Rev. R. Weaver and family arrived last week from Eden, Ont., and will be at home in the Baptist parsonage in a very short time. Their household effects were delayed en route, causing considerable inconvenience. The good people are receiving a hearty welcome here and will doubtless do a good work.

VERY CLOSE CALL

Five Persons Asphyxiated at the Pettit Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Pettit, their little daughter, and Mrs. Harder and her daughter, narrowly escaped fatal suffocation from escaping gas from a coal stove during Monday night at the Pettit home, one mile north and a half mile east of this place. Mr. Pettit had arranged with his neighbor, Jas. Reagh, who lives on the W. J. Campbell farm, to take their poultry to market on Tuesday morning. Mr. Campbell went up to the farm that morning to assist Mr. Reagh with some work. At about nine o'clock Mrs. Reagh went over to Pettit's to learn why they had not come for the poultry, and upon getting no response to her rap, went into the house. Finding no one downstairs, she made her way to the sleeping apartments above and was terribly shocked by the sight which she found. Mrs. Pettit was in bed but her head was hanging over and both she and Mr. Pettit were frothing at the mouth. In the adjoining room Mrs. Harder had fallen on the floor in an attempt to get up, and lay unconscious. Mrs. Reagh hurried home and gave the alarm and Messrs. Campbell and Reagh hastened to the Pettit home, after sending the boy post haste for Drs. Morris and King. The doors were thrown open at once and the girls carried to the door, were they soon revived. The others did not respond so readily to the efforts to resuscitate them, but gradually Mrs. Harder and later Mrs. Pettit came to. The doctors lost no time in getting there and all worked hard and faithfully, but it was not until about three o'clock in the afternoon that Mr. Pettit regained consciousness. Mrs. Harder, who lives at Bay Port, is a sister of Mrs. Pettit, and had just arrived the evening before, with her daughter. She had been up in the night to give some attention to the little girl, who acted sick. Mr. Pettit had been up just before daylight and remembers speaking to the little girl who slept in a small bed at the side, and evidently he had just lain down again when he became unconscious. The doctor states that Mr. Pettit would have been beyond help in ten or fifteen minutes. All are doing well now but it will be many days before they recover fully from the effects of the gas. There was a drum in the upper room, over the coal stove, and a damper above the drum, which must have been closed too tightly. Although a very sad affair we are pleased that it did not terminate fatally for anyone.

GOOD OPENING.

The Ernest Gamble Recital Company Opened The Lecture Course.

The first number of this year's lecture course was given at the Opera House last Thursday evening by the Ernest Gamble Recital Company and the attendance gave evidence that the course will be as liberally patronized this year as formerly. The program given was of an entirely different character from anything ever presented here, so much so that some failed to enjoy or appreciate it, but was most certainly of high character, and could only be given by those most proficient in music. The Australian pianist, Fred B. Morley, played with a confidence, poise and sureness that spoke of the experienced concert giver. He has the facility, strength, clearness and tone variety which gives complete mastery over his instrument. The violin playing by Miss Grace Jenkins was marked by beautiful quality of tone, perfect phrasing, delicacy of style and a true conception of the composition. The vocal numbers given by Ernest Gamble were in a most pleasing style, his voice being a basso profundo of beautiful quality and unusual range, handled with the greatest ease and consummate art. His easy method, his presence, and the little action he put into his work to aid his expression were all superb. The second number of the course will be given by Dr. Jas. Hedley on the evening of Dec. 23rd.

Hallowe'en

Last Thursday night was duly observed here as Hallowe'en in a manner that will not soon be forgotten, as considerable damage was done to property. Outbuildings more or less valuable were overturned and broken, signs were torn down or removed to obscure places of concealment, and vehicles and implements were piled on Main Street, and many other depredations committed which we have not space to mention. The door of the cider mill was forced and about a barrel of cider either spilled or drank. A wagon belonging to a man from near Ubyly was taken apart and the burrs thrown into the sewers. Some signs have not yet been found and others were badly broken. The village has been put to considerable expense, as well as private individuals. No one objects to the wanton destruction of property has started a movement on foot to prevent its occurrence again and it is possible that prosecutions may yet be made for damage done. A fund has been raised among those who suffered, toward investigating the matter and taking whatever steps may be thought necessary.

Nearly a Fire!

The farm residence of Sam G. Benkel man narrowly escaped going up in flames on Tuesday evening. It is occupied by John H. Walmesley, who has been working on his father's place of late. Toward evening, Mrs. Walmesley left the house to take the milk pail over to her husband and they returned together. As they drew near the house John noticed an unusual light through the window and made a speedy investigation, just in time. Fire had snapped out from the cook stove and ignited a piece of hemlock. A hole had been burned through the floor giving draught and the door frames near by with the studding behind them were badly burned. In a few moments a hole would have been made through the ceiling. Fortunately Mr. Walmesley arrived just in time to control the fire with a few pails of water. The damage was covered by insurance in the Tuscola Mutual.

THE MICHIGAN BOOK

Silas Farmer Has Issued Another Indispensable Work on this State.

Mr. Silas Farmer, the well-known authority on Detroit and Michigan, has just issued a little work which will prove itself indispensable to those who wish to be informed about Michigan.

It is a small volume printed on thin, though opaque paper, but within its 350 pages can be found pretty nearly every fact that anyone is likely to care to inquire for concerning our state, and the reputation of the author is sufficient warrant for the accuracy of the statements.

Under the head of each county will be found an accurate map with the townships and sections marked out. Every farm of 40 acres in the state can thus be accurately located without difficulty.

One of the more valuable special points is the population figures of unincorporated villages, some of them having as high as 3,000 people which are not enumerated in the United States census.

Another is the careful statement of the amendments to the constitution, showing at a glance not only what the reading now is, but what it used to be.

Along with the book Mr. Farmer is publishing a map of the state prepared on paper with cloth back which is likely to supersede all others. Like the county maps in the book, it shows sections as well as township lines and indicates accurately not only railroads but interurban electric lines, the latter in red. It is the only map that shows the whole state, including Isle Royale, in its proper geographical position. It gives the exact area of cities, and in many other minor matters is a distinct improvement in map-making over anything hitherto prepared for the state.

It is sure of a wide circulation. The size of the Map is 35x40 inches, with cloth back. The price for both Book and Map is $1.00. Agents are wanted.

School Notes.

Miss Bessie Pardo entered school Monday.

At the meeting of the Athletic Association Tuesday afternoon the constitution was amended so that the girls may now have the privileges of the gymnasium by fulfilling the conditions with regard to fees, etc. Miss Hadrill and Miss Joy have kindly consented to take charge of the girls' class which will meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons at the close of the school sessions.

The work on the school-grounds which can be done this fall is completed and grass seed has been sown. Even with no grass growing the grounds present a better appearance than before. Some shrubbery and flower-beds will be arranged on the grounds in the spring.

George Cole has returned to school after an absence of two and one-half days which was caused by a sore hand.

A new method has been taken by the teachers to persuade the pupils to refrain from talking after the bell rings and from whispering during school hours. The unfortunate ones are required to remain from fifteen to thirty minutes after the session closes in the afternoon.

Long, Long Ago.

(Republished by Request.)
Tell me the tales that to me were so dear
Long, long ago, long, long ago;
Sing me the songs I delighted to hear,
Long, long ago, long ago.
Now you are gone, all my grief is removed,
Let me forget that so long you have roved,
Let me believe that you love as you loved,
Long, long ago, long ago.
Do you remember the path where we met,
Long, long ago, long, long ago?
Ah, yes! you told me you never would forget,
Long, long ago, long ago.
There to all others my smile you preferred,
Love, when you spoke, gave a charm to each word,
Still my heart treasures the praises I heard,
Long, long ago, long ago.
Though by your kindness my fond hopes were raised,
Long, long ago, long ago,
You by more eloquent lips have been praised,
Long, long ago, long ago.
But by long absence your truth has been tried,
Still to your accents I listen with pride,
Blest as I was when I sat by your side,
Long, long ago, long ago.
—T. H. Bayly.

Trifling with Fate.

BY FRANCES S. HODGE.
(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
Ted, the adored; Ted, the only male in a family of nine, was ill. Mrs. Baker hung over him in all the mother's agony, vainly beseeching him to take his medicine, while down in the library the other members of the family huddled in a terrified group, speaking in whispers or gazing blankly at the certain misery of the future.
"A bad case of pneumonia," Dr. Newman had said. "I must have a nurse. One will be here in an hour." Then he had started out of the door. Now, in this family of adoring women were many prejudices. They had no "advanced ideas," and to them all nurses were "old and forward creatures, not fit for Ted to meet." Besides, hadn't they read only last week of a mad man who had married his nurse, and didn't that prove that all members of the profession take advantage of a man's weak and susceptible condition to make love to him? Was Ted, whose matrimonial prospects were unknown to him, the subject of numerous family discussions, to be coerced into marrying a nurse? Did not each sister have a best friend saved for him, and—why, the whole future happiness of the family depended on the sort of girl he married! A nurse! Cousin Lizzie, a tiny woman of uncertain years, rose to the emergency as she heard the click of the door-latch, and burst out, "Oh, doctor, a nurse! Consider our feelings!"
Dr. Newman had no time to understand, and he answered shortly: "Feelings? I am considering your feelings. The boy is very ill. I am unwilling to trust him in any but a trained hand."
Miss Brooks wondered why she was kept in the parlor, and why the family came in one by one to bring her a glass of water, to offer her fruit, to show her photographs of the Paris exposition. She began to find the situation interesting.
"Mother says she can't leave Ted, but we must make a change," reported Alice, the youngest daughter, in the library.
At the same time Cousin Lizzie came from her inspection in the parlor. She had made the excuse of finding out the price, and Miss Brooks had answered "Twenty-five dollars a week as a rule but $30 for contagious diseases and men." No appreciation of the humor had come to Cousin Lizzie, and now she said: "If he doesn't die he will marry her," in the manner of one who declined to determine which contingency would be worse. At last, with an expression of conscious heroism, and a murmur of "protecting the dear boy," she walked grimly back into the parlor.
Miss Brooks offered no help. The stylish figure and the waving auburn hair loomed as dreadful danger before the nervous little lady, while the charming manner was conclusive proof that she stood between Ted and destruction. She found herself dashing madly from subject to subject in her effort to come to the point, when a sound reached Miss Brooks' ears that brought her professional duty before her. She rose and said decisively: "Will you show me where I can change my dress? I think the patient needs me."

Cousin Lizzie sprang in front of the door and the tiny form quivered with excitement. She laid a trembling hand on Miss Brooks' arm and looked up appealingly. "My dear," she said, "we can't let you nurse Ted. He's all we've got, and—and—you're too pretty."
There was a twitching of the face, but otherwise Miss Brooks controlled herself perfectly. In a calm tone she asked, "Shall I have the office send you a nurse that is not good looking?"
As the door shut Cousin Lizzie sank exhausted into a chair, while a sympathetic crowd offered her water, a fan and appreciation.
An hour later Mrs. Baker was struggling with the delicious Ted.
"Lie still, dear, and let mother

"You're too pretty."
smooth your head," she implored helplessly.
"Oh! Mummy, don't bother so. The fellows are waiting for me," and he sprang half out of bed.
A tall figure suddenly appeared before him and strong hands laid hold of him. "You must lie still," a strange voice said, and he found himself looking with amazement into a pair of gray eyes, disputing his will.
"Must?" he asked. No one had ever said must to him.
"Must," was the answer, with a tightening of the lips. He lay still to puzzle out the state of affairs. His head was raised and a glass held to his lips. He had not said he would take anything. In his amazement he drank the medicine without protesting.
Miss Stewart's best friends could never call her pretty. The Baker family did not care to see what was in her face, being merely on the guard against certain qualities supposed to be irresistible to the stronger sex. The family was terror-stricken into full appreciation of her professional qualifications in the ensuing days. As the sound of labored breathing or of painful delirium rent their hearts, they felt the value of her calm, alert strength, and took comfort. When the crisis was passed and Dr. Newman announced, "He will get well, thanks to his nurse," they could find no words for their gratitude.
During the days of convalescence she proved as resourceful as at the critical stage, and the family now noticed her non-professional qualifications—at first with considerable awe, later with much appreciation.
One day Ted, bundled up in rugs, had been taken to the piazza. The sound of voices came to the family. "She's teasing him again," said Alice, with satisfaction. He had always teased her, and she found the situation delightful.
"We can rest assured he will never fall in love with any one who manages him as she does," said Cousin Lizzie.
"How thankful we should be that I was able to save him from that dangerous nurse!"
If the family could have seen Ted's face at that moment, when Miss Stewart was saying, "The man is getting mauldin; I'll send some of his adoring family to him," there would have been doubt in their minds. Fortunately,

Miss Stewart had perfect control of herself and of him.

During the next year Ted worked as he had never worked in his life, and during the last six months the importance and the irregularity of his engagements completely mystified the family. The mother understood. She had been the confidant of a frenzied son during the six months Miss Stewart had sternly forbidden him to call or to write, "so you can forget me if you want to, and I shan't seem to myself to be taking advantage." When he explained to his mother that Miss Stewart had done work in the world and he had not, so he must make himself worthy of her, the mother could only mutter bitterly to herself, "Worthy of a nurse!" When, however, she watched the spoiled boy come into his manhood and heard him pronounce a rising young lawyer, the bitterness lessened.
The announcement of the engagement was a painful occasion to the family. Ted's remarks, when he caught Cousin Lizzie's "A nurse to get him after all!" were in no measured terms.
"Will she manage you, Ted?" Alice asked after the storm.
"I hope so, Lal," he answered, as he pulled her curls. "You, too, I guess."
The family discussions thereafter turned into reminiscences of Miss Brooks' charms and reflections upon the danger of trying to avert another's fate.
Miss Stewart never understood why her friend, Miss Brooks, greeted the announcement of the engagement with such rapturous delight.

A RAT-TRAP EXPOSITION.

Queer Kind of an Exhibition Just Closed at Copenhagen.

The first international exposition of rat traps recently closed at Copenhagen after a most successful display of rodent exterminating devices. As might have been supposed in such a momentous affair, America would not be overlooked, and it is equally certain that Yankee ingenuity would be suitably recognized in gold-medals awards. As a matter of fact, two gold and one bronze medal actually did go to American exhibitors. In all these were 100 sovereign exhibitors, to whom five medals were awarded in addition to the American awards, while all the makers of rat traps in Denmark, as well as numerous inventors, took this unusual opportunity to exhibit their contrivances. Rats have become such a pest in Denmark, as well as in Sweden and part of Germany, that an exposition was decided upon as the only adequate way in which the public could be made acquainted with the latest appliances. That it was no second-class exhibition is proved by the international exhibition is proved by the royal patronage of Prince and Princess Christian of Denmark and the visit of an official representative of Germany, Count Schwerin. Preparations for this curious gathering had been under way for over three years. It was organized by the "committee for the national extermination of rats in Denmark," which for a number of years has carried on a crusade against the rodents. The most successful measure has been the payment of bonities amounting to about 3 cents for every rat killed. In the course of eighteen weeks 102,000 rats were destroyed in Copenhagen by the bounty claimants. Sweden offered a similar government bounty beginning March 1st, and in five months 103,000 rats were killed and paid for in Stockholm alone. The alarming multiplicity of rats is evidenced by the record of some of the smaller towns in Denmark, where as many as five rats per inhabitant have been destroyed in less than two years.—Chicago News.

To Exterminate Ants.

Powdered borax sprinkled around the infested places will exterminate both red ants and black ants. Powdered cloves are said to drive them away. Another plan is to grease a plate with lard, and set it where these insects abound. They prefer lard to anything else, and will forsake sugar for it. Place a few sticks around the plate for the ants to climb up on. Occasionally turn the plate bottom up over the fire, and the ants will fall in with the melted lard. (2) Set a quantity of cracked walnuts or shellbarks on plates in the closet where these ants congregate. The ants will collect on the nuts in myriads. Turn nuts and ants together into the fire, and put fresh nuts on the plates. Then powder camphor and put in the holes and crevices of the closet.

Lord Roberts Perfectly Satisfied.

Field Marshal Earl Roberts, formerly commander-in-chief of the British forces in South Africa, in a speech this week said that every thing was being done to end the war quickly. Lord Kitchener's demands for men, horses and stores were always promptly met and there was no fault to find with the men or their officers.

When the Women Rule.

The witness was just getting to the thrilling part of the story when the judge interrupted. "There are extraneous matters," she said, "that are distracting the attention of the court and preventing her from giving evidence proper consideration. We will take a recess of fifteen minutes in order that the court may retire and find out whether her back hair is really coming down."—Chicago Post.

ABOUT VANILLA.

A Plant Esteemed for Its Flavor and Aroma.

The vanilla is an orchideaceous, climbing vine, which often reaches over 30 feet in height, and is usually about the thickness of one's little finger. The vine is round, knotted at intervals, and covered with dark green spear-shaped leaves. It throws out a number of thin arms or aerial roots as it rises, which, attaching themselves to neighboring trees, appear to derive therefrom such nutriment that the vines are little dependent on the soil—in fact, often when all other modes of supply are cut off these holdfasts will entirely nourish the plant. Occasionally the wild vines completely cover the branches of the tree, and, running from it into adjacent ones, they will hang in huge flocks and arches so thick that they seriously impede one's progress in the bush. The vines blossom profusely—usually in the spring—the strange and delicate flowers, with their long, straggling and pale yellow petals, springing from the angles where the leaves branch off. After a few days' existence, the flowers wither and fall, and as their chance of fertilization through any of the outside agencies on which they depend is a brief one, and precarious at best, it is not surprising to find that very few of them are succeeded by fruit. This takes the form of a large pod, and, strange to say, although the pods attain their full growth within fifty days from the fall of the petals, they take fully seven months more to ripen. The pods vary from 5 to 12 inches in length and are about like a banana, but are better described as resembling a knife sheath; hence the name vanilla, which is a corruption of the Spanish word vainilla—a small scabbard. Each pod contains a quantity of small black granules, surrounded by a balsamic pulp whose peculiar combination of oil and acid is supposed to impart to the pods that delicious flavor and powerful aroma for which they are so justly esteemed.—Chambers' Journal.

A CO-OPERATIVE COLONY.

An Example Is the Settlement of Cosmo in Paraguay.

Comparatively few persons are aware of the existence in Paraguay of a little English-speaking colony named Cosmo, and of its attempt to organize a community on the highest co-operative lines. Beginning in 1894 as the result of a secession from the New Australia colony, the founders of Cosmo seem to have steered clear of the shoals and quicksands which wrecked the parent movement. One of the "fathers" of the colony, although he is quite a young man, is John Lane, who says of the colony: "We are running now on the lines on which New Australia started; we are communistic in so far as we share our earnings equally, irrespective of the capacity of the individual. The present outlook is highly satisfactory, but we want more adult members. Our present population is sixteen women, all married, and twenty-six men; forty-two all told, exclusive of the children. We have 15,000 acres of land, half forest and half pasture, but only the forest land is good for cultivation. In the matter of finance our assets exceed our liabilities, and that is generally considered to be a sound position. We can easily raise our own food supply. Every family lives in its own house, and the bachelors have houses of their own, but take their meals at the co-operative dining-room, their cooking being done for them by colony labor. This co-operative commonwealth is governed by what is called a parliament, although it is only a committee of three, with a chairman or director of the colony. The ballot is taken by casting papers into a hat. Speaking of the industrial conditions in Cosmo, Mr. Lane said recently: "We have a forty-five hours' week, eight hours a day for five days and five hours on Saturday. Work starts just after sunrise and the men are employed in sugar-making and timber work. The married women are not on the organized working staff. They look after the homes, and any work they do outside is voluntary. Single women would be on the working staff."

Turned the Tables.

A lecturer was once decanting on the superiority of nature over art, when an irreverent listener in the audience fired that old question at him: "How would you look, sir, without your wig?" Young man," instantly replied the lecturer, pointing his finger at him, "you have furnished me an apt illustration for my argument. My baldness can be traced to the artificial habits of our modern civilization, while the wig I am wearing—here he raised his voice till the windows shook—"is made of natural hair!" The audience testified its appreciation of the point by loud applause and the speaker was not interrupted again.

Salisbury as a Saint.

It is not generally known that a statue of Lord Salisbury as a Christian warrior appears in one of the niches of the Inter-Saint and Beau Iul veredes in the chapel of All Souls' College, Oxford. About forty years ago the premier was elected a fellow of this college, and about the same time an elaborate stone screen was erected in the chapel attached to the Fellows' house. The sculptor evidently preferred to make his own saints instead of accepting those canonized by the church, and Lord Salisbury was chosen to fill up the vacant gap, and is therefore immortalized as a Christian warrior.—Chicago Journal.

REPORT TURKEY WILL YIELD

France's Naval Threat Has the Desired Effect.

WILL PAY QUAY INDEMNITY.

Mediterranean Squadron Returns Suddenly to Toulon—Resistance by Sultan Would Result in a Conflict—Position Taken by the Other Nations.

Paris, Nov. 2.—Advices received from Toulon late at night would imply that the French naval demonstration in the Mediterranean has had the desired effect to make Turkey yield to the demands of France. The following dispatch was received from Toulon: "The complete Mediterranean squadron returned to Toulon this evening and anchored in the roadstead." This would imply that the government has received news from Constantinople since morning which has not yet been divulged and which has induced a change of plan. It was reported that Admiral Caillard had been ordered to cruise within reach of a dispatch boat today for possible further instructions, and it is significant that the torpedo boat destroyer Hallebarde left Toulon at full speed during the afternoon to rejoin the squadron. A dispatch from Toulon to the Figaro confirms the report of the return of the entire squadron and adds that Admiral Caillard's division is still held in readiness to sail at a moment's notice. Editorially the Figaro and other morning papers express surprise at this perplexing and unexplained move after the dispatch of Admiral Caillard to the Levant had been officially announced. The decision to make a naval demonstration against Turkey was taken at a meeting of the cabinet Tuesday, at which M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, explained the sultan's procrastination regarding the French demands and the quay disputes.

Strength of French Squadron.

Admiral Caillard's squadron consists of the armored cruisers Admiral Pothuan, Chanzy and Latouche-Tréville; the second-class cruisers Du Chayla and Cassard, and the third-class cruiser Gallée. The crews aggregate 2,286 men, but the vessels will also carry landing parties. The newspapers approve the government's decision. The Journal des Debats says: "Everyone at Constantinople and the other capitals must be aware that France and Russia are completely in accord on this matter. Under these circumstances it is difficult to believe that the Ottoman government will not come to its sense, and recognizing its error before it is too late relieve us of the necessity of using other means than those of diplomacy and courteous discussion." La Liberté remarks that the fact that Admiral Caillard has embarked 2,000 marines is a warning to the porte that France will not stop before a slight show of resistance, but will go to the end, even though war should ensue.

Attitude of Other Nations.

Washington, Nov. 2.—M. Margerie, the charge d'affaires of the French embassy here, had a short interview with Secretary Hay in the afternoon, after which the secretary left at once for the white house. M. Margerie may be considered an expert in matters pertaining to the Levant, having spent several years at Constantinople as an attaché of the French embassy. He feels confident that there is not the slightest danger of a dissolution of the concordat owing to the action of the French government in sending warships to make a naval demonstration in Turkish waters and to seize a customs port. The other nations parties to the concordat understand the situation perfectly, in fact, most of them have grievances and claims themselves like the French complaints, so they may look with complacency upon the efforts to make the port meet its obligations.

Help Sufferers from Big Fire.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Thirty-five families, driven from their homes by the big fire with scanty clothing, were forced to seek shelter with the poor of the neighborhood, or, when these resources failed, to ask assistance from public charitable organizations. All through the day the six-walks in the vicinity of the fire were lined with piles of water-soaked and mud-covered household goods which had been dumped into the street when the fire swept across the triangular piece of ground bounded by Union and Kinzie streets, and Milwaukee and Austin avenues.

"Mother" Jones Advises Force.

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 2.—Twenty-five of the officials and organizers of the United Mine Workers of America attended the first day's session of the State Miners' convention here. A mass meeting at night was addressed by Vice President T. L. Lewis of the national organization. "Mother" Jones in her speech advised the miners to go home and resort to arms if necessary to accomplish their purpose.

Cebu Rebels Give Up.

SAFE-WRECKERS IN IOWA.

Crackmen Use Explosives to Rob Two Western Banks.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 2.—The bank of Arispe was entered by two robbers, who blew open the safe with nitroglycerin, knocking out a portion of the front of the one-story brick building. About $450 was secured by the robbers, who left their safe-blowing tools in the bank. While the robbers were at work a heavy rainstorm was in progress. The sheriff, with a posse, is following the robbers, who were seen to leave town.

Matlock, Iowa, Nov. 2.—Burglars

looted the Bank of Matlock of $2,000, of which $300 was silver. There were six men in the gang, all heavy armed. Four kept guard while two went inside. Three heavy shots of dynamite were fired, wounding a good many people. The safe and vault were wrecked and the building is badly wrecked. An old man in an adjoining building was compelled to go back to bed and keep still.

New Troops for Philippines.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Gen. Miles recommended that the Eleventh cavalry and the Twenty-eighth infantry be sent to the Philippines. Two regiments are all that the Philippines at present. These regiments are to take the place of regiments in the Philippines to be brought home which have been serving three years or more, and the terms of enlistment of the men about to expire. The order will not interfere with the department's plans for reducing the army in the Philippines. The regiments which are to be returned as the transports are ready are the Fourth, Seventeenth, Twentieth and Twenty-second infantry. These regiments have been longest in the islands.

Rushing Troops to Africa.

Aldershot, England, Nov. 2.—It is understood that, as a result of the conclusion arrived at by the cabinet, every available effective infantryman here will be sent to the front in South Africa between now and Christmas. The departure of the cavalry brigade from Aldershot (orders to which effect were received there last night, the troops being instructed to start for South Africa about the middle of November), will leave only a single regiment of regular cavalry, the Twenty-first Lancers, in the United Kingdom. Prince Arthur of Connaught, who is a second lieutenant in the Seventh (Queen's Own) Hussars, goes with his regiment to South Africa.

Fire Started by Robbers.

Larned, Kas., Nov. 2.—Shell's big livery barn was burned, together with twenty-five head of horses and a large lot of buggies and harness. At the same time the Santa Fe railroad safe was blown to pieces with dynamite and the depot badly wrecked. It is believed the safe blowers set the livery stable on fire in order to attract the crowd to another part of town while they worked on the Santa Fe safe. Over a dozen shots were exchanged between the robbers and citizens who rushed to the depot. In the darkness and confusion the robbers escaped. They secured no booty.

Dr. Mary Walker Ejected.

Oswego, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Dr. Mary Walker was excluded from membership in the Woman's Suffrage Association at the convention. She offered her fee, but it was returned to her and she was ejected from the building. The ground for refusal was her attack on Miss Anthony, in which she declared that a sixteenth amendment was not necessary. Mrs. Mariana W. Chapman of Brooklyn was elected president.

Beat and Rob Old Farmer.

Appleton, Wis., Nov. 2.—Two masked men entered the house of P. J. Gilmore, an aged farmer residing four miles from this city, pounded him into insensibility and secured a bank certificate of $100 and $80 in currency. Mr. Gilmore has lived alone in a small house on the Center road for many years. He reports having seen the two men pass his home earlier in the day.

Murdered by Yaqui Indians.

Tucson, Ariz., Nov. 2.—Joe Ramado, the owner of a large ranch near Guaymas, was assaulted by a band of Yaqui Indians and killed. The Yaquis raided the ranch, stealing the horses and corn. They visited several other ranches, and it is reported that they killed other ranchers. Almost every day during the past week raids have been made and the ranches along the river are almost deserted.

Life Sentence for Hermit.

Deadwood, S. D., Nov. 2.—The jury in the murder trial of W. H. Ward, the hermit of Pluma, S. D., brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree and Ward was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Sioux Falls penitentiary. A few months ago two boys of Pluma, Lee and Kirk Shepard, disappeared suddenly and Ward was arrested and charged with the crime.

Ross Sheridan, a well known and highly connected young man of Independence, Mo., in a fit of jealous rage shot and mortally wounded "Writ" Berkey of Gauda Springs, Kan., his rival in the affections of Mrs. Clara Williams, at the Independence Electric depot. Mrs. Williams and Berkey were waiting for a car, when Sheridan opened up, and, without warning, opened fire on Berkey. Mrs. Williams is a divorced woman. Sheridan is the son of Mrs. H. L. Sheridan, who is a newspaper writer.

and B. Molineux has served notice of a motion to quash the indictment against Molineux. The motion will come on before Judge McMahon in part No. 1 of the court of general sessions next Wednesday. ## "Straws Show Which Way the Wind Blows" and the constantly increasing demand for and steady growth in popularity of St. Jacob's Oil among all classes of people in every part of the civilized world, show conclusively what remedy the people use for their Rheumatism and bodily aches and pains. It acts like magic, cures where everything else fails, conquers pain.

Forepaugh Circus Train Wrecked.

The Forepaugh & Sells' circus train, which left New Orleans Monday night, was wrecked one mile this side of Baton Rouge at noon Tuesday. ## Chase of Suspected Robber.

An attempted arrest, a pistol fight on the streets between a suspect and several officers, a desperate flight by the fugitive, first in an ice wagon, then in a buggy and next on a horse, all of which he prevailed into service by the display of revolvers, the wounding of the suspect and his escape into the woods, caused common Sunday in Nashville, Tenn. It is reported that the fugitive is George Parker, alias "Dutch" Cassidy, alias George Cassidy, alias Ingerfeld, aged 36 years, a notorious western criminal.

THE CHAMPION WING SHOT.

Capt. Bogardus Has a Dangerous Experience but Comes Out Unhurt.

Ferris Wheel Park, Chicago, Nov. 4th.—Capt. A. H. Bogardus, the champion wing shot of the world, has spent the summer here. His shooting school has been one of the features of the Park during the season. He has given many exhibitions and his skill with the rifle is superb.

The Captain tells of a very close call he once had when living at Elkhardt, Ill. He had been a sufferer from kidney disease for several years and it rapidly developed into Bright's Disease. All his friends told him that this was incurable and that he would never get better.

To say that he was alarmed is to put it very mildly. This plucky man had faced many dangers and it made him sick at heart to think that at last he was to be conquered by such a cruel foe.

At last he heard of a medicine that had cured many such cases—Dodd's Kidney Pills. He used them and was completely restored to good health.

He says: "I attribute my present good health to Dodd's Kidney Pills and to nothing else."

We are always complaining that our days are few, and acting as though there would be no end of them.—Seneca.

Jennings sailed for England in September with the object of establishing his identity as the heir of Humphrey Jennings. # Barnum's Monkeys

"All well—all happy—lots of fun". That is the regular report from the monkey cage of Barnum's Circus ever since the keepers began dosing the monkeys with Scott's Emulsion. Consumption was carrying off two thirds of them every year and the circus had to buy new ones.

One day a keeper accidentally broke a bottle of Scott's Emulsion near the monkey cage and the monkeys eagerly lapped it up from the floor. This suggested the idea that it might do them good. Since then the monkeys have received regular doses and the keepers report very few deaths from consumption. Of course it's cheaper to buy Scott's Emulsion than new monkeys—and that suits the circus men.

Consumption in monkeys and in man is the same disease. If you have it or are threatened with it can you take the hint?

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

Rescue.
It looks as if winter was not far distant.

M. McKenzie has his new home about completed.

Bert Gowon, of Novesta, spent Sunday afternoon in our burg.

By reading the Beanley items of last week it looks as if a little law properly administered would stop some of the thieving in that vicinity.

James Dobson is rushing the stomping. He has about thirty acres cleaned up, and is now pulling the snags out of the farm formerly occupied by his father.

Quite a lot of the Mud Lake Canal is completed and quite a bit yet to dig. One good thing in favor of the ditch, at a depth of about four feet they found water, so the work is not quite in vain.

It is quite a sight to watch the teams hauling beans to market. Some men living five miles from Cass City haul to Elkton, a distance of twelve miles. Some in easy reach of Elkton haul to Bad Axe. Teams are passing each other, loaded, all the time, some going north, some east. The bulk of the traffic goes to Elkton.

An article recently appeared over the signature of our esteemed friend the Scriba from Deford, in which he advocates a revival of the old Blue Laws and the whipping post. He says a man comes to the fair with his wife and children, gets drunk, the wife and children must shift for themselves, etc. Don't you think, brother, you have the idea wrong end ahead? Suppose you were the man elected to wield the "rod." Just suppose you had the man strung up who sold the "fluid extract," would you not feel better at the job than to punish some poor mortal who perhaps was satisfying an appetite that was possibly an inheritance? or a man who had not the stamina to say no? Yet you would disgrace the man who drank, injure the feelings of his family, and let the real criminal go free, to ply his nefarious trade and wreck more homes, destroy more souls and fill the world with more woe. No, brother, you are wrong; if a dog worries your sheep do you club the sheep because the dog tried to destroy them? I rather think you would try a little gun practice and destroy the dog. The same rule works both ways, brother. Just as long as men are elected to office "who have their price" and the whiskey men are ready to pay that price, the present condition of things will continue and a whipping post on every forty acres would not do one atom of good. Think up some better and more humane plan, brother.

Mrs. G. Myers and David Guthrie, of Arbel, were united in marriage on the 26th.

Duncan Morrison has purchased the John Tuckey farm west of town, consisting of forty acres for $1,550 cash, and moved there this week.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the P. O. at Cass City, Mich., for the week ending Nov. 2, 1901: Mrs. Bella Mama Emma Cornfoot or McQueen, S. O. M. Ferguson, W. H. Richardson, Henry D. Karr, Thomas Farnsworth, H. S. Wickware, Postmaster. When calling for above please mention "advertised."

Mrs. Fred Lacroix, who has been ill for several months, died on Sunday, at her home on Sixth Street, aged forty-six years. Her maiden name was Anna Klock, and she was born at Almont, Mich. Besides her husband she leaves two sons, aged sixteen and twenty-four years. Funeral services were held at the house on Tuesday and were conducted by Rev. M. W. Gifford, of the M. E. Church.

Isaac Belknap, of Elmwood, and his hired man set out one day last week to see how many bushels of corn they could husk in a day. They put in eleven hours and upon measuring up they found they had husked 228 bushels, Mr. Belknap having 122 to his credit and Mr. Leish 106. Lyman Belknap assisted with the measurement and can vouch for its accuracy. Can anyone beat this?

On Saturday, P. S. Rice and A. A. P. McDowell, as commander and record keeper of Cass City Tent, No. 74, K. O. T. M., called upon Mrs. Eleanor J. Usher and presented her with a draft for $1,000, being the amount of the insurance held by her recently deceased husband, Philip O. Usher, in that order. The settlement has been very promptly made and speaks commendably of the business methods of the order.

Dr. W. A. Wellemeysers, who has practiced medicine here for a little over a year, has accepted the offer of a partnership with Dr. Avery, of Vassar, and moved his effects away this morning. We regret the doctor's departure, as he had become actively associated with several of our organizations, but he is to be congratulated upon the position secured, as Dr. Avery is an old and very successful practitioner. A branch office will be conducted at Fairgrove also.

Chas. L. Robinson had occasion one morning this week to let himself into the engine room of his laundry through the coal chute. He now wishes he hadn't. As he swung himself down a ring on his little finger caught on the square edge of a board and tore the flesh off the back of that member to the bone. The ring finally broke and the sharp ends also cut away the skin inside the finger. The doctor had to sew up the finger and Charlie carries a very sore hand.

Russel, the nine years old son of Daniel Robey, three miles west of town, met with a very peculiar accident yesterday, from which it will take him some time to recover. He was playing with a collie dog and during the frolic the dog had jumped up onto a small outbuilding. Russel called him to jump down and the dog obeyed but jumped against the boy in such a way as to knock him over and break both bones of his left leg. The fracture was reduced by Dr. G. M. Livingston and the boy is doing as well as can be expected.

The Celebrated "Leaf Ant."

One of the oddest little creatures in all animal nature is the "leaf ant" of Central America. Although different species of this oddity are known to inhabit the American continent from Brazil to Mexico, the real home of the true leaf ant is in Nicaragua. To all outward appearances this little insect is a common ant, but one of gigantic size, it must be admitted, when compared with the ants of our temperate regions, being on an average over an inch in length. The habit for which these ants are so celebrated, and one which we could hardly believe were it not for the testimony of reputable naturalists, is that of carrying a leaf for a sunshade, just as our women and men carry parasols and umbrellas for the same purpose.

When at work, the leaf carrying ants look like a little army in which each individual member is protected from the sun's rays by a little banner of green. Another remarkable fact in connection with the leaf carrier is that only those that work carry the little leafy protection. When a long file of burden bearers have deposited their budgets, they discard their parasols and return for a load without the leaf which made them such conspicuous objects when on the "up trip."

Millet and "The Angelus."

It was only after long years of struggle and dire poverty, through which Millet was consoled and supported by his wife, that the peasant painter was able to take the three roomed cottage at Barbizon and "try to do something really good." It was then that he began to paint that most beautiful "poem of poverty," the "Angelus," which is today one of the most valuable pictures in the world. Again and again he threw aside the picture in despair of ever finishing it to his satisfaction, and as often his wife replaced it on the easel and induced him to continue.

On one occasion he was so incensed at not being able to produce a certain effect that he seized a knife and ended the matter once for all had not his wife fortunately seized his hand and induced him to give the picture another trial. Thus it was that at last the "Angelus" found a place on the walls of the Louvre. The success it won encouraged Millet to paint many more pictures and thus place himself among the immortals in art.

Abraham Lincoln.

This Lincoln of the black loam, who built his neighbor's cabin and hoed his neighbor's corn, who had been storekeeper and postman and flatboatman, who had followed a rough justice round a rough circuit, who had rolled a local bully in the dirt, rescued women from insult, tended the bedside of many a sick coward who feared the judgment, told coarse stories on barrels by candlelight (but these are pure beside the vice of great cities), who addressed political mobs in the raw, swooping down from the stump and flinging embroilers east and west—the physician who was one day to tend the sickbed of the nation in her agony, whose large hand was to be on her feeble pulse and whose knowledge, almost divine, was to perform the miracle of her healing.—Winston Churchill's "The Crisis."

A Chinese Joke.

There was a man in Ch'ang-an who was very fond of giving dinners, and the food given was atrocious. One day a guest threw himself on his knees in front of this gentleman and said, "Am I not a friend of yours?" "You are, indeed," replied his host. "Then I must ask of you a favor," said the guest, "and you must grant it before I rise from my knees." "Well, what is it?" inquired his host in astonishment.

"Never to invite me to dinner any more," cried the guest, at which the whole party burst into a loud roar of laughter.—North China Herald.

Oddest Parasite in Creation.

Do readers know that the royal Bengal tiger is infested with one of the strangest creatures that ever lived? It is said to be a fact easily demonstrated or proved by one who has access to a zoological collection that the web of the foot of tigers of the above named species is inhabited by a blood sucking insect about the size of a common flea which is a perfect counterpart of a tiger in every particular, shape, claws, tail and stripes included.

Eternal Lamps.

A common superstition that the ancients possessed the art of making lamps which would burn forever for a long time obtained, and it was claimed that one such lamp was discovered in the tomb of Rosicrucius. Science, however, has long set this, together with other superstitions, forever at rest, since it has been demonstrated that fire will not burn in a chamber from which the air has been exhausted.

A Laugh Saved a Life.

The Rev. George Harvest, rector of Thames Ditton, England, was very absentminded, so that on one occasion he went into a friend's house, and, seeing no servant, he rambled over it, finally entering the room of an old lady ill of a quincy. He stumbled over a clothes-horse, and his awkwardness made the patient burst into such a fit of laughter that the quincy broke, and she lived many years to thank him.

Tunnels.

A New York newspaper remarks that "ferries come and ferries go, bridges rise and bridges fall, but tunnels last forever." There is a scientific truth in the observation. Of all works of man earthworks, plain earth mounds soddled over, are about the most enduring. A properly constructed tunnel is essentially a work in earth and so almost as permanent as the great globe itself.

School Report.

School Report of Dis. No. 3, Novesta, for month ending Nov. 1, 1901: Number days taught 20. Total attendance 523. Number boys enrolled 19. Number girls enrolled 24. Total enrollment 43. Percentage of attendance 60. Average daily attendance 26. Those who were not absent or tardy during the month: Donald Hamilton, Elmer Webster, Maggie McPhail. MARY L. MUMA, Teacher.

Women and Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, men—that is the order of a woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at Fritz's Drug Store, Cass City; or Francis Drug Store, Kingston—Get Green's Prize Almanac.

The Crosswell Democrat says that the Grand Trunk officials are thinking quite seriously of extending their road from Port Huron to Crosswell by way of Lexington and then to Bay City.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup, bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. R. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup. A. Bond, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

J. J. Powell, of Arbel, sustained quite serious injuries a few days since by falling from a load of hay to the ground and landing upon his head and shoulders.

A Physician Testifies.

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Soroggs, of Holt County, Ga. Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results. If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it degrades the system. You can prevent this by dieting but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. A. Bond, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Walter Bowerman, a 16-years-old boy, of Fostoria, accidentally shot a toe off and the joints below it were so severely splintered that 23 pieces of bone were removed. An artery burst and he is in a critical condition.

The Diamond Bracelet

By MRS. HENRY WOOD,
Author of East Lynne, Etc.

CHAPTER III.

Alice left her sister standing in the room and went upstairs. But she was more than one minute away; she was three or four, for she could not at first lay her hand upon the letter. When she returned her sister advanced to her from the back drawing room, the folding doors between the two rooms being as before, wide open.

"What a fine collection of bracelets, Alice!" she exclaimed, as she took the letter. "Are they spread out for show?"

"No," laughed Alice; "Lady Sarah is going to the opera, and will be in a hurry when she comes up from dinner. She asked me to bring them all down, as she had not decided which to wear."

"I like to dress before dinner on my opera nights."

"Oh, so of course does Lady Sarah," returned Alice, as her sister descended the stairs, "but she said it was too hot to dine in bracelets."

"It is fearfully hot. Good-by, Alice. Don't ring; I will let myself out."

Alice returned to the front room and looked from the window, wondering whether her sister had come in her carriage. No. A trifling evening breeze was arising and beginning to move the curtains about. Gentle as it was, it was grateful, and Alice sat down in it. In a very few minutes the ladies came up from dinner.

"Have you the bracelets, Alice? Oh, I see."

Lady Sarah went to the back room as she spoke, and stood before the table looking at the bracelets. Alice rose to follow her, when Lady Frances Chenex caught her by the arm and began to speak in a covert whisper.

"Who was that at the door just now? It was a visitor's knock. Do you know, Alice, every hour since we came to town I have fancied Gerard might be calling. In the country he could not get to us, but here—Was it Gerard?"

"It was my sister," carelessly answered Alice. It was not a true answer, for her sister had not knocked, but it was the readiest that rose to her lips, and she wished to escape the questioning.

"Only your sister," sighed Frances, turning to the window with a gesture of disappointment.

"Which have you put on?" inquired Alice, going toward Lady Sarah.

"These loose fancy things; they are the coolest. I really am so hot; the soup was that favorite soup of the colonel's, all calamus and cayenne, and the wine was hot; there had been some mistake about the ice. I had trusted the new man, and he did not understand it; it was all hot together. What the house will be tonight I dread to think of."

Lady Sarah, whilst she spoke, had been putting the bracelets into the jewel box, with very little care. "I had better put them straight," remarked Alice, when she reached the table.

"Do not trouble," returned Lady Sarah, shutting down the lid. "You are looking flushed and feverish, Alice; you were wrong to walk so far today; Hughes will set them to rights tomorrow morning; they will do till then. Lock them up and take possession of the key."

Alice did as she was bid. She locked the case and put the key into her pocket.

"Here is the carriage," exclaimed Lady Frances. "Are we to wait for coffee?"

"Coffee in this heat," retorted Lady Sarah. "It would be adding fuel to fire. We will have some tea when we return. Alice, you must make tea for the colonel; he will not come out without it. He thinks this weather just what it ought to be; rather cold, if anything."

Alice had taken the bracelet box in her hands as Lady Sarah spoke, and when they departed carried it upstairs to its place in Lady Sarah's bedroom. The colonel speedily rose from the table, for his wife had laid her commands on him to join them early. Alice helped him to his tea, and as soon as he was gone, she went upstairs to bed.

To bed, but not to sleep. Tired as she was, and exhausted in frame, sleep would not come to her. She was living over again her interview with Gerard Hope. She could not in her conscious heart affect to misunderstand his implied meaning—that she had been the cause of his rejecting the union proposed to him. It diffused a strange rapture within her, and though she had not perhaps been wholly blind and unconscious during the period of Gerard's stay with them, she now kept repeating the words: "Can it be? can it be?"

It certainly was so. Love plays strange pranks. Thus was Gerard Hope heir to fabulous wealth, consciously proud of his handsome person, his herculean strength, his towering form, called home and planted down by the side of a pretty and noble lady, on purpose that he might fall in love with her—Lady Frances Chenex. And yet the well-laid project failed; failed because there happened to be another at that young lady's side, a sad, quiet, feeble-framed girl, whose very weakness may have seemed to place her beyond the pale of man's love. But love thrives by contrasts and it was the feeble girl who won the love of the strong man.

Yes; the knowledge diffused a strange rapture within her as she lay there at night, and she may be excused if, for a brief period, she gave range to the sweet fantasies it conjured up. For a brief period only; too soon the depressing consciousness returned to her that these thoughts of earthly happiness must be subdued, for she, with her confirmed ailments and conspicuous weakness, must never hope to marry as did other women. She had long known—her mother had prepared her for it—that one so afflicted and frail as she, whose tenure of existence was likely to be short, ought not to become a wife, and it had been her earnest hope to pass through life unloving and unloved. She had striven to arm herself against the danger, against being thrown into the perils of temptation. Alas! it had come insidiously upon her; all her care had been set at naught, and she knew that she loved Gerard Hope with a deep and fervent love. "It is but another cross," she sighed, "another burden to surmount and subdue, and I will set myself, from this night, to the task. I have been a coward, shrinking from self-examination; but now that Gerard has spoken out, I can deceive myself no longer. I wish he had spoken more freely that I might have told him it was useless."

CHAPTER IV.

It was only towards morning that Alice dropped asleep; the consequence was, that long after her usual hour for rising she was still sleeping. The opening of her door by some one awoke her; it was Lady Sarah's maid.

"Why, miss! are you not up? Well, I never! I wanted the key of the jewel box, but I'd have waited if I had known."

"What do you say you want?" returned Alice, whose ideas were confused, as is often the case on being suddenly awakened.

"The key of the bracelet box, if you please."

"The key?" repeated Alice. "Oh, I remember," she added, her recollection returning to her. "Be at the trouble, will you, Hughes, to take it out of my pocket; it is on that chair under my clothes."

The servant came to the pocket and speedily found the key. "Are you worse than usual, miss, this morning?" asked she, "or have you overslept yourself?"

"I have overslept myself. Is it late?"

"Between nine and ten. My lady is up, and at breakfast with master and Lady Frances."

Alice rose the instant the maid had left the room, and made haste to dress, vexed with herself for sleeping so long. She was nearly ready when Hughes came in again.

"If ever I saw such a confusion as this jewel box was in!" cried she, as she put and grabbed a tone as she dared to use. "The bracelets were thrown together without law or order—just as if they had been so much glass and tinsel from the Lowther Arcade."

"It was Lady Sarah did it," replied Alice. "I would have put them straight, but she said leave it for you. I thought she might prefer that you should do it, so did not press it."

"Of course her ladyship is aware there's nobody but myself knows how they are placed in it," returned Hughes, consequently. "I could go to that or to the other jewel box, in the dark, and take out any one thing my lady wanted without disturbing the rest."

"I have observed that you have a gift of order," remarked Alice, with a smile. "It is very useful to those who possess it, and saves them from trouble and confusion."

"So it do, miss," said Hughes. "But I came to ask you for the diamond bracelet."

"The diamond bracelet!" echoed Alice. "What diamond bracelet? What do you mean?"

"It is not in the box, miss."

"The diamond bracelets are both in the box," rejoined Alice.

"The old one is there, not the new one. I thought you might have taken it out to show some one, or to look at yourself, miss, for I'm sure it's a sight for pleasant eyes."

"I can assure you it is in the case," said Alice. "All are there except what Lady Sarah had on. You must have overlooked it."

"I must be a great donkey if I have," grumbled the girl. "It must be at the very bottom, amongst the cotton," she soliloquized, as she returned to Lady Sarah's apartments, "and I have just got to take every individual article out to get at it. This comes of giving up one's keys to other folks."

Alive hastened down, begging pardon for her late appearance. It was readily accorded. Alice's office in the house was nearly a sinecure; when she had first entered upon it Lady Sarah was ill, and required some one to sit with and read to her, but now that she was well again Alice had little to do.

Breakfast was scarcely over when Alice was called into the room. Hughes stood outside.

"Miss," said she, with a long face, "the diamond bracelets isn't in the box. I thought I could not be mistaken."

"But it must be in the box," said Alice.

"But it is NOT," persisted Hughes, emphasizing the negative; "can't you believe me, miss? What's gone with it?"

Alice Seaton looked at Hughes with a puzzled look. She was thinking matters over. It soon cleared again.

"Then Lady Sarah must have kept it out when she put in the rest. It was she who returned them to the case; I did not. Perhaps she wore it last night."

"No, miss, that she didn't. She wore only those two—"

"I saw what she had on," interrupted Alice. "But she might also have put on the other without my noticing. Then she must have kept it out for some purpose. I will ask her. Wait here an instant, Hughes, for, of course, you will like to be at a certainty."

"That's cool," thought Hughes, as Alice went into the breakfast room, and the colonel came out of it with the newspaper. "I should have said it was somebody else who would like to be at a certainty instead of me. Thank goodness it wasn't in my charge last night, if anything dreadful has come to pass. My lady don't keep out her bracelets for sport. Miss Seaton has left the key about, that's what she has done, and it's hard to say who hasn't been at it; I knew the box had been ransacked over."

"Lady Sarah," said Alice, "did you wear your new diamond bracelet last night?"

"No."

"Then did you put it into the box with the others?"

"No," languidly repeated Lady Sarah, attaching no importance to the question.

"After you had chosen the bracelets you wished to wear, you put the others into the box yourself," exclaimed Alice. "Did you put in the new one, the diamond, or keep it out?"

"The diamond was not there."

Alice stood confounded. "It was on the table at the back of all, Lady Sarah," she presently said; "next the window."

"I tell you, Alice, it was not there. I don't know that I should have worn it if it had been, but I certainly looked for it. Not seeing it, I supposed you had not put it out, and did not care sufficiently to ask for it."

Alice felt in a mesh of perplexity; curious thoughts, and very unpleasant ones, were beginning to come over her. "But, Lady Sarah, the bracelet was indeed there when you went to the table," she urged. "I put it there."

"I can assure you that you labor under a mistake as to its being there when I came up from dinner," answered Lady Sarah. "Why do you ask?"

"Hughes has come to say it is not in the case. She is outside, waiting."

"Outside now? Hughes," called out her ladyship; and Hughes came in.

"What's this about my bracelet?"

"I don't know, my lady. The bracelet is not in its place, so I asked Miss Seaton. She thought your ladyship might have kept it out yesterday evening."

"I have neither touched it nor seen it," said Lady Sarah.

"Then we have had thieves at work."

"It must be in the box, Hughes," spoke up Alice. "I laid it out on the table, and it is impossible that thieves—as you phrase it—could have come there."

"Oh, yes, it is in the box, no doubt," said her ladyship, somewhat crossly, for she disliked to be troubled especially in hot weather. "You have not searched properly, Hughes."

"My lady," answered Hughes, "I can trust my hands, and I can trust my eyes, and they have all four been into every hole and crevice of the box."

Lady Frances Chenex laid down the Morning Post and advanced. "Is the bracelet really lost?"

NAPLES BREAKFAST VENDORS.

They Make the Morning Air Vocal with Their Calls.

The air of Naples becomes vocal with the characteristic calls of the breakfast vendors. "Hot, hot, and big as apples!" shout the sellers of peeled chestnuts. These are boiled in huge caldrons in a reddish broth of their own making, which is further seasoned with laurel leaves and caraway seed. A cent's worth of the steaming kernels, each of which is as big as a large English walnut, is a nourishing diet that warms the fingers and comforts the stomach of troops of children on their way to school, or rather to the co-operative creches, or nurseries, where one poor woman, for a cent a day each, takes care of the babies of a score of others who must leave them behind to earn the day's living.

Meantime dignified cows pass by, "with measured tread and slow," shaking their heavy bells and followed by their beguiled offspring, whose business it is to make them "give down" their milk at the opportune moment, and to let the milkman take it. Nothing can be funnier than this struggle between the legitimate owner, the calf, and the wily subcontractor of the lactal treasure. Although tied to his mother's horns with a rope long enough to reach, and even lick her bag, but not to get satisfaction out of it, his bovine wit is often sharp enough to give the slip to the noose and elude the vigilance of the keeper, occupied, perhaps, for the moment, in quarrelling with some saucy maid servant over the quantity of milk to be paid for. The scene which ensues is worthy of the cinematograph. As a sequel calf's tail is nearly pulled off, but he has spoiled the oppressor's game for one day, anyhow.—The Century.

Starting, but True.

"If every one knew what a grand medicine Dr. King's New Life Pills is," writes D. H. Turner, Despugetown, Pa., "you'd sell all you have in a day. Two weeks' use has made a new man of me." Infalible for constipation, stomach and liver trouble. 25c at T. H. Fritz's Drug Store, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston. Makes assimilation perfect, healthy blood, firm muscles, strong nerves. Quickens the brain, makes and keeps you well. Great medicine, Rocky Mountain Tea. 35c. Ask your druggist. Seymour Webb, Moira, N. Y., writes: "I had been troubled with my kidneys for twenty-five years and had tried several physicians but received no relief until I bought a bottle of Foley's Kidney Cure. After using two bottles I was absolutely cured. I earnestly recommend Foley's Kidney Cure." Take only Foley's. T. H. Fritz, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.
