Right From The Front.

William R. Kaiser, of Company A, Twelfth United States Infantry, is spending a thirty days furlough with relatives and friends here. He is a brother of Mrs. Solomon Striffler and Mrs. Sam. Striffler, both living northeast of town. He is a native of Germany, but came to these parts eleven years ago and made his home here until he enlisted at Detroit nearly three years ago. His company and regiment were among the first called to the front and were the first to land on Cuban soil at Juragua, thirty-two miles from Santiago. The landing was effected on the 22nd of June and Mr. Kaiser has a very vivid recollection of the lively time when they met the enemy on July 1st and the battle which lasted until July 3rd. The firing ceased at an early hour in the morning and the Spanish fleet sailed out of the harbor about ten a. m. The soldiers could only see a small portion of the naval engagement. Our friend came through the engagement without a wound but lay sick with the yellow fever three weeks. He states that the newspaper reports are correct in the main, and that the medical attendance was very poor, he having known wounded men to remain on the field ten hours without any attention. Another private named Laing, from near Bad Axe, belonged to Co. F of the same regiment and reached New York but was unable to proceed at once. Kaiser's term of enlistment expires Oct. 22nd. He speaks of Santiago as a dirty city, with very narrow streets and houses without any windows, built of sandstone and mud. Immediately after the surrender about one hundred and fifty Cubans were set at work to put the city in a sanitary condition. The harbor is excellent.

THE CASS CITY FAIR.

Everything Now in Good Shape and a Successful Fair Assured.—Big Time for Everybody.

A Long List of Special Premiums Offered by Our Business Men.

On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th, will occur the Ninth Annual Fair of the Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac District Fair Association, at the Driving Park, Cass City. As to the benefits to be derived from an agricultural fair a great deal could be said, but it is so thoroughly understood and appreciated that it is scarcely necessary. It affords opportunity for farmers to compare notes on stockraising, crop growing, bee culture or whatever branch they may be most interested in, while valuable suggestions are picked up from "the other fellow" and used to advantage.

The ladies' department has always been one of the principal attractions at the fair here, and the interest never seems to lag. The greater part of Floral Hall will be required for their exhibit of fancy work this year, and the interest will be as keen as ever in the canned fruit department. The superintendents of the various departments having been wisely chosen and exhibitors will be given the best of treatment.

The exhibit in cattle, sheep and poultry will be of special interest because of the fact that a thoroughly competent judge has been secured in Landon, Eno & Keating, contractors and planing mill, will give 1,000 sections for best hive of bees; also a queen or drone trap to winner of 1st premium in comb honey.

I. B. Auten, Cass City Bank, $5 in cash for general expense of Fair.

QUEEN'S PARTNER.

Olaft Olsen made up his mind he would go to the Klondike. It took him a long time to make up his mind. It took him a longer time to get to the Klondike. In the first place he made a mistake. He selected the trail from Skaguay over the White Pass to Lake Bennett. Now that was bad, but not so bad as his next error. He would not give it up and go by the Chilkoot Pass, though he heard Chilkoot was much easier. But that does not say much for the Chilkoot Pass.

"No," said Olaft, "I started to go over the White Pass, and I ain't goin' to make it over the White Pass."

Olaft had a hard time on the trail, though he didn't know it. That is to say, any other man would have thought it a hard time; but Olaft, expecting bad things, had no "kick," as he expressed it, against adversity.

Olaft was an exceptional man on the trail—phenomenally exceptional. For on a trail where each man had one partner at least and most many, Olaft preferred having no partner.

"Another man in the party besides me won't do," he said. "I might want to do one thing and him another; besides, I don't want no partner, no-how. Partners always means trouble."

The experience of many men on the trail confirmed the wisdom of Olaft's views. Nothing discouraged Olaft. When misfortune overtook him, he set to work to "do what he could for the best." Up before daylight, he cooked a substantial breakfast for himself and with fifty pounds more on his back than any other man could carry started off on the trail, climbing over rocks and wading through mud, keeping at it all day with a short interval for lunch.

It took him ten days to move his outfit from station to station. Difficulties too great for other men never prevented Olaft from moving forward. If he could not make ten miles, he made five; if not five, he made two. But he always kept moving forward. When some of his provisions were stolen he rustled, as he called it, and worked for others until he had earned enough to replace what had been stolen. Then he moved on his own outfit. When at last he reached Lake Bennett, he built a boat and calmly set sail without any of the excitement which others exhibited. Men wanted to buy a passage in his boat and assist him to manage it, but Olaft said:

"No; I don't want no passengers, and I guess I can handle the boat myself."

At the Tagish Lake Custom House Olaft worked four days to pay for the duty on his goods, and went on his way without the delay ruffling his temper. He called his boat around the point at Windy Arm, when thirty other boats hauled up on the beach.

KEEPING AT IT.

Approaching Miles canon men shouted to warn Olaft to land and lighten his boat and wait for the pilot.

"That's the canon!" they shouted. "Miles canon."

"Is it?" said Olaft, "I've been watching for it all day." And he took his boat through and on through the White Horse Rapids without moving an eyelid.

But now floating ice began to impede Olaft's progress. "I'll keep going till she freezes up," he said. And he did. She froze up when Olaft had got to Five Fingers, and Olaft went in to camp. He built a shed and ate up his grub until he had left what he could pull.

About Christmas Olaft started for Dawson on the ice with more on his sled than any two men could pull. He made slow progress, but he said:

"I shall come there some time if I keep moving."

Four miles a day does not seem much, but if persisted in it counts up, and at last Olaft arrived in Dawson.

He immediately moved up the creek and went to work prospecting. To his surprise a lead-pencil prospector jumped his claim. Olaft moved to another location, found good prospects, and recorded. Then he built a cabin and settled down to work. He put in eleven solid hours a day. His claim was 500 feet, and as he looked around he felt pleased. He had all the gold he wanted, he thought, and it was all his own. He congratulated himself daily on having no partner.

Some stampedees camped one night at Olaft's cabin and discussed the mining regulations. Yukon stampedees are strange. Yukon mining regulations are still stranger. Olaft learned to his dismay that half of his claim did not belong to him. It belonged to the Queen, the stampedees said. Olaft was mightily troubled. He stopped working and thought over the situation. Then he went down to Dawson, took his place in line behind some hundreds others outside the commissioner's office, and waited patiently for admittance. The thermometer registered

THE RUSH FOR GOLD.

From the Times, Aug. 11.

The rush of gold seekers to the Klondike brings thrilling memories to the "forty-niners" still alive, of the time when they girdled the continent or faced the terrors of the great American desert on the journey to the land of gold. These pioneers tell some experiences which should be headed by gold seekers today. Constant exposure and faulty diet killed large numbers, while nearly all the survivors were afflicted with disease, many of them with rheumatism. Such a sufferer was Adam Vandundy, who now resides at Bluffs, Ill.

"I had been a sufferer of rheumatism for a number of years and the pain was very intense. I tried all the proprietary medicines I could think of or hear of, but received no relief.

"I finally placed my case with several physicians and doctored with them for some time, but they failed to do me any good. Finally, with my hopes nearly exhausted, I read an article regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which induced me to try them. I was anxious to get rid of the terrible disease, and bought two boxes of the pills. I began using them about March, 1897. After I had taken two boxes I was completely cured, and the pain has not returned. I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken, and am willing at any time to sign my name to any testimony setting forth its good merits."

(Signed) ADAM VANDUNDY, 25th day of September, 1897.

FRANKLIN C. FUNK, Notary Public.

Mr. Vandundy's statement ought to be regarded as a criterion of the good merits of these pills, and better proof could not be given than the above facts. These pills stand unrivaled as a tonic for the blood.

THE VOICE IN WAR.

It is Sometimes Useless and Signals Are Substituted.

From the Hartford Courant: With the modern rapid firing guns there is little firing by men in mass, except when the company "rallies" to repel an attack. Then a circle or semicircle is formed round the officers and the bullets are sent as fast as they can travel. In the "extended order" on the skirmish line, it is impossible for a man to "hear himself think," but with a line extending rows away to the right and left and with a strong wind blowing, to say nothing of the musketry, the officer's voice cannot be equal to the emergency. So the resorts to signals—visual with his sword when smoke and landscape will allow; otherwise with the bugle, or with a hoarse whistle in the hit of his sword. Properly drilled soldiers of 1898 readily interpret the signals. Those with the sword are simple; those by bugle or whistle are combinations of long and short blasts, as, for example, one long one, "Halt!" Two long ones, "Forward!" Two short ones and the long one, "To the rear!" Two long ones and two short ones, "Commence firing!" One long one and two short ones, "Cease firing!" The non-commissioned officers along the line, hearing these signals, repeat the commands to the men. Aboard ship there also is great economy of vocal power. If the steel sides of the vessel are not being pounded by shot and shell, the officers can make themselves heard between shots, but their words are few. As for the men, the experience of an observer aboard one of our vessels at the destruction of Cervera's fleet is to the point. He said he expected to hear the men rush to quarters with a yell and then cheer as they saw the enemy's discomfiture. On the contrary, the only sound was the boom of the guns, the men going on with their work like silent machines. Yet the human voice has its value. Who shall say that it is any less than those from metal throats? It comes when there's a hull in the firing, when bayonets are fixed, when men nerve themselves and start forward at a run over the short but shot swept space between them and the enemy. Then the voice will make itself heard—no rules or regulations ever could prevent it if they tried. Seemingly it is the shout that carries the men onward, upward, over the breastworks. We heard considerable about the differentiation between the southern cry and the Northern cheer during the civil war. The former was a high-keyed, piercing yell, the latter a deep-chested "Hurrah," leaving out of the word all but the vowel sound. How do they sound now, blended? America's foe will never stop to tell. And Emperor William is introducing the "Hurrah" in Germany as a substitute for the old-time, choky "Hoch." The way he is doing it is by giving the triple "Hurrah" on concluding toasts and solemn speeches. Then the cheer gets recognition in court circles and finally is adopted by the army. The emperor knows a good thing when he hears it, and America and England—which country also has the "Hurrah"—can afford to let him have this without diplomatic inquiry. But may he and his armies never be called upon to hear it roll up against the Stars and Stripes in battle.

MRS. PINKHAM'S WARNING TO WOMEN.

Neglect is the Forerunner of Misery and Suffering—A Grateful Husband Writes of His Wife's Recovery.

Nearly all the ill health of women is traceable to some derangement of the feminine organs. These derangements do not cure themselves, and neglect of the sensations resulting from them is only putting off trouble.

Pathetic stories are constantly coming to Mrs. Pinkham of women whose neglect has resulted in serious heart trouble and a whole train of woes. Here is the story of a woman who was helped by Mrs. Pinkham after other treatment failed:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—It affords me very great pleasure to be able to state that I believe my wife owes her health to your medicine and good advice. For three years her health failed rapidly; she had heart trouble, often falling down in dizzy and fainting spells, shortness of breath, choking and smothering spells, bloating of the stomach, a dry cough, dyspeptic symptoms, menes irregular, scanty, and of an unnatural color. She had been treated by physicians with but little benefit. She has taken your treatment according to your directions, and is better in every way. I am well pleased with the result of your treatment, and give you permission to use my letter for the benefit of others.—CHAS. H. and Mrs. MAY BURTON, Fort Meyer, Va.

The healing and strengthening power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all female ills is so well established that it needs no argument. For over twenty years it has been used by women who are puzzled about their health to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. All such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

ENGLAND OWNED MANILA.

Both the Philippines and Cuba Were Once British Possessions.

Both the great island possessions—in the West and East Indies, respectively—which are now the seats of war between Spain and the United States, were for a time during the last century possessions of the British empire, says the Fortnightly Review. Havana and Manila were both captured by Great Britain in 1762, and Cuba and the Philippines occupied. A very rare and interesting "Plain Narrative" of the capture of Manila was published by Rear Admiral Cornish and Brigadier-General Draper in reply to accusations of infringement of the capitulations made against these officers by the Spaniards. Their own allegations are sufficiently strong. Through the whole of the above transactions the Spaniards, by evasions, avoided complying with the capitulations in every respect, except in bringing the money from the Misericordia and Ordencara (ships), which it was out of their power to secrete. They baselessly and ungratefully took up arms against us after having their lives given them. They preached publicly in their churches rebellion," etc. At the peace of Paris (1763), however, which concluded the seven years' war, Canada, Louisiana, and various islands in the West Indies having been ceded by France, and Florida and Minorca by Spain, Great Britain on her part ceded to the latter power Cuba and the Philippines. Yet there is still to be seen—or was during my residence at Manila—at the mouth of the Pasig, and under the ramparts, a dilapidated brick and stucco monument with an inscription celebrating the expulsion of the invading British by the noble and patriotic Don Simon de Anda—an inscription which afforded great amusement to British naval officers visiting the port.

HOUSEHOLD INVENTORY.

An Admirable Idea for Keeping Track of One's Belongings.

One of the latest aids toward simplifying one's responsibilities is the Inventory of Household Goods, which is in the form of a small pamphlet, designed for the use of housekeepers who are going to rent their flats furnished, send their goods to storage warehouses or insure them, or for those systematic women who demand such a list for the peace of their souls. These inventories are very comprehensive and should be a part of every well regulated household. A page is devoted to each separate room—parlor, library, dining room, kitchen, bed rooms, bath room, etc. Under different captions are spaces for the number of each article—5 chairs, 2 sofas, etc.; their values, descriptions, location. Not a kitchen utensil is omitted; not a piece of bric-a-brac, or a soap dish. Whoever is responsible for the making of the lists has done the work in a thorough manner. At the back of the book are some odd pages, for a fuller description of the bric-a-brac and the books, so that a detailed description may be written and books named by title, binding, etc. Whoever has wrestled with the horrors of packing and unpacking or with the absolute ignorance that assails one after a fire as to the extent of loss will be gratefully conscious of the possession of one of these aids to memory and to a good temper.

A Kean Anecdote.

In playing Richard III. Charles Kean indulged in a series of dreadful grimaces which the conventions of the times regarded as appropriate accessories of the role. He was playing the piece in a prominent town, and had occasion to take on a man to enact the part of the sentinel who awakes Richard and announces: "This I, my lord, the village clock hath twice proclaimed the hour of morn." Unfortunately Kean made such dreadful grimaces that the sentinel forgot his lines and stammered: "This I, my lord, 'tis I, my lord; the village cock! 'Tis I, my lord, the village cock!" By this time there was a decided titter all over the house, and Kean then said: "Then why the mischief don't you crow?" which, needless to say, brought down the house.

An Event of Moment.

"What is that dreadful crowd?" "I don't know. Either Hobson is in town or shirt waists are marked down to 10 cents."—Chicago Record.

CONFINING TURKEYS.

Parks Should Have All the Advantages of a Free Range.

Two acres devoted to a turkey park, with a substantial building situated thereon, will prove a profitable investment where turkey raising is contemplated. For such an equipment a house 80 by 10 feet, divided into three apartments, each 10 by 10, the center one being open on the front, will be found most convenient and will afford roosting room for 100 or more turkeys during the growing season and be sufficiently large for the brooders during the winter and spring. This house need not be expensive. It can be built of rough or planed lumber and need not be more than four feet high at the eaves, with six foot front. The two end, or roosting, rooms should be made tight and warm, and for this purpose they can be lined with some of the better grades of building paper. If the joists be 3 by 4, set sidewise, and the building paper put on over them, it will leave a dead air space of two inches, which will insure the building being comfortable. Such a house can be built for from $30 to $30 aside from the labor.

To inclose two acres with a turkey high and tight fence might seem to some like a pretty costly undertaking, but this is not the case. A good fence that will keep in turkeys can be made in this manner: Set posts so that they will stand 6 or 6½ feet above ground, 8 feet apart, and to these nail 6 inch fence boards for the bottom. Attach to this 2 inch mesh wire netting 3 feet wide and above this a 3 foot netting of 3 inch mesh. Join them together at intervals with common small wire, thus making a fence 5 feet 6 inches high. Over the tops of the posts stretch a length of barbed or cable wire, which will be 6 or 12 inches above the netting, according to the height of the posts, and wire the netting to this cable so as to take up all sag. This makes a fence practically 6 or 6½ feet high, so close at the bottom that young turkeys cannot get through it and one that will keep out every class of vermin except hawks. I prefer this cable wire to a topboard because the fowls do not see it so plainly and are less apt to attempt to fly over it. If No. 18 wire netting is used, the fence will be very substantial and will last many years. To fence two acres in this manner will cost about $50, and the entire plant—house and run—can be more than paid for in the saving on one year's hatch. It is much better than to allow the turkeys to roam.

The location of the turkey park should be such as to give them a free range. It should have plenty of shade and grass. The orchard or a small grove, if it be in grass, is eminently adapted to this use, and the land will not then be entirely given up to the fowls.—L. E. Keyser in Country Gentleman.

No Excuse For Stale Eggs. There is no excuse to fall back on when a poultryman sells stale eggs or rotten eggs for fresh ones. Eggs from "new nests" should be tested before selling—if sold at all. Nest eggs cannot get mixed up with good ones if the poultryman knows his business. China eggs or egg guards used for nest eggs will prevent this. The test is simple as we have several times described, shows conclusively whether an egg is fresh or not. A perfectly fresh egg is clear and no air space can be seen in the large end. As the egg gets older this air space enlarges until it finally occupies half the egg. A perfectly fresh egg will not shake when the egg is shaken, no matter how violently, but eggs cannot stand the constant little jarring, such as transportation in the cars. Even if eggs are fresh when started, if carried 50 or more miles they will shake a little when received at the destination. The old fashioned test for eggs is the water test. Take a large pan filled three or four (or more) inches with water. Place a number of eggs therein. Those eggs that lay on their side on the bottom are fresh. The ones that stand up on the small end are stale and those that float are bad.—Agricultural Epitomist.

The First Sitters. Eleven or thirteen eggs are enough for a hen to sit on in cold weather. The smaller the number the better the chance of a good hatch. Early chicks are hardy. They don't have to be coddled to keep them alive, but they should have dry quarters to roost in and plenty to eat. They are spoiled meat as early birds are that come from the shell while the frost is still on the ground, but if fed often they will grow in proportion to their feed, and when the first mild days of spring come will be in good shape to turn out to pasture.

Guinea Fowls. These birds must be well known to be appreciated. From childhood we have had them on the farm, from 3 to 250 in a flock. They are no trouble whatever, lay their eggs in nests which they make in the grass and wheatfields, we often finding nests with from 3 to 75 eggs piled on top of each other. From some of the nests we take part of the eggs, and leave some for them to raise their young. They sit, hatch and raise their broods, and we often do not see them until late in the fall, when they bring their chicks home, sometimes as many as 20 in a flock. Such chirping, such flying up trees! The little keets look much like partridges when about that size. They are splendid meat to fry or roast or for potpie, and to enjoy a breast of fowl one should eat a guinea fowl. The eggs are considered the richest of all eggs and keep well. We put them up in winter, and two years ago, when illness and death in the family made me forget the eggs until June, we found them just as good as when put away. If you try guinea fowls, you are sure to have eggs and fowls for your table, and no trouble to get them.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

THE ROSES OF SEATTLE.

O roses of Seattle, That bloom in June and May, You are perfect as the poet's dream, Fair as the golden day; You scatter waves of fragrance On the sleeping air of night; Your rainbow painted petals Are the glory of the light!

Fair is Nile's storied lotus And the rose of Gulistan, And pleasant is the poppy seed That lulls the soul of man, Rare are the lights and shadows In the pansy's purple eyes, But the roses of Seattle Are the flowers of paradise.

O roses of Seattle, That bloom in May and June, Deep hearts of gold and crimson, That light the summer noon, The cottage of the lowly You paint with God's own plan; In the mansion of the lordly You shame the art of man!

I hold them fast in memory Wherever I may roam, These blossoms from the garden Of the gods, dropped down from heaven, The cruel years take from us, What years cannot restore, But the roses of Seattle— They bloom forevermore!

—Ellen Archard Conner in Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

How to Look Good. Good Looks are really more than skin deep, depending entirely upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a dyspeptic look; if your kidneys be affected, you have a pinched look, Securo good health, and you will surely have good looks. "Electric Bitters" is a good alternative and tonic. Acts directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys, Purifies the blood, Staves pimples, blotches and boils, and gives a good complexion. Every bottle guaranteed. Sold at T. H. Fritz, Drug Store. 50 cents per bottle.

Dodging a Shot. When Dewey was first Lieutenant of one of the gunboats which Farragut used as a dispatch boat the admiral used often to come aboard and steam up near the levee to reconnoiter. The southerners had a way of rushing a field-piece to the top of the high bank, firing point blank at the gunboat and then backing down again. Upon one such occasion Farragut saw Dewey dodge a shot.

"Why don't you stand firm, Lieutenant?" said he. "Don't you know you can't jump quick enough?"

A day or so after the admiral dodged a shot. The lieutenant smiled and held his tongue, but the admiral had a guilty conscience. He cleared his throat once or twice, shifted his attitude and finally declared:

"Why, sir, you can't help it, sir. It's human nature, and there's an end to it."

A General Proposition. Wickwire (looking at board with "Pity the Blind" on it)—You are no more blind than I am.

Dismal Dawson—Well, what's it to you?

Wickwire—What business have you wearing that card?

Dismal Dawson—Just as much right as anybody. I don't say I'm blind. This here is just a abstract proposition. See?—London Tit-Bits.

Difficult to Indict Pain.

The doctor smoked slowly on his cigar. It was plain that he had something to say.

"I was thinking of my early college days," he said, "and of a peculiar incident that happened very soon after I began my studies. The professor was instructing the class one day on the corpuscles of the blood. In order to get some fresh blood for microscopical examination each student was ordered to tie a rag around his forefinger and strike the top of the finger suddenly with a needle with sufficient force to draw blood. Seems easy, doesn't it? Do you know there wasn't a man in the class that did it at the first attempt. It was funny to watch some of those embryo surgeons poise the needle with a determined air and launch it to within a hair space of the flesh and there stop dead. Others tried to force the needle in slowly, but paused very shortly, with an expression of pain commensurate to that of an amputation. I myself gave it up as a bad job, and hacked a cavity in my thumb with a penknife, and found it easier.

"The fact that we were very young and inexperienced is no explanation for this peculiarity, as I have since found by personal test. Almost everybody exhibited the same repugnance to inflicting pain in that manner. Try it yourself."

The other man tried and succeeded on the fourth trial.—New York Sun.

A Critical Time

During the Battle of Santiago.

Sick or well, a Rush Night and Day.

The Packers at the Battle of Santiago de Cuba were all heroes. Their heroic efforts in getting ammunition and rations to the front saved the day.

P. E. BUTLER, of pack-train No. 3, writing from Santiago, De Cuba, on July 23rd, says: "We all had diarrhoea in more or less violent form, and when we landed we had no time to see a doctor, for it was a case of rush and rush night and day to keep the troops supplied with ammunition and rations, but thanks to Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, we were able to keep at work and keep our health; in fact, I sincerely believe that at one critical time this medicine was the indirect saviour of our army, for if the packers had been unable to work there would have been no way of getting supplies to the front. There were no roads that a wagon train could use. My comrad and myself had the good fortune to lay in a supply of this medicine for our pack-train before we left Tampa, and I know in four cases it absolutely saved life."

The above letter was written to the manufacturers of this medicine, the Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa. For sale by T. H. Fritz, Druggist.

Laing & James make a special offer in their adv. this week which will be of especial interest to those who contemplate the purchase of a bicycle.
The committees and all interested in the Lecture Course for the coming winter are requested to meet at the Cass City Bank next Tuesday evening.
Complimentaries have been received from the Crosswell and Sebawaing Agricultural Societies. The Crosswell fair is Sept. 28 to 30, and Sebawaing Oct. 4, 5 and 6.
Misses Emma and Mary Hutchinson, of Buffalo, who have been visiting here for several weeks have gone to Genesee County to visit friends before returning home.
H. S. Wickware returned Saturday evening from a very enjoyable visit to his old home at Mallorytown, Ont., also calling on friends at Brockville, Lansdown and Toronto.
Married, at the home of the bridegroom, north of town, on Tuesday, Sept. 20th, by Rev. B. J. Baxter, Edw. Pettit to Miss Janet Gill, of Brookfield township.
Mrs. E. H. Pinney accompanied her son, Edward W., to Ann Arbor last week, where he remains to take a college course. Mrs. Pinney returned Thursday evening.
The Fair management will open an office at the Tennant House the first of next week, where entries can be made and all other necessary business receive proper attention.
Over $3,300 worth of live stock was shipped from here on Saturday by Schwaderer Bros. and Striffler. We rather guess that compares favorably with other towns, even larger.
A number of young folks from this place attended the play, "The Commercial Drammer" given by the Episcopal people of Gagetown last Thursday evening. They all report a good entertainment.
D. L. Caven, of Bad Axe, Canadian Immigration Agent, will be in town for the last three days of the Fair—Oct. 5, 6 and 7—with products of Northwestern Canada. He is now on his way to the State Fair at Grand Rapids.
Duncan McDonald, living six miles north and one-half mile west of this place on the Anthony Doerr farm will sell his farm stock and implements by public auction on Friday, Sept. 30th. J. H. Striffler will do the talking.
Mrs. E. K. Wickware has just returned from the city after selecting her fall millinery stock and taking the latest instructions in trimming, etc. Her new announcement on first page will interest all the ladies. Look it up.
The Cass City Bank has just received from the government $1,000 in silver. Small change has been so scarce lately that it has been almost impossible to do business, but Mr. Auten thinks that they will be able from this time to supply all in need of change.
With good weather, this week will about finish the waterworks trenches and pipe laying. A force of forty-three were at work on Tuesday and excellent progress was made. A portion of the electrical goods are already on hand and it now seems reasonable to expect an early completion of the system.
Cassius H., son of O. C. Wood, bade his many friends good-bye on Tuesday morning and left for Albion, where he will begin a course of study. He is one of our most promising young men and has held the position of president of the Epworth League for over eighteen months, and in which connection he will especially be missed. We join his host of friends in wishing him God speed.
The sad news reached town on Friday morning that C. Frank Hanson, living with his father, Chas. Hanson, just south of Cass River, had departed this life. He has been in failing health for many months and came to his home here because he was unable longer to attend to any duties requiring physical exertion. Some time ago his recovery was despaired of but recently he seemed to rally some and not many days ago he was sufficiently strong to ride up town, so that the end came quite unexpectedly. He was scarcely thirty years of age and had given promise of an unusually successful career until his health failed. The affliction is felt keenly by his wife and parents, and, in fact, all of his friends. The funeral services were held at the home on Sunday afternoon and were conducted by Rev. J. W. Fenn. They were very largely attended.

HE LOVED THE SEA.

Tennyson Used to Study It From the Downs of the Isle of Wight.
Tennyson said, "Somehow water is the element I love best of all four," but in the recent memoir he is also credited with saying that he "never cared greatly for the sea on the south coast. It is not a grand sea, only an angry, curt sea."
Probably that was a view expressed before he became familiar with the lovely, far though the Atlantic does not plunge against the isle of Wight as against Cornwall and the west of Ireland he himself has proved how much power and enchantment the sea reveals from the downs. Let the weather be fair or foul, nature is never dull from the vantage ground of those convexities which seem like the rim of the earth and give an illusion of vastness and openness beyond their actual area. Men striding on ridges and etched against the sky indeed seem "as trees walking." The wind rustling in the ear, the sheep bleating, the sea churning among the bowlders, the occasional bellowing of a steamer for a pilot, the swallows crying in their low flights and the gulls screaming give the only sounds. When the mist closes over the scene, a strange sense of being disembodied possesses us, we are lost in the impenetrable vapor, and the gulls pass over our heads, visible but for an instant as they float from obscurity into obscurity. In times of storm one seems to be at the seat of the elements and a witness to all their processes. The clouds roll and break against the cliffs like another sea, and sunbursts flashing from them leave a silver swath over the vexed and somber billows. On sultry days a waterspout, whirling like a dervish, is no uncommon sight, and he who makes the downs his observatory becomes wise in all the phenomena of sea and air. Climbing them at night gives one the feeling of scaling the walls of heaven itself. They slope like the sides of a pyramid, and the apex of the pyramid impales us, stars. On sunny days the sea below is purple, and every shade of blue and green that can be thought of, even to use one of Tennyson's own descriptions) "like a peacock's neck."
Rarely was there a visitor at Farringford that he was not brought up to the beacon and shown all these wonders and beauties. Except in his closing years the poet was found upon them in all weathers and at all seasons, and from them and the surrounding scenery he drew many of the landscapes of his poems.—North American Review.

DOG OPENED FATHER'S EYES

Experience of a Man Who Had Several Growing Girls.
"It is quite interesting to be the father of several growing girls," said one of a group of family men in the smoker of a suburban car.
"Yes," answered another one, with a shrug of his shoulders, "especially when they all wait now gowns at the same time."
"I wasn't thinking of that," said the first speaker, "but of a way they have of taking the wind out of your own sails. It never occurred to me until the other morning that it was not to see me that young fellows kept dropping in to play cards and make themselves agreeable. I tumbled at last, but it was my hunting dog Jack that opened my eyes."
"Your hunting dog?" echoed the crowd.
"Yes. I had heard of nearly every kind of a plan for the communication of lovers except a dog. In this case Jack became Cupid's messenger. Those boys borrowed the dog ostensibly to go hunting, but I have learned since that they didn't know a gun from a hoe handle. They tied Jack up overnight, and as soon as he got out in the morning he made a bee line for home. If I hadn't seen the corner of a paper sticking from under his collar I should never have suspected the eagerness with which these girls tried to head him off from me."
"He had a letter for them?"
"No, just a note asking the privilege of seeing dear Miss Kate or Miss Sue in the park for a walk and a chat. Nice idea, employing the dog of the family in a clandestine correspondence. I answered that note myself, and the two girls haven't spoken to me since. Jack is tied up, and I'm watching the cat now, for I have no doubt they'll find a way to circumvent me."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Effects of a Bee Sting.

An English physician relates an instance of a lady who was stung by a bee. At the first moment she seemed to pay very little attention to it, but very soon her face became flushed and spots appeared all over her body. Suddenly she developed a most severe attack of asthma, finding great difficulty in breathing. Another instance is that of a young lady who was stung on the back of her head by an ordinary honey-bee. In less than five minutes her face began to swell, and very marked red and white spots appeared all over the surface of the body. The swelling extended over the entire person, accompanied by severe pain, burning and giddiness. The eyes were almost closed and the countenance was so distorted as to be unrecognizable. Very free bathing in soda water, with a little soda taken internally, and hot applications to the feet and thorough massage finally afforded relief, but it was some hours before the patient recovered from what was truly an alarming condition. Violent attacks of nervousness accompanied the trouble, and the sense of suffocation was almost intolerable. The young woman had been stung a number of times before without any apparent unpleasant result. The physicians were of the opinion that the bee had been feeding upon some extremely poisonous plant, which became concentrated in the venom of the sting. Be that as it may, the condition was such as to excite grave apprehension, the more so as it was several days before recovery was complete.—New York Ledger.

The Ever Ready Pickaninny.
Old black Hezekiah was driving his lean and aged cow home one night when he came to a place where the road branched into two forks, and here the stupid beast, perversely took the wrong one and went wandering off by herself in search of adventures. Lame and rheumatic as he was the old man could scarcely hope to circumvent the cow, and so in his difficulty he hailed a ragged boy idly sitting on a fence with:
"Say, dar, head dat cow!"
"Head 'er? Why, she's done got a head!"
"I mean turn 'er."
"She looks to me to be right side out 'ready."
"No, no, you brack rascal; speak to 'er, won't you?"
"Speak to 'er? Why, suttinly. Good evenin, Miss Bossy!"—New York Sunday Journal.

Kerosene Emulsion.

A thorough spraying with kerosene emulsion or with a solution of carbolic acid with a pump that will force the fluid into every seam, crack and corner, will cleanse the main part of the building, roof and all, or a thorough smoking with sulphur will do it. When this is done, the hens will feel as proud as you would if your rooms were new papered and carpeted, and unless they have been doing their best before they will try to do it afterward.—American Cultivator.
