COME ALL THINGS NOW READY.

Cass City Fair Next Week. Oct. 1, 2, 3 and 4, 1901.

On Tuesday morning of next week will open the Twelfth Annual Fair of the Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac District Fair Association, at Cass City, and with the prospects of good weather, we can see no reason why it should not equal if not excel the successful fairs of the past three years. Our Fair has become the most popular in the whole Thumb district, because of the excellent and varied attractions, numerous and first-class exhibits, impartial judging and fair dealing with every body.

Considerable work has been done toward improving the grounds this year which will add much to the attractiveness. The track is in first-class shape and a smaller track has been made for showing carriage and other horses not entered in the speed department. A fine new dining hall has been erected and will be ably managed. The horse, cattle, sheep and swine sheds are in good condition, ample provision has been made for the accommodation of a large poultry exhibit, and Floral and Agricultural Halls will, if possible, be made to outshine all previous years.

Several of the attractions have already been announced and largely advertised, while others are being arranged for, the management being determined that the patrons of the Fair shall have entertainment of the very best. The selection of the attractions has been carefully made and is sure to be satisfactory.

Some ill-disposed person started the report last week that the price of the membership ticket had been raised to $1.50, and the false rumor gained quite a circulation, but was promptly denied by the issuing of a dodger. The price has not been changed, remaining at $1. We fail to see what anyone can gain by starting such a falsehood.

The mild weather of this week indicates that the weather will be of the finest, and as by the time of the opening the farmers will have gotten over their rush to a great extent, the crowd is sure to be large as usual. With four hotels, boarding houses and a mammoth feed barn besides we can take care of the crowd better than ever before and assure everyone of accommodation.

Come with the whole family and enjoy yourselves after the season's hard labor. Give the wife an outing once for the year anyway. It will make her look young again. And don't forget that the children need a change too, once in a while. Come!!!

HYMENEAL

At half after two o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Duggan, on Houghton Street west, occurred the marriage of their only daughter, Frances Gertrude, to William N. Strabe, the superintendent of our electric lighting and water-works systems. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. W. Gifford, of the M. E. Church, in the presence of a small company of immediate friends. The rooms were tastefully decorated with white and bluish chrysanthemum asters, white dahlias and tube roses, with cypress vine for draping and a few choice verbenas and sweet peas added color. The bride was neatly attired and carried a bouquet of white asters. Mr. and Mrs. Strabe took the afternoon train for Buffalo where they will spend a week. The young people are held in the highest esteem by the entire community, and we join their many friends in wishing them a joyous voyage through life.

At eleven thirty o'clock, yesterday forenoon, at the home of the bride's mother, on east Houghton Street, Miss Arminia Kitchen was wedded to William Fleenor of Lucas, Iowa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Norman C. Karr, of Saginaw, in the presence of a few of the immediate friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Fleenor, accompanied by Mrs. Fleenor's mother, will leave on Monday for their future home at Lucas, Iowa, where Mr. Fleenor holds the position of postmaster.

Political Hysterics.

A most lamentable Comedy is the title of a powerful novelette by Mr. William Allen White, which begins in the September 21 issue of The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia. This absorbing serial is a study of political hysterics - the story of a State gone mad. Order the Post at this office.

A HAPPY UNION.

On Wednesday of last week, the father, six brothers, and two sisters with their families, gathered themselves together at the home of L. B. Lauderbach, north of town. Several pleasant hours were spent in recalling days "when we were children," shooting the despised sparrow, watching the operations of the corn-harvester, etc. Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Lauderbach were very pleasantly surprised when they were presented by J. C. Lauderbach, in behalf of the brothers and sisters, each with a beautiful bobair, which had suddenly appeared in the sitting room. "The shades of night were falling fast" when the merry company separated, "homeward bound," to meet again in another year. One brother and sister were absent.

Reading Circle.

All teachers and others wishing to do the work of The Teachers' Reading Circle in the Cass City Circle, will meet at the home of David H. Kyes, on Saturday, Sept. 28, at 2:30 p. m. In addition to the benefits that teachers always receive when they strive to perfect themselves in their work, considerable credit for work actually done, will be given by the Commissioner of Schools, toward teacher's certificates granted next year. The books for this year are: The Industrial Evolution of the U. S., by Carroll D. Wright, U. S. Commissioner of Labor; Psychology for teachers by C. Lloyd Morgan, Principal of University College, Bristol England, and Fanciful Tales by Frank K. Stockton. Sets of books will be furnished on Saturday to those desiring them.

Serious Injury.

On Tuesday evening, the fourteen year old son of John Francis, of Novesta township, was seriously injured in a runaway accident. He was thrown under the buggy and the rear wheels passed over him, fracturing both bones, making a severe scalp wound and causing internal injury. Dr. G. M. Livingston was called and found it necessary to make about a dozen sutures to close the scalp wound. The boy's recovery is hoped for.

FAIR WEATHER BROS.

Good Advice.

A young man recently wrote to the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal asking: "What have you to say, squarely and fairly, to a young man of twenty-nine who is about to marry?" In the October Journal Mr. Bok uses a page for his answer. His salient points are these: that a man should make the woman of his choice his chum, as well as his wife; that he should show her the highest consideration as well as love her; that he should remember that he owes his wife to her mother, and treat his mother-in-law with respect, at least; that he should keep his wife informed as to his income; that he should give her a regular allowance and that he should have his life insured in her favor. And above all, that when a young man marries he must remember that he leaves a world of self and enters into a world of another and self.

Corn Sells at a Dollar.

Farmers of this state could make corn raising very profitable, if they were able to secure $1.00 per bushel for their corn.

A few days ago an Illinois farmer shipped to the Chicago market a carload of hogs that were sold for 7 cts. per pound, or over $21.00 per hog of a little over 300 lbs average. After making the sale he said to those standing about him that this was selling his corn at over $1.00 per bushel. That he had secured 15 lbs. of gain in pork to each bushel corn fed to them, and that it was easy to compute what he got for his corn when you multiplied 15 by 7.

This would show $1.05 a bushel for the corn fed them, and it is needless to remind farmers of the fact that the corn fed upon the farm leaves its fertilizing qualities to be returned to the land, and thereby maintain its productive capacity. While corn sold at the elevators is virtually a sale of a portion of the fertility of the farm, it is measuring out and selling its productiveness.

To enable farmers to get 15 lbs. of pork out of a bushel of corn, it requires a knowledge about swine and the best information on feeding, management, and treatment of hogs to produce these favorable results.

Success now days on any line is through specialists. The American Swineherd is a specialist on the hog industry, and a leader on how to secure the greatest profit through raising swine. It is the acknowledged best paper devoted to the hog industry in the United States.

That our readers may have an opportunity of securing the advantages of this paper, we have made favorable arrangements for combining it with our own at a price which no farmer interested in hogs to even a very limited extent can overlook.

The regular subscription price of the American Swineherd is 50 cents a year. We will offer you the American Swineherd in combination with our paper for 35 cents a year in addition to price of our paper, or will offer the American Swineherd 2 years and a copy of the Hog Doctor as a premium for 60 cents a year in addition to price of our paper, giving the Swineherd in this combination at nearly half price.

This liberal offer will be open for one month, and parties should avail themselves of the opportunity while it holds good.

The annual importation of matting into the United States from China is estimated at 300,000,000 cubic yards.

An international exhibition will be opened in August at Copenhagen for apparatus for the killing of rats, and several prizes will be offered for the best devices.

The whole of an Italian regiment, which had been manuevering between Naples and Mondragone, having been attacked by malaria, the minister of war has issued orders that all troops in that district are in future to wear veils and gloves to protect them from mosquitoes.

The educational campaign against spitting begins to show encouraging results. A man who recently offended in a New York ferry boat suddenly realized that twenty pairs of eyes were regarding him as if he were a pick-pocket. Greatly embarrassed, he flushed and slunk away to the men's cabin. Concentrated public disapproval seldom falls of its just effect.

An iron chest, containing $4,000 in Spanish coins, was found recently while excavating in the Henepan canal, twenty miles south of Sterling, Ill. The box was found ten feet from the surface of the earth. There was a large number of coins bearing the date of 1668 and others of probably an earlier date, but the figures could not be deciphered. Some of the coins were stamped with a crown and others a head. There was nothing to indicate when the honor was bestowed upon.

Mr. Berkout, formerly forester in the Dutch East Indies, recently gave some facts not generally known concerning India rubber and gutta-percha, which are often confused. The quality of elasticity distinguishes India rubber from gutta-percha. The latter is derived from one plant only, while India rubber is produced from more than sixty plants. Three-fourths of the gutta-percha of commerce comes from Sumatra and Borneo. Of the total annual production of India rubber nearly two-thirds comes from the Amazon valley, about one-third from Central Africa and one-twentieth from Asia. The total production of gutta-percha is about one-twentieth as great as that of India rubber.

"Very few people really understand the care of an aquarium," says a Philadelphia man who deals in fish. "The trouble with most people who go in for aquatic pets is that they kill them with kindness. A constant changing of the water is fatal. The supposition that fish need fresh water is all wrong; so is constant feeding with bread crumbs and things like that. The fish gain their sustenance from the water in which they live. Every aquarium requires plants, as they exude carbonic acid, which the fish require. If you have the proper amount of plants, regulated according to the size of the aquarium and the number of fish it contains, you will have a self-sustaining aquarium, and there will be no necessity for you to change the water."

Science reverses the legal maxim "de minimis" and has an eye for the smallest things. Among such may be reckoned the paper submitted to the Royal Society on "the small vertical movements of a stone laid on the surface of the ground," by Horace Darwin. The investigations showed that a stone weighing about twenty pounds and about a foot and a half in diameter, which was placed on the surface of the ground a quarter of a century ago, gradually sank and is sinking. The stone sinks about the one-fifth hundredth of a yard in a year. The movement was not altogether regular, varying somewhat with the varying dampness of the soil. The effect of frost was to raise the stone, it fell rapidly during a thaw—a whole year's distance on one occasion in less than five hours.

Down at Sparrows' Point, south of Baltimore, completed all but a few finishing touches, lies the great steel floating dry dock built by the Maryland Steel company for the United States government, and which is to be towed to Algiers, La., as soon as the West India hurricane season has passed. That will be about Oct. 1 and several powerful ocean-going tugs will convey the huge dock to its destination. It is certain that this immense piece of marine mechanism for lifting clean or repair them is without a superior in its line, and it is doubtful whether it has an equal. It can raise a 15,000-ton battleship and have the floor of the dock two feet above the water, which is demanded by the government for its work, but with the floor even with the water-line it can lift an 18,000-ton ship.

Rome enjoys the distinction of possessing the first woman lawyer of Italy since the days of Portia. She is Signorina Teresa Labriola. She has passed her examination with honors and is now a full-fledged lawyer, but has not inscribed herself among the advocates, as she does not desire to champion the "new woman," but to devote herself to the philosophy of law. After taking her degree, she addressed a commission of the University of Rome for three hours. She now lectures at the university together with her father and brother.

MICHIGAN NEWS IN GENERAL

The Flint Fair Accident.

An accident that will result in the death of two of the victims, and which caused the serious injury of several others, occurred on the Flint fair grounds late Thursday afternoon. One of the guy ropes of a Ferris wheel, operated by a man named Crell, got loose, the stake to which it was fastened pulling out, and the structure fell. The cars were killed at the time. Joseph Peck, of Chicago, aged 30, while trying to save his sister and niece, was caught and had his jaw broken. His skull was also fractured and he will die. Fred Borden, of Iowa, who was taking tickets, was struck and received injuries that will cause his death. Miss Bessie Weegs, aged 18, had her cheek bone crushed in. John, aged 9, and Anabel, aged 8, children of Rev. C. A. Lippincott, were badly injured, but will recover. Miss Bertha Rock had her shoulder cut, was badly bruised and picked up in an unconscious condition. Fern Smith, aged 12, was rendered unconscious, but was not badly injured. Miss Alice Knight, daughter of M. A. Knight, had an arm broken. M. W. Horton, who was selling tickets, was bruised on the wrist and leg.

Will Serve Life Sentence.

Lucius A. Weeks has been found guilty of murder in the first degree for the killing of Mrs. Jennie Parish on the night of June 5 last at Flint. When asked if he had anything to say Weeks said that he thought the jury had been prejudiced against him because of the shooting of the president. Judge Wisner told the prisoner that the president's assassination had nothing to do with it, and that under the evidence the jury could have arrived at no other verdict. He then sentenced the prisoner to Jackson for life at hard labor. The murder was a cold-blooded affair. Weeks was jealous of the woman and shot her because she received attention from a rival. Weeks is a married man. He broke down when sentenced. Just before the train for Jackson started his little daughter Mabel braved the curiosity of the crowd and kissed her father an affectionate goodbye.

Loss of the Hudson and Crew.

News of the probable loss of the Western Transit steamer Hudson with a crew of 25 men on Lake Superior last Monday was brought by the steamer Nicol, which arrived at Sault Ste. Marie from Duluth Thursday. There does not seem one chance in a hundred that the boat and crew are safe. The Hudson was bound from Duluth to Buffalo, with a full cargo of flour, grain and general east-bound merchandise. The story of Capt. McLean, in command of the Nicol, solved the mystery of the reports from Eagle River that a ship was seen to founder on the Keweenaw peninsula early Monday, and that the crew was apparently taken off by another steamer not far away. That steamer was the Nicol, but Capt. McLean says he had all he could do to keep his ship afloat in the frightful gale, and he was unable to do anything to save the men, then clinging to the rail of the sinking Hudson.

Only 200 Survived.

The annual reunion of the Seventh Michigan Infantry, held at the Stonehall Hotel, was held in Detroit on the 17th inst. Of the original 1,000 members of the regiment, which was one of the most hardy fighting in the war, but 200 came out alive. Among these were 17 of the parent company E, which started from Ypsilanti, and all 17 were present to-day. Lieut.-Col. Constant Luce, of Monroe; Capt. Safford, of Lansing; President George H. Hopkins; treasurer, G. W. Harmon, and Col. F. W. Swift were among the prominent members present. The regiment left Detroit 39 years ago Aug. 17.

Disease in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by representative physicians in active general practice, in different parts of the state, indicate that diarrhea, rheumatism, neuralgia, bronchitis and dysentery, in the order named, caused the most sickness in Michigan, during the past week. Cerebro spinal meningitis was reported present at two places; whooping cough at 3, measles at 8, smallpox at 21, diphtheria at 32, scarlet fever at 61, typhoid fever at 114 and consumption at 167.

Reunion Declared Off.

The soldiers' and sailors' reunion of the Northeastern association, which was to have been held at Flint the first five days in October, was declared off-to-day by President M. C. Barney. The reason assigned is that the old soldiers were not attending owing to the recent national bereavement.

ROOSEVELT TAKES OATH.

Affecting Scene During Ceremony That Made Him President.

CABINET OFFICERS RETAINED.

President Roosevelt Will Follow the Policy of McKinley Absolutely Unbroken—No Change in Cabinet and No Special Session of Congress.

Theodore Roosevelt, twenty-sixth president of the United States, succeeds to that exalted office under the constitution and laws of the country, and with the administration of the oath of office began the exercise of the functions of president.

In these statements are embraced the consummation of an awful tragedy and the historic event by which the administration of government is changed and a new administration comes into being.

The statute providing for the succession to the presidency requires that Congress shall be convened in case a member of the cabinet becomes president, but the statutory requirement does not apply to the case of the vice-president being elevated to the presidency through the death of the president. It is believed that since the law does not call upon him to do so, the new president will not summon Congress in special session, but will allow the affairs of the different departments to remain in their present hands until Congress shall meet in constitutional session December 2d, less than three months hence. This precedent was set by President Arthur after the death of Garfield. President Arthur did not convene the senate in special session, but circumstances are somewhat different in the present instance.

President Roosevelt reached Buffalo at 1:40 Saturday afternoon, accompanied by his private secretary, William Loeb, Jr. When he left the train an escort of the Fourth signal corps formed about him and conducted him to an automobile which his friend, Ansel Wilcox, had in waiting. The demonstration which greeted his appearance was in keeping with the solemnity of the occasion. Those who saw him did not raise a cheer, but testified their respect by lifting their hats. As soon as he entered the vehicle the chauffeur turned the lever and the automobile went skimming away to the residence of Mr. Wilcox on Delaware avenue. The president arrived at the Wilcox home at 1:45 o'clock.

Call of Condolence.

With hardly any conversation he retired at once to his room, where he bathed and dressed. At 12:30 o'clock he was ready for the Milburn house, where he desired to make his official call of condolence. He was escorted by a detail from the fourth signal corps and mounted police.

The president was attired in a black frock coat and dark striped trousers. He alighted at the Milburn house at exactly 2:38 o'clock. He was accompanied to the house by his host, Mr. Ansel Wilcox and one of the secret service force.

It was 3:15 when President Roosevelt called back to the house of Mr. Ansel Wilcox until 3:25, when the cabinet arrived, preparations were being made for the taking of the oath of office.

Roosevelt Took the Oath of Office.

At precisely 3:52 o'clock Secretary Root ceased his conversation with the president and, stepping back, while an absolute hush fell upon every one in the room said in an almost inaudible voice: "Mr. Vice-President, I" then his voice broke and for fully two minutes the tears came down his face and his lips quivered so that he could not continue his utterances. There were sympathetic tears from those about him and two great drops ran down either cheek of the successor of Mr. McKinley. Mr. Root's chin was on his breast. Suddenly throwing back his head as if with an effort, he continued in a broken voice:

"I have been requested on behalf of the cabinet of the late president, at least those who are present in Buffalo, all except two, to request that for reasons of weight affecting the affairs of government you will proceed to take the constitutional office of president of the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt's voice wavered at first as he replied:

"I shall take the oath at once in accordance with your request and in this hour of deep and terrible national bereavement wish to state that it shall be my aim to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity and honor of our beloved country."

An Impressive Scene.

The president stepped farther into the bay window and Judge Hazel, taking up the constitutional oath of office which had been prepared on parchment, addressed the president to raise his right hand and repeat it after him. There was a hush like death in the room and the judge read a few words at a time and the president, in a strong voice and without a tremor and with his raised hand as steadily as if carved from marble, repeated it after him. "And thus I swear," he ended. The hand dropped by the side, the chin for an instant rested on the breast and the silence remained unbroken for a couple of minutes as though the new president of the United States was offering silent prayer. Judge Hazel broke it, saying: "Mr. President, please attach your signature." And the president, turning to a small table near by, wrote "Theodore Roosevelt" at the bottom of the document in a firm hand.

The Schley Trial.

The Schley court resumed in the tool shop at the navy yard Friday. Ramsey occupied the seat which on the first day was filled by Howison. Mrs. Dewey accompanied her husband, and remained a short time. General attendance was not large.

Rear-Admiral Frances J. Higginson, commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic squadron, was the first witness. He said he commanded the Massachusetts during the Spanish war, for a time part of the flying squadron of which Schley had been in command. He told of joining the fleet at Newport News, of going to Cienfuegos, Cuba, May 22, 1898. His testimony covered the arrival at Santiago, the firing on the Colon and Schley's manner in the fight. Some written questions were asked by Lenly for the court. The third question created a sensation. It was: "Was every effort made by Schley to destroy or capture the Spanish steamer Colon as she lay at anchor in the harbor at Santiago between the 27th and 31st of May?"

Objections came thick and fast, but the witness answered: "No. I do not think it was." Long arguments followed and the court finally withdrew the question.

Captured 150 British.

The Boston captured three companies of mounted infantry under Gough, who were reconnoitering south of Utrecht. After a severe fight the British forces lost their guns which had first been disabled. British casualties were two officers and 14 men killed; five officers and 25 men wounded and five officers and 150 men captured. Gough, who escaped during the night, reports that there were 1,000 Boers in the attacking party which was led by Botha.

French reports that Smuts rushed the coronal at Elandsrivierpoort. The British losses were three officers killed and one injured, and 20 men killed and 30 wounded. Boers who were dressed in khaki, lost heavily.

No Guerrilla Warfare.

Joseph J. Emery, formerly the Detroit agent of the Associated Press, who has been conducting the Associated Press service in the Philippines for the last year, returned home for a visit. Mr. Emery has been all around the islands with the Taft commission, and declares that with the exception of parts of the islands of Mindoro and Luzon there is no guerrilla warfare or trouble of any kind, and that in the island of Luzon it is safe to travel anywhere without an armed escort. There are some 45,000 troops on the islands, or 20,000 less than in 1900, and it is expected this force will gradually be reduced one-half.

The President Tells the Members That He Wishes Them to Remain.

The cabinet of President McKinley will be the cabinet of President Roosevelt. With perhaps a single exception all of the eight men who aided President McKinley in carrying on the government with such signal success will be found permanently by the side of his successor.

Somewhat to the surprise of the six members of the cabinet who were on the funeral train, President Roosevelt called them into his private compartment and said to them that he wanted every one of them to consider himself invited to become a member of the new cabinet.

"I not only want you to stay with me," said the president to them, "but I want you to consider that I am selecting you as my choice. You are asked not merely to fill out a term, but to be my chosen collaborators."

FAREWELL TO MARTYR DEAD.

Tearful Ceremonies Mark the Funeral of McKinley.

William McKinley has been laid to rest in the great west, which gave him to the nation, back to Mother Earth, which gave him to the world and history. Beneath the great white dome of the Capitol the official and ceremonial good-bys of his country and of the nations of the world were said Tuesday. Then came the people, silent but for their manifestations of grief, passing in unbroken line before the flag-draped and flower-covered bier, sobbing their farewell. A train, black as the night through which it ran, bore the body to the little Ohio city whose residents called the illustrious dead their townsman. Wednesday they looked on him for the last time.

And then ended all pomp and ceremony. The patient, stricken widow put away the inanimate clay and her last sad cry of farewell re-echoed from the hearts of a stricken nation gathered in memorial meetings wherever flies the flag so loved and so honored by William McKinley.

Funeral Services Are Simple.
As befitted the occasion and the character of the man whose remains were lying cold and rigid in the narrow embrace of the metallic casket, the funeral services in the Capitol were simple. They were conducted in accordance with the rites of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which President McKinley was a lifelong member. Consisting only of two hymns, a song, a prayer, an address, and a benediction, they were solemnly impressive. Special prominence was given to the beautiful hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," which, in spite of the fact that it has been familiar property for many long years, already has come to be known as "President McKinley's hymn." It was played as the casket left the White House, and again as the stalwart soldiers and sailors carried their precious burden up the broad eastern steps of the Capitol. It was sung by the choir over the body in the center of the rotunda, while as the procession passed the President's church the chime of the bells rang out the same sweet melody.

Great Men of Country Mourning.
Gathered around the bier were representatives of every phase of American national life, including the President and the only surviving ex-President of the United States, together with representatives at this capital of almost every nation of the earth. Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, and Spain, and all the republics to the southward of the United States mingled their tears with those of the American people. Despite the fact that no attempt had been made to decorate the interior of the rotunda, beyond the arrangements made about the catafalque, the assemblage presented a memorable sight. The somber black of the attire of hundreds of civilians present was splashed brilliantly with the color and gold of the representatives of the army and the navy and the court costumes of the diplomatic corps.

At the White House.
The last entry of William McKinley, the dead President, into the capital of the nation was in the evening of a perfect autumn day. On the casket rested a large sheaf of wheat, emblematic of the harvest. It was the McKinley train and it carried the President-elect and his wife, his aged mother, who had taught him that religious fortitude with which he faced death; his brother and sisters, his other relatives and personal friends, all plain people from Ohio. Monday night the last McKinley train that will ever enter the capital rolled into the same station, to be greeted by mute and sorrowing thousands, representative of every rank and station in American life. There were the officers and men of the army and navy, the heads of departments, the clerks, and the charwomen, business men and working men, whites and blacks, wedged in the street behind the ropes to receive the nation's dead. It was the ripened fruit of the harvest. McKinley the beloved, cold in death, had come back to the nation's capital for a last pause within its historic precincts before proceeding to the grave by the side of his mother and father and his two children in the cemetery at Canton. The flags over the Capitol and the White House were at half-mast, and the flags of the army and navy were shrouded, while muffled drums spoke the sorrow for his death, but above this sorrow rose the spirit of McKinley's triumph as the sorrowing multitude felt that his life at the head of the nation had effaced all sectional lines and even party lines in this hour, for among those who stood with uncovered heads and tear-dimmed eyes were men who had worn the gray, as sincere mourners now as those who had in the political strife followed the star of McKinley as President. The casket, which was borne to the east room of the White House, was covered by the stars and stripes and two wreaths, one of white roses and the other of white carnations, rested on the top.

After President Roosevelt and the cabinet retired from the east room Mrs. McKinley, attended by her sister, descended from her private apartments, and entered the room. She stood for two or three moments at the side of her dead husband, and then was led away back through the broad corridor, where she has been the hostess at so many state dinners, and finally to her apartments.

President Roosevelt drove directly from the White House to the residence of his brother-in-law, Commander W. S. Cowles, U. S. N., No. 1733 N street, N. W. He was accompanied in the carriage by Secretary of State Hay and Secretary of the Treasury Gage. The cabinet ministers did not enter the Cowles house, but leaving President Roosevelt there, they were driven to their respective homes. President Roosevelt found Mrs. Roosevelt and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., his eldest son, awaiting his arrival, they having reached there from New York in the afternoon.

SUNG THROUGHOUT THE NATION THIS WEEK.

Lead, kindly light, amid the encircling gloom;
Lead thou me on!
The night is dark, and I am far from home,
Lead thou me on!
Keep thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene—one step's enough for me.
I was not ever thus, nor prayed that thou
Shouldst lead me on;
I loved to choose and see my path, but now
Lead thou me on!
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will; remember not past years,
So long thy power hath blessed me, sure it still
Will lead me on;
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone,
And with the morn those angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.

RUSSIAN PRESS ON MCKINLEY.
Leading Dailies Show Deep Sympathy for Nation's Bereavement.
The all-absorbing topic in St. Petersburg has been the death of President McKinley. The tone of the press was uniformly sympathetic with the American people in their bereavement and uniformly just in estimating Mr. McKinley's character. The Novo Vremya says: "He was a man of rare talents and a beloved son of the country for whose welfare he unceasingly and successfully labored." The Svet says: "Let us hope that the death of a talented and energetic president will rouse those lands which for the sake of freedom of conscience and thought harbor 'd'elements and become the breeding grounds for plots to action against the enemies of civilization." The Boerse Gazette says: "Mr. McKinley was one of the most popular figures in American history and one of the best representatives of American ideals. Society is defenseless against the propaganda of murder. It is scarcely probable that means will be found to prevent the repetition of such crimes. The semi-official Journal of Commerce and Industry says: "Mr. McKinley was not an extreme protectionist. Shortly before his death he spoke out against crude 'trust protection."

MOURN MCKINLEY IN BERLIN.
Germans, British and Americans Unite in Memorial Service.
The services of mourning for the death of President McKinley held in the American church in Berlin, Germany, was very impressive. The edifice was heavily hung with crapes and crowded with Germans, British and Americans. Among those who attended was Baron Von Richthofen, German minister of foreign affairs, United States Ambassador White, Mr. Jackson, secretary of the United States embassy; Mr. Mason, United States consul general in Berlin, and the members of the family of Commander Bessler, the United States naval attaché. The papers treat of the death of Mr. McKinley, the anarchist danger, and the political outlook under Mr. Roosevelt. The Kreuz Zeitung describes him as anti-German in his sympathies, but otherwise gives him credit

THE BARBAROUS PEOPLE SHOWED US NO LITTLE KINDNESS.—Acts xxviii: 2
Kindness in Action the Greatest of Virtues.
[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]
Washington, Sept. 22.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage commends the spirit of amity and good feeling and mentions illustrious examples of that spirit; text, Acts xxviii, 2, "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Here we are on the island of Malta, another name for Melita. This island, which has always been an important commercial center, belonging at different times to Phoenicia, to Greece, to Rome, to Arabia, to Spain, to France, now belongs to England. The area of the island is about 100 square miles. It is in the Mediterranean sea and of such clarity of atmosphere that Mount Aetna, 150 miles away, can be distinctly seen. The island is gloriously memorable because the Knights of Malta for a long while ruled there, but more famous because of the apostolic shipwreck. The bestormed vessel on which Paul sailed had "laid to" on the starboard tack, and the wind was blowing east-northeast, and the vessel drifting probably a mile and a half an hour, she struck at what is now called St. Paul's bay. Practical sailors have taken up the Bible account and decided beyond controversy the place of the shipwreck. But the island, which has so rough a coast, is for the most part a garden. Richest fruits and a profusion of honey characterized it in Paul's time as well as now. The finest oranges, figs and olives grow there.

When Paul and his comrades crawled up on the beach, saturated and hungry from long abstinence from food and chilled to the bone, the islanders, though called barbarians because they could not speak Greek, opened their doors to the shipwrecked unfortunates. Everything had gone to the bottom of the deep, and the barefooted, bareheaded apostle and ship's crew were in a condition to appreciate hospitality. About twenty-five such men a few years ago I found in the life station near East Hampton, Long Island. They had got ashore in the night from the sea, and not a hat or shoe had they left. They found out, as Paul and his fellow voyagers found out, that the sea is the roughest of all robbers. My text finds the ship's crew ashore on Malta and around a hot fire drying themselves and with the best provision the islanders can offer them. And they go into government quarters for three days to recuperate, Publius, the ruler, inviting them, although he had severe sickness in the house at that time, his father down with a dangerous illness. Yea, for three months they staid on the island watching for a ship and putting the hospitalities of the islanders to a severe test. But it endured the test satisfactorily and it is recorded for all the ages of time and eternity to read and hear in regard to the inhabitants of Malta, "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Comes Next to Lincoln.
Rev. William B. Leach, pastor of Wicker Park Methodist Episcopal church in Chicago, held memorial services Sunday morning. The church was appropriately decorated. Dr. Leach said: "The nation hides her face today in sorrow and shame. Sorrow because the greatest and best loved of all her sons lies cold in death at a time when we could least spare him. Shame that in this 'land of liberty' guaranteeing to all 'life, liberty and happiness,' there could be such a thing as an anarchist plot summarized into assassination. Today our hearts are sobbing out our love, our sympathy, our regret. Love for the noble man, sympathy for the bereaved wife, regret for the nation. Never since Lincoln did God make a man better fitted for the place than McKinley. Never a man so loved because he was not of caste or class, but from and for the people. Loyal to his God, he could not be otherwise than loyal to manhood, to home and to his country. Great as soldier and statesman, he was greater still as the exemplar of Christian life and citizenship."

Victoria Flags Half Masted.
Flags all over the city of Victoria are flying at half mast, and many business places and offices are draped in mourning as a mark of respect to the late President McKinley. At Esquimaux, the headquarters of the British navy on the Pacific, the American flag was flying at half mast from the cruiser Warspite, the flagship of Admiral Bickford, and in many ways the residents of the city showed their grief at the death of the president. Abraham Smith, the United States consul, has been the recipient of many expressions of condolence from citizens of all classes which were collectively transmitted by him to his government.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"THE SPIRIT OF AMITY" LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"The Barbarous People Showed Us No Little Kindness."—Acts xxviii: 2
Kindness in Action the Greatest of Virtues.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]
Washington, Sept. 22.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage commends the spirit of amity and good feeling and mentions illustrious examples of that spirit; text, Acts xxviii, 2, "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Here we are on the island of Malta, another name for Melita. This island, which has always been an important commercial center, belonging at different times to Phoenicia, to Greece, to Rome, to Arabia, to Spain, to France, now belongs to England. The area of the island is about 100 square miles. It is in the Mediterranean sea and of such clarity of atmosphere that Mount Aetna, 150 miles away, can be distinctly seen. The island is gloriously memorable because the Knights of Malta for a long while ruled there, but more famous because of the apostolic shipwreck. The bestormed vessel on which Paul sailed had "laid to" on the starboard tack, and the wind was blowing east-northeast, and the vessel drifting probably a mile and a half an hour, she struck at what is now called St. Paul's bay. Practical sailors have taken up the Bible account and decided beyond controversy the place of the shipwreck. But the island, which has so rough a coast, is for the most part a garden. Richest fruits and a profusion of honey characterized it in Paul's time as well as now. The finest oranges, figs and olives grow there.

When Paul and his comrades crawled up on the beach, saturated and hungry from long abstinence from food and chilled to the bone, the islanders, though called barbarians because they could not speak Greek, opened their doors to the shipwrecked unfortunates. Everything had gone to the bottom of the deep, and the barefooted, bareheaded apostle and ship's crew were in a condition to appreciate hospitality. About twenty-five such men a few years ago I found in the life station near East Hampton, Long Island. They had got ashore in the night from the sea, and not a hat or shoe had they left. They found out, as Paul and his fellow voyagers found out, that the sea is the roughest of all robbers. My text finds the ship's crew ashore on Malta and around a hot fire drying themselves and with the best provision the islanders can offer them. And they go into government quarters for three days to recuperate, Publius, the ruler, inviting them, although he had severe sickness in the house at that time, his father down with a dangerous illness. Yea, for three months they staid on the island watching for a ship and putting the hospitalities of the islanders to a severe test. But it endured the test satisfactorily and it is recorded for all the ages of time and eternity to read and hear in regard to the inhabitants of Malta, "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

A Magnificent Word.
Kindness! What a great word that is! It would take a reed as long as that which the apocalyptic angel used to measure heaven to tell the length, the breadth, the height of that magnificent word. It is a favorite Bible word, and it is early launched in the book of Genesis, caught up in the book of Ruth, sworn by in the book of Samuel, crowned in the book of Psalms and enthroned in many places in the New Testament. Kindness! A word no more gentle than mighty. I expect it will wrestle me down before I get through with it. It is strong enough to throw an archangel. But it will be well for us to stand around it and warm ourselves by its glow as Paul and his fellow voyagers stood around the fire on the island of Malta, where the Maltese made themselves immortal in my text by the way they treated their victims of the sea. "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Kindness! All definitions of that multipotent word break down half way. You say it is clemency, benignity, generosity; it is made up of good wishes; it is an expression of beneficence; it is a contribution to the happiness of others. Some one else says, "Why, I can give you a definition of kindness; it is sunshine of the soul; it is affection perennial; it is a climacteric grace; it is the combination of all graces; it is compassion; it is the perfection of gentleness and womanliness." Are you all through? You have made a dead failure in your definition. It cannot be defined, but we all know what it is, for we have all felt its power. Some of you may have felt it as Paul felt it, on some coast of rock as the ship went to pieces, but more of us have again and again in some awful stress of life had either from earth or heaven hands stretched out which "showed us no little kindness."

The Grace of Forgiveness.
But are you waiting and hoping for some one to be bankrupt or exposed or discomfited or in some way overthrown then kindness has not taken possession of your nature. You are wrecked on a Malta where there are no oranges. You are entertaining a guest so unlike kindness that kindness will not come and dwell under the same roof. The most exhausting and unhealthy and ruinous spirit on earth is a revengful spirit or retaliating spirit, as I know by experience, for I have tried it for five or ten minutes at a time. When some mean thing has been done me or said about me, I have felt: "I will pay him in his own coin. I will show him up. The ingrate! The traitor! The liar! The villain!" But five or ten minutes of the feeling has been so unnerveing and exhausting I have abandoned it, and I cannot understand how people can go about torturing themselves five or ten or twenty years, trying to get even with somebody. The only way you will ever triumph over your enemies is by forgiving them and wishing them all good and no evil. As malevolence is the most uneasy and profitless and dangerous feeling, kindness is the most healthful and delightful. And this is not an abstraction. As I have tried a little of the retaliatory feeling, so I have tried a little of the forgiving. I do not want to leave this world until I have taken vengeance upon every man that ever did me a wrong by doing him a kindness. In most of such cases I have already succeeded, but there are a few malignants whom I am yet pursuing, and I shall not be content until I have in some wise helped them or benefited them or blessed them.

Rare Flower from Royal Garden.
The king of Prussia had presented to him by the empress of Russia the root of a rare flower, and it was put in the royal gardens on an island, and the head gardener, Herr Fintelman, was told to watch it. And one day it put forth its glory. Three days of every week the people were admitted to these gardens, and a young man, probably not realizing what a wrong thing he was doing, plucked this flower and put it in his buttonhole, and the gardener arrested him as he was crossing at the ferry and asked the king to throw open no more his gardens to the public. The king replied: "Shall I deny to the thousands of good people of my country the privilege of seeing this garden because one visitor has done wrong? No; let them come and see the beautiful grounds." And when the gardener wished to give the king the name of the offender who had taken the royal flower he said, "No, my memory is very tenacious, and I do not want to have in my mind the name of the offender lest it should hinder me granting him a favor some other time." Now, I want you to know that kindness is a royal flower, and blessed be God, the king of mercy and grace, that by a divine gift, and not by perishing, we may pluck this royal flower and not wear it on the outside of our nature, but wear it on our soul and wear it forever, its radiance and aroma not more wonderful for time than wonderful for eternity.

after awhile cried to his horses, "Ho!" and said to the gentlemen, "I must go back and help that hog out of the mire." And he did go back and put on solid ground that most uninteresting quadruped. That was the spirit that was manifested by my departed friend, Hon. Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia—and loverlier man never exchanged earth for heaven—when at Washington. A senator's wife, who told us of the circumstances, said to him, "Mr. Stephens, come and see my dead canary bird." And he answered, "No; I could not look at the poor thing without crying." That is the spirit which last night ten thousand mothers showed to their sick children coming to give the drink at the tenth call as cheerfully and as tenderly as at the first call.

Suppose all this assemblage and all to whom these words shall come by printer's type should resolve to make kindness an overarching, undergirding and all-pervading principle of their life and then carry out the resolution. Why in six months the whole earth would feel it. People would say, "What is the matter? It seems to me that the world is getting to be a better place to live in. Why, life after all is worth living. Why, there is Shylock, my neighbor, has withdrawn his lawsuit of foreclosure against that man, and because he has had so much sickness in his family he is going to have the house for one year rent free. There is an old lawyer in that young lawyer's office, and do you know what he has gone in there for? Why, he is helping to fix up a case which is too big for the young man to handle, and the white-haired attorney is hunting up previous decisions and making out a brief for the boy. Do you know that a strange thing has taken place in the pulpit, and all the old ministers are helping the young ministers, and all the old doctors are helping the young doctors, and the farmers are assisting each other in gathering the harvest, and for that farmer who is sick the neighbors have made a 'bee,' as they call it, and they have all turned in to help him get his crops into the garner? And they tell me that the older and more skillful reporters who have permanent positions on papers are helping the young fellows who are just beginning to try and do not know exactly how to do it. And after a few erasures and interpolations on the reporter's pad they say, 'Now, here is a readable account of the tragedy; hand it in, and I am sure the managing editor will take it.'"

New Dispensation of Geniality.
My hearers, you know and I know we are far from that state of things. But why not inaugurate a new dispensation of geniality. If we cannot have a millennium on a large scale, let us have it on a small scale and under our own vestments. Kindness! If this world is ever brought to God, that is the thing that will do it. You cannot fret the world up, although you may fret the world down. You cannot scold it into excellence or reformation or godliness.

The east wind and the west wind were one day talking with each other, and the east wind said to the west wind: "Don't you wish you had my power? Why, when I start they hail me by storm signals all along the coast. I can twist off a ship's mast as easily as a cow's hoof cracks an alder. With one sweep of my wing I have strewn the coast from Newfoundland to Key West with parted ship timber. I can lift and have lifted the Atlantic ocean. I am the terror of all invalidism, and to fight me back forests must be cut down for fires, and the mines of continents are called on to feed the furnaces. Under my breath the nations crouch into sepulchers. Don't you wish you had my power?" said the east wind. The west wind made no answer, but started on its mission, coming somewhere out of the rose hovers of the sky, and all the rivers and lakes and seas smiled at its coming. The gardens blossomed and the orchards ripened, and the wheatfields turned their silver into gold, and joy clapped its hands, and joy shouted from the hillsides, and the nations lifted their foreheads into the light, and the earth had a doxology for the sky, and the sky an anthem for the earth, and the warmth and sparkle and the gladness, and the foliage, and the flowers, and the fruits, and the beauty, and the life were the only answer the west wind made to the insolence of the east wind's interrogation.

And while we take this matchless kindness from God may it be found that we have uttered our last bitter word, written our last cutting paragraph, done our last retaliatory action, felt our last revengful heart throb. And it would not be a bad epitaph for any one of us, by the grace of God, from this time forth we lived such a beneficent lives that the tombstone's chisel could appropriately cut upon the plain slab that marks our grave a suggestion from the text, "He showed us no little kindness." But not until the last child of God has got ashore from the earthly storms that drove him on the rocks like Mediterranean Euroclydons, not until all the thrones of heaven are mounted, and all the conquerors crowned, and all the harps and trumpets and organs of heaven are thrummed or blown or sounded and the ransomed of all climes and ages are in full chorus under the jubilant swing of angelic baton, and we shall for thousands of years have seen the river from under the throne rolling into the "sea of glass mingled with fire," and this world we now inhabit a stretch of far in the past that only a stretch of celestial memory can recall that it ever existed at all, not until then will we understand what Nehemiah calls "the great kindness," and David calls "the marvelous kindness," and Isaiah calls "the everlasting kindness" of God.

Furthermore, there is kindness of action. That is what Joseph showed to his outrageous brothers. That is what David showed to Mephibosheth for his father Jonathan's sake. That is what Onesiphorus showed to Paul in the Roman penitentiary. That is what William Cowper recognized when he said he would not trust a man who would with his foot needlessly crush a worm. That is what our assassinated President Lincoln demonstrated when his private secretary found him in the capitol grounds trying to get a bird back to the nest from which it had fallen, and which quality the illustrious man exhibited years before when, having with some lawyers in the carriage on the way to court passed on the road a swine fast in the mire, CATAFALQUE IN THE NATIONAL CAPITOL USED FOR THE THIRD TIME FOR A STRICKEN PRESIDENT.

the gathered harvest. McKinley, the man and the statesman, had passed through the same portals of the old railroad station perhaps a thousand times in the last forty years. His first coming was as a boy soldier, and then he came as a legislator and governor, and finally as President-elect of the United States. That was on March 2, 1897. It was a perfect spring day, with budding trees, spring flowers, and singing birds. It was early morning when a magnificent train, covered with fluttering flags, swept along the historic Potomac and into the Pennsyl-

Phebe Dubois died at her home in Central Lake, Monday morning, Sept. 10th, at one o'clock, after a short illness of less than three days. Death was caused by neuralgia of the stomach.

About a year ago deceased underwent an operation for appendicitis and has been illing more or less since but nothing serious was apprehended, so her death was a severe shock to her relatives here. The remains, accompanied by her husband, arrived the following Monday evening. The funeral was held at the Baptist Church on Wednesday afternoon. Between seventy and eighty mourners followed the remains to their last resting place. Elder Harper preached a very appropriate and impressive sermon. The Beverley, Wilmot and Hart schools were closed on account of the funeral. Phebe, daughter of E. J. and Elizabeth Hart, was born in the township of Kingston thirty years ago last May; in '89 was married to Henry Legg. Four years later she was left a widow, and in '97 she married Clarence Dubois, who is left to mourn, also an only child, Harry Legg, aged eleven years, a father and mother, two sisters (Miss Edna and Mrs. Arthur Legg), also two brothers, Herman and Charlie. Both brothers are living in Montana and could not get word in time to come home to the funeral.

We extend congratulations if it is late.

Stood Death off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brotne was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malarial, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. The Gallant Cabman.

Nothing perhaps produces quite so much wit from a cabman as a sense of being underpaid, which in most cases means that he has been justly paid. A lady who had been guilty of this kind of justice experienced the usual sense of discomfort when her driver straightened the palm into which she had just dropped her shilling and looked at her speechlessly. She was weakly about to add another sixpence when the cabby's sense of humor prevailed. He transferred the shilling to his pocket and smiled brightly at her in his embarrassed face. "Course, missy," he remarked, "there was the pleasure of drivin' you!"—London Chronicle.

Geo. W. Lane, Pawamo, Mich., writes: "Your Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the best remedy for indigestion and stomach trouble that I ever used. For years I suffered from dyspepsia at times compelling me to stay in bed and causing me untold agony, I am completely cured by Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. In recommending it to friends who suffer from indigestion I always offer to pay for it if it fails. This is the first I have never paid." T. H. Fritz, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Mr. G. A. Stillman, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "Foley's Kidney Cure is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face to-day is a living picture of health, and Foley's Kidney Cure has made it such." T. H. Fritz, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Local Happenings.

S. O. Sharrard, of Canboro, was in town on Saturday, and informs us that in the notice regarding the death of John Inglesby, his age was incorrectly given. He was eighty-six years of age the 3rd of Aug. Deceased assisted in the working of the famous "underground railroad," in his early days and then resided in Ohio. His father was a strong abolitionist.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the P. O. at Cass City, Mich., for the week ending Sept. 21, 1901: Miss Lizzie Shyber, Alfred Collison, Elmer Darling, Mrs. L. A. Brown, Mrs. Edith McCrea, Mrs. Chas. Young, Mrs. Maggie Honeywell, Miss Kate Smith, Mrs. Annis McDonald, H. Armstrong. When calling for above please mention advertised. H. S. Wickware, postmaster.

It is quite generally understood that Port Huron parties have nearly perfected a deal whereby the pea harvest factory, which has been so successfully operated here for the past three seasons, will be moved to Port Huron. Messrs. W. J. Campbell, Henry Wettlaufer, Sam F. and John A. Benkelman expect to sell their interest in the concern and W. E. Ratz will probably retain his interest and go to Port Huron. We are sorry to lose the industry and hope the building may be utilized for something else of the kind which may assist in building up our town.

Marshall Ramsay had to devote no small amount of his time on Friday to looking after traps and loafers. One old gent who had recently drawn his pension had evidently done his best to spend it all in intoxicants and became re-insulting and abusing, so that he had to be put behind the bars for a few hours. A young man was soliciting aid, claiming to be hard up because of a broken arm, but on investigation he proved to be a fake, and he soon got out of town when the swindle was shown up. A couple more were engaged in selling cheap glasses but when the Marshall warned them to leave town they took his advice and left.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Michigan, Mo., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning," writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at T. H. Fritz's Drug Store, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

A Certain Cure for Dysentery and Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was one of a party that intended making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Laceyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold at Bond's, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

FACTS FOR SICK PEOPLE.

MAY 11, 1901.

I was suffering from general paralysis as a result of diphtheria. I had treated with the best physicians of Tuscola Co., with no benefit; in fact I grew worse under their treatment. I was entirely incapacitated for work when I consulted the Detroit Clinic at Vassar; on March 13th; two months' treatment has completely cured me, and I am able to do my work. I advise any one suffering from chronic diseases to consult this clinic.

(Signed) JOHN F. ALLEN,
Vassar, Mich.

Mrs. Grant McConnell, of Cass City, Mich., had a large growth of a cancerous nature growing on the inside of the mouth. It had been removed several times, but always returned. She had it removed by the surgeon of the Detroit Clinic, and without the use of a knife and with no pain; it was permanently removed in less than 30 days.

I have been growing deaf in both ears for the past six years as a result of La Grippe. I consulted the Detroit Clinic during their monthly visit to Cass City in January, and one month's treatment restored my hearing so that I could hear a watch tick five inches from my ear.

(Signed) JOHN HORNBER,
Novesta, Mich.

For 10 years I was a terrible sufferer from chronic rheumatism. I did everything possible, but found no relief, until I commenced treatment with the Detroit Clinic. Three months of their treatment cured me.

(Signed) C. C. JONES,
Rochester, Mich.

Mrs. L. C. Smith, of Detroit, was cured of Epilepsy (or fits) after having had this terrible disease for seven years.

The great success with which the Clinic treats all kinds of diseases is the wonder and admiration of all scientific men. The specialist in charge is noted for his skill, and the care with which every case is treated. No case that is not curable will be treated, but curable cases are treated with the latest scientific methods, and in no case does it interfere with the work of the patient.

Remember, it costs you nothing to consult this specialist, such an opportunity does not offer itself very often to people outside of large cities, and our citizens will certainly do well to take advantage of this one. It is best to consult the specialist personally, but question blanks will be sent on application, and all communications will receive prompt attention, if they are addressed to

The Scourge of Damascus

A Story of the East...
By SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

Copyrighted 1891 by Robert Bonner's Sons.

And thus was the work accomplished; and with a result not to be wondered at. The Arabs had been brave enough over their rich prizes, but they had lacked the sinew and force of the attacking party. In fact, upon foot, hand to hand, and front to front, either Julian or his lieutenant might have been a match for half of them.

"Those two rascals are not worth pursuing," said our hero, as he noticed that Hobaddan was looking after the fleeing Arabs. "Let them go. We have gained all we sought."

After this Julian turned towards the females. Ulin saw him coming, and, with no thought save that of tenderest gratitude, she moved forward to meet him.

"Heaven bless you, kind sir!" she said, as she extended to him her hand.

"Sweet lady," returned the chieftain, fervently, "talk not of blessings to me. Let me be the one to call down blessings. I know to whom I owe my life and my liberty. Hobaddan has told me all. Oh, let me bear ever with me the blessed privilege of remembering these in my prayers to God!"

"Tears gathered in the eyes of the maiden, and her lips trembled; and when she spoke her voice betrayed the deep emotion that stirred her soul.

"Indeed, fair sir," she said, with her hand still resting in his, "you should not deny to me the privilege which you claim for yourself. If you can feel pleasure in cherishing a holy gratitude, I can feel the same. When I remember the dreadful fate to which the Arabs had doomed me, I cannot forget the blessings which are due to the kind power that delivered me."

"As you please, lady," replied Julian, letting go her hand. "The thought that thou art blessing me will be a blessing indeed. And here is our fair Albia," he continued, turning to the bondmaid—and a close observer might have seen that he thus turned in order to subdue emotions that, rising to trouble him, "I do not forget that some blessing belongs to you."

"I have served my mistress," said Albia, modestly. And then, perceiving that a change of subject would be a relief to both parties, she added, "We owe you so much, sir, that you will be forced to accept my grateful blessings with those of my lady. And now, if I may dare to interrupt you, will you tell us how you chanced to discover us?"

"It was very simple, lady," replied Julian, directing his answer to the princess; "and though seemingly an accident, still I cannot help thinking that some kind spirit must have superintended the work. When we left Damascus we took a course slightly different from this; but on the way we met a poor traveler who informed us that he had been robbed. He did not tell us that the robbers were Arabs, and I fancied that they might be some of my own people. Fearing this, I determined to follow them. Their course was a crooked one, and when I finally reached the grove of date-palms, I had made up my mind to search no more. We were asleep in the grove, and Osmir awoke just as a party of horsemen were leaving the spring. He ran out and discovered that the strangers were Arabs, and that they had two females with them."

The chieftain directed the slaves to drag the bodies of the dead Arabs together, and take from them the gold and jewels which had been taken from the princess, and then to cover them up in the sand; after which he requested Hobaddan to examine his wound. It seemed to be but a slight puncture, just below the collar bone, upon the left side, and as it was bleeding but slightly, Julian concluded not to have it probed. A simple compress stanching the blood, and it was thought that there could be no danger.

When the slaves had done their work, the chieftain approached our heroine, and asked her whether she wished to go.

"I will see you safe to your journey's end," he said, "even though it be to the gates of Damascus."

"I go not that way, sir," she replied. "I wish to find the cave of an old hermit named Ben Hadad."

Julian started as he heard this; but he quickly recovered himself.

"Do you know that old man?" he asked.

protection, if need be, with all the power I possess; and I assure you that our good Ben Hadad will join me with all his heart. You did right in fleeing from the wicked king. I know him well, lady; and I believe you have not only saved yourself from an unhappy fate, but you have saved Horam from committing more crime. Thus much we understand; and now, my dear Ulin, if I may venture upon the inquiry, what do you propose to do in the future?"

"My thoughts in that direction have been vague and troublesome," replied the princess. She spoke frankly, for Ezebel had won her entire confidence. "I have reflected upon the subject, and my mind has found but one resting place. I must remain away from Damascus until the king is dead. I can think of nothing more. Where I abide I care not, so long as I am safe from harm."

The princess fell upon the woman's neck and blessed her; and after a little time she became calm, and wiped the grateful tears from her face. Her next question was of Julian. Had he yet left the cave?"

"No," replied Ezebel; "nor will he leave it at present! He is wounded in the breast, and—"

"Wounded!" repeated Ulin, catching suddenly at the word, and turning pale. "Is it dangerous?"

"No, not dangerous, lady; but he must have rest and nursing. It is more serious than he at first thought; but if he is careful, there will be no danger."

"Oh," cried the maiden, in a tone of relief, "I am glad it is not dangerous. If he had suffered on my account, the joy of my escape from Horam would have been sadly darkened."

CHAPTER XVIII.
Ezebel bowed her head, and pressed her hands upon her brow. There was certainly some deep and sudden emotion moving within her, for her frame trembled, and incoherent whisperings fell from her lips.

"Julian will not suffer," she said, when she at length raised her head. "Ben Hadad has examined his wound, and it can be easily healed."

"You have known Julian for some time," pursued Ulin, musingly.

"Yes, I have known him from childhood, and my son has been his constant companion."

"Your son?"

"Ah—perhaps you did not know that Hobaddan was my son."

"I did not."

"Well—such is the fact. Hobaddan is my only child. He was a strong youth, with the stature of manhood, while yet Julian was an infant; and from those early years the two have been always together. In the beginning Hobaddan was the guide and protector; but in later years, since Julian has reached the age and strength of maturity, my son has been content to call him master."

Julian is much feared in Damascus," said Ulin.

"The king fears him," returned Ezebel, quickly; "and he has occasion for fear; but no poor man fears him. However, I will not take it upon myself to excuse Julian's faults. He may have sinned; he may have pursued his revenge too far. Let those who have suffered what he has suffered condemn him if they can."

"He has suffered much, good mother."

"More than I can tell, my child."

"He is of Damascus born?"

"Yes."

"And—perhaps—of honored family?"

"The blood which runs in his veins is as pure and noble as ever supported a human life. The king himself cannot boast a nobler origin; and," continued Ezebel, with startling earnestness, "and even now, with the whole story of his life up to this present hour, stamped upon his brow, he is nobler, and better, and purer, than the lords of Damascus. He is a man, and his heart is true; and I love him for the generous, devoted love there is in his soul."

NOTES ON SCIENCE.

CURRENT NOTES OF DISCOVERY AND INVENTION.

The Cause and Cure of Nervousness.—The Invention of Toys—The Primitive Mode of Irrigation Practiced in India.

NERVOUSNESS.
What may be called a minor degree of neurasthenia is the indefinite condition called "nervousness." Sufferers from it are not incapacitated for business or social duties, nor are they seriously ill, like the confirmed neurasthenic, yet their existence is often a pitiable one. They are restless and unable to fix the mind on any subject, sleep is disturbed, and often there is an indefinable fluttering sensation within the chest.

They may have a good appetite and not feel ill physically. And herein lies their greatest danger, for they persuade themselves that all they need is a nerve tonic of some sort, or a little stimulant, and they do this with various advertised remedies, one after another, or begin to drink a little wine or spirits.

The stimulation makes them feel better for a time, but the inevitable reaction comes, when they feel worse than before, and run again and again to the bottle of "tonic," or drink until they become confirmed drug-takers or dram-drinkers—and which is worse it would be hard to say.

The fatal mistake which these persons make is in assuming that they are not ill physically, but only "nervous." In almost every such case a careful examination by a physician will bring to light disorder of some organ, and show that the patient is physically ill and should be treated accordingly. It is not nerve tonics or stimulants that he needs, but a course of medical treatment—dietetic, hygienic, and perhaps medicinal.

In the majority of cases it will be found that the digestion is at fault. There may be no evident symptoms of dyspepsia—no nausea, distress after eating, or eructations—yet the food may be scarcely digested at all. The stomach does its work, perhaps, in the preliminary digestion of the food, but the latestness, where the assimilation of nutriment is, or should be, effected, are at fault.

The food is not elaborated into such shape that it can be taken up by the lacteal vessels and carried to the nerve and other structures that need constant renewing, and so the tissues suffer from partial starvation.

Furthermore, the imperfect intestinal digestion results in the manufacture of various poisons which are absorbed and cause a morbid condition of the nervous system.

Treatment should be directed to the intestinal trouble and not to the "nervousness," which will speedily disappear when once the causal condition has been cured.

INVENTION OF TOYS.

In the accompanying picture is represented a new toy, the component parts of which are a parachute, a stick and a weighted figure. On the stick is a moveable link and from this link the weighted figure is suspended by means of a socket which holds it in correct position when the parachute is projected. The movement of the link is limited, a cross pin and loop near the lower end of the stick preventing it from descending too far.

Those who know how a parachute works will readily see that much fun can be obtained from a toy of this kind. The device, too, is so constructed that it cannot easily get out of order, and hence, if only ordinary care be taken of them, the parachute and the running little figure below it will do good service for a long time.

INDIVIDUALITY OF A CHILD.

Children Derive Many Traits from Their Faraway Ancestry.
No two children, even in the same household, are alike. Twins, born in the same hour, and externally bearing resemblances which possess such close resemblance that strangers do not know the little ones apart, are often very dissimilar in disposition and mental traits. Who can tell what peculiarities, derived from some faraway ancestor—a little child has inherited? This wee maiden, unlike either parent, may be repeating in her temperament, her looks, and her ways a reversion from the earth. Each mother for each child needs to make a special study, and she need not be surprised to find herself so often baffled and at her wits' end to solve certain problems, and to manage in certain unpuzzled mothers. Of one thing the mother may be very sure, and that is that time is well spent which is devoted to the intelligent understanding of what is really for her child's good.

The little one whose life is ruled according to fixed hours, who is cared for wisely and nourished on the best food, who has plenty of sleep, plenty of fresh air, the right kind of clothing, is kept free from excitements and disturbances, and ensphered in an atmosphere of tender love, will thrive and grow, and show in every movement the happiness of his environment and the enormous vessel has been filled

NERVOUSNESS.
What may be called a minor degree of neurasthenia is the indefinite condition called "nervousness." Sufferers from it are not incapacitated for business or social duties, nor are they seriously ill, like the confirmed neurasthenic, yet their existence is often a pitiable one. They are restless and unable to fix the mind on any subject, sleep is disturbed, and often there is an indefinable fluttering sensation within the chest.

They may have a good appetite and not feel ill physically. And herein lies their greatest danger, for they persuade themselves that all they need is a nerve tonic of some sort, or a little stimulant, and they do this with various advertised remedies, one after another, or begin to drink a little wine or spirits.

The stimulation makes them feel better for a time, but the inevitable reaction comes, when they feel worse than before, and run again and again to the bottle of "tonic," or drink until they become confirmed drug-takers or dram-drinkers—and which is worse it would be hard to say.

The fatal mistake which these persons make is in assuming that they are not ill physically, but only "nervous." In almost every such case a careful examination by a physician will bring to light disorder of some organ, and show that the patient is physically ill and should be treated accordingly. It is not nerve tonics or stimulants that he needs, but a course of medical treatment—dietetic, hygienic, and perhaps medicinal.

In the majority of cases it will be found that the digestion is at fault. There may be no evident symptoms of dyspepsia—no nausea, distress after eating, or eructations—yet the food may be scarcely digested at all. The stomach does its work, perhaps, in the preliminary digestion of the food, but the latestness, where the assimilation of nutriment is, or should be, effected, are at fault.

The food is not elaborated into such shape that it can be taken up by the lacteal vessels and carried to the nerve and other structures that need constant renewing, and so the tissues suffer from partial starvation.

Furthermore, the imperfect intestinal digestion results in the manufacture of various poisons which are absorbed and cause a morbid condition of the nervous system.

Treatment should be directed to the intestinal trouble and not to the "nervousness," which will speedily disappear when once the causal condition has been cured.

Women and Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, men—that is the order of a woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will let her health get a coveted gem then she is not only robbing herself of the consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at Fritz's Drug Store, Cass City; or Francis Drug Store, Kingston. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

Seeking Information.

MR. PRESIDENT, DIRECTORS AND STOCK-HOLDERS OF THE CASS CITY FAIR ASSOCIATION:

Gentlemen: Is it true that Secretary Ale is the back-bone sinews and the whole push of the fair association? If he is not, will you please enlighten the undersigned, as to why the Cass City band was turned down, to favor an outside band. We would have asked the Secretary himself this question, but we would have received the same reply that we have had for the past three weeks, namely: "I will let you know tomorrow." Sometime ago our instructor, Mr. Lenzner, had an interview with Mr. Ale, and on the strength of the encouragement which Mr. Ale gave him, we have spared no time and expense in making preparations to furnish music for the association. Mr. Lenzner has spent money from his own pocket, for the benefit of the band and was to play a leading part. We have also engaged three outside players, and uniforms for the whole band, so that we might make a presentable appearance and furnish good music. We offered to play during the fair for $90, furnish a band of fourteen men and pay our own expenses. We also offered to cut this price if necessary, Mr. Ale told us that he wanted a band that could make lots of noise. Is this a compliment for the Caro band? Or does he mean to insinuate that the people of Cass City could not distinguish between noise and music. We have been taught that there was no music in noise. If the Secretary wants noise instead of music, why not get the Turks. Mr. Ale informed us that it was not customary for home bands to furnish music for their respective fairs. Who furnished music for Bad Axe fair? Who furnishes music for the Caro and Elkton fairs? Home talent in every case. He also told our leader, Mr. Bender, at the last moment that he could give us the job if he wanted to. Has any Caroitte a pull on our Secretary, or is he a Cass City man. Signed Cass City Band.
