Christmas Story Fishy.

Carl Fischer-Hansen, of New York, who was attorney for Walter Christy, the representative of the Danish government in the overtures for the purchase of the Danish West Indian islands in 1900, is according to his own report, is indignant at the conduct of his client, shown in his secret report to the Danish ministry lately published.

"Ordinarily, legal etiquette," said he, "would prevent my speaking. But this report is so defamatory and outrageous that I feel justified in washing my hands of the whole affair."

Christmas undertook, according to Fischer-Hansen, to start the sale of the islands for the Herring ministry.

As far back as 1890 the sale with several most consummated, but at the last moment this government had drawn back.

Thus Denmark could not make overtures or do more than suggest that overtures would be acceptable.

Congress.

The House Tuesday, by a majority of 10, unseated Mr. Rhea (Ky.), a Democrat, and seated in his place J. McKeenize Moss, who was formerly a Democrat, but who according to his brief, is in accord with the Republican party on the dominant issues.

While only two Republicans, Hanbury and Vreeland, of New York, voted with the Democrats, enough Republicans remained away or declined to vote to reduce the majority to 10.

The conclusion of the debate on the case was rather spirited, Rhea making an eloquent defense of his right to the seat.

After the vote the house began consideration of the army appropriation bill.

It carried $90,880,000, being $11,625,000 less than the estimates.

More than that, the gambling houses, the pool rooms, the crap games, even the cheapest of the policy shops, are running as they never ran before.

A Theatrical Treat.

There will be two great shows at Wonderland and Temple theater week of March 31 and anyone visiting Detroit should not miss attending these popular playhouses.

The star features will be Camille D'Arville, the opera singer who created many of the most renowned roles in light opera, and whose salary in the Vaudeville is $750 per week.

The Motor Cycle, the latest sensation of the stage, Marion Manola, another famous singer of operatic reputation, and Dempsey Mack & Company, in the roaring farce, "A Man of Chance."

The Motor Cycle is the most thrilling thing ever put on the stage.

A man and woman ran with automobiles around the inside of a picket fence, which leans out at an angle of 70 degrees.

The momentum prevents them falling to the bottom.

To Stop Scams.

As a result of the fight between Senators Tillman and McLaughlin, the senate committee on rules has ordered a favorable report upon the adoption of a new rule proposed by Mr. Hoar.

It reads as follows: "No senator shall debate shall directly or indirectly, by any form of words, impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator."

No senator shall refer offensively, while in debate, to any state of the union.

Spencer Eddy, secretary of the United States legation at Constantinople, is in New York on his return journey to his post.

The demand made by the Brazil, Ind. school board last Saturday for the resignation of Prof. Muncie, principal of the city school, because of the charge made by Miss Mounce, a pupil that he kissed her, has precipitated a legal fight between the board and the principal.

Prof. Muncie still insists that he is guilty of no wrong; that the caress was merely in a fatherly manner. He has a wife and six children.

An American Nabob.

A Remarkable Story of Love, Gold and Adventure.

It seemed that the captain owned a house far off in the neighborhood of West Brompton, and into this he had moved the wreck of his fortunes, including his family.
The marquis waited a certain length of time.
Then one afternoon he appeared at the new home of the Livermores.
To himself he declared many times that he intended this visit as a positive means of increasing his hold upon the captain's wife, over whom she seemed to be exerting some peculiarly hypnotic power, with the eventual aim in view of inducing her to leave home and seek some asylum on the continent.
For years he had looked forward to this same moment with the keenest anticipation; for years he had in his mind gone over every little detail, had seen her surprise and alarm, with his own great triumph, as he sent his shafts home with the arm of ample revenge; yet, strange to say, he did not approach the subject with the eagerness he had expected, the feverish thrill was only conspicuous by its absence, and he even started guiltily when from some distant part of the rambling old structure a peal of childish laughter was borne to his ears; there was something so condemnatory in the merry sound.
By degrees he brought the subject around to where he wanted it, and the manner in which he accomplished this declared that his strategic powers had not waned a particle.
"Have you had any American friends?" he asked.
"Yes, one," came the rather confused reply, and the listener knew he had caused her mind to revert to that unhappy past about which she even usually avoided thinking.
"Pardon me, but I once knew a poor fellow, an artist, out in Mexico, who said he had been well acquainted with Captain Livermore's wife," he went on deliberately.
"An artist," she echoed, looking pained, and yet showing an eagerness in her voice.
"Yes; by name Jack. I chanced to do him several favors, and he even confided his history to me. Poor fellow, he had suffered bitterly."
"Confided to you—then you know—" in alarm.
"That you and he were once brothered—yes. That while he labored unceasingly in the hope of gaining fame and fortune, your love for him began to grow cold. He had been the means of reconciling you to your proud old English grandfather. In the whirl of society you met Captain Livermore, then the lion of the hour. You forgot to write to the man who believed in you as he did in Heaven. He came to London, unable to breathe outside your presence. Then you crushed him by declaring that while you still loved him, you loved position still more, and that you had agreed to marry the captain."
Fedora's head had fallen on her wildly heaving bosom, but she neither looked up nor uttered a word as yet, being too stunned as the tremendous revelation was forcing itself upon her mind.
He went on pitilessly!
"Jack sought a quarrel with the man who had robbed him of all he had on earth—perhaps you never knew of it, but they met at dawn in the deadly duello, each determined to kill the other. The captain, as they advanced toward each other, fired first and only inflicted a wound. He was then at Jack's complete mercy, since he was allowed the privilege of walking up as close as he pleased and sending a ball through the heart of his adversary."
Fedora groaned, but never moved.
"The captain was no coward; believing his hour had come, he deliberately opened his coat and awaited the fatal shot, his eyes looking into those of the man he had wronged without knowing it. Twice Jack took aim, but each time he failed to pull the trigger. Finally he raised his pistol, fired in the air and fled from the scene."
For the first time she raised her head and looked at him, her troubled face marked by conflicting emotions.
"Then came the wedding, which poor Jack saw from the organ loft, enduring the tortures of the damned while the woman whom heaven had given to him was united by law to man she did not love."
"Then he fled from London as from a place accursed and sought fortune's smiles upon a new field, hating women because one had been false to her vows, and always hugging to his heart the resolution to some day return and take full satisfaction for that treachery."
"That was Jack's story—doubtless other men have suffered in the same way from a woman's hand, but none more cruelly. And yet it seemed that fortune took a strange delight in compensating him his loss by throwing into his hands the most wonderful treasure ever known, surpassing all tales from the days of Ophir and Solomon down to the present. More than this, he was given power and made the head of the Central American republic whither fate had drifted him."
"Thus, when five years had passed, rich beyond the wildest dreams, made a noble of Spain because of some financial assistance he had given the government at Madrid, Jack came back to London with the full determination to what you, their unhappy mother, seemed to me in the long ago—all innocence and trusting love. No, I don't wish to see them now."

"Oh, Jack, he reconciled—I shall pray daily that you cease to hate me, for the sake of those little ones. Did you know the boy's name is Jack?"
"What!" he gasped, weakening. "Do you mean to say your husband allowed you to do that—and I the man you loved? Incredible!"
"I told him all, and it was he who first proposed it. You don't know his generous nature. I can see now what it was so disturbed him—you took his fire and freely gave him his forfeited life. Oh! wretched woman that I am to have been loved by two such noble men, and to have brought sorrow to both. Who will deliver me from the bondage of my sin?"
As if in answer to her forlorn cry the pattering of little feet sounded somewhere—where—the marquis, alarmed at his own weakness, turned to fly, but made a miscalculation, for in the hall he was waylaid by the enemy, who rushed upon him with exultant cries.
He made a swoop for the little girl and swept her up in his arms, until her golden curls nestled against his shoulder when he kissed her pouting lips again and again.
Then came the boy, to whom he had paid so little attention before. Now he held him off at arm's length, where he could look into his resolute face and bold blue eyes—yes, he was surely the image of what Livermore must have been as a lad, and yet, and yet, strange to say, the marquis actually believed he could see some traces of his own characteristics in the boy—learned philosophical and psychological scholars and doctors have long argued this point, and agreed that it is not only possible, but actual—the image of her first love still remained strong in Fedora's heart at the time the child was born.
Kissing the youngster, the marquis hastily quitted the house, followed by the anxious gaze of the wretched Fedora, until the children, astonished at the strange actions of their friend, loudly bewailed his flight, and demanded her attention.
"Weep no more tears of repentance and fear, wife and mother, since the seed has been sown and the harvest must come in due season—that name of Jack, together with the captain's generosity, proved the last straw that broke the camel's back."
CHAPTER XXI.
"Love has redeemed me!"
The game was drawing near its close.
With each struggle that iron will of the marquis, which had been the marvel and admiration of his friends, came out much weaker.
Perhaps the thing that had the most decided influence upon him was the startling conviction that there had been awakened within his heart a glow of love for the little miniature painter.
With the flower of love blossoming again in his heart he could hardly have continued in his former policy.
Should he be magnanimous and freely forgive, or should he turn aside the bright vision that tempted him, shut himself up in a narrow compass and carry out the miserable plan of the past?
Thus he debated, pro and con. But it chanced that the marquis was not given an opportunity to fight his battle to a finish in the usually accepted term—there was a surprise in store for him, a flank movement, as it were, on the part of one who meant to be an ally, yet proved his worst enemy.
That person was the Spanish-American belle of San Jose.
It was on the evening following that when the marquis received such a shock at the hands of Fedora.
It was probably 11 o'clock when one of the hotel lackeys came with a card on a silver salver and presented it to the marquis.
This was a frequent occurrence, but on this special occasion those who were near by saw the usually cool nabob give a plain start.
Photographers as Sportsmen.
In a recent book a hunter tells how he spent many weary months in the attempt to shoot an eagle, and at last ambushed so successfully that he actually touched the bird with his fingers. Having got so far he was content, and let the eagle go free. It may be a hunter's tale, but there are at present a very considerable number of sportsmen who are a great deal keener to see their game at close quarters than to kill it. Instead of the old phrase, "Let us go and kill something," the hunter now says, "Let us go and focus something." The camera has supplanted the gun. There are now made all manner of devices, more ingenious and intricate even than the older trappers devised, for getting the camera to bear on unsuspecting animals. A boat, resembling a little duck-shooting boat used on the Irish coast, has been devised, which is propelled without oars or sails, and has a beautiful photographic apparatus rigged up in the bows. There are other less clever means for approaching and photographing deer in their native haunts, and they have been used with altogether remarkable success. Humanitarians are already pointing that with this sport with the camera gives all the excitement of the chase without any of the cruelty, and at least this much may be conceded, that the difficulties of photographing, say, a weasel are considerably greater and therefore more attractive than those of shooting it.
The busiest man on earth is the man who keeps on a continual run getting out of the way of work.

DOES RUSSIA EXCLUDE JEWS?

Resolution Introduced in the House Seeking Light on the Subject.

NAME DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMAN

J. M. Griggs of Georgia Chosen to Head the Congressional Campaign Committee—Pension Commissioner Evans' Resignation Forwarded to President.

Washington, March 29.—Most of the day in the house was occupied by discussion of the President's policy of vetoing bills to remove the charge of desertion from the records of soldiers. The subject came up with private pension bills, 215 of which were passed.

By unanimous consent a bill was passed to confer jurisdiction upon the court of claims to adjudicate the claims for duties collected on goods going into Porto Rico between April 11, 1899, and May 1, 1900. The bill provides that the claims found due shall bear interest at 6 per cent. The refund of these duties is made necessary by the decision of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Cannon, from the committee on appropriations, reported the sundry civil appropriation bill, and gave notice that he would call it up Monday.

Representative Goldfogle of New York introduced the following: "Resolved, That the Secretary of State be and he is hereby directed to inform this House whether American citizens of the Jewish religious faith, holding passports issued by this government, are barred or excluded from entering the territory of the empire of Russia, and whether the Russian government has made or is making any discrimination between citizens of the United States of different religious faith or persuasion visiting or attempting to visit Russia, provided with American passports; and whether the Russian government has made regulations restricting or specially applying to American citizens, whether native or naturalized, of the Jewish religious denomination, holding United States passports, and if so to report the facts in relation thereto, and what action concerning such exclusion, discrimination or restriction, if any, has been taken by any department of the government of the United States."

Griggs Is Chosen Chairman.

Washington, March 29.—James M. Griggs, congressman from Georgia, was unanimously chosen chairman of the Democratic congressional committee, at a meeting held in the minority caucus room at the capitol. The only other name presented to the committee for the chairmanship was that of Representative Cowherd of Missouri, but it was withdrawn before a vote was taken.

A committee consisting of the chairman, Griggs, Representatives Williams of Missouri, Rupert of New York, Richardson of Tennessee, Williams of Illinois, Jackson of Kansas and Senator Culberson of Texas were appointed to perfect a plan of organization for the ensuing congressional campaign and select the remaining officers of the committee subject to the ratification of a meeting of the full committee to be held April 11.

It is the general understanding that this committee, among other things, will report in favor of the creation of an executive committee of which former Congressman Ben T. Cable of Illinois probably will be the chairman, and of a finance committee of which Louis Nixon of New York probably will be chairman. The following were selected to represent states which have no Democratic representation in congress: Connecticut, Robert E. De Forest; Iowa, G. A. Hoffman; Maine, H. J. Brown; New Hampshire, Henry Hollis; Oklahoma Territory, Harry Bacon; West Virginia, E. H. Osseman; Wisconsin, E. C. Wall; Wyoming, C. T. Arnold; Indian Territory, Sam Powell.

The committee heard the protests of a faction of the Democracy of the District of Columbia against John L. Norris, who was elected to represent the district at a former meeting of the committee, but decided to disregard the protests.

May Dismisses Taylor.

Washington, March 29.—The attention of the president having been called to alleged interviews with Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Taylor in a number of newspapers, in which he had put himself in the position of opposing certain provisions of the Chinese exclusion bills now pending in congress, Secretary Shaw has been requested by the president to examine into the matter and report to him as to the truth of the allegations. As Secretary Shaw is in New York no action will be taken by him in the direction of carrying out the president's instruction until his return.

Sundry Civil Bill.

Washington, March 29.—The sundry civil appropriation bill, the most important of the government's supply measures, was completed by the house committee on appropriations. The bill appropriates $49,316,395, being $12,463,042 less than the regular and supplemental estimates, and $2,579,512 less than the appropriations for the current fiscal year.

Commissioner Evans Resigns.

Washington, March 29.—Commissioner of Pensions Evans has placed his resignation in the hands of the

TERRIFIC STORM SWEEPS SOUTH

Continued Rise of Water Causes Trains to Be Abandoned.

SCORES OF PERSONS INJURED

New Orleans, La., March 29.—The flood situation in the South is worse. Railroad traffic is suspended on all the through lines. Many towns are cut off from communication with the world and others are half under water.

The general rainfall ceased Friday, but storms swept through part of Mississippi, Georgia and Alabama. A terrific wind, rain and electrical storm struck the country around Tupelo and New Albany, Miss., doing fearful damage. At Tupelo dozens of business buildings were unroofed, residences wrecked, and seventy-five negro cabins and the negro church were demolished. Scores of persons were injured, but only one, a negro, was killed. At New Albany the high wind drove the flood waters of the Tallahatchie through the town and the long bridge was swept away.

Meridian is in a bad condition. A foot of rain has fallen there within forty-eight hours. No trains have entered Meridian since Thursday. Bridges through all that district have been swept away and traffic is stopped. An Alabama Southern freight was wrecked at York, running into a wash-out. Two trains are lost on the Alabama & Vicksburg, two on the Mobile & Ohio, and one on the New Orleans & Northeastern somewhere near Meridian. A fast freight on the Northeastern is in six feet of water just outside Meridian and may be swept away. The crew is on top of the cars, and all efforts to reach them in boats have failed. Part of Meridian is under water.

The residence portion of Jackson is flooded and people are fleeing to the highlands. The situation is improving there, but no trains can enter from the south. The Pearl River is spread out miles wide in that district.

Heavy rains fell in Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama. Traffic south of Nashville is abandoned. A rural mail carrier was drowned in Maury County, Tenn. Louisville & Nashville bridges are gone at Columbia (Tenn.), Athens (Ga.), Putaski, Lyville, Sheffield and other points, and the tracks of all railroads washed out in many places.

Three trains are laid up at various points, the passengers being fed in towns near by. Liberty and Mount Pleasant, Tenn., are under water. The Cumberland rose nine feet in five hours at Nashville. Columbia, Tenn., is submerged, the Duck River being thirty-six feet above low water and rising. The town is in darkness.

Grafton, N. D., March 29.—Park River is out of its banks and has risen three feet in twelve hours. The entire northern and eastern part of the city is flooded. Many bridges have been washed out.

Minto, N. D., March 29.—Forest River has overflowed all the lowlands in this section and is causing suffering. Many houses are surrounded by water and boats are used for communication.

Woman Jumps Into River.

Peru, Ind., March 29.—Miss Marie Freeland, 27 years of age, committed suicide by jumping into the Wabash river. First she went to the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles Daniels, where a reception was being held, and slipped a note under the front door. The body was found in five feet of water twenty feet from the shore.

Priest Is Shot.

La Junta, Col., March 29.—Rev. Father J. H. Brinker, pastor of the Roman Catholic church in this city, was perhaps fatally wounded by the accidental discharge of a revolver, which, it is supposed, fell from a table to the floor. The bullet penetrated Father Brinker's abdomen.

Turkey Calls 90,000 Troops.

Constantinople, March 29.—The Turkish government has decided to call to the colors 90,000 irregular troops. This mobilization is ostensibly for the annual maneuvers, but in view of the conditions in Macedonia considerable significance is attached to the movement.

Omaha, Neb., March 29.—John Murphy, aged 18, of Chicago, was killed, and Fred Schultze, aged 16, of Chicago, seriously injured in a freight wreck due to a car truck leaving the track on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad at a siding a few miles east of Woodbine, Ia.

Lexington, Ky., March 29.—James R. Keene, who arrived here en route to New York from Florida, became ill and had to remain at his hotel. His physician says he will probably be able to go to Castleton to visit his million-dollar breeding farm.

Boom Bumpy for Governor.

Centralia, Ill., March 29.—The second ward Republicans, in aldermanic convention, started a boom for Representative W. F. Bundy of this city for governor in 1904 by endorsing and recommending him for that office.

WEAVERS JOIN STRIKERS.

Massachusetts Workers Leave Their Looms—Many Mills Involved.

Fitchburg, Mass., March 29.—The entire force of weavers in the Fitchburg worsted mills and the Beeli mills of the American Woolen company struck in sympathy with the Rhode Island employes of the combination in the struggle against the two-loom system in that state. The two mills employ about 400 weavers. The establishments have not been closed, but it is said that the various departments will gradually have to cease work, and about 1,000 hands will be idle. Mills involved now are at Olneyville, Manton and Pascoag, R. I., and Plymouth, Blackstone and Fitchburg, Mass.

Notre Dame Branch.

South Bend, Ind., March 29.—Notre Dame university will establish a fourth branch at Portland, Oregon, in September. Seventy acres of ground will be utilized in connection with the new college, which will be easily accessible by rail and steamer and will be made the largest educational institution on the Pacific coast.

Michigan Miners to Strike.

Bay City, Mich., March 29.—An order was issued calling out all the coal miners of district No. 24, embracing the entire state. The call will become operative on Wednesday, April 2, the first day of the month being holiday in celebration of the advent of the eight-hour day. Over 2,500 men will be affected. The strike arises over the failure of the miners and operators, in conference, to agree to the scale for the ensuing year. The operators say they will receive any overtures for a further conference.

Recognize Osteopaths.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

FOR THE CITY LOT.

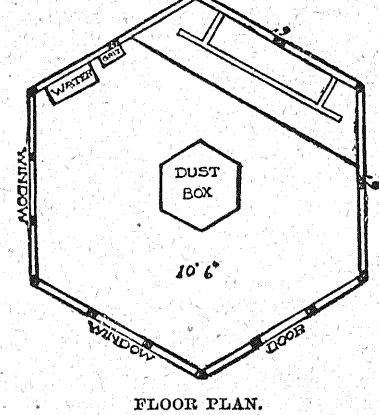

A Slightly Poultry House That Can Be Built at a Low Cost.

Hundreds of our readers are constantly looking for plans for poultry houses that are best adapted for keeping their fowls comfortable and healthy and that can be built at a low cost. A house that will be found satisfactory in most cases is illustrated herewith. This house is in the shape of a hexagon and makes a very handsome and convenient one and is just the thing for the city lot where space is limited. The ground or floor plan will show you the interior arrangement. The size of this house is 10 feet 6 inches, the corner posts are 6 feet long and the center of the house 9 feet from floor to peak of roof.—National Poultry Journal.

High Priced Grain.

The high prices of grain this winter are not without their good results. Many a poultryman is feeding an increased ration of ground meat and bone or cut green bone and cut clover hay. Cooked vegetables are being added to the mash more frequently than when grain was cheap. High prices are making the average "henman" think more than he has done about balanced rations and new articles of food for his birds.

The man who has in his cellar a large bin of mangels, carrots, turnips and small potatoes, stowed away in the barn a lot of nice clover hay and well covered with straw a long row of soft headed cabbages faces high grain and a long winter with little fear. If he is situated so he can get green bone whenever he wants it he need not worry about profits.

If grain is high, do not go to using damaged food because it can be bought at a less price. Better feed a smaller quantity of good grain than a full feed of spoiled grain. Do not keep on with the old articles of food at high prices unless you have found you cannot do better. Corn and oats have advanced much more than wheat. Wheat is the cheapest food to use for eggs at present prices. Gluten meal, linseed meal, bran and all the waste products in the making of flour and starch are usually sold at a less price than their food value and go a long way in the feeding of hens.—Dr. N. W. Sanborn in Poultry Keeper.

Feeding Green Cut Bone.

I think the most satisfactory way to feed green cut bone is to give it two or three times a week, giving the hens all they will eat when not very hungry. Feed it at noon after a light feed of grain or about the middle of the afternoon. Many manufacturers advise feeding an ounce per hen per day, but I never had hens fed a good strong grain ration that would eat that much cut bone. In regular good feeding green bone or meat in some form should be a part of the ration at least every other day. Whether more or less other food is required will depend on the remainder of the ration and the condition of the flock. A flock which gets bone or meat regularly every two or three days will eat less grain as a rule on the days when it gets animal food, but will probably eat more grain, on the whole, than if it had no animal food. This is because a ration deficient in animal food, or deficient in any respect, is less appetizing and because the appetite in general falls when the system lacks something it needs and the lack is long continued.—Farm Poultry.

Kettle and Pot.

The American Fancier goes after some specimens of "modern poultry journalism" for puffing the stock of their big advertisers regardless of quality and says, "It is even worse than the miserable system that enables breeders to sell birds on the fictitious and inflated value of a score card." When a disqualified Cochon can win a premium under the comparison system, it seems to the writer that "the pot should not call the kettle black." Inflated and fictitious score cards, if there are any such, are due to dishonest or incompetent judges and not to the system, as the American Fancier very well knows, but for reasons known only to itself it prefers to charge it up to "the system." The score card system cannot be thrown down by misrepresentation and abuse, and that is about all that has been urged against it.—H. F. Ballard in Fanciers' Gazette.

If he is situated so he can get green bone whenever he wants it he need not worry about profits.

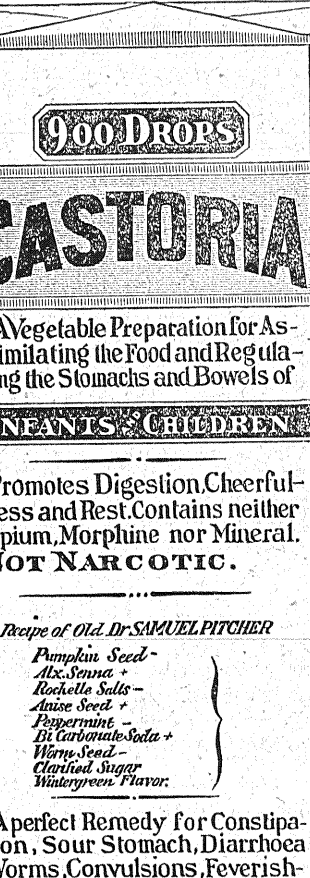

If grain is high, do not go to using damaged food because it can be bought at a less price. Better feed a smaller quantity of good grain than a full feed of spoiled grain. Do not keep on with the old articles of food at high prices unless you have found you cannot do better. Corn and oats have advanced much more than wheat. Wheat is the cheapest food to use for eggs at present prices. Gluten meal, linseed meal, bran and all the waste products in the making of flour and starch are usually sold at a less price than their food value and go a long way in the feeding of hens.—Dr. N. W. Sanborn in Poultry Keeper.

Feeding Green Cut Bone.

I think the most satisfactory way to feed green cut bone is to give it two or three times a week, giving the hens all they will eat when not very hungry. Feed it at noon after a light feed of grain or about the middle of the afternoon. Many manufacturers advise feeding an ounce per hen per day, but I never had hens fed a good strong grain ration that would eat that much cut bone. In regular good feeding green bone or meat in some form should be a part of the ration at least every other day. Whether more or less other food is required will depend on the remainder of the ration and the condition of the flock. A flock which gets bone or meat regularly every two or three days will eat less grain as a rule on the days when it gets animal food, but will probably eat more grain, on the whole, than if it had no animal food. This is because a ration deficient in animal food, or deficient in any respect, is less appetizing and because the appetite in general falls when the system lacks something it needs and the lack is long continued.—Farm Poultry.

Kettle and Pot.

The American Fancier goes after some specimens of "modern poultry journalism" for puffing the stock of their big advertisers regardless of quality and says, "It is even worse than the miserable system that enables breeders to sell birds on the fictitious and inflated value of a score card." When a disqualified Cochon can win a premium under the comparison system, it seems to the writer that "the pot should not call the kettle black." Inflated and fictitious score cards, if there are any such, are due to dishonest or incompetent judges and not to the system, as the American Fancier very well knows, but for reasons known only to itself it prefers to charge it up to "the system." The score card system cannot be thrown down by misrepresentation and abuse, and that is about all that has been urged against it.—H. F. Ballard in Fanciers' Gazette.

Historic Church Doomed

Old St. John's, at Richmond, Virginia, Is to Be Demolished.

(Special Letter.)
THE news comes from Richmond, Va., that another of the country's historic structures is to be sacrificed to the relentless march of modern commercialism. It is stated that negotiations are under way for the sale of old St. John's church. It was there that the words of rebellion and defiance to England were uttered, when Patrick Henry rose in the Virginia convention, the famous challenge to King George, "Give me liberty or give me death."
 Around the church cluster memories of other famous scenes and equally famous men. It is a picturesque structure, standing on a hilltop surrounded by a garden, and huddled by ancient elms. The building was completed in 1741, making it at present 161 years old. Beside it is the graveyard, where lie the bones of many famous colonial cavaliers and continental regulars, whose names and many virtues are carved on the crumbling gray old stones. A few feet down the hillside and you have stepped from the eighteenth into the twentieth century, with its roar and railroad trains and mills. Just below is the broad sweep of the James River.
 The first chapel was built about 1613. The history of St. John's begins with the second settlement of the colony of Virginia. The first record of the chronicles is that Dale, the high marshal, and the Rev. Alexander Whitaker "did found a church." This Whitaker is an historical personage and was evidently a man of great force in the colony. It is recorded in England that "he did voluntarily leave his warm nest; and to the wonder of his kindred and amazement of them that knew him did go to Virginia and help to bear the name of God unto the Gentiles."

 It was Whitaker who attempted to Christianize Pocahontas and afterward married her to John Rolfe. His salary as minister was fixed at 500 pounds of tobacco and 200 barrels of corn. The records of the church were lost in the many Indian massacres and its early chronicles are fragmentary. The parish ventry book from 1730 to 1774, however, is in existence. This old volume is resplendent of antiquity, and some of its entries are quaint, as the following show:
 "To John Jones for keeping his daughter, being a fool, 300 pounds of tobacco."
 "Ordered that Sackfield Brewer be appointed reader in the chapple, Richard Williams being absconded from duty therein."
 One of the earlier preachers was Mr. Mossom, who afterward married George Washington to the widow Custis. Another of the pioneers in the "chapple" was the Rev. Anthony Gavin, who was bitterly opposed to slavery and might be called the first abolitionist. The present building was built on land donated by the famous William Byrd of Westover, the founder of Richmond.
 Among the first church wardens was Edmund Randolph, attorney-General of the United States.
 In 1775 the Virginia convention was called to meet at St. John's. Edmund Pendleton presided, and many spoke, counselling patience and further parleying with the English government, until Henry sprang to his feet and in burning eloquence carried the day for liberty. So old St. John's became the cradle of freedom. But it was doomed to suffer for this distinction, for in 1781 the traitor, Benedict Arnold, landed on the shores of Virginia and began pillaging and burning. When Richmond fell into his hands he converted St. John's into a barracks. The building was defaced and damaged, and for a long time afterward services were discontinued.

 The building was enlarged in 1772. In this century fashion made it necessary to lower the pulpit and the pews, but the same sounding board is still kept, and the original baptismal font is also being used, having been discovered in a cellar, where for years it served as a mortar for beating hominy.
 The names on the old tombstones are almost a complete registry of famous Virginians of the colonial period. Close against the building and below one of the east windows a flat slab tells that "Edwarde Carrington, whose bones are here entirred," stood on that identical spot and through the window above listened to Patrick Henry's speech and then and there declared his intention of being buried on the same ground where he had listened to that historic oration.

WHITMAN AND INGERSOLL.

Why the Poet Differed from the Colonel as to Immortality.
 In the last years of his life Walt Whitman, the peculiar Camden poet and seer, was surrounded by a galaxy of admirers, some of whom encouraged his poetic genius in more substantial ways than by words of praise. One of these was a distinguished professor of English literature at one of our institutions of higher learning. Ingersoll's magnificent flow of conversation was stimulated by Whitman's table, and after a brilliant analysis of the philosophy of Shakespeare he began a long monologue upon the subject of the soul's immortality. With his usual keen sarcasm he ridiculed the commonly accepted ideas of the Christian, and in a manner surpassing even his magnetic lecture style, because the eloquence was unconscious, he set forth his own well-known doctrines.
 Walt Whitman, as described by the professor of literature, sat silent in his chair throughout the entrancing recital. He was at this time for along in years, and his long, uncombed white hair and beard, with the loose picturesque clothing which he affected, gave him a strikingly venerable appearance. When the distinguished agnostic had concluded, Whitman raised his head and slowly answered:
 "Yes, Bob, that all sounds very well, but when a man gets so near to the end as I am, he begins to have a different idea about those things."
 It was Ingersoll's turn to be thoughtful.—Philadelphia Ledger.

LAKE HAS NO OUTLET

Remarkable Natural Phenomenon Reported by an American Traveler.

A resident of New York fetches back with him from a visit in Australia the story of a most startling lake.
 Lake George, the largest lake of New South Wales, Australia, has no outlet except evaporation. For a series of years the brooks that tumble down the mountains which edge the lake may steadily contribute to it a larger quantity of water than is evaporated from its surface.
 Then the lake steadily rises. The water pushes north and south until the lake is twenty-one miles or more in length, with a width of seven or eight miles.
 For another series of years the water brought by the brooks may be steadily smaller than the quantity evaporated. Then the lake begins to fall, shrinking in a few years to half its former dimensions, this process going on sometimes till Lake George entirely disappears except for a few water holes in the lowest parts of its bed. The lake was in flood during 1891, extending north and south for twenty-one miles with a depth of twelve feet. Twice in the last century thousands of sheep and cattle were pastured on large areas now covered with water. They were the most numerous representatives there of the larger forms of animal life just as fish and water fowl are to-day.
 The cabins of the stock raisers or squatters, as they were called, were scattered over the meadows. Vegetables were raised and patches of wheat. So little was known of Lake George on those days that the herders really had a feeling of security and permanence, but the day came when the rising water swished around the cabins, drowned some of the stock, and drove the squatters to the highlands.
 Everybody knows now that the bed of Lake George offers a very uncertain tenure to settlers. When it comes in turn, but he was met at the elevator door by the starter, who gave him startling news.

 "I'm sorry, sir, but there is something the matter with the elevators and they are all shut down. They'll be running again in 10 minutes."
 The dentist's office was on the 17th floor, and he knew it would take him half an hour to climb up, even if he survived the trip. So he sat down and waited.
 Meanwhile young Mr. Carter in the dentist chair sat and felt the plaster harden into a rocklike grip on his biceps and molars. Soon he found himself unable to move his jaws. He went out into the reception room, but the dentist's assistant was out in the hall trying to find what was the matter with the elevators. The waiting patients in the reception room looked at him as if he were crazy.
 Half an hour later the dentist got back to his office. He found Carter speechless, but purple in the face with rage. It took the joint and long-continued efforts of the dentist, his assistant, a cold chisel, a couple of drills and a gimlet to separate Mr. Carter and the cast. The first thing he said when he recovered the power of speech was not at all fit for publication.
 Mr. Carter is now patronizing another dentist, and the dentist whom he deserted has absolutely forbidden his wife to call him up on the telephone during business hours.—Chicago Tribune.

PATHETIC TALE OF WOE

Young Man's Dignity Sorely Hurt by His Trials in a Dentist's Office.

J. K. L. Carter is a young man of considerable personal dignity. He is also extremely careful of his personal appearance, and therefore he has been of late spending sometime in the dentist's chair. Mr. Carter admits that the man who sits in a tilting chair, with a towel tied round his neck and his mouth pried open by a couple of corks, does not present a dignified appearance, but he contends that the results justify the means employed.
 Last Thursday young Mr. Carter went over to the dentist's office to see about having one of his front teeth fitted with a crown. As a preliminary step it was necessary for the dentist to take a plaster cast of Mr. Carter's mouth.
 Mr. Carter leaned back in the chair and the dentist and his assistant came in, the latter bringing with him the hot and liquid plaster. The plaster was inserted and Mr. Carter was told to shut his teeth down hard.
 "I'll take five minutes," the dentist said, "for the cast to harden. Then I'll come in and relieve you."
 The dentist and his assistant went out of the operating room, leaving the young man in the chair. Just as they left the room the telephone bell rang and the dentist's wife asked him to meet her on the ground floor.
 "I've got somebody here I want you to meet," she said, "I'll only keep you a moment."
 The dentist went down the elevator, saw his wife, and started to return, but he was met at the elevator door by the starter, who gave him startling news.

Outlaws' Rocky Stronghold

Soon To Be Demolished.

The notorious "Hole-in-the-wall," in which there are millions of trout, former years a rendezvous for cattle "rustlers," murderers and train and bank robbers, is soon to be a thing of the past. The county commissioners have called for bids for blasting out a section of the high wall of red sandstone, through which a small stream now flows and along which there is a narrow trail leading through the wall of rock to the fertile valley within.
 An old, tumbledown log house was used by outlaws for many years, and which, guarded by a few men, made the "hole" a veritable fortress, so that freight teams and ordinary vehicles can pass in and out of the hole-in-the-wall country.
 Several hundred pounds of dynamite and giant powder will be used in the work. In many places hundreds of tons of rock will be blasted away from the walls, while at other spots only a few feet of rock will be removed.
 An old, tumbledown log house was for many years the headquarters of the outlaw band. It was only a mile from the entrance to the "hole," and here, with a guard at the entrance, the thieves lived in perfect safety. It was here that the stolen horses and cattle were corralled and their brands changed.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

CHRISTIAN DEATH AS THE ENTRANCE TO FULLER LIFE.

eloquent Easter discourse preached from Corinthian, "Death is Swallowed Up in Victory"—Why Should We Doubt That God Can Raise Us from Death?
 Washington, March 30.—The Christian view of death as the entrance to a fuller life is presented in this Easter discourse by Dr. Talmage from the text I Cor. xv, 54, "Death is swallowed up in victory."
 About 1,870 Easter mornings have wakened the earth. The royal court of the Sabbaths is made up of fifty-two. Fifty-one are princes in the royal household, but Easter is queen. She wears richer diadem, she sways a more jeweled scepter, and in her smile nations are irradiated. How welcome she is when, after a harsh winter and late spring, she seems to step out of the snow bank rather than the conservatory, to come out of the north instead of the south, out of the arctic rather than the tropic, dismounting from the icy equinox, but welcome this queenly day, holding high in her right hand the wrenched bolt of Christ's sepulcher and holding high in her left hand the key to all the cemeteries in Christendom.
 My text is an ejaculation. It is spun out of halleluiahs. Paul wrote on in his argument about the resurrection and observed all the laws of logic, but when he came to write the words of the text his fingers and his pen and the parchment on which he wrote took fire, and he cried out, "Death is swallowed up in victory!" It is an exciting thing to see an army routed and flying. You have read of the French falling back from Sedan, of Napoleon's track of 90,000 corpses in the snow-banks of Russia, of the retreat of our armies from Manassas or of the five kings tumbling over the rocks of Beth-horan with their armies while the hail-storms of heaven and the swords of Joshua's host struck them with their fury.
 In my text is a worse discomfiture. It seems that a black giant proposed to conquer the earth. He gathered for his hosts all the aches and pains and maladies and cancers and distempers and epidemics of the ages. He marched them down, drilling them in the northwest wind and amid the slush of tempests. He threw up barricades of grave mound. He pitched tent of charnel house. Some of the troops marched with slow tread commanded by consumptions, some in double quick command of pneumonias. Some he took by long besiegement of evil habit and some by one stroke of the battle-axe of casualty. With bony hand he pounded at the door of hospitals and sickrooms, and won all the victories in all the great battlefields of all of the five continents. Forward, march! ordered the conqueror of conquerors, and all the generals and commanders in chief and all the presidents and kings and sultans and czars dropped under the feet of his war charger. But one Christmas night his antagonist was born.
 As most of the plagues and sicknesses and despotisms come out of the east, it was appropriate that the new conqueror should come out of the same quarter. Power is given him to awaken all the fallen of all the centuries and of all lands and march them against the black giant. Fields have already been won, but the last day of the world's existence will see the decisive battle. When Christ shall lead forth his two brigades, the brigade of the risen dead and the brigade of the celestial host, the black giant will fall back, and the brigade from the risen sepulchers will take him from beneath, and the brigade of descending immortals will take him from above, and death shall be swallowed up in victory.
 The old antagonist is driven back into mythology with all the lore about Stygian ferry and Charon with oar and boat. Melrose abbey and Kenilworth castle are no more in ruins than is the sepulcher. We shall have no more to do with death than we have with the cloakroom at a governor's or a president's levee. We stop at such a cloakroom and leave in charge of a servant our overcoat, our overshoes, our outward apparel, that we may not be impeded in the brilliant round of the drawing room. Well, my friends, when we go out of this world we are going to a King's banquet and to a reception of monarchs, and at the door of the tomb we leave the cloak of flesh and the wrappings with which we meet the storms of this world. At the close of an earthly reception, under the brush and broom of the porter, the coat or hat may be handed to us better than when we resigned it, and the cloak of humanity will finally be returned to us improved and brightened and purified and glorified.
 You and I do not want our bodies returned as they are now. We want to get rid of all their weaknesses and all their susceptibilities to fatigue and all their slowness of locomotion. We want them put through a chemistry of soil and heat and cold and changing seasons, out of which God will reconstruct them as much better than they are now as the body of the rosiest and healthiest child that bounds over the lawn in Central Park is better than the sickest patient in Bellevue hospital. But as to our soul, we will cross right over, not waiting for obsequies, independent of obituary, into a state in every way better, with wider room and velocities beyond computation, the dullest of us into companionship with the very best spirits in their very best moor, in the very parlor of the universe, the four walls burnished and paneled and pictured and glorified with all the splendors that the infinite God in all the ages has been able to invent. Victory!

 This view, of course, makes it of but little importance whether we are cremated or sepulchred. If the latter is dust to dust, the former is ashes to ashes. If any prefer incineration, let them have it without cavil or protest. The world may become so crowded that cremation may be universally adopted by law as well as by general consent. Many of the mightiest and best spirits have gone through this process. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's children have been cremated—P. P. Bliss and wife, the evangelistic singers, cremated by accident at Ashtabula bridge; John Rodgers, cremated by persecution; Latimer and Ridley, cremated at Oxford; Pothinus and Blaudina, a slave, and Alexander, a physician, and their comrades cremated at the order of Marcus Aurelius; at least a hundred thousand of Christ's disciples cremated, and there can be no doubt about the resurrection of their bodies. Whether out of natural disintegration or cremation we shall get that luminous, buoyant, gladsome, transcendent, magnificent, inexplicable structure called the resurrection body. You will have it; I will have it.
 I say to you to-day, as Paul said to Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" That far up cloud; higher than the hawk flies, higher than the eagle flies, what is it made of? Drops of water from a river, other drops from a lake, still other drops from a stagnant pool, but now embodied in a cloud and kindled by the sun. If God can make such a lustrous cloud out of water drops, many of them solid and impure and fetched from miles away, can he not transport the fragments of a human body from the earth and out of them build a radiant body? Cannot God, who owns all the material out of which bones, muscle and flesh are made, set them up again if they have fallen? If a manufacturer of telescopes drops a telescope on the floor and it breaks, can he not mend it again so you can see through it? And if God drops the human eye into the dust, the eye which he originally fashioned, can he not restore it?
 "Why should it be thought with you an incredible thing that God should raise the dead?" Things all around us suggest it. Out of what grew all these flowers? Out of the mold and the earth. Resurrected! Resurrected! The radiant butterfly—where did it come from? The loathsome caterpillar. That albatross that smites the tempest with its wings—where did it come from? A senseless shell. Near Bergerac, France, in a Celtic tomb near a block, were found flower seeds that had been buried 2,000 years. The explorer took the flower seed and planted it, and it came up. It bloomed in bluebell and heliotrope. Two thousand years ago buried, yet resurrected! A traveler says he found in a mummy pit in Egypt grave pens that had been buried there 3,000 years ago. He brought them out and on the 4th of June, 1844, he planted them and in thirty days they sprang up. Buried 3,000 years, yet resurrected!
 "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"
 Where did all this silk come from—the silk that adorns your persons and your homes? In the bow of a staff of Greek missionary brought from China to Europe the progenitors of those worms that now supply the silk markets of many nations. The progeny of hattered host and the luxurious articles of commercial emporium blazing out from the silkworms. And who shall be surprised if out of this insignificant earthly life, our bodies unfold into something worthy of the coming eternities? Put silver into diluted niter, and it dissolves. Is the silver gone forever? No. Put in some pieces of copper, and the silver reappears. If one force dissolves, another force organizes.
 "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The insects flew and the worms crawled last autumn feebly and feeble and then stopped. They have taken no food. They want none. They lie dormant and insensible, but soon the south wind will blow the resurrection trumpet, and the air and the earth will be full of them. Do you not think that God can do as much and said, "He is dead, he is dead." But the soul lived to write what he will Talmage that died returned, and had seen while his soul was gone.
 It may be found some time that what is called suspended animation or comatose state is brief death, giving the soul an excursion into the next world, from which it comes back, a furlough of a few hours granted from the conflict of life to which it must return. Physiologists tell us that while the most of our bodies are built with such wonderful economy that we can spare nothing, and the loss of a finger is a hindrance and the injury of a toe joint makes us lame, still that we have two or three useless physical apparatuses, and no anatomist or physiologist has ever been able to tell us what they are good for. They may be, the foundation of the resurrection body, worth nothing to us in this state to be indispensably valuable in the next state. The Jewish rabbis and the scientists of our day have found out that there are two or three superfluities of body that are something gloriously suggestive of another state.

 I called at my friend's house one summer day. I found the yard all piled up with the rubbish of carpenter's and mason's work. The door was off. The plumb line had torn up the floor. The roof was being lifted in cupola. All the pictures were gone, and the paper hangers were doing their work. All the modern improvements were being introduced into that dwelling. There was not a room in the house fit to live in at that time, although a month before when I visited that house everything was so beautiful I could not have suggested an improvement. My friend had gone with his family to the Holy Land, expecting to come back at the end of six months, when the building was to be done. And, oh, what was his joy when at the end of six months he returned and found the old house had been enlarged and improved and glorified. That is your body. It looks well now—all the rooms filled with health, and we could hardly make a suggestion. But after awhile your soul will go to the Holy Land, and while you are gone the old house of your tabernacle will be entirely reconstructed from cellar to attic, and every nerve, muscle and bone and tissue and artery must be hauled over, and the old structure will be burnished and adorned and raised and cupolaed and enlarged, and all the improvements of heaven introduced, and you will move into it on resurrection day.
 "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Oh, what a day when body and soul meet again! They are very fond of each other. Did your body ever have a pain and your soul not pity it, or your body have a joy and your soul not re-echo it, or changing the question, did your soul ever have any trouble and your body not sympathize with it, growing wan and weak under the depressing influence? Or did your soul ever have a gladness but your body celebrated it with kindled eye and cheek and elastic step? Surely God never intended two such good friends to be long separated.
 And so when the world's last Easter morning shall come the soul will descend, crying, "Where is my body?" And the body will ascend, saying, "Where is my soul?" And the Lord of the resurrection will bring them together, and it will be a perfect soul in a perfect body, introduced by a perfect Christ into a perfect heaven. Victory! Do you wonder that on Easter day we swathe our churches with garlands? Do you wonder we celebrate it with the most consecrated voice of song that we can invite, with the dearest fingers on organ and cornet and with dogologies that beat these arches with the billows of sound as the sea smites the basalt at Giant's Causeway? Only the bad disapprove of the resurrection. A cruel heathen warrior heard Mr. Moffatt, the missionary, preach about the resurrection, and he said to the missionary, "Will my father rise in the last day?" "Yes," said the missionary. "Will all the dead in battle rise?" said the cruel chieftain. "Yes," said the missionary. Then said the warrior: "Let me hear no more about the resurrection; there shall be no resurrection; there shall be no resurrection; I will slay thousands in battle. Will they rise?" Ah, there will be more to rise on that day than those whose crimes have never been repented of will want to see! But for all others who allowed Christ to be their pardon and their life and their resurrection it will be a day of victory.
 The thunders of the last day will be the salvo that greets you into harbor. The lightnings will be only the torches of triumphal procession marching down to escort you home. The burning will be the rockets celebrating your coronation on thrones where you will reign forever and forever and forever. Where is death? What have we to do with death? As your reunited body and soul swing off from this planet on that last day you will see deep gashes all up and down the hills, deep gashes all through the valleys, and they will be the emptied graves, they will be the abandoned sepulchers, with rough ground tossed on each side of them, and slabs will lie uneven on the rent hillocks, and there will be fallen monuments and cenotaphs, and then for the first time you will appreciate the full exhilaration of the text, "Death is swallowed up in victory."
 Hail the Lord of earth and heaven! Praise to thee by both be given. These we greet triumphantly now; Hail the resurrection thou!

English Clergymen Live Long.

There are 103 incumbents of churches in England who have occupied the same livings for fifty years or more, and of these twelve have held their places for sixty years. Their average income amounts to $1,300 a year, and in sixteen cases the income, after fifty years' continuous service, is between the limits of $360 and $760 a year.

A Noted Knight Templar Owes His Health to Peruna.

Colonel T. P. Moody, a prominent Knight Templar, is well known in every city in the United States west of Buffalo, N. Y., as a Jeweler's Auctioneer. In the city of Chicago as a prominent lodge man, being a member of the K. T.'s and also of the Masons. The cut shows Colonel Moody in the costume of the Oriental Consistory Masons, 32nd degree.

In a recent letter from 5000 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly.

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but my relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago I started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years.

"The soreness has left my stomach entirely and I am free from indigestion and dyspepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere.

"My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left her throat and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly,

T. P. Moody.
Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cures is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to catarrh in different localities and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the surprise caused by the first publication of it to all people, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

confessed, however, to see even this partial list drawn up in battle array is rather appalling. If the reader desires to see this list, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

DON'T SEE.
Been livin' some time in a quiet sort of way. But somehow I've gathered a proverb or two; If you'd save yourself trouble, I'd just caution you, Don't hear all the things that the other folks say. Been livin' as well as a pore worm can live. With a heart purty free from annoy-ance as ever; If you think that is well, then regard what I say, Don't see all the slights that other folks give. —Will T. Hale.

An Old Man's Story

A half-dozen boys were gathered about an old barn under which a defenseless dog had taken refuge from their tormenting attentions. Some were lying flat on the ground peering under; some were hurling small missiles as far as they could reach, while two others, more enterprising still, were trying to pull up a board in the floor.

Amid their excited shouts of "There he is; I see him," "Hold on, there, I'll hit him!" and kindred exclamations, they did not hear carriage wheels in the soft, dusty road or see the occupant, until a quiet voice said:

"What is it, boys?"
One or two slunk away in a shamefaced manner, but two or three others began all together to tell him what their victim was.

"He ain't nobody's dog," said one.
"No, I think he's a good hydrophobia," said another, while a third added: "He's a no 'count dog anyhow, 'nd if we can get him out we're going to tie a stone to his neck 'nd down him over in Simmond's pond."

"Has he bitten any of you?" the quiet voice inquired again.
"He sort of snapped at Wallie's hand, 'nd he'd a bit me if I hadn't been too smart for him," said the largest boy, while "Wallie" examined his dirty fingers with a martyr-like air.

"I suppose you boys were quietly playing somewhere and the dog pitched into you?"

There was a profound silence for a few moments, when one bright-eyed little fellow said manfully: "No, mister, he didn't. He was lyin' down by the brew'ry with a bone—just gnawin' it, ye know—'nd we sort of got to pleggin' 'nd pesterin' him, 'nd 'twas when Wallie snatched the bone that he snapped."

"Have you time to listen to an old man's story?"

Instantly sticks and stones were dropped, though two of the lads tried to put on an indifferent front. Driving his horse into the shade of the building, the stranger began:

"You boys do not realize it any more than I did when I was a boy, but nevertheless it is true that every day of our lives we write out a page in the book of life; and when one is old he has a great deal of time in which he must look back and read over these pages, and when I saw you tormenting that helpless dog it seemed as if some unseen finger swiftly turned the leaves of my life back to a page—a page which I wish to God could be blotted out forever, but it never can. No, boys, we may be sorry for things, may get forgiveness for them, may even forget for a time; but if we do a wrong, it is somehow bound to rise up before us at times when we least expect it. I hold that in this world we never get entirely away from our wrong doing. But I did not intend to preach a sermon, but to tell you a story.

"As a boy, I was naturally cruel; I delighted to rob birds' nests, torment cats and dogs, and smaller children. As I grew older I helped my father on the farm. I was rebuked for my abuse of the animals, and my mother used to say that if she had her way I would never get a horse to go anywhere. Also, as I grew older, I became fond of hunting, and spent many days with my noble dog Stanley in the woods. I professed to be very good to him; but of a truth 'the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel,' and when I think of the whippings and kicks the noble fellow received from me while, as I called it, I was 'trainin' him,' I am amazed at the affection he gave me in return; but the worst was yet to come.

"He had never been a good retriever. You know what that is, of course—a dog that will go anywhere after you have shot your game, and bring it to you without muzzing or tearing it in the least. I had repeatedly beaten Stanley for his failure in this line, though I knew it came from the fact that his former master had whipped him for carrying home dead chickens, or anything like that he found in the neighborhood during his puppy days, true to his retrieving instinct. One day, while shooting ducks, I said to him: 'Now, sir, you'll bring me that bird out there on that island or I'll kill you; do you understand it?' I shall always think he did, from the troubled look he gave me, and the pleading way in which he crept to my side and attempted to caress my hand.

"Roughly I shook him off and bade him go fetch the bird. Obediently he plunged into the ice-cold water, swam to the island, and then stood in an irresolute, troubled manner beside the duck. Angriily I shouted my orders, but he only put his nose on it, then swam back toward me. I sent him back three times; then he attempted to land. I knew that he was too chilled to make it possible for him to return to the island, but my passion mastered me, and again and again I struck him back into the water with my gun butt, fiercely declaring that he would bring me that bird or never land alive. Oh, the look in those brown eyes as he turned them upon me at each new effort to land! Boys, I'll never, no never, forget it, and I expect to meet it when I stand before God's bar of justice."

The stranger paused here for a little ere he found voice to go on.

"Presently he grew so helpless from cold, struggles and blows that he let himself drift beyond my reach, but frenzied with rage, I dropped my gun and snatching up a long pole, I leaped over the water's edge to strike him. As the pole came down some sod or root under my foot gave way, and I found myself struggling in the coldest water I was ever in; but it was only for a few brief moments, for, with the icy hands of death already tightening about his faithful heart, that noble dog roused himself at sight of my peril, worked toward me as best he could, and with a last desperate effort, born of love and fidelity, he dragged me to the shore, sank down, and with a few short gasps, was dead.

"Chilled and stupefied, yet perfectly conscious of the enormity of my sin, I watched by his side, gazing into the still open eyes, and alternately cursing myself and calling him names of endearment that he had never heard in life.

"How long it was before another hunter's voice recalled me to myself and condition, I do not know, but I know that during that time the sufferings of my mind made me unconscious of my bodily suffering. I was helped home, but for many weeks lay between life and death, and they said all of my unconscious ravings were of Stanley and that awful transaction by the lake-side. I have been a different person since, but I can never, in life, get away from that page in the book.

"You understand what I mean now, and all I have to say further is, boys, be kind to every living creature, and if you can do any good by repeating an old man's story, tell it again and again."

There was silence in the little group as once more the carriage wheels rolled noiselessly away; but presently the largest boy took some pennies from his pocket and bade two of the smaller ones "run to the market and get a good meaty bone." On their return it was told where the stray dog could smell it, and then the boys quietly dispersed, each to tell some one else the old man's story, and put in practice, we trust, his admonition: "Be kind to every living creature."—Practical Farmer.

A Letter of Restitution to Cleveland

"Sometimes the remorse of those who have cheated the United States is in inverse ratio to the sum of the fraud, says H. E. Armstrong in Ainslee's, President Cleveland once received a letter from a child that must have moved him deeply, for, doubtless, it was laid before him as a curiosity.

"Dear President," it ran, "I am in a dreadful state of mind and I thought I would write and tell you all. About two years ago—as near as I can recollect, it was two years ago—I used two postage stamps that had been used on letters before—perhaps more than two stamps, but I can only remember doing it twice. I did not realize what I had done until lately. My mind is constantly turned on that subject, and I think of it day and night. Now, dear President, will you please forgive me, and I promise you I will never do it again. Enclosed find coat of three stamps and please forgive me, for I was then but thirteen years old and am heartily sorry for what I have done."

"The treasury department does not know whether this letter was written by a boy or girl, but the internal evidence of expression assures us it was a girl. Imagine a boy being in a dreadful state of mind of feeling Uncle Sam with a couple of canceled stamps. The urchin might regret he had wronged his country and make amends, but the crime would not oppress his mind and rack his conscience with intolerable torments. Surely the culprit was a girl. How she must have tossed on her bed in the blackness of the long silent nights and gone about her daylight tasks with the feeling of a mortal leper! Big strong men at the same time were acting on the Haytian principle that it is not a crime to rob the government. This the President knew, and that is why he had a lump in his throat when he read the confession of the little girl. It is the most pathetic of all the letters on file in the treasury department that have accompanied contributions to the Conscience Fund."

Another Beet Sugar Factory Closes.
A report from St. Joseph, Michigan, under date of March 8, says: The Wolverine sugar plant went out of business in Benton Harbor to-day. At the annual meeting of the stockholders to-day it was voted to sell the plant. In all probability the machinery will be moved away. Negotiations are now on with five or six different companies. Three years ago the sugar beet factory was organized and its capital of $200,000 was fully paid in. The company contracted for a factory costing $300,000 and the purpose was to carry this indebtedness until it could be paid for from the creation of a sinking fund. The first year the beet crop was very poor. The factory earned in bounty from the state $20,000, but this was lost owing to the fact that the act was declared unconstitutional. The second crop of beets proved to be not much better than the former year and the farmers refused to replant the beets for a third crop.

MUCH MONEY FOR CANDY.

Nineteen Million Dollars Spent in Paris in Two Months.

Nineteen million dollars for candy! No, that isn't what the French people pay out for sweets in two months, December and January. The average price is 60 cents a pound, so you can see your Parisian sister has a sweet tooth of no mean proportions.

France makes about 143,399,000 pounds of confections every year and exports only one-tenth of it. England makes more than this and exports nearly half its product—they don't give little girls candy in England the way they do over here. Germany ranks third in the candy-making business among nations, and threatens to pass its rivals before long.

The best French chocolates come from Paris, Bordeaux and Lyons, so be sure the young man who comes to see the grown-up sister and brings a box of candy has only the best. The famous marrons glacées come from Ardeche, Gard, Rhone, Cantal, and Clermont-Ferrand. Don't forget that, and make sure the name is on the wrapper.

French manufacturers of sweetmeats are complaining now about the high tax on sugar and cocoa. On the latter a duty of $20.07 is imposed on each 250 pounds, while the impost on sugar amounts to $11.68 for the same amount. Even at that French confectionery would be cheap if the makers didn't have to pay nearly 10 cents a pound tax of the manufactured goods.

Bright's Disease Cured.
Sullivan, Ill., March 31st, Mrs. Kitty F. Seaney was very ill for months and notwithstanding the best possible medical attendance she got no better. The doctors said she had Bright's Disease, and gave her little or no hope of ever being well again.

She suffered great pain in her back, which nothing seemed able to relieve, till at last encouraged by the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills have attained in the community as a cure for Kidney Diseases, she began to use them. The result was a surprise both to Mrs. Seaney and the physicians, for soon after the treatment was commenced her kidneys threw off large quantities of dark diseased matter and she improved rapidly. She used in all ten boxes, and has completely recovered good health without pain or symptoms of the Bright's Disease.

For every dollar a woman spends on her dress she gets about ninety cents worth of show and ten cents worth of comfort.

No man can ever get religion enough in his head to make the devil let go of his hands and feet.

Mrs. Sophie Binns, President Young People's Christian Temperance Union, Fruitvale, Cal., Cured of Congestion and Inflammation of the Ovaries by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Eighteen months ago I was a pretty sick woman. I had felt for some months that I gradually grew weaker, but finally I had such severe pains I could hardly stand it. I had taken cold during menstruation and this developed into congestion of the ovaries and inflammation, and I could not bear to walk or stand on my feet. The doctor recommended an operation which I would not hear of. One of my friends advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I gave it a trial. Can you imagine my feeling when within two months I felt considerably better, my general health was improved, and my pains had entirely disappeared. I kept taking it six weeks more and am now enjoying the best of health, thanks to you. Yours truly, MRS. SOPHIE BINNS."

"$5000 FORFEIT IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE."
When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues, and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Stomach and brain affect each other. A sick stomach sours the disposition and prevents sleep and brain rest, and a sick brain sours the stomach and clogs the bowels. Men of sedentary habits, brain workers who don't get much exercise, have sick stomachs and bowels, and wear out their brains and nerves.

"I work in the office and don't get as much exercise as I should, and when I feel bad I just take Cascarets and my bowels make me feel alright."
—E. Bohan, Q. & C. Route, Crescent, Ky.

"I had a torpid liver for months. I bought a box of Cascarets in Washington and have not only been put in perfect health, but have gained considerable in weight."
—Harry Hodgson, Rockville, Md.

"Cascarets were the only medicine I had with me when I lost the world's weight in 'Champion Corn Husker of America,' husking 270 bushels in 14 hours."
—E. E. Kimberlin, La Harpe, Ill.

A man who keeps his bowels regular, healthy, is without strain or violence, can keep strong and healthy without much exercise. A famous professor in Jefferson Medical College used to advise his students: "Trust in God and keep your bowels open!" That's God's own wisdom, for when the bowels are regular and the digestion strong and healthy, then the system is safe and the brain and nerves will have inexhaustible elasticity and life.

Bond-MacArthur.

At noon on April first at the residence of the bride's father, James MacArthur, his daughter, Miss Jennie H. Bond, of Libertyville, Illinois, Rev. Albert Torbet, of the Presbyterian Church officiating, there being present only the immediate family circle.

Miss MacArthur and her estimable brothers and sisters are all well and favorably known here, their father having formerly been a pastor in town. Miss Jennie at one time taught in our schools, but for the past four years she has been teaching in Libertyville.

Mr. Bond is a builder and contractor in Libertyville, a suburb of Chicago. He has become somewhat known to our townspeople on his occasional visits here. His best recommendation of him is that he has won the heart and hand of Miss MacArthur, who we know has the best of judgment.

Mr. and Mrs. Bond took the 4:00 p. m. train, intending to spend a little time in Saginaw, also in Big Rapids with her sister, Mrs. Prof. Masselink, also in Chicago and thence to their new home in Libertyville. The kindest wishes of a host of friends go with them.

THE PARTING HAND.

We take the parting hand and wave our friends good-bye. And off they speed to make their homes beneath a distant sky. Few are the words we care to speak or would in language frame. To picture life's prospectus, which we the future name.

Our social natures thrive and glow o'er friendships of the past; The sunny paths which we have walked with not a cloud o'er cast. And flowers that spring, which memory's vase shall ever rich adorn. That brought us light and happiness like radiant rays of morn.

But days like these are transient like shadows on our way. O'er strains of sweetest music that pass in magic play. For though the bonds grow strong, the individual more Must all it is assert in life and mark its single score.

And, so the parent and the child, the friend who walks with friend, Ere long must come unto the point of companionship to end; Half glad, half sad, the hands are locked, he, taking the heart, With that strange feeling that must fall on those who know they part.

So all that we can say or do at such a time as this, Is to express the earnest hope our friends may share the bliss. Heaven has in store for those who walk amidst the hallowed flowers. That shall attend devoted lives,—if rightful aims are ours.

That purpose may large expand and broaden every day. To those who quit a narrow bound, who highest laws obey; That usefulness at any cost with sacrifices meet. May be the polestar of their lives, with virtues e'er repeat.

Then while we part on lower planes our spirits take the scope. Of that wherein we may behold the rainbow tints of hope. O'erarching all our lives, with promises unchanging. And, comfort take, although we part, our hearts are not estranged.

Band Benefit.

On the evening of Friday, April 18th, the entertainers known as the Wilson-Frye Combination, will appear at the Opera House, for the benefit of our band. Marion Wilson and Edward H. Frye make up the personnel of the combination, and their costumed entertainments are everywhere spoken of as most pleasing. They are under the exclusive management of the Central Lyceum Bureau, and are known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as leading artists in their respective lines. The Bureau guarantees this combination to be one of the very best on their entire list. There is great versatility and remarkable interpretation in the readings and impersonations of Miss Wilson, Nature having done much for her in appearance, voice and action. Mr. Frye is a strong man in his line of work, drawing his audiences into touch and sympathy with passages of the most delicate humor and then of the tenderest pathos, keeping them wavering at will between convulsions of laughter and a tendency to tears. He is certainly one of the finest impersonators on the American platform. Do not fail to attend and show your appreciation of the boys' efforts to furnish a good entertainment.

Sugar News.
One of last Thursday's dailies said:—It is learned on good authority that some stock in the Peninsular Sugar Refining Co., which has a factory at Caro, Mich., recently changed hands, the purchaser being the American Sugar Refining Co., otherwise the sugar trust, but no details could be ascertained, as the leading stockholders are all out of town. This would seem to confirm the rumor that the sugar trust is trying to buy up the beet sugar business.

A dispatch was sent from Saginaw the same day as follows:—It is rumored that the Havemeyers are acquiring heavy interests in the sugar beet factories of Michigan. It is claimed here that the Havemeyers, acting for the sugar trust, have taken a block of stock in the factory at Crosswell. Shortly over a month ago a reorganization of the Crosswell company was effected and Charles Montague, of Caro, was elected president and general manager. It is intimated that this move is in the interest of the sugar trust and that Montague is acting for it. It is also claimed that the Havemeyers have purchased stock in the Caro factory and that the trust has secured stock in one of the Bay City factories. So far as known no attempt has been made to secure stock in either of the Saginaw sugar organizations.

TESTIMONIAL.
To the Editor.
Dear Sir:—For several years I have been troubled with deafness, roaring in my head and all the symptoms of Chronic Catarrh. I believed that my case was incurable, but upon the urgent request of a friend I consulted Dr. Morrison of the Detroit Clinic. After a careful examination he said he could cure me in two months. I commenced treatment and in two months I was cured; could hear as well as ever; no more pain or roaring in the head. I was afraid it would return but I have had a severe cold since I was cured and there has been no return of the trouble so I know I am cured. I want your readers to know of my wonderful cure.
