J. E. Thatcher, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday. Mr. Thatcher has concluded to retire from the insurance business and will, commencing July 15, take possession of the "Point of Pines" hotel at Pt. Austin, of which he has received a lease. Mr. Thatcher, being an affable agreeable gentleman, with a wide acquaintance with the traveling public, will make a first class landlord and we predict for him full measure of success.

Straight-forwardness and impartiality has always characterized Mr. Berney's dealings as proprietor of the Cass City Elevators, and his numerous patrons and friends wish him every success in whatever business he may engage.

The Detroit Journal has the following to say concerning Dr. Angus McLean, of Detroit,—brother of Dr. J. H. McLean, of this place—and lecturer on anatomy in the Detroit College of Medicine and a member of the Harper Hospital staff: "Two Detroit physicians, who have been taking post-graduate courses, were given a royal time during their stay in London recently, and one of them surprised the Londoners by his intense Americanism. They were Dr. Angus McLean and Dr. Thomas Leys, of the Harper Hospital Staff. R. Payton Carter, of the Queen's Club, entertained the pair at a little dinner with some friends at the club and Dr. McLean was called upon to reply to the toast, 'The American Ladies.' After telling how beautiful, talented, witty and accomplished are the American women, he closed by saying, 'The American ladies possess so many charming qualities and so fill the sufferers with consolation that we (Americans) would rather linger in burning eternity with them than to ever live in heaven without them.' The Englishmen had the good taste to applaud this tribute and Dr. McLean made a hit by his patriotic devotion to American women."

Those who grumble and kick and kick and grumble about hard times and sigh for the balmy days that were—when they found fault in just the same old style—had better make the best of what business they have left, and hustle all the time to keep it. Remember, that while you are idling away your time worrying over the poor crops, and other things that are amount of complaining, your remedy the cusses over in the other town are sitting up their heads devising schemes to get your trade. The patronage you now enjoy, tho' it may seem small to you, looks very sweet to those who are said to be and will be magnified an hundred fold in your eyes when in their possession.

A PATRIOTIC TIME!

The Glorious Fourth Royally Observed in Cass City.

The fourth of July comes but once a year and the pent-up patriotism of our populace was allowed to escape yesterday in multitudinous ways. Our citizens were aroused at daybreak by the reports of one hundred guns and at an early hour all were astir. The streets were nicely decorated with evergreens, bunting, etc., several arches had been erected and our town looked its best. The crowd came in good time to view the industrial parade which surpassed anything of the kind ever given here. As time and space is limited we cannot give details but nearly all of the wagons were worthy of special mention.

Upon reaching the Grand Stand at the Driving Park prayer was offered by Rev. Eldridge, the Declaration of Independence was read by Rev. Baxter and Rev. Fenn delivered the oration of the day. After dinner the games took place and we here mention the prize winners: Standing jump, C. J. Tompkins, of Caro, 12 ft. ½ in.; A. McDermott, 12 ft. Run, hop, step and jump, C. J. Tompkins, 40 ft. 10 in.; A. McDermott, 40 ft. 6 in. Running jump, A. McDermott, 18 ft. 7 in.; C. J. Tompkins, 17 ft. 7½ in. Men's 100-yd foot race, Homer Frost, 11 sec.; N. F. McClinton. Boys' 100-yd race, B. Patterson, A. Graham. Men's hurdle race, H. Frost, A. McDermott. Boys' hurdle race, A. Graham, B. Patterson. One-half mile bicycle race, H. Frutchey, 1:25; A. Johnson. Although liberal purses had been offered by the race committee, entries were scarce—probably owing to the numerous race meetings now being held at different places—and consequently the two first contests were not very well filled and it was found necessary to declare the free-for-all off. The races were as follows:

3:00 race—Peruna, 2-year-old from Caro, 1st money; Susie McGregor, owned by W. D. Schooley, Cass City, 2nd money; Perry, owned at Caro, 3rd money. Best time, 2:50½.

2:30 trot or pace—Blonde, owned by Ketchum, of Bad Axe, 1st money; Lon H, owned by John Leonard, of Bad Axe, 2nd money; Daisy, owned by W. D. Post, Bad Axe, 3rd. Best time, 2:30½.

In the Calithumpian parade the following were given prizes: Chas. Herr, 1st; Arthur Travis, 2nd; Chas. Cooley, 1st; W. Geitger, 2nd; Wm. Schwaderer, 2nd; other small prizes were given. The manager, Wm. Bentley, appeared as a mounted cowboy and gave the "whoop" so lustily that he lost his voice and to-day he whispers.

A large crowd gathered at the Park in the evening to enjoy the program, consisting of music by the band, the bicycle parade and fireworks. The parade was quite imposing and the display of fireworks was good. We can not form an estimate of the attendance, but, we think, considering the number of celebrations in adjacent towns, it was excellent.

To All Concerned.
This is to certify that a certain man named L. Tyler, through his agent, obtained an order from me under a false misrepresentation, which I refuse to pay. The agent wanted to put lightning rods on my house with a view of advertising the business, free of charge to me, estimating it would take 245 feet. I was to board the men while putting on the rods, and if there should be a foot or so over the 245 feet I would give the man 50c. a foot, but he did not think there would be any. When L. Taylor came to put up the rods he claimed I would have to pay for 250 feet, at 50c. per foot, so he was not allowed to rod my house. The agent wanted me to sign a contract that I was willing to allow my house to be an advertisement.

Caseville: Henry Alfredo sells electric belts. He was engaged in his work over at the town of Nottawa a few days ago. One evening the hoodlums got together and rotten egged him. He grabbed one of them by the name of Johnson and gave him a sound booting. For this Alfredo was arrested. He then caused the arrest of Johnson and George Fisher. Their cases will be attended to next Friday.

Deckerville Recorder:—John O'Rourke, a young man of 20 years, met with a serious accident while assisting in a saw mill, eight miles northwest of here, in Wheatland township, belonging to Mr. Emerick, of Richmondville, that will probably be the means of the loss of a limb if not his life. Mr. Emerick, who is the tail Sawyer in the mill, had occasion to go to the house a short distance away, and young O'Rourke took his place till he returned. The wind caught the board he had just taken from the log, blowing it back against the saw and in some manner throwing him between the belt and saw. As he fell it caught him at the hip, taking off the flesh and bone from the right hip about 6 by 10 inches in size. His hand was caught, but not seriously and his ankle bone was severed as well as portions of the flesh on the foot. Dr. Healy, of Minden City, and Dr. Alderton, of this place, were at once summoned, and the wounded man was made as comfortable as possible. He is the only son of a widow who depends on his days work for support.

Two Pioneers Gone.

Alex McRae, who was born in East Ontario at the foot of Mt. Johnson, near Montreal, Jan. 21st, 1813, died at his residence in Austin township, June 24th, 1895. The cause of his death was hamaturia and ureamia shock and coming so suddenly was a sad surprise to all. On the Saturday previous he was well as usual but expired Monday forenoon. Deceased came to Austin in 1862 and was unusually popular, being five times supervisor, five times clerk, justice of peace, notary public for twenty years and census enumerator in 1884. In politics he was a staunch Republican. The Baptist Church was his spiritual home. His funeral on the 26th, was largely attended. It was conducted by Elders A. N. Johnson, of Detroit, Hugh Johnson, of Chippewa township, Mesocota county and Thos. Folland, of Austin. His remains were laid in Mt. Pleasant cemetery. A wife, five sons and two daughters are left to mourn the loss of a noble father and christian husband.

John Patton, of Tyre, died on Monday, June 24th, aged 85 years, two and one-half hours after the death of Mr. McRae, above mentioned. On the Friday previous, Mr. McRae called upon Patton and predicted that he (Patton) would not last very much longer, little thinking that he would be the first to answer the summons. Deceased had been ill about three months. The funeral was attended by the L. O. L. of which he was a member, and the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Tyre.

Stop that boy. A cigar in his mouth, a swagger in his walk, impudence in his face, a care for nothingness in his manner. Judging from his demeanor, he is older than his father, wiser than the president. Stop him. He is going too fast. He doesn't know his speed. Stop him ere tobacco chokes his nerves, ere pride ruins his character, ere good ambition and manly strength give way to low pursuits and brutish aims. Stop all such boys. They are legion, the shame of their families, the sad and solemn reproach of their parents.

International Epworth League Convention at Chattanooga, Tenn., Attracts a Big Attendance—A Sunrise Prayer Service on Historic Lookout Mountain.

Epworth Leaguers at Chattanooga. The second international convention of the Epworth League was held at Chattanooga, Tenn., and was a monster religious demonstration. The conference formally opened in the big tent, which had been dedicated for the purpose and which had a seating capacity of 10,000; chair provisions for 1,000; reserved seats for 250 guests and seats for 100 representatives of the press. The huge tent was crowded at the opening service. Bishop Gallows delivered the conference sermon. A feature never before seen in a meeting of this size was the administration of the Lord's supper to fully 10,000 people. Undoubtedly the most inspiring as well as unique feature of the entire convention was a sunrise prayer service on the top of historic Lookout mountain. About 2,500 enthusiastic young people started for this service at 2 o'clock in the morning and as they moved up the side of the mountain singing and shouting every soul felt the inspiration of the occasion. [CHAPTER IV—CONTINUED.] "Thanks, madame. I shall be so honored. You tell me your son has been in Paris. I shall be glad to discuss with him the life in la belle Paris. The young man managed to keep his wits about him, and, while not daring to trust himself to speak, escorted Mademoiselle to the door. The judge eyed him sharply as he came out on the piazza, and the young man turned his face away. Mademoiselle was profuse in her parting politeness, and then said calmly to the young man: "You are very kind to go with me. I thank you. I am often timid. Some one meets are so rude."

Precisely what this meant he did not know. He did know, however, that the woman had spent weeks at a time in their house, and that the cost of clothing for his wife had in four months increased over fivefold. Now that he had come to the beach she had turned up again, and was living with them almost as one of the family. Who was she? Was she married or single? And who were her parents? He had very little confidence in the fact that she called herself Mademoiselle. It might be assumed for effect, just as a worthy matron of six children may be Miss Smith or Miss Brown on the stage. Twice at the table he glanced at her and wondered if she was purposely putting forth all her powers of fascination on his son. She was certainly handsome, dangerously handsome, and the young man was evidently greatly pleased with his new acquaintance. As for the fond and foolish mother, she was charmed to find her son so much interested and entertained. "Poor boy! He sadly needs to be cheered by some bright and pleasant woman—though, of course, it would never do. I must warn poor Royal against thinking that a mere dress-maker, however well off or brilliant, would ever be a suitable person."

This to herself knowing nothing of all that passed between these two young people idly talking together in a hotel dining-room. For the young man the meeting was like walking on thin ice, all sparkle and glitter on the surface and with black cold water beneath. A tramping he might find himself sinking into unknown depths of despair, and yet he must go, gayly on, over whatever dangers she might lead him. Three hours passed, and Mr. Royal Yards tickle pleaded a desire to smoke, and left the cottage and went out into the night. His mother remonstrated and begged him to stay with her at home; she had not seen him for three weeks, and now on this first night he must go out to wander alone on the beach. He promised to return very soon, and then went out towards the hotel. As he approached the brightly-lighted building he left the plank walk and struck across the beach in the shadow of the music-stand. Would she be there? No use to ask the question. He knew too well that she would keep her word. Should he meet her? Why not go back home and ignore her, refuse ever to meet her again? Why not turn aside and go another way down to the light-house? He could see its rays slowly sweeping the vast horizon with a pencil of light. If it could only be a beacon to guide him to peace and safety! There was a good woman. If he had met her first how different it might have been! Not knowing precisely what he would do, he again turned away from the water-side, and took another and more distant path towards the light-house. He did not actually think of calling on Mai Johnson, yet he felt a certain instinct to be near her, just as a bird seeks a light in the night. Suddenly a soft voice spoke behind him. "Royal—husband."

Little patch of ground may be only half an acre, but the spouse is up to his knees in the mud at work from sunrise till dark, and it is made to produce marvelously, and all the household seems to be happy. The children of these polyglots are pretty. They go to school in red silk gowns. Some of them look like animated flower-pots. Everybody seems to want to learn. I have a Japanese servant girl who can be heard far into the night going over her lessons in English, Chinese and Portuguese.

HOW CHRISTY PAID A DEBT.

The Minstrel's Generosity to a Man Who Had Befriended Him.

The head of the famous Christy minstrel troupe was not George, but E. P. Christy, who originated the company some time back in the forties, and the following story of the latter is interesting:

Christy, then a young man, was a passenger on a Lake Erie steamboat commanded by Captain Folger and bound to Buffalo, where the first show was to come off. But the minstrel had not even a dollar to invest in the hire of a collar for the performance. Captain Folger, to whom he made known his wants, generously handed him a $20 bill, telling him that he was welcome to it, and that he need not trouble himself about paying it back. On the strength of this $20 Christy began business and in a few years became successful and rich.

In the meantime misfortunes overtook Captain Folger. Losing his employment on the lakes, he resolved to try again the salt water, on which he was brought up. So he came to New York to see if he could obtain a situation as master or, failing that, as mate of a seafaring vessel.

He thought himself of Christy, whom he supposed might possibly know some shipowner to whom he could recommend him. The minstrel received him most cordially, but told him that he had no acquaintances in that line of business.

"Why don't you buy a ship?" he asked.

"Buy a ship!" answered Folger. "Why, I haven't a dollar in the world. All I want is employment."

"See here," returned Christy, "how much would a vessel cost?"

"Any price," replied the Captain. "A pretty good one could be bought for, say, $20,000 or less."

"Well, now," exclaimed the big hearted showman, "you loaned me $20, and I am ashamed to say I have forgotten to pay it, but I will pay my debt now. Go and buy a $20,000 ship and send the seller to me for the money. I will own her, and you shall sail her. If she makes anything, you shall have it. If she don't, I shall stand the loss."

This is the conversation, word for word, as Captain Folger told it to me. I had just returned from an East Indian voyage in the Vandalia, a ship of about 400 tons. One day Captain Folger came on board at the dock and introduced himself. He said he would like to buy the ship and asked the price. It so happened that $20,000 was the sum I had decided upon. After a little dickering he offered me $18,000, and I accepted it.

To my astonishment, he referred me to E. P. Christy as the purchaser, and then he told me the story as I tell it. We went together to see Christy, and the result of the interview was that I gave him a bill of sale of the Vandalia, taking his note in payment, the note to be paid in installments, and every morning after one of his entertainments I called upon him and received a handful of bills, quarters, shillings and sixpences until the indebtedness was canceled.

Captain Folger made a successful voyage to California in the Vandalia. The ship was then sold, and Christy bought a larger and more expensive ship, on board of which Captain Folger eventually died at Calcutta.—John Codman in the New York Herald.

Watch Competitions.
Very few people know that there are, in connection with the Geneva watch trade, competitions involving very large sums of money, a goodly proportion of which finds its way into England.

A certain number of watchmakers at Geneva nominate certain dealers in England who shall hold competition watches made by the former, and the names of such dealers are agreed to by the whole of the said makers. Prizes ranging from $200 downward are given to the makers whose particular watches shall keep the best time and remain in the finest condition during 12 months.

The English dealers who hold the watches during the 12 months have to keep a daily record in regard to the loss or gain of time evidenced by their charges, and they are of course in absolute honor bound to keep a correct one and not to tamper with the watches beyond winding them. No given maker's name or distinctive mark other than peculiarities of construction by which the name of the maker can be identified by the holder. The watches are of the usual kind manufactured for trading purposes and not mere "exhibition" watches, and the holder of each prize winner receives one-half of the award.—London Standard.

THE ORIENT EXPRESS.

A bold Bulgarian shepherd boy who looked so like a sheep.

So gentle yet so sportive in his showy shepherd's dress, Lay down upon the railroad track and played he was asleep To fool the engine driver on the Orient express.

The driver, who disdained to slay the ram upon the rail, Put on the brakes, reversed the wheels and turned his face away. The stoker stood beside him, for it seemed his heart would fail.

Whereas the shepherd boy stood up and laughed and ran away. Then came the Irish section boss the day the train came back And poured about a barrel of tar between the ties that day.

So when the shepherd boy lay down the tar upon the track Tricked through the whiskers of his robe and held him where he lay.

The driver could not hear the cry that swept the night that day; The shepherd of the shepherd, and his soul was filled with mirth.

He opened up the throttle valve and turned the train bore down upon the boy and swept him from the earth.

MARVELOUS JENNY LIND.

Interesting Reminiscences of the "Swedish Nightingale."

Among the most interesting of those of whom John Addington Symonds gives reminiscences in his recently published autobiography is Mme. Jenny Lind Goldschmidt, of whom the image has faded away for the present generation.

Like that of all whose power was displayed on the ephemeral sphere of the stage, she gives a very charming account of this simple minded, gracious and womanly singer, who had the highest devotion to her art, saying, "I sing to God," and whose home life and manners were those of simple affection and womanliness.

Jenny Lind had passed beyond the bloom of youth when Symonds saw her, and her marvelous voice was beginning to lose its power, but her artistic method was as pure as ever, and her expression as magical. The following is his impression of her singing:

"Mme. Goldschmidt came on second in 'On Mighty Peaks.' She was quite in black and looked to me an old, worn lady, with a large head and a small pair of eyes. She wore no corset, and her dress, with its loose waist, reminded me of grandmamma's. At the first tones of her voice I quivered all over. It was not her wonderful execution, her pathos, varying expression, subtle inflexibility, that surprised me, but the pure timbre, which so vibrated and thrilled my very soul that tears came into my eyes. The volume of tone she threw out and then diminished to a whisper, which permeated the room; the diminuendos and crescendoes, the nightingale metallic strokes, brilliant accents and floods of swift, successive notes I expected, but I had not realized such quality of voice."

He gives a charming picture of the home of the Goldschmidts at Oak Lea, and this account of the aging cantatrice singing to her bird is very graceful:

"A blackbird hung in a cage outside the door. Mme. Goldschmidt went up and talked to it 'Come, pretty bird, pretty, pretty little bird, do give us a little song. We want to hear you sing so much, you pretty, pretty little bird,' in such a coaxing way that the bird, who had been shy at first, got down and came close to her and put its head on one side to listen. Then Mme. Goldschmidt sang to it, 'roulade and long shakes and high, sharp notes which made the bird most inquisitive. But he continued silent until she turned to go, and then he gave a loud, shrill chirrup, as if to call her back.'—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Living Stones" of Falkland.
The most curious specimens of vegetable or plant life in existence are the so-called "living stones" of the Falkland islands. Those islands are among the most cheerless spots in the world, being constantly subjected to a strong polar wind. In such a climate it is impossible for trees to grow erect, as they do in other countries, but nature has made amends by furnishing a supply of wood in the most curious shape imaginable. The visitor to the Falkland seas, scattered here and there, singular shaped blocks of what appears to be weather beaten and moss covered boulders of various sizes. Attempt to turn one of these "boulders" over and you will meet with a surprise, because the supposed stone is actually anchored by roots of great strength. In fact, you will find that you are fooling with one of the native trees. No other country in the world has such a peculiar "forest" growth, and it is said to be next to impossible to work the odd shaped blocks into fuel, because it is perfectly devoid of "grain," and appears to be nothing but a twisted mass of woody fibers.—St. Louis Republic.

Soda Propelled Engines.
A fireless locomotive engine was recently used on the Aix-la-Chapelle Julich railway. The motor power is derived from soda. The invention is based on the principle that solutions of caustic soda, which have high boiling points, liberate heat while absorbing steam. These engines eject neither smoke nor steam and work noiselessly. Compared with coal burning locomotives, soda engines show a capacity equal to the former, while they are worked with greater ease and simplicity.

How She Did It.
Trivrot—Miss Flop claims to have made a thousand refusals of marriage. Dicer—That's easily explained. When young Callow asked her to marry him, she replied, "No; a thousand times no."—London Tit-Bits.

The West Indies were so called by Columbus, he believing them to be a portion of the Indies which he had reached by sailing toward the west.

The alb, so often mentioned as a priestly garment, was a long gown, fashioned with a belt.

WHERE PARIS IS AHEAD.

Her Wonderful System of Pneumatic Tubes and Telephones.

In Paris the pneumatic tubes used in the dispatch of card telegrams and letter telegrams from one portion of the city to the other are placed in the sewers. The excellent sewer system has helped the development of this handy means of communication in a way which would not have been possible otherwise. It is quicker than the telegraph for messages within the city and would be perfect if the slow Parisian factor were replaced by the smart London boy messenger. As we stand below the tube we can hear the whizz of the "chase" distinctly. There it goes at lightning speed, bearing, most probably, some tender message from lovesick Jean at his office at the bourse to pretty Jeanette, who is toiling somewhere near the Bon Marche, and fixing a rendezvous for the evening after the day's labors are over. Wonderfully convenient these telegrams for correspondence—more secret than the telegram proper, making no awkward mistakes in times and places—and, best of all, preserving the calligraphy of the sender.

More serious things are doubtless passing across the coils which cover the remainder of the roof of the tunnel. These are the telegraph and telephone wires, thousands of miles of them, connecting the 210 postoffices and placing hundreds of subscribers in the city within a car's run. Overhead wires are prohibited in Paris, so air sky signs, and how much the city gains in beauty those only know who have seen London, with its unsightly webs strung across the houses, spoiling whatever of the picturesque there may be about the streets and constituting a serious danger to persons and property.

There is no comparison either in the efficiency of the telephone in the two cities. A whisper may be heard in Paris, while in London telephoning is generally a most exasperating operation. A striking piece of evidence on this point is afforded by the fact that it is well nigh impossible to telephone from Paris to any given subscriber in London, and that before the instrument could be of any practical use for long messages the two great foreign news agencies—Dulzios and Reuters—were obliged to have special wires laid underground to their offices from St. Martin's le Grand. On the other hand, any subscriber in any part of the French capital may be heard with ease from the general post-office in London. In this and one or two other matters already mentioned John Bull has a great deal to learn from Jacques Bonhomme.—Good Words.

Napoleon's Manners.
Napoleon was rude. His manners were coarse and when at table he ate as fast as he could chew and swallow, shoveling the food into his mouth with his knife and using his fingers whenever they came into more convenient employment. When talking to his officers, he often, as a friendly favor, pulled their whiskers or pinched their ears. To women he was almost invariably offensive, sometimes uttering language so coarse as to bring a flush of shame to their cheeks and the tears to their eyes.

GALLANTRY COST A SHIRT.

Disastrous Results Followed a Scheme to Hide a Clear From a Lady.

One of the most popular men in the downtown produce district is G. W. Christie. His temper, however, has been sorely tried of late, and there is a wicked gleam in his eyes when anybody utters the word "Fire" in his presence.

"Chris," as his friends call him, owns more truck horses than any other man in the city. He also owns a stock farm in Poughkeepsie. He recently invited one of his friends, Fred Gebney, a banana importer, to visit his country place. Mr. Gebney accepted, and both men started for the Grand Central station in a buggy. Chris drove.

Chris, he is said, sported an immaculate shirt front, in which glittered a large diamond. The friends were howling along Fifth avenue when Chris, who was smoking a cigar, suddenly started. He had seen a lady friend, and the impropriety of saluting her with a cigar in his mouth caused him to let the weed drop, as he thought, to the bottom of the buggy.

They had proceeded a block or so when Ed remarked:

"Something's up here."

"That's so," replied Chris, looking around. "I can smell smoke. Maybe it's one of these buildings."

"Great Scott! Wow!" he yelled.

"It's me, Caesar's ghost! It's burning me up!"

"Have you got 'em?" inquired Ed.

"Suppose I turn in a fire alarm."

Before he could make any further comment Chris had stopped his horse, jumped from the buggy and was executing a war dance on the sidewalk.

Smoke was rising from beneath his waistcoat, and the cigar, the cause of it all, dropped to the ground.

"Well, I'll be jiggered," exclaimed Chris. His spotless shirt front was discolored and burned in places.

"Perhaps it was the diamond," suggested Ed.

"Diamonds be blowed!" retorted Chris. "Say," he added, "I can't go to the farm looking like this."

"Oh, that's soon remedied," replied Ed. "Get a celluloid shirt front. If you're careful, it won't take fire, but you mustn't smoke, and don't put the sparkler in either."

Ed's suggestion was carried out. The journey was resumed, and when the men returned to the city the story leaked out. That is why many downtown produce merchants take down their fire extinguishers when Chris happens along.

Chris says he appreciates a joke, but when he is invited to a business man's dinner and receives a miniature fireman's cap and red lantern as souvenirs "the thing's going too far."—New York Herald.

THE WOODS BY NIGHT.

Sounds, Sights and Shadows Among the Trees and Bushes.

"Sit still in the woods at night and look and listen," said an old time naturalist to me one day, "and you will see or hear strange things, not to be seen or heard save by rarest chance in the busy hours of the day."

I thought of the remark as I sat perfectly still in a small opening of the Adirondack woods at the close of one day last summer. It was twilight, and out of the dim, uncertain light loomed the outlines of the tree in the valley and of the Ampersand mountain in the distance. Quickly I saw the shadow of a moving figure, which I made out to be that of a fox. How stealthily the sly fellow crept along! He made no noise; not a twig broke beneath his catlike tread.

As he turned, for the first time he noticed me. He looked at me, and I looked at him. Then he turned and revealed the cunning of his kind. Still keeping his eyes on me, he slipped away until he reached the dark shadows and recesses, when he disappeared in an instant.

I knew roynard was out on his nightly foraging expedition. Perhaps he was looking for a wild rabbit or a fat partridge, or perhaps he intended to rob some farmer of his choicest fowls. The fox is a night traveler. He makes his journey after dark, finds his dinner and retires always before the break of day. —Our Animal Friends.

A Fraudulent Banker.

The other evening a stylish and gentlemanly looking individual stepped into one of the leading restaurants in Paris, took his seat at a table and ordered a dinner tres recherche. When it was served up, he tackled the dishes with the placid delight of a genuine epicure. When he was half way through the dessert, a closed cab drew up at the door of the establishment, and a very grave looking gentleman requested permission to look through the premises, as he expected to find there a fraudulent banker, whom he as a detective was instructed to take into custody. Of course his demand was complied with, and no sooner had he entered the dining room than he pointed to the luxurious reveler and whispered in the landlord's ear:

"You see, our information was correct. There he is. But for your own sake we prefer to avoid a row. Please tell the gentleman that his friend Baron L. is outside and wishes to speak to him for half a minute."

On receiving the message our gastronomist immediately rose from the table and went out on the boulevard, where he was taken possession of by the detective, who put him into the cab and drove off with him. Next day the restaurant keeper went to the nearest police office to recover payment for the "fraudulent banker's" dinner, amounting to about 60 francs. But neither the commissary nor his subordinates knew anything of the supposed capture. In the end it turned out to be nothing more or less than a clever bit of comedy got up for the purpose of enabling one of the actors to have "a good blowout." —Firevox.

THE EXPRESSIVE HUMAN HAND.

Strength of the Fingers Is an Index to Mental Balance.

Much has been written about the hand. Artists have depicted its perfection, physiologists have interpreted its shape and expression, chirologists and the gypsy queens have tried to prophesy from its markings. But a study of its peculiarities by the inductive method takes one into entirely new fields and shows that to interpret the significance of the hand one must start on quite new lines. There is something perhaps in the fact that the artistic hand has somewhat tapering fingers, but beyond this one deals with uncertainties, and I recollect an idiot youth whose extremities had the contour of a genius or a Trilby.

If one examines the hands of a large number of persons with a nervous endowment, he will find curious defects in the length and relative proportions of the fingers. The length of the finger is determined by that of the middle one. If the index and middle are closed upon the palm, the ring and little finger being left extended, the middle finger will reach close to the place where the so called life line runs down, between the ball of the thumb and that of the little finger. It will touch the palm just below the highest part of the ball of the thumb. The middle finger is taken as the standard of length by which to gauge that of others. In a normal hand the forefinger reaches just to the root of the middle finger, the ring finger is longer and should reach nearly to the middle of the nail of the middle, while the little finger should reach to the last joint of the third finger. Now, in idiots, epileptics, neurotics and the degenerative generally these proportions are often not observed. The most common defect is shortness, especially of the third and little fingers, though sometimes a disproportionate length occurs. Sometimes these fingers are unnaturally slender, or the little finger is slightly bent. The most common abnormality of the thumb is excessive shortness, with a defective mobility. These peculiarities, well accentuated, from what we may call the "decent hand"—the hand that writes our sensational novels, the Hauptmann drama, paints symbolic pictures and exploits pure atheism. Such hands may be well formed to the ordinary eye and may be attached to slender and graceful limbs, but this kind of beautiful hand and arm is found quite as often among the children of alcoholics and among those highly cultivated families which have become degenerated by vicious vices and vicious crossing.—Medical Record.

PYGMIES.

Some Information About These Strange Mites of Humanity.

The Greek word pygmy means a measure from the elbow to the hand. The pygmies were a fabulous race of dwarfs about whom many interesting stories have been told. According to Homer, they were so very small that they were attacked every year by the cranes on the coast of Oenotus and were unable to defend themselves.

Writers of a later date locate the pygmies at the mouth of the Nile. We also read of northern pygmies inhabiting the region of Thule, and of others that lived in subterranean dwellings on the eastern side of the Ganges. It is said that once when Hercules visited the country inhabited by these little creatures two whole pygmy armies attacked him while he was asleep. One army fell upon his right and the other upon his left, but they were easily and quickly rolled them up in his lion's skin.

They were not, it seems, at all afraid of Hercules, for by the aid of a ladder they climbed up his drinking cup and helped themselves to its contents.

Aristotle says: "The pygmies were probably some diminutive race in Upper Egypt who rode very small horses and lived in caves." He did not believe that the stories told about them were altogether fabulous.

It has often been declared that there are pygmy races of human beings in the heart of Africa. Indeed, Du Chailu some time ago discovered a pygmy race in the mountainous country on the east of the southern great branch of the Ogobai. They are about 4½ feet in height and are called Orboongs. "They live in the midst of negro tribes of ordinary size," says Du Chailu, "and there is nothing remarkable about them except their diminutive size."—Baltimore American.

A Unique Coat of Arms.

There was one Philadelphian who not only invented arms for himself, but new and rebellious arms, after discarding the ancestral arms of his family. This was Peter Brown, at one time an eminent citizen of Philadelphia.

In 1794 William Priest, an English musician, became attached to the theater in Philadelphia in his professional capacity. In 1802 Mr. Priest printed in London a book entitled "Priest's Travels in the United States," which is now exceedingly rare. The frontispiece to this book is a strange and curious design, entitled "Peter Brown's Arms."

In explanation of this frontispiece Mr. Priest says: "Peter Brown, a blacksmith of this city, having made his fortune, set up his coach, but so far from being ashamed of the means by which he acquired his riches, he caused a large anvil to be painted on each side of his carriage, with two pairs of naked arms in the act of striking. The motto: 'By this I got ye.'"

The peace proclamation of the Emperor of China is a remarkable mixture of wisdom and superstition. It declares that continuance of the war was rendered impossible by the gross incompetence of the leaders and the terrible condition of the country, and clinches the argument with the words: "Heaven had not withheld its anger. The sea overflowed the coast and the camps were submerged." An enlightened reform administration would seem to be imperative in the Celestial realm.

Young Mr. Astor is a fine example of the power of money in literature. Having written a book—which, indeed, might have been worse—he gets up an elegant copy and sends it to King Oscar by special messenger. Mr. Howells or Mr. Clemens or Mr. Stoddard would have been obliged to rely on a registered letter post, which would have been very uncertain. But Mr. Astor carries royalty with his messenger and insures a reception. It is useless for contemporaneous authors to buck against Mr. Astor.

Dr. DeSaussure believes that he has discovered that the negro race is dying out in the United States. He tries to prove his conclusions by local statistics which show more deaths than births of colored persons in South Carolina cities. In his deduction he is not supported by the latest census. It may be contended that the development of the American negro has been tardier than his friends anticipated when citizenship was given to him. Nevertheless, such development is actually taking place.

The Chilean congress has recently enacted legislation guaranteeing the capital of the Transandine Railway Company for 20 years at 4 1/2 per cent, which virtual subsidy will enable the completion of the road between the two oceans. The line will do a great deal for South America. Its completion will mean that the long journey around Cape Horn is only for cargoes and that passengers instead of prolonging a voyage about two weeks can reach the Pacific from the Atlantic or vice versa in 72 hours. The gain afforded by this route can be imagined. Chili is brought some thousands of miles nearer the United States and England, and she will be no longer a remote country.

Charles R. Sligh of Grand Rapids has just returned from England, where he has been looking over the prospects of establishing a furniture trade in the English market. He is very confident from his observations that a substantial and profitable trade can be established if the American manufacturers will comply with the English ideas of style and finish. It is useless, he thinks, to try to force goods upon the English market which are not built on the accepted lines, but by making necessary changes goods can be manufactured here and sold in England in competition with the English manufacturers at a substantial profit. It is his purpose to manufacture a line of goods especially for the foreign trade, following ideas which he gained abroad.

An experiment of some importance is reported, made with a view to determine, if possible, the origin of natural gas, irrespective of theories hitherto prevalent. For this purpose dried seaweed was steeped in water which had been freed from air, and on the third day gas appeared, continuing to be evolved in diminishing quantities until the tenth day, when 803 cubic centimeters had been collected. The evolution had evidently ceased, though after standing two years and a half thirty cubic centimeters more of gas collected in the apparatus; the second gas differed from the first, consisting, it is recorded, almost entirely of methane—the chief constituent of natural gas—from which it is inferred that this slow secondary decomposition of vegetable matter has some relation to the origin of natural gas.

Hall's Journal of Healthy says: "Don't economize in bath water. Don't economize sleep. Don't be stingy with fun. Laugh all you can. Laughing shakes up the system, makes the blood circulate, starts the nervous system—in a word, it rests you all over." That settles it, if one had nothing to do but accept such advice. But how are you going to laugh when the rent day is at hand and the money isn't. Suppose you have a boil, or the blues, or the toothache. Everybody likes to laugh, but most people have got to be worked up into a funny mood. Got to have good digestion, a steady job, something to eat and something to wear. If every day were a circus and every night a minstrel show, that advice would bring as many testimonials as a patent medicine. If time were a clown and trouble only a jack-in-a-box, life would be one three-score-and-ten-year laugh. But it isn't. So far as the advice can be taken, it is good, very good.

A little Atchison girl was given a picture card at Sunday school, on which was a picture of King David. The next Sunday the teacher asked whom the picture represented. "They say it is King David," the child replied, "but it looks like a jack."

A Kentucky poet is comforted by the belief that the blue grass will wave over him when he is dead. Kentucky poets must have more wealth than most poets if they can leave enough to pay for keeping their graves sprinkled during the droughty season.

THEY DRAW PENSIONS

AS THE WIDOWS OF REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS.

Eight Interesting Old Women Drawing Money from Uncle Sam—Husbands Were Patriots in 1776—The Eldest Ninety-four and Youngest Seventy-Nine.

MOST PERSONS think of the war of the revolution as such an ancient affair, as we look back upon it now, that it seems incredible that there should still be living among us any one who is able to give personal recollections of those historic days. Yet in the report of the commissioner of pensions it appears that there are eight widows of revolutionary soldiers who are living and drawing pensions from the government, and none of them is extraordinarily old either. They were clearly old men's darlings in the early years of the present century, as they were all many years younger than their patriotic husbands. They tell wonderful stories of the great war which gave birth to the nation, and never tire describing the hardships of their respective husbands. To them the war of the revolution is something real, not an event to be read in books, says New York World. None of these living revolutionary widows is as old as the century, a fact which shows that their husbands were well along the milestones of life before their wives were born. They also show that the revolution had begun when the young men were in the prime of their youth and beauty, for each one of these dear old ladies will tell you seriously that she was considered a great beauty in her day, and that she had plenty of admirers, young and old. Mrs. Patty Richardson is the eldest of these interesting widows. She was born ninety-four years ago, and her husband was Godfrey Richardson, who fought and struggled with the New York troops. The old lady is now living in the little town of East Bethel, Windsor county, Vt. Her husband fought under Schuyler, Herkimer, and Arnold, and helped those warriors to beat off Burgoyne and his Indian allies. Mrs. Richardson tells many stories about the war, as her husband was in the thickest of many big battles. The youngest of the widows is Mrs. Mary Sneed, who is only 79 years old, and quite a handsome woman to-day. Her husband, Bowdoin Sneed, was a Virginian and fought with the troops that Washington loved best of all. The old lady is now living in the small village of Parkley, in the county of Accomac, Va., not far from where her husband was born and raised. Mrs. Sneed's husband was a commissioned officer in the revolution, and was probably born in 1750, although her husband was not until 1835, and at that time the revolutionary hero was old enough to be her grandfather.

Mrs. Nancy Cloud, another of the widows, is very proud of the fact that her husband was one of the men who risked his life to establish the nation. The old lady is a Virginian. On being asked by the Sunday World to give an account of her life, she kindly wrote out the following: "My husband, William Cloud, was a revolutionary soldier. I have often heard him tell of the hardships he went through in the war and how he walked and marched for miles on ice and snow; how he waded through rivers, and how his feet would bleed. I have heard him tell how they would come so near starving that they would go into a cornfield where the British fed their horses, and there they would pick up the scattered grains to keep themselves from starving. I think he said he was at the surrender of Yorktown, and marched four days without getting a mouthful. "My husband's age was 92, as well as I can remember. Mr. Cloud was a fine, sensible man, and was well respected by all who knew him. He was a husband man, and was chairman of the court for forty years. He was high sheriff of the county when he died. Until on his deathbed he was strong-minded, pert and active. "He died in 1842, on the 8th of February, and my youngest child, a boy, was born the same day, about half an hour before Mr. Cloud died. He was in his senses and named him Washington, after the father of his country. The house was crowded. He repeated his wish over and over. I told him that all he wanted us to know was that the child's name was Washington.

"I was married to Mr. Cloud in I believe, 1836. My oldest child was a girl, born in 1838. Mr. Cloud left me a good home and a right smart bit of property. He requested me to educate Washington, and thought he would make a useful man. I tried to do so, and sent him to school all I could. He was the best boy I ever saw. He was always kind to his mother, but he has been gone from me about twenty-five years. He is practicing law and wanted me to come to him and sent me money. I preferred to stay with my daughter, who is married and living about a mile from where Mr. Cloud died.

"I had a hard time through the late war. All the money left me was exhausted before that, for I had to educate my two children. The hardest trial was when I had to give up my son to go to the war, and then my great troubles commenced. He was wounded and taken prisoner, but he said they were mighty kind to him on the other side. I had to sell some of my property, and now for seven years I have not been able to do anything.

"Widow of William Cloud." Mrs. Cloud is now living in the village of St. Paul, Carroll county, Va. Her son Washington, who was born just when his father died at the age of 25, served in the late war in the Confederate army. The family has been quite wealthy, but was impoverished by the war.

Mrs. Asenath Turner is another of the Revolutionary widows who likes to talk of the great war. She has written a very interesting little story of her life, in answer to a request. She married again after the death of her soldier husband, whose name was Samuel Durham. He belonged to the Connecticut troops who did great work in the battles of Long Island and along the banks of the Hudson river. Mrs. Turner is now living in the town of Manchester, Ontario county, N. Y. Surrounded by children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. She is ninety years old, and was married when twenty-one to Mr. Durham. This was in 1825, when the nation was fifty years old, and when Mr. Durham was considerably older. Her interesting letter follows: "My name when a girl was Asenath Gurley. I was born and brought up in Connecticut (Mansfield). My father died when I was two years old. We were poor, and, as the custom was in those old, hard times, we children were bound out. I was quite a young girl when I married Mr. Durham, my soldier husband. He was a pensioner when I married him, but only $25 a year because he had a little property and the country was poor then. We lived in the same neighborhood where I was brought up for several years, but two children, both now living; then we came here into York State when the country was new and very sickly, with plenty of woods and log houses. Excepting a very few years, I have lived in the same neighborhood that I came to over thirty years ago. "I know I ought to be able to tell a great deal about the old war, for hardly a day passed but what my husband told me some incident of the war, but I could not write it to have it read anyhow. I presume the children could tell more than I can. The daughter lives in West Creek, N. J. (Mrs. Leigh). The son lives in this town—Almanin Durham. "There are quite a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren, all descendants of the old soldier husband. I do not think there is such another instance in the whole country. "I have had no pictures taken since I was seventy years old. I am now in my ninety-first year, and very feeble. I do not leave the house. "My husband served two terms in the war. Once he was drafted and once he enlisted, but I have forgotten how long he served each time. Yours respectfully, "ASENATH TURNER." Mrs. Mary Brown is now in her ninety-first year. Her husband, Joseph Brown, fought with the Pennsylvania troops all through the war. The old lady is now living in the city of Knoxville, Tenn., and can tell many stories about the hardships her Revolutionary husband encountered. There are two Revolutionary widows living in the little county of Windsor, Vt. One of them, Mrs. Patty Richardson, has already been referred to. The other is Mrs. Esther S. Damon, widow of Noah Damon, who fought with the Massachusetts troops. Mrs. Damon lives in the old town of Plymouth Union and is comparatively young, being only eighty-one years of age.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"THE GATES OF HELL SHALL NOT PREVAIL."

They Swing Inward—Society Gets a Scoring for Its Unchristian Forgetfulness—The Churches Willing, but They Can Not Stem the Tide.

NEW YORK, June 30, 1895.—In his sermon to-day, Dr. Talmage chose a momentous and awful topic: "The Gates of Hell," the text selected being the familiar passage in Matthew 16:13: "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Entranced, until we could endure no more of the splendor, we have often gazed at the shining gates, the gates of pearl, the gates of Heaven. But we are for awhile to look in the opposite direction, and see swarming open and shut the gates of hell. I remember, when the Franco-German war was on, that I stood one day in Paris looking at the gates of the Tuilleries, and I was so absorbed in the sculpturing at the top of the gates—the masonry and the bronze—that I forgot myself, and after awhile, looking at the gates, I was reminded of the law scrutinizing me, supposing, no doubt, I was a German, and looking at those gates for adverse purposes. But, my friends, we shall not stand looking at the outside of the gates of hell. In this sermon I shall tell you of both sides, and I shall tell you what those gates are made of. With the hammer of God's truth I shall pound on the brazen panels, and with the lantern of God's truth I shall flash a light upon the shining hinges.

Gate the first: Impure literature. And yet a great deal of the bad literature of the day is not gripped of the law. It is strewn in your parlors; it is in your libraries. Some of your children read it at night after they have retired, the gas-burner swung as near as possible to their pillow. Much of the literature is under the title of scientific information. A book agent with one of these infernal books, glossed over with scientific nomenclature, went into a hotel and sold in one day a hundred copies, and he came all the way back with it. It is appalling that men and women who can get through their family physician all the useful information they may need, and without any contamination, should wade chin deep through such a literature. I suppose there may be some useful literature under the title of scientific information. A book agent with one of these infernal books, glossed over with scientific nomenclature, went into a hotel and sold in one day a hundred copies, and he came all the way back with it. It is appalling that men and women who can get through their family physician all the useful information they may need, and without any contamination, should wade chin deep through such a literature. I suppose there may be some useful literature under the title of scientific information. (came first across the level plain (constituting nothing to build), and then it brought the settlers and dumped them down here and there, occasionally a trailful at a place, which was a town, with other trailfuls peppered about on the prairie judiciously between the towns, which were the farmers. These settlers, received by the car-load, and warranted to be prime eastern lots, immediately established the same grade of civilization they had enjoyed in the East; and the result was that the line between civilization and barbarism was as sharply marked as the edge of one of the white June clouds against the deep blue of the sky. You attended your Browning Club, and helped to throw light into the dark corners of this ingenious poet as a matter of course; and then you rode out across the ridge a little way and admired a Sioux Ghost Dance.

The Fourth of July was approaching. It was decided by the patriotic citizens of Harney's that there must be a celebration. In casting about for attractions the chairman of the duly appointed committee hit upon the bright idea of a sham battle in the Sleepy Hills, just outside of town...

A Hint to Small Boys.

It would be a great gain to the rising and the unborn generations if we could lead the small boy to believe that there are better ways than doing long donations in which celebrate the Fourth of July, and that beautiful and attractive things are as eligible for purposes of celebration as things that annoy and disgust the neighbors and that frighten adults to flight...

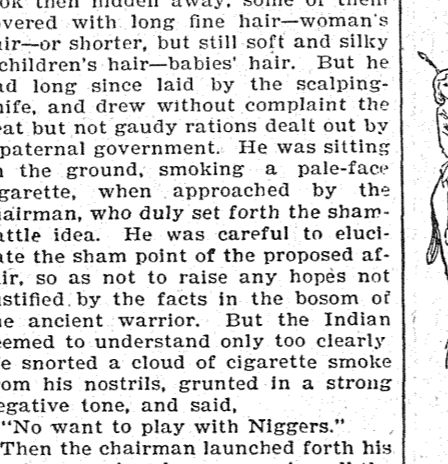

"STOP THOSE INDIANS!"

The Indian remained unmoved, but he gazed off at the hazy, far-away horizon, and seemed lost in thought. The blue smoke of his cigarette curled away and it went out between his fingers. Then he grunted—affirmatively—and rose to his feet gracefully, and as if cost not the slightest exertion. He drew himself up to his full height, and said, scarcely parting his lips: "All right. We sham fight Niggers. Send up cartridges."

The private again gazed away at the Sleepy Hills. "I dun'no, sah," he said. "Us soldiers don't keer much 'bout 'scotting with Injuns in sham battles." There was still a considerable emphasis on the sham. Then, as he still looked off at the blue hills, a thoughtful expression came into his conspicuous white eyes, and he added: "But I s'pose, sah, that a sham battle might be better'n no battle at all. I will talk with the men about it, sah."

The upshot of the matter was that the private soon came to the chairman and said: "I reckon, sah, that we would like the sham battle, sah, if the Kunnel don't object, and the folks here wants us to."

"GET OFF, SAID HUTCHENS."

He reached the edge of the town just as the Indians were beginning to circle about it, whooping and shouting, "Halt!" he
