CHRISTIAN UNITY.

Timely Words from Rev. Bradford on Sunday Evening.

At the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, the pastor, Rev. E. H. Bradford, touched on a subject in which all should be interested. After reading the 35th chapter of Isaiah, he announced his text from Eph. 4:13, "Till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God." He said, in part, as follows:

I cannot make a clearer statement of the content of this text than the words of St. Augustine.

1. A whole Christ for my Saviour.
2. A whole Bible for my staff.
3. A whole church for my fellowship.
4. A whole world for my parish.

The words of inspiration from prophet and apostle, the labors of Christian fathers, of pastors and teachers, have looked forward to the time when Christian people, seeing the true intent of the teaching of God's word, should work in harmony for the salvation of men, the building up of the Kingdom in the earth. Had St. Augustine been able to see the years of darkness upon which the church was to enter before her days of latter power, he would have been discouraged. We live in a brighter, better time. There is deeper meaning than ever in the words "A whole Christ." Individuals are losing their differences as they see that Christ desires those who believe on him to magnify their agreements. It is even conceded that the necessary faith is that over and above all, Jesus Christ is my Saviour, through Him alone I am to have eternal life. The Bible stands out more clearly as the Book of God. Men are studying more devoutly,—from the thousands who keep the quiet hour, to those who meet in conventions and conferences, come the cheering words of the great and lasting good of earnest, prayerful Bible study. In fact, the Christian who does not study the Book is falling behind in all that makes for true nobility of character.

Churches are exemplifying Christ's teachings by joining hands in their work. In the Philippines there are church "zones of influence," where each is entirely free to carry out their plans. The world is being disarmed by the fellowship of Christians. The "Unity of the Faith" is more than a mere motto. The way is opening to a better understanding of the last commission of our Lord where He said "Go, teach—disciple—all nations." Now it is known that it is not preaching that alone is wanted. Teaching, nursing, instruction and healing are to go hand in hand. The spirit of conquest is moving Christians to go or send the Gospel to all the earth. The genius of the Forward Movement in our church is to have individuals assume the support of native workers and for churches to assume the support of pastors in the foreign field. With this increased interest is coming on us the blessing of God, our churches are being strengthened, and new life is evidenced to the glory of God in the growth of the churches.

INSTALL PASTOR.

The Presbyterians Install Rev. E. H. Bradford.

Rev. E. H. Bradford, who has so ably filled the Presbyterian Church pulpit here for some time, and who has mingled with our people in a most agreeable manner, was installed as pastor last evening with all due ceremony. The church was well filled and the service passed off very pleasantly indeed. Rev. S. P. Todd, of Fairgrove, travelling representative of Alma College, acted as presiding officer. Special music was splendidly rendered by the choir and thoroughly enjoyed by the congregation. Rev. J. A. Adair, of

Rev. E. H. Bradford.

Marlette, preached an eloquent and forceful sermon from 1 John 4:3, "God is Love," showing first of all how this wonderful definition of God was derived from the experience of the writer himself, who although once known as Boanerges, the Son of Thunder, became the Evangel of Love. Every man forms a conception of the Deity, and frequently that conception is spoken in grotesque form. Man first became acquainted with the governmental idea of God, as we see the reign of law everywhere, in growth, decay and death. God's dealings with the race are mysterious, and the anomalies in Nature are hard to explain. There are millions in sadness, poverty and inherent sin and shame. In life we meet disappointment and failure. The world seems a great charnel house. Man's life is ever in danger, and even the forces of righteousness seem imperiled at times. In Nature we find but partial proof that God is Love, and so it is little wonder that man is perplexed and gropes for light. The earlier conception of God was derived from feudalism and men were driven into the Kingdom of God through fear of future punishment, but our present conception of God as Love fills us with joy, hope and love. God's attributes are wisdom, knowledge, omnipotence, justice—which is resolvable into His love—continually give us manifestations of His love, and reveal His infinite affection for all His creatures. Although we may be prodigals we never cease to realize that God still yearns for us and that He is our infinite and unchanging friend. We complain of our burdens and murmur when we pass through deep waters, yet He has ever been with us, revealing Himself in infinite love, showing us a brighter and better pathway, and we are obliged to confess that if we had had our own selfish way it would have meant our ruin. He guides us in life's pilgrimage, removes the difficult places and makes our way straight and plain. His love surpasses our understanding and excels our thought. Yet no grand representations of His love can compare with the tender manifestations which we find in the cross. He takes upon Him human form, the battles of life go against Him, His followers desert Him, and yet He marches forward to embrace the cross, and dies as the God-man in our stead, to save all. Oh, the mystery of eternal love! Solve it as best we can we will never know its fullness until we wear a snowy robe above. Love must be the theme of Christian ministers to-day. There is nothing eternal but that which loves and can be loved. A Gospel which reduces regeneration to reformation cannot meet the needs of man. We should tell to all—the drunkard, the murderer, the Magdalene, the Shylock, that they need not die, that in Christ is hope and life, through God's love.

As representative of the Flint Presbytery, Rev. Adair propounded the installation questions to both pastor and people and the responses were given clearly and heartily. Rev. Alex. Urquhart then gave the charge to the pastor, congratulating all on the happy union effected and valuable suggestions and warnings. In the absence of Rev. F. E. Davy, of Akron, who was to give the charge to the people, Rev. Todd spoke in a spicy yet helpful manner, urging all to help the pastor in every way possible. The installation prayer was made by Rev. Urquhart, the choir gave a closing anthem and the newly installed pastor dismissed the meeting with the apostolic benediction. The gathering did not disperse, however, until all had greeted the pastor and his amiable wife. May his pastorate be a long and prosperous one for the church.

Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Spurgeon, four and a half miles northeast of town, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Monday. They were both born at Little Ellingham, Norfolk, England, the groom in 1832, the bride in 1834. They were married at the same place in 1854, and one child was born to them in England. They sailed from the Old Land on Oct. 14th, 1857, and arrived in New York Dec. 1st, being six weeks in crossing the Atlantic. Mr. Spurgeon had but two cents left and wife and baby both sick from the effects of the voyage. He was obliged to pawn his belongings to secure means for their keep at New York and sufficient to pay his railroad fare to Detroit. He walked from Detroit to Oxford, where he had a cousin living and there secured work at $10 per month. Three months later he was able to send for his wife and baby, and they made their home near Oxford for thirty-seven years, during which time through industry and frugality they were able to amass considerable of this world's goods and reared a family of ten children. During that time they had bought a forty acre tract here and in 1897 moved upon it. They now own 320 acres of choice farming land and are classed with our very best farmers. Four generations were represented at the anniversary. Among the guests present were: C. W. Spurgeon, Mrs. McKenzie and Miss Minnie Goff, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Styles, of Lapeer County; Mr. and Mrs. Dana Losey, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hulbert, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Spurgeon, Mr. and Mrs. John Spurgeon, Jr., J. Maier, Dr. and Mrs. D. P. Deming, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gougherty, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cole, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wamsley, Mrs. Jaus and son, Samuel, Mrs. A. Schwiegler and daughter. An excellent dinner was served, Photographer Maier took a picture of the entire company and a very pleasant time was spent.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Latin III is studying the life of Caesar.

Clarence Crawford entered the 8th grade on Monday.

Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Anderson were callers Monday afternoon.

Myrtle Skinner spelled down the eighth grade on Friday afternoon.

Mabel Reagh was absent Monday and Tuesday on account of moving.

The Senior Class is invited to dine with Prof. and Mrs. F. E. Sinclair this evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The ten weeks of Word Building, which is to be followed by Orthodoxy, will be completed this week.

All enjoyed the rhetorical of Friday afternoon very much, especially the two young ladies who, having the affirmative side of the debate, won by one point.

The Misses Ida Striffler, Lillie McColl, Madeline Auten, McCallum, Gertrude Leslie, Rev. and Mrs. L. V. Soldan, Mrs. F. E. Sinclair and P. S. McGregory visited the High School Friday afternoon.

You are cordially invited to come and bring your cash. The Senior Class is going to hold a bazaar in Dr. Deming's building, the Saturday before Thanksgiving, Nov. 19th. They will sell several kinds of home-made candy, chocolate, wafers and pop-corn; also hot baked beans can be bought from half past four to until half past five.

The High School was pleased to hear the following letter, Monday morning: Houghton, Mich., College of Mines.

F. E. Sinclair, Supt. Cass City Public Schools, Cass City, Mich.

Dear Sir,—

Your letter of Oct. 8th has been received, also the examination papers which you sent. These have been looked over and are found to be satisfactory. I therefore take pleasure in placing the Cass City High School on the accepted list of this institution. Trusting this will be satisfactory to you, I am, Very truly yours, T. H. Scott, Secretary.

At the beginning of the last period, Thursday afternoon, the whole High School was much bewildered at the signal to lay aside all work for the rest of the day. But amazement was soon changed to enthusiasm when Prof. Sinclair announced that we might organize a State political machine for election of a Governor. There are twelve rows of seats in the High School room. These were divided into caucuses, including four rows each. The Republican caucuses, of which there were three, were called first; Alex. Duncanson acting as chairman of the first meeting; Hattie Tanner, secretary; delegates to county convention, Ora McKim, Roy Phillips, Anna Adair, Irene Tindale. Second caucus—Earl Young, chairman; Mae Mulholland, secretary; delegates to county convention, Harry Sansburn, Florence Smith, Irwin Bradford, Mamie Brooker. Third caucus—Frank Utley, chairman; Rose F. Bixby, secretary; delegates to county convention, Lucile Schenck, Dan Duncanson, Irene Tindale. George Knight. First Democrat caucus—Jennie Miller, chairman; Mabel Reagh, secretary; delegates to county convention, Mabel Anderson, Clara Lenzer, Vida Patterson, Lola Fritz. Second Democrat caucus—Roy McKenzie, chairman; Mabel Robinson, secretary; delegates to the county convention, Ruth Striffler, Lloyd Armstrong, Ethel McGregory, Arthur Cooley. Third Democrat caucus—It would do you good to see the contrast of physiognomy between the Democrats and Republicans when the third Democrat caucus was called and there was no one to respond. Following the caucuses were held the county conventions, from which eight delegates of each party were sent to the State convention. The last two class hours of Monday were used for the holding of the State conventions and the campaigns, which resulted in the nomination of Fred M. Warner for Republican governor, and Woodbridge N. Ferris for Democrat governor; also several heated discussions, not only upon primary reform and machinism, but the good and bad qualities of both these noted men. Tuesday afternoon, after the High School had finished voting, the silence was broken by the chairman of election calling out "Hear ye! hear ye! hear ye! There were 88 votes cast, of which 53 were for Warner." Hurrah! Hurrah! for Governor Warner!

AUTO ACCIDENT.

While E. A. McGeorge was driving with his automobile last evening, the party comprising Mrs. McGeorge, Mrs. A. Frutchey and H. Frutchey, when one mile west and three and a half miles north of town, a serious accident happened. In turning out to avoid hitting a dog, something went amiss with the steering gear, with the result that the machine went into the ditch and all were thrown out. Mrs. A. Frutchey sustained a fracture of the collar bone. The others were fortunate to escape with slight bruises. The party got back to town in good time, as the accident happened about four o'clock. Dr. A. N. Treadgold attended to Mrs. Frutchey's injuries and she is resting as well as can be expected. The damage to the automobile has not yet been learned.

ONLY FILTERED AIR IN NEW HOTEL ST. REGIS

When a St. Regis lodger pays $125 a day for apartments in the most expensive hotel in New York, he or she purchases not only those pieces of resistance for which the artistic and culinary frontiers of two hemispheres have been ransacked, but also the privilege of breathing air that has been filtered and prepared just as carefully as are the hundred and one other luxuries awaiting those who can afford to pay for them. St. Regis air is Simon Pure—every cubic foot of it—being filtered of a barrel of dust a day.

By reason of its remarkable system of air filtration—if for no other reason—the new hotel occupies about the softest place imaginable in the lap of luxury. All its patrons are insured absolutely against breathing contaminated air or in the viewless jungles of which cranches the omniscient microbes. No other public or private structure in this city or country is equipped with such extensive and remarkable air filters as the new Fifth Avenue temple of luxury.

On the lip of every visitor, in the endless pilgrimages being made to the new shrine of the millionaire, is the question: How is the twenty-story building ventilated? This question is natural because no one ever sees a window open—and but few air preparatory to its being fanned through the abnormally tall and narrow-chested structure by means of ten linear miles of piping.

Properly speaking, the story of the St. Regis air combs or filters is a romance below stairs. For in illustrating it Chief Engineer Jurgensen conducted the interviewer by a roundabout passage from the office on the main floor down one flight of marble stairs, through a subway dining room, down another flight through a sub-subway kitchen—as white as marble can make it—and down still another marble stairway into a sub-sub-subway engine and boiler room thirty feet under Fifth Avenue.

Chief Engineer Jurgensen controls the lungs of the hotel. During every hour of the twenty-four he or his assistants has a finger on the pulse of the great, breathing buildings. Should it flutter for the slightest instant the fact is at once communicated to the chief engineer and a remedy prescribed.

Unlocking a polished oak door of expensive and handsome carving—a door that would not shame the average hotel as a main portal—the engineer entered a narrow passage, open doors—in the St. Regis. From one end of the year to the other its windows will remain closed—if the new air filters prove successful.

Their success thus far is attested by the statement of Chief Engineer J. C. Jurgensen that nearly a barrel of dust had been filtered daily from the air since the hotel was opened some seven weeks ago.

According to Chief Engineer Jurgensen, during the forty-odd days that the filters have been in operation exactly thirty-three and a fraction barrels of dust have been combed so to say, out of approximately one hundred million cubic feet of air as inhaled and exhaled by the hotel during its brief existence of less than two months.

A barrel of dust a day! Startling as this is as a first impression, it becomes more so when it is considered that the air in the region around Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth street—the millionaire section—is many times cleaner, and hence healthier, than the atmosphere in other and more densely populated sections of the metropolis. Yet in their ambition to put the St. Regis in a class by itself as a lily white inn Col. John Jacob Astor, the owner, and Manager Haan decided to spend $300,000 on air filters. Their dream was to make it the most sanitary as well as luxurious hotel in existence, and apparently the dream has come to pass.

Behind it and its fulfillment is an interesting and intricate story written in machinery, dynamo, air screens, wonderful radiators which heat or cool the air as the need may be, in conjunction with immense troughs of boiling water to revivify the vitiated

Man Who Was to Do the Worrying. Representative Dresser of Bradford, Pa., is a large manufacturer of oil well supplies. Since he has been in politics he has allowed his son to manage some parts of his business. A week or two ago he went up home to look over the factory, and while he was in his office a man from one of the oil districts asked to see him.

"What is it, Jim?" Representative Dresser asked.

"Why, Mr. Dresser," the visitor replied, "I am in a heap of trouble. I owe $600 and it is keeping me up nights worrying how I can pay it. I haven't got the money."

"My dear Jim," Dresser replied, "I don't see why that should disturb you. Let the other fellow do the worrying. I have found that the best plan."

"Is that a good plan?"

"Dest in the world. Whom do you owe the money to?"

"To your son. I bought some stuff of him."

"Detroit Journal."

lighted by electricity and walled on one side by a queer arrangement of cheese cloth shutters, each shaped like the letter V. Walling the other side of the compartment was a system of radiator coils, twenty deep with narrow interstices through which gales of ice-cold air were blowing from the V-shaped shutters. Passing on through another door, the heating room was revealed. Here were long rows of parallel troughs filled with boiling water, from which the steam arose steadily as from a singing fireplace kettle.

Engineer Jurgensen explained: "When the air is first drawn into the building and subjected to a preliminary filtering, it is, of course, of the same temperature as the open atmosphere. Having passed through the first filter, it is cooled and blown between the heated coils and thence into this steam room. Here it acquires—or, rather, reacquires—the humidity or moisture which was filtered out simultaneously with the dust microbes, and other foreign particles. To that extent the air is artificial, but as the most necessary ingredient of air is oxygen and a certain humidity, we believe that our guests breathe the best air that it is possible to furnish in New York."

By special permission a sample of the dust gathered from the St. Regis filters and spread thinly on a plate four inches in diameter has been subjected to a chemical and microscopic analysis by the Department of Health. This is what the St. Regis guest escapes when he breathes in an atmosphere that has been specially combed, washed and dried: Five bacteria germs, of which three were common bacteria; one an incipient tubercle bacillus, and one a common influenza germ; three-quarters carbon, and several metallic and vegetable particles, so fine as to be almost invisible to the naked eye.—New York Times.

Hard on the Host. James Brown Potter was talking about absent-mindedness.

"Usually," he said, "the errors of the absent-minded are merely ludicrous. They don't cause embarrassment or pain. The last time I was abroad, though, I witnessed a piece of absent-mindedness that was embarrassing and painful to the last degree."

"I was dining in Oxford, and the guest of honor was a Bishop. He was old and mild and thoughtful, and I was not surprised to hear from my neighbor that his head was continually in the clouds and his thoughts continually wandering."

"It seems that this Bishop had once lived in the house of our host. That fact, probably, was what caused him to forget that he was dining out. As the dinner, a rather poor one, drew to a close he turned to his wife and said:

"My dear, I am afraid we must pronounce this cook another failure."

FORMATION OF DRUG HABIT.

Physicians' Prescriptions Are Declared Largely to Blame.

The Pharmaceutical Era of New York is against the reffiling of prescriptions, and quotes a writer as saying that, "in the great majority of cases, the source of the drug habit could be traced to prescriptions written by physicians in the regular way and filled and refilled until the patient had become addicted to its use." The Era remarks:

"The testimony of experts on the drug habit corroborates this statement. The statements about the drug habit made by Prof. Eberle and Mr. Gordon at the American Pharmaceutical association were recently fortified by a gentleman who had every opportunity to study the question in actual life. It appears that the morphine habit especially is extremely common among the well-to-do. Women in society carry the use of the drug openly into the drawing rooms, taking the convenient little tablets during intervals of conversation."

"It is said that a large proportion of the slaves of this narcotic owe their first introduction to its influence to the family physician, or more frequently to young doctors who are anxious to make a sudden reputation for mastery of pain and insomnia. Nothing is more convenient or effective than a dose of morphine. The relief once found is sought again, and after a few trials the habit is established."

"It is easier to prevent the reffiling of prescriptions than to reduce the number of ambitious and impetuous doctors. Attack the problem at the point of least resistance."

LOW ORDER OF HUMANITY.

Australian Bushmen Make Their Abodes in Nests.

Travelers who have returned from the heart of Africa and the Australian continent tell wonderful stories of nest-building people who inhabit the wilds of those countries. In the bushmen of Australia we find, perhaps, the lowest order of men that is known. They are so primitive that they do not know enough to build even the simplest form of hut for shelter. The nearest they can approach to it is to gather a lot of twigs and grass and, taking them into a thicket or jungle, build a nest for a home. The nest is usually built large enough for the family, and if the latter be very numerous then the nests are of a very large size. Sometimes the foliage above will form a natural covering, but there is never any attempt at constructing a protection from the rain and storms.

Electric Road Easily Run.

Germany possesses a miniature but most useful railway, to which no parallel is found in this country. Its peculiarity is that its trains have no drivers. It is used for carrying salt to the salt mines at Stassfurt. The trains consist of thirty tracks, each carrying half a ton of salt. The engines are electric, of twenty-four horse power each. As it approaches a station, of which there are five five along the line, the train automatically rings a bell and the station attendant turns a switch to receive it. He is able to stop it at any moment. To start it again he stands on the locomotive, switches the current and then descends again before the engine has gained speed.

No Slaughter House Waste.

The products of the Chicago slaughter houses have been referred to more than almost any other of the gigantic waste materials of the country. Simply a listing of the by-products of the Chicago stockyards is suggestive enough of the value of the portions of the animals that once went into offal. These by-products are gelatin, glue, hair for plaster, curled hair for upholstery, bristles, blood, neat's foot oil, bones, horns, hides, skins, wool, sausage casings, fertilizers and the glands and membranes of animals from which are taken pepsin, thymus, throids and pancreatin.

A Song of Courage.

Peace, peace, my soul! Behind you cloud is shining
The glorious sun, with radiant beams and warm;
Rest, rest, my heart! Cease thou thy sad ruminating;
The brightest sky is after darkest storm.
And though the way seem desolate and dreary,
Up, up, my soul, and press with vigor on!
For though thy path be dark, grow thou not weary;
The darkest hour is just before the dawn.
—Charles Ross Keen.

The Lion Sermon.

It may not be generally known that a "lion sermon" is preached annually on October 16 at St. Katherine Cree church, Leadenhall street, in memory of Sir John Gayer, once Lord Mayor of London, who had escaped from a lion in the deserts of Arabia in 1630. Sir John declared that the lion had passed without hurting him in consequence of his prayers and vows of charity.—The Tatler.

Essence from Flowers.

To extract the essence from any flower, place a layer of the flowers in a clean earthen pot and over them a layer of fine salt. Repeat the process until the pot is filled, cover closely and place in the cellar. Forty days afterward strain the essence from the whole through a crape by pressure. Put the essence thus expressed in a clear bottle and expose for six weeks in the rays of the sun and even dew to purify. One drop of this essence will communicate its odor to a pint of water.

Cakes Looked Like Books

As an illustration of the thrift and foresight of the housekeepers of the early period, Halsey P. Clarke, the veteran town clerk of Richmond, tells this story, says the Providence Journal: His father, David Clarke, was in Providence at one time, and being obliged to stay over night, for in those days the means of travel was by horse and wagon or horseflesh, which was necessarily very slow, he put up at a tavern, and in the room he occupied were four beds, for there was not much space wasted in the bedrooms of the old-time taverns. Before retiring for the night Mr. Clarke and a friend who was with him struck up an acquaintance with another occupant of the same room. The friend of Mr. Clarke whispered to him not to tell the stranger where they came from and to try to find out whence he had come; so they inquired of him where he had come from, and he told them he had just been down in South country, in the town of Richmond. He said that when he arrived in town it was nearing dusk, so he drew up at a tavern and inquired of the landlord for lodging for the night.

The landlord replied in the affirmative and sent a boy to take his horse, as he was on horseback. The gentleman went with the boy and removed the saddlebags and brought them into the house and, throwing them down in the kitchen, stepped up to the fireplace to warm himself. Over the fireplace was a mantel shelf, which was nearly half as long as the room itself, and upon looking up he saw on the shelf what he supposed to be a row of books.

While he was wondering why there was such a number of books in this tavern—more books, he thought, than were in the entire town—the woman of the house came in and stirred up the fire preparatory to cooking the evening meal. He inquired of her: "Why is it that you have so many books here in the kitchen? Is the town's library here, or what is it?" "Books!" exclaimed the astonished woman, "I don't see any books. Where are they? Show me them." "Right here on that shelf," replied the man, "over your head." "Books!" said she, "Oh, la! them ain't books; them's johnnycakes. We expect the town council here to dinner next week, and we've baked them johnnycakes so's to be ready when they come." Whether he mistook the johnnycakes, packed neatly on end upon the shelf, for books or not, it is hard to say, though there is no doubt that the story did not lose anything in the telling, but by actual count there were seventy-nine johnnycakes on the shelf.

Lucky Flier in Stocks

It was a hot night in the first week of last August. The pharmaceutical chemist was sitting among the bottles and test tubes and mortars in his laboratory. His family were in the country and he wished that he was with them. He happened to be in his laboratory because there wasn't any other place he wanted to go and because he had some work to do. About 10 o'clock his friend Quill dropped in for a nip of the doctor's Scotch on his way home.

"Say, Doc," said Quill, "do you want to take a little flier in the market?" "I'd rather take a flier into the country," was the reply. "But since I can't do that, let's hear your proposition." "Buy a little International Power," said Quill. "It's a stock with a history. I know, but I got it pretty straight that on or before Oct. 15 it'll be selling at $2 or better. It comes so straight that, if I had some money to gamble with, I'd buy a little myself and hold for about a ten point rise, just to have leeway enough."

"I'll think about it," replied the doctor, and after a nightcap with his friend, Quill, he went home. The next day Quill dropped into the laboratory and the doctor said:

"In my, got a hundred at 35, and my broker was curious to know who put me on."

Tricks of the Forger

Space prohibits the brief recapitulation of remarkably ingenious frauds of yet fresh in the public memory, but the principal aim of the forger of today is toward the indorsements on checks planned to be stolen subsequently to signature, says London Tit-Bits. No pains, expense or trouble are spared by the swindlers in order to obtain a business memorandum bearing the signature of the firm of payees, and upon a printed copy of the former the forged signature of the latter is sent to the drawer of the stolen check, thus allaying suspicion temporarily.

Two swindlers of this type ascertained that a gentleman was in the habit of sending two checks for substantial amounts periodically by post. Opening a small account at the same branch of the bank, at one of these times, the thieves contrived to obtain possession of the checks from the post box wherein it was the gentleman's custom to post his letters. Receipts were sent, bearing imitations of the previously obtained signatures of the payees and the crossed drafts bearing forged indorsements were paid through the post into the forgers' own account. The checks could thus be drawn upon almost immediately and at the earliest possible moment the swindlers withdrew and cleared with the cash. The bank repudiated the customer's claim, but after a long action was ordered upon appeal to make good his loss.

Again, late on a Saturday morning, purporting to emanate from the London or other office where a wealthy customer keeps an account, a telegram may arrive addressed to the manager of a local branch of that bank at some fashionable resort, advising that Mr. So-and-So, a reliable and responsible customer, is arriving in the town, and requesting that every courtesy and attention be shown him. The wire is followed by the advent of the respected "Mr. So-and-So" himself—a prosperous-looking gentleman—who, producing a check for, say $1,000, requests the immediate opening of a current account. As the check is drawn by him in favor of "self" the usual formalities are easily subscribed to by the personator of the genuine customer, and if an astute bank manager denies "Mr. So-and-So" permission to draw upon the check until cleared he can scarcely refuse to issue a checkbook, which the swindler can use for all it is worth previous to his departure for other scenes on the following evening. This trick has been successfully carried out in several instances.

The Frigate of Eternity

Suggested by reading Rudyard Kipling's poem, "The Soldiers' Last Chantey" in The Sever. The earth is a huge frigate, riding Along the shoreless sea of Time, A man of war her Helmsman guiding, She surges with a sweep sublime. Cosmicorgs her crew will muster, The mutineers lie in the hold. The steerage holds the men that cluster The mariners so stanch and bold. The ship is stout, and stanch the seamen, In every age a dauntless crew Has manned the craft, and sons of freedom— Are still on deck to see her through! Let changelings prate, and cowards patter. Let tonguesters shriek, and shriek in vain. She craves her comrades cringe and falter. She holds her course in fierce disdain. Through wind, through rain she minds the Master. And plunges through this aerial foam, No Flying Dutchman faint for home. No reef she fears, or hidden tresson; The stars her beacons through the night. Seize she rides through stormy seasons, The wind and wave are her delight.

Almost Too Methodical.

A woman of methodical habits and rigid observance of a system in her household must have arranged this telegraph blank which her husband lost in the street one night last week and a messerger picked up. It reads: "Jennie had a — born at — o'clock. Both doing well. Fine — weighing — pounds." "Walter."

"That's good enough so far as it goes," remarked the man to whom the finder showed it, "but what would Walter have done, if it had been twins? All those forms would have been wasted."—New York Sun.

CAVALRY HORSES IN STAMPEDE.

Mounts of English Soldiers Run Miles in Wild Disorder.

During recent army maneuvers in England a stampede of cavalry horses occurred which is believed to have been without precedent in times of peace. In the camp near Southampton a horse broke a leg during the night and a veterinary surgeon shot the animal as it stood in the horse lines. The flash and report so terrified the remainder of the animals that they dashed through the camp, trampling upon tents filled with sleeping men and scattered over the whole country. Some made their way through another camp, communicating panic to the horses there, and they joined in the stampede, over 1,000 animals breaking away.

Most disastrous was the result to the animals. Many fell, breaking their legs and necks, while scores were injured by barbed wire fences and iron-bed picket posts which they carried off with them. One drove of about 200 dashed toward the sea and plunged into the water of the harbor. Men in boats put out and turned back as many as possible. Landing stages had to be broken down to get the horses ashore. Several animals were drowned.

Another drove of seventy horses passed through Winchester, apparently making for Aldershot. Several men were injured by the animals dashing through the camp. Fifty horses were killed, while a trainload of wounded animals was sent back to Aldershot for treatment.

TOO GOOD FOR A DOCTOR.

Decision Which Saved New Englander for the Fish Trade.

The fisherman drove into the yard a few days after the new summer residents had taken possession of their home, and seeing an open door he stepped in and confronted the mistress of the house.

"Gettin' settled, I s'pose," he said agreeably, allowing his gaze to wander from two half-unpacked trunks to a table loaded with miscellaneous articles. "Well, take your time, take your time; there's plenty of it up here! I understand your husband's a doctor, ma'am?"

"Yes, he is," said the summer resident, who in spite of warnings from city neighbors that she had better display no haughtiness of spirit under questioning, was unable to put much cordiality into her tone.

"Well, now, I come near bein' a doctor," said the fishman, still with a wandering gaze. "My folks wanted I should be one, all exceptin' of an aunt that had money, and was looked up to help me out financially if I took up with a profession. She spent one summer here, and she made a regular study of my character an' parts, and at the end of the season she up an' told my folks that 'wouldn't do, I must go into business."

"That boy has got too much intellect to be hove away on a doctor," she said; those were her very words. Now, how would you like a couple of good mackerel all slit up an' ready for the briler?"—Youth's Companion.

Watchman's Complicated Task.

A watchman who has been engaged by the directors of an Australian bank had brought with him good recommendations. The chairman of the board sent for him and proceeded to "post him up" as to his duties.

"Well, James," he began, "this is your first job of this kind, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Your duty must be to exercise vigilance."

"Yes, sir."

"No stranger must be allowed to enter the bank at night under any pretext whatever."

"No, sir."

"And our manager—he is a good man, honest, and trustworthy; but it will be your duty to keep your eye on him."

"But it will be hard to watch two men and the bank at the same time."

"Two men? How?"

"Why, sir, it was only yesterday that the manager called me in for a talk, and he said you were one of the best men in the city, but it would be just as well to keep both eyes on you, and let the directors know if you hung about after hours."—London Answers.

A Woman and a Secret.

The secret she has sworn to keep— Why should it e'er seem uppermost Within her mind, why should it leap And frolic like uneasy ghost? Adown her brain's dark cloister where She meant that it should slumber deep It seems to cry "Give air! give air!" The secret she has sworn to keep.

She's ill at ease, and troubled sore, Alone at home, alone with friends; She tries to lose it o'er and o'er, But e'er the stalking ghost attends. Go where do whither will, by day By night when wrapped in dreamful sleep, Its thrilling cry rings out: "Make way!" The secret she has sworn to keep.

Some there may be—I cannot say— Brave women who will battle thus For more than one dread night and day, The while they worry, fret and fuss, But not a maid or matron dwells Un on this dread earth who sound can sleep.

Until—ah, bliss of bliss—she breaks The secret she has sworn to keep.—Roy Farrell Green, in Brooklyn Life.

Nation's Bill for Soda Water.

The soda water season is closing. A simple statement, but few know all that it means, or how great a commercial feature the soda water season is. In the United States alone 75,000 merchants sell soda water, averaging sales of $730 a year, or a total of $54,750,000 per annum. The average price of drinks is 6 cents, giving the number of drinks as 910,000,000. Could the glasses required to serve these many drinks be placed side by side they would reach to within a day's travel of once around the world.

W. J. Hill, of Concord, N. C., Justice of the Peace, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I used them for disordered kidneys and backache, from which I had experienced a great deal of trouble and pain. The kidney secretions were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My health generally is improved a great deal."

SOME TRICKS OF LIGHTNING.

Bolts, It Would Seem, Were Sent to Do Their Work. A man in Mississippi was cutting a chew of tobacco when a bolt of lightning struck his hands. They were so badly burned that they had to be amputated. Two quarrymen were preparing a fuse in a Georgia marble quarry when lightning struck the charge and they were blown to fragments. The mate of an Atlantic coasting schooner was drunkenly inviting a sailor aloft engaged in shortening sail to come down and be cut to pieces, when a bolt of lightning struck the mate dead. A boy seated in a small boat that was attached to and trailing from a sailing yacht off the South Carolina coast was killed by a bolt of lightning, while the yacht was not damaged. An unbelieving farmer in Indiana was engaged in a controversy with an itinerant minister when he was struck dead by lightning while making a blasphemous remark.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It offers one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful. I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 210 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn. (Mrs. Fairbanks is one of the most successful and highest salaried traveling saleswomen in the West.)—$2000 forfeit. SQUIRE JOHN A TALE OF THE CUBAN WAR BY ST. GEORGE BATHURNE

Copyright, 1897, by F. Tennyson Neely. CHAPTER IV.—Continued. Undoubtedly Spencer knew in some way the full particulars of the matter, and has conceived a gigantic plan whereby he may palm himself off as Jack Travers, marry the girl, come into the property, and strike a big thing.

And he has corresponded with this guardian of Jessie Cameron, this Spaniard or Cuban, who poses as the girl's stepfather, so that the game has all been cleverly arranged. Jack can look back to an adventure he had recently, when he was waylaid by unknown men, robbing him of money papers and thrown into a deep canyon to die; but in some almost miraculous manner he caught in a treetop and managed to save himself. Without a doubt Spencer was the cause of this attempt on his life, made before the London lawyer found him.

With this brief but necessary explanation the reader can appreciate Jack's feelings as he enters the room where he is to meet for the first time the girl who is destined to play such an important part in his life. "Will you shake hands with me, for I am, after all, your kinsman, Miss Jessie," he says, upon meeting her. She takes the proffered hand, and her eyes, which have been searching his face in such an earnest, beseeching manner ever since his entrance, drop before his ardent gaze.

"As I understand it, after the ceremony that stakes us man and wife is completed you pass from my sight forever?" "Forever," she echoes. "Unless at some time in the future, should you relent—" "I shall never do that. You understand, this is merely a business arrangement, and sentiment does not enter into it at all," she interposes. Jack only smiles quietly. That was what he himself thought, only to find out his mistake; and he has strong hopes that she will also in time.

"Let me change the wording, then—I am not to seek your presence again without some desire on your part to see me. That is cruel. But give my word as a man to abide by the provisions; only I would like you to promise me in return that if at some future time you need a friend's help you will call upon Jack Travers. Can you?"

"There is no reason I should refuse, since I can appreciate your motive. Yes, I promise you that, Cousin Jack," she replies, looking directly into his eyes with her clear grey orbs. "Let's shake hands on it—that's the way they ratify bargains in the states. I believe we understand each other now." "I am glad—" and she halts in confusion. "What?" he asks curiously. "To have found you such a gentleman. Say no more. Here are the others coming up?" "Remember your promise," he adds, hastily. Jack is more than satisfied. He believes he can conscientiously sacrifice himself on the altar of matrimony when the other party to the contract is Jessie Cameron, and deep down in his heart he has strong hopes that it will not be a great while ere a sweet message reaches him, calling him to keep his promise and come to her assistance.

CHAPTER V. Wedded, Yet No Wife. The picturesque old gentleman, whom he now knows to be, Senior

"Forever," she echoes. fael Roblado, Jessie's Spanish stepfather, comes up, his face beaming with unctuous smiles, and rubbing his hands together after the manner of a man well pleased. "Well, Senior Jack," exclaims the old hypocrite, believing all the while it is a base counterfeit, and not the genuine Travers who has come to keep the contract, "you are of the same mind still—you do not desire to back out?" "Not I," answers Jack, sturdily. "The papers which passed between us are binding—there is no need of duplicating them. This fortune will be divided as agreed upon—one half to each. You understand the arrangement? Now let me introduce you, Senior, to these few people who are to witness the ceremony in order to conform to the law, all other provisions of which I have carefully prepared for." First, there is the minister, a gentleman in the black garb of the Presbyterian church. Only one other gentleman is present, a Cuban evidently, from his name.

There are two females—one of them a Scotch lady, and possibly a neighbor or owner of the house; the second a character upon which Jack is inclined to spend more than a casual glance. She is only a girl, with a dark face and a deformed figure—a girl who could perhaps only receive jeering attentions from cruel boys in the street.

Her face it is that attracts Jack; one forgets her deformity when looking into that, it is so strong, so changeable in its emotions. Here is, indeed, a character worth studying. In love or hate she would be a formidable antagonist. He wonders what relation she bears to Jessie Cameron, and seeing a soft look come over her face as her eyes fall upon the fair girl, guesses that the daughter of Senior Roblado worships the Scotch lassie, which somehow gives him great relief.

With such a guardian Jessie Cameron need never be quite helpless. Quick as a flash the dark-faced girl gives him a frowning look as she advances—a look that may mean many things, but which Jack rightly interprets. Then and there he knows absolutely that he has no need of going further in order to find the author of his strange letter; if she had signed her name Juanita to the scroll he could not be more positive.

At first Jack wonders why she frowns and darts lightnings at him out of her sash-black eyes, until he suddenly remembers that undoubtedly she believes him to be that miserable impostor of a Howard Spencer.

Come, this will never do. He must find a chance to whisper the truth to the senior's daughter and make her his friend. When one really desires such an opportunity, it is not so difficult to create it as might be supposed; and while some of the others were engaged in a little discussion concerning the particulars of the ceremony, Jack, in a few words tells the girl the truth concerning his identity.

Then her dark face for the first time lights up with a smile, and she gives him a little brown, slender hand. "Then it is better than I thought. But you will keep your promise just the same?" Perhaps circumstances may arise that will make it necessary for you to claim my sister. Who can say? If they should, I am glad for her sake that you are what you appear to be—a gentleman.

"Thank you," he replies. "I have already told her that should she need assistance at any time, not to forget me as a distant cousin." "We are ready, Senior Jack," calls out the genial old gentleman. Jessie Cameron no longer blushes, but looks very pale. She will not meet Jack's eye, but stands there at his side with downcast head. It is a strange marriage—possibly as singular a ceremony as has ever been celebrated within the limits of "Edinbro' town."

Jack's responses are made boldly, while the bride's voice falters, as though she realizes how poorly constructed for a marriage of convenience are the forms of a religious ceremony. Then it is over. Jack Travers, bachelor exeunt—enter the benedict, receiving the congratulations of the happy senior. The next act in the drama promises to be of an altogether different nature, and just as likely as not war will follow low.

He has indulged in the hope that he may have a chance to say good-bye to his wife, and even counts on a last touch of that shapely little hand; but looking round presently, he discovers she has left the room. A look of disappointment comes over his face, which being noticed by the shrewd eyes of the bluff old gentleman, start him into a fit of laughter, much to Jack's discomfiture, since he knows his secret has been read. "She has gone, Senior Jack; the bright star has dipped behind the horizon. There was a penalty attached to the contract, you know. Caramba! I am really sorry for you; but women are capricious, and the dear girl may yet relent. At any rate, I hope so, Senior Jack."

"Oh, I intend to," declares the new-made Benedict, with a significant smile. Senior Roblado plucks him by the arm. "Ah, my dear Jack, when shall we have our final settlement," he asks. "When you please—say to-morrow," replies the other, indifferently. "Good. Where will I find you?" "I put up at Stevens' Crown hotel, not more than ten minutes' walk from here, in Princess street."

"I know it well, Senior Jack." "I have apartments on the third floor above the street. Call about four." "At four it is; you will be ready? If necessary, we can call in a lawyer."

"Yes, or a doctor, if you desire. I'm the easiest man in the world to get on with, and always ready to accommodate. If there is nothing else to detain me, I shall now say good night."

So Jack bids them all adieu, shaking hands with each in turn, and when he reaches the owner of the black eyes he bends low enough to whisper: "If danger threatens her I beg of you in heaven's name to let me know."

"I promise, if she will allow," is what he hears in return, and with that he must remain satisfied.

The "buenos noches" of the suave Castilian floats after him like a benison as he leaves the house of the seven gables.

The moon, now having climbed to a higher point in the blue arch, looks down benignly upon the scene as Jack, having struck a wax vesta, stalks along in the direction of High street, followed by his shadow, Ah Sin.

The recollection of Jessie Cameron haunts him as might the sweet perfume of a flower after it has been lost to sight.

His wife! Will he ever get used to sleep?

"I believe you." the startling fact? That lovely girl being to him by reason of a legal chain! He heaves a sigh as he remembers his word of honor and the slender chances of their meeting again.

Jack is a buoyant nature. Nothing daunts him, and he has a deep-rooted conviction that this is all but a beginning to an end. "Some day," he mutters, as he sits in his room at the Crown hotel, looking up at the Castle, "who knows but what I may find that same sweet face smiling at the other side of my breakfast table? I have faith to believe. And now to sleep, perchance to dream it has all come out like the novels do." (To be continued.)

WAS BOUND TO FIND OUT. Incident Proves Women Are Not the Only Curious Creatures.

We had been married just a month and my inquiries as to all his doings during the day had begun to draw forth remarks about woman's proverbial curiosity, when, one evening after tea was on the table, I picked up the evening paper and found a recipe for "prune whip," which I cut out and laid away for future use. After the head of the house had changed his coat, donned his slippers, eaten and made himself comfortable, he asked, "What did you cut out of my paper?"

"Oh, something that would not be at all proper for you to read," I replied. "Well, I guess I'll read what I choose. Please get it."

I refused, and things grew uncomfortable, and when I returned from the kitchen I found an empty chair, empty slippers and a discarded paper. About an hour after the head of the house returned and with a particularly jubilant air opened a brand new newspaper. He scanned column after column eagerly until he found a recipe for "prune whip." Now when the head of the house becomes any way domineering I feed him on "prune whip."—Elizabeth Ogilvie in Good Housekeeping.

He Couldn't Cure 'Em. The man sitting beside the minister was somewhat showily dressed, but quiet enough in manner. They had struck up an acquaintance and were chatting affably on various subjects. Perhaps it was because they were the only two men in the car who were not reading newspapers. The minister noticed this, and noticed also that it was sporting news which chiefly interested his fellow passengers.

"It is deplorable," he said, "that horse racing has such a fascination for all classes of people. One would think that sad experience would cure most of them of their infatuation, but apparently it does not. I fear this form of gambling is on the increase." "I think it is," said the other man, "and I don't see how it is going to be stopped. I know I've done all I could to cure people of the betting habit."

"Indeed!" said the minister, eagerly. "May I ask how?" "By winning as much of their money as I could. I'm a bookmaker."

Explodes Scoury Theory. The Antarctic voyage from which the Discovery has just returned is said to have exploded the old theory about the efficacy of vegetable acids, in scurvy. The scurvy broke out when canned goods were used and disappeared when fresh meat—penguin and seal in this case—was substituted.

CAUGHT IN WRONG BLUFF.

Good Idea, but Unfortunately the Cradle Was Empty. A clock in a nearby tower had just tolled off the hour of 4 as he arose unsteadily from the card table, where he had sat for three hours, stretched his weary limbs, bade his comrades good night and started in the direction of his home.

After a half-hour's walk in which all the lamp posts and telegraph poles insisted on getting in his way, he arrived at his home, took out his bunch of keys, at last found the elusive key-hole and softly opening the door and discarding his shoes at the foot of the stairs, climbed heavenward on all fours. With catlike footsteps he crept across the threshold of his bedroom and proceeded to undress. He heard his wife move restlessly, which made him hurry, and in doing so he up set a chair. Stepping quickly over to the cradle in the corner, he commenced to rock it violently.

"Is that you, John?" came his wife's voice from the bed. "Yes, dear," he replied. "Well, what in the world are you doing?" she asked.

"Why, I'm rocking this blamed kid to sleep." "How long have you been there?" "Since 11:30."

"Well, John, I think you had better get right into bed, as I have the child in here beside me; and, moreover, I've had him here ever since 11 o'clock last night."—Philadelphia Press.

Tennyson in Bitter Mood.

Aubrey de Vere has written some interesting lines concerning a period in Tennyson's life of which the public knows but little. He says concerning an unexpected morning call: "On my way in paid a visit to Tennyson, who seemed much out of spirits and said he could no longer bear to be knocked about the world and that he must marry and find love and peace or die. He was very angry about a very favorable review of him. Said that he could not stand the chatter and conceit of clever men or the worry of society or the meanness of turf-hunters or the trouble of poverty or the labor of a place or the preying of the heart on itself. Said that no one had been so much harassed by anxiety and trouble as himself. I told him he wanted occupation, a wife and orthodox principles, which he took well."

What One Kicker Can Do.

One coyote will hang around a camp at night and create the impression that a pack of at least twenty big wolves are looking for a chance to eat the campers. By investigation it will reveal that the single coyote is lean and hungry and cowardly, and that he does not weigh over fifteen pounds. Likewise one kicker in a town will create the impression that there is much indignation against every respectable citizen and measure.—Atchison, Kan., Globe.

Red Gum Wood Much Used.

Because it warps and stains in seasoning red gum was long neglected, but now 60 per cent of the barrels and boxes made in the south are made of red gum. The wood is also shipped to Europe, where it is made into furniture and it is also used there in paving blocks. When steamed it is easily bent, and it thus becomes available for carriage rims and carriage wood stock.

California as a Horse-Raising State. I have not the least hesitation in claiming that were the whole world searched there might be found sections which closely approached California, as a horse-raising country, but none that surpasses it, inasmuch as there are parts of this state which are perfect in every particular, nothing, in fact, being lacking for the production of the very highest type of horses.—Joseph Cairn Simpson in Sunset Magazine for November.

She says: "The first symptom was an unusual paleness. Later the blood seemed to have all left my body. I had shortness of breath and fluttering of the heart; was depressed, morose and peevish. I suffered for two years. Physicians did me little good but I am now a well woman because I took twelve boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

OKLAHOMA OPPORTUNITIES. The completion by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, of over 300 miles of railroad in Oklahoma opened a rich agricultural country of excellent possibilities, besides giving direct connections between St. Louis, Kansas City, and Oklahoma City, Shawnee, Guthrie, El Reno, Enid and other Oklahoma points. Along the route are located new and growing towns—Cleveland, Jennings, Cushing, Agra, Falls, Luther and Maud, situated right in the heart of a rich farming section, offering the best of opportunities for safe and profitable investments. The field is new and the prices of farm land are low.

The opportunity is "NOW." In fourteen years the wealth of Oklahoma has steadily increased until at present it is approximately four hundred million dollars. Oklahoma has a population of six hundred and fifty thousand; some three hundred banks, with twenty-five million dollars on deposit. The new fields in eastern Oklahoma are in the best fruit section of the country and produce the very best of fruit in abundance. At the World's Fair, the Winesaps and Jonathans from Eastern Oklahoma, received awards in competition with the best fruit sections of the world. The rainfall in this field is about forty inches and well distributed. The weather is mild and the work can be carried on the year round. Few lines of business are adequately represented. There are openings of all sorts—grain mill and manufacturing plants, for small stores of all kinds, for banks, newspapers and lumber yards. Mechanics and professional men, both are in demand. Would you like to hear of an opening? THEN TELL US WHAT YOU WANT, how much you have to invest and we will gladly furnish the information. Write at once for a copy of "Business Chances," or "The Coming Country." Free for the asking. Address

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request. Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy. SCOTT'S BOWNE, CHEMISTS, 409 Pearl St., N. Y. 50c. and $1; all druggists.

It accidentally went off, the bullet going through the foot. Dr. Worden dressed the wound and reports it doing as well as can be expected.

Geo. Schwitzer, a farmer living southeast from here, was returning to his home Friday of last week, when his team became frightened and threw him out, breaking some bones and hurting him internally, he was taken to his home, where he passed away on Monday. The funeral was held on Thursday a. m. As he was alone when the accident happened it is not known at what the team took fright.

Bilbrough, who has so successfully been principal of our schools for a year and a half, has resigned to accept a position as manager of a bank in the western part of the state for Hubbard and Co., of Bad Axe. ## CAPT. ARCH. B. SNOW

At the Opera House Nov. 17th.

The second number of the Lecture Course will be given on the evening of Thursday, Nov. 17th, by Capt. Arch. B. Snow, actor, impersonator, humorist and entertainer. For many years he acted in the best theatres and combinations on this continent, his particular line being character parts of the quaint and curious order, for which his wonderful mobility of facial expression, his thorough mastery of all known dialects, and his artistic "make-ups" peculiarly fitted him. From a rich mine of tradition and experience he draws the material, with ripened judgment and fertile fancy, which weaves into entertaining matter, that moves audiences as he wills, to laughter or to tears, and makes them oblivious to the flight of time.

Secure your tickets early and enjoy yourself for once!

ESCAPED FROM JAIL.

Colored Burglar Beat The Bad Axe Turnkey.

Chas. Graham, held at the Bad Axe jail for burglary of stores at Bay Port, Sebawaing, Owendale and Caseville, escaped on Saturday. As Turnkey James McGregor was making his usual rounds, Graham, who was standing in the shadow of the cell, threw a blanket over the turnkey's head, jumped upon him and kicked and pounded him until he was almost insensible, made his escape and closed the doors behind him. The sheriff and a posse started at once in pursuit.

On Saturday night the Elkton depot was broken into, but nothing taken except some crackers, syrup and rice, which seemed to have been eaten in the pump house. Sunday night John Hoffman's horse and buggy was taken from a church shed at Elkton during the service.

In the meantime, during Sunday night, further burglaries were committed at Warner's cheese factory near Owendale and at Gagetown, entrance having been effected to W. W. Bender's hardware store, the depot and the cheese factory. The goods taken were not of great value. Officers followed the trail to a point near Ellington, where they found the horse and rig, and discovered where the goods had been taken across the fields to the woods, where the trail was lost.

It was at first thought that Graham had a hand in all the work but later reports state that he was last seen west of Linkville Sunday afternoon, and it is possible that another gang is at work.

Profits From One Hen.

A man in south Missouri gave his daughter a hen and agreed to feed it two years. He had an elevated opinion of the girl's talent for business when she told him at the end of the time that the products of the hen's industry and that of her offspring in the two years was $64 in the bank and 200 chickens that would soon be ready for the skillet.—Kansas City Journal.

Poultry Notes.

Late chickens sometimes do very well, but they require more care than early ones.

Don't forget to keep tab on the thrifty pullets. They are to lay the high priced eggs next winter.

Sell the young roosters in the best market as fast as they come. There is much waste in keeping too many roosters.

The poultry that is having the run of the orchard now is serving well their day and generation.

It is a pity so many people don't know how many chickens they raise.

Pick the geese and ducks regularly. Somebody will want the feathers.

DO YOU WANT FREE CONSULTATION AND CORRECT OPINION OF YOUR CASE.

If you are poor your treatment is free. If you are discouraged and we can cure you, we will wait for our pay until you are well. Come and see us; this is your last chance.

We live to do good, are honest with all. Forty-five years' experience free. This trip and today only.

The above is the picture of the only Dr. A. B. Spinney in this state. His history is as follows: Fifteen years in private practice, twelve of these in East Saginaw, Mich., with as large a practice as any physician there. Two years professor in Detroit Homeopathic College and twenty-two years in Detroit. Had charge of Reed Sanitarium eighteen months; Ypsilanti one year, and for the past seven years has owned a sanitarium at Reed City. On December 15, 1902, his sanitarium was burned, loss fifteen thousand dollars; but in forty-eight hours he had bought another and is in good shape for business again. He will move to Beading, Mich., next spring, where he has a Sanitarium with sixty rooms nearly completed.

There is a firm in Detroit calling themselves Spinney & Co. Their history is this: Anson B. Spinney founded the same, but he has been dead some three years, as an extract from the Evening News of September 8th, 1900, will prove. The office has been run by his heirs, putting physicians in the same that they could hire until about a year ago when Korgan & Kennedy bought them out and have been running the business since. I am the only Dr. Spinney in the state. Have been here forty-five years, so do not make a mistake and send or write the wrong firm if you wish to see me. I am at the Sanitarium every Sunday except one in a month. Will be at the place and date below as follows:

We are coming to your town on date and at place mentioned and are willing to give you our time and the benefit of our forty-four years' experience, free.

It matters not how long you have been sick, or what your ailment, our consultation and advice is free, and our opinions are always the result of careful examinations and a life long experience. The patient is always told the truth and upon just what he can rely. To all who are poor we give treatment absolutely free, only charging cost of medicine. Operate at hospital free, only charging exact cost of board while patient is recovering.

Any person suffering from PILES or any curable disease we will wait for our pay until cured, if you will secure us.

Have you been sick four years and are you discouraged? Come to us and we will cure you. Our prices are the lowest of any chronic disease specialists in the state. Charges at the sanitarium only actual cost. We treat all forms of chronic diseases, but special attention is given to the treatment of the following long standing diseases, viz.: Nasal Catarrh, Polypus, Mucous and Tolerant Diseases of the Throat, Parotitis, Consumption, Asthma, Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Bronchial Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Loss of Voice, Enlarged Testicles, Insipient Consumption, Stricture, Diseases of the Heart, General Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Stricture, Constipation, Piles, Fistula, Prolapsus, Hemorrhoids, Dropsy, Surgical Diseases of all forms, the Eye, Ear, Face and Intestines, Catarrh, Hare Lips, etc.; also Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Diarrhea, and all forms of Liver, Stomach and Bowel Diseases.

Remarkable Cures Perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail express, but personal consultation is preferred.

The strong demand for wool is a sure indication that the scant supply is at last seriously felt, and that prices will further advance and be sustained into next season, the Indiana Farmer declares. It is said that numerous titled Europeans have visited this country during the past year under assumed names, says the Utica Press. When they come here the practice has been to associate them with a matrimonial venture. For a farm water supply nothing is quite equal to spring water piped from a source that will give a never-failing flow in house and barn, states the Massachusetts Ploughman. The water ram comes next, if a moderate fall can be provided near the source. It is most commonly used where there is a large, swift brook of good water. If a well must be sunk the wind engine and a tank or reservoir will furnish the supply. A good water system adds considerably to the convenience and value of the farm, as it is a point sure to be considered by prospective buyers.

DOING DEARBORN.

A Wholesale Raid Made on the Stores

Nearly every store in Dearborn village was entered by burglars Thursday night and valuable goods taken wherever there were any to be found. The robbers had a wagon, and entered the village with the deliberate intent of committing wholesale plunder. They were finally driven away when a constable clerk, who sleeps in D. Sloss & Son's store, heard them as they pried the rear shutters off the hinges, and fired upon them through the pines. An examination of D. P. Lapham's general store showed that the robbers had at first attempted to break the door, but failed. They went to the side door over the meat shop, and entered through a transom. One of the marauding party drove a light wagon up to the rear door of the store and upon it dozens of pairs of trousers, shoes, gloves and mittens and other articles of wear, boxes of cigars and miscellaneous merchandise were loaded. The thieves broke into other stores, the bank, barber shop and meat market. None of the victims of the robbery can easily estimate his loss. Mr. Lapham says the gloves and shoes stolen can be identified by the manufacturers' private marks.

The Business Portion of the Town and Twenty-three Residences.

Mrs. Cook, accompanied by her parents, has arrived from Bristol, England, and the marriage will take place in Kalamazoo.

The passengers of a Lake Shore train from Bronson west were sidetracked near an open field and while there were very much interested in watching the maneuvers of a crow. He darted down from the trees and seized a rattlesnake, two and one-half feet long, and then immediately flew into the air again, and when about 75 or 100 feet high, a death rattle occurred in which the rattler was victoriously having bitten the crow on the neck. The two combatants fell to the ground and the passengers on the train ran into the field and killed the snake.

The Year Expired. The year that was given Neil S. Phelps, of Grand Rapids, by his creditors in which to repair his financial losses expired Saturday, with Phelps' disappearance. His stock in various companies is held by local banks for security, as is also his life insurance policy for $50,000. The latter, however, is not particularly valuable as long as it remains unknown whether or not Phelps is alive. There seems to be no clues on the situation.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD

HORRORS OF WAR.

Fearful Suffering in Port Arthur Beyond Description.

A letter is made public from a Russian in Port Arthur, dated Oct. 27, in which the writer declares that it would need the pen of a Zola or the brush of Verestchagin to picture the awfulness of the siege. The letter continues: "The uncertainty of it all is that men meek death in utter silence. One sees the ferocest of fights but hears no sound. One moonlight night at Etse mountain I watched an assault of a ghostly mass of moving figures, through which continual lanes were made by our guns, admitting glimpses of scenes behind. These gaps were closed up as if by magic and the masses surged onward while our men, forsaking the trenches, sought the shelter of the forts. On they came until, when they were close up to us, the mines exploded and the earth opened. Bodies were hurled high into the air and sank again in earth. Hands clutched rifles, and in the moonlight the bayonets looked like fireworks shooting upwards and ascending point downwards into the bodies of men. I dream of the sight even now. All the inventions of military genius are not used to daunt the Japanese, who fight with Titanic energy. Our soldiers are gladiators and great-hearted heroes. The last sortie of the fleet failed because of inability to repair vessels previously damaged."

"We have not a single bottle of anesthetic left. Just think what agony the wounded must endure. The food is of the coarsest and even that is becoming scarce, while disease is rife and sanitary conditions are deplorable. It is impossible to repair the ships with our scant resources, but we are all determined to hold out, come what will, in the hope of relief. For every man we lose our foes believe the loss of a hundred."

Port Arthur's Condition. Slowly but steadily the Japanese are smashing the defenses of Port Arthur, paying with the lives of hundreds of the brave sons of Nippon for every Russian position taken. Now is throwing fresh battalions against the well-worn Russian garrison in the steady stream, and the resistance of Stoessel's heroes is gradually growing weaker under the fearful hammering. Japanese officers who have returned from the front to Dalny are quoted as saying that there is practically no hope for the city, and that the bomb proofs and fortifications. Magar.

Worth Millions. Another effort is to be made by expectant heirs to reclaim a large strip of Manhattan island. The claimants all reside in southern states and number 150. They are headed by J. T. Cowan, of Dallas, Tex., and are descendants of Andrew Hartsfield, who in 1795 leased to the city of New York 100 acres west of Central Park, to be divided into 300 lots and numbered one to One Hundred and Twenty-sixth streets. This property is estimated today to be worth $500,000,000, and was leased for a period of 99 years and a day, for a consideration of $1 an acre. The heirs, on of whom is a United States senator, claim to have the original lease.

NARROW ESCAPE.

President Roosevelt's Horse Gave Him a Serious Fall.

President Roosevelt, in one of his wild cross country rides Sunday, the 23rd ultimo, was thrown violently over the head of his horse and lay unconscious for some moments on a country road five or six miles out in Maryland, with no one near to give him assistance. Secret service men left him at the district line and his military orderly was not with him that day.

Far out in the country the president found several level pastures, across which he spurred his horse, taking the fences with a rush. Beyond one of the fences he struck a sunken road, and in getting into this at full speed, the horse stumbled and the president took a violent header.

He lay in the road for several moments unconscious, while his horse patiently waited by the roadside. Finally he came to and succeeded in remounting. The fall caused a great lump on the right side of the president's head and a long but shallow scalp wound above the right ear, where his head had struck on a stone. The cut extended down to the forehead and evidences of it are still there.

President Roosevelt ordered that a word be said about the accident. He retired as soon as he reached the White House. The cut was dressed and applications were used to reduce the swelling. He was at his office the following day, but for the next three days only his intimate friends were admitted to the private office. It was explained that he was very busy.

Mrs. James Ellison, Richmond, Va., offered to swap a kiss for a cook stove, and the dealer accepted. He took the kiss, but refused to deliver the stove. The woman sued and got the property.

Gen. Emilio Nunez, governor of Havana who is in Washington, says the situation in Cuba is splendid, and that foreign capital is coming in rapidly in search of safe and productive investments. The government is devoting large sums to the building of public roads, vice in every form has decreased, and there has been an enormous increase of public and private schools. Regarding the reciprocity treaty, Gen. Nunez said its moral effect had been great, but it was yet too early to calculate the advantages due from it.

Gen. Nunez said its moral effect had been great, but it was yet too early to calculate the advantages due from it.

IT IS DOOMED.

The Japs Can Take It At Any Time Chosen.

Reliable advices are that Port Arthur is doomed to fall at any moment, as the Japanese now occupy positions which place the east side of the town at their mercy. The last assault has gained for them positions which insure their ability to enter the main east fort whenever they are ready. The Japanese have not occupied the main forts and highest points of the east hills, but they occupy in overwhelming numbers positions which will enable them to drive the Russians back whenever they desire. When the Japanese occupy the east port ridge they will completely dominate the other Russian forts with their artillery.

It is believed that the Japanese, if the Russians do not surrender now they will be capable of prolonging the fighting by making their final stand at Liaotai promontory and Tiger's Tail for a month longer, with the mere hope of prolonging the struggle. Long before the second Pacific squadron arrives in the Pacific the Japanese flag, it is now believed, will wave over the wrecked citadel. This will end Vice-roy Alexieff's dream of an unconquerable city.

Michigan Citizens Testify Gladly.

It is testimony like the following that has placed "the old Quaker Remedy" so far above competitors. When people right here at home raise their voice in praise there is no room left for doubt. Read the public statement of a Michigan man.

James Marshall, of Paw Paw, Number 1 Rural Delivery Mail Carrier, says: "To speak of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills in such terms of praise as they deserve would be to use expressions having the appearance of extravagance. When I procured them at E. B. Longwell's drug store I had a severe pain in the small of my back across the loins. It was always worse if I took cold or over-exerted myself and sometimes my sufferings can scarcely be described. I noticed that the kidney secretions were irregular, often highly colored and at times full of acid. This had continued about two years and I used every remedy that came to my notice, but got little if any benefit from them. At last I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I had trusted the remedy would do me good, but was not prepared for the great benefit which they soon brought. I could notice the good effect after taking a few doses, and by the time I had used three-fourths of a box the pain in my back passed out of existence, the kidney secretions became natural and I am enjoying better health than I have for years. Doan's Kidney Pills are worth their weight in gold."

Sold for 50 cents per box by all dealers. Foster-McIlburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.
