The following letters remain unclaimed in the postoffice at Cass City for the week ending March 8, 1902: Chas. Hanson and Mrs. L. J. Deming. When calling for above please mention advertised.

H. S. WICKWARE, Postmaster.

The report reaches us that Mrs. J. P. Hows, formerly of this place but latterly of Los Angeles, California, died on the 4th inst. The deceased has many friends here who will be grieved to hear of her decease. She still retained her membership in the Lady Macabees of this place, and Mr. Howe is expected to visit Cass City shortly.

Donald McArthur writes to his father, from Oklahoma, in closing a letter, "It is said out here that a new corner asked a friend, 'Does the wind blow this way all the time?' 'No,' was the reply, 'Sometimes it blows the other way.'" He adds, "There are times when the wind seems to do a real exchange business out here."

S. Ostrander, who recently sold his shoe and furniture business here, has purchased forty acres of the J. W. Heller farm, one mile east and two miles north of town. The forty purchased is the corner forty containing the buildings, and the consideration was $2,100. Mr. Heller is advertising an auction sale. See another column.

While Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Wood were returning home from church on Sunday evening, after passing the small bridge, owing to the darkness the horse went so close to the edge of the elevated roadway that the buggy was capsized and both occupants thrown out. They were not injured, however, and the only damage was to the buggy which was quite badly broken.

There were two spoiled ballots. There were some irregularities connected with the election, C. W. Heller, the candidate for president, sitting on the board, and the names of several candidates on the ballot appeared with the initials only, but the supreme court has held that these irregularities do not invalidate the election.

The retiring council will meet tonight to receive the report of the board of election inspectors. The new council will consist of the following: President, C. W. Heller; clerk, C. W. McKenzie; trustees, G. A. Striffler, W. J. Schenck, F. C. Lee, E. Brotherton, J. H. Striffler, W. J. Campbell; treasurer, M. L. Moore; assessor, G. E. Perkins.

Take Notice.

Owing to a contemplated change in the personnel of our firm and the adoption of a new system in caring for our business, it becomes absolutely necessary that we have a complete adjustment of every item on our books before March 15th.

THE REVIVAL.

Evangelist Gilliam is Doing a Splendid Work Here.

The union evangelistic meetings which are being held at the Methodist Episcopal church here have been in progress now for a week, directed by Rev. Ralph Gilliam, of Boston, assisted by the pastors of the local churches, and will continue for the next week. A marked interest has been manifested and a large number have signed cards indicating a desire for a better life.

Mr. Gilliam is a strong and effective preacher, and preaches a straight gospel without cant or fanaticism. His method is to appeal to the reason and higher moral sense as the strongest motives to a Christian life. A large congregation gathered on Wednesday evening, notwithstanding the pouring rain, showing the deep interest in the question which was under consideration, "The Unanswerable Question."

Meetings are held each afternoon and evening, except on Saturday, and the influence of these services seem to be widening more and more each day. We understand that Mr. Gilliam has just been engaged to go to Duluth, Minn., for the entire month of April.

FROM ALL OVER MICHIGAN.

An Unknown Convict's Death in Prison.

FOXY ALCONA COUNTY SHERIFF

A Lowell Woman Poisoned by a Headache Powder Sent Her Through the Mail—A Neighbor Narrowly Escapes a Similar Fate—Other Matters.

Lowell's Mystery. Sheriff Chapman, of Kent county, believes fully that Mrs. Ada Klump, of Lowell, was murdered by a poison sent her through the mail. Some days ago Mrs. Klump received what purported to be a headache powder, prepared by a firm at Savannah, N. Y. On Sunday, March 2, her husband went to the barn to hitch up a team, intending to take his wife for a drive. Mrs. Klump complained of a headache and told her husband that she would try one of the headache powders that she had received. When he returned to the house he found her in convulsions, and in spite of medical aid hastily summoned, she died within a few hours. Her stomach was analyzed in Grand Rapids and found to contain enough strychnine to kill several persons. A similar powder was received by Mrs. William Miller, a near neighbor of the Klumps, and his has since been analyzed and found to be his strychnine.

It is now learned that the envelope containing the headache powder bore a one-cent stamp and was mailed in Lowell and not in Savannah, N. Y., the direction being apparently in a woman's hand. The powder was in a small envelope, and there was but one powder in the package. This smaller envelope was marked "Sample package."

It is the theory of Sheriff Chapman that someone took the powder sent by the New York concern and having put a large dose of strychnine in it, sent it to Mrs. Klump.

They Get Two Years. When it was a matter of much surprise to many here that Saltsbury and Salsbury, who were indicted by the federal grand jury on a charge of violating the United States banking law, appeared in the United States court in Grand Rapids Tuesday and pleaded guilty to the charge, MacLeod had nothing to say in explanation, but Salsbury made a detailed statement to the court of the acts of himself and MacLeod in relation to the bank and to the water contract. All the afternoon Salsbury and his wife were closeted with Judge Wany, who apparently went carefully into all the details of the case. A strong effort was made to get him to let both respondents off with a fine, and his friends thought it would be successful. Both respondents were in court Wednesday morning before it was called to order with their attorneys and both wives also present. When the court was ready about a sentence of two years in state prison, which is the limit.

Got His Man. Sheriff Potts, of Alcona county, is a lippy man, as he outwitted Ohio officials and landed his prisoner in Michigan. On Thursday last he went to Columbus, Ohio, to get extradition papers for G. S. Jackson, of Haskins, O., who is wanted in Alcona county on a charge of purchasing a carload of cattle here and giving a check for something over $500 on the East Side Banking Co., of Toledo, where he only had on deposit something like $13. The check of course was worthless. Sheriff Potts secured his papers and left for home on Friday on the prisoner at Bowling Green. He started back this afternoon. Jackson's attorneys tried to settle the matter, but failing to do so secured a writ of habeas corpus and waited at the depot in Toledo to receive them. The Michigan official was on to his job and left the train before the depot was reached, took a cab and drove over to the electric railway line, where he took a car and came.

An Unknown Convict. Thomas Kelly, if that is his true name, of which there is some doubt, died at the Jackson prison Saturday of consumption. He said his home was somewhere in Canada, but refused to divulge the place or the names of his parents. Father Schenkberg, of St. John's church, will care for the body. Kelly was received at the prison November 19 last from Calhoun county for five years for assault with intent to rob. He was charged with endeavoring to rob two women driving in the highway near Albion. It is believed he refused to reveal his identity out of consideration for the good name of his family.

Robbers Got $200. While William Higgins, a bookkeeper at Otte's branch laundry in Grand Rapids, was using a telephone Saturday night two men stepped in and showed revolvers under his nose. The robbers forced Higgins into the vault and commanded him to open the inner safe. He said he did not have the key. They told him he lied, but grabbing two cash boxes containing about $200, they fled out of the back door. Higgins gave the alarm, but by the time workmen in the basement appeared, they were beyond pursuit.

BEEF SUGAR FACTORIES IN U. S.

Funston's View of the Situation in the Philippines—Many Families Made Homeless by Great Floods at Patterson, N. J.—Other News Items.

Beef Sugar Production. The total production of beef sugar in the United States in the season of 1901-2, has aggregated 185,000 tons, an increase of 140 per cent from the 77,000 tons produced during the season 1900-1. There were 21 factories in operation in 1900, according to the census figures, and 11 more were started in 1901.

There are nine factories in course of construction for operation in 1902, as follows: Selawing, Cantonment, Mount Clemens and Ross, Mich.; Shelby, Ind.; Greeley, Eaton and Fort Collins, Col.; and Phoenix, Ariz., ranging in capacity of daily output from 500 tons to 1,000, the latter figure being the capacity at the Phoenix plant. Other companies have been organized with total capitalization of $4,000,000 and would require annually a working capital in addition, of $9,080,000. According to Special Agent Saylor they would purchase from the farmer annually $2,000,000; from the manufacturer $1,700,000; besides many other crude materials.

The number and aggregate capital of these prospective plants, by states, follow: Arizona two, $1,500,000; California five, $3,500,000; Colorado seven, $2,000,000; Indiana one, $1,000,000; Iowa six, $2,100,000; Idaho one, $500,000; Michigan twenty-eight, $14,900,000; Minnesota five, $2,400,000; Montana one, $200,000; New York two, $1,500,000; New Jersey one, $500,000; North Dakota two, $1,000,000; Ohio three, $1,350,000; Oregon one, $500,000; Pennsylvania one, $200,000; South Dakota two, $1,000,000; Utah three, $2,500,000; Wisconsin ten, $3,150,000; Wyoming two, $1,500,000.

Andre Was Murdered. A report sent out from the Hudson Bay post at Fort Churchill, about two and a half years ago, that Andre, the Swedish aeronaut and his associates had been killed by Eskimos, is confirmed by advices received at the head office of the company here.

Alston Churchill, factor at Churchill, which is the company's most northerly post on the west coast of Hudson's bay, has written that after about two years' search, the men sent out with the most information, a report similar to the one first published, in Pennsylvania one, $200,000; South Dakota two, $1,000,000; Utah three, $2,500,000; Wisconsin ten, $3,150,000; Wyoming two, $1,500,000.

Traces of the daring balloonist and his associates were followed for hundreds of miles, but it was impossible to locate the tribe who caused the death.

The story of the searchers is that Arctic Eskimos saw "olimik" (one of their largest boats) floating in the air. When it settled to the ground three white men strangely dressed came out with guns, which they indiscreetly fired. The Eskimos, who were terrified, were killed with musket balls, and everything of value taken.

The searchers found knives, tobacco and cartridges supposed to have belonged to Andre, in possession of one of the Eskimos. News that Andre undoubtedly met his death at the hands of the Eskimos has been forwarded to the Swedish government.

Funston's Plain Words. Brig-Gen. Frederick Funston was the guest of honor at a dinner given in New York Saturday night by the Lotus club. More than 300 members of the club were present. Gen. Funston discussed the situation in the Philippines.

"All of those men who have fallen since December, 1900, have been victims of a lot of misinformation and misguided people here in the United States. It is perfectly proper for us to have all sorts of opinions as to what we should do with the Philippine islands, but, for heaven's sake, let us keep them to ourselves until every square inch of that territory recognizes the sovereignty of the United States."

Gen. Funston then gave many examples to show that the Filipino leaders were not true patriots. He mentioned the slaying of Antonio Luna, who was ordered slain by Aguinaldo, who was ordered slain by Aguinaldo. Gen. Funston said that Aguinaldo had a case of smallpox, and on account of a case of scarlet fever among the recruits on board.

Mr. Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy, who confessed that he forged the Dreyfus bordereau, has, according to the Herald, been seen in New York city. He is said to have spent two hours in a Broadway restaurant in animated conversation with a young man and woman. Esterhazy was shabbily dressed and his features were extremely thin.

Insurgent leaders in the Philippines are resorting to all kinds of deception to retain control. A circular just issued by one insurgent commander says: "The United States is in the midst of a bloody civil war. The coin miners in Pennsylvania have risen against the government and at Chicago a great battle was fought in which 1,600 regular soldiers were killed. An army of anti-imperialists is besieging Washington. Roosevelt will be deposed and Dr. Bryan proclaimed president by the Democrats on the 4th of March next."

Miss Stone, the missionary, is expected home in May. She will lecture under the auspices of the International Chautauque Society. The porte has replied to Minister Leitchman's note regarding responsibility for her capture and denying all liability.

Senator Lodge has introduced an amendment to the Philippine bill which provides that whenever it is certified to the president that existing insurrection in the Philippines shall have ceased and peace is established, a general election shall be called for the choice of delegates to a popular assembly to be known as the Philippine assembly.

Beef Sugar Production. The total production of beef sugar in the United States in the season of 1901-2, has aggregated 185,000 tons, an increase of 140 per cent from the 77,000 tons produced during the season 1900-1. There were 21 factories in operation in 1900, according to the census figures, and 11 more were started in 1901.

There are nine factories in course of construction for operation in 1902, as follows: Selawing, Cantonment, Mount Clemens and Ross, Mich.; Shelby, Ind.; Greeley, Eaton and Fort Collins, Col.; and Phoenix, Ariz., ranging in capacity of daily output from 500 tons to 1,000, the latter figure being the capacity at the Phoenix plant. Other companies have been organized with total capitalization of $4,000,000 and would require annually a working capital in addition, of $9,080,000. According to Special Agent Saylor they would purchase from the farmer annually $2,000,000; from the manufacturer $1,700,000; besides many other crude materials.

The Norfolk, Va., Strike.

Saturday there was a violent demonstration in Norfolk, Va., lasting for three hours, during which time a mob of 1,000 to 2,000 men bombarded cars, beat non-union employees and in a hundred other ways showed their feeling against the Norfolk Railway & Light Company.

Several people were hurt by the missiles thrown through car windows by the mob, non-union motorman and conductor, and badly used windows and electric lights in the cars that were run after dark were demolished and several men now rest behind the bars in the police station, having been arrested by the police and other officers. Corp. Walker Truxton had a hand-to-hand contest with a strike sympathizer on the rear platform of a car in view of a thousand people, and held his man, whose name was Lee Curtis.

The committee of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, having in charge the arbitration of the strike, made their report shortly after midnight, having been in session for 50 hours. Their report stipulates that the employees shall be bonded as prescribed, that 85 per cent of the old employees shall be taken back to work and that 24 of the non-union workmen shall be retained, whether they became members of the union or not.

The Orion Fire. At 1 o'clock Wednesday morning fire was discovered in the general store of J. C. Premeure, which was a mass of flames. Before the fire was gotten under control five business places had been entirely destroyed, resulting in losses which will aggregate $30,000. There were no accidents, and the fact that only remains of the village to-day is due to the splendid work of the local fire department.

Dr. Paul, who was carried to his bed, suffering from blood poison. He was carried out by the firemen and taken to the home of John Kline.

The losses are as follows: J. Premeure, $20,000; insurance, $5,000. Post-office, fixtures, $2,000; W. M. Cook, stock, $200; building, $1,000; M. Charlton, building and stock, $2,000; Isaac Brown, $400; Park house, $2,000; Charles Berridge, $600; Dr. T. H. Cooper, $250; Dr. J. W. Fox, $200; Henry Kessell, $200; dwelling north of Premeure's, $500.

The fire was under control in less than an hour. The burned buildings will be replaced with more substantial structures, which will be completed before the opening of the resort season.

Eighteen Thousand Homeless. Flood conditions in the east are reported rapidly improving, although affairs in the Wyoming valley and northern Pennsylvania, generally, and along the Hudson, near Albany, are still in bad shape.

Dispatches from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., show that more than a score of lives were lost and $5,000,000 worth of property was destroyed in northeastern Pennsylvania. The danger is over, but the full extent of the damage is yet to be seen. Eighteen thousand homeless persons in the Wyoming valley are anxiously watching the backward course of the waters.

Not a western train entered the Grand Central station, New York, Tuesday afternoon or evening. All were stalled somewhere along the line or delayed by the floods. Nothing came down the Hudson river division, except the local train. At the station it was said that not even a report of any trains due could be had because of the condition of the wires.

The British steamer Tiber, from Louisburg, B. C. for Halifax, with a cargo of coal, is thought to have foundered with her captain and crew of 20 men.

Another scene in the drama of the closing of the State bank of Elkhardt, Ind., was enacted Wednesday afternoon, when Frank W. Cottle, cashier, whose alleged shortage of $32,000 caused the closing of the bank, fled out his brains.

George Musgrove, said to be leader of a band of southern desperadoes, does, and a brother of the noted "Black Jack," who was hanged at Clayton, N. M., a year ago, has been captured near Alamogordo, N. M. Musgrove is wanted in New Mexico for murder, post-office and train robbery.

The United States transport Meade, which sailed for Manila on Saturday last, returned to San Francisco late Monday night flying the yellow flag, and anchored at the quarantine station. Stopped the Express.

For the first time, probably in the history of the New York Central the passengers on the famous Empire State Express have been taken from the platform cars in rowboats at dead of night to save them from drowning in their berths. They were all rescued, but the train stands half submerged on the rails where the torrents forced the crew to leave it. One of the last trains to leave Albany over the Hudson river division for New York was the regular 5 o'clock train, which left Albany Saturday at 6 p. m. That train got through. The Empire State Express from the west followed soon afterward but was stalled by the ice and flood at Castleton. At that point half a dozen trains are now stalled. The passengers were taken off in rowboats and were cared for at near-by hotels or transferred in boats to relief trains waiting on the southern side of the break. Passengers on the stalled northbound trains were cared for in a similar way until arrangements had been made for using the tracks of the West Shore line beyond Hudson.

UNITED STATES OFFICIALS MAY NOT ACCEPT PRESENTS.

Very naturally it was embarrassing to Prince Henry to discover that President Roosevelt could not, as an individual, accept the splendid gift which his royal highness purchased for presentation at the White House.

But the constitution is clear and emphatic on this matter of gift-giving and gift-receiving between our public servants and foreign officials. "No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall without the consent of congress accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatsoever from any king, prince or foreign state," says the constitution.

The president may give presents to whomsoever he sees fit to so honor. Postmaster General Payne may accept a gift from Secretary Shaw, because both the giver and the taker are of equally salaried rank. Prince Henry's diamond-encrusted boxes and cups can be received by distinguished private citizens with perfect propriety. And so it goes.

But there is no provision, constitutional or statutory, against the receipt of gifts from distinguished foreigners by the families of our presidents or minor public servants. Hence, Miss Roosevelt may with impunity accept whatever bediamonded and be-Hohen-zollerned finery the admiral prince may have bought for her at the court jeweler's.

For the sake of diplomacy, our presidents have been in the habit of accepting, not as individuals, but "on behalf of the American people," whatever gifts have been proffered by distinguished foreigners. This has been the polite way out of it.

The most lavish generosity ever accepted in this tactful fashion was that of the Imam of Muscat, showered upon President Van Buren. This Arabian sultan sent to the then chief magistrate a Persian carpet, two Arabian horses, one case of attar of roses, five demijohns of rosewater, a package of cashmere shawls, a box of pearls, a sword and 121 diamonds. None of these gorgeous presents appears to have ever been retained by Mr. Van Buren.

The patent office was for many years the repository for gifts from foreign states of potentates which conscientious gold-mounted sheath was received by the father of Democracy from the same source and at the same time.

A pair of buckskin gloves presented to President Lincoln in 1865 by William Baker of New York is also exhibited in the museum.

Many gifts received by presidents on behalf of the nation have been left to adorn the White House. In the red parlor are a pair of handsome vases

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

DISCLOSE THIS WEEK ON RECOLLECTION AND FORGETFULNESS.

Text Hebrews VIII, 12: "Their Sins and Their Iniquities Will I Remember No More"—Good Advice for Christians of All Denominations.

(Copyright, 1903, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.) Washington, March 9.—From the letter to the Hebrews Dr. Talmage takes a text and illustrates how all offenders may be emancipated; text, Hebrews VIII, 12, "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."

The national flower of the Egyptians is the heliotrope, of the Assyrians is the water lily, of the Hindoos is the marigold, of the Chinese is the chrysanthemum. We have no national flower, but there is hardly any flower more suggestive to many of us than the forget-me-not. We all like to be remembered, and one of our misfortunes is that there are so many things which we cannot remember.

With the art of recollection, which I cannot too highly eulogize, is one quite as important, and yet I never heard it applauded. I mean the art of forgetting. There is a splendid faculty in that direction that we all need to cultivate. We might through that process be ten times happier and more useful than we now are. We have been told that forgetfulness is a weakness and ought to be avoided by all possible means. So far from a weakness, my text ascribes it to God. It is the very top of omnipotence that God is able to obliterate a part of his own memory. If we repent of sin and rightly seek the divine forgiveness, the record of the misbehavior is not only crossed out of the books, but God actually lets it pass out of memory.

"Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." To remember no more is to forget, and you cannot make anything else out of it. God's power of forgetting is so great that I, two men appeal to him and the one man, after a life all right, gets the sins of his heart pardoned, and the other man, after a life of abomination, gets pardoned. God remembers no more against one than against the other. The entire past of both the moralist, with his imperfections, and the profligate, with his debaucheries, is as completely obliterated in the one case as in the other. Forgotten forever and forever.

"Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." This sublime attribute of forgetfulness on the part of God you and I need, in our finite way, to imitate. You will do well to cast out of your recollection all wrongs done you. During the course of one's life he is sure to be misrepresented, to be lied about, to be injured. There are those who keep these things fresh by frequent rehearsal. Keep nothing in your possession that is disagreeable. Tear up the falsehoods and the slanders and the hypercriticisms.

Imitate the Lord in my text and forget, actually forget, sublimely forget. There is no happiness for you in any other plan or procedure. You see all around you in the church and out of the church dispositions acerbic, malign, cynical, pessimistic. Do you know how these men and women got that disposition? It was by the embalmment of things pantherine and viperous. Their soul is a cage of vultures. Everything in them is sour or embittered. The milk of human kindness has been curdled. They do not believe in anybody or anything. Where there is one sweet pippin in their orchard there are fifty crab-apples. They have never been able to forget. They do not know how to forget. They never will forget. Their wickedness is supreme, for no one can be happy if he carries perpetually in mind the mean things that have been done him. On the other hand, you can find here and there a man or woman (for there are not many of them) whose disposition is genial and summery. Why? Have they always been treated well? Oh, no. Hard things have been said against them. They have been charged with officiousness, and their generousities have been set down to a desire for display, and they have many a time been the subject of little tattle, and they have had enough small assaults like gnats and enough great attacks like lions to have made them perpetually miserable if they would have consented to be miserable. But they have had enough divine philosophy to cast off the annoyances, and they have kept themselves in the sunlight of God's favor and have realized that these oppositions and hindrances are a part of a mighty discipline by which they are to be prepared for usefulness and heaven.

Another practical thought: When our faults are repented of let them go out of mind. If God forgets them we have a right to forget them. Having once repented of our infelicities and misdemeanors, there is no need of our repenting of them again. While it is right that Christians repent of new sins and of recent sins, what is the use of bottering yourself and insulting God by asking him to forgive sins that long ago were forgiven? God has forgotten them. Why do you not forget them? No; you drag the load on with you, and 365 times a year, if you pray every day, you ask God to recall occurrences which he has not only forgiven, but forgotten.

Quit this folly. I do not ask you less to realize the turpitude of sin, but I ask you to have a higher faith in the promise of God and the full deliverance of his mercy. He does not give a receipt for payment or so much received on account, but receipt in full, God having for Christ's sake decreed "your sins and your iniquities will I remember no more." As far as possible let the disagreeables of life drop. We have enough things in the present, and there will be enough in the future, to disturb us without running a special train into the great Goney to fetch us as special freight things left behind. Let the train of your thoughts throw off the worse than useless freight of a corrupt and destroyed past and load up with gratitude and faith and holy determination. We do not please God by the cultivation of the miserable. He would rather see us happy than to see us depressed. You would rather see your children laugh than to see them cry, and your Heavenly Father has no fondness for hysterics.

Not only forget your pardoned transgressions, but allow others to forget them. The chief stock on hand of some people is to recount in prayer meetings and pulpits what big sins drels they once were. They not only will not forget their forgiven deficits, but they seem to be determined that the church and the world shall not forget them. If you want to declare that you have been the chief of sinners and extol the grace that could save such a wretch as you were, do so, but do not go into particulars. If you, have any scars got in honorable warfare, show them, but if you have scars got in ignominious warfare do not display them. I know you will quote the Bible reference to the horrible pit from which you were digged. Yes, be thankful for that rescue, but do not make displays of the mud of that horrible pit or splash it over other people. Sometimes I have felt in Christian meetings discomfited and unfit for Christian service because I had done none of those things which seemed to be, in the estimation of many, necessary for Christian service. For I never swore a word or ever got drunk or went to compromising places or was guilty of assault and battery or ever uttered a slanderous word or ever did any one a hurt, although I knew my heart was sinful enough, and I said to myself, "There is no use of my trying to do any good, for I never went through those depraved experiences." But afterward I saw consolation in the thought that no one gained any ordination by the laying on of the hands of dissoluteness and infamy.

And though an ordinary moral life, ending in a Christian life, may not be as dramatic a story to tell about, let us be grateful to God rather than worry about it if we have never plunged into outward abominations. It may be appropriate in a meeting of reformed drunkards or reformed debauchees to quote for those not reformed how desperate and nasty you once were, but do not drive a scavenger's cart into assemblies of people the most of whom have always been decent and respectable. But I have been sometimes in great evangelized meetings where people went into particulars about the sins that they once committed, so much so that I felt like putting my hand on my pocketbook or calling for the police lest these reformed men might fall from grace or at their old business of theft and drunkenness or cut-throatery. If your sins have been forgiven and your life purified, forget the waywardness of the past and allow others to forget it.

But what I most want in the light of this text to impress is that we have a sin-forgetting God. Suppose that on the last day—called the last day because the sun will never again rise up on our earth, the earth itself being flung into fiery demolition—supposing that on that last day a group of infernal spirits should somehow get near enough the gate of heaven and challenge our entrance and say: "How canst thou, the just Lord, let these souls into the realm of eternal gladness? Why, they said great many things they never ought to have said, and they did a great many things they ought never to have done. Sinners are they—sinners all."

And suppose God should deign to answer. He might say: "Yes, but did not my only Son die for their ransom? Did he not pay the price? Not one drop of blood was retained in his arteries; not one nerve of his that was not wrung in the torture. He took in his own body and soul all the suffering that those sinners deserve. They pleaded that sacrifice; they took the full pardon that I promised to all who, through my Son, earnestly applied for it, and it passed out of my mind that they were offenders. I forgot all about it. Yes, I forgot all about it. 'Their sins and their iniquities do I remember no more.'" A sin-forgetting God! That is clear beyond and far above a sin-forgiving God. How often we hear it said, "I can forgive, but I can not forget." That is equal to saying, "I verbally admit it is all right, but I will keep the old grudge good." There is something in the demeanor that seems to say: "I would not do you harm. Indeed I wish you well, but that unfortunate affair can never pass out of my mind." There may no hard words pass between them, but until death breaks in the same coolness remains. But God lets our pardoned offenses go into oblivion. He never throws them up to us again. He feels as kindly toward us as though we had been spotless and positively angelic all along.

Many years ago a family consisting of the husband and wife and little girl of two years lived far out in a cabin on a western prairie. The husband took a few cattle to market. Before he started his little child asked him to buy for her a doll, and he promised. He could after the sale of the cattle purchase household necessities and certainly would not forget the doll he had promised. In the village to which he went he sold the cattle and obtained the groceries for his household and the doll for his little darling. He started home along the dismal road at nightfall. As he went along on horseback a thunderstorm broke, and in the most lonely part of the road and in the heaviest part of the storm he heard a child's cry. Robbers had been known to do some bad work along that road, and it was known that this herdsmen had money with him, the price of the cattle sold. The herdsmen first thought it was a stratagem to have him halt and be despoiled of his treasures, but the child's cry became more keen and rending, and so he dismounted and felt around in the darkness and all in vain until he thought of a hollow that he remembered near the road where the child might be, and for that he started and, sure enough, found a little one fagged out and drenched of the storm and almost dead. He wrapped it up as well as he could and mounted his horse and resumed his journey home. Coming in sight of his cabin, he saw it all lighted up and supposed his wife had kindled all these lights so as to guide her husband through the darkness. But no. The house was full of excitement, and the neighbors were gathered and stood around the wife of the house, who was insensible as from some great calamity. On inquiry the returned husband found that the little child of that cabin was gone. She had wandered out to meet her father and had gotten the present he had promised and the child was lost. Then the father unrolled from the blanket the child he had found in the fields, and, lo, it was his own child and the lost one of the prairie home and the cabin quaked with the shout over the lost one found! How suggestive of the fact that once we were lost in the open fields or among the mountain crags, God's wandering children, and he found us, dying in the tempest, and wrapped us in the mantle of his love and fetched us home, gladness and congratulation bidding us welcome. The fact is that the world does not know God or they would all flock to him.

There are certain names so magnetic that their pronunciation thrills all who hear them. Such is the name of the Italian soldier and liberator, Garibaldi. Marching with his troops, he met a shepherd who was in great distress because he had lost a lamb. Garibaldi said to his troops, "Let us help this poor shepherd find his lamb." And so, with lanterns and torches, they explored the mountains, but did not find the lamb, and after an unsuccessful search late at night they went to their encampment. The next morning Garibaldi was found asleep far on into the day, and they wakened him for some purpose and found that he had not given up the search when the soldiers did, but had kept on still further into the night and had found it, and he pulled down the blankets from his couch, and there lay the lamb, which Garibaldi ordered immediately taken to its owner. So the commander of all the hosts of heaven turned aside from his glorious and victorious march through the centuries of heaven and said, "I will go and recover that lost world and that race of whom Adam was the progenitor and let all who will accompany me." And through the night they came, but I do not see that the angelic escort came any farther than the clouds, but their most illustrious leader came all the way down, and by the time his errand is done our little world, our wandering and lost world, our world fleecy with the light, will be found in the bosom of the Great Shepherd, and then all heaven will take up the cantata and sing, "The lost sheep found!"

So I set open the wide gate of my text, inviting you all to come into the mercy and pardon of God—yes, still further, into the ruins of the place where once was kept the knowledge of your iniquities. The place has been torn down and the records destroyed, and you will find the ruins more dilapidated and broken and prostrate than the ruins of Melrose or Kenilworth, for from these last ruins you can pick up some fragment of a sculptured stone or you can see the curve of some broken arch, but after your repentance and your forgiveness you cannot find in all the memory of God a fragment of your pardoned sins so large as a needle's point. "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."

Six different kinds of sounds were heard on that night which was interjected into the daylight of Christ's assassination. The neighing of the war-horses—for some of the soldiers were in the saddle—was one sound, the bang of the hammers; was a second sound, the jeer of malignants was a third sound, the weeping of friends and followers was a fourth sound, the splash of blood on the rocks was a fifth sound, and the groan of the expiring Lord was a sixth sound. And they all commingled into one sadness. Over a place in Russia where wolves were pursuing a load of travelers and to save them a servant sprang from the sled into the mouths of the wild beasts and was devoured and thereby the other lives were saved are inscribed the words, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." Many a surgeon in our own time has in tracheotomy with his own lips drawn from the windpipe of a diphtheritic patient that which cured the patient and slew the surgeon, and all have honored the self-sacrifice. But all other scenes of sacrifice pale before this most illustrious martyr of all time and all eternity. After that agonizing spectacle in behalf of our fallen race nothing about the sin-forgetting God is too stupendous for my faith, and I accept the promise, and will you not all accept it? "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."

A seat on the New York stock exchange is worth $75,000 which makes it rather an expensive place for the owner to go back and sit down. After a woman gets married and has children, she is lucky if she gets time to read any other than the doctor book.

ANOTHER GRAND REPORT.

From His Majesty's Dockyard, Portsmouth, England, Where Upwards of 16,000 Men Are Constantly Employed.

Some time ago the Portsmouth Times and Naval Gazette published a most thrilling and remarkable experience of the wife of Mr. Frederick Payne, himself connected with the Portsmouth dockyard for many years. The report produced a great sensation, not only in Portsmouth, but throughout the country, being considered of sufficient importance for reproduction and editorial comment by the leading metropolitan and provincial presses of England, as showing the marvelous power which St. Jacobs Oil possesses as a cure for Rheumatism, its application having effected a perfect cure in the case of Mrs. Payne, after having been a helpless cripple and given up by several physicians.

We have now further evidence of its intrinsic value as a Pain Conqueror. Our readers will do well to follow the intelligent and highly interesting details as given in Mrs. Rabbits own words:

"To the Proprietors St. Jacobs Oil—'Gentlemen: My husband, who is a shipwright in His Majesty's dockyard, met with an accident to his ankle and leg, spraining both so badly that his leg turned black from his knee to his toes. The doctor said it would be months before he could put his foot to the ground, and it was doubtful whether he would ever get proper use of his leg again.

A few days after the accident I had a book left at the door telling about St. Jacobs Oil, so I procured a bottle from our chemist, Mr. Arthur Creswell, 379 Commercial Road. I began to use St. Jacobs Oil, and you may guess my surprise when in about another week from that date my husband could not only stand, but could even walk about, and in three weeks from the time I first used the Oil my husband was back at work, and everybody talking about his wonderful recovery. This is not all. Seeing what St. Jacobs Oil could do gave me faith in your Voleger's Curative Compound, also favorably mentioned in the book left at my house. I determined to try the compound on my little girl, who was suffering from a dreadful skin disease, the treatment of which has cost me large sums of money in going from one doctor to another with her, all to no purpose.

She has taken two bottles of Voleger's Curative Compound, and one would now hardly take her for the same child. Her skin has such a nice healthy color after the sallow look she has always had.

"I shall never cease to be thankful for the immense benefit we have derived from these two great remedies of yours. I think it a duty to recommend these medicines now I have proved their value.

(Signed) "Elizabeth S. Rabbits, "33 Grafton Street, Mile End, "Landport, Portsmouth, England."

A liberal free sample of Voleger's Compound will be sent by addressing St. Jacobs Oil, Ltd., Baltimore.

The above honest, straightforward statement of Mrs. Rabbits evidence is stronger and far more convincing than pages of paid advertisements, which, though in themselves attractive, yet lack that convincing proof which Mrs. Rabbits' description of her own experience supplies. St. Jacobs Oil has a larger sale throughout the world than that of all other remedies for outward application combined, and this can only be accounted for from the fact of its superiority over all others.

SCOTLAND'S LAW FORBIDS GOLF.

Some Facts That Devotees of the Game May Not Know.

Scotland, as everybody knows, is the land where golf originated and the land where it most flourishes. But if the law was strictly enforced north of the Tweed it would go hard with the players of the royal game in "Bonnie Scotland." Golf players there may not know it, but they are liable to a sentence of death for their indulgence in their favorite sport. Technically this is literally a fact. In ancient times, when Scotland always had work for her soldiers to do, all young men were required to perfect themselves in archery. They preferred to play golf, and so serious a rival did the game become that it was for a time suppressed and made a capital offense. That curious law never has been repealed, and may still be found on the statute book. There seems to be no record, however, of the law ever having been enforced. This legislation in regard to golf reminds one of Kingling's charge that football and cricket are occupying the attention of the youth of England to the exclusion of the more serious business of fighting—his attack on "The flannelled fool at the wicket and the muddled oaf at the goal."

For Her Sister's Sake.

Stendal, Ind., Mar. 10th.—Mrs. Sarah A. Shrode of this place says: "I suffered much as many other women do with Kidney and Bladder Troubles. I tried many medicines but got no relief until I used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Nine boxes of this remedy cured me completely and I feel it my duty to my fellow women to make this statement.

"I can heartily recommend them to any woman suffering with Kidney and Bladder Afflictions."

The words of Mrs. Shrode will be good news to many of her suffering sisters. Dodd's Kidney Pills have proven themselves to be sick women's best friend for they are an effectual in all cases of Female Weakness as in Bladder and Kidney Disease.

The miser's walk is represented as stooping, noiseless, with short, nervous, anxious step.

Timber Wolves Numerous in Northern Minnesota.

Timber wolves are terrorizing the inhabitants of northern Minnesota this winter. For the first time in the history of logging operations in that section woodsmen are afraid to go any distance from camp after nightfall. Even when traveling in numbers and armed they are afraid of being pounced upon by a pack.

Among the many adventures with wolves reported lately are a few of thrilling interest. The most extraordinary was that of Paul McKay, a tie-maker. He was working on a small contract thirty miles northwest of Duluth, getting out ties for a logging-road. One night in the latter part of January he worked later than usual, and it was already dark when he started for camp, two miles away. McKay had not thought seriously of danger something extraordinary happened. Two of the wolves fell upon the third and killed and devoured it. It was a terrible fight for a short time. Then the other two wolves quarreled and fought, and finally left the tree, continuing their hostility toward each other, snapping and barking, until they could no longer be heard. McKay was taken from the tree almost dead from cold by two friends who had come to search for him.

Deer and bear have both been killed within the city limits of Duluth within the last year or two, but it was this winter, for the first time, that a man has been pursued by wolves within those limits. On Feb. 2 George Rohr started at dusk to return to the city from Knife River, a distance of about eighteen miles. After passing French River five or six wolves started in pur-new hope. There were three rabbits and Rohr experimented by throwing out one. It had the desired effect of halting the entire pack. The rabbit was but a morsel for half a dozen famished wolves, and again they came on with loud, fierce cries. But the rapidly tiring horse had gained a few hundred feet by the delay and at the proper time Rohr threw out another rabbit.

The wolves fought for a moment over this and again did the horse increase the distance between the sleigh and the pack. This was repeated once more and the rabbits were gone, but before the beasts could overtake the sleigh again the horse dashed up to a point opposite the Duluth pumping station, nine miles east of the city hall. This meant safety for man and beast. The pursuit had covered more than from wolves, though he knew that it existed. He had scarcely got started for camp before the woods resounded with the howls of wolves. McKay was instantly panic-stricken. He took to his heels and ran for his life, but he was soon aware that the wolves had scented him and were after him. McKay realized that his only hope lay in climbing a tree and he hurriedly scrambled into a poplar about six inches in diameter. In less than two minutes the panting, almost exhausted, and terrified man was looking down on three wolves. Their eyeballs glowed like balls of fire, and McKay was so scared that he was afraid he would fall out of the tree from sheer terror. Then suit of the sleigh. Their howls struck through the clear, still air like a knife and Rohr, who was unarmed, gave the frightened horse free rein and the whip. The horse was a well-bred animal and the road was good. Rohr said that the horse actually gained on the wolves for the first mile and then they gained on the horse. Steadily the wolves drew nearer and their yelps contained a note of triumph that Rohr did not fail to understand.

At last the wolves were only fifty feet behind. Rohr happened to notice some rabbits in the bottom of the sleigh. He had bought them from a boy at Knife River to take home to his wife. He was instantly inspired by a three miles and it proved a close call for man and horse.

Of all the wild animals found in the Northwest, the great gray timber wolf is most feared. It is only in winter that the animal is dangerous. The gray wolf is not as cunning as a fox, but it is just as wise. The wolf, even when pressed by hunger, will shun poisoned meat, no matter how cleverly the decoy has been placed. He is wise to the tricks of man to compass his destruction. They are afraid of firearms, instinctively guessing their danger. The wolf is cowardly and cruel, but harmless when his stomach is full. He is one of the uncompromising foes of civilization.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already. Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin; no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion. Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work--you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

We are sorry that we have to chronicle the death of one of our beloved neighbors, Jonathan Wilson, who departed this life last Friday evening, March 7th. Mr. Wilson was born in the town of Moy, county Tyrone, Ireland, the year 1812, was married in 1833 and emigrated to Goderich, Ont., in 1842. His wife died in 1890, after which he came to Huron county, Mich., visiting with his family also spending one year in Denver, Colorado, with his son, Abram Wilson. For the last six years he made his home with his grandson, Richard Parr, Jr., where he was lovingly cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Parr. Deceased had four sons and one daughter, two sons, John and Abram, and Mrs. R. Parr, senior, survive him. Deceased is the last of a family of thirteen. It can be truly said of him, he lived here for Heaven, always attending his church and always testifying of God's goodness to him and His great care over him. He fully trusted and whilst he was racked with pain he often asked God if it was His will to take him to Himself but would say "That will be done." His end was peaceful.

Servant of God well done,

Neosho Falls, Kans., Nov. 13, 1900.

Dear Sir:—For almost fifteen years I suffered from Indigestion, and last winter thought I would die, when my doctor, Dr. A. J. Lieurance, of this place, advised me to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which I did, and two bottles cured me, so that I have not been troubled since.

If any one should offer me $500 for the good Syrup Pepsin has done me I would not think of taking it. No one can take your medicine without being convinced of its more than wonderful cures. I recommend it to all my friends as a laxative and stomach remedy.

Yours with gratitude, Mrs. J. MORGAN.

Henry Kasemeyer, of Denmark township, who was arrested a short time ago for threatening to kill his wife, and once for assault and battery on his wife, was arrested again Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff Burgess, on a charge of assault and battery on his son, aged 6 years. Mrs. Kasemeyer got a divorce, and the son was given to his mother. Kasemeyer met his divorced wife and little son, last Wednesday night, at Reese, on the church steps, where the alleged assault was committed. He was under $200 bonds to keep the peace, and his bondsmen want to give him up. He pleaded not guilty Wednesday, and will be tried by a jury on March 25.

La Grippe Quickly Cured.

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called La Grippe," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill.

"The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with Grippe." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments. For sale at A. Bond's, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Dangers of Pneumonia.

A cold at this time if neglected is liable to cause pneumonia which is so often fatal, and even when the patient has recovered the lungs are weakened, making them peculiarly susceptible to the development of consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar will stop the cough, heal and strengthen the lungs and prevent pneumonia. T. H. Fritz, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Editor E. Chester Smith, of the Vassar Times, was in Millington Monday of last week drumming up business. He wished to return home on a freight and made an attempt to get aboard. He slipped and both legs went under the train. The left was amputated at the knee and the right was terribly gashed. It is doubtful if he survives the shock. Mr. Smith is 24 years old, a bright young man, and had only purchased the Vassar Times six weeks ago. Later reports say he is doing nicely and that one foot may be saved.

Would Smash the Club.

If members of the "Hay Fever Association" would use Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, the club would go to pieces, for it always cures this malady,—and Asthma, the kind that baffles the doctors,—it wholly drives from the system. Thousands of once-hopeless sufferers from Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis owe their lives and health to it. It conquers Grip, saves little ones from Croup and Whooping Cough and is positively guaranteed for all Throat and Lung troubles. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottles free at T. H. Fritz's, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

A prominent Chicago banker in a recent address to the pupils of a Western University, among other things said: "What are the educational qualifications which you will find most helpful in entering upon a business life? 1. To be able to write a good legible hand, to make good figures and to place them correctly—the units below units, tens below tens, and so on. 2. To be able to add, subtract and multiply rapidly and accurately. 3. To be able to express yourself clearly, briefly and grammatically in a letter and to spell words correctly. Very simple accomplishments, you say. Yes, and very rare. I have taken many young men into business in this country, and I can scarcely recall one who had these accomplishments."

An American Nabob.

A Remarkable Story of Love, Gold and Adventure.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

He hurried over to the table, upon which he laid a couple of bank notes, and tearing a sheet of paper from his vade mecum, wrote upon it these words:

"Accept this from a friend. Hope for brighter things in the future—trust in God."

A movement on the part of Mazette warned him it was time to be gone—he only lingered long enough to pin the money and the note to the table and then walked hastily down the stairs.

Once outside the marquis walked toward the Strand with a swinging stride—he seemed to have thrown off some of the cynical moodiness that had marked his intercourse with all men since striking London.

Finally he drew up at a shop almost in the shadow of St. Clement's church, in a neighborhood famous for its literary and artistic atmosphere.

Over the door was the sign of Duval, sacred to many who had handled brush or crayon in the world's metropolis.

M. Duval saw a prospective purchaser, and of course, was all smiles. Miniatures—certainly, he always kept them in stock and had the means of reproducing any photograph at short notice.

He watched the customer separate half a dozen of the little paintings on ivory from the rest, and marveled at the ease with which he had thus picked out all the works of one brush.

"These are the only decent ones you have. Tell me how much for the lot," he said, quietly.

Mr. Duval named a price far in excess of their intrinsic value, judging that he must have been blind to their merits, and was immediately cursing himself under his breath for not having added on a third more, for the marquis carelessly threw the amount down.

"This artist pleases me, sir. I would like to have a dozen family portraits done by the same brush. For each of these I shall pay five pounds, to the artist and your commission of one pound. Is that a bargain, M. Duval?"

The dealer snatched at it eagerly. Consider it settled, then. Now, I am an expert at this work. It is evident to me the artist is a lady.

"Monsieur is quite correct," bowing low and rubbing his hands together with pleasure.

"Very good. There is no need of paper between us—a nudum factum is quite sufficient. But, my dear Monsieur Duval, remember, they must be by the same brush."

"By to-morrow, monsieur, I shall hand you in a package of family pictures which I wish to add to my collection of miniatures. I shall also leave the money here, knowing you to be an honest man, to be paid to the artist, as fast as she completes each ivory."

"Mon Dieu! it is one great pleasure. Would that there were more customers like you, m'sieur. It would then be a happiness to be in trade," said the flattered and delighted dealer in pictures.

The marquis took his leave, filled with a sensation of having started the ball rolling, nor was it until he had gone that M. Duval thought to recall the fact that he had failed to ask his princely customer's name.

BOOK THREE.

The Modern Monte Cristo.

Two weeks more sufficed to make the Marquis of Montezuma famous in London. Every day new accounts of astonishing features connected with his life appeared in the papers.

Naturally the Marquis was the most sought after man in all London. Bushels of invitations poured in upon him over which his secretaries were busy all day, their labor being usually a polite note, declining the honor on account of pressing engagements.

The Marquis accepted a few invitations, and these generally took him to the clubs, though the season was so late few notables could be met with there.

Captain Livermore had forced the Hon. Prentice Langford to keep his word—he had early made the acquaintance of the American Midas, and they reached the friendly stage of intercourse that is marked by a game between gentlemen, but somehow, for the first time in his life, the genial captain found luck run harshly, and, instead of handling some of the wonderful wealth of the nabob, he was stripped of all the ready cash he had at hand.

Certain of retrieving his fortunes, he played time after time. Finally he staked his all on a last chance. Evil fortune followed him to the very end—he was compelled to drink the dregs, for he had lost.

Then, looking up into the face of his opponent, he saw a sparkle in the eyes of the Marquis, a glow of triumph that gave him a cold chill.

Where had he seen that same look before? Cudgel his brain as he would, he could not remember. "I am done for to-night, Marquis; you have won all I possess; your luck is prodigious," he said, as he rose.

"Ah! indeed, you are kind to say so, captain; but I assure you it was not always the case. The demon of misfortune has had his little fling at my door, even as he now knocks at yours, but you see I lived through it, and my hour has come. Shall we enjoy any further social play, captain? I assure you, it is a rare pleasure for me to engage in this little pastime with a gentleman of your skill and attainments."

"I hope to see you again if I am able to scrape any part of my resources together. If not, Marquis, you can be satisfied that I am down to bed rock. I never yield while I have a single weapon left in my hand," he said, grimly.

"I can well believe that, captain," and, returning Livermore's stiff bow, he watched the soldier saunter among the other club members, chatting with this one and laughing at some sally as though nothing had occurred to disturb his equanimity.

The Marquis frowned. He knew this man was absolutely ruined, and yet his victory had been robbed of half its sweetness because he had failed to quench that indomitable soldier spirit that refused to knuckle under at misfortune's call.

That afternoon he attended a garden party at Lady Catherwood's palatial home. Here he was, as usual, the lion of the occasion, and his hostess was kept busy introducing him. Finally they approached a single figure, standing under a royal palm that had been brought from the famous Catherwood conservatory for the occasion—the figure of a young woman.

Her back was toward those who advanced, but he could catch the queenly poise of her proud head. If her face did not disappoint the anticipation aroused by this first glance, she must be a fit subject for an artist's dream.

"My dear, I have succeeded in rescuing the Marquis, and bring him a captive in my train to pay his respects to my guest and kinswoman," said Lady Catherwood, blandly.

The queenly figure turned, and in so doing came under the soft light of a nearby lantern.

Thus the Marquis found himself face to face with a spectre of the past—again in memory he could see this gloriously beautiful creature gracefully gliding about in the dance, while mandolins and guitars struck weird chords that served as time to her flying feet; again he could see the gay sash tied in a knot that ornamented one plump shoulder, while a shining knife fastened by a scarlet ribbon, decorated the other, the cold, cruel blade nestling against her heating bosom as she thus invited her hot-blooded admirers to meet in mortal combat, for the guest of Lady Catherwood was no other than Senorita Juanita, the belle of Gautarica.

CHAPTER XVI.

From Over the Sea.

The Marquis of Montezuma bowed low. His face was as calm and unruffled as the summer sky; not even for an instant did he betray the slightest emotion, and yet the surprise must have inwardly staggered him.

The presence of Dona Juanita here, in England—did it portend disaster to his long-cherished plans?

As for the haughty daughter of the dora, she was affable enough, and smiled while extending a dainty hand which he was compelled to accept.

Lady Catherwood had scurried away to look after some necessary details connected with her duties as hostess, for one cannot entertain and enjoy themselves at the same time.

A silence fell upon the two. The senorita was looking at her companion under half-closed lids, and he awaited what he knew was coming—awaited it with that calmness natural to security.

"Senor Jack, between you and me, there is no need of this coldness, this secrecy. Surely you could not believe me so blind that I did not recognize you at the first glance," said the girl, suddenly laying a hand on his arm.

"I realized that and I have been simply waiting until you might see fit to speak. You see I admit all you say—I am free to confess it," was the cool reply he made.

"Ah, Senor Jack, you are a sphinx—I can make nothing of you. Let me commence upon another tack. You have declared yourself incapable of affection, yet I have known you to lean upon one man with such confidence that I am sure he occupied a place in your heart."

"The Marquis showed signs of emotion at last—his wonderful reserve had been pierced.

"Yes," he replied, sadly. "To this day General Barrojo has not been seen in Gautarica," she continued.

"Poor Pedro—faithful friend," he muttered.

"You alone know his fate, Senor Jack."

"Yes, but all the world shall soon know it, for I have had his feats of arms blazoned upon a stone just about to be sent over. It will be set up in San Jose Cemetery, where his body has lain these two years."

"Is it possible—his death then is a mystery—it was connected with your own adventures?"

"True, Senorita. Together we sought a treasure, shoulder to shoulder we met those who would have robbed us of our prize. We conquered, but Barrojo fell, bleeding in every vein. Our written compact gave the survivor all. His dying wish was that his body should be removed to consecrated ground. There he has lain under a stone marked only 'Don Pedro, who gave his life in battle for a Friend.' It shall be so no longer—all Gautarica shall ring with the valor of his last deed, and crowd to his grave to do the brave old hero honor."

The Marquis for once had been thrown off his guard by the revival of these never-to-be-forgotten scenes, and as memory again brought the heroism of Barrojo before him his face lighted up with an enthusiasm it had not been allowed to disclose, lo, these many days.

And Dona Juanita, feeling the transitory change, surveyed him with kindling eyes.

"Ah! Senor Jack, such satisfaction is sweet to the heart of those who have loved and been thrown aside. I sympathize with you, and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to be allowed a share in your plans—to make your interests my own. Perhaps a woman's wit might help you to secure a quick and terrible revenge."

"You mean well, Dona Juanita; I thank you for the interest shown in my welfare, but whatever my plans may be, they must concern me alone. I could not permit any one to join me in their prosecution, least of all you, whom I have known and respected in other days. So I beg that you will forget what you said, and let us hold intercourse as friends who have met after long separation."

One look she gave him; it was like the glowering stars of a tigress about to leap; then her mood suddenly changed, and she laughed in a mellow way that had no trace of anger in it—in times past this peculiarity had been very manifest in her disposition—the sudden change of front such as marks the consummate actress and the dangerous woman.

"Just as you say, Marquis, but I have a rarely obstinate nature, and, having set my mind on any object it is hard to balk me. Here comes my delightful hostess and kinswoman. At some later date I trust to see you again, when we may chat over scenes in the misty past."

He nodded assent.

The Marquis was glad when his lady dragged him away to another part of the garden to meet others of her fair guests; but he understood that hidden meaning lay beneath the words which the black-eyed Spanish beauty floated after him, and which would arise many times to haunt him:

"An revoir, Marquis; I always keep my word!"

The opportunity had come at length. A few hasty words from his hostess and the Marquis found himself face to face with the woman whose false-ness to her vows had sent him, a smooth-faced young man, an exile from England five years before.

He had prepared for the meeting, and not by the quiver of an eyelid did he betray himself.

Fedora was as lovely and charming as ever, more matronly, perhaps, but showing no sign of the passage of time.

Several times the Marquis knew his companion was looking at him intently, thinking herself unobserved.

Perhaps some faint memory was struggling for existence in her mind, some floating straw at which she clutched in vain.

Sooner or later doubtless she would awaken to the discovery of his identity, but when that time came the Marquis believed he would have so aroused the old passion that must, during these years, have lain dormant in her heart, that she would even give up a ruined husband, a wretched home and his him.

Hunting with Trained Wolves.

Bert Decker, a young sportsman of Tuscola, Ill., has succeeded in taming two wolves, and they are very valuable as hunters. He captured them when young, raised them as "kittens" and now, though as large as shepherd dogs, they are quite tame and playful. Decker says the wolves can outrun dogs on the hunt, and are very longwinded. Their favorite way of catching a rabbit is to run alongside of him, put their nose underneath Mr. Cottontail, and throw him ten or twelve feet in the air, catching him in their mouth as he falls. The wolves always return to their master when other sportsmen undertake the training of wolves to supplant dogs in hunting, and it is probable that wolves will find a place in future kennels.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Counterfeiters.

There is nothing which Uncle Sam protects with greater care than his currency. Because Uncle Sam's money is good there are always people ready to counterfeit it, and for these people Uncle Sam has a special body of secret service detectives always on the watch. The most dangerous counterfeiters are those which most closely imitate the original, and to arrest the makers of dangerous counterfeiters the United States spurs no efforts and no expense. It seems a pity that the United States government could not extend its surveillance of counterfeiters to those who counterfeit wholesome foods, reliable medicines and other articles necessary to the health of the public.

Germany has 800 more physicians than it had in 1900. The present number is about 28,175.

Long nails, very wide at the top and bluish in appearance, denote bad circulation. Long-nailed men and women are less critical and more impressionable than those with short nails.

Seventeen Miners Killed in Succession of Snowslides.

Seventeen men were killed in a series of snowslides which occurred in the immediate vicinity of the Liberty Bell mine on Smuggler Mountain, three and a half miles north of Telluride, Colo.

No less than four distinct slides occurred, each one claiming two or more victims. The first slide occurred at 7:30 o'clock in the morning and carried away the tramhouse of the mine. The slide came without warning. The three large buildings were carried down the steep mountain side a distance of 2,000 feet and ground to splinters, not a board being left intact. The snow and debris piled in the bottom of the canyon twenty-five feet deep.

Those who escaped the slide at once began the work of rescuing their less fortunate companions. A dozen or more were taken out alive, some of them badly injured, however.

Shortly after noon, while the work being killed. The others were more or less injured.

Nearly all the buildings of the Liberty Bell mine were carried down by the slide. One wing of the avalanche shot 1,700 feet across the canyon, piling up wreckage on the opposite mountains.

A third slide came down at 3 o'clock, about one mile below the Liberty Bell mines, and Gus von Fintel, John Powell and Paul Dalpra, who were on their way to the scene, were swept away.

Shortly afterward the fourth slide caught a party going from Telluride, killing two.

The buildings of the mine occupied a bench on the mountain side, and were erected in a location that was supposed to be protected from snowslides by a ridge which it was thought would divert the course of any avalanche that might be started. The vast accumulation of snow within the last two weeks, however, gave the slide

Roof Garden and Church.

A roof garden where religious meetings, church music and ice cream suppers will take the place of vaudeville and ragtime is a scheme recently the same comforts and attractions as is afforded by saloons and theaters. We can then interest many more persons than we would otherwise attract. Our plan is to erect a building four stories high. evolved by the Rev. Charles Reign Scoville, pastor of the Metropolitan Church of Christ, Chicago. The directors of the church already have approved Mr. Scoville's plans, and arrangements are being made to raise the necessary money.

"What we want to do," said the Rev. Mr. Scoville, "is to establish a place for religious services which will offer

"The basement will contain a well equipped gymnasium and the roof will be converted into a summer garden where we can hold meetings and concerts. We will not only offer a place where the public can find relief from the heat, but the garden will be enclosed by wire screening which will keep out bugs and mosquitoes."

Row Over Heidelberg Ruins. There is a row over the beautiful castle of Heidelberg. One set of architects declares that the ruins are in a dangerous condition and proposes the restoration of the greatest number of buildings to the condition in which they were when the French burned the castle in 1789. Others assert that the ruins will stand forever, and that the projected restoration is an act of vandalism, as no trustworthy description of the castle before its destruction is to be had.

Modern Postal System. The comparatively modern origin of the present postal system, not only in Great Britain, but all over the world, is shown by the fact that King Edward is the first monarch whose accession has made the issue of freshly designed postage stamps necessary.

Monument to Victor Hugo.

One of the principal features of the great Hugo centenary celebration in France was the dedication of Barrias' statue of the poet.

There was an immense concourse to witness the inauguration of the monument, erected on the Place Victor Hugo, in the Passay quarter, within a stone's throw of the house, 124 Avenue Victor Hugo, in which the poet died.

Addresses were delivered by the President of the municipality and the chairman of the monument committee, glorifying the memory of Victor Hugo.

The monument, which is the work of Louis Barrias, is in bronze and stone. It represents Victor Hugo seated on a rock, with Drama and Poetry at his feet offering him a lyre.

A Valuable Painting. The duke of Marlborough is believed to be the possessor of the costliest painting in the world, which was at one time the property of the first duke of Marlborough. The painting is known as the "Blenheim Madonna," painted by Raphael in 1507, and now valued at no less than $350,000. It is eight feet high and represents the madonna and child seated on a throne, with a figure of John the Baptist on the left and that of St. Nicholas of Bari on the right. Its almost fabulous value is due to the fact that it is one of the best preserved of the artist's works in existence.

Dawson City's Growth. The growth of Dawson City is indicated by the fact that the first Methodist church of that city has called to the pastorate the Rev. James Livingstone of Windsor, Ont., at a salary of $3,000 a year and a parsonage.

Profit in Capons.

The best chance to profit by the production of capons would be in caponizing late chicks that ordinarily would be fit for market as broilers or roasters when the prices are lowest, and too old to sell as tender chickens in January and February. Cockerels that were hatched in June, July or August, especially if of the large, early-maturing kind, like Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes crossed on Brahmas or Langshans, castrated in September, October and November and marketed in March, April, May and June, when they would have reached their best, would be the most profitable and bring the highest price. Such birds are often sold alive by the pound very low in the city markets or by those that have no room to winter them. Farmers that have cheap food and are far from shipping points, and therefore kill and ship all at one time in cold weather, might profitably make capons of all roosters. Those who keep birds until maturity for their own table should do the same. There will be little gained by caponizing birds in May or June if they are to be marketed by Christmas, as the birds have not sufficient time to fill out.—Bulletin 26, R. I. Experiment Station.

Administration of Feed to Swine. Professor Henry in "Feeds and Feedings," says: Sucking pigs take nourishment from the dam about every two hours, and we may accept Nature's guidance for the frequency of feeding very young animals. At weaning time the pigs should receive feed at least three times daily, with water always accessible. Since the digestive tract of this animal is of limited volume, probably the best results in fattening can be obtained with three feeds daily; but the habit controls here as elsewhere, and stockmen can easily accustom their animals to expect feed morning and evening only, meanwhile being content.

Since meat when dry is more slowly masticated than when moistened, it might be supposed that the greater addition of saliva consequent upon slow eating would increase the digestibility of meat so fed; but the trials so made favor moistening the feed with water.

Game Fowls. This is the celebrated race of fowls, bred from time immemorial for the purposes of the cock pit, and in which courage was so developed by the severe selection of combat that a breed was finally obtained that did not know how to yield. Happily cock fighting in England is now a thing of the past, except among a very few, who carry on their cruel sport upon the sly. But it is very interesting to notice that this cessation of the old purpose for which it was bred has worked gradually a very great change in the shape and formation of the game fowl. The modern exhibition race is very different in many respects from the old fighting race. The old fowl was moderately short on the leg, not very long in the neck, not short in feather, but with a full hackle and with a rather large fanned and spreading tail, carried tolerably high. All these points have been changed.—Lewis Wright.

Egg Eating. An English writer says: Egg eating is generally acquired from the breaking of soft eggs, which creates an appetite for the delicate food. We do not believe it ever due to a craving for lime. Some think that eating broken-up egg shells leads to the habit, and possibly whole or half shells might do so. Whatever the cause, the vice is most inveterate when once acquired. The only possibility of real cure depends upon isolating the criminal, which is also necessary to prevent her contaminating the others. She should be provided with a regular supply of egg-shells carefully emptied and refilled with nutritious materials—if possible of yellow color. Sometimes fresh-made mustard is rejected, but we have seen hens eat it unconcernedly. Carbolated vaseline, however, is always, we think, turned from with loathing. There should always be such an egg near the nest.

Immigration Statistics. Below is given a statement of the rise and fall of immigration to the United States:

From 1867 to 1873—An increase from 298,900 in the former year to 459,800 in the latter.

From 1874 to 1878—A decline from 313,300 to 138,400.

From 1879 to 1882—An increase from 177,800 to 788,900.

From 1883 to 1886—A decline from 603,300 to 334,200.

From 1887 to 1892—A general increase from 490,000 to 623,000.

From 1893 to 1898—A decline from 502,900 to 229,200.

From 1899 to 1901—An increase from 311,700 to 522,573.

The increase in 1901 is emphasized by the fact that, while the immigration, as usual, was greatest during the spring and early summer months, it was above normal during the months of fall and early winter.

Not So Deaf as He Seems. Representative Ketcham of New York is deaf. He is not, however, always as deaf as he seems to be.

Yesterday one of his constituents, who was stranded in Washington, sought Mr. Ketcham at the capitol, to negotiate a loan. When Mr. Ketcham appeared, the would-be borrower conducted him to a corner of the lobby.

"Lend me $5," he said, with his mouth close to Mr. Ketcham's ear.

"$5?" said Mr. Ketcham, as if he had not heard a word.

"Lend me ten," shouted the constituent.

"You said five just now," remarked Mr. Ketcham, waking up.—Washington Post.

Cannon's Daffodil Answered. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who fell heir to the title of "Watch Dog of the Treasury" after the demise of the venerable Holman of Indiana, was in the midst of a heated discussion on the Nicaragua canal bill when suddenly, after making a positive assertion, he shouted at the top of his voice:

"If I am wrong, who will correct me?"

"Ah, I would not undertake such an arduous task," replied the versatile Mr. Hepburn, as he arose in his place and sank back again before Mr. Cannon could return the fire.

The house roared.

Female Birds "on Strike." Birds are famous for "women's rights" strikes—that is, the females sometimes flock together, abandoning or driving away the males, and refuse to do any "housework" whatever. They desert their nests and will not finish building. They leave their eggs to grow cold and unhatched, and nothing will induce them to return. The male birds grow extremely concerned at such times, but they have no remedy, for throughout the best and bird creation the male will never attack a female, though the opposite often happens. Warblers and starlings especially are given to these "female workers' strikes."

NEW CURE FOR KIDNEYS AND BLADDER. Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Dropsy, etc., you will upon request be mailed A LARGE TRIAL CASE FREE.

Disorders of the Kidneys and Bladder cause Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Dropsy, etc., and are often cured by the use of the wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub, called by botanists the piper methastemum, from the Ganges River, East India. It has the extraordinary record of 1,200 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly on the kidneys, and cures by draining out of the blood the poisonous Uric Acid, Lithates, etc., which cause the disease.

James Thomas, Esq., of the Board of Review Bureau of Postoffice Inspectors, was cured after many physicians failed and he had given up all hope of recovery. Nathaniel Anderson, Esq., of Greenwood, S. C., writes: "Was suffering of Rheumatism, which was so severe as to cause him to use crutches. Hundreds of similar testimonials can be produced if desired. Many ladies, including Miss Viola Dearing, Petersburg, Ind., Mrs. E. K. Dinmore, South Deerfield, Mass., also testify as to its wonderful curative powers in Kidney disease and other disorders peculiar to women.

Miraculous CURES BY THE DETROIT CLINIC

The Eminent Specialist who performs such marvelous cures that patients from the east and west visit the Clinic, will make the following regular monthly visits.

John Gordon's Tavern
on Fri., Sat. and Sun.

Mar. 28, 29 and 30

"Eyes tested and glasses fitted by the latest scientific methods free."

The best the world has to offer in the way of scientific treatment. There is no chance for comparison. No comparisons are possible.

CONSULTATION FREE!
and Strictly Private in Every Case.

It makes no difference how difficult, or what your case may be, nor how many have failed to cure you, there is always hope for you, until you have consulted the Detroit Clinic, and been told that your case is incurable. The reputation of this Clinic has been made by curing cases that were supposed to be incurable.

After examination, if your case is not curable, you will be so informed, and it costs you nothing.

FACTS FOR SICK PEOPLE.

MAY 11, 1901.
I was suffering from general paralysis as a result of diphtheria. I had treated with the best physicians of Tuscola Co., with no benefit; in fact I grew worse under their treatment. I was entirely incapacitated for work, when I consulted the Detroit Clinic at Vassar, on March 13th; two months' treatment has completely cured me, and I am able to do my work. I advise any one suffering from chronic diseases to consult this clinic.
(Signed) JOHN F. ALLEN, Vassar, Mich.

Mrs. Grant McConnell, of Cass City, Mich., had a large growth of a cancerous nature growing on the inside of the mouth. It had been removed several times, but always returned. She had it removed by the surgeon of the Detroit Clinic, and without the use of a knife and with no pain, it was permanently removed in less than 30 days.

I have been growing deaf in both ears for the past six years as a result of La Grippe. I consulted the Detroit Clinic during their monthly visit to Cass City in January, and one month's treatment restored my hearing so that I could hear a watch tick five inches from my ear.
(Signed) JOHN HONNER, Novesta, Mich.

For 10 years I was a terrible sufferer from chronic rheumatism. I did every thing possible, but found no relief, until I commenced treatment with the Detroit Clinic. Three months of their treatment cured me.
(Signed) C. C. JONES, Rochester, Mich.

Mrs. E. C. Smith, of Detroit, was cured of Epilepsy (or fits) after having had this terrible disease for seven years.

The great success with which the Clinic treats all kinds of diseases is the wonder and admiration of all scientific men. The specialist in charge is noted for his skill, and the care with which every case is treated. No case that is not curable will be treated, but curable cases are treated with the latest scientific methods, and in no case does it interfere with the work of the patient.

Remember, it costs you nothing to consult this specialist, such an opportunity does not offer itself very often to people outside of large cities, and our citizens will certainly do well to take advantage of this one. It is best to consult the specialist personally, but question blanks will be sent on application, and all communications will receive prompt attention, if they are addressed to CLUBS.

A Paper by John McCracken, read before the Kingston Farmers' Club March 7.

We have reason to believe that the word Club, in the sense that it is used today, is of recent origin. Shakespeare often makes use of the word in his writings, but ever as a bat of wood never connecting it with a society of any kind. It is when we come down the line that we find the term used in connection with a gathering of people. Tennyson says in some of his writings, "They talked at wine in clubs of art and politics." Macaulay in his history of Goldsmith tells that he belonged to a club of nine. Peps says we dined at a French house but paid ten shillings for our part in the club. But all reference to a collection of people where the word club is used to express it, you see, is of late date. And all these clubs, as far as the writer can learn, were composed of men only, where wine was indispensable.

Women were not considered necessary members, which custom the great cities hold out even to this day. Hence, credit must be given to the country people for being in the advance line in inviting men and women together in social concord for the benefit of all. It may be said that men insisted upon the exclusion of women from the clubs that they might have more freedom in wine and song. This in part may be true, for the influence of good women has ever been great in the moral elevation of mankind. But when we drink deeper at the fountain of history, the real cause is discovered hidden in deep seated prejudice. Since the fall of our first parents in the Garden, and the world was informed that woman was the first transgressor, there has been a prejudice against woman. She has been in the past and she is today considered the inferior of man. Some men will deny this, and deny with an honesty for they are unconscious of this inherent weakness. All scripture readers will know that in olden times when a female child came to the home there was gloom, while we read again, "There was joy in the household for a male child is born." The same feeling is rife today in this our own land of boasted intelligence.

The writer has made it a point to ask every physician that opportunity allowed and in every instance we are informed that the case is rare where a son born does not give the fullness of satisfaction to the parents. It is but a few hundred years since it was considered that it was necessary for a woman to have the least of an education, and it seems very strange as woman is the weaker of the sexes that it was not forced upon the minds of men that she should be fitted for mental rather than physical labor. But such was the popular belief that she was rather the servant than the equal of boastful man. I am aware that some will say these views were the result of ignorance—it was of the past ages—and a fallacy of the "old world" across the Atlantic. But let us look at home and see the partial laws enacted in every state of our union. The wife must suffer because she is guilty of the crime of being born a woman. We boast that our Michigan ranks first in intellectual advancement among the sister states of the nation while two young people may marry, commence life without a penny, toil on till old age, the wife laboring, saving, practicing self denial and doing her full share with her companion to gain something for old age. Her helpmeet dies, the widow is without issue and his nearest kin takes one-half of all. It may be one that has never seen them, yet that one is preferred in law before the aged companion who has cared for that man's every want for perhaps more than fifty years, and the legislators of Michigan has said this is right. Their knowledge tells them better, but this deep seated prejudice that we have referred to has yet beat wisdom back. Wisdom is the proper use of knowledge and we now see in this case the force and truth of that proverb uttered in the long ago "Knowledge comes, but Wisdom lingers." This baffling of wisdom—for we are not wanting in knowledge—has made writers of song and story hold back the honor due to womankind. It is not only in the Fourth of July oration but in the school book and history that the forefathers of our country are lauded; without one word of remembrance for the fore mothers of the nation that suffered and struggled equally with the sterner sex to give to posterity and the world a land of freedom. And with all these false impressions men have unconsciously at times placed woman in advance of her so-called boastful master.

To fittingly represent this nation in her pure love for liberty and right the figure of a woman was selected, and the national hand beckoned to the world to behold the "Goddess of American Liberty."

We know churches whose members will fly in a passion at the suggestion of equality. They would no more think of allowing a woman to preach in their pulpits than they would take the sacrament from the black hand of Satan. They mean to be good people. They have read the "Book", but prejudice has closed their eyes to the part woman has acted on the great stage of the past. They overlook the fact that woman's devotion to duty has surpassed man's in the past as well as at the present. Let them remember—it was a woman that was last to desert the Savior in his hour of severest trial; it was a woman that was first at his tomb; it was a woman to whom he first appeared after his resurrection; it was a woman that the angel of light selected to carry to his disciples the glad news "He has risen." If it was proper for a woman to proclaim the glad tidings at that age, why is it improper for her to stand as a teacher of the people at this time? The records of the dark ages and history of cruel deeds show that woman's bravery when they die innocent of crime is equal if not superior to man's. A mother's influence for good has ever been greater than a father's, and if a woman can fall lower than a man in the scale of morality, as we sometimes hear it contended, it is because it is possible for her to rise higher. We are a convert to the belief that woman is man's equal and should stand with man as a moral teacher; that the virtue of the world is in the woman's keeping, and were it not for the virtue of woman this world would be one vast Sodom; that it is the refining influence of good women; that keep men as good as they are; that it is well for the sexes as social equals for the moral upbuilding of all; that no gathering whatever name it may take if unfit for the presence of the wife it is no moral upbuilder of the husband; that every social gathering adds honor to its name when man and woman stand on the same plane; that it is the crowning glory of these rural societies that male and female, young and old, meet together to exchange thoughts and educate one and another.

Cough Settled on her Lungs.
"My daughter had a terrible cough which settled on her lungs," says N. Jackson, of Danville, Ill. "We tried a great many remedies without relief, until we gave her Foley's Honey and Tar which cured her." Refuse substitutes. T. H. Fritz, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Mrs. C. E. VanDusen, of Kilbourn, Wis., was afflicted with stomach trouble and constipation for a long time. She says, "I have tried many preparations but none have done me the good that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have." These Tablets are for sale at Bond's Drug Store, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston. Price, 25 cents. Samples free.

Farmers' Club.
The Farmers' Club of Kingston township met last Friday at the home of Frank L. Terry, in the northeastern portion of the township, and the large attendance—over ninety—spoke unmistakably of the interest which is being taken in these gatherings. Dinner was served to the entire company, and it was evident that the ladies had learned well how to put the representatives of the sterner sex in a happy mood, as the edibles were not only abundant but had been most carefully prepared. After all had been satisfied, a program was given in which a goodly number took part, either by giving a paper, reading, music or extemporaneous talk. A paper given by John McCracken on "Clubs" appears elsewhere. Some valuable information was given regarding the raising of cucumbers for pickles, and the profits to be secured from butter and eggs were touched on. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Mr. Roworth's, a short distance south of Wilcox. May the Club continue to prosper and help cheer the pathway of the tiller of the soil.

Danger of Colds and LaGrippe
The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale at A. Bond's, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

How Helen Keller Writes.
Not one person in ten thousand of those who will read Helen Keller's own story of her life, when it begins in an early issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, will have the least conception of the amount of hard work required to write the story. First of all Miss Keller puts down her ideas "in Braille," as the blind express it; that is to say, in the system of "points" raised on paper by means of a stylus and slate devised to aid the blind; these "points" being read afterward by passing the sensitive fingers over them. When all of this Braille work has been completed Miss Keller goes to her typewriter and uses these notes as a guide to the rewriting of the story.

As soon as a page of matter is typewritten it is, so to speak, lost to Miss Keller, who has to depend upon her faithful teacher, Miss Sullivan, to repeat it to her by spelling out each sentence by means of the hands. It is a tedious task, especially as some of the pages have to be read again and again, with changes here and there, before Miss Keller is satisfied. Then, when the proofs are sent to her, all this slow process of spelling word after word has to be gone through once more, so that each word that Helen Keller writes goes through her fingers at least five times. It will be a satisfaction to everybody to know that the publishers of the Journal have recognized in a substantial manner the extraordinary ability and patience which Miss Keller has shown in her work.

A Good Thing.
German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German Physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries of medicine. It quickly cures Coughs, colds and all Lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause in the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cts.
