Port Huron ladies propose to adopt the Saginaw scheme of compelling servant girls to retire at 10 o'clock.

Frederick Gross, aged fifty-nine and date of Detroit, hanged himself Saturday night at Millington. Financial trouble was the cause.

Port Huron's charitable ladies were proposing having a free soup house there this winter, as they think the winter will be a hard one for the poor.

One of the most interesting gatherings of farmers that have been held in this county in several years, was a ploughing match, on the farm of John Snell yesterday. There were large number of entries and a big crowd of spectators.—[Bad Axe Tribune.]

James Doyle, a Port Sanilac hotel man, left his old vest, containing $450 on the bed while he attended a funeral.

During the sad services, all of a sudden he remembered and got so nervous that he decided to go home and investigate. The hotel had been broken into and the money was gone.

15,000,000 of lumber in the Stone Island mill, near Bay City, belonging to Green & Braman, took fire Monday morning and all was burned. The plant includes a saw mill, docks, saw ways and all has gone down in ashes. Loss $225,000. The mill is located beyond the water mains of Bay City.

We are informed on good authority that a party of Marlette ladies held a regular dog fight at one of their homes Monday night. It was not exactly a dog fight, but one dog fought two cats while the ladies formed a ring seated on the backs of chairs. The referee decided in favor of the cats. The owner of the dog is not satisfied and another match is being arranged.—[Marlette Leader.]

The annual fish products of Michigan is estimated by Statistician August Moore to be $1,000,000. The catch for 1893 was 20 per cent less than in 1892, and in 1894 will be worse yet. Unless steps are taken to prevent the fouling of water with sewage and the poisoning by means of fish nets, Mr. Moore thinks it will be only a question of time when the great lakes will be practically stripped of fish. Nine thousand fishermen of Michigan get their living by fishing.

Thomas J. Eveland.

The Democratic Nominee For Prosecuting Attorney.

Thomas J. Eveland, the democratic nominee for prosecuting attorney was born on the 15th day of January 1854, in Bradford, Staben county, New York; consequently he is now a man in the very prime of life.

Mr. Eveland's father was born in New Jersey, of German and English descent, and was left an orphan when very young and had to shirk for himself. He was a democrat of the old Jeffersonian stamp and held many positions of public trust. This is the kind of stock the present Thomas J. Eveland sprung from.

He was educated at the common schools of his state and attended the Bradford Academy and Starkey Seminary. As early as sixteen years of age he commenced teaching district schools and was afterwards principal of the schools at Wayne, Tyrone, Monterey and Sonora. He made his home in that state until 1873, when he came to Michigan and for some time taught in the schools of Hillsdale county. During this time he made up his mind to become a lawyer, and was continually pursuing his studies in that direction, and in 1881 he entered the law department of the University at Ann Arbor and graduated the next year with honors, practically working his own way through college.

In the spring of 1885 he came to Marquette and assisted in organizing the bank of Marquette, which venture proved a success from the outset, and this banking house is now known and recognized both at home and abroad as a sound financial institution. Aside from the banking business Mr. Eveland has been engaged actively in the practice of law and has been well patronized in this respect.

When the village of Marquette was incorporated Mr. Eveland was elected one of the first trustees and is now serving his fifth year in that capacity. He has been village attorney, and is now serving his third year as member of the school board.

The following from the Staben County Advocate, published at the time of his removal to Marquette, will indicate the esteem in which he was held at his old home: "We are sorry to spare him from our village. He is a sober, exemplary young man and useful in any

It is in a very sensible spirit of reform that the secretary of the navy is putting useless old tubs out of commission and shipping their crews on modern fighting craft.

All the preliminaries for the Corbett-Fitzsimmons prize fight in Florida have been arranged except getting the Florida legislature to pass a law prohibiting prize-fights, and that detail is already being looked after.

A recent invention is the pulsometer, a watch made especially for doctors to time pulses with. It is made very much on the principle of the stop watch and indicates the rate on a pulse dial in so many beats per minute.

CLEMONT, a little town in Florida, revels in the luxury of two mayors. Last June Mr. Todd was elected to the office without a dissenting vote. He was away from home at the time and did not return for ten days. The ordinances require the mayor to qualify within three days after the election. Mr. Goodenough, who was the mayor last year, holds on to the office.

BRITISH soldiers declare that nothing is done for them in the matter of bathing arrangements and that there are few heroes in the service with nerve enough to face the barracks' cold water bath in winter. This may do for Britishers, but as a rule the American soldier, and particularly the cadet, is more troubled by the constant and to him seemingly unnecessary and superfluous cleanliness required in the ranks. It is a case of growl if you're dirty, and growl if you're clean.

ONE satisfactory reason for the poor success of the Chinese in fighting is the fact that they are fighting for a foreign dynasty which the great majority of Chinamen wish to see deposed. A native of China now in this country says that half of his countrymen would prefer to turn in and help drive away the Tartar rulers of their native land rather than to aid them in maintaining power. The Chinese rebellion of 1860 was an attempt of the people of China to regain control of their own country. It would have succeeded if General Gordon had not betrayed their cause.

Who is there in this country to wear the mantle of Oliver Wendell Holmes, of Emerson, Bryant, Lowell, Longfellow, Whittier, Poe, Percival, Whitman or Halleck? Who has ever risen up to take the place of Hawthorne, Cooper and Irving? Save Mc-Masters who have to pick up the thread where Hildreth, Bancroft, Prescott and Parkman dropped it? There are now no Booths or Forrests or Barretts or McCulloughs. Is America to become a country where the commonplace alone dwells? Is genius being slowly asphyxiated on this side of the sea? What is the matter?

ALMOST the whole body of the upper ranks of the naval engineer corps is made up of grizzled old fellows that entered the navy as third assistant engineers before such a thing as a cadet engineer had ever appeared at the naval academy. These men have had to acquire in the course of active duty a vast deal of technical knowledge now drilled into future engineers at the academy. Such knowledge becomes more and more serious in volume year by year as war ships become more complicated and the wonder is that busy men, some of them of very moderate schooling in youth, have been able to hold their own with rapidly advancing science.

A MERRY war is being waged in Chicago between the laundrymen, and the rate for washing a shirt has dropped to four cents. Many advertise that bundles left in the morning will be ready at night. One laundryman cleans your linen while you wait. This establishment turns out a shirt in ten minutes, after this fashion: "The shirt is washed in a weak solution of acid, which removes the spots; it is dried in a hot oven and ironed between electric rollers." The process does not improve the garment, but it is a blessing to the cheap young man with one shirt to his back. The Chinamen complain that they are being ruined by cheap American labor.

TABERNACLE PULPIT.

THE LOOKING GLASS AS A SERMON SUBJECT.

If We Could Only See a Reflection of Our Hearts the World Would Indeed be Better—The Truths of Jesus Christ Are Forever Interesting.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 28.—Rev. Dr. Tallmage, who has left India and is now on his homeward journey, has selected as the subject of his sermon to-day through the press: "The Looking Glass," his text being Exodus, 38: vili: "And he made the laver of brass, and the foot of it was of brass, of the looking glasses of the women assembling."

We often hear about the gospel in John and the gospel in Luke, and the gospel in Matthew; but there is just as surely a gospel of Moses, and a gospel of Jeremiah, and a gospel of David. In other words Christ is as certain to be found in the Old Testament as in the New.

When the Israelites were marching through the wilderness, they carried their tabernacle with them. They called it the tabernacle. It was a pitched tent; very costly, very beautiful. The frame work was made of forty-eight boards of acacia wood set in sockets of silver. The curtains of it were purple, and scarlet, and blue, and fine linen, and were hung with most artistic loops. The candlestick of the tabernacle had shaft, and branch, and bowl of solid gold, and the figures of cherubim that stood there had wings of gold; and there were lamps of gold, and snuffers of gold; so that scepticism has sometimes asked: Where did all that precious material come from? It is not my place to furnish the precious stones, it is only to tell that they were there.

I wish now more especially to speak of the laver that was built in the midst of that ancient tabernacle. It was a great basin from which the priests washed their hands and feet. The water came down from the basin in spouts and passed away after the cleansing. This laver or basin was made out of the looking glasses of the women who had frequented the tabernacle, and who had made these their contribution to the furniture. These looking glasses were not made of glass, but they were brass. The brass was of a very superior quality, and polished until it reflected easily the features of those who looked into it. So that this laver of looking glasses spoken of in my text did double work; it not only furnished the water in which the priests washed themselves, but it also, on its shining, polished surface, pointed out the spots of pollution on the face which needed ablution. Now, my Christian friends, as everything in that ancient tabernacle was suggestive of religious truth, and for the most part positively symbolical of truth, I shall take that laver of looking glasses spoken of in the text as all suggestive of the gospel, which first shows us our sins as in a mirror, and then washes them away by divine ablution.

Oh, happy day, happy day, When Jesus washed my sins away! I have to say that this is the only looking glass in which a man can see himself as he is. There are some mirrors that flatter the features, and make you look better than you are. Then there are other mirrors that distort your features, and make you look worse than you are; but I want to tell you that this looking glass of the gospel shows a man just as he is. When the priests entered the ancient tabernacle one glance at the burnished side of the laver showed them their need of cleansing; so this gospel shows the soul its need of divine washing. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." That is one showing. "All we, like sheep, have gone astray." That is another showing. "From the crown of the head to the sole of the foot there is no health in us." That is another showing. The world calls these, defects, imperfections, or eccentricities, or erratic behavior, or "wild oats," or "high living," but the gospel calls them sin, transgression, filth—the abominable thing that God hates. It was just one glance at that mirror that made Paul cry out, "Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" and that made David cry out, "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean;" and that made Martin Luther cry out, "Oh, my sins, my sins!" I am not talking about bad habits. You and I do not need any Bible to tell us that bad habits are wrong, that blasphemy and evil speaking are wrong. But I am talking of a sinful nature, the source of all bad thoughts, as well as of all bad actions. The apostle Paul calls their roll in the first chapter of Romans. They are a regiment of death encamping around every heart, holding it in a tyranny from which nothing but the grace of God can deliver it.

If you could catch a glimpse of your natural heart before God, you would cry out in amazement and alarm. The very first thing this gospel does is to cut down our pride and self-sufficiency. If a man does not feel his lost and ruined condition before God, he does not want any gospel. I think the reason that there are so few conversions in this day is because the tendency of the preaching is to make men believe...at they are pretty good anyhow—quite clever, only wanting a little fixing up—a few touches of divine grace, and then you will be all right; instead of proclaiming the broad, deep truth that Payson and Whitefield thundered to a race trembling on the verge of infinite and eternal disaster. "Now," says some one, "can this really be true? Have we all gone astray? Is there no good in us?" In Hampton court I saw a room where the four walls were covered with looking glasses; and it made no difference which way you looked, you saw yourself. And so it is in this gospel of Christ. If you once step within its full precincts, you will find your whole character reflected; every feature of moral deformity, every spot of moral taint. If I understand the word of God, its first announcement is that we are lost. I care not, my brother, how magnificently you may have been born, or what may have been your heritage or ancestry, you are lost by reason of sin. "But," you say, "what is the use of all this—of showing a man's faults when he can't get rid of them?" None! "What was the use of that burnished surface of this laver of looking glasses spoken of in the text, if it only showed the spots on the countenance and the need of washing, and there was nothing to wash with?" Glory be to God, I find that this laver of looking glasses was filled with fresh water every morning, and the priest no sooner looked on its burnished side and saw his need of cleansing, than he washed and was clean—glorious type of the gospel of my Lord Jesus, that first shows a man his sin, and then washes it all away!

I want you to notice that this laver in which the priest washed—the laver of looking glasses—was filled with fresh water every morning. The servants of the tabernacle brought the water in buckets and poured it into this laver. So it is with the gospel of Jesus Christ; it has a fresh salvation every day. It is not a stagnant pool filled with accumulated corruptions. It is living water, which is brought from the eternal rock to wash away the sins of yesterday—of one moment ago. "Oh," says some one, "I was a Christian twenty years ago!" That does not mean anything to me. What are you now? You are talking, my brother, about pardon ten years ago, but about pardon now—a fresh salvation. Suppose a time of war should come, and I could show the government that I had been loyal to it twelve years ago, would that excuse me from taking an oath of allegiance now? Suppose you ask me about my physical health, and I should say I was well fifteen years ago—that does not say how I am now. The gospel of Jesus Christ comes and demands present allegiance, present fealty, present moral health; and yet how many Christians there are seeking to live entirely in past experience, who seem to have no concern of present mercy and pardon! When I was on the sea, and there came up a great storm, and officers and crew and passengers all thought we must go down, I began to think of my life insurance, and whether, if I were taken away, my family would be cared for; and then I thought, is the premium paid up? and I said, yes. Then I felt comfortable. Yet there are men who, in religious matters, are looking back to past insurance. They have let it run out, and they have nothing for the present, no hope nor pardon—falling back on the old insurance policy of ten, twenty, thirty years ago. If I want to find out how a friend feels toward me, do I go to the drawer and find some old yellow letters written to me ten or twelve years ago? No; I go to the letter that was stamped day before yesterday in the postoffice, and I find how he feels toward me. It is not in regard to old communications we had with Jesus Christ, it is communications we have now. Are we not in sympathy with him this morning, and is he not in sympathy with us? Do not spend so much of your time in hunting in the wardrobe for the old, worn-out shoes of Christian profession. Come this morning and take the glittering robe of Christ's righteousness from the Saviour's hand. You say you were plunged in the fountain of the Saviour's mercy a quarter of a century ago. That is nothing to me; I tell you to wash now in this laver of looking glasses and have your soul made clean.

When our civil war had passed the government of the United States made proclamation of pardon to the common soldiery in the confederate army, but not to the chief officers. The gospel of Christ does not act in that way. It says pardon for all, but especially for the chief of sinners. I do not now think of a single passage that says a small sinner may be saved, but I do think of passages that say a great sinner may be saved. If there be sins only faintly heeded, just a little tinged, so faintly colored that you can hardly see them, there is no special pardon promised in the Bible for those sins; but if they be glaring, red like crimson, then they shall be as snow. Now, my brother, I do not state this to put a premium upon great iniquity. I merely say this to encourage that man, whoever he is, who feels he is so far gone from God that there is no mercy for him. I want to tell him there is a good chance. Why, Paul was a murderer; he assisted at the execution of Stephen; and yet Paul was saved. The dying thief did everything bad. The dying thief was saved. Richard Baxter swore dreadfully; but the grace of God met him and Richard Baxter was saved. It is a vast laver. Go and tell everybody to come and wash in it. Let them come up from the penitentiaries and wash away their crimes. Let them come up from the almshouses and wash away their poverty. Let them come up from their graves and wash away their death. If there be any one so worn out in sin that he can not get up to the laver, you will take hold of his hand and put your arms around him; and I will take hold of his feet, and we will plunge him in this glorious Bethesda, the vast laver of God's mercy and salvation. In Solomon's temple there were ten lavatories and one molten sea—this great reservoir in the midst of the temple filled with water—these lavatories and this molten sea adorned with figures of palm branches, and oxen, and lions, and cherubim. This fountain of God's mercy is a vast molten sea than that. It is adorned not with palm branches, but with the wood of the cross; not with cherubim, but with the wings of the Holy Ghost; and around its great rim all the race may come and wash in the molten sea. I was reading the other day of Alexander the Great, who, when he was very thirsty and standing at the head of his army, had brought to him a cup of water. He looked off upon his host and said, "I can not drink this, my men are all thirsty;" and he dashed it to the ground. Blessed be God! there is enough water for all the host—enough for captains and hosts. "Whosoever will may come and take of the water of life freely"—a laver broad as the earth, high as the heavens, and deep as hell.

An artist in his dreams saw such a splendid dream of the transfiguration of Christ that he awoke and seized his pencil, and said, "Let me paint this and die." Oh, I have seen the glories of Christ! I have beheld something of the beauty of that great sacrifice on Calvary, and I have sometimes felt I would be willing to give anything if I might just sketch before you the wonders of that sacrifice. I would like to do it while I live, and I would like to do it when I die. "Let me paint this and die!" He comes along weary and worn, his face wet with tears, his brow crimson with blood, and he lies down on Calvary for you. No, I mistake. Nothing was as comfortable as that. A stone on Calvary would have made a soft pillow for the dying head of Christ. Nothing so comfortable as that. He does not lie down to die; he stands up to die; his spiked hands outspread as if to embrace a world. Oh, what a hard end for those feet that had traveled all over Judea on ministries of mercy! What a hard end for those hands that had wiped away tears and bound up broken hearts! Very hard, oh dying Lamb of God! and yet there are those who know it and who do not love thee. They say, "What is all that to me? What if he does weep, and groan, and die? I don't want him." Lord Jesus Christ, they will not help thee down from the cross! The soldiers will come and tear thee down from the cross, and put their arms around thee and lower thee into the tomb; but they will not help. They see nothing to move them. Oh dying Christ! turn on them thine eyes of affection now, and see if they will not change their minds!

Oh, my dear friends, I wish I could coax you to accept this gospel. I could just take one look into this laver of looking glasses spoken of in the text, you would begin now spiritual abjection. The love of Christ—I dare not, toward the close of my sermon, begin to tell about it. The love of Christ! Do not talk to me about a mountain; it is higher than that. Do not talk to me about a sea; it is deeper than that. And that is all for you! Oh, can you not love him? Come around this laver, old and young. It is so burnished you can see your sins; and so deep you can wash them all away. Oh, mourner, here bathe your bruised soul; and sick one, here cool your hot temples in this laver. Pardon! Do not cry any more, dear soul! Pardon for all thy sins, comfort for all thy afflictions. The black cloud that hung thundering over Sinai has floated above Calvary, and burst into the shower of a Saviour's tears.

Small Shot. Life has no future to a man whose present is spent in retrospection. Brains are at a premium if they are inside a man whose heart is right. The world is full of praying Christians who never pray. Faith without works is dead. Sympathy is a rare commodity, especially when you emphasize its more practical side. The preacher whose religion is an every day experience can't help but be a soul winner. "Come unto me" is the master's invitation to anyone who will take up his cross and follow him. Casting all your cares on Christ means that you are not expected to bear one moment's worry. Some men hoard wealth for a rainy day and then never get a chance to hoist their gold plated umbrellas.—Rams Horn.

The Result of Consecration. God has promised to reward richly even here on earth those who give themselves entirely to him. Men talk of the great truths of scripture but fail to test them. Some one once said to Mr. Moody, "It is yet to be seen what God will do with a man utterly consecrated to him." Mr. Moody replied, "That shall be seen in me." He did absolutely consecrate himself to God—and with what results the world to-day knows in part; we will never know the text of the results until eternity reveals them. God stands eager to bless others who will follow Moody's example.—Rams Horn.

Tablet for the Tea Pot. A chemical addition to the tea table is the patent Tanocera, or tea toning tablet, a careful preparation of g-tine and alkaline salts, which, when added to an infusion of tea as directed, dissolves rapidly and combines with and dissolves the tannin contained in the tea, thus minimizing largely, if not entirely, the chances of that dyspepsia which is one of the worst effects of over indulgence in tea drinking. This is brought out in London, properly, for the use of the greatest tea drinking country in the world.

WOMEN USE BALLOTS.

IOWA DAMES CAST THEIR FIRST VOTES.

One was Born in England but was Permitted to Vote the Same as the Others—The Sensation of the Day at the Polls.

THE SPECIAL election to determine whether the town of Sigourney, Iowa, should establish a water system to cost $20,000 gave the women an opportunity to exercise the right of suffrage granted by the last Iowa legislature under that provision of the law which permits them to vote when an increase of the tax levy is involved.

The Australian ballot was used. The polls opened at 9 o'clock sharp. Men who were in favor of the proposition were lukewarm, but the "antis" were waiting for the polls to open. Whether women could vote was not fully decided, but the question did not remain long in doubt. Miss Idavary would have made a soft pillow for the dying head of Christ. Nothing so comfortable as that. He does not lie down to die; he stands up to die; his spiked hands outspread as if to embrace a world. Oh, what a hard end for those feet that had traveled all over Judea on ministries of mercy! What a hard end for those hands that had wiped away tears and bound up broken hearts! Very hard, oh dying Lamb of God! and yet there are those who know it and who do not love thee. They say, "What is all that to me? What if he does weep, and groan, and die? I don't want him." Lord Jesus Christ, they will not help thee down from the cross! The soldiers will come and tear thee down from the cross, and put their arms around thee and lower thee into the tomb; but they will not help. They see nothing to move them. Oh dying Christ! turn on them thine eyes of affection now, and see if they will not change their minds!

Miss Ida Robison presented her ballot first and went on record as the first woman to vote. She is a compositor on the Review, and she and her mother live together, the remainder of the family being dead. She is tall, dark, and is so piano for the Presbyterian church choir also taking an active part in the Sunday school. Her vote was cast as the result of a religious conviction that as there were no men to represent her home she ought to vote. She thought if she failed to vote on a proposition which she was in favor of she would not be doing right in the light of the Bible.

Mrs. W. R. Hollingsworth, who cast the second ballot, is the wife of the editor of the Review, is a leading singer of the town, and a society woman. It was she who influenced the other women to vote. Although she was born in England and no naturalization papers were ever taken out she was allowed to vote, nobody objecting. Mrs. S. W. Brunt was the fourth woman to vote and the first to come with her husband, who is cashier of one of the banks. Mrs. Brunt was one of the most enthusiastic voters that the judges saw all day. She took her ticket, passed to a booth, and back to the judges as quickly and with as much self-assurance as if she had been voting at every election. She was the first mother to vote.

Not many more votes were cast until after dinner, when Mrs. Hollingsworth ordered the family carriage and began earnest work at the polls hauling in the women who were favorable to the proposition. Then the women began to vote fast, and when the polls closed at night seventy-two had cast ballots. The result was 377

Mrs. W. R. Hollingsworth. for and 58 against the water system. Twenty-six tickets were not counted because they were not marked properly. There were many women who would not vote because they did not think it was right. Some who were formerly the most enthusiastic woman suffragists "backed down" when the day came. They were afraid of seeming awkward in spite of the fact that an important question was at stake. One woman would not go to the polls because her new dress had not arrived from the dressmaker. A man who lives in the north part of town and has considerable property brought his wife, who is very feeble, to the polls to vote against the system. In that way he hoped to save the tax.

NOW A RUSSIAN PRINCESS.

Princess Soltkyoff, Victim of British Burglars, Was Born an American.

The Princess Soltkyoff, who has lately lost much of her jewelry through daring English burglars, is a young and singularly beautiful woman, by birth an American, but of mixed English and Scotch descent. She possesses a miniature of her grandmother, Lovelace by name, which is in every particular a striking likeness of herself. She was married some few years ago to Prince Alexis Soltkyoff, the only son of H. S. H. Prince Paul Soltkyoff, well known here in racing circles. Prince Alexis died early last year in Syria of consumption. His widow draws a considerable revenue as dowry from the Soltkyoff estates, and she is also possessed of a very large private fortune. Her serene highness purchased a charming residence close to Slough, Buckinghamshire, which was the scene of the late burglary, when jewelry to the value of some thousands of pounds was stolen. But the robbers left behind even more than they took, being ignorant of the existence of one small safe and its precious contents, or being disturbed while they were at work.

The Quaker City. For at least two generations in the past, and for as many probably in the future, Philadelphia must essentially be regarded as two distinct and separate towns. Politically there is but one, but from all other stand points the two towns of which I speak might as well be grouped about the north and south poles. And yet the gulf which separates these two places is but a fairly wide thoroughfare—Market street it is called. On one side lies the new town of Philadelphia, with its wide avenues, magnificent homes—generous and modern in its every outline. On the other quite peacefully rests the old town of Philadelphia, with its narrow streets, old brick houses, and shrouded in the conservatism which gave the city its individuality two hundred years ago, when the first Thanksgiving hymn was sung on the continent. The new town has the money and progression of a modern western city, with the boom still on. Its men are ambitious, and spend their money alike on trolleys and cables and club houses. But old Philadelphia does not fancy rapid transit. It prefers walking, or an occasional ride on the horse car. If it has thrown aside the shabby coat and wide brimmed hat of its quaker ancestors, it can not altogether free itself from the blood which ran through the splendid man who once wore those quaint clothes.

Why We Have Treeless Plains. Various theories have been advanced to account for the fact that there are in many countries vast areas of treeless land. One of the most popular of these theories, and the one generally accepted, is that prairie fires destroy all efforts of the trees to get a foothold in these localities. Another authority holds that the soil is not of the proper sort for tree growing. The fact that trees planted on prairies and plains grow luxuriantly seems to disprove both of these theories and leaves such speculations with nothing to rest on. A writer in the London Geographical Journal puts forth a new explanation for the lack of forests in such localities. He claims that there are trees only where there has been water to carry the seeds. These treeless plains have never been inundated since they became dry land, and therefore have never had tree seeds carried over their surface to lodge there, and by long continued moisture to sprout and grow. This certainly is a much more rational reason than the others given, and is borne out by the fact that all over the western plains and prairies there are young woodlands and thickets planted by the hand of man that bid fair to rival the natural forests in growth and value.

A Political Experience. A candidate for office was so sorely beset by undesirable visitors that after much patient suffering he gave orders to the servants to deny admittance to all callers save his personal friends. How well the order was carried out he soon had evidence. The bell rang, and the maid, upon opening the front door was confronted by a body of "delegates" from a "willing" constituency, when the candidate overheard the following colloquy: "Is Mr. C— at home?" said the leader. "He is not," returned the maid. "Are ye personal friends of his?" "Well—no," said the leader; "but—" "Then he's never comin' back." And the door was closed with a bang.

Keeping It Quiet. Husband—It's ruinous! The idea of paying all that money for a little bit of lace! Wife—Mrs. Astorbilt has two or three pieces like that. "But, good lands, the Astorbilts have millions where I have thousands. Don't you know that?" "Of course I do, but I don't want the Astorbilts to know it."

MOTHERS
and those about to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its torture, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding Nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and also the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. During pregnancy, it prevents "morning sickness" and those distressing nervous symptoms from which so many suffer.

Thanks, Cottle Co., Texas.
Dear Sir—I took your "Favorite Prescription" previous to confinement and never did so well in my life. It is only two weeks since my confinement and I am able to do my work. I feel stronger than I ever did in six weeks before.
Yours truly,
Cordelia Cullpepper

A MOTHER'S EXPERIENCE.
South Bend, Pacific Co., Wash.
Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:
Dear Sir—I began taking your "Favorite Prescription" the first month of pregnancy, and have continued taking it since confinement. I do not experience the usual or any of the ailments due to pregnancy, after I began taking your "Favorite Prescription." I was only in labor a short time, and the physician said I got along unusually well.
We think it saved me a great deal of suffering. I was troubled a great deal with tetanus also, and it has done a world of good for me.
Yours truly,
Mrs. W. C. Baker

HEAD UP

HE railway runs through a wild part of North Carolina, and Tompkins had been manager of it for some years. It is a picturesque line and gets itself tangled up among the mountains in the most bewildering way. The train puffs and staggers up awful grades; winds and twists and doubles on itself in the most confusing fashion; goes round and round up like depressions and seems in general not to know where it is going. But, like the person in the song, it "gets there just the same." The road passes through some pretty rough settlements, but there is civilization and wealth at each end of the line, and this enables the railway to pay a good salary to the manager, although I never heard that it so far forgot itself as to pay any dividends to the shareholders.
Well, one day there was a lot of nabobs going East, and as the manager was also traveling in that direction, he ordered his private car hitched to the noon express, and away they went.
A private car, the manager tells me, differs from an ordinary coach, and is superior in some respects, even to the Pullman. A good deal, of course, depends on the manager. As a rule the interior decorations of a manager's car are very fine and expensive, including artistic effects in Burgundy, dry champagne, fine delicate brands of old Kentucky cigars from Havana, and things of that sort. The time of this memorable trip was a few days before Christmas, and people were going East to see their folks, many of the travelers having considerable amounts of money on them. Besides this, there was $400,000 in the safe of the express car going through to New York. The fact made the messenger a trifle anxious, and it was one of the causes that were bringing him East. However, the train would be out of the mountains while it was still daylight; so the manager felt no anxiety.
All the nabobs who amounted to anything were in his private car, and they were enjoying themselves as people should during that festive season, but not, if I understand Tompkins aright, entirely by admiring the scenery, although doubtless that added to their pleasure.
Just as they were in the roughest part of the mountains there was a wild shriek of the whistle, a sudden screech of the air-brakes, and the train, with an abruptness that was just short of an accident, stopped.
"What's up?" cried everybody.
"Don't know," said the manager, getting a little pale around the gills. "You all stay here, and I'll go out and see."
It need hardly be said that none of the passengers knew of the money in the express car.
The manager stepped down from his private coach at the rear, and the moment he looked toward the front of the train, he saw that his worst fears were realized. Just ahead of the locomotive, on the rails, was a huge pile of logs and railway ties. Standing around the engine and the express car was a group of the most cheerfully, as he approached the gloomy group of mountaineers.

"Who, are you, anyhow?" asked the man who was covering the express messenger.
"Who am I? I'm the manager of this railroad. What do you fellows mean by stopping one of my trains?"
The man lowered his rifle and looked at the manager.
"What's the matter with you?" added Tompkins.
"The matter's just this, Mr. Manager. You run the god-darned railroad in all creation. That's what's the matter, and we ain't a-goin' to stand it no longer. I don't mind you trainmen throwing coal at my dog; I don't mind 'em sassing my wife an' making fun o' my clothes; but when it comes to monkeying with my whiskey, I'm dod-gasted if I'm a-goin' to stand it."
The other mountaineers nodded their approval of these sentiments.
"Monkeying with your whiskey? What do you mean?" cried the bewildered manager.
"I mean just what I say. They can throw coal at my dog, they can sass my—"
"Yes, yes; but I don't understand about the whiskey. What have my men to do with your whiskey?"
"Why, don't you know, and you manager of the road? Well, moonshine whiskey's all right enough ordinary days; but we ain't had good old Kentucky for Christmas. Day before yesterday I gave your man in this here kyar a jug and $2 to bring me some prime Kentucky from town fur Christmas. Yesterday bang through goes your train, jug and whiskey all, and never stops. Now we ain't a-goin' to stand that from no road that ever tottered a whistle to scare the steers. I said I'd bet my boots next train 'ud stop, and she has. I don't allow no man to monkey with my likker. He kin sass my wife and chuck coal!"
"See here," said the manager to the expressman. "Did you take his $2?"
"Twa'n't me," said the messenger. "Must have been Bill Simmons, on No. 9, and she must have gone through without stopping yesterday."
"Then all you want is your whiskey?" asked the manager, with a sigh of relief.
"Fair's fair, boss. 'Tisn't Christian like to drink moonshine at this time of the year. Besides he's got my $2 and the jug."
"That's all right," cried the manager. "Have we got a jug on the train?"
"Here's one," said the mountaineer, taking a jug from behind a log. They had been refreshing themselves while waiting for the train.
The manager grasped it by the handle, turned it upside down, and let the remains of the "moonshine" gurgle out, to the horror of the mountaineers. Then he started through the train, shouting, "Here, you men with flasks, I want half your stock. Pour it in here, and be glad you get off so cheaply."
Every man who had a bottle produced it, and before Tompkins had gone through two cars the jug was brimming full. He went back to the leader, who now allowed the engineer and expressman to hold down their hands.
"Taste that," said Tompkins.
The mountaineer smacked his lips after sampling the contents. "That's a good blend," he said, with solemn reverence.
"Blend? You bet it's a blend. I've blended it myself; there's a sample of every known brand in the states there. Now to-morrow I give you my word that No. 9 stops and ushups your jug, or there'll be a row. Is that all right?"
"It's all right, boss," said the leader who had given the word. Thereupon his hank company had flung the old ties and tree-trunks clear of the track.
"You're a white man, if you are the manager of this road. And your men can make fun of my clothes an' sass my wife all they've a mind to, an' heave the company's coal at my face, as long as they know you ain't a-goin' to monkey with my whiskey." McClure's Magazine.

MAKING VOICES.
A French savant, one Dr. Sandras, will go down to posterity as a discoverer of a method of modifying and improving the quality of the human voice. He has made a number of experiments, and finds that the voice may be changed by the inhalation of various substances. Some of these, such as benzine, caffeine, chloroform and curacao, augment the sonority of the high notes and make the voice higher in range, while others, such as Norwegian tar, make the base notes more powerful. Thus, as one of the French papers remarks, we have a simple and effective method for converting a mediocre baritone into that rare bird, a high tenor. All he has to do is to inhale curacao.
Great Sea Depths.
It is a remarkable fact that the deepest parts of the sea are in all cases very near the land. The deepest sounding known, 4,665 fathoms, or 27,930 feet, was obtained 110 miles from the Kurile islands; the next deepest, 4,561 fathoms, was found seventy miles north of Porto Rico. With a few exceptions like these the depth of the oceans, so far as now known, does not reach 4,000 fathoms, or four sea miles. The North Pacific has a mean depth of 2,500 fathoms, the South Pacific of 2,400, the Indian ocean of 2,000; and the Atlantic, by far the best investigated of oceans, has a mean depth of 2,200 fathoms.

THE WRITER OF FATE.
SUSAN MARR SPALDING'S PATHOS AND PASSION.
Her Sonnet "The Singers" Fairly Takes One's Breath Away with Its Pathos and Power—The Writer's Charming Personality.
MR. SUSAN MARR Spalding is both best and least known by her poem "Fate." The poem itself has been widely copied and claimed, and its title has sometimes been changed to "Kismet," but not until one year ago was Mrs. Spalding's right of authorship absolutely settled. Mr. Edwin Milton Royle, who used it in his play "Friends," has been inundated with letters from persons purporting to be its author, so that he now places Mrs. Spalding's name upon all his programs.
The lines first appeared in print in the New York Graphic in 1876. "I happen," says Mrs. Spalding, "to have still in my possession the note from Mr. Croffut—one of the Graphic's editors—accepting the poem speaking of it in the highest terms of expressive regret that the Graphic could not pay for poetry, which letter has more than once quenched a too-insistent claimant. It is, by the way, the only bit of blank verse I ever wrote."
Mrs. Spalding was born and educated in Bath, Me. She married early and most happily. She was a wife, however, only a few years before she became a widow. For the last few years her winters have been spent in Wilmington, Del., where she enjoys the love and esteem of a large circle of friends. During the last season, however, she made her home in Boston and at present is abroad.
Personally Mrs. Spalding is a charming woman. Her rare conversational powers and simplicity of manner are both endearing and delightful. Her sonnets have been characterized by one of the best of critics as among the best in the English and all her verses. Her art is always sure, her methods of composition being invariably conscientious and painstaking.

FOR TRAINING SERVANT GIRLS.
A company of Benedictine nuns have opened at Bristol, Prince William county, Va., an institution where they propose to educate helpless and friendless girls for housework and other domestic service. The girls are to have a fairly good common education and are then to be trained for whatever position they seem most competent to fill. It is a fact, understood by most housekeepers of experience, that the maids trained in the convents and orphan asylums by the sisters are, as a rule, well trained. Respectful obedience is taught them, and beyond the one requirement of attention to their religious duties, they are not encouraged in any unreasonable complaints against their mistresses. The girls visit the convent constantly, and the sisters usually continue to exercise an excellent influence over them so long as they remain in their neighborhood.
A Model Servant.
A Hungarian contemporary reports the death of Ludwig Szabo, the steward of the manor of E-K-Vanaja, belonging to the family estate of Count Richy von Enyiezyka. Szabo, who had been for many years in the service of the prince, bequeathed all his property—about 80,000 gulden—to the Zichy family. "For," said Szabo shortly before his death, "I was a poor, miserable fellow when I entered the service of the count. So, having here upon these states acquired the little fortune I possess, it is only meet it should be returned whence it came. The money will certainly be put to a good use here; but if it went elsewhere I am not so certain of it. It might be squandered." The countess gave orders that her trusty servant should be buried with great pomp, and assigned to him a tomb in the mausoleum among the ancestors of the Richy family.

REFOOD.

BORR: To Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Stoell, a girl babe on the 20th.

Mrs. Ballard, of Lapeer, is visiting her son, Clark Corless.

Mrs. E. W. Clark has just returned from a visit at Jonesville.

Miss Gertrude Huffman visited at David McCracken's Sunday last.

Two youths tried the manly art at Novesta Corners again last week.

Archie Wills left for Gladwin county on the 29th to gather in wild game.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sleeper, of Inlay
City, is visiting friends here at present.

Lorenzo Palmateer has bought the Open and some other county line north of Novesta post office.

Mrs. Jane Lovejoy, of Valley Centre,
Sanilac County, called on her mother,
Mrs. Mary Wills, last week.

We have just returned from the noted
"stone wall" of Greenleaf, in Sanilac county. The serpent-like trail of a wind-row of stone is there with no stone on either side running lengthwise of a swamp, but for what purpose they were placed there, if put there by the pre historic race, is a mystery, if not put there by man, 'tis still a greater mystery how the "ice period" could have piled them up in a wind-row, putting the large boulders on top of the wall leaving the ground clear of stone on either side. We must await scientific investigation.

We were treated to a lecture last Thursday evening. The lecturer stylid himself "Dr." but whether a D. D. or an M. D. or some other kind of a D. we could not learn. Military and professional titles are cheap and of course plenty late years. He said he wished to induce all people to keep the "American Sabbath" as a rest day. Some might term him smart, others would say he was foolish, in our opinion he had both qualities intermingled. Some parts of his subject he handled well, but when he got off a joke he wished all to laugh and if they didn't show their ivories he told them to. Many of the older heads had taken along the "kids" to do the laughing part but he either didn't "catch on" or thought his puns heavy enough for people of mature years, so he insisted on at least a grin. After holding the platform down for some hours, in which time he tore up the spiritualists, denounced Christian science and took Ingersoll's scalp (in his mind), to raked in about $1-50 in silver, he dismissed his hearers in fairly good humor.

ELLINGTON

Last weeks Correspondence.
Quite an amount of logging has been done this fall.

Nearly all of our farmers have finished their corn husking for this year.

George Brock has come back to his forty on section 22 and will work upon it this fall and perhaps winter.

Mrs. Angeline Alexander, who has been absent from home for some weeks past, at Caro and elsewhere, returned home one day last week.

Miss Maud Brumley, having spent some four weeks visiting at her grand father Brumley's, near Vassar, returned home last week Wednesday.

Mrs. I. W. Allen and her daughter, returned home to Ellington one day last week looking fresh and healthy after a long visit to the southern part of the state.

W. A. Bailey, W. S. Wilber, J. Colwell, W. Hutchinson and Frank Gould have all gone over to the Bay, starting Sunday, duck hunting and will return sometime during the week.

Having moved the blacksmith shop

from W. W. Campbells farm to Elling-ton on a lot lately purchased by him.
Mr. Campbell is now ready to do all kinds of blacksmithing for the public at reasonable prices.

On Sunday, Grant S. Clay drove over to Wallace M. Hiller's taking Mrs. E.
C. Clay, Miss Annie Clay, little Daisy and Harry Hunt, for a short visit. Mr.
and Mrs. Levi Whipple also accompany, all returning that night.

School is progressing in district No.
1 and fast filling up. It is becoming too large already for one teacher to do justice to the pupils. Another teacher should be employed and some higher branches of studies introduced in the school. It would be a benefit to the school and to the township at large, and would give a chance for others outside of the district patronizing the school instead of going outside of the township.

Fall wheat is growing nicely.
W. A. Bailey is running his shingle mill this week.

Work at William Campbell's blacksmith-shop is increasing.
John Hubinger has men at work preparing his camp for lumbering this winter.

Miss Alexander, of Denmark, has been visiting relatives here for a few weeks past.

John Metcalf is complaining of his old aches and pains and has a bad lunch on his neck.

Mrs. May and Mrs. Hutchinson returned from their visit to their sister at Grayling on Wednesday.

Mrs. O. R. Hutchinson was taken to her mother's, Mrs. Rondo's, owing to her sickness a week or so ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson started Wednesday to visit with their daughter living up north of here some 85 miles, going by their own conveyance.

Nathan Lumdy was in Cass City between trains Saturday last.

Mrs. R. Gill is numbered with the sick at the present writing.

Town board met on Saturday afternoon last on special business.
Jas. Anderson and R. Ballagh were in Ellkton on business Friday last.

Burt Clark and wife, of Linkville, visited friends east of town Sunday.

A husking bee at Toney Hughes on Friday last, he got his entire crop of corn husked.

H. D. Hagar, of Marlette, was in town Friday and Saturday of the past week on business.

Sam Ricker was in Buffalo with a load of stock on Monday last, but struck a hard market.

Mrs. Fisher, of Saginaw, mother of
O. D., is in town at the present writing.
She will straighten his business here before returning.

Jas. Anderson purchased forty acres of land two miles east of town from R.
Ballagh. Jim will show the youths how to farm in the near future.

W. Fairweather, of Cass City was in this part trying to purchase a carload of hogs one day the past week but we ventured to say he did not succeed.

O. D. Fisher, who for the past two years has been foreman in the yard for the Owens Lumbering Co. here, died suddenly of typhoid fever at his home in East Saginaw on Thursday last.

Angus Crawford has just finished the digging of his potato crop and report over four hundred bushels in the cellar for which he no doubt will realize a fine figure as they are of a handsome quality.

"I am 29. At 15 I learned a bad habit which I continued until 19. I then learned "some of the boys" and led a gay life. Exposure to cold, wet, and dampness, I became nervous and despondent; no ambition; memory poor; eyes red, swollen and watery; pimples on face; hair loose, bald spots; weak back; varicocele; dizziness and losses at night; weak parts; nervousness in urine, etc. I spent hundreds of dollars without help, and was contemplating suicide when a friend recommended Dr. Kennedy & Kergan's "New Method Treatment." Thank God I tried it. In two months I was cured. This was six years ago, and never had a return. Was married two years ago and all happy. Boys, try Dr. Kennedy & Kergan before giving up hope."

"When I consulted Dr. Kennedy & Kergan, I had little hope. I was surprised. Their New Method Treatment improved me the first week. Emissions ceased, nerves became strong, pains disappeared, hair grew in again, eyes became bright, cheerful in company and strong sexually. Having tried many Quacks, I can heartily recommend Dr. Kennedy & Kergan as reliable Specialists. They treated me honorably and skillfully."

to my hands. I learned the truth and cause. Self abuse had sapped my vitality. I took the New was cured of Consumption. I have sent them many patients, all of whom were cured. Their New

The Yellow Flag.

A few years ago I was passing along a street in one of our large cities, when I came to a barricade erected across the sidewalk. I observed a yellow flag suspended from a house adjoining. I asked a policeman what it meant. He said they had a dangerous and infectious disease in the house, and the flag was to give notice of that fact to the public, and that the barricade was to prevent persons from passing the infected premises. He also stated that it was done by order of the City Council; and in my rural simplicity I thought, "How well the city is governed; how careful the city fathers are of their children and of the strangers who sojourn in their midst." I retraced my steps and took another street.

While walking along and thinking of the excellent sanitary regulations of the city, I noticed ahead of me a red flag suspended over a door that opened on the street. Remembering the yellow flag and its object, I naturally concluded that here was another warning, and that an infectious most dangerous and deadly was lurking in a house beneath the folds of the red flag. Approaching nearer, I discovered that I was correct in my suspicions, for I read upon its surface these words, in gilt letters: "FANCY DRINK AND LIQUORS." I also observed the words "WALK BY" on the flag; and seeing another guardian of the peace near me, I approached him and asked him what the flag meant. I informed him that I had just seen a yellow flag, and that if it had been one was also a warning to the public of the dangerous proximity of disease and death. The city watchdog looked at me for a moment with the most unbounded astonishment and inquired, "Where do you find that sign, my friend? Don't you see it's a sign of a drinking saloon?" I informed the gentlemanly official that I was a stranger in the city from an extremely rural district, and did not always fully comprehend all I saw or heard. Seeing my benighted condition he softened in his manner, and informed me of the nature of a drinking saloon. He said it was licensed by the City Council, that there were a number of hundreds in the town and that a large revenue was derived from the sale of these licenses. I inquired who paid the cost of prosecuting the criminals who become intoxicated at these saloons, and, while under the influence of the liquor there obtained, committed the many crimes the history of which was published in the daily papers. He looked surprised, and I continued:

"Don't you know, my friend, that beneath that flag lurks disease more fatal and death more certain than beneath the flag of yellow? Don't you know that the disease here engendered ruins a man, soul and body, brings want and poverty to his wife and children? Why does the city barricade the street and hang out a yellow flag to warn people of their danger yonder, while here men are invited to drink and die?"

The man with a star on his breast quietly remarked, "Say stranger, ain't you a lunatic escaped from some asylum? Ain't your friends looking for you, and offering a reward for your recovery?" I paused a moment, and then said, "I had sown but fallen on very stony ground. The officer looked after me until I hastily turned the first corner, and I have no doubt but that to this day, whenever he hears of an escape from a lunatic asylum, he firmly believes that he might have pocketed the reward by my arrest.—[A. B. Richmond.]

THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY.

Why some wise man who has journeyed over land and over sea... And the countries where the rainbow... And the glorious sunsets...

MY JO, JOHN.

BY HELEN B. MATHEWS.

CHAPTER X.

The windows at Pigeonwick were all open, and the sleepy, hot summer air might have lulled to slumber any worker, tired in brain or limb...

But the two women who had been resting all day, who were tired, and wanted life and movement instead, and who dreaded the long hours of the summer night...

There was a big gap in age between the two, for Mary had been 13 when Mamie was born...

The pair had met at a country house, and the man had shortly after gone with his regiment to India...

Mary had packed some tears and thwarted hopes in with the girl's bridal gown of white and silver...

And now the pair had come home, and Captain Dewar had gone first to his own people...

Mamie had been a beauty, which Mary never was, and she had the brightest smile and the merriest laugh that ever girl had...

But Mary looked deeper, and she found the heart and soul of the smile gone, and the merriment might pass muster with the world...

And Mary said to herself that something had caused her to suffer exceedingly, so much that she would never be able to suffer very much again...

Mamie could enjoy a joke as well as ever. She was, indeed, much given to raising her own and her neighbors' spirits...

But on this especial afternoon, Mamie was barren of jokes, and Mary felt the oppression of life weighing her down heavily...

"It's very good of you, Mamie, to bury yourself down here," she burst out suddenly, "just to be with me when so much is going on in town..."

"Yes," said Mamie, "I did. But it was you I came to see, not your house..."

She dropped her work, got out of her long chair as only a graceful young woman could, and knelt down beside her sister...

and I suppose men are so... but I am glad Dolly died. It would drive me mad to think she might ever live to go through what I have done...

"Amen," said Mamie. Mary put her sister a little away, and looked in her face...

"Do you say that?" she said, "and you are not five-and-twenty yet! Oh! it is horrible! And you loved him so, child—how you loved him!"

"Yes," said Mamie, slowly, "I did love him with the pure, true love of a girl. It's dead now, Mary—he killed it, utterly, and it will never come back, never, never..."

"What did he do?" said Mary, almost in a whisper. "Was it—was it like John?"

Mamie shook her head. "They were little things," she said, "but little things break a woman's heart, just as little worries, household worries, age a woman before her time, and make her old..."

"But you are so pretty child, and so young," said Mary, sadly, "there will be somebody else..."

"I can't understand it about John," said Mamie, shaking her head, "he was so devoted to you, and he never seemed to know there was another woman in the world..."

"He is a man said Mary bitterly, "and all is fish that comes to Lady Blanche's net. But O! my dear, you say Captain Dewar was disinterested, and John never did me, it was I who disillusioned him—I wore him out bit by bit with my horrid temper..."

"Stuff," said Mamie, you were never bad tempered—He began it, I know. How did it begin?"

"He used to hide things from me," said Mary, hanging her head, "letters and things, and he never told me where he was going, or else he hid something palpably untrue, and one day I found him at Lady Blanche's and then I knew..."

"She wanted something of him," said Mamie, "and she flattered him. He adored, curling her lip, "and flattery will undo the best man living. Fool him to the top of his bent and he thinks you are an angel, tell him some home truths, make fun of some personal peculiarity, and you are a devil. A woman who has studied flattery as a fine art rules the world..."

"I never flattered John," said Mary, with gentle dignity, "and even if I had tried, I should not have known how. Do you flatter Captain Dewar?"

"I manage him," said Mamie, with a trace of hardness in her voice. "When one cannot have the real thing, it is necessary to put up with an imitation of it, unless one wants to be jeered at by the world. He will call me more superlatives in one day, Mary, than John ever called you in a month, yet John loved you, Mary—loves you still, I'll swear—and John never did more than fancy me..."

"What is it to fancy?" said Mary, absently, her heart secretly throbbing with joy at Mamie's words.

"A fancy, Mary, is a thing for which there is one cure that has never been known to fail," said Mamie, springing up, "and that is—marriage..."

examining the spread-out wares, without much display of interest or as if she meant to buy.

She was rather slight in figure and very pretty, her hair curled charmingly over her forehead, and she was dressed to perfection in black, with a great cluster of crimson roses in the bosom of her frock.

She was evidently waiting for some one, and turned around every half-minute to look about, and so preoccupied was she that the absent-minded man actually saw her first, drawing back as he did so with a low cry, that she did not hear.

Almost at the same moment a tall, good-looking man, evidently in the service, and just what Mary had admired when she married her untidy husband, joined her, exclaiming: "Why, dear, I was afraid I should miss you! How long have you been here?"

"Only a few minutes, Jim. What time does our train start?"

"Twenty minutes—after this long-barrelled train has been got safely off. Dear me, Mary, how sweetly pretty you do look to-night!"

"You see what I have done!" said Mary, laughing as merrily as a child. "You know you were always at me about it, and really I was tired of being a dowdy, and wanted a change..."

"What was that curious sound beside her?"

Mary turned suddenly, and saw her husband, John Anderson, looking at the worn, haggard face, and John had always carried fine flags of health in his cheeks, thus encouraging her to cruelty. It is your man with a skin like a nicely boiled parsnip who makes you think twice before putting upon him more than Providence evidently intended him to bear.

"John," said the poor woman, "Your collar is unfastened, and no one has brushed your coat to-day. Why don't they take better care of you at home?"

But John's eyes were fixed on the fringe that partly hid Mary's white forehead, and the consciousness of that thoroughly presentable man in the background, and he was I who disillusioned him—I wore him out bit by bit with my horrid temper...

"That is Lady Blanche Jessup's voice," she said suddenly. "She is going North, and my husband is going with her..."

"She turned her back on the train, and moved quickly away, followed by 'Jim,' just as Tom rushing up from an opposite direction, cannoned violently against all man who turning angrily saw that it was his own son."

"Dad!" cried Tom, out of breath and astonished for the moment, then his face changed, and his hand fell to his side.

"I've been to see you, father," said the young man, "but you were never to be found at home, and I was never allowed farther than the doorstep, as if I were a thief. And I've written to you, and you've never answered me..."

"I never got your letters, Tom," said his father, "if you directed them to Harley street, I never got there now..."

"Why not?"

Frank Lockwood, the witty English lawyer, having been invited to stay for a couple of days at a friend's country-house, decided to accept the invitation if his host was willing to extend his hospitality for an additional two days. He therefore telegraphed, "May I make it four days?" and the message was duly delivered to Mr. X., who after paying six shillings for his delivery, replied: "Yes, of course, but don't telegraph."

THE YELLOW TERROR.

GEN. YEH OF THE IMPERIAL CHINESE ARMY.

He is the Wellington of the Flowery Kingdom—His Field Tactics, However, Resemble Those of the Corsican Conqueror of Europe.

IN GEN. YEH THE imperial Chinese army now operating in Corea seems to have a treasure. Every one who knows anything of Chinese soldiers knows that all they require is good officers to lead them.

In that case they will fight to the death, for they don't mind dying, as to die is simply to be removed from this world of toil and hardship to a heaven of rest and pleasure that is well worth dying to reach.

When you read about Chinese soldiers running away from the battle field it is, without doubt, the fault of the officers, not the soldiers. As long as their officers stay on the field the troops will remain. Sometimes, however, when a soldier is promoted and has become rich by robbing the men of the money sent him to pay them off, he wants to enjoy himself here before testing the pleasure in store for him in another world, so he leaves his men in the line of battle while he takes a bird's-eye view of the field from a hilltop in the rear. No soldier will be steady under such circumstances.

Low Wing Fook, the famous commander of the "Black Flag" army in Tonkin, always remained in the front line with his troops, and his officers also set a becoming example to the men.

under them; the consequences was that the large French army sent into Anam in 1883-4 was unable to conquer this little band of warriors, and the command is now in the service of the governor of the Two Quang, generally known as the Viceroy of Canton.

Gen. Yeh seems to be made of such sterner stuff as the veteran leader of the "Black Flags," and naturally his little command of 4,000 gives good account of itself wherever engaged.

Yeh first attracted the attention of the outside world by the wonderful celerity with which he crushed the rebellion in Mongolia about a year or so ago, but he has had the confidence and appreciation of the Viceroy Li Hung Chang for a long time. He has

Curious Modes of Hair-Dressing and Embellishing Revealed by Their Portraits.

All women will be interested in the accompanying reproduction of a curious old engraving, published in 1831, half a dozen years before the accession of Queen Victoria to the throne, in which are given portraits of Queen Adelaide and the various European queens who were her contemporaries—namely: Marie Antoinette, Queen of France; Caroline Augusta, Empress of Austria; Louise Marie Therese, Queen of Belgium; Alexandra Feodorowna, Empress of Russia; daughter of Frederic William III. of Prussia, Empress of Russia; Maria Christina, Queen of Naples; the Queen of England; the Queen of Sardinia; the Queen of Portugal; the Queen of Spain; the Queen of Portugal; Louise the celebrated Queen of Prussia; and Maria Christina, Queen of Spain. The curious modes of dressing the hair and embellishing it are in themselves an entertaining study for fashionable women of to-day.

John Chinaman's Reasoning.

A little time since, so the story goes, one of the Chinamen attending the Bromfield Street Methodist Episcopal Sunday school renounced his heathenism, embraced Christianity and was duly baptized by the pastor, Dr. Mansfield, according to Methodist usage. A little later John fell into the hands of some of the brethren of Dr. Gordon's flock, who proceeded at once to instruct him further in the new way. They told him that his so-called baptism had been inadequate, that there was but one possible meaning to the word "baptize," and were congratulating themselves that they had made an impression, when John said: "Me see! So, so! Melican man frye plate! Melican man boilee plate! Plate! Melican man bakke plate! Plate! Melican man bakke plate!"

again earned distinction by his brilliant achievements in Corea.

A dispatch from Tien Tsin on the 25th of August to the London Times says: "Gen. Yeh's force of 4,000 men joined the main body of Chinese troops at Ping-An on the morning of Aug. 23. The retreat from Asan was a brilliant feat. The best was intense and the route lay through a difficult country. In addition to these obstacles the column was harassed along the whole distance by bodies of the enemy. But notwithstanding all

WOMEN DRUGGISTS.

A BUSINESS PARTICULARLY FITTED FOR THEM.

There Are in the United States Between 300 and 400 Women Who Have Received the Degree of Ph. G.—One of the Shrewdest Drug Buyers.

It is considerably less than half a century since the first woman pharmacist was graduated from one of the oldest colleges of pharmacy in America. About the same time women began to conceive the idea of studying medicine and to-day the women physicians throughout the land are legion; whereas, while nearly all the schools of pharmacy of recognized standing admit women upon the same terms as men, the former have not availed themselves of the privileges accorded them as readily as the latter.

For instance, there are, altogether, between 200 and 400 women in the United States who have received the degree of Ph. G., the majority of whom have charge of the drug rooms of various hospitals, or are engaged as dispensing clerks by some of the larger progressive druggists. A few have drug stores of their own and to their credit it is said that none of them were ever held responsible for errors in compounding prescriptions, which has so often happened to apothecaries who have had inefficient or careless assistants. Indeed, there is no profession or business where so much depends upon what may be termed mathematical precision, or as a professor at one of our Philadelphia colleges of pharmacy pertinently put it, "the precision of exactness."

It is invariably conceded that women are more thorough in whatever they undertake than the opposite persuasion, says the Philadelphia Times; that they are moreover, endowed with tact and a faculty for calculating results with wonderful rapidity, all of which traits makes a very practicable and much-to-be-desired tout ensemble for anyone contemplating the study of pharmacy.

Of course the salaries for dispensing clerks are graded according to the place they fill; the average is from forty to seventy-five dollars per month. Women occupying the positions of chief pharmacists in large hospitals are paid anywhere from six to nine hundred dollars per annum.

A New England apothecary, whose name is almost a household word in the Hub, was recently asked to assign his reasons for always employing women in the prescription department of his establishment in preference to men. His reply was brief and to the point.

"Because we can always depend upon them. We know not only where to find them but how to find them. No big heads, no mistakes, hence no suits for damages resulting from careless reading of prescriptions."

One of the largest wholesale drug houses in this country has in its employ a woman Ph. G. as buyer, paying her an annual salary representing three cyphers with a fair-sized numeral before them. She travels all over Europe in their interest, and is reported to be one of the smoothest buyers in the foreign trade. She is the first and as yet the only woman to fill such a position.

Several manufacturing chemists employ women pharmacists in different capacities. Much of the analytical work, such as testing for the purpose of ascertaining the identity, purity and strength of the drugs and preparations named in the pharmacopoeia, is now being done by women, who besides, their regular course of study, have paid special attention to gravimetric and volumetric methods of analysis.

A word more as to how the women pharmacists are received by the male members of the profession. There is absolutely no discrimination between them. They are admitted to the various state associations as well as to the national pharmaceutical association. Everywhere the women welcome the woman druggist. There is no spirit of rivalry. On the contrary, she is regarded by the more broad-minded men as an innovation rather than as an encroachment.

But not every woman can become a druggist; any more than every man can become lawyer, doctor or minister. There must be that within one which shows there is some special adaptability for the work, then follows three years at a pharmaceutical college, where theoretical training is supplemented by mastery of practical minor details.

Then another year as assistant or articulated clerk in order to understand the modus operandi of an every-day pharmacy, after which you may turn your thoughts to obtaining a permanent position in either a hospital, with a retail or wholesale druggist, or, if means permit and aspirations justify, hang out a mortar and pestle of your own, in which case you will be well patronized and your fellow-pharmacists will wish you success.

A Quiet Rubber.

Old Black Bass—Do you see that little frog hanging there by a string? Young Black Bass—Yes, mother. Old Black Bass—Well, don't bite at it, child, that is merely a rubber frog and very unpalatable. I have observed them before. This one I think came from a Boston fishing tackle store, and presumably there is a Bostonian holding the split bamboo which you can easily distinguish by an upward glance. Here comes a nice fat shiner for you, unencumbered by any patent angling gewgaws. There, now, swim off to play.

St. Louis was named from Louis IX., of France. The name was originally given to his depot and trading station by Pierre Laclède Liguest.

ON THE STREETS OF NEW YORK.

An Incident of Metropolitan Life from an Out of Town Paper.

It happened that one cold, stormy night in New York two ladies were returning from an entertainment when they saw lying across the sidewalk a young man in a drunken sleep. He had on his dress suit, a fine overcoat and wore valuable diamonds. The ladies were well enough acquainted with the ways of the city to know that if the man was left where he was he would be robbed of his money and diamonds. There was not an officer in sight and the ladies did not know just what to do. Finally one of them said:

"Well, I am not going to leave him here to be robbed. He's evidently a gentleman, and I am going to arouse him." So they shook the man awake and stood him against the wall, and one supported him while her companion sought an officer. The latter soon came and aroused the young man, who was amazed when he saw into what good hands he had fallen. He was quite overcome in trying to thank the ladies. He assured them he was just returning from a swell wine supper and was not in the habit of drinking. Then he offered them money, but the older woman said:

"Keep your money, my dear, I have a son about your age, and I only did for you what I hope some one would do for him if he ever so far forgot himself as to become intoxicated."

Then she walked away, and the young man muttered: "By jove, if he ever breaks your heart he ought to be killed, for you're an angel."

The Alaska Boundary. A part of the expedition which has been engaged in surveying the boundary between the property of Great Britain and Alaska has returned to Washington. The joint survey of the boundary by the United States and Great Britain is now practically complete, and the state departments of the respective countries may begin work at once on the conflicting claims. The greater portion of the region purchased from Russia is definitely located on the 111st meridian. The object of the English is said to be to force the line down to cross some of the broad inlets which would give them water access to their own territory, so that they would be entirely independent of United States custom regulations.

One of the interesting facts established by the expedition was that Mount St. Elias is not on the United States territory, and that it must give precedence in regard to height to three mountains further inland, which all stand in British possessions. The height of Mount St. Elias as determined by this year's party is 18,023 feet, while Mount Logan is 13,534 feet high. The other two peaks are nameless as yet. There was no lives lost in the expedition and the trip was regarded as being very satisfactory.

Sir Francis Jeune's Collection. Sir Francis Jeune, president of the English admiralty court, has under his custody the manuscript originals of the Black Book of the Admiralty, the old Oaths Book, and the Sea Laws of Oleron, and of the silver staff of the admiralty marshal. The Black Book is on vellum, slightly illuminated, in a old French and Latin, and contains 252 pages, written in Sir Francis Jeune's different hands and at different times. On the inside of one cover is the name "Clynton," with the motto "Loyalte non honte," written by the lord high admiral in 1556; the signature "T. Norfolk," probably Thomas, duke of Norfolk, high admiral in 1514, occurs four times. The contents deal almost exclusively with admiralty ordinances and practice. One piece is a record of an inquisition taken in 1575, and the date of the whole manuscript is probably earlier than the time of Edward III.

Uses of a Camel's Hump. The queer questions of the world's asked at the menageries and zoological gardens. At least, so the keeper of the animal house at Central Park says.

To illustrate this point in a single instance, he narrates the following of an actual occurrence. It relates to a man from the rural district, who for half an hour or so had been watching a camel.

"Can you tell me, sir," asked the stranger, "what that hump on the animal's back is for?"

"What's it for?" queried the other, in surprise.

"Yes, what's it for? Of what value is it?"

"I was really so taken a'lect," said the keeper, "that I couldn't help giving the 'guy' a 'jolly,' and so I said: 'Why you see, sir, you don't suppose folks would come miles to see this animal or pay 25 cents at a show to see one of it didn't have a hump. A camel without a hump might just as well be a cow. It's the hump that makes it an attraction. That's its use.—N. Y. World."

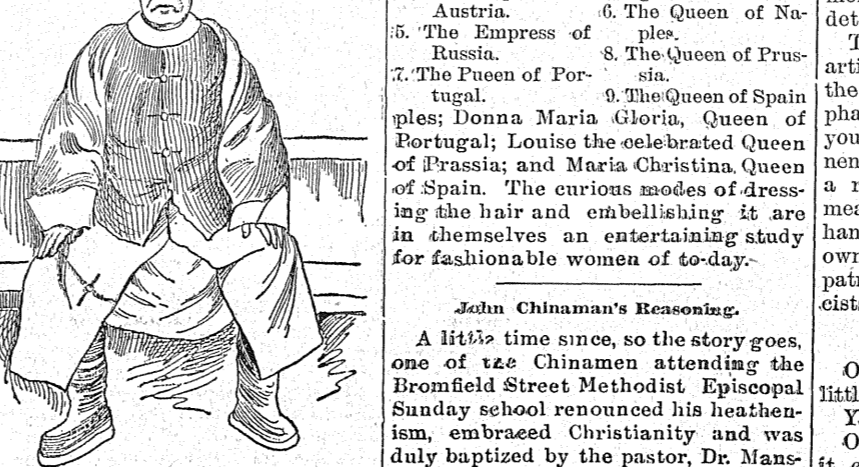

Proportion of Solids in Milk. According to A. Schmid, chemist to the Swiss Canton Thurgau (Chem. Zeit.), in 76 per cent of the samples of milk examined the total solids exceeded 12.5 per cent; in 20 it ranged from 21.5 to 12; and in four only did it fall below 12 per cent. Hence it appears that the demand of 12 per cent solids (and 3 per cent fat) as a minimum is not exorbitant. According to the same journal, 12 per cent solids, including 3 per cent fat, is the minimum permissible in Basle city.

QUEENS IN 1831.

Curious Modes of Hair-Dressing and Embellishing Revealed by Their Portraits.

All women will be interested in the accompanying reproduction of a curious old engraving, published in 1831, half a dozen years before the accession of Queen Victoria to the throne, in which are given portraits of Queen Adelaide and the various European queens who were her contemporaries—namely: Marie Antoinette, Queen of France; Caroline Augusta, Empress of Austria; Louise Marie Therese, Queen of Belgium; Alexandra Feodorowna, Empress of Russia; daughter of Frederic William III. of Prussia, Empress of Russia; Maria Christina, Queen of Naples; the Queen of England; the Queen of Sardinia; the Queen of Portugal; the Queen of Spain; the Queen of Portugal; Louise the celebrated Queen of Prussia; and Maria Christina, Queen of Spain. The curious modes of dressing the hair and embellishing it are in themselves an entertaining study for fashionable women of to-day.

John Chinaman's Reasoning.

A little time since, so the story goes, one of the Chinamen attending the Bromfield Street Methodist Episcopal Sunday school renounced his heathenism, embraced Christianity and was duly baptized by the pastor, Dr. Mansfield, according to Methodist usage. A little later John fell into the hands of some of the brethren of Dr. Gordon's flock, who proceeded at once to instruct him further in the new way. They told him that his so-called baptism had been inadequate, that there was but one possible meaning to the word "baptize," and were congratulating themselves that they had made an impression, when John said: "Me see! So, so! Melican man frye plate! Melican man boilee plate! Plate! Melican man bakke plate! Plate! Melican man bakke plate!"

again earned distinction by his brilliant achievements in Corea.

A dispatch from Tien Tsin on the 25th of August to the London Times says: "Gen. Yeh's force of 4,000 men joined the main body of Chinese troops at Ping-An on the morning of Aug. 23. The retreat from Asan was a brilliant feat. The best was intense and the route lay through a difficult country. In addition to these obstacles the column was harassed along the whole distance by bodies of the enemy. But notwithstanding all

HOWARD LUTHER, Teacher.

Ram's Horn Blasts.

The devil don't care much for our profession. What he is afraid of is our practice.

If the devil is ever proud of his work it must be when he looks at a bad ad.

One reason why St. Paul accomplished so much was that he never tried to do anything in his own strength.

When the preacher undertakes to have a revival it is astonishing how many people can tell him how it ought to be run.

Many a man prays the Lord's prayer every day who never thinks it worth while to try to hurt the devil with his vote.
