MODERN FLOUR MILLING.

Our Mills Compare Favorably with The Large Western Mills.

In a recent issue of the Scientific American an exhaustive illustrated article was published descriptive of the process of modern flour milling, as seen in the largest mills in the world, located at Minneapolis, Minn. In looking over the article, it is pleasing to note a striking similarity in the equipment of our Roller Mills at this place, owned and operated by C. W. Heller, with the large mills described. There is the same plan-sifter system, the bolting reel for separating the flour from the bran, the bran dusters and other minor machines, all built on the same plan, only different in capacity.

In describing the process of manufacture, or the converting of the wheat kernel in its natural state into the high grade flour now on the market everywhere, attention is called to a popular error. We take the liberty to quote a few sentences: "Flour is not dust or pulverized wheat, it really consists of sharp granules of uniform size, composed of starch and gluten, all impurities having been removed. The thought might arise as to what is known as 'whole wheat' flour, which created such wide spread interest a few years ago, on account of its alleged great nutritive value over white or 'patent' flour. It is perfectly true that germ and bran have food value, and if the human stomach were capable of performing all the operations of a miller, this could be utilized. There is more nutriment in the skin of the potato than in the body of it, but who can eat an equal weight of the former without the stomach's rebelling? A nutritive substance is not always a digestive one. We give flour to men and women and bran to cattle, and all thrive, but a man is no stronger than his stomach. Milling is not done to make white flour, but to make a food product which will be easily assimilated."

One of the chief objections to the old stone process was that the stone crushed the kernel, whereas a shelling process was needed. This has been provided by the gradual process of passing the kernel between corrugated steel rolls, these rolls revolving in opposite directions and at various speeds, in such a way as to break the several outer coatings of the kernels, after which the several parts are separated by other machines, the grinding and sifting operations being repeated several times. There are other processes which we cannot here enumerate, but care is continually exercised to prevent pulverizing, by which the life of the flour is killed.

Many of our people in this section have for some time been in the habit of using western flours in combination with the product of our own mills, to such an extent that our millers make a side line of western flours in order to satisfy their patrons. We have recently come in touch with a gentleman who is quite observant along these lines and he informs us that the same custom prevailed at his home, but recently he decided to test matters on his own account and for his own satisfaction. Accordingly he allowed the supply of western flour to run out but kept plenty of the White Lilly on hand and awaited results. At tea shortly after a plate of warm biscuits were brought on and were declared by all fit for a king—made entirely from White Lilly. Later the housewife declared that she believed the bread made from our own flour alone was better than any she had had for a good while. This goes to show that the matter of using western flour in combination or altogether, is partially imagination on the part of the user, or it may be that judgment is not used in the process of baking, as what will bring good results with one grade or brand of flour will not give as good with another grade or brand, though one may be equally as good as the other. Our mills are putting up a first-class article which we honestly believe is worthy of more general use, and if properly handled will not fail to satisfy the most fastidious epicurean.

Wellington Benjamin, son of George Benjamin, of Ellington, met with a very serious accident last week Tuesday, while drawing hay for Frank Fearman to Wahjemega. His team being frightened by a passing train, started suddenly, crushing him between his load and a telephone pole. At last accounts he had a slight chance for recovery.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Cecil and Harolt Karr have left the kindergarten.

Mrs. Johnson visited the kindergarten Friday afternoon.

Mabel Anderson and Alex. Duncan have returned to school again this week, after a few days of illness.

Some of our pupils, who are constantly being tardy, may get excused from the final examinations if they continue being late.

Rev. J. W. Penn was expected to talk to the high school room Wednesday morning but was unable to be present on account of business engagements.

There are some prospects of the base ball boys going to Imlay City Saturday to cripple their reputation. The multitude of pupils who are going with them are doctoring their throats to help the boys win the victory.

On Tuesday afternoon about one hundred and twenty-five pupils of the primary departments spent two hours in gathering flower specimens from the woods for the study of nature. As they marched from the schoolhouse in a double line accompanied by Mrs. Fritz and Miss Henry they were quite a little army of happy children.

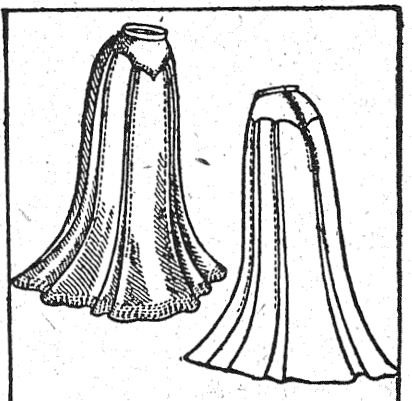

Since Saturday we are more confident than ever that our base ball boys are going to win all the games this season. Although it rained nearly all day, a game was played between the Cass City and Caro High School teams. Our boys beat had badly beaten—eight to three. About forty pupils came over with the Caro team, who were well prepared with yells and colors but they did not have opportunity to use them. However, they gave one final, good yell before they went home to cry.

Hines, Short-horn Commissioner for Dairy Demonstration, he having spent the past six months selecting specimens from herds in United States and Ontario. That Mr. Hagaman has two in the list goes to show he has one of the best herds of "dual purpose" Short-horns. Springlake Stock Farm is also the home of Pure Oxford Down Sheep, Mohair Goats and can boast of the finest flock of Buff Turkeys in the world. "To Let—Furnished"
By EVELYN GLOVER

"Rose Cottage," said Molly Page. "That's it. I could cry when I think it ought to be mine!"

Two girls had dismounted from their bicycles, and stood staring at a long, low, ivy-covered cottage. The hedge inclosing its garden was dotted with wild roses, and the air was alive with sounds of summer.

"Then did old Mr. Harvey tell you he'd leave it to you?" asked the other girl sympathetically.

"Why, many a time! He took a great fancy to me because I used to go and read to him when he was in Westbourne Square, and he was always talking about his cottage in the country. Then he died awfully suddenly, you know, and there was no will; and it's gone, with everything else, to a Philistine of a nephew in Australia. I know he'll want to level it and sow the ground with bush or something! Those clodhopping farmers always take it as a personal insult if there's anything between them and the sky line!"

"I suppose it's empty now? I wish we could see over it, don't you?" said Mary Fordham.

"There's a man working in the garden. We might ask, perhaps," said Molly doubtfully.

They prepped up their bicycles and walked toward the gate. Molly hesitatingly accosted a blue-shirted boy which bent over a rosebush.

"Do you happen to know if there'd be any objection to our seeing over the cottage? I knew the late owner very well."

The back straightened itself instantly, and a bronzed, six-foot individual faced the questioner.

"Not the slightest," he said. His voice was pleasant and cultured, and the crimson rushed into Molly's cheeks.

"I beg your pardon," she faltered, "I thought—"

The giant's brown eyes twinkled. He perfectly understood the workings of the mind of this pretty young woman, who was blushing so becomingly.

"I have the key in my pocket," he said, "I'm well, gardener and caretaker, and hired man, and everything else till Mr. Hamilton arrives. I—the fact is, I worked under him in Australia, and I've come over to see to some of his affairs, and get things a bit straight for him. I'm trying to reduce this place to something like order."

He strode to the end of the garden, picked up a loose short coat from the grass, and thrust his long arm into its sleeve. Then, with an easy "At your service," he led the way toward the house.

It was a house calculated to delight any woman's heart—a house with long, low rooms, and quaint, unexpected corners and recesses suggesting delightful possibilities in the matter of furnishing.

"Oh!" she gasped, as they stood in a small bare, sunlit apartment of paneled oak with old-fashioned, diamond-paned windows, "how could Mr. Hamilton bear to let this?"

"Well, you see, the whole thing's a bit cramped to a man who's been used to an expanse of twenty square miles or so," said Gerald Wratley.

DWARF TREES IN JAPAN.

One 10 Inches High May Be 300 Years Old and Worth $150.

A Japanese nursery garden is a revelation. There, on benches, in rows, sit tortured trees in their bowls or pans of falience. Their perfection is a marvel of patience, requiring years for its accomplishment; sometimes one man will give as much as 30 years' attention to a single little cherry tree.

Each curve, each leaf, each twig has its direction and proportion regulated by the most rigid and immemorial principles, and to have any value in Japanese eyes a dwarf must conform absolutely to the iron rules laid down by the canons of taste in the days when Iyeyasu Tokugawa paralyzed into an adamant immobility the whole artistic and intellectual life of the country.

The effect is, of course, exquisite in its elaborate and rather morbid beauty. But it must be said that there are many dwarfs, very many, which go for low prices, owing to the imperfection of their development; they have a bough or a bend that is not prescribed.

Consequently the Japanese will buy them—indeed, with pleasure—but will not admit their claims to be works of art.

The untutored savage eye of the west entirely fails to see any difference between a perfect specimen 10 inches high, three centuries of equal height, of five years' growth and a dollar value.—Macmillan's.

DANGER SPOTS IN A STORM.

Places One Should Avoid While the Lightning Is Playing Pranks.

Now that the season of thunderstorms is approaching people should understand what spots to avoid in order to reduce to the minimum the chances of being struck by lightning.

Out of doors trees should be avoided, and if from the rapidity with which the explosion follows the flash it is evident that electric clouds are near at hand a recumbent posture is the safest.

It is seldom dangerous to take shelter under sheds, carts or low buildings or under the arch of a bridge, and a distance of twenty or thirty feet from tall trees or houses is an eligible situation, for should a discharge take place these elevated bodies are most likely to receive it.

It is well also to avoid water, for it is a good conductor, and the height of a human being near the stream may determine the direction of a discharge. Within doors we are tolerably safe in the middle of a carpeted room or when standing on a thick hearth rug. The chimney should be avoided on account of the conducting power of the carbon deposited in it and gilt moldings or bell wires are sources of risk. In bed we are tolerably safe, since blankets and feather beds are bad conductors.

It is injudicious to take refuge in a cellar, because the discharge is often from the earth to a cloud, and buildings frequently sustain the greatest injury in their basements.

Embarrassing Reminiscences.
William H. Crane and Willis P. Sweatnam met the other day for the first time in years. In a quiet, dignified, and severely earnest manner, they began to tell things to one another. Mr. Sweatnam took umbrage at a remark Mr. Crane made regarding his youthfulness.

"Now, don't be a bad boy and throw stones," said Sweatnam. "I remember being in '72 seeing a man of your name wearing a toga in an extravaganza."

"Well," answered the exponent of Harum, "I remember going out to the fair grounds in Indianapolis in '64 and seeing a husky boy pounding a bass drum in the band, and they said his name was—"

"For the Lord's sake, hush!" exclaimed Sweatnam; "there may be ladies present."—New York Times.

Zebraws as Beasts of Burden.
South African native traditions have it that in the long-forgotten days the zebra was a domesticated animal and was held in complete subjection by its master, man. In modern times several attempts have been made to train this hardy beast. Experiments at the London zoological gardens indicate that zebra can be readily made serviceable. There are, innumerable herds of zebra running wild in South Africa and if they could be broken to domestic use their subjection would solve a problem which for generations has been a puzzle to the best experts. For the zebra of South Africa are immune from the tsetse fly and the horse sickness which has lately been ravaging Rhodesia and other portions of the continent.

Two Notable Army Officers.
First Lieutenant Rudolph E. Sniper of the Fourteenth cavalry is believed to be the youngest commissioned officer in the United States army. He was born Dec. 5, 1882. The tallest oficer is Lieut. Ernest D. Peck, first lieutenant, corps of engineers, a native of Wisconsin. Lieut. Peck stands six feet four and a half inches and was a star graduate at West Point, where the other boys used to call him "Pike's Peak." He has given special attention to road construction and soon after his graduation supervised the building of a military road which is now known as "Peek's Pike."

Today.
Unsettled comes to the newborn; To-morrow is not mine. The sun may cease to shine For thee, ere earth shall greet its morn.

Be earnest, then, in thought and deed, Nor fear approaching night; Claim comes with evening light And hope and peace—thy duty heed.—Ruskin.

GUIANA

The scarcest stamp of all is the 1c British Guiana of 1856. Of this stamp absolutely only one specimen is known to exist, and for that one specimen M. le Renouvier, of Ferrary, of Paris, is said to have once refused £5,000.

Blood the Best Fertilizer.
A superstition dating from olden times exists to the effect that roses and flowers generally attain greater beauty in soil fertilized by blood, especially human blood, than elsewhere. Persons who have visited Newmarket, England, know of the so-called "bloody flower of Newmarket," which is found nowhere else than in the old moat, now filled up, and in which, according to traditions, a very large quantity of human remains are interred. These flowers bloom in June and July and by the bloodlike hue of their blossoms suggest the name which has been given to them.

Musical Ring.
A minister in the north of London possesses the most wonderful ring in the world. In appearance it is an ordinary gold signet ring, but it is, in addition, a perfect little musical box. By touching a tiny spring, and holding the ring close to the ear, one can hear a sweet hymn tune. By placing the ring on a box the charming tones of this unique ring can be heard all over a large room.

Vocation for Squinting Girls.
A tradesman in Berlin has hit upon the plan of engaging squinting girls to serve in his shop. Asked the reason he said, "I am often robbed. Now that the eyes of my girls look in every direction, the customers who steal will never know when they are being watched."

HOSPITAL SECRETS.

A Nurse Says: "Pe-ru-na is a Tonic of Efficiency."

Sanitarium for Sick Cereals at Port Arthur, Ontario.

Most of us are familiar with hospitals and retreats where life and health may be restored to human beings and animals, but a new and interesting phase is a sanitarium for grain.

Plants and flowers are subject to disease, and as the loss of crops throughout the United States alone has been estimated at some eighteen million dollars, it becomes imperative that an effort should be made to save the diseased grain. Very often farmers lose the whole crop because of being compelled to harvest in wet weather.

To the new hospital, which is located at Port Arthur, Ontario, the farmers may send their grain to be treated and carefully nursed. After passing out of the care of the experts the grain is said to be cleaner and more wholesome than what which has not been subjected to this process. Convalescent wheat has been stored away and kept in perfect health for several years.

When the wheat ill unto death arrives, a nurse places it in a bath of pure water, where it is brushed and scoured in machines made for the purpose until the grains are highly polished and in good shape for the mill. It is then placed upon a bed made of screening and subjected to a jamming process, first of hot, then of cold air, until it is perfectly dry.

Again the grain is subjected to another cleaning process, after which it is ready to be returned to the owner, with the guarantee that it is thoroughly cured. Strange to say, when it is weighed it seems to have lost nothing, and being all grain and no chaff it weighs three or four pounds heavier to the bushel.

An Anti-Sea-Sick Vessel.
Lieut. Turc, of the French navy, has after much study devised a plan for a ship the passengers on which will, as he imagines, be proof against seasickness. He has caught the idea from the motion of a swing. As a general rule, vessels are only set rolling from ten to fifteen seconds at a time, and as his would have a regular swing of twenty-two seconds, he calculates that the effect of the waves would thus be counteracted. Mr. Turc's model ship would be of about 6,000 tons burden, and would sail at a speed of nineteen knots. All the cabins would be well out of the water, as they would be constructed on a deck more than thirty feet above the sea level.

Every housekeeper should know that if they will buy Defiance Cold Water Starch for laundry use they will save not only time, because it never sticks to the iron, but because each package contains 16oz.—one full pound—while all other Cold Water Starches are put up in 2 1/2-pound packages, and the price is the same, 10 cents. Then again because Defiance Starch is free from all injurious chemicals. If your grocer tries to sell you a 12oz. package it is because he has a stock on hand which he wishes to dispose of before he puts in Defiance. He knows that Defiance Starch has printed on every package in large letters and figures "16ozs." Demand Defiance and save much time and money and the annoyance of the iron sticking. Defiance never sticks. 4-28-5

THE OUTDOOR FAD.

Benefits of a Fad to the Person who Wishes to Enjoy Being Outdoors. The Study of Birds, of Flowers, of Ferns, of Mushrooms. What it Adds of Interest to the Vacation.

By CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK, Author of "Cradle and Nursery," "First Aid to the Young Housekeepers," "Housekeeping Made Easy," "What to Eat," "In City Tents," Etc.

Everyone should cultivate an outdoor fad. Some persons do not need to cultivate it, being already so well provided that their chief trouble is to find time to give each fad its needful amount of exercise. They are the exception rather than the rule. It is more common to find fadless folk. Lacking some better diversion they spend their summer mornings on hotel verandas absorbed in fancy work and know no more of the country or the seaside when they go from it than when they came to it. "Coelum, non animus." Or to put it in the vernacular, they have changed their spots but not their point of view.

Not less interesting than the flowers are the ferns. They are not the easiest things in the world to learn to know, although at first they may seem a trifle compared with the flowers. But they have so many minute variations that it is puzzling to distinguish between different kinds. It is a keen pleasure, however, when one has learned even a few of them by name and is in a position to display one's superior knowledge to the ignorant.

To such people as these the country outing is not a success. If I do not include men in this category it is because they usually have something they do when they are off out of doors. They fish or they go boating or they hunt. Or if they are remote from such opportunities as this they will make friends with the men and talk with them about their work and get the good of the fresh air at the same time they are being amused. While the women, if they wish to acquaint themselves with the occupations of unfamiliar women, must do this inside the house.

Great is the advantage of outdoor fad. It gives a new thing to think about, to study over and this is what most women need. They are too much confined in their own little rut or round of duties and amusement and they become narrow. The recent growth of interest in Nature as displayed in the number of Nature books that are published every year is encouraging in more ways than one. It promises well for the future health of those who read them and use them as guides in their summer outings.

The bird fad has grown immensely during the past few years. For a while it was the study of only a chosen few who went out in the early Spring and followed the habits of the local birds through the months, until the time for migration. The study had enough fascination about it to move more lovers of birds to follow it up until now there is a very respectable literature on birds alone. Our "little brothers of the air" are by way of being almost as well known as the human brothers of the terrestrial regions and those who are well acquainted with the former claim for them qualities that throw the unfeathered bipeds into the shade.

Not only in the country is the study pursued with ardor. One young woman tells of an experience she had in a large city park where she and a number of girl friends had been accustomed to betake themselves, with opera glasses to study the birds during the morning hours. They had evidently been observed by the gamins of the neighborhood, for one day as the girl who told the tale was wandering through a leafy path she was suddenly confronted by a small boy, who made an imaginary opera glass out of his hands through which he glared at her as he announced in trumpet tones, "I see a female!"

Their enjoyment is ready to their hand as soon as they get into the country and it returns with every rearing Spring and Summer.

There are other joys for those who do not incline birdwards but seek their amusement at their feet. Botany is so long and time so fleeting that those who cannot give much study to all plants must content themselves with striving to possess themselves of the secrets of the few. The wild flowers of a district are generally sufficient to keep any one person busy during the limits of an ordinary Summer outing. For an equipment she may perhaps provide herself with a microscope, but this is not really necessary, unless she means to make a more or less scientific observation of the different species of flora. And when she begins to do that, her play is likely to become a good deal like work. She is better off if she endeavors to make only a collection of flowers of a certain kind. This will quicken her powers of observation. As she strolls along a country road or spins along on her wheel she will be prompt to note this or that unfamiliar blossom. If she is gifted with the power of painting, or even of coloring drawings, she is fortunate in her ability to make for herself a set of pictures that will keep Summer for her into the midst of Winter.

Not less interesting than the flowers are the ferns. They are not the easiest things in the world to learn to know, although at first they may seem a trifle compared with the flowers. But they have so many minute variations that it is puzzling to distinguish between different kinds. It is a keen pleasure, however, when one has learned even a few of them by name and is in a position to display one's superior knowledge to the ignorant.

But, some one may say, one cannot put in all one's time studying some one thing. It makes a vacation too much like work. It certainly would, if one did it. But the thing to do is to make the fad an incentive to other things. If one has heard, for instance, that there are pitcher plants at such and such a spot three or four miles distant, what an object for a morning's ride! The woman who puts wheeling in its proper place in her esteem and who takes her bicycle as much as a matter of course as she does her walking skirt, will not find to be told what a pleasure it is to find some excuse for an excursion. She is always ready for something of the sort and has the delight of knowing that she is benefiting herself by the exercise at the same time that she is having a jolly day with an object in view.

It may be said, by the way, that the woman who is accustomed to riding a wheel is the woman who is quick to perceive the new plant, the new bird. It was a very well known educator who said, in speaking of the bicycle, that it not only furnishes exercise for the muscles but occupies the mind, trains the eye and gives frequent occasion for quick decisions. All of these are needed if a woman is to get the best out of the fad she has taken up.

Moreover, she does not want a fad that is going to keep her in one place, bending all her attention upon some near-at-hand object. If that is the effect, she might, for many reasons, get as much good from the fancy work on the hotel veranda. She has enough of toll in one place when she is in her own home. When she goes away she must widen her horizon and change her environment in every way she possibly can.

As one keeps up the fad habit it is likely to broaden. A woman may begin by watching for certain wild flowers or ferns, but she does not stop there. She goes on to something else. It may be birds, for as some one has said: "Such things can develop suddenly, unexpectedly, in persons that have lived along very comfortably half a lifetime and not felt the need of a bird in their existence."

Or it may be mushrooms. This is a rather expensive fad, for while one may find books on birds and flora at proper prices, those that deal exhaustively with mushrooms are profusely illustrated and come high. But it does not require a very extensive education in these matters to learn to distinguish between the edible and the poisonous mushrooms and then there is a material object in one's pursuit of knowledge. In nearly every section of the country one may find wholesome mushrooms and they are so easily cooked and so good to the taste that those who like them are eager to encourage the fad of their study.

Only one warning may be uttered concerning the fad,—and this is for the sake of others rather than of the faddist herself. Don't make it a bore! A bore, by the way, has been defined as a person who talks so much about himself that he gives you no chance to talk about yourself. This may be applied to the faddist,—who would do well to take for his principle the motto "Live and let live." Talk about your fad, if you must, but let others talk about theirs, too. When you are on your wheel with all your senses alert for the golden robin or the scarlet tanager you have been told you might catch a glimpse of in this especial spot, do not be so earnest in your quest that you have no patience with the company of the woman who is on the search for this or that rare plant or fern. If you wish to go on your still bird hunt with no other company than that of your opera glass and your silent steed, do so. But if you go in company, grant to your associate the courtesy of the road.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. VanMetre of Shepherdton, W. Va., says "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by T. H. Fritz, Drug Store, Cass City, E. A. Frank, Kingsport. Trial bottles free. Reg. sizes 50c, $1.00.

BIG LEGS

CAN BE QUICKLY REDUCED WITH HEVE-O From various causes, horses are troubled more or less with swollen or puffed legs, which neglected will cause stiffness, clumsy action and an unsalable condition. There is no occasion for this trouble to exist as the new discovery called HEVE-O will, with a few doses, remove this very prevalent trouble. HEVE-O, the new discovery for swollen legs, distemper and kidney troubles, is meeting with remarkable success. Its action on the stomach becomes impaired and must receive treatment as well as the other organs. HEVE-O is prepared for just such cases. Kidneys—a few doses will show marked improvement on any kidney trouble (which makes it a thorough blood purifier), or a few doses in hot bran mash will stop distemper and cure the cough. Sheep and cattle frequently have bad coughs. HEVE-O is equally good for them. A trial will prove its superiority. One pound packages, 50c. Sold by all druggists. Remember the name, HEVE-O and take nothing else.

East Dayton.

We are all glad that spring is here at last. Mrs. Wm. Myers visited Mrs. A. K. Roberts on Friday. Arbor day was creditably observed here, by the school and others. Wm. Riley finished sowing eight acres of oats on the C. O. Blinn farm on the 28th. Several I. O. O. F. people from here attended the anniversary in Caro last week Tuesday. Orville Wells, son of our merchant, S. Wells, who was sick last week, is rapidly improving. A. L. Adams has the materials on the ground for his new house, and will commence the foundation soon. A. R. Roberts is underdraining his new lot and we expect to see the finest garden in town there this summer.

Our merchant, R. J. Putnam, is setting out a lot of fruit trees on his farm. He has a fine large young orchard already. A. J. Myers and son finished sawing the logs at their mill last Friday and are now cutting lath. They expect to move to J. H. Johnson's yard next week. Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Chatterton have moved here, on their farm, which they purchased last winter of Wm. McKay, and are cozily fixed up in their new house on the hill. Mrs. Bertha Sivers, who has been a great sufferer from consumption for some time past, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Perkins, Apr. 30th. The funeral service was conducted at the M. E. Church by Rev. W. T. Wallace on Tuesday, May 3rd, at 2 o'clock. It seems very sad for one to die at her age, yet we must all go.

According to a statement from Bradstreet's commercial agency, 84 per cent of the men who failed during the year 1903 did not advertise their business. This shows very plainly that the chances for success are decidedly against the man who does not advertise what he wants to sell. The multiplication of producers and dealers in all lines gives the buyer more facilities for supplying his wants, and thus it is that constant advertising is required by the wise seller, both to secure trade and hold it.

Lovely May.

Lovely May! O bless thy heart!
Do thy loveliest we pray!
Let the buds and blossoms start,
Drive the North-wind's breath away!
O these bonnets are so fine,
Slender, tender, basking low!
Lights celestial on them shine!
How they smile beneath the glow!
See the dog-tooth violet
Decking now the wood-land range,
Or the snow-drop, as it met
Winter on the barren grange!
See the bellflower, pale and sweet,
The arbutus, fragrant, fair,
The anemones, we greet,—
Earth to grace and bless the air!
Joyous May! we now forget
Winter storms and frosts and floods;
Earth thou dost remember yet,
Garubishing the fields and woods!
Out upon the busy farm,
In the city's ready mart,
Active life with all its charm
Once again is talking heart!
Now the bees begin to hum,
And the song-birds build their nest,
Joys to every creature come
Only laggards are unblest.
May! O May! A queen attired!
Stretch thy wand o'er lands afar,—
All creation is inspired!
Earth is made a jeweled star!
JAMES MACARTHUR.
