Merchant Freeman, of Gagotown, was in town on Tuesday.
E. F. Marr has a new Ben Hur, pneumatic tire safety bicycle.
Miss Leonard, of Gagotown, is visiting with Mrs. M. Sheridan this week.
Mrs. Martin Dew has been seriously ill since last Friday, but is recovering.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hebblewhite left Tuesday to join the campers at Oak Bluff.

O. J. Wethy, drain commissioner of Novesta township, was a pleasant caller Tuesday.
Wm. Meiser and Miss Anna Berwick spent Sunday with Miss Parr, in Grant township.
Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Crosby, of Pipestone Minn., have been the guests of J. D. Crosby and family the past week.
The State Teachers' Institute for Tuscola county will commence at Caro next week, August 7, and continue until Aug 11.

A Sunday school excursion will be run on the S. T. & H. Ry on August 9, to allow the scholars and others to picnic at Bay Port.
Rev. S. M. Gilchrist had a valuable colt die last week from the effects of an operation performed by a Bay City veterinary the week prior.
F. A. Turner left Wednesday to visit relatives south of Saginaw, making the trip there on his safety. He witnessed the races at Caro while enroute.

Wm. Smithson and family now occupy the rooms over the Lutz building. Negotiations are now pending for the purchase of the building by Mr. Smithson.
James Young, a farmer living several miles northeast of Gagotown, has corn eight feet, four inches high, which is not yet tasseled out. It is grown from seed sent him by Joseph Bingham, of Virginia.

Nettie B., the Yale chestnut pacer that covered herself with glory in the 2:45 race at this place on July 4, entered the 2:35 trot or pace at Vassar last week and was distanced. The fastest time made in this race was 2:29 1/2.
Robert Wilson, of Ellington, while riding a horse rick on Tuesday, received a severe kick, breaking two of his ribs. Dr. Deming, who was summoned, thinks that he suffered no other internal injury. The horse, after kicking the driver off the seat, converted the rick into kindling wood.

Homer Frost, who has been a student at the Agricultural college the past term, was forced to return to his home at this place Saturday, owing to an attack of inflammatory rheumatism. He is now recovering rapidly. Homer was accompanied by Fred Schwaderer, who returned to the college the fore part of the week.
The S. T. & H. Ry. Co., to which the Bay Port Grounds belongs, have adopted a set of rules and regulations, which will rid that pleasant resort of many objectionable features. Two of the best rules are, "Gambling and the use of gambling devices is strictly prohibited," and "no spirituous or intoxicating liquors shall be sold on the grounds."

The ditch, which the School Board has had dug on the north side of the school grounds, is causing considerable agitation at present. While the above plan may be the best one under the existing circumstances, we are of the opinion that the circumstances should have been made differently. The carrying of the filthy water to the ditch at the side of the hill leading to the village, will certainly not increase the healthfulness of this locality.
A special train was run over the P. O. & N. and S. T. & H. railroads on Friday last to convey the degree "team," of the I. O. O. F. lodge, and other members at this place, to Bad Axe, where the "team" conferred degrees and assisted in initiating several candidates. Twenty-six Odd Fellows from this place were in attendance besides a number from Sand Beach and other places. The Odd Fellows from this place returned the next morning, and report a splendid time.

Eddie Collins, of Detroit, is making his friend Charlie Coleman a visit.
Threshers desiring order books, can be supplied at the ENTERPRISE office.
Mrs. J. S. McArthur and Mrs. J. H. McLean are enjoying camp life at Oak Bluff.

C. D. Striffler and wife, and Mrs. O. Lenzner, Jr. called on Striffler Bros. in Argyle, on Thursday.
W. J. Campbell has sold twenty-six mowers and thirteen binders this season. A splendid showing.
H. C. Weydemeyer, of Pontiac, is spending a week's vacation at his parental home in this place.
Mrs. Wm. Bentley and cousin, Miss Atwell, are visiting at Wm. and John Hutton's, in Pontiac, this week.

E. B. Landon reports the sale of twenty-two McCormick mowers and thirteen binders thus far this season.
There was no council meeting Tuesday night. The president and recorders were present, but nary an alderman.
The Tennant House office is being repainted and repaired by Thos. Cross. Landlord Farrar proposes to have everything neat and inviting.
While wielding the hammer the fore part of the week, W. J. Fisher was struck in the eye with a nail. Fortunately the eyesight was not destroyed.

Miss Ella Bader recently finished her term of school in the Bingham district with an "exhibition" in the evening. Miss Bader gave excellent satisfaction.
The wheat from a twenty-acre field on the Edwin Weaver farm was threshed and marketed on Monday. The yield was about four hundred bushels.
The "Walmesley school house" and ground were recently sold for forty dollars. The ground was sold to Mr. Wallace, and the building to Andrew Walmesley.

W. S. Richardson, teller of the Cass City Bank, filled L. C. Maynard's position in the bank at Kingston last week, while the latter was enjoying a vacation.
Mrs. H. S. Lewis, of West Bay City, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Geo. Apelin. Miss Tella Apelin, of the same place, accompanied her and will remain about two weeks.
At the M. E. Church next Sunday Rev. B. F. Wade will preach for Rev. Gilchrist, who, with O. C. Wood, has gone to Simpson Park camp meeting. There will be no evening services.

A collision occurred during one of the bicycle races at Caro this week. Two of the riders were hurt quite badly, as was also an onlooker, who had two ribs broken. The bicycles were likewise demolished.
A certain neighboring man, who is not exactly "up in Webster," recently remarked to a neighbor, "I'm going to build a condition to my house so that I can detain my visitors in a more hostile manner."

L. A. DeWitt has supplied his office with a large new fire and burglar proof safe, manufactured by Mosher, Bahmann & Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio. The safe is supplied with a steel chest having a tumbler and lever, and is the latest improved of its kind, throughout. Burglars will save time by steering clear of L. A.'s.
A very pleasant dancing party was given on Wednesday evening, by H. L. and Irene Pinney, in the rooms over the Exchange Bank. Cake and Oxford ice cream were served, and nothing was left undone by the givers of the party, to make the occasion an enjoyable one. Messrs. I. K. Reid and James Allen were the musicians engaged.

The State Summer Bible Conference, under the direction of the World's Gospel Union, will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at Flushing, Mich., from August 22 to 28. Pastors, evangelists, Sunday school teachers, and christian workers generally are invited to attend. Full particulars can be obtained from Rev. Gerrit Huyser, of this place, who is a member of the Michigan committee.
Mrs. J. Leonard, land-lady of the Irwin House, Bad Axe, remembered the ENTERPRISE last Saturday with a fine frosted, layer cake. The cake is one that was made by Mrs. Leonard, herself, in honor of the I. O. O. F. meeting that was held at that place last Friday. Nicely arranged on the cake with letter-candies was the inscription, "I. O. O. F., Irwin House, J. L. P." The latter initials standing for "John Leonard, proprietor." Three links, the Odd Fellow's emblem, completed the decorations. The cake was pronounced by those who sampled it "as good as it looks," and was conclusive evidence that Mrs. Leonard possesses no little ability as a pastry cook. The ENTERPRISE extends thanks for the compliment.

Mrs. A. A. McKenzie has returned from Caseville.
A. G. Berney was at Caro Tuesday on business.
Five hundred bushels of new wheat were received at the elevator yesterday.

Mrs. Clarke and children, of Grand Rapids, are visiting at J. F. Hendrick's.
Mrs. J. H. Winegar left Wednesday for a visit with her daughter at Cumber.
Jas. McGilvary, an agent of the Champion Binder and Mower Co., arrived home last week.
The races and freemen's tournament at Caro this week attracted a good many Cass Cityites to that place.

Miss Daisy Newton, of Bay City, and Miss Lydia McGinnis, of Canada, are the guest of their cousin, Miss Jennie Agar.
W. J. Campbell, the wide-awake proprietor of our agricultural depot, has a new and timely announcement this week. Look it up.
The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist Church, will be held at the residence of Mrs. Seely, Wednesday, Aug 9. Tea will be served in the evening as usual. The ladies extend a cordial invitation to all.

The Michigan Gazette for 1893-4 was delivered to subscribers in this place last week. The book is a comprehensive and valuable directory of two thousand pages. The ENTERPRISE sanctum is supplied with one, and our friends are at liberty to consult in at any time.
The Bad Axe Democrat recently received a postal card from one of its correspondents, of which the following is an exact copy: "Juh 3 I will be drunk tuda and tomorrer and can't rite the muse till the tail of the week. Hopping this wite sate you I am thine till after the fourth."

S. Ale, accompanied by A. H. Ale and Dr. McLean, went to Detroit last Monday to consult Dr. E. L. Shurly, a lung specialist, with the intention of remaining at Harper Hospital if deemed advisable, but on account of gaining so well the past month, he was advised to venture the same treatment.
DIED—On Saturday morning last, of inflammation of the bowels, after an illness of twelve days, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Welsh, of Elmwood. The funeral occurred at the house on Sunday, Rev. Gerrit Huyser, of this place, officiating. The interment took place in the South Elmwood cemetery. Undertaker McKenzie was in attendance.

A horse, new carriage and new harness was stolen from the barn of John Mullen, a farmer living three miles west and one mile south of Gagotown, on Saturday night last. The stolen horse is described as a bright bay gelding, weight about 1200, black mane and tail, one hind foot white, and white star in forehead. Deputy Sheriff Striffler is on the alert, and offers a reward of twenty-five dollars for the return of the property.
The readers of a newspaper naturally look upon it to furnish them the correct particulars of all items of news that may occur within its jurisdiction, without fear or favor to parties concerned. While many times it is called upon to chronicle unpleasant occurrences, it is in duty bound to wave sentimentalism and give out the cold facts, regardless of whose toes may get mashed in the scuffle. Whenever the paper refrains from collecting the news for personal or sensational reasons, or when it attempts to shield certain parties in its reports, it departs in a certain degree from the dignity of its station.

An Evergreen township farmer, who was one of four farmers to purchase a threshing outfit for their own use, explains the scheme as follows: "We clubbed together and bought a threshing outfit—separator and horse power—for $500, to be paid for in four yearly payments. These payments come due in the fall and are met by an assessment on the partners at a certain sum per bushel of the grain threshed for each one. The four help each to do the work, and do not allow the machine to do any threshing for any one else. The cost of the threshing has not yet reached four cents per bushel any year and the outfit is three-quarters paid for. By using it themselves exclusively, they have been able to take care of the machine and it is now seemingly as good as when bought. The last payment will be made this year, after which the cost will be very light. Another item is that the annual big job for the women of the houses is done away with, for no extra help is required, excepting the three neighbors, and they are near enough to go to their homes."
(Additional Local on Last Page.)

Big Fire at Vassar.
Fire broke out in the third story of the Vassar milling company's flour mill Wednesday morning about 4 o'clock. The mill was burned, as was also the Flint and Pere Marquette railroad company's elevator. The loss is $32,000, covered by insurance to the amount of $20,000. The origin of the fire is unknown. At the time the fire broke out the mill was being run by water power.

Cut 'Em Down!
While driving over to Ellington on Sunday, we noticed several patches of healthy-looking Canada thistles along the way.
Believing that the law in regard to the destroying of these thistles is not as well known as it should be, we give space to the following in regard to it:
The public acts of the state of Michigan make it the duty of every owner, possessor or occupier of land to cut, or cause to be cut, down all Canada thistles growing thereon, or on the highway passing through the same, so often in each and every year as shall be sufficient to prevent such thistles going to seed.
If any owner, possessor or occupier of land shall knowingly suffer any such Canada thistles to grow there and the seed to ripen so as to cause or endanger the spread thereof, he shall, on conviction be liable to a fine of ten dollars for every such offence.

It is the duty of the overseers of highways to see that the provisions of this law are carried out within their respective highway districts. It is also the duty of the overseer to give notice to the owners, possessors or occupiers of any land within his district, when such Canada thistles shall be growing and in danger of going to seed, requiring him to cause the same to be cut down within five days from the service of such notice; and in case the owner, possessor or occupier refuses or neglects to cut down such Canada thistles it is the duty of the overseer to enter upon the land and cause such thistles to be cut down, doing as little damage as possible to growing crops.
When Canada thistles are growing on non-resident lands it is not necessary for the overseer to give any notice before cutting down such thistles.
The owner, occupier or possessor of lands is liable for all expenses incurred by the overseer in the destruction of thistles after notice, and if he refuses to pay the same, such expenses shall be paid by the township and by the supervisor assessed upon the property and collected in the same manner as delinquent highway taxes are collected.
Every overseer of highways who shall refuse or neglect to discharge these duties shall be liable to a fine of twenty-five dollars.

The law also provides that it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney of the county to prosecute all violations of this law which shall come to his knowledge.
It is hoped that the provisions of the law will be carried out as completely as possible, thus ridding our country of this obnoxious weed.

Our Neighbors.
What They Are Doing.—News Notes of Interest to All.

A Maccabee harvest picnic will be held near Crosswell on Aug. 24.
Pigeon has organized a band under the leadership of H. Kleinschmidt.
L. C. Carpenter, of Bad Axe, has sold his trotter, Princeton, to a Schoolcraft man.
Gage & Co. of Gagotown are erecting an elevator at Winsor, and are putting in steam power.
Carsonville, a Sanilac county town of 600 inhabitants, has voted for water works. This is enterprise.
The German Lutheran Church at Mayville will be dedicated August 27. Rev. Walker of Lapeer will preside.
Some one entered the sleeping apartment of Andrew Hemerino at Sebawaing and stole $15 from his pockets.
Seth Meyers, well known to Cass Cityites, has exchanged his livery business at Bad Axe for the "Farmers' Hotel," at the same place.
The Bad Axe base ball team due up the Sand Beach nine last Thursday to the tune of 13 to 4. We thought the Sand Beach boys were more sandy than that.

The races at Vassar last week were well filled, and some fast time was made. The attendance was not very large, perhaps owing to the busy season with the farmers.
At Valley Center, Sanilac county, the store of H. A. Cook & Co. was destroyed by a fire that broke out in such a mysterious manner as to suggest incendiarism. The loss is $4,000.
The Evangelical Church will hold a camp meeting at Elkton, commencing Saturday, Aug 8, and continuing until Sunday evening. Rev. Bulgrin, the pastor in charge, extends a cordial invitation to all to attend.

Attie township, Lapeer county, is said to be infested with grasshoppers of a peculiarly voracious sort. Not satisfied with destroying the farmers' crops, they devour the binder twine from the bundles of grain in the fields.
George Maynard, the farmer near Tuscola, who was so severely injured last week while unloading hay with a hay fork, the particulars of which were given in the ENTERPRISE last week, died on Friday. He never regained consciousness.

Albert Cornell was in town yesterday exhibiting a solid piece of copper of irregular shape, weighing four and one-half pounds, and was found on his farm four miles south of the village. It is thought that the metal may exist there in large quantities.—[Sanilac Center Republican.]
Farmers of Lapeer county, who have their threshing done by Miles Pinkle, will not have to go to the usual trouble of scouring the neighborhood to get the necessary help. Mr. Pinkle will carry with him a number of hands sufficient to do all the work with the exception of caring for the grain and straw.

Erv. (Babe) Bush was spinning along on his safety last Monday evening and when nearing the Townsend farm, came to a flock of sheep. They all rapidly gave way to him except one large Hampshiredown buck, who declined to give the usual right of way, and made his declination forcible by landing the rider and his machine by the roadside. Not being satisfied with this he gave the rider as he attempted to arise, another header for luck. It is needless to say that Erv. did not care to ride any more that evening, and led his machine home for repairs. He won't contest the right of way with another big sheep very soon.—[Caro Advertiser.]

OUR MOTTO:

PLUCK, PERSEVERANCE AND PATRIOTISM.

Riding a Wheel Up Hill.

Now that several ingenious individuals have invented a device for enabling bicyclists to climb a hill upon their machines the wonder is that it was not done long ago. The thing seems very simple after all—so simple that two or three persons have actually hit upon the idea about the same time. One young man in New York sent his models to Washington lately expecting to secure a patent. He was informed that only a month before a different person, entirely unknown to him, had applied for a patent on precisely the same invention. The idea was in the air apparently, for there could have been no possible chance of one of the young men getting it from the other. Perhaps the same thing happens oftener than inventors imagine, and lawsuits for patent infringements are fought to the bitter end sometimes, when neither inventor stole the other's idea, but it struck both brains about the same time.

In mechanical parlance the hill climbing device consists of a rag wheel or sprocket wheel and chain. The wheel has teeth which fit into links upon a driving chain. The sprocket wheel is attached to the diamond frame of the bicycle. The driving chain with the link sockets passes over it and back around the axle of the rear bicycle wheel. Motion is communicated from the sprocket wheel to the rear wheel of the bicycle by the driving chain, and thus the machine is pedaled up hill. On level ground the chain is thrown off. The device can only be used on the safety bicycle. The drawback to its best working is the mud and dust that invariably are thrown upon this part of a bicycle.

Best Armor Plate.

Indian Head is a point on the Maryland shore of the Potomac river 20 miles below Washington. It is there that, in the past four years, the fact has been demonstrated that the best armor plate for naval vessels is made in the United States, and not only that, but it is also made most cheaply. The best armor plate is now made of mixed nickel and steel, tempered by the Harvey process. In France the cost of nickeling the armor plate is $140 a ton. In the United States it is $11.20 a ton.

Indian Head has witnessed some of the most remarkable armor plate and projectile tests in the world. At the first great armor test plates from England and France were sent to compete with those made in the United States. The United States armor came out victorious. Then two years ago there was another test—that time to decide whether the Harveyized nickel steel was better than steel made by any other process. The result was a victory for the Harvey method. The last trial, recently completed, was to compare the work of different American manufacturers of armor plate. Once more the verdict is that our armor plate is the best. Two specimens of plate were subjected to the force of tremendous shots, one a 12 inch plate, the other 17 inch. They were perforated by shot having a projectile force enough to move 21,600 tons of matter one foot.

English and French experts witnessed the trial and were especially surprised to find the temper of the metal so perfect that the perforations made a clean, round hole, without crack or fissure.

The people of Massachusetts have become so light minded and frivolous that they celebrate the annual Fast day in altogether too giddy a style, and those who remember the ancient traditions are shocked. Feasting on Fast day has become such a scandal in old fashioned Massachusetts' eyes that the recommendation has been frequently made to have the day done away with altogether. Even Governor Russell is in favor of abolishing it and made such a recommendation on the occasion of his third inaugural address. Those who favor the abolishment of Fast day believe in the observance of Good Friday instead. But the adoption of this solemn Catholic holy day in Massachusetts would be enough to wake the old colonists from the dead.

Seeing that a tornado is about the most powerful force known, it is rather odd that the aid of blasts of air has not been invoked long ago for mechanical work to a much greater extent than has been done. At a colliery in Jermyn, Pa., a tremendous air blast is used for removing the waste and culm from the mouth of a coal mine. The refuse is discharged from the mouth of the mine into a hopper connected with a feed pipe. A current of air hurls the rubbish through the pipe and out beyond its mouth to a distance of 150 feet. The cost of the men, mules and carts thus dispensed with constitutes a pretty item of income.

Bismarck in a recent speech to delegates from German chambers of commerce told what he thought of millionaires in unmistakable language. He said: "Commerce and agriculture ought to go hand in hand. Although the latter in the present depression deserves all consideration, it ought not to be favored at the expense of trade and industry. The bitterness with which millionaires are regarded in Germany is not justified. It would be much better for Germany if she possessed, like England and America, ten times as many millionaires as she now has."

Some people may not be habitual falsifiers exactly, but they have unspeakably vivid imaginations.

Professor Pickering, of Harvard university, calls loud and long from his mountain observatory in Peru for the money that will provide a giant telescope at that observatory. He says he is on the verge of great astronomical discoveries, but he has only a telescope of thirteen inches aperture. Even with this small one he claims he can see as distinctly as the observers can through the great Lick telescope in California, with its aperture of thirty-six inches. This is because the air of the mountain in Peru is so clear and steady. In no part of the United States, says Professor Pickering, or in Europe either, is the atmosphere steady enough to permit the best astronomical observations. Now let some rich Americans who want to clear their consciences before they die chip in and give the money to construct a gigantic telescope for Professor Pickering in Peru. Perhaps it might be the means of showing us how to signal to Mars.

American Hungarians.

Emigrants from Hungary are arriving in this country in proportions that begin to attract attention. Sixty thousand of them have come within a year. They do rough work, like the Italians, but mostly in mines and on the railroads. Unlike the Italian, however, the Hungarian comes to America to stay, and takes out his citizen's papers as soon as possible. It is the dream of his life to lay up money enough to send back to Austro-Hungary and bring his wife and children over. The Italian's dream, at least in the first place, is to get $500 and then go home to spend the rest of his days in bloated affluence. But thousands of the Italians are changing their minds now and becoming citizens too.

A Philadelphia Times reporter found a colony of Hungarians working in an iron mill for 9 1/2 cents an hour, which would be ninety-five cents a day for ten hours' work. They paid for lodgings in a tenement house, then bought their own food and had the lodging house keeper cook it for them. The Hungarian, however, is not proud, and can live as cheaply as the Italian. The men in the iron mill live on about eleven dollars a month, all told. They say that Europe is full of steamship emigration company agents who travel among the country folk and represent to them that America is a land where gold grows on trees and every man becomes a millionaire in five years. No wonder so many of them become paupers or criminals, or commit suicide after they try it awhile.

Convinced.

Judge—Prisoner, do you acknowledge your guilt?
Prisoner—No, my lord. The speech for the defense has convinced even me of my innocence.—Exchange.

A man named Boston Corbett killed Wilkes Booth in 1865. In 1892 another Corbett whips the man from Boston and gains as great fame as the first Corbett did.

Congressman Oates, in The North American Review, calls attention to the fact that the best paid skilled workmen at the Homestead mills received as much as $380 a month, and large numbers of the skilled laborers got $200 a month. Common laborers got fourteen cents an hour.

The cremation at Swinburne island—one of the quarantine islands—of the bodies of those who died of cholera on the ships in New York harbor will meet the approval of every intelligent American. It is not a pleasant subject to think about or write about, but it is not unknown that corpses buried at sea and buried, infection would have been almost sure to follow; if they had been conveyed far out to sea and thrown overboard, they might have been washed ashore or been devoured by food fishes. Either contingency is sickening enough to contemplate.

Two Points of View.

Mr. Longcourt—Ah, that it might be ever summer! What a joy is such a night as this! How calm, how peaceful, how full of more than earthly bliss, how—
Miss Impaciente—Yes, pa likes it better too.

Mr. Longcourt—Has he then a mind attuned to the beauties of nature, the harmony of—
Miss Impaciente—I don't know about that, but he says the gas bills are lots smaller.—Detroit Tribune.

HAPS AND MISHAPS!

As Told by the Enterprise's Corps of Correspondents

All the Chit-Chat From the Country Round About Briefly Told For Busy Readers.

BERNE.

Farmers have commenced plowing. Wm. Finger visited Caseville on Saturday.

Chas. E. Schuder was at Elkton on business Saturday.

KARR'S CORNERS.

Lovely harvest weather. Oh, Camboro! Where hast thou gone? Wheat is about all stacked or in barns now.

John Muma has eleven horses. Who bids? Tom Caulfield's threshing machine will be in this part this week.

Frank Martin started threshing at Mr. McPherson's on Monday.

Zion has quite an attraction for some of our youth on Sunday nights.

Tom Caulfield says that wheat is turning out better this week than it did last.

Miss Maud Smith has returned home from her visit to Ohio. She arrived last Saturday.

Theodore Burdon and wife, of near Gagetown, spent last Sunday evening at John Muma's.

John McPherson is Frank Martin's engineer for this year. P-f-s-sh-sh! Did it scare you that time?

Arthur Denean and James Muma spent Sunday at Bay Port. Pshaw, now; don't think the boys were alone for their best girls were with them.

The Epworth League had an ice-cream social at the Bethel Church last Friday evening. The proceeds, which amounted to $11.25, would have undoubtedly been more had it not rained.

NOVENTA.

Too busy last week to get any news. Wheat all cut and in the barns and stacks. The crop is a fair one.

Robert Little is home from Detroit where he has been for some time.

Master Arthur Thompson is visiting friends in this visiting at present.

We have been informed that M. McPhee will run F. Martin's engine this season.

Mrs. Justin was called to North Branch last week by the illness of her sister-in-law.

Mrs. M. H. Quick has been on the sick list for some time but is some better at this writing.

J. McQuillen and best girl, and R. Warner and best girl, visited friends in Evergreen on Sunday.

A. McPhee has finished the job on the road between sections 18 and 17, which is a much needed improvement.

Mrs. Thompson, of Bay City, was called to the bedside of her sick father, A. Gillis, who has been ailing for some time. As he is an old man, his recovery is doubtful.

The toot of the whistle and the hum of the machine reminds us that threshing has begun. Several have threshed and the report is about 22 bushels per acre of wheat.

By the crowds that go to Snore Island to pick berries, we would think they would soon have them picked. There were five buggies and two wagons there one day last week.

CASEVILLE.

Very warm and dry. A great many are wishing for rain about now.

A certain lady of this place carries a black eye, the result of her husband coming home drunk Saturday night about two o'clock. Her husband does not believe in women's rights.

On Monday, Chas. Akey, of Manistee, was married to Miss Ellen Conant, of this place. The ceremony was performed at Meade, by Father Guinella. A reception was given at the residence of the bride's mother, in the evening. About two hundred partook of a bountiful supper, after which the young people enjoyed themselves in dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Akey received a large number of nice presents. They have the best wishes of all.

WEST GRANT.

Mr. Burnett and Mr. Shafer and wife spent a pleasant day at the bay last Sunday.

Mr. McVicar had the misfortune to fall off a load of wheat and dislocated his elbow. However, it is mending rapidly now.

Mrs. Welch, very unfortunately fell down stairs one day last week, and was injured quite badly. She is recovering slowly.

Well, Rescue, I'm glad you miss the news from West Grant when they're not written, but there may be some news written each week yet.

Mr. Hartman is recovering from the diphtheria and it is hoped that no cases will break out anywhere else. A little attention to purifying the blood might check it entirely.

A very large number of Archie McVicar's friends met at his place and celebrated his 21st birthday last Tuesday evening. They enjoyed themselves until an early hour next morning and then—well the boys pitched wheat next day, they couldn't sleep this time of the year. Archie received several presents by which he can remember his birthday.

This is my last letter from West Grant, but the news may be sent in by some one else. During my time as correspondent I tried to write all the news. I didn't wish to offend any one, but I did. Yes I made enemies, but—

He makes few friends Who never made a foe. I made friends and best of all I kept them all, and since I've left West Grant I'll not forget my friends there, and I would like to hear from them every week and know no better way than for some one to become Q. D. for the ENTERPRISE, for I read that every week. Wishing the people of West Grant success and hoping the ENTERPRISE will be read by all of them, I say good by as correspondent. A good bye and good wishes to all brother scribes.

ELLINGTON.

How is this for warm weather? Cass River is running very low.

A good shower would be very acceptable now.

Wheat harvest has nearly closed. A few days more will finish it.

Corn is growing nicely and bids fair to be a good crop in Ellington.

Some oats and barley is already fit to cut and the rest is ripening fast.

Frank Brown and father, of Columbia, were over to Levi Whipple's Sunday.

Wm. A. Bailey had a lot of shingle manufacturers at his mill here last week.

J. K. Turner had 196 bushels of wheat from ten acres of ground, and some rakings.

James R. Bell, of Fairgrove, was up to his brother Samuel's again, on business, last week.

Some pieces of wheat have been threshed and turned out quite well, but is somewhat shrunken.

We expect to see another new building go up ere long in Ellington. W. A. Bailey will build a new barn.

Samuel Bell was in Caro last week, Saturday, and brought home a load of brick and lime to make a chimney for his kitchen.

James Brackenbury, of River Rouge, joined his wife and children at Levi Whipple's last week, Saturday, and stayed until Monday, when they all left for other quarters.

Rev. Bacon, pastor of the M. E. Church, started Monday on a visit to his father's in Canada, whom he has not seen for a long time. The visit will be of indefinite length. His family started last week.

S. Y. Kenyon recently moved his large barn from the back fields up nearer the road, in a more convenient place. Shell proposes to have things "handy," and we prophesy will be making other improvements before long. His new farm is nicely situated, with a row of fine, large maple trees along the front, and it will be a very pretty place some day.

GAGETOWN.

All spring crops in this vicinity look good.

Miss Annis Lown visited at her parental home Sunday at Canboro.

Mrs. Alex. King, of Argyle, Sanilac county, and her two sons, Wilson and Cyrus, made the farmers, sister, Mrs. R. S. Brown, a visit Saturday and Sunday.

Gage & Co. report an exceptionally good sale of binders and mowers this season, of the Walter A. Wood manufacture. They attribute a due portion of their success to the results of advertising.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA HAS CURED OTHERS WILL CURE YOU

A Bright Lad, Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and anemic. A gathering formed and broke under my arms. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."

The Old Battle Ground.
O! friends come with me
To the old battle grounds,
We can well find the place
By the little green mounds,
Where our comrades now sleep;
Undisturbed by the sound
Of the bugle roll call
On the old battle ground.

O! why mourn for them?
Their battles are o'er,
They heed no more the sound
Of the cannon's loud roar;
For deep in their sleep
Are our comrades now slain
On the old battle ground.

O! 'twas sad, and indeed,
That with them we had to part,
But we'll cherish their names,
And cheer the broken heart;
For our comrades are gone,
Can their graves now be found?
Let us search for their names
On the old battle ground.

Our comrades now lie here
In their graves beneath this tree,
Side by side they sleep,
From the battles they are free;
They are resting in the clay,
And their sleep is profound;
Read their names as you walk
O'er the old battle ground.

Let them rest here in hope
Of a far brighter day,
When in beauty and strength,
From their prison of clay,
They will arise at the call,
When the trumpet shall sound
To awaken the old battle ground.

Now, then, until that day
Let the living comrades meet,
And a wreath of flowers lay
At the head and the feet
Of the comrades who were
Where they are found;
For the honor that was won
On the old battle ground.

A Goose Full of Gratitude.
An interesting relic is preserved in a glass case in the Coldstream Guards orderly room at Whitehall, says the Million. It consists of the head and neck of a goose, around which is a golden collar, with the inscription: "Jacob, Second Battalion, Coldstream Guards." Beneath it are the words: "Died on duty." In 1838, when two of the battalions were in Canada helping to quell the rebellion, some of the soldiers were posted as sentries round a farmyard near Quebec. One day the sentry whose duty it was to watch the entrance to the farm beheld a fine goose feeding towards him, closely pursued by a hawk.

His first impulse was to have shot at the latter, but this would have alarmed the guard. He was compelled, therefore, to remain silent, while every step brought Reynard nearer to his prey. In the height of his rage, he ran his head and neck between the legs of the soldier, and at the same moment the wily fox made a desperate grab at the goose; but too late, for ere he could get his teeth between his teeth it ready bayonet of the sentinel had passed through his body. The poor goose, by way of showing its gratitude to its preserver, rubbed its head against his legs and made other equally curious demonstrations of joy.

Nor could it ever be prevailed upon to quit the post, but walked up and down day after day with each successive sentinel that was placed there. The most remarkable thing in connection with the story is that the goose in turn actually saved her preserver's life. It so happened that the same sentry was on that particular post about two months afterwards when a desperate attempt was made to kill him. It was winter time, and several men stole up in the darkness to the sentry's post, their footstep inaudible on the soft snow. The soldier meanwhile marched up and down his lonely beat, followed by the devoted goose, until he again stood at ease before the sentry's box.

This was the enemy's opportunity. But just as two of their number were preparing to strike the sentry with a spring upon the unsuspecting man, the bird rose suddenly on its wings, right in the faces of the would-be assassins. They were astonished and rushed blindly forward, but the sentry, fully aroused by the danger, bayoneted one and shot the other as he was running away.

Meanwhile, the other conspirators approached, but the bird repeated its tactics and sent the sentry to bayonet them at bay until the guard camped upon the scene and made them fly for their lives. On arrival of the regiment in London the bird resumed its old duties with the sentinel posted at the brick gates. "Jacob" was eventually run over by a van, and died at the post of duty after a "sentry go" of twelve years.

Who Stole That Whisky?
S. C. Miles, Stetsonville, Wis., says that an inquiry was lately made if Gen. O. Z. B. Rank, in command of a division encamped at Clear Creek in August, 1892, ever found out who stole his whisky. So far as the writer knows the facts in the case were: Gen. Blank was the owner of a fine barrel of whisky, which he kept against the outside of his tent right by the beat of the guard over the commissary stores. It was on a dark and dismal night that a certain member of the Eighth Wisconsin, whose name shall be unmentioned, was pacing that beat, and wishing to occupy his time to more purpose than merely idly promenading, conceived the idea of bottling up the general's barrel of whisky so as to have it handy for the general's use in the morning. So he procured a lot of empty canteens from guard headquarters, formed a row from a piece of canvas, and prying out the bung with the bayonet, he proceeded very industriously, to work quite anxious to accomplish his self-imposed task before being relieved from duty. Of course, after he was relieved he could not be expected to stay around headquarters until morning, and on calling around then, to find the general surprised and thankful for his thoughtful employment of his time, imagine his own surprise and disappointment at finding the canteens all gone, with their precious contents, and no one able to account for them or their disappearance. Knowing from sad experience that army officers are generally very unappreciative of good intentions of the private soldier, he concluded that he would not say anything to Gen. Blank about the matter, and it was probably just as well that he didn't, as he says that when the general came out to look after the watering and trimming of his whisky plant that morning, and his eagle eye took in the situation, the look he gave just then will never be effaced from the tablet of his memory. The general immediately aroused the camp, and the guards were brought before him, and a time of sermons and corporal's threats with reduction to the ranks if they did not tell who stole that whisky. But no man knew anything whatever about it. How could they? It was a very dark night, and they were not instructed to sit all night on the general's whisky barrel. So, after keeping the guard from being relieved until noon, the general terminated the inquiry in disgust and permitted the suspected guard to go to their respective apartments. Now the writer was informed that whisky seemed to be unlimited in supply all that afternoon, and the boys of the Second Brigade were on a big spree. However, he does not know about that for certain.—National Tribune.

The Thirtieth's Reunion.
The annual reunion of the "Old Thirtieth" Regiment Illinois Infantry, occurred at Dixon on the thirty-second anniversary of the date when the regiment was mustered into service. The reunion occurred at the Nathan a house where fifty-eight of the survivors assembled, and where, in the evening, a banquet was given. An agreeable day and evening was spent by the old veterans, living over again the scenes and experiences of the war, and the evening was spent in a grand ball given in the evening by Lady Carew to the aristocracy of the county; and there Sir Carlos saw beautiful women and fair girls.

From the ranks of these he must at somewhere or other choose a wife, Lady Carew told him with a smile; but he, whose heart was untouched by love, kissed her lovely face and told her she should never marry until he found one just like herself. In the time to come she reminded him of those words.

So Sir Carlos Carew was now fairly launched in life, and in all England there was no finer, handsomer more chivalrous young man than he. He won golden opinions from his tenants. He liked his own way, they said; but he would make a good landlord.

Looking at his handsome face, Lady Carew often wondered whether he would soon fall in love. Already he was looked upon as one of the most eligible young men in the county. The Duchess of Wealde invited him to Wealde Castle. She had four daughters, all more or less charming, and wished for nothing better than that Sir Carlos should marry one of them. Lady Bathurst of Glynn had but one daughter fair as Diana, and she tried her best to throw the young people together; and the pretty young widow, Lady Anne Hertford, who had recently come to live in the neighborhood, would not have been averse to improve still further her acquaintance with Sir Carlos Carew. No woman could look unmoved upon that handsome face; but as yet Sir Carlos's heart was free from the haunting dream called love. He thought more of hunting and shooting, the breed of his dogs, and the pedigree of his horses than of love.

True, once or twice, when he had been dancing with Lady Anne, a glance from her dark eyes had set his heart beating fast, and he had remembered the thrilling touch of her slender fingers; once, too, when he had been dancing with Alice Bathurst of Glynn, she had sighed when the waltz was over, and had looked sorry when he left her.

Pretty Alice always blushed when he spoke to her until her face was like a damask rose, and those blushes made Sir Carlos's heart thrill with delight and pride; but that was all. The Ladies Evesham retained some queer articles on their bills of fare. At Antananarivo, the capital of Madagascar, a very good paper is published in French called the P. ogress de l'Iner, which is a domestic department, which in a recent issue began as follows:

Like No Other Love.

By Charlotte M. Braeme.
CHAPTER IV.—CONTINUED.

All his—to do with as he would, to keep with honor or to lose with shame! A wild sense of freedom seemed suddenly to possess him. All his! He had no master; no one had any authority over him! He could do in every way as he pleased! Not for one moment that he meant to do anything wrong, or to defy any authority; but to him the sense of perfect liberty was sweet.

Good resolutions filled his mind. He would never do anything of importance without asking either his mother's advice or the rector's counsel. So he would do away with the "curse of the Carews." He could see the windows of the room where his father died.

He could see the spot, marked by the white marble cross, where his father had been thrown by the horse which he had ridden because every one had advised him not to do so; and he said to himself that the same fate should never overtake him. He would listen to reason, follow the advice of those who counselled him, and take himself to task when he felt his own will mastering him.

Reverently enough the handsome young heir bared his head as he said aloud: "Heaven keep me from the curse of the Carews!"

It was a day to be remembered. Rich and poor thronged to Firlholme; the great mansion was crowded with guests; the park, the grounds, and the gardens were thronged with people; all the servants and the tenants and laborers on the estate were feted to their hearts' content. If good wishes and ringing cheers could have secured Sir Carlos's happiness, it would never have failed him. It was perhaps the happiest day of his life. The festivities were prolonged until a late hour. A grand ball was given in the evening by Lady Carew to the aristocracy of the county; and there Sir Carlos saw beautiful women and fair girls.

From the ranks of these he must at somewhere or other choose a wife, Lady Carew told him with a smile; but he, whose heart was untouched by love, kissed her lovely face and told her she should never marry until he found one just like herself. In the time to come she reminded him of those words.

may want to be what many of the Carews have been, a statesman. The life of a country baronet may not at all content you; you must make friends in society. Believe me, Carlos, in this case it will be wise for you to comply with the wishes of others."

"Would not next year do as well, mother?" he asked.

How earnestly she hoped he was not going to kiss her and caress her into complying with his wishes. When his handsome face and splendid dark eyes were bent upon her, she knew her own weakness and powerlessness to resist.

"Now do not try to coax me, Carlos!" she exclaimed piteously. "Next year will not do. Who knows what will happen before next year comes?"

As her words died away, the roar of the waterfall could be clearly heard in the silence.

"What a dismal noise the water is making this evening!" she said, with a slight shudder, looking anxiously at her son. "Now Carlos I may consider the matter settled. We will not go until May, and we will return at the end of June. You must see every phase of life, and ours is but a quiet one."

So it was arranged that they should go to London, and Rockbourne House was prepared for them. Even gentle Lady Carew, after her long seclusion, felt some delight at mixing again with the gay world; and, though she had her fall on by her side, she still looked so young and so beautiful that she became more popular than some of the youngest beauties.

Mother and son were received with open arms, and Sir Carlos found there was quite another side to life. He was too energetic and impetuous ever to become a carpet knight. A gallop over the breezy downs, or a day with the hounds, had a greater charm for him than ball-room or opera; but he could not help admitting to himself that there were great attractions in London.

He enjoyed his visit to the stranger's gallery in the house of commons, where he listened to some of the most eloquent men of the day. He never wearied of the wonderful streets; he admired the grand old Abbey, and was enthusiastic over St. Paul's. He liked Hyde Park, with its beautiful show of brilliant women. He thought the lower he attended one of the grandest sights that could be seen; and his boyish heart—for he was a boy at heart—thrilled with emotion when the Prince of Wales spoke kindly to him and detained him for a few minutes in conversation. He enjoyed the opera and the balls to which he was invited; and he found himself wonderfully popular. Belgravin maîtres do not every day find such a prize—a handsome young baronet, with a real-estate of ten thousand per annum, a magnificent estate, and a house in town.

The Duchess of Wealde, with her bery of fair daughters was in town; and Lady Dagmar Evesham showed a greater preference for Sir Carlos's society than she had shown before.

Lady Carew and the Duchess were on the most affectionate terms, and her grace had spoken plainly to Lady Carew. It would be very pleasing to her, she said, if a marriage could be arranged between Carlos and any of her daughters.

Lady Carew laughed, and told her that her son was perhaps behind the age, but that at present he had not evinced the least interest in love or even in ladies' society.

"Love will come in time," said the Duchess benignly. "I am afraid, dear Lady Carew, that you have in some measure spoiled him."

She little knew with how keen a pang those words pierced the mother's heart. The duchess's daughters were fair and graceful; but as for her grace, she knew, fresh beauties sprung up every year, and it was desired to get very young married. She almost considered that she had a claim on Sir Carlos. Lady Dagmar flirted with him, sung to him pretty love songs that never touched his heart, and wore his favorite colors and flowers; but all the smiles and wiles of Lady Dagmar were in vain.

One of the great artists painted Sir Carlos's portrait that season, and it was hung in the picture gallery at Firlholme. Before he had been long in town Sir Carlos had acquired all the grace and polish of one who mixes in the most exclusive circles, and his mother was prouder than ever of him. He was at that age when young men do one of two things—either look down with supreme contempt upon love, as something to be attended to by and by, or plunges headlong into one of the wildest and maddest of passions. Lady Carew did not know whether to rejoice or be sorry at his insensibility to the fairest of Eve's daughters.

When Sir Carlos had done all that could be expected in the way of visiting and hospitality, it was time to return to Firlholme.

He had, among many others, made one friend whom he liked much. Lord Stanleigh of Hatton, a young nobleman who had succeeded to his title when very young, and who spent the greater part of his time on his beautiful estate at Hatton.

The two young men formed a close friendship, and when Sir Carlos had taken Lady Carew back to Firlholme he went to Hatton to spend some weeks.

Lord Stanleigh was not married; his aunt Lady Lees, presided over his household and entertained his guests. It was liberty hall in every sense of the word. Lady Lees was a shrewd and diplomatic woman; she never interfered with her nephew. If he gave a grand dinner party she presided over it, remained an hour or two in the drawing room, and then discreetly disappeared. She was too worldly wise ever to make her presence an infliction.

Lord Stanleigh had invited rather a large party to Hatton—Sir Charles and Lady Dayrell, Captain Hooker, Sir Harry Toft, Major De Burgh, Mr.

and Mrs. Hove-Hurdley and Sir Carlos. "The worst of it is," Lord Stanleigh said to Sir Carlos, "being a bachelor I cannot ask any pretty girls; the ladies must all be matrons."

"I hope we are going to have something more amusing than pretty girls," replied Sir Carlos with a smile of contempt.

Lord Stanleigh looked at him and laughed. "You will sing another song and tell another story soon," he said. "I am sorry for you if you have resisted the fascinations of pretty girls until now. All I can say is that when you do fall, your fall will be tremendous."

"I am content to wait," returned the master of Firlholme, looking calmly at his companion. "I have never had much patience with the nonsense talked about love and lovers. If ever I meet a woman like my mother in her fall in character and disposition, I shall marry her. I shall know no love until then."

"O wise two and twenty!" laughed Lord Stanleigh. "I would not mind staking Hatton and my whole fortune with it that your first love will be the very opposite of your mother in every respect."

"You are quite mistaken, and you know nothing at all about it. Now do talk about something more interesting."

"I am only human," said Lord Stanleigh; "and I must confess that I find the topic of love and pretty girls a very pleasant one."

"I do not," replied Sir Carlos. "Where are you going this morning, Harry?"

"I have several things to do. The steward and two or three of my tenants are coming to see me, so I must remain at the Hall. What will you do?"

"I should like a stroll through those grand old woods of yours. If there is one thing I like more than another, it is a forest ramble in summer-time. Your friends will not think me unsocial if I hope."

"They are all pleasing themselves. Why should you not do the same?" said Lord Stanleigh, as he turned to the path that led back to the house. "You cannot lose yourself, Carlos. If you go straight through the woods you will come out on the high-road to Armytage, our county town. I hope you will enjoy your walk. Au revoir."

"I am sure I shall," replied Sir Carlos, as he walked on through the sunlight to his fate.

THE FIRE HABIT.
When You Buy a Horse Look Out for This Intimacy.

A popular young physician living in the neighborhood of Boston recently took unto himself a bride, relates the Doston Herald, and at the same time bought a horse from one of the town-folks. He was very proud of both investments.

Soon after the happy young couple had returned from their first trip together, and while the honeymoon was still young, Dr. Newhusband took his wife to ride. He was showing her something of her new home when suddenly the fire bells clanged.

"Do you suppose the fire is anywhere near our house?" exclaimed the bride. "Oh, I'm so afraid," and she drew closer, still closer to his manly breast.

"Don't be afraid dear," he answered, "we've an excellent fire department."

At that moment the engine turned into the street ahead of them and went tearing down the road. Their horse gave a jump and followed as fast as possible. In vain were all efforts to check the beast. Through the town the procession flew, the engine in the lead, but having pressed by the buggy with its terror-stricken little wife and struggling husband, the townsfolk stared in wonder, and the busybodies declared that the doctor's new wife was evidently a flyer.

When the fire was reached the horse stopped of his own accord, and the couple returned to town.

The next day the man who sold the horse, happening to meet the doctor, carefully remarked: "Oh, I forgot to tell you that that animal of yours belongs to the Chief of the Fire Department. You will find him a good trotter. I assure you."

Why Study Latin and Greek?
What are the benefits obtained by a Latin and Greek education? In the first place, it affords the admirable intellectual training; in the second place, it opens up a magnificent literature; in the third place, it contributes very much to the right understanding of a language which is largely indebted to Greek and Latin. The first advantage is not of great importance. A modern language taught systematically may be made useful in much the same way, if not in the same degree. The second advantage is for the vast majority of students absolutely non-existent. The average school-boy or university man, when he closes for the last time his Virgil or Sophocles, is no whit the better acquainted with ancient literature than if he had spent a single year upon adequate translations of the famous originals through which he has blindly blundered for a dozen years or more. The third advantage is one which for general purposes might be attained by a very short study in early life, scientifically directed to word formation, rather than to the endless mysteries of inflection and syntax.—Harpur's Magazine.

To Save Their Lives.
The custom of "drinking healths" had a most curious origin. In the days when the Danes lorded it over England they had a very common habit of stabbing Englishmen in the throat when drinking. To avoid this villainy a man when drinking would request some of the sitters, by to be his pledge or surty while taking his draught. Hence the custom.

As the result of my tests, I find the ROYAL BAKING POWDER superior to all the others in every respect. It is entirely free from all adulteration and unwholesome impurity, and in baking it gives off a greater volume of leavening gas than any other powder. It is therefore not only the purest, but also the strongest powder with which I am acquainted.

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out, the hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
