Better Standards In Education

Some Suggestions as to Methods of Obtaining Them.....

Written for the ENTERPRISE.

CONSCIOUSLY or unconsciously we all have high or low, exalted or abased, standards of life and character. Every person in every profession or calling has his criteria of moral, physical and intellectual life. Without these it would be impossible to determine when a person was right or wrong, good or bad, strong or weak, energetic or indolent, talented or imbecile.

Some teachers have truly high standards but it is evident to one who has investigated the matter that these teachers are a minority, and a large per cent of the majority, if they do not have truly low standards seem to be perfectly satisfied to repose in a low plain of mediocrity, and this is worse than a temporary low standard. An ever-moving standard and ideal is the living teacher's star which allures him forward to heights of success which can never be reached by those school-keepers whose vocabulary contains no such word as "onward." In fact, other things being equal, the success of a school depends upon the standards that the teacher sets and keeps steadily before him.

The reader has, without a doubt, heard the maxim, "Like teacher, like school." This means that if the teacher's standards of beauty, excellence neatness, morality, and intellectuality are high, the pupil's work and his entire demeanor in school and out will be characterized by a degree of decorum, excellence and intellectual thoroughness not otherwise attainable and vice versa.

We, as teachers, are not apt to attach enough importance to our ideals and standards of excellence and at times forget that we teach by every act, word, thought or gesture in school and out, and that our pupils become in a far greater degree than we think just what we are morally and mentally. But I am not a pessimist and am glad to observe that every person interested in education must acknowledge, that the standards and ideals of the mass of teachers are rising and that higher ground morally and intellectually is being taken constantly by the wide-awake, enthusiastic, energetic educator. It is also gratifying to observe that school officers generally are keeping pace with these advancing standards and are more far-sighted with regard to teachers' wages, school apparatus, libraries and other things which tend toward moral and intellectual advancement, than those of days of yore; but, I am pained to relate, however, that in some localities, which are altogether too frequent, inertness, indolence and "mossbackism" are still in the ascendancy. But let us not be disheartened, because, with some of the human race, this seems to be the order of nature and mental dynamite or an intellectual earthquake would produce but little change. After these brief general thoughts on standards and our duty with respect to them, I will divide my subject into: 1st, Better standards in moral education. 2nd, Better standards in intellectual education. 3rd, Better standards in physical education; treating the first two in this paper and reserving the treatment of the third for some future date.

Moral education refers primarily to conscience, which is the principal with every man which shows him the distinction between right and wrong; makes him feel when in his normal condition that he ought to do some things and ought not to do others. Historians tell us that there is hardly a vice which has not in some age or country been approved by public opinion and scarcely a virtue which has not been condemned. Therefore we plainly see that the enlightened conscience is the product of education. But, I fancy I hear some one saying: "What's the matter with our morals? I guess they're all right." Let me call your attention to a few facts. "If the Devil should enter your room to night, undisguised with visible horns and tail, and offer you millions for your soul, you would say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' but when he comes to you in some business transaction and says, 'Do as other people do; no matter if you don't heed conscience this time. It may not be exactly right but every one else does that way; then, perhaps, we sell ourselves for a very small sum." Any civilization is hardly worth the name which has not the sinew and backbone of conscience. You cannot have a house well built, a coat well made, a horse properly shod, a good cup of coffee, your shoes well blacked, or a school well taught, unless the person serving you has conscience and puts it into his work. Why are your tea, coffee, spices, sugar and twenty other things adulterated? Because conscience has become benumbed and seared. One would think that nothing would be sought after as much as an honest man but this is not the case, else why does an honest man, a little slow, get $1,000 per year while a smart (?) man, who will rob you at the first opportunity, gets $5,000?

If the public opinion does not need educating with respect to morals, and if we do not need higher moral standards, why are the crimes of bank defaulters and the like condoned and palliated in such ridiculous manner? If a man steals $5 he is put directly into jail or prison, while if he steals $50,000 people first feel angry with him, then sorry, then compromise, then let him off. I wish to get the idea before you that when we deal with this class of men and criminals in this manner that we are educating our young men and boys to believe that there is but little or no harm in such things.

But to come to the subject more immediately in hand—the moral education of children. We are well aware that children have definite ideas of morality and that their consciences are tender and very sensible to impressions. This being the case, why do not pupils develop in their moral life as rapidly as in physical or even intellectual life? The answer is not far distant and it is of triple origin, that is: Because of the combined faults of parents and children and the indifference of teachers. If a parent had evil passions and pernicious traits of character with which to contend, according to laws of heredity they will crop out in the lives of his children, and he and the various teachers who have the handling of his children, will have the same pernicious traits to overcome in their government. These traits may be hidden from the public eye for a time, perhaps obscured by other traits of character, but they still exist. Although we, as teachers, cannot on account of imperfections in parents make children under our training perfect, yet if we have a high and proper standard of morality and ethics and are constantly aiming towards that, much more will be accomplished than if our instruction is given in a haphazard indifferent manner.

Harsh, uncertain and unreasonable punishments, such as are administered sometimes by parents and teachers, are to be deplored. By these children become estranged from their parents and teachers and as their estrangement is fatal to moral culture, it follows that parents and teachers cannot be too careful in avoiding direct antagonism with their children. If we could and would mete out punishments as Mother Nature does whenever her laws are violated, I am sure we would have a far greater degree of success. If a child puts its finger against the hot stove it is burned, if he does it again it is burned, the third time it is burned, every time it is burned. It is not the harshness or severity of a punishment which deters a child from wrong-doing, but rather the certainty of it. The pupils who suffer nothing more than the evil which obviously and positively follows from their own misbehavior are not likely to think themselves wrongly treated.

Before taking decisive steps towards rules or punishments consider well what you are going to do, weigh all the consequences and consider your firmness of purpose in the matter, and then, if you finally make a law, enforce it uniformly at whatever cost. As we are well aware, manners and morals are very closely connected. If the teacher of young pupils will improve all the opportunities for teaching tidiness, cleanliness, gratitude, forbearance, courtesy and kindness, the moral tone of his school will be very much heightened thereby.

Every teacher is conscious that he can and does every day, by his general character and discipline, and his special treatment of individual cases, exercise a considerable influence over

An Important Industry To Our People.
A Splendidly Equipped Plant.

While we cannot boast of very many industrial institutions, we can justly claim that what we have are well fitted and properly conducted. Among the number, one which merits more than passing mention is the Cass City Laundry, conducted by Chas. L. Robinson. The genial young proprietor has grown up with the town, consequently is well known and is everywhere well thought of. He received his first business training in the Woolen Mills here, of which his father was the early proprietor, and after his decease the management fell upon the son.

About seven years ago, having previously disposed of his interest in the mills, he purchased the Cass City Laundry, which had been started by Jas. Woolley, now of Bad Axe, then located in the apartments now used by A. A. Brian for a restaurant. The steam polisher of the most modern and largest size is used, while fluters and other special machines assist with the fancy work. Ironing tables and boards take up most of the remaining room. A home-devised shirt and clothes press is neatly enclosed at one side. The dry room is of sufficient capacity to dry one hundred and twenty-five shirts in an hour. The bath room opens off the ironing room at the southeast corner, is thoroughly equipped with conveniences and is a public necessity which should be more liberally patronized than it is.

The wash-house is of ample dimensions, has a cement floor and is provided with a steam washer of approved pattern, which will wash one hundred shirts per hour. The engine room is in the basement. A fourteen-horsepower boiler is used, with an engine of business there rapidly developed and larger quarters were necessary. Two years ago Mr. Robinson moved into his present quarters, on Seegar Street, half a block north on Main Street, which he had purchased and had specially fitted for his convenience. Several additions have since been made to the outfit and we will briefly speak of the equipment as it stands now.

The building is 25x80 feet in size and divided into offices, ironing or polishing room, dry room, wash house, engine room, and a well-furnished public bath room. The offices are 18x24 in size, furnished with shelving and counter, office desk and chair, and still leaving an abundance of room. The ironing room is the full width of the building, running back some thirty feet, with the dry room taken off one corner. A adequate power and as Mr. Robinson is an apt mechanic everything connected with the machinery runs like clock work. The whole building is heated with steam and steam is also used for drying purposes.

The institution has a splendid patronage, not only at home but has agencies at Pigeon, Kingston, Tyre and a large amount of work is sent in by individuals from all the country around us. It goes without saying that the work is well done, else this patronage could not be held. It is conducted on the principle that what is worth doing is worth doing well, and the work gives universal satisfaction. May the Cass City Laundry continue to prosper, lightening the labor of the busy housewife and turning out spotless apparel for the "guid mon's" adornment.

ROOF FELL ON HIM.

Henry Liken, pit boss in the J. C. Liken Coal Co's No. 1 mine at Sebewaing was perhaps fatally injured at noon Monday by two and one-half tons of slate roofing falling on him. His left hip is broken and he is badly hurt internally. He had hit the roofing, which appeared unsafe, with his pick to determine its strength, when it fell crushing him against a ledge of coal. He was immediately extricated by fellow miners, hoisted to the surface in an unconscious condition and carried to his home nearby. The result of his injuries at present cannot be determined.

Wild Bullet

Sheriff Kinney and Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Coumans drove from Bay City to Wisner, Tuscola county, Sunday afternoon to take what may prove to be the ante-mortem statement of an Indian known as "Old Bucksot," who has been a guide about the Quannacasse marshes for Bay City sportsmen for many years. Two weeks ago Bucksot started on foot for Bay City, and was given a ride by William Streedwell, a farmer who was coming to town. The Indian sat in the rear of the wagon box, while the farmer occupied the seat.

When passing Vanderbilt's place a dog ran out and began barking at the team. Streedwell undertook to lash him with the whip, but failing, drew a revolver and fired at him. The bullet struck the tire of the wagon wheel and glancing, lodged in the Indian's leg. He was careless of his wound, and may die. No blame is attached to Streedwell, but the authorities decided that it was better for them to investigate the shooting now, in case any question arose after the Indian's death.

HOW IS IT?

The committee of the department of Philanthropy and Reform of the Detroit 20th Century club, who have been engaged for some time in an effort to lessen the cigarette evil, do not believe that the state law forbidding the sale of tobacco or cigarettes to the minors is being enforced. They call attention to the fact that violators are liable to a maximum penalty of $50 fine or 30 days imprisonment.

Act No. 77, of the session laws of 1899, says:

It shall not be lawful for any person by himself, his clerk, or agent, to sell, give, or furnish any cigar, cigarette, cheroot, chewing or smoking tobacco to any minor under 17 years of age, unless upon the written order of parent or guardian of said minor.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE CALL TO GLADNESS, LAST SUNDAY SUBJECT.

Text: Genesis VI: 18: "Come." Also Revelations XXII: 17: "Come"—The Solace of the Christian Faith—Two Things to Believe.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.] Washington, Oct. 20.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage calls all people to gladness and opens all the doors of expectancy; texts, Genesis VI, 18, "Come," Revelations xxii, 17, "Come." Imperial, tender and all persuasive is the word "Come." Six hundred and seventy-eight times it is found in the Scriptures. It stands at the front gate of the Bible, as in my first text, inviting antediluvians into Noah's ark, and it stands at the other gate of the Bible as in my second text, inviting the post-diluvians of all later ages into the ark of a Savior's mercy. "Come" is only a word of four letters, but it is the queen of words, and nearly the entire nation of English vocabulary bows to its scepter. It is an ocean into which empties ten thousand rivers of meaning. Other words drive, but this beckons. All moods of feeling hath that word "Come." Sometimes it weeps and sometimes it laughs. Sometimes it prays, sometimes it tempts, and sometimes it dests. It sounds from the door of the church and from the seraglio of sin, from the gates of heaven and the gates of hell. It is a confidant and a secret of a p.w.r. It is the helms of most of the past and the almoner of most of the future. "Come!" You may pronounce it so that all the heavens will be heard in its cadences or pronounce it so that all the woes of time and eternity shall reverberate in its one syllable. It is on the lip of saint and prodigal. It is the mightiest of all solitaires either for good or bad.

Slain by the Word "Come."
You must remember that in many cases our "Come" has a mightier "Come" to conquer before it has any effect at all. Just give me the accurate census, the statistics of how many are down in fraud, in drunkenness, in gambling, in impurity or in vice of any sort, and I will give you the accurate census or statistics of how many have been slain by the word "Come." "Come and click wings" as with me at this ivory bar. "Come and see what we can win at this gambling table." "Come, enter with me this doubtful speculation!" "Come with me and read those infidel tracts on Christianity." "Come, with me to a place of bad amusement." "Come with me in a gay boat through the underground life of the city." If in this city there are twenty thousand who are down in moral character, then twenty thousand fell under the power of the word "Come." I was reading of a wife whose husband had been overthrown by strong drink, and she went to the saloon where he was ruined, and she said, "Give me back my husband." And the bartender, pointing to a maudlin and battered man drowning in the corner of the barroom, said: "There he is. Jim, wake up; here's your wife come for you." And the woman said: "Do you call that my husband? What have you been doing with him? Is that the manly brow, is that the clear eye, is that the noble heart, that I married? What vile drug have you given him that has turned him into a fiend? Take your tiger claws off of him. Uncoil those serpents of evil habit that are crushing him. Give me back my husband, the one with whom I stood at the altar ten years ago. Give him back to me." Victim was he, as many millions of others have been, of the word "Come!"

Made Right with God.
With that word which has done so much for others I approach you today. Are you right with God? "No," you say, "I think not; I am sometimes alarmed when I think of him; I fear I will not be ready to meet him in the last day; my heart is not right with God." Come then and have it made right. Through the Christ who died to save you, come! What is the use of waiting? The longer you wait the further off you are and the deeper you are down. Strike out for heaven! You remember that a few years ago a steamer called the Princess Alice, with a crowd of excursionists aboard, sank in the Thames, and there was an awful sacrifice of life. A boatman from the shore put out for the rescue, and he had a big boat, and he got it so full of life he would hold another person, and it would hold the oars to pull for the shore, leaving hundreds helpless and drowning, he cried out, "Oh, that I had a bigger boat!" Thank God that I am not thus limited and that I can promise room for all in this gospel boat. Get in; get in! And yet there is room. Room in the heart of a pardoning God. Room in heaven.

There is No Escape.
I also apply this word of my text to those who would like practical comfort. If any ever escape the struggle of life, I have not found them. They are not certainly among the prosperous classes. In most cases there was a struggle all the way up till they reached the prosperity, and since they have reached these heights there have been perplexities, anxieties and crises which were almost enough to shatter the nerves and turn the brain. It would be hard to tell which the biggest fight in this world, the prosperities or the adversities, the conspicuous or the obscure. Just as soon as you have enough success to attract the attention of others the envious and jealousies are let loose from their kennel. The greatest crime that you can commit in the estimation of others is to get on better than they do. They think your addition is their subtraction. Five hundred persons start for a goal of success; one reaches it, and the other four hundred and ninety-nine are mad. It would take volumes to hold the story of the wrongs, outrages and defamations that have come upon you as a result of your success. The warm sun of prosperity brings into life a swamp full of annoying insects. On the other hand, the unfortunate classes have their struggles for maintenance. To achieve a livelihood by one who had nothing to start with, and after awhile for a family as well, and carry this on until children are reared and educated and fairly started in the world, and to do this amid all the rivalries of business and the uncertainty of crops and the fickleness of tariff legislation, with an occasional labor strike and here and there a financial panic thrown in, is a mighty thing to do, and there are hundreds and thousands of such heroes and heroines who live unshriven and die unshriven.

Solace of Christian Faith.
What we all need, whether up or down in life or half way between, is the indefinite solace of the Christian religion. And so we employ the word "Come!" It will take all eternity to find out the number of business men who have been strengthened by the promises of God, and the people who have been fed by the ravens when their resources gave out, and the men and women who, going into this battle armed only with needle or saw or ax or yardstick or pen or type or shovel or shoe last, have gained a victory that made the heavens resound. With all the resources of God promises for every exigency, no one need be left in the lurch.

I like the faith displayed years ago in Drury Lane, London, in a humble home when every particle of food had given out, and a kindly soul entered with tea and other table supplies and found a kettle on the fire ready for tea. The benevolent lady said, "How is it that you have the kettle ready for the tea when you had no tea in the house?" And the daughter of the home said: "Mother would have me put the kettle on the fire, and when I said, 'What is the use of doing so when we have nothing in the house?' she said, 'My child, God will provide; thirty years he has already provided for me through all my pain and helplessness, and he will not leave me to starve at last. He will send us help though we do not yet see how.' We have been waiting all day for something to come, but until we saw you we knew not how it was to come." Such things the world may call coincidences, but I call them Almighty deliverances, and though you do not hear of them they are occurring every hour of every day and in all parts of Christendom.

The World's Dismal Consolation.
What dismal work of condolence the world makes when it attempts to console! The plaster they spread does not stick. The broken bones under their bandage do not knit. A farmer was lost in a snowstorm on a prairie of the far west. Night coming on, and after he was almost frantic from not knowing which way to go his sleigh struck the run of another sleigh, and he said, "I will follow this run, and it will take me out to safety." He hastened on until he heard the bells of the preceding horses; but, coming up, he found that that man was also lost, and, as the tendency of those who are confused in the forest or on the moors, they were both moving in a circle, and the runner of the one lost sleigh was following the runner of the other lost sleigh round and round. At last it occurred to them to look at the north star, which was peering through the night, and by the direction of that star they got home again. Those who follow the advice of this world in time of perplexity are in a fearful round, for it is one bewildered soul following another bewildered soul, and only those who have in such time got their eye on the morning star of our Christian faith can find their way out or be strong enough to lead others with an all persuasive invitation.

One of Wellington's Officers.
On good authority soldiers like best to be officered by gentlemen, but they have their choice of the type. Of the right kind was Gen. Crawford, of the Light Division. An incident in his career during one of the Wellington wars shows him to have been rich in that justice which commands respect from equals and loyalty from inferiors; in a word, he kept discipline without regard to rank. His division was crossing a ford on one of the Spanish marches and an officer, to keep his breeches dry, rode through on a soldier's back. Crawford observed the thing with disgust, and in a minute was splashing through the water after them both. "Put him down, sir!" he shouted. "Put him down!" I desire you to put that officer down instantly! The soldier dropped him and went on. "Return back, sir!" Crawford said to the officer, "and go through the water like the others. I will not allow my officers to ride upon the men's backs through the rivers; all must take their share alike here."—Youth's Companion.

Two Things to Believe.
"But," you say, "there are so many things I have to believe and so many things in the shape of a creed that I have to adopt that I am kept back." No, no! You need believe but two things—namely, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, and that you are one of them. "But," you say, "I do believe both of these things!" Do you really believe them with all your heart? "Yes." Why, then, you have passed from death into life. Why, then, you are a son or a daughter of the Lord Almighty. Why, then, you are an heir or an heiress of an inheritance that will declare dividends from now until long after the stars are dead. Hallelujah! Prince of God, why do you not come and take your coronet? Princess of the Lord Almighty, why do you not mount your throne? Pass up into the light. Your boat is anchored, why do you not go ashore? Just plant your feet down hard, and you will feel under them the Rock of Ages. I challenge the universe for one instance in which a man in the right spirit appealed for the salvation of the gospel and did not get it. Man alive, you are going to let all the years of your life go away with you without your having this great peace, this glorious hope, this bright expectancy? Are you going to let the pearl of great price lie in the dust at your feet because you are too indolent or too proud to stoop down and pick it up? Will you wear the chain of evil habit when near by you is the hammer that could with one stroke snap the shackles? Will you stay in the prison of sin when here is a gospel key that could unlock your incarceration? No, no!

Magie of a Word.
As the one word "Come" has sometimes brought many souls to Christ, I will try the experiment of piling up into a mountain and then send down in an avalanche of power many of these gospel "Comes." "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." "Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Come, for all things are now ready." "Come with us, and we will do you good." "Come and see." "The Spirit and the bride say 'Come,' and let him that is athirst come." The stroke of one bell in a tower may be sweet, but a score of bells well tuned and rightly lifted and skillfully swung in one great chime fill the heavens with music almost celestial. And no one who has heard the mighty chimes in the towers of Amsterdam or Ghent or Copenhagen can forget them. Now, it seems to me that in this Sabbath hour all heaven is chiming, and the voices of departed friends and kindred ring down the sky, saying, "Come!" The angels who never fell, bending from sapphire thrones, are chanting "Come!" Yea, all the towers of heaven, tower of martyrs, tower of prophets, tower of apostles, tower of evangelists, tower of the temple of the Lord God and the Lamb, are chiming, "Come! Come!" Pardon for all and peace for all and heaven for all who will come.

BIG HOTEL'S CAPACITY.
New York Hostelry That Takes Care of Thousands of Guests Daily.
Neither the bigness nor the completeness of a big hotel is appreciated by the patron who finds his interest satisfied with the accommodations which it furnishes. He knows in a general way that it may be a dozen stories high and several cellars deep, and that the thousand or more guests are attended by servants on every hand, and when he pays his bill he believes that the charges are exorbitant.

One of these hotels, which differs from the others chiefly in degree, represents an investment of $150,000. The 1,400 bedrooms and 750 bath rooms in it are so constructed by a series of inner courts that each opens to the outer air. It has several concert halls and theaters, three great ballrooms, and in addition to its public dining room, where, during the horse show week, for instance, 10,000 people are served daily, it has a series of private dining rooms which are arranged for from ten to 1,000 persons. In the largest ball room in this hotel was given one night last winter the charity ball, attended by 3,500 people, to whom supper was served, and on the same evening, in other parts of the hotel, were in progress two concerts, a dinner of an association of 300 men and a dozen smaller dinner parties in private dining rooms, each isolated so completely that no one of the 1,500 regular guests need know of it.—Ainslee's Magazine.

The Barberian as an Inventor.
Among the agricultural exhibits in the Government building at the Pan-American exposition is a display of pressed plants, consisting largely of the kinds least known to farmers, yet of value in some way or other. The exhibit is of value more to the agricultural student than to any other person, yet all farmers should be students of the science by which they make their living. The exhibit in question affords a fine opportunity to become acquainted with the plants that are mentioned more often in our agricultural literature. Not only should the farmers visiting the Pan-American exposition give some time to this exhibit, but fair managers and exposition managers should attempt to secure it after it has done service in its present place or should try to duplicate it, which would not be difficult to do. The exhibit in question consists of the following plants: Hagl, Silky Bush Clover, Scarlet Vetch, Soy Bean, Chickweed, Large Vetch Grass, Red Top, Timothy, Large Rye Grass, Smooth Brome Grass, Sprangle, Bulbous Panic Grass, Alkali Fine Top, Saccaton, Sea

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Points on Tree Planting.
In planning for the arrangement of trees and shrubbery we must assume that space is not limited, that there are some rods of ground at least, about the house to devote to the purpose. And first, because comfort is of primary importance in the home, let there be screens and clumps and belts of evergreens to the north and west as shelter from the piercing winds that blow from those directions. If the house fronts to the south or east, these may be quite near and form not only a needed protection from the chilling blasts, but a pleasing background for small deciduous trees and shrubs. If, however, the house must face either west or north their shelter must be at a greater distance, but there they should be if possible, and in this case a thick screen a little north of east may be very desirable, for all know how marrow-chilling, catarrh-producing and mentally depressing an easterly wind can be. So let us plant trees, preferably evergreens, upon all sides except the south, leaving this space open for the free sweep of southern breezes, which are the prevalent ones in the hottest weather, and so welcome especially at night, and which are mild in cold weather; and also to give free access to sunlight.

We talk of trees and vines for shade, but when we stop to think of it, there is only a small part of the year, seldom more than three months, when sunshine is not a welcome visitor in our houses. Then we will plant our evergreens on the north, east and west, leaving the south for the unobstructed passage of life-giving sunshine and refreshing southern breezes. Having provided for requisite shelter, we may proceed to plant our ornamental trees and shrubs; these may be effectively massed upon the right and left of grounds in front of the house, leaving an open space for lawn directly in front, for after all, is there anything that adds more to the attractiveness of a place than a perfectly graded, well turfed and well kept lawn. The lawn should gradually widen as it approaches the street, the shrubbery massed so that the densest part is near the house, the lighter narrowest next to the street, which should of course be bordered with elms, maples or other trees.

In grouping shrubs be careful to place the taller, more rapid growing ones in the background, the smaller in foreground, as seen from both street and lawn. Occasional handsome shrubs or well cared for flower beds may dot the lawn, but none should hide the house or too much obstruct the view from the front windows or verandas.

Instruction in Wax.
About ten years ago Secretary Brackett of the Iowa State Horticultural Society took up the work of modeling fruit in wax and coloring it to resemble as closely as possible the natural product. This work attracted the attention of the United States Department of Agriculture, which soon found opportunity to place him in Washington at the same work. Since that time he has worked a national reputation, his work being very true to nature. The wax fruits of the department have been on exhibition at several of the large expositions, and have proven valuable objects. They have the advantage over real fruits in that they retain their form and freshness. By this means all varieties of fruit can be shown at any time of year. This is especially valuable in relation to early summer apples, and all the softer fruits which would soon decay if exhibited in a temperature comfortable for human beings. This is a method of instruction that will be much used in the future. The student of pomology must have always at hand the patterns of that with which he wishes to become familiar. It is probable that our state societies will find it profitable to devote each year a small sum to the accumulation of wax models. Ultimately, the use of these will go beyond the bounds of the horticultural societies and agricultural fairs, and will come into use in our high schools, especially those that are centers of the rural population. Also the student that can afford them will find a private collection profitable.

The Barberian as an Inventor.
Among the agricultural exhibits in the Government building at the Pan-American exposition is a display of pressed plants, consisting largely of the kinds least known to farmers, yet of value in some way or other. The exhibit is of value more to the agricultural student than to any other person, yet all farmers should be students of the science by which they make their living. The exhibit in question affords a fine opportunity to become acquainted with the plants that are mentioned more often in our agricultural literature. Not only should the farmers visiting the Pan-American exposition give some time to this exhibit, but fair managers and exposition managers should attempt to secure it after it has done service in its present place or should try to duplicate it, which would not be difficult to do. The exhibit in question consists of the following plants: Hagl, Silky Bush Clover, Scarlet Vetch, Soy Bean, Chickweed, Large Vetch Grass, Red Top, Timothy, Large Rye Grass, Smooth Brome Grass, Sprangle, Bulbous Panic Grass, Alkali Fine Top, Saccaton, Sea

In addition there was a collection of the various kinds of weeds.

An exhibit of this kind, if placed where it can be frequently consulted by the farmer, will do more in the way of instruction as to varieties than whole columns of reading matter. The mind naturally adapts itself to the concrete example, but finds it hard work to grasp the abstract. The department of agriculture is taking the most effective means in its attempt to disseminate knowledge.

Points on Grass.
There have been a good many reports that the rains of late July caused the sprouting of potatoes which had been prematurely ripened by the excessive heat of that month, but which had been allowed to remain in the ground because they were too small to dig. Nature abhors a vacuum, and, encouraged by the moisture, started in on a new crop with the intent of filling the barren hills. If frost is delayed until late in the season and rains are seasonable a fair yield will be returned by some of those obliging potato vines that are working overtime.

Through a fortuitous accident a Minnesota grower has had a chance to rejoice in an earlier and better crop than any of his neighbors. The seed was dropped in furrows according to the old fashioned methods and was then covered by the plow, but more deeply than was intended—so deep, in fact that the grower despaired of ever receiving any reward for his labor. He was a good farmer and found it hard to bear the gibes of other farmers who boasted flourishing vines before his ever appeared above the surface; but he had his revenge, for frost cut those ambitious vines to the ground when his own were but peeping through the mould. They grew steadily, the deep rooting helping them through the dry hot weather when vines of shallower rooting were parched. While the yield per hill was less than usual, the potatoes were large and of fine quality, and as before remarked, earlier than any of their contemporaries.

It is a true saying that the right kind of poultry managed in the right way is profitable. But when we have said that we have given a very wide latitude to the assertion. For in "management" we comprise innumerable questions that must be settled one way or the other and the settlement of which questions has in it the whole question of profit or loss in the transaction. The poultry business is at that point where it takes brains to make money out of it. Brains means not only native intelligence but also a good fund of information and the ability to apply that fund of information to the conditions as they exist in any place. One writer asserts that three times as many people lose money through poultry as make money. How does he know? Has he a list of the people that have tried poultry raising and failed or succeeded? Of course not. It is without doubt true that talking people as a whole make a success than a failure of it. The man that makes the remark quoted doubtless referred to those men that have put large sums of money into the poultry business and made that their one effort in life. If that is his meaning he comes nearer to being right, but it would be mere guessing to say what the proportion is.

Fruit Notes.
Alabama.—Pears and grapes are of good quality.
Arkansas.—Apples have improved in some localities.
Florida.—This state is setting a larger acreage than usual in strawberries.
Georgia.—The peach crop is nearly gone.
Washington.—Apples are small on account of dry weather.
Oregon.—Early apples are scarce. Prunes will yield a fair crop, but the fruit will be small though of good quality.
Kansas.—All eastern counties except Wilson report fruit in good condition. Fruit is fair to good in central counties though it would be benefited by rain.
North Carolina.—The fruit crop appears to be a failure in many localities on account of excess of rain. Apples are dropping and peaches and grapes are rotting. Tomatoes also are rotting badly.
New Jersey.—Excessive rains have caused the cracking of peaches in northern and central counties and there are many complaints of the rotting of plums, grapes and tomatoes. Apples are very scarce.

The Secretary of Agriculture has sent a corps of botanists into the range states for the purpose of investigating poisonous plants with a view of arriving at the most feasible means of their destruction.
A bushel of corn makes four and one-half gallons of spirits, making it cost 13 1/2 cents at 60 cents a bushel for corn. At 45 cents the spirits cost 10 cents, a difference of 3 1/2 cents.

Where Courtesy Is Second Nature.
One of the most attractive features of Swedish life to strangers is the politeness of the children. As soon as a boy is able to stand on his legs he is taught to make a bow and to shake hands, and a little girl must be able to make a bow before she has learned to talk. As soon as the right hand is known from the left it must be offered in greeting or when a gift or favor has been received, and one of the first words learned by the children after "papa" and "mamma" is "tack," the Swedish term for thanks. It is heard more frequently than any other word in the language.

CONFIDENCE

Art thou one of those who borrow Sadness by forecasting sorrow?
When God sends them joy and cheer,
Are the roses which are given
From the flushing brows of Heaven
Blanched and withered by thy fear?
Why thus brood on future sorrow?
Why not trust in God above?
In His hands He holds tomorrow,
In His heart He holds thy love.

In distress and sore affliction,
In your path and dereliction,
Trust in Him whose child thou art,
With kind favors He will bless you,
With great joy He will caress you,
Pillowed on His sacred heart.
He can level mountain sorrow,
Blaze with light the darkest way;
Trust in Him for joy tomorrow
In His arms of grief today.

Teach thy children thus to know Him,
Their sweet confidence to show Him,
Leaning on His cross Divine,
He their little feet will strengthen,
He their days and joys will lengthen,
With far greater love than thine.

Life is not for gloom or sadness,
Fretted mad with anxious fears;
God made us for sunny gladness,
Joy that lives beyond the years.

In the Maryland Hills.

BY LEE ASHLEY.
(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
It was an early December twilight, and snow, which had been rain an hour before, beat against the car windows and stuck there in large, soft flakes.
It followed the conductor in at the door in a sleet gust, and the girl in the third seat shivered and drew the imitation sables closer about her throat.

Steve Patterson glanced from under the visor of his conductor's cap at his one lady passenger. She was not a pretty girl, according to Steve's standards. Her face was too small and pale under the shadow of her big hat.
When she boarded the car two hours earlier there had been an excited brightness in her eyes and a faint color in her cheeks. Now she leaned back against the seat, tired and inert, and there was a pathetic droop at the corners of her mouth. As she glanced up at him shyly Steve thought of a kitten that he had fished out of a horse pond years ago, and he smiled at the comparison as he passed on into the next car.

A little later he came back. The rattle and creaking of the train had stopped.
"Tunnel caved in ahead," he explained to the three men in the front of the car. The he smiled reassuringly at his lady passenger.
"Tain't nothin' to be scared about, Miss," he assured her, sitting down on the arm of the seat opposite. "Just means a-lyin' off here a spell—an' cultivatin' a little patience," he added jocosely as a drummer swung himself out, growling as he went.

The girl smiled, but her eyes were somber.
"Do you reckon we'll get into Philadelphia on time?" she questioned timidly.

Steve shook his head.
"Couldn't make it before 10, miss,
or 11 mebbe. It's a three-hour job, anyhow."

The girl's chin quivered.
"But what'll I do?" she demanded, with a catch in her voice. "Mebbe he won't wait! Mebbe he'll think I ain't comin'! I ain't used to travelin' alone!" and two tears dropped among the fuzzy tails of her collarette.

Steve smiled encouragingly.
"Don't you fret, miss. Your friends
'll wait," he assured her. "They won't take no chance of lettin' a little thing like you get in alone."

But she shook her head.
"I ain't got any friends there—but him," and a wave of color swept up into her face.

Steve had a tender, conscientious heart. He leaned across and laid a large protecting hand on the arm of the opposite seat.
"Is it your brother that's goin' to meet you—or your uncle, mebbe?" he suggested.

She shook her head again. Then suddenly she lifted her wet, childish eyes.
"I'm—I'm runnin' away to get married!" she gasped in tremulous confession. "He said I'd get in at 7—an'
we'd go straight to the preacher's, but now—oh! I wish I hadn't come!"
and she buried her face in her muffs.

Steve crossed over and sat down beside her. Elopements were no novelty to the young conductor; but this pale little girl of 17 or so was a different matter. He patted her slim shoulder with awkward gentleness.

"You tell me about it," he suggested,
"an' mebbe I can help you. I lay off at Philadelphia myself."

After a little she poured out her story, an old one to Steve, but a new and romantic one to the little milliner's apprentice from Smithsburg. Her face brightened in the telling. Her innocent eyes sparkled and she spoke of her lover's fine clothes and city manners with a pretty air of conscious pride.

One Tessie Bickford, the milliner's
"other help," figured largely in the romance. It was she who had arranged the clandestine meetings, and had declared many times that "she'd like to see any step-paw meddlin' in her concerns an' sayin' who she should go with an' who she shouldn't!"

Steve knit his brows as he listened.
How could he tell this innocent, un-such a black night! Your paw 'lowed if you wasn't here by nine he'd get into his gum boots an' go fetch you—spite o' his rheumatiz. He sets a heap o' store by you, your paw does!" she added wistfully. "There ain't a-many makes o' their own girls the way he's always done o' you!"

The girl flushed.
"He's a heap kinder'n he'd oughter be," she sobbed. "Oh, maw!" and she hid her face on the little woman's shoulder.

As Steve opened the door of his boarding house in Philadelphia a jangle of rag-time music greeted him and shrill voices called to him from the little parlor, but he passed on and up the stairs, flinging a jocosé excuse in the direction of the gaudy portieres.

"It's funny how a girl that ain't well, not to say pretty—can make a fellow feel sometimes," he soliloquized, sitting on the edge of his iron bed. "I guess I'll lay off in Smithsburg next vacation. Mebbe a little Maryland air'll be good for my health," and he smiled happily as he pulled off his boots.

WORK FOR IMMIGRATION.
When Viewing Coronets the Public
Fancy Is Busy.

Coronets are a delusion and a snare.
The gold and silver smiths of London are now busy making headresses for the peers who will be present when King Edward is crowned. In popular imagination a peer is supposed to wear his coronet frequently and hang it on his bedpost when he goes to bed. As a matter of fact the majority of peers found, when the subject of the coronet single coronet about the house. So they gave orders for the making of these ornamental appendages to rank and they do not propose to spend much money on them either. Ordinarily a peer can wear jewels in his coronet.
But if a peer not of royal blood appeared before the king with his headpiece gleaming with precious stones nobody knows what would happen;
something awful, no doubt, to the British constitution. Such a catastrophe is averted by wearing on occasions such as a coronation, coronets studded with lozenges of gold to represent diamonds and silver balls to represent pearls. The dukes will have a lot of these little gold lozenges in their coronets and the marquises will call upon those of lesser degree to imagine the little silver balls on the spikes of their official topnots to be pearls of great price. A viscount will demand still more of the populace, for he will have fourteen silver knobs around his coronet and will ask that he be considered as wearing "a circlet of gold enriched with jewels." A really first-class coronet, warranted to wash, like those which are being prepared for the coming coronation of King Edward, can be bought for $73.50. That is said to be the average price which is being paid for them now in London.—New York Press.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin in the South."
Possibly the most general conception of the old life at the south held by the rest of the country is that drawn from Uncle Tom's Cabin, a work which, whatever its truth in detail—and there was doubtless much truth—yet, by reason of its omissions and its grouping, contained even more untruth as a correct picture of a civilization. As an argument against the evils inherent in slavery it was unanswerable; as a presentation of the life it undertook to mirror it was rather a piece of emotional fiction infused with the spirit of an able and sincere, but on'y partially informed partisan, than a correct reflection.
It served a purpose far beyond the dream, and, possibly, even the intention of its author; it did much to hasten the overthrow of slavery; it did no less to stain the reputation of the south and obscure what was worthy and fine in its life. From that time the people of the south were regarded, outside its own borders, much —as shall we say, China is regarded today—as one of the effete peoples—as an obstacle in the path of advance, and possibly among many as an object of righteous spoil. Is it too much to say that the idea of the people of the south by the people of the north that they were lazy, self-indulgent and frequently cruel? That they passed their time frequently in the indulgence of their appetites, supped by the painful labor of slaves to whose woes they were worse than indifferent.—Thomas Nelson Page in the Atlantic.

The McKinley of Coleraine.
Dernock House, County Antrim, the home of the McKinley family in Ireland before their emigration to America, is still standing. On an old stone slab by the hall door the initials of the McKinley of a century and a half ago are thus inscribed: "W. McK., 1765." In the insurrection of 1798 arms and ammunition were found by the military in Dernock House, and a William McKinley, a namesake and grand-uncle of the late President, was arrested, brought to Coleraine, where he was tried by court-martial, convicted, and sentenced to death. He was shot in the market place of Coleraine, and was buried in the church yard of Dor-nock, where there is a headstone still in good preservation over his grave.—

One of Wellington's Officers.
On good authority soldiers like best to be officered by gentlemen, but they have their choice of the type. Of the right kind was General Crawford, the leader of the Light Division. An incident in his career during one of the Wellington wars shows him to have been rich in that justice which commands respect from equals and loyalty from inferiors; in a word, he kept discipline without regard to rank. His divisions was crossing a ford on one of the Spanish marches, and an officer, to keep his breeches dry, rode through on a soldier's back. Crawford ob-

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life, and enjoyment of life to thousands: men women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food, when you hate it, and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

If you have not tried it, send for a free trial. It is so good that it will surprise you.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl Street, New York. 50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

Better Standards in Education.

the morals of his school. He must also confess that his influence in this respect is generally measured by his knowledge of human nature. This is the greatest of all knowledge. It is the knowledge of the principles upon which human beings act, and the motives which influence them—the passing inclinations and tendencies which manifest themselves around him—would proportionately increase the teacher's influence. These matters are illustrated in moral philosophy and the educator will be greatly aided in moral education by knowing its leading principles.

I wish to say here that teaching cannot be rightly called a profession until this knowledge is acquired and practiced by one larger per cent of the teachers. By one term with a teacher who has such definite knowledge is worth more than a dozen with one who is deficient in this respect.

And, telling is not teaching. He is the best teacher who gets his pupils to do the most work. Self-teaching on the part of pupils is the most effective and lasting. Pupils should be told but little and led to discover a great deal. By constant telling a teacher not only keeps a pupil weak when he might otherwise be strong, but robs him of that sublime pleasure which is the great incentive to intellectual labor and life, namely—the consciousness of power acquired and victory won through his own efforts. It is not the teacher's function to do the thinking for the pupil. A pupil becomes strong mentally by thinking and exercising his mind the same as he becomes strong physically by exercising his muscles. We must not be content with propping our pupils; rather train them to be self-reliant and inspire in them by example and right standards of teaching, a determination which laughs at difficulties and will never say fail.

The teacher is simply a director and regulator of mental machinery. In this case the machine does the work; for the pupils do the learning and they learn by the exercise of their own minds. The teacher supplies the motives which give energy and direction and applies all the resources of his science. By teaching in this manner the getting of knowledge becomes a pleasure and the pupil becomes a self-reliant thinker able to cope with the problems of life out of school as well as in school.

3rd. Another word which must be emphasized before much higher educational standards are reached and that is THOROUGHNESS. "Be thorough," is a trite saying, but it has lost none of its importance. No method of teaching can possibly be good which is transiently bringing ideas before the mind and immediately displacing them by others before they become incorporated into the mental fabric of the pupil, in fact become a part of him. The ambition to grasp too many things ends in a loss of a majority of them. Apprehension is not necessarily comprehension. What is wanted is not so much more subjects to teach as the power to teach the present subjects well. However much we may value knowledge, right mental habits, power to think and the acquirement of strong intellectuality are of more value in youth than a vast aggregate of isolated facts.

4th. Better methods in teaching would tend greatly toward a better educated people. If the chief object in teaching was to make parrots or recipients of text-book facts then the majority of teachers would be a grand success; but as the paramount end of teaching is to endow pupils with power—power to think, analyze, interpret, and apply—the twentieth century—the majority of which I spoke are dismal failures and are almost constantly thwarting the intellectual life of their pupils. Reading, after the first few days of school life, is not a teaching problem. The real problem is that we learn to read is that we may obtain ideas from various sources, that we may get the beautiful, sublime and aesthetic thoughts contained in literature, not that we may merely pronounce words. Simmering and analyzing, unless we have the power to use them to express ideas and thoughts, does not enrich our vocabulary. You may ask how to teach ideas instead of words. I answer, question your pupils about every place and circumstance connected with the selection until you know that they know something or nothing about what they have been reading. By persistent questioning make it so uncomfortable for pupils who read for words instead of ideas that they will naturally select and get the latter rather than simply the former. While it is necessary to teach arithmetic for the practical knowledge it affords, there is an intellectual culture which comes to the student of arithmetic, if rightly taught. Pupils should not work problems simply for answers. It ought to matter comparatively little to a teacher whether the pupil gets all the answers to his problems if he does a reasonable amount of independent thinking in solving them. Rules should not be too closely adhered to; in fact it would be better if the time in the schools would permit, if they were entirely displaced by well-directed suggestions from thoroughly informed teachers.

The principle object in language and grammar studies is to enable a pupil to more clearly express his thoughts either orally or in writing. Any language teaching which does not do this is a failure. Teachers who analyze and analyze and parse and parse, and end not as a means to an end are losing sight of the great object to be attained in grammar work. When teachers undertake to teach English connected with the same amount of Latin and Greek are taught they commit a grievous error indeed. The proper use of language can only be acquired by using it properly on the playground and in every recreation. Ease in writing and speaking will not come by learning rules, but must come, if it come at all, from the reflective use of language in writing and speaking. The manner of stating or saying things is often of more weight than the things themselves. It is for this reason that important cases in law and otherwise are placed in the hands of persons whose command of language enables them to present their cases clearly and forcibly.

If the proper method be pursued in teaching geography, the pupil will gain a practical knowledge of the earth, its contour, its inhabitants, its resources and some knowledge of its interior. A practical knowledge of geography will enable a pupil when he reads of a country in a newspaper or magazine to form some conception of its size, climate, river systems, its inhabitants and their occupations. This knowledge of geography cannot be obtained, however, by locating fly specks and spider webs on maps, nor in trying to remember cold isolated facts, as some school-keepers seem to think. In teaching geography we should strive to educate the imagination, rather than the memory. By nature study in connection with geography, when pupils have a proper interest to warrant it, the foundations of science may and ought to be laid in botany, zoology and geology.

In the teaching of history dates and events are not the ultimatum. The relations between the cause and effect of events are the paramount object in teaching history. History, when properly taught, develops and trains the judgment, not simply the memory. When a pupil learns that a president, general or other official adopted a certain policy do not be contented until he learns why. History and biography should be closely correlated and unimportant details should be eliminated, thus may the study of history be made interesting, instructive and profitable. I will not elaborate further with reference to methods but in conclusion of this division of my subject will say that too many teachers are looking away from themselves for some method or device to make studies interesting to pupils, forgetting that the most potent factor in any method is the teacher; forgetting that simply the mechanical execution of any method will cause the brightest pupil to have a dislike for knowledge. Teachers forget that in this matter, "the letter killeth and the spirit maketh alive." The more complex the method the more brains are required for its execution. The personality of no pupil should be destroyed by any stereotyped method. All methods should encourage individuality. Says one writer on education: "The education values of the acquisition of knowledge is to improve the natural powers of thought and judgment, and to enable the learner to deal with the masses of observed facts which press more and more heavily upon us as we have to move amid the complications of mature life. That education is best, not which imparts the greatest amount of knowledge, but which develops the greatest amount of mental force."

IMPORTANT CHANGE.
A. A. McKenzie Sells Out to H. T. Elliott, From Pontiac.

After being engaged in the undertaking business here for over twenty years, A. A. McKenzie has disposed of the same, together with the branch offices at Gageton and Argyle to Herbert T. Elliott, of Pontiac, who has already taken possession. Mr. McKenzie has probably a larger acquaintance in the surrounding country than any other business man, owing to the fact that he lived in this section for several years previous to his engaging in the undertaking business, and that since that time a large amount of the business done has naturally been amongst the farmers. He has also handled potatoes and apples quite extensively. His name is familiar throughout the entire Thumb as a funeral conductor, but for several months he has found the work very difficult owing to his physical condition and finally concluded to dispose of the business. He will, however, remain with Mr. Elliott for an indefinite time and assist him as far as his strength will permit. He wishes to thank the many friends who have stood by him for so many years with their patronage, and bespeaks a continuation of the same for his successor.

H. T. Elliott has, so to speak, grown up in the business and is thoroughly conversant with all its details. His family will remove here the latter part of this month and Mrs. Elliott, who also has a knowledge of the business, will give her assistance whenever desired. We are pleased to extend a hearty welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott and hope they will find their residence here a most congenial one.

FACTS FOR SICK PEOPLE.

MAY 11, 1901.
I was suffering from general paralysis as a result of diphtheria. I had treated with the best physicians of Tuscola Co., with no benefit; in fact grew worse under their treatment. I was entirely incapacitated for work, when I consulted the Detroit Clinic at Vassar, on March 13th; two months' treatment has completely cured me, and I am able to do my work. I advise any one suffering from chronic diseases to consult this clinic.
(Signed) JOHN F. ALLEN,
Vassar, Mich.

Mrs. Grant McConnell, of Cass City, Mich., had a large growth of a cancerous nature growing on the inside of the mouth. It had been removed several times, but always returned. She had it removed by the surgeon of the Detroit Clinic, and without the use of a knife and with no pain, it was permanently removed in less than 30 days.

I have been growing deaf in both ears for the past six years as a result of La Grippe. I consulted the Detroit Clinic during their monthly visit to Cass City in January, and one month's treatment restored my hearing so that I could hear a watch tick five inches from my ear.
(Signed) JOHN HORNER, Novesta, Mich.

For 10 years I was a terrible sufferer from chronic rheumatism. I did everything possible, but found no relief, until I commenced treatment with the Detroit Clinic. Three months of their treatment cured me.
(Signed) C. C. JONES,
Rochester, Mich.

Mrs. L. C. Smith, of Detroit, was cured of Epilepsy (or fits) after having had this terrible disease for seven years.

The great success with which the Clinic treats all kinds of diseases is the wonder and admiration of all scientific men. The specialist in charge is noted for his skill, and the care with which every case will be treated, but curable cases are treated with the latest scientific methods, and in no case does it interfere with the work of the patient.
Remember, it costs you nothing to consult this specialist, such an opportunity does not offer itself very often to people outside of large cities, and our citizens will certainly do well to take advantage of this one. It is best to consult the specialist personally, but question blanks will be sent on application, and all communications will receive prompt attention, if they are addressed to.

The new state hymn adopted for Rhode Island is sung to the music of the Austrian hymn.

This year's harvest in the south of Ireland is stated to be the best experienced for a quarter of a century.

An enterprising person in Chicago has discovered that the bee keeps just as busy in storing away honey on the third floor of a home as in a hollow tree in the woods.

A remarkable case of suicide came under the notice of the authorities at Cureghem, near Brussels, recently. A printer driven to despair by habitual drunkenness, made his own coffin, placed it in position, and hanged himself. The corpse was found dangling over the coffin.

Professional baseball umpires are so worried by the abuse they receive that most of them are subject to nervous complaints. Aware of this fact, some of the life insurance companies refuse to issue policies to them. It is only a short time ago when an amateur umpire in Farmersburg, N. Y., was clubbed to death because he rendered an unfavorable decision.

Jean Paul says that the mother puts the commas and semicolons into the child's life, the father the colons and periods. The whole punctuation of the late Empress Frederick's life was inherently royal. As Mr. Balfour recently put it before the House of Commons, she was "endowed with gifts of nature and of education which would have made her, even in another station, a remarkable and accomplished woman."

In mine accidents it has often happened that rescuers were baffled and lives were sacrificed because the exact whereabouts of the imperiled men were unknown. The mine owners of Scranton are about to place telephones at regular intervals along the workings in their mines, so that the instruments may be easy of access to the men when danger demands their use. The step is greatly to be commended, and it suggests other beneficent uses of the telephone.

"Government in America is practically shaped in the caucus. For the Christian man the primary meeting should be as sacred an appointment as the place of prayer, and if the Christian men of a community would interest themselves, they could get good men nominated." These words, spoken at the recent Christian Endeavor convention, embody a truth familiar to all, yet one that it is well to emphasize during the month before election. The evils which exist in politics are largely the result of the neglect of duty by the very men who most loudly complain of them.

A curious story comes from the Russian frontier. At the little Russian town of Wysytien 400 families became homeless owing to a great fire. The town being next to Romintzen, where the Emperor William shoots every year, his majesty not only sent soldiers to help extinguish the fire, but gave $500 for the distressed townspeople. The weather being inclement, blankets were bought for those who were compelled to camp out of doors. The Russian customs officials refused to admit the blankets until the high customs duty, which in Russia is imposed upon such articles, was paid.

The wire cables used by tourists for protection and aid in Alpine climbing may prove a source of danger. On July 20 several tourists made an ascent of the Tribulaun, in the Stubler Alps. Near the summit, where the ascent had to be made with the help of wire cables, the rocks began to emit a humming noise, and an ice-pick, coming in contact with the cable, produced a spark. Shortly before there had been a thunderstorm, which caused this electrical disturbance. Before the tourists realized what was occurring, the lightning struck the cable, stunned a tourist and the guide and hurled them several hundred metres below.

The federal government and the state of Minnesota will soon clash in the courts over the question of the ownership of many thousands of acres of valuable lands. The tract in dispute is situated in northern Minnesota, running from Rainy Lake to Lake Superior, a distance of about 200 miles and taking in the entire northern tier of townships. The lands are located in the gold fields recently discovered and on that account are considered very valuable. The lands were selected by the state under the provisions of the Swamp act of 1860, but it is contended by the Washington officials that the tract so chosen on the border of Canada is not swamp land, hence the proceedings.

One of the most talented men in England is Walter Crane, the decorative artist. He is a teacher and writer in art, a book illustrator, a painter, a designer of furniture, glass, mosaic, wall paper and fabric. He is, besides, a poet, lecturer and a fearless Socialist.

Albany, N. Y., claims the honor of having made the first carriage manufactured entire in this country. Several were built in the year 1814, and the event was duly noted at the time as an evidence of the spread of United States enterprise.

MICHIGAN'S SUGAR BEETS.

Millions Invested in Beet Sugar Plants.

VERY INTERESTING FIGURES.

The State Will Soon Lead in the Manufacture With Nineteen Plants—Sixty-five Thousand Acres of Beets and Eighty-four Thousand Tons of Coal Required.

The beet sugar industry has and is growing to vast proportions in Michigan as shown by the State Labor Commissioner's report given out Friday. There are three factories at Bay City, one at Caro, one at Rochester, one at Alma, one at Kalamazoo, one at Benoni Harbor, one at Holland and one at Marine City. The plants which will be in operation for the first time this season are located at Lansing, Saginaw and Salzborg. The plants that will go into operation next season are at Harbor Beach, Schenck, Mt. Clemens, Carrollton, Lapeer and Crosswell. Companies have also been organized to build four new plants, two of which will be in Wayne county, one at Cassville and one at Mt. Clemens.

The thirteen plants which will operate in Michigan the present season have a capitalized stock of $4,400,000, an average of $338,462 each. The cost of construction and equipping these thirteen plants is $5,250,000, an average of $403,846 each. The six plants which will be completed for next season's work will have an aggregate capital stock of $2,150,000, an average of $358,333 each. The cost of their construction is estimated at an average of $550,000 each, an aggregate of $3,300,000. It is a conservative estimate that over $9,000,000 will have been invested in sugar plants in Michigan the coming season.

The thirteen factories which will be operated during the coming season will have an average daily capacity of 6,550 tons of beets. The six factories which will start next year will have a capacity of 3,600 tons daily, which will bring the aggregate capacity of Michigan factories to 10,850 tons of beets daily. It is estimated that the thirteen factories to be operated this season will average ninety days each and together will require 598,500 tons of beets. The sugar obtained from Michigan beets last season averaged above 14 per cent, and on this basis the output of sugar for the season will be 167,580,000 pounds, or $3,730,000. Experienced manufacturers estimate that there will be over 200,000,000 pounds of sugar made in the state this year.

Attention is called to the fact that a large portion of the machinery used in the factories is now of American make, and that the industry opens up other avenues for the employment of American capital and labor. A large amount of limestone is used in the purifying process, the average being about 2,100 tons for each factory during the season. The limestone of this state is procured from the quarries near Alpena. About 55,000 tons of bituminous coal from Michigan mines will also be used.

A total of 65,000 acres of beets will be used this year, and farmers will receive an average of $5 per ton for the product of their farms. The operating force in the factories this season will aggregate about 2,400 persons, with a total of 10,000 man-days of labor employed in weeding, thinning and pulling the beets is very large. The future outlook for the industry is considered very bright. Farmers and beet growers are realizing handsomely on their crops.

Appl's Salary. H. H. Appl's resignation as postmaster of West Bay City, tendered after his nomination for congress, will be accepted within a few days. His salary was $2,100 a year, but he will be money ahead by resigning. There seems to be no reason why, under the rules of the house, he cannot draw a congressman's salary of $5,000 a year from May 1st, the day that his predecessor, Crump, died. Appl's daughter, Mrs. Cane, who has been his chief assistant in the postoffice, at $800, will very likely be appointed to succeed him.

In a Hole. Frank Belanger, an employe of the Muskegon water works department, met with a peculiar experience which almost resulted in his death from fright. Workmen had dug a hole eight feet deep and Belanger was at the bottom making a water connection. Someone tried to lead a horse past when it gave a spring and landed in the hole. Belanger saw it coming, but could do nothing to save himself. The man and horse were wedged in tight. Being near one of the horse houses, the department was called out and both were rescued unhurt.

A North Marquette wreck. A north-bound freight train struck several overhanging cars on the main track at Millford, Wednesday morning, demolishing 10 or 15 freight cars, and causing a loss to the Pere Marquette railway estimated at $20,000. A train of 65 cars went on a siding that could accommodate only 50 cars and the others stood on the main track. A flagman was sent ahead to warn the train but failed to do so. The engine struck to his post and although the engine overturned, he was not injured. The fireman jumped.

The Omer depot was broken into, the mail bag cut open and 12 bank letters were opened, but their contents, checks and notes, were undisturbed. Officials cannot tell what mail has been stolen.

The coroner's jury at Wayne in the case of Charles DeLong, Joseph W. Sweeney and George Leopold, killed in a wreck Sept. 20, returned a verdict that they came to their death through their own negligence while stealing a ride.

The little village of Augusta, Kalamazoo county, is unfortunate. A few years since fires destroyed the entire business portion of the place, and last week the box and basket factory, the only manufacturing industry in the place, was burned, throwing forty persons out of work. The fact that the plant will not be rebuilt makes the situation still more discouraging.

Shot the Desperado.

In a running fight near Easton, eight miles northeast of Owosso, Tuesday noon, Sheriff Gerow shot and probably fatally wounded Joseph Howard, a local desperado. The wounded man is in the county jail with a bullet through his lungs, the sheriff having driven eight miles in 35 minutes to get him medical attention. Howard was wanted for the burglary of W. E. Crawford's house at Vernon Sunday night, and was traced to Easton. There was a desperate struggle as the officer tried to put the handcuffs on the prisoner, who finally broke and ran. The sheriff called on him to halt, and fired, the bullet entering below the right shoulder. Doctors are doubtful of saving Howard's life. The prisoner is 25 years old, unmarried and has been under arrest dozens of times for small crimes.

The School Money. It develops that an error was made by the state authorities in computing the amount of primary school money to be distributed among the counties next month. It was announced that the per capita rate would be $2.41. As a matter of fact, the rate will be but $2 per capita, and the total amount distributed $1,441,224. This rate is higher than any previous semi-annual rate by 35 cents per capita.

Half the village of Galien was destroyed by fire Monday morning. The Michigan grand lodge of Odd Fellows will meet in Port Huron next year. The Pere Marquette elevator in Ionia was partly destroyed by fire Tuesday.

The Plainville fair was a financial success. All the premiums will be paid in full. Burglars broke into W. E. Crawford's house at Vernon Tuesday night and secured $60. A desperate attempt was made to rob the safe of G. A. Blakeslee & Co. at Gaynes yesterday.

A new cheese factory is being built at La Salle, Monroe Co., and will be in operation about December 1. Potatoes are yielding from 150 to 300 bushels to the acre in the Thompsonville and Grand Traverse regions. Roy Hicks, James Barrett and John Wilson, 14-year-old Toronto boys, confessed robbing a house in Port Huron.

The foreign berth destined by Senator Burrows for William Livingston, of Detroit, may be filled by someone else. There were 479 births in Oakland county last year, all of the townships with one exception contributing to the total. John Goldsworthy, of Menominee, who last June murdered his landlady, Mrs. Sarah Daniels, has been adjudged insane.

Joseph Howard, shot Tuesday at Owosso by Sheriff Gerow for resisting arrest, is resting easily, and will recover. Theodore Spoor and John Emphy, of Mio, have been held for trial on a charge of stealing timber from the school lands.

The Scourge of Damascus

A Story of The East...

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued).

Julian stood like one thunderstruck. He raised his manacled hands to his brow, and tried to realize the force of the wonderful thing he had heard.

Horam started to his feet, and then sank back, and buried his face in his hands. His thoughts had suddenly flown from the story of the present hour to that other story which he had heard on the night before; and the crash almost took away his senses.

Omar, when he saw how matters stood, felt called upon to speak; for he believed that his old friend and brother was struggling to open his breast to his child; and, second, that Julian might be brought to forgiveness when he knew the whole truth.

"My friends," he said, rising to his feet as he spoke, "the story is not yet complete. It remains for me to finish it."

Ben Hadad and Ezabel gazed eagerly up into his face; and Julian leaned toward him, with a beam of hope struggling upon his brow.

"I am to blame in this matter; or, at least, I was the innocent cause," continued the King of Aleppo, addressing Ben Hadad and Ezabel. "It was I who gave to Horam the evidence upon which he condemned his wife. I supposed the guilt of the lady Helena was positive, as I had the information from officers who would not lie; and I felt it my duty to acquaint the husband with the circumstances. On my way back to my capital, while stopping in Balbec, I gained information which assured me that the Queen of Damascus was innocent; and immediately I sent back two of my officers to convey intelligence thereof to Horam.

But those messengers never reached their destination. They must have been robbed and murdered on the way. I pursued my course homeward, and amid the duties of my realm, the thing passed from my mind. Yesterday I saw Horam for the first time in three-and-twenty years; and last evening I revealed to him the fact that his first and best beloved wife, Helena, was wrongfully accused—that she was pure and true. When this truth burst upon him, his grief overcame him, and I feared that the shock would kill him."

"Aye," cried Horam, starting up again, "it did almost kill me; for Helena was my first love, and her place was never refilled. O, my brother what can I do?"

"Do what is right," replied Omar, taking Horam's outstretched hand. "Be a man, and let the heart assert its sway. Remember that you did the first great deed of wrong; and that all the other evil has flowed out from that one unfortunate act."

The king of Damascus stood for a moment with his head bowed upon Omar's shoulder, and his hand still in Omar's grasp. Then he started up, and his countenance had changed.

"By the blood of my heart," he exclaimed, "the wrong shall not grow deeper against me! What, ho! With-out, there! Slaves!—attend me!"

The executioner chanced to be nearest, and they answered the call. "Bel-Dara, strike those irons from that man's limbs! Strike off every bond, and set him free! If you harm him as much as the prick of a rose-thorn, your life shall answer for it!"

The executioner stopped to ask no questions—he did not even stop to wonder at the order; but he proceeded to the work, and in a very few minutes the prisoner was free.

Then the king started down from the throne, and advanced to where the freed man stood.

"The truth has come to me, and I now see that you bear upon your face the features of your noble mother—God pardon me for the wrong I was led to do her! And, my son,—here, in the presence of these witnesses, I ask you to forget the past—I ask you to be my son—I ask you to let me be your father;—and then, O, then, Horam will be no more childless!"

Julian had no power to resist the appeal; and as the old king tottered forward the son supported him upon his bosom, and sustained him in the embrace of his stout arms.

And yet Julian was not content. His face wore still a cloud; and there was trouble in his heart.

"What could it mean? Horam feared that his son could not quite love him. Omar saw the trouble, and divined its cause; and stepping quickly forward he whispered into the ear of his brother. Horam caught at the words, and the star of hope beamed again. He clasped his hands and cried out: "What, ho! Without! Where is Benoni?"

The captain came. "Benoni, bring the lady Ulin!" Pale and trembling the princess entered the chamber; but when she saw Julian alive and free, with the shackles broken at his feet, the blood leaped again through her veins. But she had not much opportunity for thought, for the king quickly advanced and took her hand, and led her to Julian.

"My son, this do give thee in token of my sincerity! Now wilt thou own me for thy father, and forget all of the past save that which tells that we are of one flesh? Take this fair hand, and with it my forgiveness to you both—my forgiveness to all who have befriended you. Take it, my son, and ere Omar leaves us for his northern realm he shall see Horam's own son sitting upon the throne of Damascus, while Horam himself withdraws from the world, that his last days may be spent in quiet repose."

No longer rested the cloud upon Julian's brow. He caught the small white hand which had been placed within his grasp, and sank down upon his knees—sank down, he and Ulin, one in love forevermore—and bowed before the king.

"My father—I accept the blessing! I am thy son!"

THE END.

The Blind Bride.

By Amy Randolph.

Bentley Grange was a pretty place at all times of the year, but loveliest of all when the reapers were at work in the harvest fields and the yellow light of the October sun turned the woodland paths to enchanted aisles. A long, low structure of warmly tinted red brick, with mullioned windows velvet-smooth sweeps of lawn and box borders, which stood up like walls of solid emerald on each side of the path, it had a savor of the antique about it, which one seldom sees in an American house.

And old Brande Bentley, walking up and down in the mellow sunshine, between the walls of black-green box, with his eyes bent on the ground, and his hands clasped behind his back, corresponded well with the Grange.

Suddenly a cheerful footstep rang on the stone terrace steps—the sound of a clear, flute-like whistle rose above the click of the distant mowing machine, and Harry Wade, the old man's nephew, stood like an incarnation of youth and sunshine before him.

"Uncle," he cried merrily, "you've got the prettiest place in the world here."

Mr. Bentley took out his big, old-fashioned silver watch.

"Two o'clock," said he, "and the bank don't close until four. Humph! It appears to me, young man, that you don't stick very close to business hours!"

"Like a limpet, uncle," said Harry, "and just for today. Will Caryl has come to act as a substitute, for I really wanted to see you, uncle."

"Humph!" again commented Mr. Bentley. "You're very fond of me—just of late!"

"I'm always fond of you, Uncle Brande," said Harry, gravely, "but I've something to tell you."

"Some scrape you've got into," said Mr. Bentley.

"Nothing of the sort, sir!"

"Want to borrow money, perhaps?"

"Upon my word, no!"

"You've fallen in love with some girl, then?"

"You are right this time, uncle," said Harry, laughing and coloring; "and, of course, I have come directly to you to tell you of my good fortune. It is little Bessie Bird!"

"A milliner's apprentice!" snarled the old bachelor.

"If she chooses to help her mother along by trimming hats in her aunt's millinery rooms, I see nothing derogatory in that," said Harry, valiantly.

"A mere child of seventeen!"

"But I don't want an old lady of forty-seven!"

"Humph!" growled Mr. Bentley. "What do either of you know of life?"

"Not much, to be sure, uncle, as yet," admitted the young lover. "But we think we can easily learn—together."

"And where do you think the napkins and tablecloths and bread and butter and rent and water taxes are to come from?" sardonically inquired Brande Bentley.

"I have my salary, Uncle Brande," said Harry, "and Bessie has been educated to be very economical."

"I'll have nothing to say to such nonsense," said Mr. Bentley.

"But, Uncle Brande, all we want is—"

"Nothing, I say—absolutely nothing!" thundered the old man. "It's folly—trash—sentimental tomfoolery! If you want my opinion, there it is! Time enough for you to think of matrimony when you are thirty. There ought to be a law to prevent young people making fools of themselves."

And Brande Bentley turned on his heel and strode back into the house.

So that Harry had no very inspiring news for Bessie Bird when he met her, as usual, on the corner of Broadway, to walk home with her through the pleasant autumn twilight.

"Was he very cross?" said Bessie, who was a white-kitten sort of a girl, with fluffy yellow hair, dimples in her cheeks, and eyes the exact color of the "flowing-blue" china on our grandmother's shelves.

"As savage as Bluebeard!"

"Did he scold dreadfully?" asked Bessie.

"Told me I was a fool!"

"But if he won't consent—"

"Then we must manage to get along without his consent," said Harry. "Because, you know, Bessie, I do love you so very dearly, and you like me a little, don't you?"

"But your mother has always cautioned upon your being his heir," said Bessie. "And to lose all that money, just—"

"Just for love and you," archly interrupted Harry. "Darling, there is nothing in all the world half so sweet to me, or that I court half so ardently as my little Bessie—so let there be no further argument about it. These jolly old covers down at the bank are going to raise my salary fifty dollars at Christmas, and so if you can get your frock made we'll be married then. And set Uncle Brande and the world at defiance, eh?"

The first November snowstorm was drifting its white flashes through the air when a visitor was shown into Brande Bentley's snug parlor.

"Eh," said he, "a stranger, Jones? I never see strangers."

"But you will see me!" said a soft voice—and a slender, golden-haired girl stood before him, neatly yet plainly dressed, her black cloak powdered over with snow, and a spectacled old lady by her side. "I am Bessie Bird—and this is my aunt, Miss Belton, the milliner."

Miss Belton courtseyed. Mr. Bentley stared.

"I suppose you have come here to speak to me about my nephew."

"Yes, sir," said Bessie.

"It will be of no use," said he, curtly. "My opinions on the subject of my marriage remain unchanged."

"But mine do not," said Bessie. "Please to hear me through, Mr. Bentley. I have written him a letter to give him up this morning. And I came to tell of it now, so that you will feel kindly towards him once more. I have told him we never could be married."

"You're a sensible girl," said Mr. Bentley, smiling his hand on the table.

"And I have sent him back the little garnet engagement ring that he gave me," added Bessie, with a sob in her throat.

"Better and better!" said Uncle Brande, exultantly.

"Not," bravely added Bessie, "because I don't love him as dearly and truly as I ever did. But because I see now how wrong it would be for me to fetter his whole life. For—"

She stopped an instant and a slight shudder ran through her frame. "I may as well tell you all, Mr. Bentley; I am going blind!"

"Blind!" echoed the old man.

"Blind," repeated Bessie, gently, but firmly. "I have had such strange blurs and darknesses come across my vision of late, and went to a doctor. And the doctor told me, as kindly as he could, that these are but the precursors of total blindness. So, of course, all is at an end between Harry and me. Will you please tell him this? I have referred him to you for all particulars."

"I will," said the old man, huskily.

Harry Wade came to his uncle that very morning in great perturbation.

"What does this mean, sir?" said he.

"Have you been endeavoring to persuade her to throw me over?"

"No, boy—no," said the old man, and he told him all.

"I am bound to say that the girl has behaved very well," said he. "Shall you give her up?"

"No! Never!" shouted Harry, with pale face and tightly clenched hand. "Never! If she was

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ENTERPRISE.

Dear Sir:—I take this means of informing my friends and the public in general of my wonderful cure by Dr. Morrison of the Detroit Clinic. I have suffered for years with diseases of the heart, kidney, stomach and bladder. I have been treated by many doctors and received no benefit and concluded that my case was incurable, but on the first of May I consulted Dr. Morrison at Cass City and he told me that he could cure me. He has kept his word for I am cured and I want every one to know it, for after curing me it seems as if he could cure any one, for I think I was as bad as any one could be.
