A SURE THING.

$1,000,000 Company Organized to Build Bay City-Port Huron Railroad

On Monday evening a new railroad company was organized at Bay City, capitalized at $1,000,000, to build a steam railroad to be known as the Bay City and Port Huron railroad. Articles of incorporation have been filed at Lansing and the matters of bonding and construction are now being arranged as rapidly as possible.

The officers of the new company are as follows: Pres., W. C. Penoyar, Bay City; vice pres., G. A. Prescott, Tawas City; treasurer, F. B. Chesborough, Bay City; secretary and attorney, U. L. Collins, Bay City.

The road will run east from Bay City to Cass City or Caro, thence southeast to Shabbona and Sanilac Centre and Croswell and down the Lake Huron shore to Port Huron.

The road has been surveyed and preparations have been going on for the six months past. The company will erect stations at Bay City and Port Huron and between the two cities to cost between $20,000 and $40,000, and all are to be of brick, stone and cement. The bridges will be of concrete and steel and wide enough for double tracks. The entire equipment is of the very best and will cost about $3,000,000. The road will be twelve miles shorter than any road between the terminal points. The terminal rights into Port Huron have already been secured.

Leg and Ribs Broken.

North Branch Gazette.
Tuesday afternoon Jos. D'Arcy met with an accident whereby he had three ribs broken and his leg crushed at the ankle so that the bones protruded through the flesh. It seems he was riding in a cart and leading the large Belgian stallion belonging to the Silverwood Horse Breeders' Association, of which he is manager, behind, when the horses became unmanageable and started to run. Mr. D'Arcy being unable to control them, and after they had gone about two miles, was finally thrown from the cart, and the wounds must have been inflicted by the stallion trampling upon him. When assistance came he was taken to his home in Silverwood and Drs. Thomas, of North Branch, and D'Arcy, of Caro, were immediately summoned and upon their arrival administered to the unfortunate man's sufferings.

IN OPERATION.

Our Creamery Started on Tuesday and is Being Well Patronized.

Our creamery started operation on Tuesday, just sixteen days from the time the building was started from the foundation. It can scarcely be realized what an amount of hustling that means unless one has been watching the hustling process. There has been no let up at any one time, and A. H. Ale, who has had the matter in hand, deserves much credit for the manner in which the plant has been installed.

We must also add that it is one of the most complete to be found in this section, and the company is fortunate indeed in having it placed at so low a figure. It had been hoped to start on Monday but it was found impossible as there were so many little matters to adjust in getting the machinery in proper order, and even on Tuesday there was some delay, but all is now running smoothly. The receipts of milk and cream on Tuesday were equal to about 4,000 pounds of milk which was increased by this morning to over 7,100 pounds, and this with only five teams hauling. By next week it is expected to have nearly as many more engaged in hauling which should just about double the receipts of milk and cream. O. K. James, the manager for the company, has done some excellent work in arranging the routes and securing the co-operation of the farmers, and it is to be hoped they will stand by him loyally and help to make this the banner creamery of the Thumb, if not of the state. That would mean a great deal, but there is no reason why it cannot be done, if all lend a hand.

Doing Well.

The editor was privileged with an inside view of A. Bond's ginseng gardens this week, and found much of interest connected therewith. Mr. Bond has an excellent showing, considering the short space of time that has elapsed since his gardens were started. He now has eight large beds well filled with growing plants, ranging in age from seedlings to four-year-olds, the latter now being in bud. He has made a careful study of this peculiar plant and investigated quite extensively the success of older growers, consequently is profiting by their experience. We hope soon to give our readers a special article regarding ginseng, written by an eastern specialist.

WON THE CUP.

Our Boys Brought Home The Cup from Bad Axe.

The annual Field Day meet of the Thumb High School Athletic Association took place at Bad Axe last Friday, and proved a decided success, with one exception. The attendance was all that could be desired, and the weather was quite pleasant, and the contests close, but an unfortunate affair occurred during the hammer throw, whereby a small boy came near losing his life. The hammer, thrown by one of the athletes, and while yet in progress through the air, struck the boy on the head. That event was at once struck from the day's program, and the executive committee also decided that it should be hereafter excluded from the games. It was feared for a time that the boy would die, but we are pleased to learn that he is now likely to recover fully. The following shows the result in the several events:

100 yard dash—Atkins, Vassar, 1st; McComb, Cass City, 2nd; A. Duncanson, Cass City, 3rd; time, 11.1-5 seconds.

220 yard dash—McComb, Cass City, 1st; Atkinson, Vassar, 2nd; Heinlein, Vassar, 3rd; time, 23.4-5 seconds.

120 yard hurdle race—Atkins, Vassar, 1st; Lowery, Harbor Beach, 2nd; Orr, Cass City, 3rd; time, 17.4-5 seconds.

One half mile run—Guy Landon, Cass City, 1st; Dan Duncanson, Cass City, 2nd; Odell, Bad Axe, 3rd; time, 2:23.

Shot put—Bowerman, Elkton, 1st; Tripp, Bad Axe, 2nd; Lowery, Harbor Beach, 3rd; distance, 38 feet 10 1/2 inches.

Pole vault—Ferguson, Harbor Beach, 1st; Ash, Vassar, 2nd; Cragg, Harbor Beach, 3rd; height, 8 feet 4 inches.

Run, high jump—Kewley, Bad Axe, 1st; Lowery, Harbor Beach, 2nd; Atkins, Vassar, 3rd; height, 5 feet 3 inches.

Stand, broad jump—Cooley, Cass City, 1st; Lowery, Harbor Beach, 2nd; Harrison, Bad Axe, 3rd; distance, 9 feet 4 inches.

Run, broad jump—Lowery, Harbor Beach, 1st; Leszczinski, Harbor Beach, 2nd; Atkins, Vassar, 3rd; distance, 17 feet 7 1/2 inches.

Stand, hop, step and jump—Cooley, Cass City, 1st; Atkins, Vassar, 2nd; Lowery, Harbor Beach, 3rd; distance, 28 feet 9 inches.

Run, hop, step and jump—Harrison, Bad Axe, 1st; Yakes, Cass City, 2nd; Cooley, Cass City, 3rd; distance, 38 feet 6 1/2 inches.

This gave Cass City 21 points; Harbor Beach, 17 points; Vassar, 15 points; Bad Axe, 10 points; and Elkton, 3 points. Our boys were able to bring the silver cup home with them and it has since been on display in W. A. Fairweather's show window.

The Ward of King Canute

A Romance of the Danish Conquest.

By OTTILIE A. LILJENCRANTZ, author of The Thrill of Lief the Lucky.
Copyright, 1903, by A. C. McCLURG & CO.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

"Keep in mind, lord, that it is no more than a week that you have been at his heels," he said.

"Likewise bear in mind whose son he is," the man with the drinking-horn added grimly.

Flushing, the young noble ceased examining his sword-edge to meet the eyes bent upon him.

"I hope you do not think I stand in need of a rebuke for lukewarmness, Morcard," he said gravely. "I have no more forgot that King Edmund's father gave the order for my father's murder than I have forgot that Edric was the fool who did the deed. But what sense to continue at that after Ethelred was dead, and the valor of his son was to that degree exalted as if he had sprung from Alfred? Yourself counseled me to join him at Gillingham, and take the post under his banner that my fathers have always held beside his fathers."

Two of the three warriors made no other answer than to gurgie their drink noisily in their throats; but the one whom he had called Morcard answered dryly. "It is not against testing the new king that we would advise you, Lord Seburt; it is against trusting him." He lifted his hands suddenly to his ear. "Horses' feet! And stopping by the King's fire—"

What else he said, Randalin did not hear. Her wits had crawled heavily after the sound of the hoofs. Now the beat changed to a clamping and stamping among dry leaves not many rods to her right. She wondered indifferently if there was any likelihood of their running over her; then forgot the query before she had answered it.

The Etheling was speaking again, with all the earnestness of hero-worship.

"—the battles he has fought, the abundance of warriors he has gathered together, the land he has won could not prevent it when Ethelred took Alric back. And to-night, few but thanes have resorted thither—men whom the Redeless took from ploughing his fields to gild with nobility. Is it likely that they will oppose the hand that can strip off their gilding?"

It appeared that the young man could find no answer to that, for he made none.

"At least once, my lord, Ethelred's willfulness has shown in his son, when he set aside the King's command to take possession of Sigeford's widow and her estates. And I think it was Ethelred's temper that moved him to spend an energy, much better directed against the Pagans, in laying waste two of his own shires. Remember what happened when your father raised himself against Ethelred."

Restive under the restraining hand, the young noble faced him desperately. "Morcard, in God's name, what would you have me do? I will not bend to it, nor would you wish me to. Or sooner or later—"

"Let it be later, lord. After you have had time to marshal your men at your back."

After a while, the Etheling yielded and turned aside. "Let it be as you have said—though I cannot believe yet that it will happen." Coming back where a fallen tree made a mossy seat, he dropped down upon it and sat staring at the ground in frowning abstraction.

The motion dropped him out of the range of Randalin's vision, and her eyes wandered away discontentedly. If there was nothing more to look at, she might as well go to sleep. She was just losing consciousness when the figure of a second yeoman-soldier moved across her vision, looming black against the firelight. His whisper came sharply to her ears.

"It is done, chief. May they have tried to be brave, but I am really a woman; it is not possible for me to have a man's heart."

The grinning shadows mouthed at her. "You have not dared to be a woman," they mocked. "You have not dared to be a woman, so you must dare to be a man."

A night wind shuddered through the trees, and the hovering shades seemed to hiss in her ear.

"Coward! Traitor! Nothing! Do you not get afraid that you will experience the wrath of the dead? Listen! Is that the wind rustling the leaves? Or is it—"

A gasp burst from the white lips, and the die was cast. While the cold drops started on her pain-racked body, she dragged herself to her knees and fumbled with trembling hands about her belt. For an instant, something like a moonbeam glimmered amid the shadow; then her lips closed convulsively upon the steel. Tipping forward upon her hands, she tested cautiously the strength of her wounded leg, smothering groans of pain that seemed to tear her throat in the swallowing. Inch by inch, she crawled steadily toward the flickering light.

CHAPTER VII.

As the Norms Deceit.

It was a long way to the King's fire, but at last it lay before her; before and below her, for it had been built in a depression of the little open. The last charred log had fallen apart, spreading a swarm of golden glow-worms over the black earth, but there was still enough light to reveal a ring of muffled forms sprawling around the sloping sides of the hollow, with their feet toward the fire and their heads lost in darkness. Pausing in the tree-shadow, the girl thrilled with sudden hope. Since their faces were all hidden, how was she to distinguish her victim?

At that moment, the warrior directly in front of her stirred in his sleep and lunged a jeweled hand over his face. Those broad gold rings with the green stones that sparkled like serpents' eyes as they caught the light! They were fixed indelibly in her memory, for she had seen them on the rapacious hand that had seized upon her while it was still red with her father's blood. Suddenly, in the rage that rose in her at the recollection, she found determination for the deed.

There was no time to lose, she told herself feverishly, and moved forward with snake-like stillness. Between the sheltering arm and the neck of the steel shirt there was a space of naked throat. Setting her teeth, she raised her knife and struck down at it with a strong hand.

The point never reached its mark. For an instant she could not tell what had happened. Fingers closed like iron bands around her wrist, pulling her backwards so that the pain of her twisted wound wrung a cry from her lips. They were not Norman's fingers, yet he also was stirring; while darting flashes from the dusk about them told that the other sleepers were drawing their weapons. Then some one threw a branchful of dead leaves upon the fire.

The flame that flared up showed her arm to be in the grasp of the Lord of Ivorsdale.

"You mad young one!" he gasped, as he wrenched the blade from her hold.

(To be continued.)

LOCUST PLAGUE IN EGYPT.

The Invasion of Insects Is a Very Serious One.

There is every probability of the plague of locusts which has now descended on Egypt proving a very serious one. Great anxiety is felt for the young cotton and other crops.

The locusts first arrive in comparatively small numbers, but they multiply very rapidly—as soon as they reach the edge of cultivation. Within ten days the young insects, though still wingless, advance in a solid phalanx sometimes two or three feet deep and several miles in length.

It is essential that at this stage they should be destroyed, as it would be impossible to check the ravages of flying locusts.

The method adopted during the last visitation, that of 1890, was to dig deep trenches, sometimes miles in length, between which and the advancing swarm huge heaps of straw were laid and fired. Any locusts which succeeded in escaping the flames and smoke fell into the trenches, where they were destroyed by natives under the supervision of English instructors.

It is a providential habit of young locusts never to turn back or aside when once started, no matter what obstacles are put in their way.—Cairo Correspondent London Daily Mail.

Diet of the Crocodile.

Of a crocodile, which measured seventeen feet in length and which a noted hunter shot, he writes: "On cutting him open he was found to contain the remains of an Mpala ram (with horns intact), which he had probably caught while it was drinking. On one occasion I cut up a crocodile which contained no less than forty-nine bangles of ivory and copper, showing that he had swallowed one or more natives, so I always get the boys to cut up any we shoot. They are loathsome reptiles, and I never consider a shot at them wasted. Many a native while drawing water after dark is caught by the arm and dragged into the river. A fine old hunting dog which had served me for two years was caught by a crocodile right under my nose one day in a small stream, where he had gone to drink after running down a wounded puku."

AMIDST ENGLISH LAKES

(Special Correspondence.)

The latest fad in England, especially for the men and women who do not own automobiles, is to coach. The English women are especially enthusiastic about this method of travel. When distances are so great that they cannot be made on foot, the English women like to ride on breaks, coaches and on the tops of buses. But the break and the coach are chiefly used for summer trips in places not disturbed by the noise of steam cars.

The English greatly enjoy a two weeks' holiday coaching through the lake region of England and the Trossachs of Scotland. The lake region is especially popular for this sort of sport, partly on account of its natural beauty and partly because of the famous men that have inhabited these parts.

Dove Cottage.

It was in this country that the great English poet Wordsworth was born and spent the happiest and most productive years of his life; here Coleridge and Southey shared his company and enjoyed their happiest days. They often were visited by Shelley, Scott, Lord Byron and other well-known writers of the day.

It was not until last summer that I had the pleasure of visiting the famous and lovely spot of Windermere. This village, though small, is unusually pretty; the houses are made of the rough native slate stone; the fronts are heavily grown with ivy, roses and clematites. Though this low valley is broken by the calm, placid lake and rolling hills, the character of its scenery is soft and graceful. It lacks the strength and wildness belonging to some of the places near about. It was here that the poet Wordsworth spent many of his vacations as a boy and enjoyed skating on the lake.

Having passed a day exploring the walks and shores of Windermere, we took a coach the next morning for Conistone. At first the getting on and off the coach seemed a little awkward, as it is higher than a break, but after we were accustomed to it we found it delightful; for there is no better way to see the scenery. A short drive brought us to the end of the lake, where a ferry was waiting to take the coach and horses to the other side. A beautiful drive over hill and dale, through splendid woods of oaks, maples, poplars, sycamores and laurel, and we were at another lake called Esthwaite Water.

Near the head of the lake is the quaint old town of Hawkshead. It was here that Wordsworth and his brother were educated before entering Trinity college. Even more interesting than the town with its old flags, and the simple house, is the cottage in which Wordsworth lived during his schooldays. A small archway opens into a court where stand several simple houses covered with mortar; it was in one of these humble dwellings that the poet passed his early days.

Next day we took another coach and drove over hill and dale through beautiful forests and passed hills made brilliant by the heather until we came to Grasmere, known for great natural beauty and as being closely associated with the poet Wordsworth.

A small house up the main country road is known as Dove cottage; it was the early home of Wordsworth; there the poet wrote some of his best verses. Disappointed by the turn of the French revolution, he and his sister moved to Grasmere and lived in solitude. Here the poet and his friends spent some of their happiest hours; this was because of their genius rather than their environments.

On arriving at Keswick we asked the winds of the sea and wind. On a hillside of steel and wire. Breathing toward the sunset. Pointing her bows to the westward. Staving the storm aside. Lash to the hill of the eagles; Hark to the roar of the screw. Thundering out, as her stern-post lifts, The song of the seas of blue.

The winds play high in her rigging. On a hillside of steel and wire. And they blow deep notes down her funnel. A note to their hearts' desire: The seas drum bass on her hollow: The gulls life shall in her track; And every rope that can rattle Is sounding its snare-drum back; And a million mouths are calling. That were dumb when she left the dock. All mingling, rising, falling. In time to the tempest's shock; For the tramp of the engines; Has been blown by the south wind warm; And every inch of the vessel Is singing aloud to the storm. Every splint in her timbers, Every stick on her mast, Every rope in her rigging, Every stitch in the blackwater, Every plate and its boltings, All of them singing true; And thundering out in the chorus, To the song of the seas of blue. —Bertrand Shadwell.

Church at Grasmere.

Our landlady if there was not some interesting drive about Keswick. The question was settled as soon as it was asked, and we were booked for Buttermer. Next morning the break started off early, carrying about twenty guests. At first the drive was enjoyable, past meadows and forests. Gradually we ascended the mountain pass and the road grew steep and narrower.

Finally it got so hard on the horses that most of the people had to get out and walk. On going over the summit the path was so narrow and rough that the horses slipped with every step; several times the coach pitched so far it looked as if we were going to be hurled to the ravine below. When we had passed this critical point we had to walk down.

We were fully repaid for our hard trip when we got to Buttermer, which rests in a low valley enclosed by high, jagged mountains. On our way back we had to climb to the top; the tramp was hard, though the scenery was grand and wild; large valleys started at us from below, intercepted by many jagged peaks. Our way down the road was so steep that the horses slipped over the rocks instead of walking. When we got back that night we were glad to reach Keswick alive and were satisfied to call this our last coaching trip for a while, though some of the party had found the adventure delightful.

DINE ONLY WHEN HUNGRY.

Eating When Nature Does Not Crave Food Is Highly Injurious.

A prolific cause of chronic indigestion is eating from habit and not from necessity. To eat when not hungry is to eat without relish, and food taken without relish is worse than wasted. Without relish the salivary glands do not act, the gastric fluids are not freely secreted, and the best of foods will not be digested. Many perfectly harmless dishes are severely condemned for no other reason than they were given perfunctorily and without relish and due insalivation.

Hunger makes the plainest foods enjoyable. It causes vigorous secretion and outpouring of all the digestive fluids—the sources of ptyalin, pepsin, trypsin, etc., without a plentiful supply of which no foods can be perfectly digested.

Wait for an appetite if it takes a week. Fasting is one of the saving graces. It has a spiritual significance only through its great physical and physiologic importance. If breakfast is a bore or lunch a matter of indifference cut one or both of them out. Wait for distinct and unmistakable hunger, and then eat slowly. If you do this you need ask few questions as to the propriety and digestibility of what you eat, and it need not be pre-digested.—Hygienic Magazine.

DIE QUICKLY IN CAPTIVITY.

Eagles Pine at Once When Freedom Is Restricted.

"Why is it that an eagle won't live for more than two or three years in captivity, and in a wild state will live to be a hundred years old?" asked an animal man.

"Give it up," answered his listener. "Lots of zoological men have done the same before your time. I don't know the answer myself. The crow, the swan, the raven and the eagle round out a century in the wilderness. If anyone can find out how to preserve the golden eagle and the American bird of freedom, the bald eagle, from dying after less than three years in captivity, he can make a small fortune by giving the information to the authorities of zoological gardens all over the world. Much money has been expended in trying to discover the cause of the decline of captive eagles, but nothing has come of it."

Fastidious Tastes.

A story regarding a converted barbarian is told in the English papers and sounds new. A negro clergyman was entertained at tea by the president of a college. The guest, who came from West Africa, detailed some particulars of his early life, when a lady asked him how he became a Christian. "The story of Jezebel converted me," he answered. "You know, we are told the dogs did not touch the palms of her hands. Well, that convinced me of the truth of the narrative, for we never eat the palms of the hands in my country. They are too bitter."

Stars That Shine.

There are many stars which we do not see, and which consequently have little or no place in our thoughts. It is only the "stars that shine" visible to our admiring eyes that inspire within us noble thoughts and greater ambition to live purer and more useful lives. How is it with you and I? Are we invisible stars that are unseen and without influence in the world, or are we "stars that shine," a blessing and an inspiration to everyone who may look upon us or who may be influenced for good by our bright smiles, kind words and helpful deeds?

Circulation of Two.

The "Daily Record of International Opinion," published by command of the German emperor, is not much of an advertising medium, its circulation being exactly two copies. One goes to the Kaiser, the other to the national library. It consists entirely of extracts from German and foreign newspapers, and its cost forms a pretty big item in the civil list.

Points of Similarity.

"New barn" and "old barn" were used in an insurance case to designate which barn actually burned. The insurance company sought to prove that the "new barn" was the one burned and that the "old barn" was still intact. The witness seemed stupid and kept repeating the statement that the "old barn" burned. "What do you mean, now, by 'old barn'?" asked the bald-headed lawyer. "Well, squire, the barn was old; and it needed shingling about as badly as you do."

LIFE OF RUSSIAN POOR.

Peasants in the Village Lead a Forlorn Existence These Days.

As a rule a Russian village is a forlorn looking place, where the huts of the poor are made of birch logs, with upright oak or pine supports, and walls lined with the crude and branches. In these huts there are only two rooms, one of which is not for every-day use, but is kept for best occasions. This room houses those sacred images so dear to the heart of every member of the Greek church, to which belong the great mass of the Russian people.

The other room serves the purpose of both kitchen and sleeping room, as one of the principal ideas of comfort for these people, ice and snow bound for so many months of the year, is warmth. In many of the peasant huts no beds are used, and on top of a great stove, reaching nearly to the roof, is a much sought sleeping place. Although the conditions make dirt and accompanying results inseparable in the lives of these peasants, they are devotedly fond of bathing. The vapor bath in a crude form may be called a national institution and a not unusual picture of a summer afternoon is the village pond filled with women and children bathers.—Social Service.

Old English Custom.

In certain districts of England formerly when an owner parted almost entirely with other rights to a house he would reserve the right of boiling his pot on the fire. This secured to him the right of voting, and what was of more importance, the position of being a freholder. At Taunton, for example, the voters were called "pot wallowers," because they had the rights to "wallow" or boil their pots at the fire in their freehold houses. Sometimes when a person parted with a long lease, but not with the freehold of a house, it was expressly stipulated that he should keep the right to boil his pot on the fire.

Thought She Couldn't Live.

Moravia, N. Y., June 6.—Mr. Benjamin Wilson, a highly respected resident of this place, came very nearly losing his wife and now that she is cured and restored to good health his gratitude knows no bounds. He says: "My wife has suffered everything with Sugar Diabetes. She has been sick four years. She doctored with two good doctors but kept growing worse. The doctors said she could not live. She failed from 200 pounds down to 130 pounds. This was her weight when she began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and now she weighs 190, is well and feeling stronger every day.

"She used to have rheumatism so bad that it would raise great bumps all over her body and this is all gone too."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are a God-send to those who suffer as my wife did. They are all that saved her. We can't praise them enough."

For a Helpful Day.

The man who helps the stumbler across a street, or rings a bell for a small child who cannot reach it, has done his duty and his part in the world's work far better that day than any philosopher who thinks a great deal and does nothing. Indeed, I doubt not that a man who makes a friend smile at some idiotic remark has better earned his daily bread than a man who has given rise to a profound thought, if thought is only to end in thought.—Benson's Book of Months.

Hint to Housekeepers.

An Atchison woman recently served seven mushrooms to a guest and her family of six, and had enough and to spare. How did she do it? She could not afford any more mushrooms, so she stewed sponges and put them on the steak. The guest was given of the genuine and the family got the sponges and managed to avoid eating them without exciting the guest's suspicions.—Atchison Globe.

Cedars of Lebanon.

The cedars of Lebanon are not yet entirely exterminated, but for many years most European lead pencils were made of cedar imported from America. The largest German manufacturer now has a cedar forest of his own at home. In the United States alone about 125,000 cedars are annually converted into pencils.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local application they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remediation. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a humming sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Halls Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Development of the Plow.

The great steam plow that tills with steel point ten acres of land in a day is the direct descendant of the savages' wooden plow which oxen pulled, or, before oxen were domesticated, a team of women hauled through the soil. The old wooden plow still survives in parts of Spain and Mexico.

The average age of the Japanese navy is lower than that of any other navy in the world. No one over 20 years old is accepted for enlistment. The average height is 5 feet 4 inches—less than the average height of any other navy in the world.

back since his father's death! Only take-to-day—"

"Soft, my lord. Yonder comes Wikel making strange signs to you." All heads but Randalin's turned in the direction he was looking. She was still too lethargic for curiosity; and she found a kind of dreamy content in lying with her eyes upon the Etheling's handsome face.

Presently, however, between her and the comely apparition there intervened the brawny figure of a yeoman-soldier.

He said breathlessly, "Chief—before you go to the King—be it known to you that those horse-foes you heard—belong to the mounts of Edric of Mercia and his men—and he is with King Edmund now!"

The three stolid old warriors got to their feet with curses. The Etheling bent forward to gaze incredulously into the man's face.

"Edric of Mercia? With the King? Why do you think so?"

"I was a little way beyond the King's fire, watching a fellow who was showing how he could jump over the flames, when I saw the Gainer ride past; and I followed him, as near as the guards would permit—near enough to see that the King received him—let him settle it with Saint Cuthbert!"

There was a pause of utter stupefaction; then, from all within hearing, a clamorous outburst: "Ay, there it is!"—"Ethelred's blood!"—"It is no more to be counted on than is water!"—"What could have moved him to it?"

It appeared that the Etheling had recovered from his surprise, for now he said steadily, "I will not believe it. Until their oaths have been spoken and their hands have clasped and my own eyes have witnessed it, I will not believe it of him."

Motioning them from his path, he was starting forward a second time, when the old enit laid a hand lightly upon his shoulder.

"Here me, Lord Seburt! If then,—to weigh all perils like a soldier,—if then, you do witness it with your own eyes."

The blue gave out a flash of smitten steel. Morcard answered as to words: "You will be one against many, lord." "You cannot mean that the Witam will comply with him!" the Etheling cried.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband should be a woman's constant study. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Potts tell their stories for the benefit of all wives and mothers.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will make every mother well, strong, healthy and happy. I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and weariness. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she had had from your Vegetable Compound, and decided to try what it would do for me, and used it for three months. At the end of that time I was a different woman, the neighbors remarked it, and my husband fell in love with me all over again. It seemed like a new existence. I had been suffering with inflammation and falling of the womb, but your medicine cured that and built up my entire system, till I was indeed like a new woman. Sincerely yours, Mrs. CHAS. F. BROWN, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., Vice President Mothers' Club."

Suffering women should not fail to profit by Mrs. Brown's experiences; just as surely as she was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure other women who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration. Read the story of Mrs. Potts to all mothers:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—During the early part of my married life I was very delicate in health. I had two miscarriages, and both my husband and I felt very badly as we were anxious to have children. A neighbor who had been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it, and I decided to do so. I soon felt that my appetite was increasing, the headaches gradually decreased and finally disappeared, and my general health improved. I felt as if new blood coursed through my veins, the sluggish tired feeling disappeared, and I became strong and well. "Within a year after I became the mother of a strong healthy child, the joy of our home. Gloria's Love Affair.
By Paul Carson.

SIX months before Gloria Spencer left school, a new music teacher was employed in the seminary, and she was one of his pupils. He was a handsome, blue-eyed blonde, with a musical voice and perfect manners. He was also that strange creature—a male flirt. He spent the six months in winning Gloria's heart, never saying a word or committing an act that would compromise himself.

How she loved him!
"First love?" you ask.
Yes, is there anything like it? It is well that it comes but once.

He called one night to say "Good-by."
Gloria thought he was coming back. He said—
"I suppose you know that I am to be married next month?"
It was a cruel blow. Better men than he have committed murder.

An older woman would have concealed an almost mortal wound, but she grew so white that he sprang toward her.
"Don't touch me," she gasped, struggling with her agony, and then womanly pride triumphed, and into her eyes leapt a flame that literally scorched him.
"I fear you have misunderstood me," he said gently.
"Were you engaged when you came here?"
"Of course."
"Why did you make me care for you?"
Forced to answer at the bar of betrayed trust, for the murder of love, he stammered—
"Why, really; I—I—you know I did not try to do that exactly. I wish you would not look at it that way. We have been good friends and—"
"Mr. Harlow," Gloria interrupted, "will you kindly go away?" opening the door to facilitate his departure.

"I hope we may still be friends," he ventured as he passed out.
"And I hope," she retorted, "that I shall never look on your face again, or that of anyone like you, in this world or the next."
Afterward she read of his marriage, but small as the earth is, she never saw him again.
As a result of this experience, Miss Spencer grew a trifle cynical, but pride kept any one from knowing that she had passed over her heart.
At seventeen she learned that men do not always mean what they say. For ten years this fact formed a centre piece in her mind around which to group all ideas regarding the sex. At the twenty-seventh, having traveled, studied, and thought, she was a cultivated, well-informed woman, equal in intellect to most men. Every one said "Gloria Spencer will be an old maid."
One day cards were issued for her marriage; the groom-elect was a well-to-do merchant, slightly past thirty. People talked, speculated and filled the church, when the wedding, a white satin affair, occurred.

Sidney Clarke was worthy of any woman's affection, and he took his fate in his own hands when he said—
"Gloria, will you be my wife?"
She thought, "what difference does it make?" and replied—
"I do not love you, Mr. Clarke. It is not possible for me to care for any man. I loved once, and with a cold smile, 'history does not repeat itself in a woman's heart.' Still, if you wish, I will become your wife."
At the end of three years Mrs. Clarke was thirty. She and her husband had never quarreled, they were good friends, but she never thought of loving him. She respected him, liked him even, and Sidney seemed perfectly satisfied with this state of affairs. Out of his content, at length, grew Gloria's discontent. She began to wonder why he did not love her, arguing that he did not, on the ground that were it otherwise he could not be happy without his wife's affection.

"It does not follow that it is because I do not love him," she said, "for men have adored women who were indifferent to them. I wonder if he ever loved."
One day she asked him.
"Sidney, did you ever care for a woman?"
"Yes," laughingly, "my mother."
"Not that, did you ever have a— a first love?"
"Yes," gravely now, "I have had a first love."
"She jilted you, I suppose?"
"No."
"Then," her voice full of sympathy "she is dead."
"No, she is not dead."
The conversation was interrupted then and was not resumed; but Mrs. Clarke wondered now why her husband married her, and before she was well aware of it, with all the dormant passion of her nature waking into life, she was jealous of his first love. After while she began trying to win his affection. The restraint that Sidney put upon himself in those days was wonderful. His wife was so sweet and gentle, so tender and womanly, an altogether lovable, that having loved her always, the temptation to tell her so was almost irresistible. But it was the desire of his life to win her heart, and understanding her nature perfectly, he feared to speak too soon, and so waited with seeming patience until the longest for treasure should be his. At last, Gloria knew what caused the jealousy that possessed her, the eagerness to win her husband's regard, the thrill that shook every nerve at the touch of his hand.

She loved him, with the love of a woman who had lived, and suffered, and learned wisdom; the passion of her girlhood was the fragrance of the rose, this was the rose itself. It blooms once only, but the flower is immortal; a crisis in the lives of these two came unexpectedly after all. They were riding home from the theatre. The play was one in which the husband, having married to please his father, eventually falls in love with his wife. They were speaking of it. Gloria said—
"Do you think people ever do fall in love after marriage?"
Sidney replied promptly:
"I know it."
"From experience?"
"No. I could not have such an experience."
Some light they passed just then flashed full on his wife's face. He saw that she had grown very pale, but she asked:
"Why?"
"I could bear it no longer, and taking her in his arms, he said:
"Because, my darling, I always loved you. I could not learn it after marriage, for I worshiped you long before. Oh, love, tell me it is not in vain," and the wife of four years blushed in the darkness like a girl as she put her arms around her husband's neck and whispered:
"I have loved you ever so long, dear."
Some time afterwards Mrs. Clarke said:
"Tell me about that girl you loved long ago, Sidney."
"What girl?" in surprise.
"Have you forgotten, you told me you had a first love; I have wondered why you did not marry her."
"I did."
"Sidney?"
"Gloria!"
"You don't mean that—that—" and then she stopped, something choked her a little.
Sidney dropped his paper, got up and went over to her. He took her face between his hands, and looked down into the big gray eyes that were shining through tears.
"My dear wife," he said, "you are the only woman I ever loved."—Chaparrone Magazine.

HAVE GIFT OF IMITATION!

Many Animals Seem to Adopt the Habits of Other Species.
Some animals have wonderful powers of imitation. Dogs brought up in the company of cats have been known to acquire the trick of licking the paws and then washing the face. When a cat has been taught to sit up for her food her kittens have been known to imitate her action. Darwin tells of a cat that was in the habit of putting her paw into the mouth of a narrow milk pitcher every time she got the chance and then licking the cream off her paw. Her kitten soon learned the same trick. A lady tells of a rabbit that she keeps in a cage with a monkey and says that Bunnie has caught many of the monkey's ways. It is said that starving pigeons that have been brought up on grain will not eat peas to save their lives, but that if pea-eating pigeons are put with them they follow their example and eat peas.

Valuable Manuscripts in America.
In the year 1900 two famous collections of Oriental, chiefly Arabic, manuscripts, were brought to this country; one, the private collection of a well-known Arabic scholar, Count Landberg, was secured for Yale university; the other, which originally had been in the library of a Mohammedan scholar at Medina, and then had been purchased by the publishing house of E. J. Brill at Leyden, through Count Land, was acquired and deposited in the library of their alma mater (Princeton). A third collection was acquired by Mr. Robert Garrett, also from the Brill house, and is at present in Princeton. As to numbers, there are between 800 and 900 manuscripts at Yale, and 1,678 at Princeton.

Men and Their Mistakes.
Some people go through this world making mistakes as freely as if they fully expected to have a chance to come back and try it all over again.

MRS. EVA BARTHO, 133 East 12th St., New York City, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for three years with leucorrhoea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, writes as follows:
"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysterics and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist, and take it regularly. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman."
Miss Lucy M. Riley, 23 Davenport St., Cleveland, Ohio, writes:
"I wish to add my indorsement to thousands of other women who have been cured through the use of Peruna. I suffered for five years with severe backache, and when weary or worried in the least I had prolonged headache. I am now in perfect health, enjoy life and have neither an ache or pain, thanks to Peruna."—Lucy M. Riley.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

We are called on this week to record

A French count is willing to marry if he can find a bride with $50,000 a year. Some foreigners have a mighty small idea of the value of liberty.

In Uganda, in Darkest Africa, the rhinoceros does not hesitate to butt into railway trains, and sometimes the trains get the worst of the contact.

A Denver litterateur has sued the Harpers for cutting down his MS. from 10,000 to 4,800 words. Did you ever hear of the literary worm turning before?

A Chicago woman is suing her husband for a divorce because he kisses her with "a peculiar kiss." The most peculiar thing about it is that he should kiss her at all.

It is said that a new fashion decrees that women shall gesticulate when they talk. This is all right, if the fashion provides that they do not hold an umbrella or a broom or a kettle of hot water in their hands while gesticulating.

Census Bureau estimates now place the population of the United States at 80,000,000 in round figures, and nearly one-twentieth of these millions live in New York City. The "Star of Empire" and the Empire City are still moving together.

The census for 1890 having shown in round numbers 1,034,000 surviving soldiers of the Civil War, and the applications for pensions having been 1,008,000, the Buffalo Commercial rises to be shown "where were those 50,000 others hiding when the census was taken."

It is proposed to offer a government prize of $100,000 to the man who can successfully forecast the weather in three localities of varying climate for the thirty days succeeding the forecast and tell how he did it. The government seems to be getting as keen for a sure thing as the rest of us.

A prominent English writer, still in the height of his powers, has been pensioned by the Society of British Authors because he works very slowly and has no head for business," says the Boston Transcript. "Henceforth he will perhaps produce even more slowly, but his stuff will be none the worse for the reasonable deliberation taken in preparing it. If certain talented American authors could be put in a similar position, where they could curtail their output and improve its quality, our national literary standing would be correspondingly improved."

From an editorial in the Century we clip the following: In invention, scholarship, scientific research, and large enterprise, and in national pride (without which no country can claim the respect of foreigners), Italy has an enviable distinction. It honors its intellectual men intelligently, not by an ignorant notoriety, and money does not take precedence of mind. If its plastic art has suffered a commercial eclipse, Italy is not unique in this experience, while in dramatic art it still leads the world with Tommaso Salvini and Eleonora Duse. In music and literature there is much activity and a far from complaisant public opinion.

According to Collier's Weekly, real business men throughout the country, large and small, continue to offer a reassuring contrast to the Wall Street speculators. They continue to look upon the actual amount of wealth being produced in the land, and to pay less and less attention to the gymnastics in New York. Finding it easy to get what credit they need from their local banks, they are not troubled by any tightness at the financial centre. Even where business is dull it is not depressed. Local causes, such as strikes, may check activity, but there is an expectation in all such places that business will look up as soon as the temporary obstacle is removed. The business man who is remote from the feverish gambler's atmosphere of Wall Street is likely to think that the only cause which could really produce depression would be the failure of a number of crops in any one year—a real, in other words, and not an artificial, cause. By such men are affairs throughout the land in the main conducted, and they are as stable and trustworthy an element as our population has, careful, industrious, in touch with actual products and real needs, and hardly aware of what Wall Street thinks. Theirs is industry which helps to make a nation happy. It is the labor from which contentment springs, and wisdom also.

DALNY TAKEN. The Russians Go Out, the Japs Go In—Present Situation. The Japanese legation in Washington give out the following dispatch from the home government at Tokio embodying a report from Gen. Oku, as follows:

Gen. Oku, commanding the army operating against Port Arthur, reports that our troops occupied Dalny on May 30. Over 100 warehouses and barracks, besides telegraph office and railway station, were found uninjured. Over 200 railway cars are usable, but all small railway bridges in the neighborhood are destroyed. All dock piers except the great pier which was sunk remain uninjured. Some steam launches were also found at the mouth of the dock.

The war forces in the far east are now divided into two sections, those of the Liao-Tung peninsula and those above Kin Chou and Nan Shan hill. Latest reports from the seat of war state that Gen. Stoessel and his army have retreated almost to Port Arthur and are entrenching themselves there, with a view to opposing step by step the advance of Gen. Oku on the Russian stronghold. Reinforcements for Gen. Oku are said to be landing, and a second army division is reported to be leaving Japan.

Following the capture of Kin Chou and Nan Shan, by Gen. Oku, Gen. Kuroki started northward without an enemy to harass his rear and cut off communication. Kuroki's object is said to be to keep Gen. Kuropatkin and his forces at Mukden from going to the assistance of Port Arthur.

Many minor skirmishes are being fought, but no big battle is likely until Oku attacks Stoessel's force near Port Arthur, or Kuropatkin strikes at Kuroki in an endeavor to pass southward.

A Jap Victory. A special dispatch from Rome says a telegram has been received there from Tokio reporting that Gen. Kuroki has completely defeated Gen. Kuropatkin's forces near Siumentsi. (Probably Siumentsi or Siumtsi.) All the Russian positions east of Hui-Cheng have been abandoned, according to the telegram; several guns have been taken, and whole squadrons of Cossacks captured.

Ten Lives Lost. An explosion which occurred in the 11-story warehouse of the Cornish distillery, Peoria, Ill., the second largest in the world, Saturday completely wrecked the building. The ruins immediately took fire and communicated to three adjoining buildings, burning them to the ground. Ten men were buried beneath the ruins and burned to death, and six others were seriously injured. The loss on buildings and whisky and spirits stored will approximate $1,000,000.

The fire spread to the stock yards district, where a dozen large cattle barns, filled with cattle for market, were burned.

A Woman's Power.

By making a combination with Charles S. Deneen, L. Y. Sherman, Howland J. Hamilton and John H. Pierce, Gov. Yates broke the deadlock in the Illinois 40, having said to a convention and brought about the nomination of Deneen for governor. The nomination was made on the seventy-ninth ballot, which stood: Yates, 1; Lowden, 522 1/2; Deneen, 957 1/2; Warner, 21. An interesting story is told to the effect that not the least of the reasons why Gov. Yates did not go to Col. Lowden, making him governor and keeping the office in the organization, was that a feud existed between Mrs. Yates and Mrs. Lowden.

Just how it started is not known definitely, but gossip has it that the governor's wife was plucked at Mrs. Lowden because the latter did not show her as much social attention as Mrs. Yates believed she deserved.

"Richard will never help make Frank Lowden governor," Mrs. Yates is reported to have said to a friend after the convention met May 12. It was noticeable during the convention that the two women held aloof from each other, although both were in the hall daily, while the wives of the other candidates were present chatted together, and even to a friend Mrs. Yates told another friend that Mrs. Lowden never would be mistress of the executive mansion if the Yates forces could stop Lowden's nomination.

Mayor McLane Succeeded. Mayor Robert M. McLane, of Baltimore, shot and killed himself Sunday afternoon in his bedroom at his residence, No. 29 West Preston street. His bride of less than two weeks was, at the time of the tragedy, asleep in an adjoining room, and was awakened by the discharge of the revolver which Mr. McLane evidently fired while standing before the mirror of the dressing case. The bullet entered the right temple and crashing through the head escaped in the rear of the left ear.

McLane and other members of the household rushed to the scene, but he did not regain consciousness after he fell to the floor, and expired within half an hour.

No cause can be assigned for the act by the members of Mr. McLane's family.

LAST BUFFALO HUNT OF THE PONCAS

to Bliss, O. T., so that the sightseers may be able to witness the event.

While the Poncas are keeping the details of their plans secret, there can be no doubt that the hunt will not compare with those of the days when there were millions of buffaloes on the plains. In those days a buffalo hunt was, in a measure, one of the most dangerous sports man or horse could enter into. Those who have taken part in these hunts have described them as being unproduced in the excitement they produced.

The Indians on their fleet ponies pursued their prey with swiftness, and the spectacle of an immense herd, sometimes a mile long, pursued, and it might be said, with equal justice, pursuing the hunters; dust enveloping the hunters, horses running close without being guided, and apparently entering into the spirit of the hunt as much as the riders was an experience never to be forgotten. So fascinating did the chase become that the more it was indulged in the keener grew the enjoyment, until, as some hunters will confess, it finally became a passion. In the eagerness of the chase every muscle quivered, every nerve was at its fullest tension, every faculty was keenly on the alert, and the excitement brought with it the glow of health and the vigor of youth. When the firing began the reins were dropped over the horse's neck and not touched again by the rider until he was through firing. The horse had to avoid obstacles in his path without suggestion from his rider. If there was a hole in the countless numbers. The bison was particularly numerous in Kansas at one time, owing to the fact that the buffalo grass was there most plentiful. At times the plains were a solid, moving mass of monsters, as far as the eye could see they were visible in enormous numbers. Trains were often delayed while a herd crossed the tracks of the Union Pacific railroad. At one time they roamed all over the country. Naturally migratory, the Indians knew their wandering habits, and followed them. They were in those days of the greatest value to the Indians. They supplied nearly all of their food, and millions were slaughtered each year for the sustenance of the red man. Not only did the buffalo supply food, but furnished the robes and hides for clothing and dwellings.

The practical extinction of the buffalo was not due to the Indian, but to the white man. While the Indian never killed more than was needed, the white man slaughtered relentlessly. Then, too, the white hunter, when he was a hunter and not merely a tenderfoot out on a sporting excursion, would simply take the fur hide and leave the carcass to the wolves. He was very wasteful, and the "sportsman" who spent a day killing off perhaps hundreds, would not touch the meat, although the knowing ones found the buffalo steak superior to that of the beef of commerce.

Buffalo hunting was a science, and was only to be engaged in safely by those who thoroughly understood the methods of their prey. In the hunt-

The Ponca Indians are about to elect their tribal chief in the traditional manner—with a buffalo hunt, and for that purpose have purchased three bison. For the sentimentalist there is in this statement the pathetic reminder that both the buffalo and the Indian are almost extinct, and that the coming hunt will probably be the last to be witnessed on the western plains.

There are a little more than a handful of the Poncas left; if the white man ever found a good Indian, which some claim to be an impossibility, the Ponca was a near approach to that ideal. The tribe was part of the Sioux nation, and the original home was near a branch of the Red river and Lake Winnipeg. The Poncas have always enjoyed a reputation for being very peaceable. They were driven from their Red river home by their old enemy, the Chippewas, who forced them beyond the Missouri river. Following them up closely, the Chippewas drove them away once more, when they joined the Omahas, which alliance has had the effect of preventing their annihilation.

Although a part of the Sioux nation, the other tribes kept up a relentless war upon the Poncas, as did the Pawnees, Osages and the Kansas Indians. What these wars left, smallpox and the white man's vices nearly finished, and from a total of about 6,000 there are only about 600 now. The remnant was placed on a reservation, near the mouth of Niobrara river, in Nebraska, and here their ill-luck followed them. This time it was not their Indian enemy, but the federal government which failed them. Uncle Sam neglected the terms of the treaty made with them, and once more they became nomads, forced to the hunt for subsistence. They nearly starved to death, and as if destiny had something worse in store for them, they were forcibly removed to Indian Territory, where the unwholesome water killed off their animals and depopulated their ranks. Subsequently they returned to their friends, the Omahas, and then to their home in Nebraska.

Forty years ago, when Chief White Eagle was chosen, there were about 6,000 in the tribe. Only eight survive of those who hunted the buffalo at his inauguration. The Council of Advisers consists of ten, and since he can no longer draw the necessary quorum he has retired, and his son, Horse Chief, takes his place at the head of the tribe.

In accordance with the traditional laws of the tribe, the chief and his advisers are selected in a buffalo hunt. The coming hunt will bear little resemblance to that of forty years ago. Then the arena was the boundless plains; now it is to be an inclosure 3,000 feet long and 1,500 feet wide. Then it took place with herds unnumberable; now three bison from the Goodnight ranch, in Texas, will furnish the sport.

It is intended to make a show of the hunt, and Indians from the tribes in Indian and Oklahoma Territories have been invited. Some have already arrived and erected their tipis. One of the western railroads expects to run excursion trains down

Reduces Railway Curves.

The engineers of the last few years, in relaying tracks, instead of starting a true circle curve with the sudden lift of the outer rail that causes the jolt and lurch that travelers know, have laid a slight parabolic curve from a point a hundred yards back on the straight track, and have elevated the outer rail imperceptibly along that curve to the maximum. The result of the device—in practice quite new—has been the annihilation of curves as regards a passenger's sense.

Cause of Indian Famines.

Famines in India are caused by the failure of the monsoon, an agency beyond the control of man. The monsoon is the periodical wind blowing off the sea and carrying with it over the great plain the water-filled clouds, which drop the fruitful showers as they fly. When the wind fails, or is deflected, at the proper season, the rain fails, the crops fail, and when the crops fail untold misery and death and ruin are the result.

Napoleon's Visiting Cards.

Napoleon's visiting card was two and a third inches long and half as broad. The ex-printer to the Tuileries still has a sample, which he intends presenting to the National Museum. The fact of its retaining, up to the present day, its white and glossy coat is due to the reckless use of tincture of arsenic, which is thought to have caused much of the sickness of that period.

Dynamite for Sharks.

In the British navy the engineers have a curious way of killing sharks. They seal up a dynamite cartridge in an empty can, and put the can inside a lump of pork. The pork is thrown over on a wire which has been connected with an electric battery. When the shark takes the bait the engineer presses a button which explodes the cartridge and kills the fish.

Wasn't Sure Which.

A Scottish minister, taking his walk early in the morning, found one of his parishioners recumbent in a ditch. "Where have you been the night, Andrew?" asked the minister. "Weel, I dinna rightly ken," answered the prostrate one. "whether it was a wedding or a funeral, but whichever it was, it was a most extra-ordinary success."

Forest of Papyrus Trees.

Very few persons know that Italy among her other treasures, possesses a small forest of papyrus trees, which grow on the banks of the Anaprus near Syracuse. This is most curious as it seems that this tree can only live on the waters of the Nile, the Nile and this small and insignificant stream at Syracuse.

Hint to Nurses.

A floor should never be swept in a room where there is a contagious patient. It should be washed with a cloth dipped in borax water, so that no dust annoys the patient and no assortment of germs are flung up in the air, to drift out of the window into the hall en route to fresh victims.

Rich Lands of Manchuria.

The Chinese Eastern railway, the southeastern terminus of the great Siberian railway, in its course through Manchuria to its end at Port Arthur, passes through 1,000 miles of as continuously rich agricultural country as can be found anywhere in the world. Every acre is cultivated.

Thackeray once said: "I vow and I believe that the cigar has been one of the greatest creature comforts of my life—a kind companion, a gentle center of friendship. May I die if I abuse that kindly weed which has given me so much pleasure."

Pearls a Chinese Medicine.

Pearls are still a potent medicine in China. Seeds of plants have magic properties, the banana seed being especially prized in Uganca. Claws of lions are such important amulets in Africa that they are quite generally counterfeited.

Housefly a Source of Danger.

The common housefly has been found to carry germs of erysipelas, ringworm, ophthalmia, and various forms of eczema. In hotter countries, cholera and typhoid germs have also been found on the bodies of flies.

Galileo's first telescope was made from part of a lead water pipe, in each end of which he cemented common spectacle glass.

Cost of Parks.

It costs New York five times as much as it does London to maintain parks and recreation grounds.

Low Prices for Animals.

An auction sale of the animals of the Zoological Garden in Ghent yielded extraordinarily low prices—$62 for a elephant, $70 for three zebras, white monkeys and bears were sold for only $5 to $8 each.

Not What He Meant to Say.

The author of a radical total abstinence monograph wrote, "Drunkenness is folly." He was much chagrined when the work came home to find it read, "Drunkenness is jolly."

Ponds and Rape for Ducks.

Last year was the first season that we ever used a pond in connection with the raising of ducks, and the result was so satisfactory that we will give an account of it for the benefit of the readers of your paper. We began the season with seven Rouen ducks and two drakes for breeding stock. Back of the barn there is quite a good sized pond, and, as we did not need the water for the stock, we allowed the ducks to enjoy it. They spent their days in it and very profitable days they proved. They found all the corn they wanted at a crib near the pond, and all the care they received was that they were brought up to the duck house near the house at night and were fed a bran mash each morning. More often than not we found seven eggs each morning. We sold a good many eggs and raised over 110 ducklings. So much for the utility of a pond for breeding stock.

We were a little afraid of turtles in the pond, so kept the ducklings away from it until five or six weeks old. They were kept in a yard near the house and the well, so the work of feeding, watering and caring for them was as light as possible. During this time they were at first fed four times, afterwards three times a day, and were given lettuce, onion or beet tops, endive or cabbage leaves from the garden for green food. What a jubilee there was when we first drove about fifty of these fellows to the pond. Such darting about, diving and splashing. Only those who have watched the antics of ducks in water can imagine the scene.

After that they were fed every morning with enough drinking water to wash the food down so they could eat a good breakfast, then were driven to the pond, which soon became an easy task. By feeding time in the evening they were anxious to be turned back, so they could come to the house for supper and to their house to sleep.

Our neighbors laughed at us driving our ducks to water. There was a little yard containing some blue grass and more weeds, near the pond that was sown early in the spring and sown with Essex Rape. The ducklings needed no teaching as to the usefulness of this plant, but freely helped themselves as had the old ducks all spring.

When it was not convenient to leave them for an hour or so in the rape patch, the rape was mowed and carried to them. They were as anxious for it as for a feed of corn or mash. We never had ducklings grow faster or seem harder. If our yards had been so arranged that the ducks could have gone freely to the rape patch and the pond, without being let through the gates, it would have been better, but there was other stock in the yards, making it necessary to keep them closed.

One thing absolutely necessary to success in raising ducks is that they must all, young and old alike, have a clean, dry sleeping place. It does not need to be warm, but it must be dry. A little carelessness in the matter of supplying plenty of dry bedding whenever it is needed, and the little fellows have cramp, or with either young or old, rheumatism, and then we have dead ducks. This is about the only disease from which ducks suffer, and will reasonable care can be avoided.

Danger from sudden storms at night, also from marauding animals, can be in a great measure avoided by yarding the ducklings so they cannot wander far from their house at night. Now a few words for the Rouen ducks. What is more beautiful? The drake, with his bright green head, claret breast, ash-gray body feathers, the black of the back and tail, the blue ribbon band of the wing; then the pleasing contrast of the beautifully pencilled brown of the female, make them birds to be admired by all who see them. Then they do not pull their feathers before picking time. They are hardy, will sit on their own eggs if allowed and make good mothers. They are good eating and sell well on the market.

The Poultry Yard Fence.

The poultry yard fence is one of the important features of the equipment for poultry raising. In this matter there has been something of a revolution during the last generation. The old style fence was an eyesore on most farms. It was made principally of laths, generally unpainted. In a short time the wood became weather beaten and here and there the laths were broken. Sometimes an attempt was made to whitewash and repair it. This meant the addition of old boards or strips in place of the broken laths, and this increased the appearance of untidiness that pervaded all. It is no wonder that some of our farmers' wives became heartily sick of chickens and the chicken yard, as the latter was often the most unsightly object on the farm. A new day dawned when wire fencing came into vogue. Whether cheaper or not the wire netting is far more durable than the wood ever could be, and it is far nearer in appearance. It is now possible for the farmer to construct a neat poultry fence that will not get out of repair and that will remain good for many years.

The usual method of construction now is to set deeply into the ground some cedar or other posts, which have been previously dipped in tar to the height they are expected to penetrate the ground. This will be found necessary with most of our timber. The posts used, however, should be well dried out and not contain moisture at time of dipping, else the dipping will be of no avail. The posts should be made high enough to carry a four-foot netting, as this will be found to be the most serviceable height of netting for restraining most of our breeds of fowls.

No top cross piece should be used, as this presents a lighting place for the fowls. If the wire is stretched tightly on strong posts it will need no board or joist at the top. If, however, the fowls are to be very heavy ones, like the Light Brahmas, a top rail may be used, as they will not attempt to fly up to it in any event. The Plymouth Rocks and Leghorns will, however, find no obstacle in the way of their wanderings if they can see a board at the top. A good many poultrymen are now saving wire by leaving off the top board, for it is difficult to build a fence so high that the hens cannot get over if they can find a lighting place half way. We have seen poultry fences eight feet high that did not hold Leghorns.

The size of the yard will have considerable bearing on the height of the fence, for it has been observed that when the area is small and the flock large, the fowls will redouble their efforts to get out. If the yard is large and there is green feed inside, it is surprising how well-contented the fowls are to remain in it.

Bad Eggs Have Good Uses.

The career of the egg may not be so romantic, but frequently it is interesting. The full and perfect career is without doubt to develop into a lusty young chick.

But the full and perfect career is as rare among eggs as among human beings, for many things intervene to cut it short, and its usefulness is diverted into channels of which few housewives and poultry-raisers dream, says an exchange.

It may be that the egg is broken on its way to market or its shell is checked so that it will not sell. Then it is broken with countless others into five-gallon cans and frozen. The rumor is that these frozen eggs are sold to bakers in the larger cities to be used in winter.

Should the egg survive until it passes the zenith of its existence and enters into a decline it may be sent to some of the large coffee roasters of the east and be used to glaze coffee.

Even should the egg survive the first period of decline and enter into the last stage it is not without value. It is used commercially for tanning kid gloves and other fine leathers. The usefulness of the egg is not exhausted when it has met with one of these several fates. The shells, where large quantities of eggs are used are carefully gathered and the portion which it not used for hen food is ground and forms a common adulterant for spices. The shell can be roasted to the desired shade, is absolutely harmless and is very difficult for any but the chemist to detect.

Locating the Sheep Pen.

John Campbell, speaking to an audience of Canadian farmers, said: In building a suitable pen, as in other successful farm operations, notice should be taken of the preference of sheep for resting on dry roads as compared with grassy plots. This characteristic demonstrates that the building site of a sheep house cannot be too high and dry for the best comfort of the stock, for if there is one thing more than another that sheep do not like it is dampness; and to ensure perfect dryness in a pen it must be well lighted. Another characteristic of sheep to remember when building a house is that they require a lot of exercise during their whole lives. Notice how well lambs grow on the roadside, where they have to follow the dams over considerable distances. Especially do pregnant ewes require exercise. These are points to bear in mind in selecting a site for building. The house itself can then be built of the desired material, but wooden walls are to be preferred. The place must not be made too warm, and must be well ventilated, else the sheep will show their disapproval of arrangements by sleeping out in the yards. The feed racks may vary, according to the variety of stock kept. With the short woolled sheep the side of the rack from which the sheep feed should be perpendicular, to prevent the chaff getting into the wool. Beneath this rack there should be a trough for feeding grain and roots. Mangels should never be fed to pregnant ewes, and never more than two pounds of turnips per day to the smaller breeds, nor four or five to the larger breeds, gradually accustoming them to this amount. Always look well to the water supply, in order to prevent the sheep acquiring an appetite for snow. Clean the pen out frequently, if roots and other succulent foods are fed.

It is always safest to examine newly purchased hogs for the vermin that they are more than likely to contain. If there is not time to do this on the receipt of the animals, they should be kept by themselves till it is found that they are free from vermin.

The fowls for the farmer are the best fowls that can be procured. There is no reason why he should not have the best.

"Well, by hen, look-a-thar!"
Uncle Josh, completely transfixed, speechless, points down street!
"Look! Look-a-thar! One o' them gol darned drays thet's run by its own innards!"

I follow his gaze. Down State street an automobile truck is proceeding joltily along the rough thoroughfare.

"Well, I swan to goodness! Look at it! Look out there, mister! You'll run inter that thar omnibus an'— Well, by thunder, he's stopped an'— dead still! Now she's goin' agin!"

"Wait a minute," springing into 'th' street, while in his wake I hear, 'Th' goin' out thar an' ask that feller a few pinters about th' critter!"

I follow sadly. Uncle Josh is no joke to me!
There is a demonstration, of course. Then a blockade, and symptoms of a panic.

When I break through the crowd a policeman has Uncle by the collar! He expostulates wildly:

"You jes' let me go if you know what's good for ye! I ain't done nothin' o'ly ask that feller to stop his derned old choo-choo wagin 't show me where the steam engine is! Ye better—"

"Let him go, officer," I suggest quietly, "I'll look after him!"

"Take th' jay out 't th' rhuabars set a fire under him," comments the protector of our civic peace, as I trundle Uncle Josh into the maelstrom again.

"Nevvy," from Uncle, with chagrin in his voice, "I reckon I better be glittin' on home to-morrer. 'Th' city don't seem 't be no place for a feller to ask questions!"

"Lady," said a man hired to assist a Grand Rapids woman in house-cleaning, "I'd clean these here picture frames better if I had a pint of strong whiskey."

"I'll let you have a bottle I have upstairs," she said.
That afternoon she found the picture frames beautifully polished. Erratic remarks by the man, however, betrayed where he had applied the whiskey.

"Yes," he said, "thatsh whiskey did business 'ari."

"I'm so glad," said she. "I came near throwing it away after I used it to wash my feet in last time."—Daily paper. There is always a pleasure in meeting an old friend. We vividly recall our introduction to this story which had its inception on the ark. Noah's stateroom needed papering and Jonah, who was a paper-hanger, asked for the whiskey to mix with the paste to make it stick. A few days prior one of the ark monkeys had been afflicted with fleas and Noah had washed the monkey in the whiskey. When Jonah learned the truth he went out to feed the fishes and got caught by a whale! These are the real facts in the case, but the story has been sadly misused since Noah's death, one Ananias having washed a baby in the whiskey. Another had poured it from the preserved body of a pet pug dog, and still another had used it for pickling his spring poetry—yet all agree on the main points of the story, which is here told by an eye witness for the first time!

Mrs. E. Harp has discontinued her restaurant in the west side of the De Witt Block and has moved to the rooms over the National Marble Works. Clayton Harp will move his bicycle repair shop to the west side of the De Witt Block.

While helping to move an electric light pole at the west end of Main Street, last Friday evening, John Epplert had a very narrow escape from being crushed by it. Those who were holding the pole lost control of it so that it fell toward John. Luckily it only smashed his thumb and arm, thanks to his activity in getting out of the way.

A special meeting of the Modern Woodmen of America will be held in Forester Hall next Monday evening, for the purpose of initiating four candidates and transacting such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

We understand that Miss Effie MacArthur, who for some time has held a position in Detroit, has accepted a position with her brother in Arizona, who is in the Civil Service, and after a brief visit at her home here will proceed to Arizona.

Mrs. Warren Churchill, of Novesta, who has been in delicate health for some time, was operated upon Tuesday by Dr. M. Wickware, assisted by Dr. J. H. Hays. The patient is doing nicely at last report. Mrs. Julia Dann is employed as nurse.

It has been whispered that some of the young folks who were at Bad Axe last Friday, got to running horses on the way over and as a consequence a bevy of youthful maidens were piled up in the sand underneath their conveyance. Very little damage was done, however.

Jas. Tennant has decided to build a modern house on his unusually desirable residence lots at the corner of Leach and Houghton Streets, and last week awarded the contract for the same to Landon, Eno & Keating, who have a portion of the material already on the ground.

Mrs. J. H. Scott, of Manacelona, arrived here Tuesday evening, for a two weeks' visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Martin, north of town.

Her sister, Miss Enlah Martin, who has been with her for the past year, returned home with her and will remain for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Wood leave tomorrow for Rochester, Mich., to attend the company re-union of Mr. Wood's regiment, the 5th Michigan Cavalry. It will be just forty years Saturday since the date of his capture with many others who served nearly nine months in Confederate prisons, at Andersonville and Millen, Georgia, and Florence, S. C.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, but recently organized here, have arranged to give their first entertainment at the M. E. church tomorrow evening.

Great pains have been taken to provide a suitable and pleasing program and it is to be hoped the attendance will be such as to encourage further effort along the same line. The admission will be only ten cents.

Just as we started to run off this issue of the ENTERPRISE, one of the principal shafts of the large newspaper press broke, also causing a less serious break in another part of the press, so that we are indebted to the Chronicle for assistance in putting out this issue, the management kindly allowing us the use of their press. The breakage is quite a serious one and we are obliged to have a new shaft made at the Caro machine shop.

Building worthless roads is one of the grossest forms of swindling the people, says the Buffalo Enquirer. At last the public is awake to the necessity of having roads which shall be good both in name and in fact.

Dairy Cows Compared. At the Wisconsin experiment station Professor W. L. Carlyle obtained from one Red Poll cow 46L.81 pounds of butter fat in one year. Five Holstein cows averaged 351.02 pounds. Nine Guernseys averaged 310.35 pounds. Twelve Jerseys averaged 301.13 pounds. Eleven Shorthorns averaged 281.73 pounds. This looks as if there were 2-2-1 purpose cows in spite of the editors' and writers'—Holstein-Friesian Register.

BIG LEGS

CAN BE QUICKLY REDUCED WITH HEVE-O

From various causes, horses are troubled more or less with swollen or puffed legs, which if neglected will cause stiffness, clumsy action, and an unsalable condition. There is no occasion for this trouble to exist as the new discovery called HEVE-O will, with a few doses, remove this very prevalent trouble. HEVE-O, the new discovery for heaves, coughs, distemper and kidney troubles, is meeting with remarkable success. Its action is quick and decisive. Heaves usually start from distemper, colds, or mucky hay or grain; in either case the stomach becomes impured and must receive treatment as well as the other organs. HEVE-O is prepared for just such cases. Kidneys—a few doses will show marked improvement on any kidney trouble (which makes it a thorough blood purifier), or a few doses inhibit brain muck will stop distemper and cure the cough. Sheep and cattle frequently have bad coughs. HEVE-O is equally good for them. A trial will prove its superiority. One pound package, 50c. Sold by all druggists. Remember the name, HEVE-O and take nothing else.

GOOD ROADS.

They Add to the Profits of Those Engaged in Every Vocation.

A speaker at the national good roads convention said that good roads economize time, labor and money; they save worry and waste; they add to social and religious progress; they increase the value of property; they permit the transportation of farm products during bad weather when no work can be done on the farm; they save the wear and tear on horses, drivers, harness and wagons.

Good roads are the avenues of progress, the best proof of popular intelligence, the ligaments that bind the country together in the bonds of patriotism and thrift. They are the web of destiny woven into the great web of our civilization. Good roads are the rivulets that swell the great streams of commerce that flow out to every country and distribute the products of our fields, factories, forests and mines.

The government of the United States has never failed to respond to the demands of the country in the improvement of its rivers and harbors. Millions of dollars, for instance, have been expended on Sault Ste. Marie that connects Lake Superior with Lake Huron, all within the state of Michigan. The ironmasters and the copper kings of the country and the grain growers of the northwest have been mainly benefited by the improvement of this great waterway. No one objects to it. It is a proper expenditure to develop the great material interests of the northwest. But this expenditure is limited in its scope and benefits.

The great harbors along the Atlantic seaboard and on the gulf coast have cost the country hundreds of millions of dollars. These improvements also are to be commended. The improvement of the various harbors and rivers for the past seven years has cost $130,000,000, but not one dollar has been appropriated to build or improve the common roads.

F. H. Cunningham of Nebraska is president of the National Association of Rural Letter Carriers and W. P. Woods of Iowa vice president. In Ohio there are 1,335 rural free delivery carriers, and the service now covers the state. The salary roll of this force amounts to about $65,000 a month. It is said the rural free delivery service will require from congress a larger appropriation than has ever before been allowed for it. It is expected that the amount will be in the neighborhood of $20,000,000. Last session $12,500,000 was allowed, of which $9,000,000 was for maintenance and the remainder for new service.
