of the senses, enabling man to have world consciousness.

How Farmers Can Fight Corn Borer

Mechanical Devices Used to Bring Pest Under Control.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Mechanical devices for control of the European corn borer are coming into more general use in the areas infested by this pest. Interest in the machinery designed to reduce the borer population is increasing, especially in the territory which has heavy infestations of the more destructive two-generation strain of the insect.

Demonstrations of the attachments and implements for borer control held in connection with the programs of farm and home week at the agricultural colleges of Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, were largely attended and led to similar exhibits on a county unit basis throughout the corn-growing sections of these states and Vermont.

Control measures which have been found most efficient in years of experimental work by co-operating bureaus of the department require removal and disposal of all remnants and debris of one season's corn crop before another comes on. Obviously, the success attained is in direct ratio to the proportion of the farmers in a community who follow the practices advised.

Low-cutting attachments on corn binders, for use at harvest time, sled-type shavers for cutting stalks in the spring, hand hoes for cutting corn at the ground surface, rakes for gathering stalks into windrows preparatory to burning, and attachments for plows assuring complete coverage of stalks when turned under are among the principal borer-control devices.

Use the Elevator Fan for Binning Small Grain

A valuable use which can often be made of feed grinders, equipped with elevating fans, is for elevation of small grain. For this operation the grinding mechanism is not used. The grain is fed into the hopper directly from the thresher, or scooped in from wagon or truck. A tractor or fair-sized gas engine will supply power enough to raise the grain more than 20 feet, or carry it a considerable distance horizontally.

At times when temporary space in hay mows is to be utilized, and an elevator is not available, the feed mill fan becomes a very helpful adjunct.

Oats were the first grain to be commonly binned in this method, and tests show that they can be elevated at the rate of 500 bushels per hour. Other grains are handled with relative efficiency.—Exchange.

Trees Add to Farm Value

Trees are one crop which North Dakota farmers can plant without being afraid of any surplus. In fact, farm owners who establish sizeable windbreaks of trees on their farms now not only take some land out of crop production but also add to the ultimate value and living comfort of their homes.

While the small area of land on each farm devoted to tree growing may seem insignificant so far as affecting crop production, an acre planted to trees on each farm in the state would mean 78,050 less of wheat or some other surplus crop.

But the most important reason for growing trees is to improve the farm itself. L. S. Matthews, extension service forester, states that an effective windbreak is one of the first steps toward best success with orchards and gardens. Fruit trees and gardens need this protection against wind and cold.—Dakota Farmer.

Lime Phosphate Valuable

When manure is available and can be systematically used, it is an excellent plan to mix lime phosphate with it. Manure being made largely from hay, straw and stalks, it is a good form of fertilizer for the production of hay, straw and stalks, but is unbalanced in food elements for the production of grains, as there is too wide a ratio between nitrogen and phosphorus. The continuous use of manure tends further to widen the ratio between phosphorus and nitrogen, and the tendency is to increase the growth of stalk and straw without a proper amount of grain formation. The addition of lime phosphate to manure tends to overcome this condition, and other factors favorable it will materially increase the proportion of grain to straw or stalk without largely increasing the total growth of the stalk and straw.—Exchange.

Power in Honey House

Machinery is employed to the fullest extent in preparing honey for market by Earl W. Rood, Nicollet county, Minnesota. He has a house where all the work is done. A farm lighting plant supplies power. A ¼ horsepower motor is used in running the extractor. A steam heated knife is used in uncapping. Additional machinery will be installed next year to handle the increased output. The Roods sell about 1,000 pounds in honey a month.—Capper's Farmer.
