

Gagetown may not be able to afford sewer

Gagetown has been awarded $1.256 million in federal and state funds to pay the major portion of the cost of construction of a sanitary sewer and sewage treatment system.

The project may be more trouble than it's worth for village residents, however, due to the heavy costs they will have to pay, but they may not have a choice.

Gagetown is under orders from the Michigan Water Resources Commission to end the flow of raw and semi-treated sewage that flows from septic tanks into storm sewers and then into the Shebeon Drain.

The village council voted Monday evening to accept the federal grant of $1,177,800 and the state grant of $78,250, but that doesn't mean it will undertake the project, according to Village President Bill Downing.

Notification the federal grant had been awarded came three weeks ago. Notification of awarding of the state grant of $78,250 was received last week.

The federal share pays 75 percent of the "eligible costs" under the rules established by Washington. The state money pays 5 percent, leaving the remainder to be paid by Gagetown residents.

The kicker, Downing said, is that the village must also pay for portions of the project not eligible for state and federal funding, which brings the local share to a total of about $600,000.

It was originally proposed that Gagetown could borrow money from the Farmers Home Administration to pay off the local costs, the loan to be repaid at 5 percent a year over 40 years.

However, Downing said, the Reagan Administration is proposing eliminating such FHA loans and without such money, "There's just no way people can afford it."

Having to borrow the money from private sources, due to the higher interest rate and shorter payback period required, would put the cost of the project beyond the reach of what village residents can afford.

Gagetown might owe $90,000 a year to pay off the bonds, he said. In comparison, the village's entire 1981-82 budget is only $67,650.

Downing also questioned whether the village could even find a buyer for its bonds. With only 151 buildings in the village and Gagetown not being particularly wealthy, financial institutions might consider them too risky an investment to buy.

Downing didn't want to say what village residents might have to pay in connection fees to the sanitary sewers and the monthly fee to pay for the project lest persons become too worried.

The council met last week with engineer Rick Knop of Edmonds Engineering Inc., of Bay City, which is planning the project, to discuss how it will be able to pay for

Contamination found in wells of 3 more Doerr Road homes

Walbro Corp. has been asked by the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to provide additional evidence that its Garfield Street plant is not the source of contamination found in wells of homes along Doerr Road.

Occupants of two homes on Doerr were advised by the Tuscola County Health Department Jan. 8 to stop using their water for drinking and cooking because trichloroethylene (TCE) had been found in their well water, in amounts of 18 and 350 parts per billion.

Occupants of a third home were told the same thing Feb. 3 because four chemical compounds, related to TCE, were found in the well water.

Occupants of three more homes on Doerr, north of the original three, were advised by the Health Department last week to reduce their consumption of water because very minute quantities of chemicals were found in their well water. None of the chemicals were TCE.

The six homes are all close to Garfield Street.

The situation was reviewed in Lansing Friday by representatives of the ground water compliance section of the DNR; Bill Ewald of Walbro; representatives of the testing firm hired by Walbro, Hydro Research Co., and county Health Department sanitarian Dale Lipar.

The TCE and other chemicals found in the homes was discovered when sampling of their well water was done as a precautionary measure in connection with testing to determine whether the intended seepage from Walbro's underground disposal pit behind its main plant on Garfield had contaminated the groundwater.

The DNR ordered the firm in July, 1979, to stop using the pit to dispose of its liquid chemical wastes from its manufacturing operation. Since then, Walbro has had to pay a private firm to haul the waste away for proper disposal in the Detroit area. The DNR ordered Walbro to have test wells sunk to determine whether there had been any contamination resulting from use of the seepage pit.

THE DNR PRESENTED test results Friday that showed several chemical compounds had been found in the samples taken from the test wells.

According to Lipar, Ewald said Walbro will admit responsibility for the presence of chemicals found that it has used, such as styrene, used in a cleaning compound, but the firm has never used TCE or other compounds found in the homes.

The DNR officials then asked Walbro to present within two weeks a plan on how it will show it has not used any TCE.

Probably, Lipar said, that will require sinking of another test well, close to and west of the seepage pit. The other test wells were farther away.

If TCE isn't found, that will indicate it is coming from a source other than the Walbro plant.

Once the results from the new test well are known, it will be up to the DNR and Walbro to find a solution to clean up contamination found from chemical compounds that the firm used.

The company will have to present a plan to the state agency on how it will resolve the problem, Lipar said, which might require pumping out groundwater in the area, removing contaminated soil or installing a dike to prevent further seepage.

SAMPLING OF WATER took place about a month ago in the three homes just added to the list of where contamination has been found. Test results became available last week. The results showed chloroform, perchloroethylene and trichloroethane, but only in the very minute amounts of 1-2 parts per billion, none of which Walbro is using, according to the firm. No TCE was found.

Based on those results, the occupants were advised to reduce consumption of water from their wells.

The Health Department will be taking water samples from more homes, south of the original three on Doerr and on Koepfgen Road, south of the Center B Drain, about 6 mile south of M-81, a half-mile west of Doerr.

The samples won't be taken until the first week in June because that is the earliest the state Health Department lab in Lansing will have the time to test them. Once the samples are taken, it will take 2-3 weeks to get the results back.

If the new samples come back negative, Lipar said, that will indicate there is a central source for the TCE, instead of it coming from the homes themselves.

TCE is used in some household cleaning products, but according to the sanitarian, a lot would have to be used to get the concentrations found in the original two homes.

Witness vs Tune fired four times at murder victim

Randy Tune fired two blasts from his double-barreled shotgun at Tommy Lee Smith, reloaded his weapon and fired two more shots, the key witness testified at Tune's preliminary examination Monday.

Tune, 22, of Saginaw, is charged with first degree murder in the June 4, 1980, shooting death of Smith, 39, who was killed while fishing near Quanicassee.

Tune was arrested at his home April 22.

At the conclusion of the 5½ hour examination, Prosecutor Artis Noel made a motion that the defendant be bound over to circuit court for trial on the charge.

Judge Richard F. Kern granted the motion. Arraignment before Circuit Judge Patrick R. Joslyn is scheduled May 18. It was reported Tuesday, Tune's attorney plans to waive arraignment for his client, which would mean the next step will be a pretrial hearing, at which a trial date will be set.

The key witness of 11 called by Noel was Linda Williams, first cousin and at the time of the shooting, friend of Tune.

She testified she was in the car when he shot at Smith. She said Tune, who had been driving, got out of the car, fired twice. "Then he broke the gun open, closed it and shot two more times."

Tune is white. Smith was black.

Mrs. Williams, who has been granted immunity from prosecution by Noel in exchange for her testimony, said the day before the shooting, Tune's brother, Donald, had been "beat up by blacks" and was hospitalized.

That evening, she, Tune and some others, including his father, Robert Tune, went to a Saginaw bar. There, Tune said he wanted to get even.

When they returned to the Tune home -- he lived with his parents -- after the bar closed, at 2 a.m., he said he wanted to look for or kill "a nigger." He took a shotgun, went outside and fired at a car coming down the street.

She and someone else then took the gun away. Mrs. Williams did not know whether Tune hit the car.

AT 2 P.M. JUNE 4, SHE further testified, she returned to the Tune home, where the defendant said he wanted her to take him to Quanicassee so he could check some animal traps. They went in her car.

They ended up on Van Buren Road, where Tune stopped the car on the roadway when he saw a black man (Smith) fishing. She quoted Tune as saying, "Watch me scare this nigger."

She said she then saw Tune fire, the victim go down, and Tune reload and fire again. He then got back in the car and "took off fast."

Noel said other evidence gathered by detectives led to Mrs. Williams, who is divorced, that she might know something. They first met with her about November. "Williams provided the piece to the puzzle, the answer who did it and why," he said.

Tune's attorney, Patrick Brady of Bay City, probed her testimony but did not attempt to overturn it, which is rarely done at preliminary examinations. The attorney did not call any defense witnesses.

In a preliminary examination, it is only necessary for the prosecution to show a crime has been committed and that there is adequate evidence that the person charged should be tried. It is not necessary to prove the person committed the crime.

Two witnesses called to the stand by Noel, Tune's father and a friend of Tune's, Robert Smith, both evoked the fifth amendment against possible self-incrimination in refusing to answer his questions.

That led to arguments between Noel and Brady over whether the two had the right to invoke the fifth amendment.

THE FIRST WITNESS called by the prosecutor was George Davis, who went fishing with Smith after they finished work.

He testified he was about a quarter-mile away when the shooting took place. "All I heard was boom, boom, boom, like that." He thought he had heard three shots, though at that time, he wasn't sure what they were.

When he came up to his friend, "he was lying like he was asleep." He then went up to two other fishermen he had encountered earlier. They went to a nearby house, where the occupant called the sheriff's department and then drove the trio back to the murder scene.

The five witnesses who followed Davis on the stand, two policemen, two doctors and an ambulance driver, testified to establish there had been a murder and that Smith was the victim.

The other two witnesses called were another friend of Tune's and the victim's widow, Ikey, who was the last to testify. The widow is the mother of a daughter who was 12 at the time of her father's death.

Tune, dressed in a blue sweatshirt and gray cord-uroy jeans, sat quietly throughout the proceeding, which began at 2:30 p.m. and continued until 9, with an hour off for dinner.

When the preliminary examination was over, he was returned to the county jail, where he is being held without bond.

Hoffman survives as truck gets wet

Kell Arlington Hoffman, 30, of 3579 Warner Road, Cass City, was hospitalized after his truck went flying off Elmwood Road Tuesday, April 28, and landed upside down in the Cass River.

The accident took place at 7:10 p.m. He was released from Hills and Dales General Hospital the following day.

Hoffman told Caro state police he lost control of his truck when he attempted to pick up his cigarette, which had fallen on the floor.

He was westbound on Elmwood, east of Cemetery Road. Troopers said the truck went off the road on a curve. It traveled 75 feet through the air and landed on its roof, partially submerged, on the west side of the river.

Hoffman was ticketed on a charge of careless driving.

Dennis R. Karr, 20, of Cass City Road, Ugly, was treated and released from Hills and Dales after a 2:50 a.m. accident Sunday.

Tuscola sheriff's deputies reported he was headed northeast on M-81, fell asleep and went off the north side of the road at the big curve at Cass City Road.

He was cited on a charge of careless driving.

Bradley Gray, 7, was treated and released from Hills and Dales after a 12:15 p.m. accident Saturday.

He was a passenger in a

Effect unclear as class ends for pregnant girls

The demise of the Tuscola Alternative Program for Pregnant Students (TAPPS) may mean more pregnant students in regular high schools or it may mean more students dropping out of school.

It's too soon to tell.

The Tuscola Intermediate School District (TISD) began the program in 1975. Instead of continuing in their regular high schools (or leaving school), it gave pregnant girls the option of attending the TAPPS program at the TISD building in Caro. After giving birth, they usually stay until the end of the semester, then return to their home school.

In addition to keeping the girls up to date on their school work, they also receive prenatal and child care training. The staff for the program consists of a coordinator, teacher, registered nurse and social worker.

The program will end at the conclusion of the current school year. According to William Pratt, TISD director of vocational and career education, it was the superintendents of the nine local school districts within the intermediate district who decided to end TAPPS, because their districts could not afford the additional cost anymore.

For 1980-81, Pratt budgeted TAPPS at $37,773. Actual expenses the first semester were $18,886. The state Department of Education picked up $3,484 of that cost.

Of the remainder, the TISD paid one-third, $5,134, and the local districts, a total of two-thirds, $10,288.

RUMMAGE SALE Saturday, May 16, Cass City Presbyterian church. Doors open 9 a.m. 14-5-7-2

Each local district was billed on the basis of the number of students in the program, the first semester, times the number of days they were in it. The rate was $12.80 per day, whereas if the student had stayed in her home school, there wouldn't be any additional cost. Pratt said the ISD was willing to pay its one-third share of the cost in 1981-82 had the superintendents been able to come up with the money for their share.

WHAT NEXT?

It is a matter of conjecture whether students in the future who become pregnant will stay in school or drop out.

Cass City High School Principal Russ Richards said the pregnant students he knows of have chosen to enter the TAPPS program

Once a student reaches age 16, under state law, he or she can drop out of school without giving a reason, so he has no way of knowing if a female student is dropping out of school because of pregnancy unless her condition is obvious.

He said the number varies, but as many as 8-10 students from Cass City have entered the TAPPS in a year.

With the demise of the program, he said pregnant students will have to attend regular classes. Since prior to the start of TAPPS, some pregnant students stayed in school, he feels it likely some will do so starting next year, but as before, some will drop out.

At Kingston High School, counselor James Priest said, a study was recently made of girls who became

"If It Fitz..."

The price is too high

By Jim Fitzgerald

While we were sitting in a CBS-TV studio in Hollywood, waiting for the show to start, a young man leaned into my view, looked me over closely and said: "Tell me the truth. You've never seen 'Price Is Right' on television, have you?"

I confessed I not only had never seen the program, I'd never even heard of it before that very day, and what's more, the few TV game shows I had watched were so bad they made my sock unravel.

"I knew it. I can always tell," said the young man, who was a CBS employee. If he worked in a theater, he would be called an usher. But people who usher in TV studios are called pages. I don't know why this is. I wanted to ask the young man why he wasn't an usher, but before I could he turned and walked away.

"That's the other side of the page," I told my wife, pointing at his back.

The page's acute observacrowd's reaction to the warm-up entertainment provided by Johnny Olsen, the program's triple-tongued announcer. To get the studio audience in a happy mood before the taping began, he told several jokes concerning older people's alleged lack of sexual prowess, and the resulting laughter was uproarious. Olsen didn't say anything remotely funny, but everyone laughed as though Jack Benny had been reincarnated. Astounding. The only explanation is that the entire audience was in California on vacation. Because of the high cost of vacations, tourists are determined to have a good time no matter what. If they'd been born earlier, the tourists who laughed at Olsen might have chuckled while going down with the Titanic.

The program itself is a fascinating exhibition of orchestrated greed. Selected members of the audience are loudly instructed by Olsen to "C'MON DOWN," an order which causes them to leap screaming from their seats and trample everyone nearby while running to the stage where they trade spasms for prizes.

I am told that "Price Is Right" is aired for an hour every weekday and millions of people watch it. Astounding. Which brings us to the second question prompted by the inquiring page. If I think TV game shows are so dumb, why did I watch one being taped?

My answer is borrowed from the intrepid people who climb mountains. I watched "Price Is Right" because it was there. And that same day, climbing the highest peak, I watched the taping of the last "Laverne and Shirley" show of the current season. It was bad enough to make even tourists frown.

Take it from me, it's not easy to be intrepid in TV land. How would you like to climb a mountain while your socks unravel?

The Haire Net

It's likely that the current visit of Artrain will be the last opportunity for Thumb folks to experience what it has to offer.

Given today's economic climate, I'd guess that funding for the train will be hard to come by in years ahead.

Cass City, of course, has been fortunate to have not one, but two visits of Artrain, while most similar communities have had none.

That's due to two things. The first, and most important, is the work that Holly Althaver has done with Artrain on the state and national level.

Almost as important is the Bacon, eggs, potatoes, muffins, sweet rolls, apple juice and coffee.

It was a bountiful breakfast, but there wouldn't be any breakfast if it were not for the American farmer or if too many restrictions are placed on him.

That was the message presented last Thursday at a breakfast sponsored by Tuscola County Farm Bureau Women to promote Agriculture Understanding Day held at the Farm Bureau building in Caro.

Invited were directors of the county Farm Bureau, representatives of the county Board of Commissioners, Sheriff's Department and Cooperative Extension Service, some ministers, high school agriculture teachers and the media. About 20 attended, the greatest number being from the cooperation she has received from the community. Both times that Artrain was here, we've pitched in to help make the week a success.

It would be nice if the Artrain could go on and on and we could look forward to a visit every five years or so. Nice, but not essential.

If the current conservatism in government continues, then it would be hard to justify spending taxpayer funds on Artrain.

Not when food stamps are being cut. Not when federal aid to education appears on the rocks. Not when social security benefits are in jeopardy.

Don't construe this to indicate that Artrain and its value is disparaged by this. Not at all. Art and all its forms are important and will survive as it has for thousands of years.

Artrain's purpose was to acquaint persons with art to which they may not have been exposed before.

There are other routes for that, not as good, surely, but available. Start with the schools. There's exposure there and talent there, too. It was on exhibit Monday in the Evening for the Arts at Cass City School.

It was certainly on display when the Regional Industrial Arts show was held here. Some of the projects there were creative, and talented. What else is art?

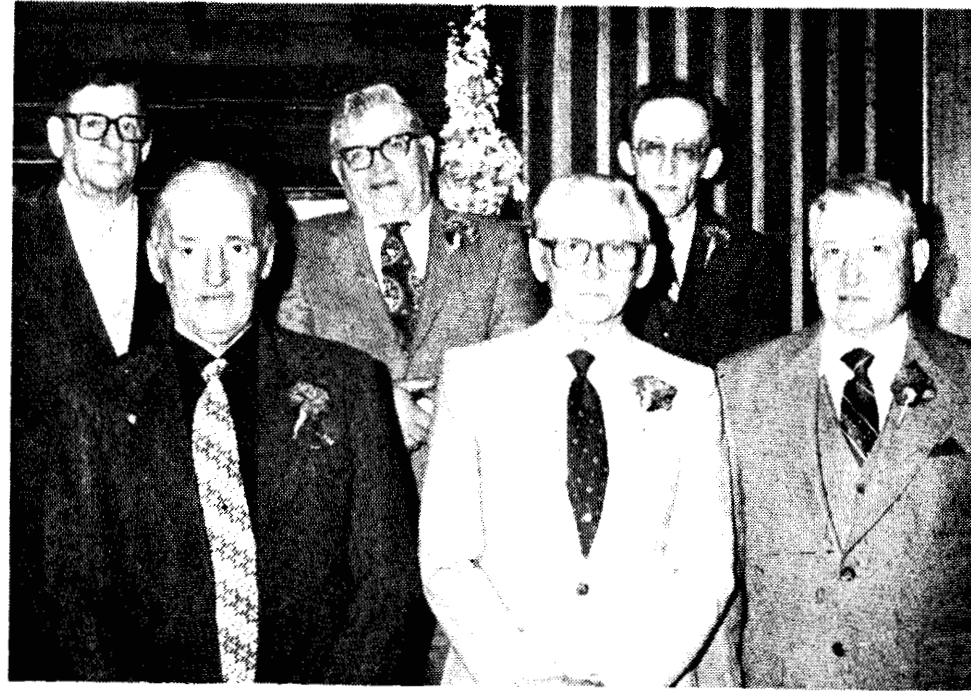

As Artrain shows us, you don't have to grab a paint brush to be artistic.

Less than 100 miles away in the Detroit Museum of Art is some of the finest art in the world on permanent display. Periodically traveling displays of world masterpieces are exhibited.

If Artrain dies, inflation is the disease that will have strangled it.

Another incident of the lessening of the quality of life that economists have been preaching to us since our production slipped behind that of foreign competitors.

Art may not be brought to us anymore but we can get to it easily and inexpensively. Perhaps more of us will, because Artrain was in the Thumb to lead the way.

Breakfast stresses role of farmers

Farm Bureau.

Before breakfast was served, a slide-tape presentation was shown, entitled "The Case of the Empty Plate." It was prepared by the Michigan Farm Bureau information and public relations division.

It pointed out that only slightly more than 3 percent of the U.S. population are farmers and that agriculture, often called the stabilizing factor in the Michigan economy, poured $10 billion into the state's economy last year.

The main purpose of the film was to explain what would happen to agriculture -- and to the breakfast about to be served -- if critics had their way.

Without insecticide and fungicide sprays, there would be no cherries and no cherry juice.

Farmers become concerned whenever cutbacks in agricultural research are proposed. The U.S. only spends half as much for agricultural research as does the Soviet Union.

The bacon disappeared from the plate shown in the program out of ill-founded fear that nitrates cause cancer.

The butter, milk and eggs disappeared because of "food fadism," about concerns over cholesterol. There is no evidence that eating eggs increases chances of heart attack, it was claimed, and butter, milk and eggs improve nutrition.

The strawberry jam was taken away because of "horror stories grossly exaggerated" about the migrant farmworkers who picked them. It was claimed that some workers, paid by the amount picked, can earn 4-6 times the minimum wage and that farm workers are in danger of pricing themselves out of the market.

Politics, the presentation also pointed out, influences the price of agricultural products. When markets for American wheat are taken away, the price tumbles and farmers cut production.

Other concerns expressed were about land preservation, energy supplies and inflation.

All of the items served for breakfast, mentioned at the beginning, were Michigan products except for the coffee.

Novesta protests increase in fire protection fees

The Novesta Township Board voted Monday evening to send a letter to the Elkland Township Board, protesting the latter's recent increase in fire fees.

The Elkland board voted April 13 to raise the fee it charges townships which contract with it for fire protection from $150 annually to $175. It was the first increase in three years. For the 36 sections of Novesta, that means an increase from $5,400 yearly to $6,300.

The reason for the letter, according to Novesta Clerk Nurse Kloc, is "because we think that's quite a bit to raise it at one time."

The township has received a letter from the state Department of Natural Resources, stating there are problems with raw sewage running from the drains in Deford into state waterways.

What happens next will probably be up to the DNR, Mrs. Kloc said.

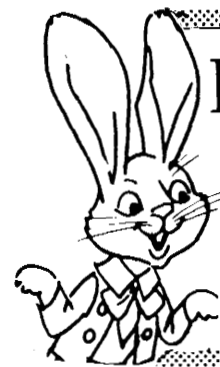

Howard Kitchen and his son Brian complained to the board about flooding that occurs in their yards because of a ditch that needs cleaning. The Kitchens live at the corner of Gilford and Kingston Roads, on the Kingston side of the township line.

Howard Kitchen said he had complained to his township officials, who sent him to the county Road Commission, but he has yet to get anywhere in getting the problem resolved.

The Novesta board decided to send letters to the Kingston Township Board and Road Commission, stating the problem is not within its jurisdiction to solve.

The board reviewed its insurance policies with insurance agent Alan Kloc, but decided no changes were needed.

Truth may be mighty -- but a great deal of it is suppressed.

Anyone care to try to top the mark set Sunday by Janet Pyonk of Deckerville Road and friend James L. Carter of Detroit?

Based on the amount of string used, they got a kite up in the air 1,200-1,500 feet. The string got caught in a tree. Monday morning the kite was still flying.

Pyonk and Carter have a long way to go to top the world record. According to the 1980 Guinness Book of World Records, the highest a single kite has flown is 28,000 feet; for multiple kites, 31,955 feet.

Mrs. Barbara Bush reports that she learned an easy way to report a fire too late to help her when her home burned recently.

You get the department, Mrs. Bush said she learned, by simply dialing 872-FIRE (3473).

That's not news, of course, and it has been pointed out by the firemen more than once. We report it to bring it to your attention again for use when a moment saved could make all the difference.

Did you catch that article the other day that said that the cheapest car sold at the end of this decade will be over $26,000?

Those type escalating price stories are not that unusual. The difference is when I read them a few years ago I tended to laugh it off as pie in the sky thinking.

But now I believe, I believe. Unfortunately.

PEDALING AROUND Of women and cars.

By Mike Eliasohn

I was maybe 15 when I got a ride with a woman in an exotic car.

She was a friend of my sister and the car was a beat-up old Alfa Romeo roadster. I don't remember the woman — after all, she was older than me — but I do remember the car.

I have never had much luck with women and cars. The ones I meet usually drive old Pontiacs and for reasons I cannot explain, the cars are always brown. Usually, they inherited them from their fathers after they (the daughters) graduated from college.

I did meet a young woman once who didn't own a car. Unfortunately, she didn't care for my Volkswagen beetle and married some guy who owned a Corvette. I hope his fiberglass cracked.

About 1½ years ago, I wrote about a Ferrari Boxer, worth maybe $80,000 and capable of going 180 miles an hour (give or take a few), that was parked at an East Lansing stereo shop, getting a new radio installed.

While I was inside the shop, getting a new cart-ridge installed in my phono-graph, the man installing it commented to me, in reference to the Ferrari, "Can you imagine the women he must pick up in that thing?"

Maybe that is my problem. Any woman who would be turned on by an American Motors Gremlin, I wouldn't want.

I hate to let the cat out of the bag, but after almost 106,000 miles on my trusty Gremlin, it is about to be replaced. In fact, I may even be driving my new wheels by the time you read this.

Somehow, I can't imagine a woman being turned on by a Ford Escort, either.

The reason I am telling you all this is that I saw "A Change of Seasons" Friday.

That's the movie that stars Bo Derek and Anthony Hopkins in the hot tub. You've seen one nude couple in a hot tub, you've seen them all, but it sure beats a cold shower.

I have to admire Anthony Hopkins for his good taste.

Probably a lot of women who saw the movie thought Hopkins was a bum for abandoning his wife of 21 years for a college coed.

I think he showed excellent taste. I can't begrudge any man who would abandon his wife for a woman who owns a Porsche 911, current price about $25,000. (In the movie, Bo's father was rich. He drove a Rolls Royce.)

I can't see throwing out a good woman for someone who drives a Chevrolet. But for a Porsche, some sins can be forgiven.

Anthony Hopkins obviously cared for great lines or what some would call a classy chassis.

With a Porsche 911, he got them.

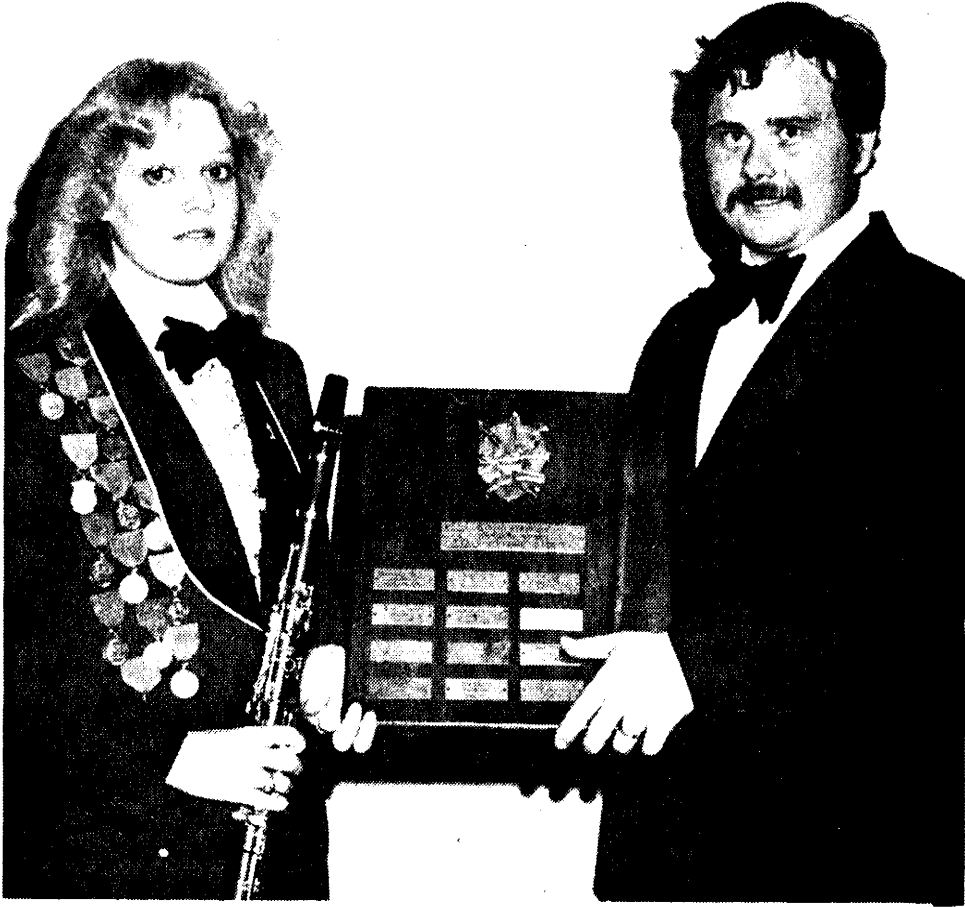

Not only that, but it handles well, too.

As for Bo Derek, she abandons her professor friend during a mid-semester vacation and drives off in the Porsche.

I'll bet she didn't get an A in his class.

EVENING WITH THE ARTS -- The concert choir, directed by James Hobbs, sang seven songs at the annual Evening With the Arts Monday at Cass City High School. Other musical groups to perform were the vocal ensemble and the concert band and symphony band.

AWARD WINNER -- Lonnie Wilson was the recipient Monday evening of the Harold Ferguson Memorial Award, presented by band director Thomas Clair to the outstanding senior in the high school band, as selected by her fellow band members. The clarinet player is the daughter of George and Glenda Wilson of Gagetown. She will be attending Central Michigan University.

TAMRA HEINS performed a humorous monologue at the Evening with the Arts. The junior is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Heins.

Students display artistic talent

Cass City High School students demonstrated their artistic talents Monday evening at the annual Evening with the Arts.

The program began at 7:30 p.m. with the concert band, recent recipient of a first division rating at the state band and orchestra festival, performing five selections.

The symphony band followed with five numbers. The program then moved from the gym to the cafeteria, where teacher Dennis Meck presented the writing contest awards.

Junior division winners (grades 9-10) were: Non-fiction -- Tom Tuckey, first; Chris Langenburg, second.

Poetry -- Barb Craig, first; Deanna Hempton, second; Colleen Whittaker, third.

Short story -- Randy Nicholas, first; Paula Herron, second; Sherri Horner, third.

Senior division winners (grades 11-12) were: Non-fiction -- Rebecca McClaren, first; Phil Clark, second; Michelle Palmer, third.

Poetry -- Dave Shaw, first; John Scollon, second; Carol Dillon, third.

Short story -- Susanna Kappen, first; Arlene Peddie, second; Craig Tonti, third.

A forensics demonstration and skit followed.

Ending the evening were the vocal ensemble, which sang two songs, and the concert choir, which sang seven selections.

In addition to the performances, industrial education, home economics, art and drafting students had projects on display and Foreign Language Club members served Spanish desserts.

Ellington electors to view voting method

Ellington township residents will be voting May 19 for the first time on computer punch cards, the new system having replaced paper ballots.

Persons who would like a preview look at the new system and how it works are invited to the Tuesday township board meeting, which starts at 7:30 p.m.

Township Clerk Clayton Turner will be at the township hall by 6:30, for anyone who would like to see it prior to the meeting.

Rites held Friday for Mary Lester

Mary Theresa Lester, 67, of Cass City, died suddenly, Tuesday, April 28, at Hills and Dales General Hospital. She was born Dec. 20, 1913, in Bannister, the daughter of Cyril and Anna (Jurcak) Kristin.

Miss Kristin married Theodore Lester Aug. 19, 1937, in Romeo. After their marriage, they made their home in Detroit and Almont. Mrs. Lester moved to Novesta township after the death of her husband March 23, 1971.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Joyce Parks, Mrs. Barbara Smith and Cheryl Lester, all of Cass City; three sons, David Lester of Metamora, Edward Lester of Imlay City and Richard Lester of Caro; three brothers, Cyril Kristin and Victor Kristin, both of East Lansing, and Benjamin Kristin of Bannister; two sisters, Mrs. Keelan Nixon of Harrison and Mrs. Robert Wilson of Corunna, and 12 grandchildren. One daughter, Virginia, and two brothers, John and Bob, preceded her in death.

A wake service was held last Thursday evening at Little's Funeral Home, Cass City.

Funeral mass was conducted Friday morning at St. Pancratius Catholic church of Cass City, with Father Joseph Morales officiating.

Burial was in Ellington township cemetery, Caro.

Local phone calls to cost 10% more

General Telephone cus-tomers will begin paying a 10 percent surcharge on local service and some other services because of an inter-im rate increase granted by the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC).

The surcharge took effect Friday.

The MPSC granted Gen Tel a $7.1 million interim in-crease; however, General Telephone will realize only about $3.7 million of the $7.1 million after taxes, accord-ing to Donald G. Prigmore, president of the company.

The MPSC will rule later on the remainder of the com-pany's $28.7 million rate re-quest, made in September, 1980.

The 10 percent surcharge will apply to local service and non-recurring charges such as for ordering service changes and for premise visits. The surcharge will not apply to such services as long distance and calls from coin phones.

This 9-year-old from Vas-sar needs the compani-ship of a man who is willing to share a small part of his interests on a one-to-one basis. Are you willing to share a little of your time

Correction

It was police officer Don-ald Miller who went insi the burning home of Mr. and Mrs. David Bush April 13, not officer Ken Schott, as was reported in the village council story in last week's Chronicle.

Paying as they go won't allow some people to travel as fast as they are accus-tomed.

Announcement

I am announcing that I will be a write-in candidate for a seat on the Cass City board of education in the upcoming June election. I believe it is time for the Evergreen and Deford districts to unite together and elect a board member who will represent them on the board. The two school districts, Evergreen and Deford, contribute 275 elementary students and maybe that many junior high and high school students. Plus the two districts contribute approximately 22 million dollars in tax base to the Cass City district. Therefore we are important enough to the total Cass City district that we deserve a seat on the school board. If the people in the afore districts are going to be asked for more millage on top of inflated valuation then we must have a voice in the management. It is time to give the kids of Evergreen what the kids of the Campbell School have taken for granted for years.

Sincerely,
Fred Matthews

Need items for 4-H fund raiser

Donations of useable items are being sought for the Tuscola county 4-H small stocks department rum-mage sale, bake sale and auction.

Proceeds will be used for construction of a building on the Caro fairgrounds to house poultry, rabbits, goats and other small animals during the Tuscola County Fair. It will replace the antiquated and too small converted cattle barn presently used.

The rummage and bake sale will be Friday, May 15, from 9 a.m.-9 p.m. and the next day from 9 a.m.-noon. Anything not sold by then will be auctioned off starting at 1 p.m. Location will be the green 4-H crafts building on the fairgrounds.

Persons with items to donate can call Wallace Northon at 673-7576 or Linda Perrin at 872-4186 or bring them to the crafts building this Saturday from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. or Thursday, May 14, during those same hours. Donations are tax deduct-ible.

The goal, according to Mrs. Perrin, is to raise $3,500. If that much is raised, hopefully at the sale, the fair board of directors will donate some money and some will come from the state. That should be enough to pay for the building, she said.

If the money is raised soon enough, the hope is to have the structure useable, even if not completed, in time for this year's fair. Proposed location will be in the vicinity of the present small stocks building.

HEALTH TIPS

Control only answer for high blood pressure

High blood pressure (also called hypertension) affects some 35 million people in the U.S. and is probably the largest single cause of heart attack, stroke and kidney disease, according to Dr. George Ritter, Lathrup Village cardiologist who is president of the Michigan Heart Association.

"The good news is that the vast majority of high blood pressure cases can be controlled. Not cured, mind you, but controlled. There's a big difference, and therein lies a lot of misunderstanding," he said.

"I think we've reached a point where most people understand that they have to do something about high blood pressure -- they can't just let it go untended. But too many patients believe that if they take their medication and at the next check-up their blood pressure is back down, they're cured. They're used to the 'miracle' drug that in a matter of days can clear up pneumonia, ear infections and other infectious illnesses.

"So they think the high blood pressure medication has done the same thing. They think, 'Well, this is just another prescription the doctor gave me and all his other prescriptions cured me, so this will, too,'" Dr. Ritter said.

"Unfortunately, that's just not the case with high blood pressure. Taking medication for it is usually something that has to be done for life. That's why controlling high blood pressure depends more on the patient than the doctor."

Some of the drugs have been known to have unpleasant or annoying side effects in certain patients. So for those people, it often seems a lot easier not to take the pills.

"If you are on medication for high blood pressure," said Dr. Ritter, "and you're having side effects, your doctor may be able to help you find one of the many other medications available which will not cause those side effects for you. Of course, many causes of high blood pressure respond to diet without the need for medication.

"The other problem with high blood pressure is that it almost never manifests itself with any symptoms, but is often discovered by a person's doctor during a routine medical exam. You can have high blood pressure for years and not know it. But uncontrolled high blood pressure can make a person a walking time bomb -- just waiting to have a heart attack or stroke," he said.

"Another misunderstanding about high blood pressure, arises from its name -- hypertension. Many people assume that you have to be an uptight, hyper, or tense person to have it. Nothing could be further from the truth," Ritter continued. "Granted, if you already have high blood pressure, being under stress may indeed make it worse. But you can be the calmest person in the world and still have it.

There are researchers all over the country, including several funded in Michigan, by the Michigan Heart Association, who are working to find the answers as to how the body controls its blood pressure. Until then, controlling high blood pressure is the only solution.

"Remember, Dr. Ritter concluded, "having your blood pressure checked regularly -- even if it has always been normal up to now -- is that important first step."

Program for senior citizens

Wednesday, May 20, the students of Betty Evans' speech class will present "Costumes and Customs from Around the World" at a 1:45 presentation at the new Unionville-Sebewaing High School on M-25.

Senior citizens are being invited to dress in their favorite costume while attending the Hawaiian Luau, the German singalong and the dancing and singing from Ireland, Poland, Mexico, Japan, and the United States.

A cast of 30 will sing and dance the Hukilau, Pearly Shells, Hawaiian war chant, "Du, Du Liegst Mir Im Herzen," "Lichtensteiner Polka," "O Du Lieber Augustin," plus there will be other activities. There is no charge for the program.

New books at the library

COSMOS, by Carl Sagan (non-fiction). This visually stunning book is about how science and civilization grew up together, told with all Sagan's remarkable ability to make scientific ideas both comprehensible and exciting. It traces in human terms the 15 billion years of cosmic evolution that have transformed matter into life and consciousness.

BEST EVIDENCE, by David S. Lifton (non-fiction). Many Americans still don't believe they have been told the truth about the Kennedy assassination. "Best Evidence" will attempt to prove them wrong. Lifton has supposedly uncovered a government plot to falsify critical evidence within hours of the murder. "Best Evidence" is investigative reporting, yet reads like a murder mystery. Lifton claims the "best evidence" was faked and answers the obvious questions: when, where, what, how.

COPING WITH DEATH AND DYING, by Elisabeth Kubler-Ross (non-fiction). Kubler-Ross focuses on the special needs of young children facing death. A special full-color insert of paintings by dying children and revealing dialogue with their parents accompany informative case histories of terminally ill youngsters. The Swiss-born American psychiatrist, credited with breaking down taboos concerning death and dying, encourages doctors, nurses, clergy, and family members never to lose sight of the terminally ill patient - child or adult as a vital human being and to learn from him or her about the final undeniable stages of life.

Fleenor spots open-trunk car, suspect nabbed

Daniel Lee Cooper, 26, of 6258 Schweger Road, has been charged with larceny over $100, in connection with the theft of tools and other items from a car early Friday.

He was arrested by Cass City police and lodged at the county jail. He appeared later that day before Magistrate Donald Smith, who set personal recognizance bond of $5,000. Cooper was released, with his arraignment before District Judge Richard F. Kern scheduled May 11.

Ray Fleenor of 4260 Woodland Avenue called the sheriff's department at 5:15 a.m. to report he had looked out his front window and saw a person driving away and the trunk of his car open.

He checked, found a tool box with tools, tool belt with hand tools, Freon tank and electric tester missing, and called police.

A half hour later, officer Donald Miller spotted the suspect vehicle on Garfield Street, being driven with its lights out. The car was stopped, the missing items -- later identified by Fleenor -- were observed and the driver of the car arrested.

At 7 a.m. Friday, Barbara Jean Geister, of 6651 Huron Street reported to Cass City police that a combination 8-track tape player and AM-FM radio and 12 8-track tapes were stolen from her car during the night.

The stolen items had been found earlier in the suspect car stopped in connection with the Fleenor theft.

OTHER ITEMS

Village police were called to Cass City Oil and Gas, 6407 Main Street, at 8 a.m. April 28 to investigate the theft of two fog lights removed during the night from a semi-truck and a battery from a tractor. The lights were valued at $70 and the battery at $20.

James L. May, 45, of 6631 Koepfen Road, was arrested by Cass City police at 6:50 p.m. April 28 on a charge of being a disorderly person after disturbances in the Cass Tavern and The Station on Main Street.

He was released from the county jail the following day after posting $50 bond. District court arraignment was scheduled May 11.

Village police investigated two reports Monday morning of vandalism. A light fixture in front of Coach Light Pharmacy, 6480 Main, was broken and a beer bottle was thrown against the Trend Vendors building, 4545 Ale Street, breaking a light.

Red Cross elects new officers

The Tuscola County Chapter of the American Red Cross has new officers for the next 12 months.

The officers were elected by the board of directors during the agency's recent reorganizational meeting in Caro.

Elected for one-year terms were: Mary Hoerlein, Vassar, chairman; Jim McLoskey, Caro, vice-chairman; Mary Lewis, Unionville, recording secretary; Jannette Stange, Millington, corresponding secretary, and Charles Spaulding, Caro, treasurer. They were each elected by unanimous vote.

Receiving special recognition at the meeting was Mary Alice Osgerby of Caro who served as chairman for the past three years. Even though she is stepping down as chairman, she said she will continue to remain active with the American Red Cross as a volunteer recruiter and program developer.

The Tuscola County Red Cross Board meets monthly with the meetings open to the public.

Wisembach charged for ramming police patrol car

Alan Lee Wisembach, charged with running into a sheriff's department patrol car March 22, stood mute at his arraignment in circuit court Monday on a charge of felonious driving.

Judge Patrick R. Joslyn entered a plea of innocent and scheduled a pretrial hearing June 1. Bond was continued.

Wisembach, 21, of 2322 Remington Road, Caro, is charged with running into the patrol car while the latter was parked along Darbee Road in Almer township during the early morning hours.

The two deputies and police cadet inside were treated and released from Caro Community Hospital. Also in circuit court Monday.

Cari Sue Brinkman, 20, of 3030 Leix Road, Caro, stood mute to a charge of larceny in a building, at a home on Northwood Drive, Caro, March 16.

A plea of innocent was entered and pretrial hearing scheduled. Bond was continued.

James E. Rader, 18, of 1139 Cemetery Road, Deford, was placed on three years' probation for delivery of marijuana. He was sentenced to 45 days in the county jail, plus two days already served, fined $800 and assessed $350 court costs.

He pleaded guilty to the charge March 16, to having sold marijuana to an undercover police officer Dec. 11 in Kingston township.

Kulish funeral Friday

Raymond Erwin Kulish, 77, of Cass City died Monday at Hills and Dales General Hospital.

He was born Aug. 15, 1903, in Elmer, west of Sandusky, the son of August and Mary (Cook) Kulish.

Kulish married Josephine Green Boring Nov. 9, 1923, in Waukegan, Ill. After their marriage, they made their home in Detroit, coming to Cass City in 1947.

He was a member of St. Michael's Catholic church of Wilmet. He served in the U.S. Navy.

Kulish is survived by his wife, Josephine; three daughters, Mrs. Peter (Helen) Shuler of Oxford, Mrs. Richard (Lillian) Uraue of Trenton, and Mrs. Ted (Evelyn) Marshall of Cass City; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Murray (Irene) Van Lone of Kenosha, Wis.; one stepson, Harold Boring of Satellite Beach, Fla.; two sisters, Mrs. William Guiger of Austin Center, and Mrs. Eric Owen of Royal Oak; 18 grandchildren, and 25 great-grandchildren. Two brothers, Albert and Arthur, and one sister, Mary, preceded him in death.

A wake service will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday at Little's Funeral Home, Cass City.

Funeral mass will be conducted at 10 a.m. Friday at St. Michael's with Father William J. O'Shea officiating. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

car driven by his father, Phillip Gray, 32, of 6773 Third Street.

Cass City police reported they were southbound on Woodland Avenue. Carol Jean Mosher, 42, of Caro, was northbound, failed to notice their car and started to turn left onto Houghton Street. The vehicles collided.

The two drivers, police said, complained of bumps on their head and were listed as "sought own treatment."

Steven L. Franks, 13, of 5254 Cedar Run Road, Cass City, was treated and released from Hills and Dales after a 3:45 p.m. accident April 23.

Deputies reported he was riding a mini-bike on private property behind 5222 Cedar Run and was "flipped off" the cycle.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

Ladies elect new officers at church

St. Pancratius Women's Council met Monday evening, May 4.

Election of officers was held. Agnes Zawilinski is president; Florence Schell, vice-president; Bunny Keyser, secretary, and Marion Weltin, treasurer.

The group plans to have a bake sale during Cass City's Sidewalk Sale. Kathy Diebel and Marion Turner are co-chairmen.

Members discussed holding the church bazaar, if a chairman is found.

A potluck dinner will be held at 6:30 at the June 1 meeting when installation of new officers will take place.

the sewer project.

The village president anticipates there will be a lot more such meetings, plus discussion with government officials and legislators, before something definite is decided.

If the project does proceed, Knop said construction might start in about a year. It would then take 1-1 1/2 years to complete.

The proposed project calls for piping sewage through sanitary sewer lines to two treatment lagoons.

Also at the council meeting Monday, the council decided to send letters to owners of vacant lots which need cleaning up, telling them to cut the weeds and/or remove trash.

Purchase of four new tires and shock absorbers for the village police car was approved.

Sieradzki was on third base with the potential tying run when Stec flied out to end it.

Randall was charged with the loss. She was relieved by Jill Root in the fourth. Belew went the distance for the Hatchet win.

A STRONG throw to catcher Beabe McLachlan nailed this St. Stephen runner in the opening game of the Cass City Invitational softball tourney. It was one of the few bright spots of the game as errors made it easy for the visitors.

Laurie pitches Owen-Gage to 2 wins over A-F

The standout pitching of Dana Laurie, including a no-hitter in the second game, sparked Owen-Gage's two softball wins over visiting Akron-Fairgrove Monday.

Laurie was the winning pitcher in the 20-2 opener. She struck out eight, walked five and surrendered two hits.

Losing pitcher Deidra Ballard struck out two, walked five and gave up 11 hits.

Becky Howard clobbered a triple and two singles for the winners; Heidi Rockefeller had a double and a single and Laurie had two singles.

Carla Young hit a triple

In the second game, won by Owen-Gage, 18-1, Laurie struck out six and walked one.

Ballard, relieved by Tracy Barriger, took the loss. They combined to strike out two, walk four and surrender 16 hits.

Terri Sontag contributed three singles for the Bulldogs; Howard, two doubles; Julie Andrakowicz, a double and a single, and Laurie, Julie Enderle and Jackie Kain, two singles each.

Owen-Gage, now 6-0 in the North Central D League, hosts Port Hope at Gagetown Thursday and North Huron Monday.

Owen-Gage advanced its league softball mark to 4-0, 6-0 overall, with two wins at Peck last Thursday.

The Bulldogs won the first game, 7-0. Dana Laurie went the distance to pick up the win, striking out seven in the process. She gave up three hits and walked two.

Terri Sontag and Julie Enderle each collected two singles for the Bulldogs and Heidi Rockefeller hit a double.

Losing pitcher Colleen Foley, who also pitched the entire game, struck out one, gave up three hits and walked four. Mandy Bullis hit a single and a triple for Peck.

Both teams committed four errors.

Owen-Gage won the nightcap, 13-8. Laurie, who has become the mainstay of her team's mound staff, started and lasted 2 1/2 innings, long enough to pick up the win. Before being relieved by Becky Howard. She was relieved by Rockefeller, who in turn surrendered the mound duties to Jackie Kain.

The quartet combined to strike out five and surrender 12 walks and three hits.

Losing pitcher Diane Seddon gave up 13 hits. She struck out two and walked five.

Julie Andrakowicz hit two singles and a double for the winners; Laurie, two singles; Howard, three singles; Karla Kretzschmer, two singles, and Rockefeller, two singles.

Foley hit two singles for Peck.

Caro wins last Invitational at Cass City track

Defending champion Caro won the over-all team trophy at the second and last Cass City Invitational track meet Saturday behind an outstanding performance by its boys' team.

Cass City finished second in the boys' competition and second over-all.

Frankenmuth girls won the girls' team trophy with 135 points.

Cass City's girls tied with Caro for fifth place in the seven-school competition, each with 33 points.

Among the boys, Caro was far in front with 159 points. Cass City scored 100½ points. Others finished in the following order: Vassar, 91; Lakers, 52½; Capac, 47; and Saginaw SSPP, 43 points.

The over-all results were: Caro, 192; Cass City, 133½; Capac, 132; Saginaw SSPP, 81; Lakers, 64½. Frankenmuth did not field a boys' team.

Caro's victory was paced by four outstanding performers who notched double victories.

Jim Schriber set a new track record in the discus with a toss of 135-7½ and also won the shot put with a toss of 45-6¼.

Kevin Sinchak won the high jump with a leap of 6-2 and the pole vault with a height of 12-3.

Mike Hartman took the 330 low hurdles and the 120 high hurdles.

Vince Pratt won the mile in 4:34.9 and the two-mile in 10:00.9.

Victim in the two events was Greg Bliss, Cass City's outstanding freshman distance runner, who finished second.

Cass City's only first place in the boys' competition was Bob Van Camp who won the 880 in 2:08.55.

Among the girls, Cass City's outstanding performer was Carrie Lautner. She won the mile in 5:32.10 and finished second in the 880 with a time of 2:32.07.

Several new track records were set by the girls.

Karen Foulds of Freeland set one in the 440 with a time of 1:02.9. Jenny Hunter, also of Freeland, set a new mark in the two mile with a time of 12:20.77 and Frankenmuth's mile relay team set a new mark with a time of 4:21.36.

IT JUST WASN'T Todd Comment's day in the high jump. He failed to make this leap at 5-10 and bowed out as Kevin Sinchak of Caro won with a 6-2 jump.

Hawks break losing streak in split with Bad Axe

The longest losing streak for a Cass City baseball team in recent years was broken Monday when the Red Hawks won the second game of a double header against Bad Axe at Cass City Recreational Park.

The win, chalked up by Ray Ferris on a three-hitter, was the first in 8 games this spring. Cass City's overall record is 1-8 and its Thumb B Association record, 1-5.

Ferris cracked a three-bagger in the opening inning and scored when Scott Stine flew out. Cass City added two more in the second when Brad Hartel was hit by a pitch and rode home on Tim Sontag's double. Sontag scored on Randy Severance's base knock.

Craig Tonti scored what proved to be the winning run in the third when he reached first on an error and came home without benefit of a hit.

In the first game it was all Bad Axe. The Hatchets pounded out 13 hits to take an 11-5 decision.

The Hawks showed scoring punch in the first inning as they pounded out four hits good for four runs. But Bad Axe bounced back with one in the first and five in the second and were never headed. Two runs in the fifth and three more in the sixth settled the issue.

Tom Duggan was credited with the win and Jim Adkins took the loss.

NORTH BRANCH

The North Branch Broncos measured the Hawks twice Thursday in Thumb B Association games. In the first game North Branch jumped off to an early lead and then held off a late Hawk surge for the victory.

The Branchers scored one in the first and twice in the second. Cass City scored all of its runs in the last two innings but the Broncos matched that with three runs of their own to insure the win.

Jim Adkins was touched for 10 hits and took the loss.

It was strictly no contest in the nightcap. Randal hurled a two-hitter at the Hawks and his teammates backed him with an 11-hit attack as the Broncos coasted to an 11-1 decision. Ferris collected a single and Atkins a double in the first inning and after that the best Cass City could do was a walk to Hartel in the fourth.

Historical Society seeks 4-H Club information

If you were a member or a friend of the Cass City Livestock 4-H Club, the club and the Cass City Area Historical Society would like to hear from you about your 4-H memories.

Letters or stories should be sent to Emerson Kennedy, 4652 Van Dyke Road, Cass City.

The stories will be put into an album, which will be presented to the historical section of Rawson Memorial Library as part of the club's 60th anniversary celebration next year.

An example of the type of story the club is seeking follows, written by Dave Bullock:

In the late 1950s, my father and mother, Ernest and Emma Bullock of Decker, owned and operated one of the largest registered Ayrshire dairy herds in the area.

Dad wanted us boys to show some of the offspring in 4-H. My older brother, Don, started showing first, then I started a year later when I was about 10 years old.

I first started with a calf that we raised named "Cass Air Jewel." I showed her as a calf and a yearling. She was a beautiful heifer winning both reserve and grand champion awards.

I'll never forget the now humorous event that happened one day during fair week. I left my wallet on the counter of a concession stand after buying a hamburger. When I finally realized what I had done and returned to get my wallet, needless to say it was gone. Mother and Dad weren't too pleased with my sense of responsibility.

Dad later sold the Ayrshire breed and went into dairy Holsteins and I went into horses, in 4-H in my high school years. During that time I was president, vice-president, and even secretary, as I remember.

Many achievements and good memories come to mind when I think of my 4-H years. Even so today those 4-H foundation years have carried over, as I have owned and operated a registered quarter horse breeding and sales business for the past 16 years.

AAUW nominates officers for new year

The Cass City branch of the American Association of University Women met April 28 in the high school library.

President Barbara Tuckey presided. Discussion was held concerning the need for a crisis center in Tuscola county. Geraldine Prieskorn spoke of the coming school millage need and that details would be presented at the May meeting.

Marilyn Peters presented plans for the 1981 Young Authors' Day, June 1 from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m. at Campbell Elementary School. A special feature will be children's author Carol Fenner, who will conduct workshops for the children. There will be other creative activities, such as puppet-making, drama, music and writing. This project is sponsored by Mrs. Peters, reading teacher, and Donna Emerson, elementary school librarian. The nominating committee of Lucy Auten, chairman, Doty Scollon and Ann Craig, presented the following names for the offices to be filled next season: Sharon Dunn for president and Kathy Tuckey for secretary. Voting will be at the May meeting.

The state convention will be in Traverse City May 1-3. The Cass City branch will be represented by Marlene Erla, Mary Brown, Sharon Dunn, Barbara Stickle and Barbara Tuckey.

Margaret Brown was welcomed after spending the winter in Florida.

The program was presented by Sharon Dunn, who is topic chairman for "Families Facing Change." She led a discussion concerning women and self-fulfillment.

Hostesses were Emma Wallis and Ann Craig.

Errors costly as O-G loses to A-F

Owen-Gage pitchers continued to be plagued by lack of support from their teammates as the Bulldogs lost two games to visiting Akron-Fairgrove Monday afternoon, 9-7 and 5-4.

Losing pitcher in the 9-7 opener was Randy Radabaugh, who is 0-4 for the season despite having an earned run average of about 1.0. Only one of the runs scored against him was earned, the Vikings taking advantage of five Bulldog errors to score the rest.

Radabaugh struck out four, walked three and gave up seven hits.

Winning pitcher Jim Crosby surrendered 13 hits, walked three and struck out three. Both pitchers threw the entire game.

For Owen-Gage, Terry Muntz hit three singles; Jim Glidden, a double and a single, and Scott Gaeth and Alan LeValley, two singles each.

Steve Dewald connected for a triple and a single for the winners.

LeValley was the losing pitcher in the second game. He walked one, struck out nine and gave up six hits.

Bulldog fielding improved noticeably, as the team committed only one error.

Bulldog batters, however, had trouble with Bucky Streeter on the mound. The Viking fanned 10 and only gave up two walks and three hits.

Dan Glidden had a triple and two RBIs for Owen-Gage. Brian Rayl hit a double and a single for the victors.

The Bulldogs, 1-5 in the league, 2-7 overall, host Port Hope Thursday and North Huron Monday.

PECK

Owen-Gage gained its first North Central D League win of the season last Thursday with a 2-0 victory at Peck in the opening game. The Pirates won the nightcap, 1-0.

The game was tied 0-0 at the end of the regulation six innings, with the Bulldogs picking up their two runs in the seventh.

Both pitchers went the distance, with Alan LeValley picking up the win. He gave up one hit (in the seventh), walked two and struck out nine.

Losing pitcher Bryan Mahaffey gave up seven hits and three walks and struck out seven.

Vince Salcido, Randy Radabaugh and Terry Muntz each hit two singles.

Radabaugh pitched the second game and again didn't get adequate support from his teammates. The moundsman is now 0-3 for the season, yet has given up an average of less than one run per game.

He walked one, struck out three and gave up four hits.

Winning pitcher Steve Fletcher walked two, struck out seven and surrendered four hits. He aided his cause by batting a double and a single. Both pitchers pitched the entire game.

The Pirates scored their winning run on an Owen-Gage error, one of four the team committed.

Top Bulldog batter was Scott Gaeth with two singles.

UBLY TOURNAMENT

Owen-Gage was eliminated in the first round of the Huron county baseball tournament Saturday, losing to host Ubly, 11-6.

The Bulldogs led going into the seventh inning, 6-4, but the Bearcats scored seven runs, thanks to three Owen-Gage walks and three errors. The losers committed a total of four errors in the contest.

Winning pitcher was Mark Jahn, who relieved Chuck Wright. They walked three, struck out four and gave up 12 hits.

Losing pitcher was Alan LeValley, who relieved Randy Radabaugh. They combined to issue six hits, nine walks and strike out seven.

Dan Glidden batted four-for-four for Owen-Gage, a triple and three singles. LeValley hit three singles and Terry Muntz connected for two one-baggers.

Terry Messing hit three singles for the Bearcats and Bob Cleary had two singles.

The eight-team tourney, minus the first round losers, will conclude Saturday.

Plan events for hospital week

National Hospital Week is next week, May 10-16.

Annually the 7,000 hospitals in the United States who belong to the American Hospital Association set a week aside to recognize the contributions of the health care industry.

This year's theme is "Looking Well Into the Future." Hospitals are becoming more involved in prevention of disease and keeping people well. Some of the things Hills and Dales General Hospital has done in the last year to support this effort are diabetic classes and screening, family life saver classes, cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes, blood pressure screening and classes, breast self-exam instruction and baby sitting classes.

During Hospital Week, several events are planned at Hills and Dales. First grade students will be touring the hospital. Friday, May 15, from 9 a.m.-noon, there will be open house in the large meeting room in the basement.

There will be free blood pressures taken, free screening for rectal cancer and instructions on how to do breast self-examinations. Free literature from the Heart Association, Lung Association, Cancer Association, etc., will be available.

Representatives from the Tuscola county Health Department will be there with displays and to answer questions. Refreshments will be served.

Backpacking through the Andes

So. America adventure for Gee, Duncan

Disney World it wasn't. It can't be described as a typical vacation, but for Kelly Gee and Bill Duncan, who live on the edge of a 72,000-acre wilderness preserve in Colorado, a lot of what they do isn't typical. Kelly, who still uses her maiden name, is the daughter of Bruce and Pat Gee of 4696 Hunt Street. She and her husband were in Cass City for a few days last week to visit her parents and show their slides, photographs and souvenirs of their 3½ month travels in Ecuador, Peru and the Galapagos Islands. Luxury hotels and air conditioned tourist buses are not their style. Carrying their belongings in backpacks -- Bill's weighed 59 pounds and Kelly's, 46 -- their adventures included five weeks spent in the jungles of Ecuador, riding a dugout canoe down a tributary of the Amazon and hiking through mountain passes 15,500 feet high. Duncan's job permits such a lengthy vacation. An employee of the U.S. Forest Service, he is wilderness coordinator-station manager of the Rawah Wilderness Area, 72,000 acres in which no logging or motor vehicles are allowed. Transportation can only be by foot or horseback.

This is the first year he has also been station manager, which entitles him and his wife to live in a log cabin. The last two years, as wilderness coordinator, their home was a tent. The couple, who were married in May, 1979 -- they met while attending Michigan State University -- live at Stub Creek Ranger Station, Colo., 100 miles southwest of Cheyenne, Wyo. The station is open from May until Thanksgiving, snow making it inaccessible the rest of the time, so then the couple is free to vacation.

During the summer months, Duncan is in charge of 20 employees, some of whom maintain trails and others who are guards, enforcing regulations, performing rescues, etc. He is also responsible for the Laramie River Drainage Area, where motorized vehicles are allowed. Duncan has been employed by the Forest Service since graduating from MSU with a degree in parks and recreation. He transferred to the Rawah area after Kelly ended up at Colorado State University in Fort Collins, 80 miles from Stub Creek. She got her degree in occupational therapy from there in August of last year.

After this year is over, she plans to find a job in her field in Colorado, Montana, Wyoming or Idaho, and her husband will follow. He may stay with the Forest Service or change careers. "We really love the west and can't see living any other place right now," she explained. "We really love the mountains."

THEY CHOSE SOUTH America for their lengthy vacation because Duncan wanted to see the Andes Mountains and his wife wanted to experience another culture. They departed at Thanksgiving and returned to the United States March 10.

They arrived in Quito, Ecuador, then spent five weeks traveling through the jungle. Travel from town to town was via bus or jitney.

They found the jungle hot and humid and the people very poor, making their meager living from subsistence farming.

Duncan and Gee ate what the people ate, including a lot of white rice and fried bananas.

They stayed in hostels, small tiny hotels with the bathroom down the hall. "The way we traveled, we were very close to the people," Kelly explained. They got to use their Spanish, rusty since they took it in high school (plus Kelly's one term in college). Understandably, their language skills improved during the trip.

Living like the native does have its disadvantages. Kelly caught typhoid fever the first week in Ecuador, despite having been inoculated against it before leaving. She was in bed four days and took medicine on occasion afterwards.

Her husband had one bout with Inca quick step, the South Andes version of Montezuma's revenge.

DURING THEIR jungle portion of the trip, they traveled in a 30-foot dugout canoe, powered by an outboard motor, down a tributary of the Amazon. It was the water version of a Greyhound bus, stopping at towns along the way to drop off and pick up passengers and cargo.

Also in Ecuador, they climbed to the top of a 16,500 foot volcano, which was spewing steam. It took them two days to get up and one to get down.

In Colorado, they lived at an altitude of just under 9,000 feet, "so we had an advantage over most travelers" (in coping with the high altitude), Duncan explained.

AFTER ECADOR came seven weeks in Peru, again traveling from town to town.

Two weeks were spent backpacking through the Andes, including hiking through mountain passes as high as 15,500 feet high.

They sometimes encountered Indians, going to check their cattle or on their way to market. "They were climbing the same passes we were, barefoot," Kelly said. The Indians in the Andes eke out a living in the river valleys.

The natives were used to seeing backpackers, though. "They think we're crazy." Usually in the Andes, tourists use guides and ride horses.

What the Indians weren't used to seeing, Kelly said, was a woman carrying a heavy pack on her back. The Indian women are used to carrying heavy loads, but think of American women as soft and pampered.

Duncan and Gee also visited the ruins of Machu

Picchu, an Inca religious community thought to have been built somewhere between 1200 and 1400 A.D. It is located at an elevation of 8,700 feet in very rugged country.

They also went for a boat ride on Lake Titicaca, 110 miles long and 35 miles wide at an elevation of 12,507 feet, which straddles the border between Peru and Bolivia.

THE FINAL PORTION of the trip was spent visiting the Galapagos Islands, which consist of a chain of 40 islands 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador, to which they belong.

The Galapagos are where Charles Darwin did much of his research concerning evolution.

"I'd say it is the closest to paradise I'll ever get," Kelly said.

After arrival at the main island, she and her husband and eight other "gringos" (all tourists are called gringos, no matter what country they are from) chartered a 30-foot boat with a crew of three.

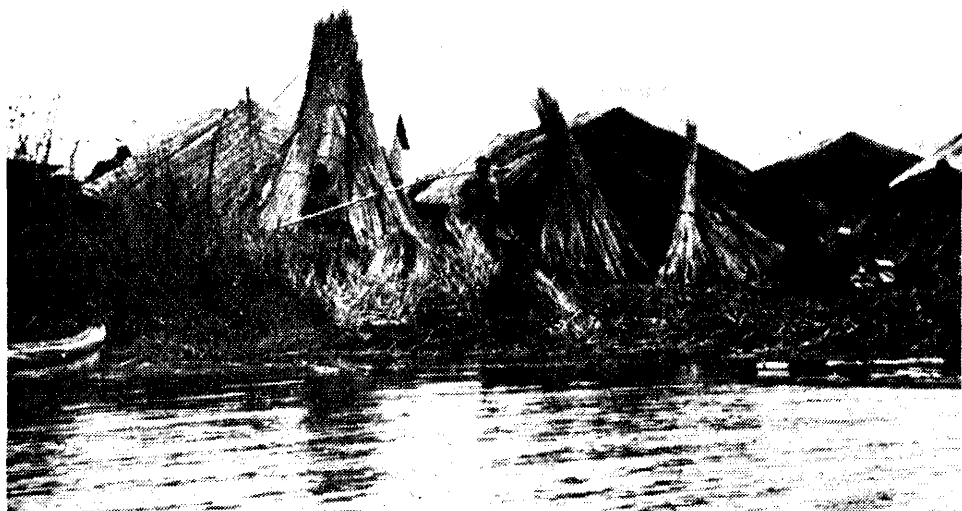

They then cruised from island to island. Because of the fragile flora and fauna, much of it found no place else in the world, visitors are not allowed to stay overnight on any of the islands. Everyone had to spend the nights on the boat.

THE TRIP COST THE couple $4,400, including $500 for souvenirs they brought back and $1,350 air fare.

They would like to go again. "We've just seen a fraction of what's there."

Kelly explained, adding that her husband would like to go trout fishing in Chile. Before they go back, however, they have other plans.

Since their return, they have purchased an 18-foot canoe and in the summer of 1982 are planning a two-month canoe trip in Alaska.

FLOATING ISLAND -- These Indians literally live on Lake Titicaca. The floating island, as well as their home and boats, are made of reeds. When the reeds become waterlogged and the island starts sinking, they pile on more reeds. The biggest island is about the size of a basketball court. The Indians make their living from fishing.

NO OUTBOARDS -- The Indians on Lake Titicaca have been building and sailing these reed boats for hundreds of years. The boats only last about six months before they become waterlogged and must be replaced.

Victim still critical

David H. Sheuffelt of Owendale, burned April 22 when a gasoline tank he was removing from a car exploded, was still reported in critical condition Wednesday morning at St. Mary's Hospital in Saginaw.

WORK AT IT

Maybe you can't always love your enemies, but you sure can treat your friends a bit better.

MARKETPLACE -- This market was in Otavalo, Ecuador, where Bill Duncan purchased a poncho.

Lutherans hold retreat

Seventy-three members of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League (LWML) registered for the Thumb zone retreat April 29-30 at Lake Huron Camp at Jeddo.

Rev. John Riske, of Bach, Thumb zone counselor, led devotions each day.

Theme of the retreat, "Beauty Is . . . ?," was expressed in sing-alongs led by Luann Baerwolf, Jane Behringer and Sandusky ladies; in skits expressing what makes up a truly beautiful Christian woman; and a Bible study presented by Rev. Dennis Glick, Michigan district counselor of the LWML, concerning "beauty care for the tongue."

Women attended from Bach, Bad Axe, Caseville, Kinde, Pigeon, Port Hope, Port Sanilac, Sebawaing, Sandusky, Unionville and Utica, Cass City, Forestville and Harbor Beach.

Missionary Society

Twenty women attended the monthly meeting of the Baptist Missionary Society Monday evening at the church.

Mrs. Clyde Wells presided over the business meeting. Mrs. Fay McComb led devotions. Prayer time for missionaries was led by Mrs. Richard Shaw and "Informations" was given by Mrs. Vera Bearss.

The organization was the donor of commemorative plates, at the March celebration of the 100th anniversary of the church, to wives of former pastors including Mrs. Arnold Olsen in Florida, Mrs. Lloyd Streeter in LaSalle, Ill., and Mrs. Teall, wife of the current pastor. The plate for Mrs. Richard Canfield, in the state of Washington, is being sent.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by Mrs. Teall and Mrs. Richard Parrott including a birthday cake for Mrs. Edith Ward, ice cream, punch and coffee. Mrs. Ward marked her 88th birthday this week.

THESE INDIANS were encountered while Duncan and Gee were backpacking in central Ecuador. Only the one second from right spoke Spanish in addition to the native Indian language.

HIGH IN THE ANDES is the city of Lata Cunga, Ecuador, population 27,000. Its altitude is 10,000 feet. That's a volcano in the background.

Tri-county NFO banquet draws 300

The National Farmers Organization tri-county banquet was held last Wednesday at the Uby Heights Country Club with a reported attendance of more than 300.

State NFO President Leonard Harrington of Dimondale urged those present to use forward contracting to get the best price for their crops.

Other speakers were Joe Parris, head of the NFO dairy department in Flint; Andy Neutzling, director of the slaughter cattle division at the NFO national office in Corning, Iowa; Al Scott of the NFO dairy department at Corning, and Leland Townsend, Michigan NFO grain department director.

Emphasized was the cull cow program, with the aim of having farmers cull low producing cows in order to increase milk prices. In the upper Thumb, cows are being culled through the NFO Cass City collection point at M-53 and Severance Road.

A movie was shown, "Prosperity the Simple Way."

Auto wage concessions shouldn't be necessary

No date at the bargaining table has been scheduled, but officials of General Motors, Ford and American Motors have all suggested to the United Auto Workers that they would like wage concessions similar to those the UAW granted to Chrysler.

Mrs. Richez doesn't think much of the idea, quoting her husband that "it's always the poor man who has to give up something."

The "big guys," she said, "never give up a thing and then they wonder why they're in trouble."

Mrs. Richez conceded that one reason new cars are so expensive is because of high wages paid to workers. "I imagine like everything else, it's a vicious circle. When wages go up, everything else goes up."

Although she doesn't like the idea of wage concessions from auto workers, she feels it may be necessary. "They (auto companies) are in trouble and they got to get help somewhere. Better to give up a little bit and survive than not give up anything and go down."

The ultimate solution to the wage-price spiral, she suggested, is to put a freeze on prices "and let it stand still for a while."

As for the Japanese government's agreement last week to reduce car exports from that country to the United States by 7.7 percent, she feels it will aid the American car industry, but will limit American car buyers' freedom of choice.

Mrs. Richez cleans houses. Her husband, Edmund, is a tool and die maker for an auto industry supplier. Home is 6267 Brenda Drive, Cass City.

The couple has six children: Robert, 11, the only one still at home; Jay, in the Navy; Susan, Edmund, Constance and Donna -- the latter two are married -- and three grandchildren.

AROUND THE FARM

Forage Day

By William Bortel

How will Michigan animal agriculture deal with the skyrocketing cost of energy, particularly petroleum, during the next decade?

Dairy and beef producers are feeling the crunch. The squeeze comes in a variety of ways and is likely to continue. Diesel fuel prices are up and may eventually reach $4 to $5 a gallon. Fertilizer prices are rising similarly. As these costs continue to increase, more farmers will be turning to forages for livestock feed.

That is one of the reasons why the Michigan State Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring the Regional Forage Day in Sanilac county July 7. The day-long event will be held at the Severance farm, 1 mile south of M-53 and M-81, and 2 miles east of M-53 on Robinson Road.

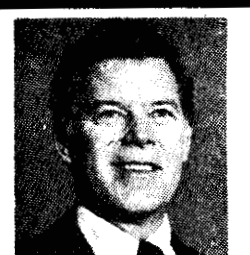

Scheduled for inspection and explanation is a 10-ton per acre yield plot, forage weed control, sod seeding, several new forage variety plots and hay marketing practices.

The demonstration at the Severance farm is one of 5 sites in Michigan. Others are as follows: Chippewa county, June 17; Kent county, July 1; Barry county, July 9, and Missaukee county, July 14. Each will feature a different aspect of forage production, feeding and marketing. Details of these sessions are available through the Cooperative Extension Service.

Lutheran ladies meet in Kinde

One hundred women representing 15 congregations attended the 58th Thumb zone rally April 21 of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League at St. Peter's Lutheran church, Kinde.

After registration and a dessert lunch, the evening meeting began with a short worship service conducted by Rev. John Riske, zone counselor.

Mrs. F.J. Sattelmeyer conducted the business meeting, which included reports by Vera Wrobleksi, secretary; Ella Arndt, treasurer; Carol Sting, mission service chairman; Carol Mammel, Christian growth chairman; Alice Rink, historian; and Ruby Maschke, Lotus Jagow gave an update on registrations for the Thumb zone retreat, April 29-30.

The Christian growth committee gave a presentation entitled "Easter Is."

Dorothy Warner introduced the guest speaker, Rev. Terry Hoese, of Mesiah Lutheran church, Dimondale. His topic, "Growing a Mission," told of the process of beginning a new mission. The Dimondale congregation is a new mission in the Lansing area. A former teacher at the Bach-Kilmanagh Lutheran School, he has been in the pastoral ministry since 1979.

Taking Stock

Note: In the first installment of this two-part series on investments for savings, the current rates for U.S. Treasury Bills were quoted at 14 percent. Between the time of writing and the time of publication the rates had dropped about 1½ percent. Rates for six-month "money-market certificates are tied to the Treasury Bill rate.

Interest rates on money-market mutual funds (not the same as bank "money-market certificates") also are declining, around 1½ percent less than a month ago.

"Money market funds" have attracted $115 billion of the public's money to date. They bear looking at, for the medium-size investor and upwards.

1. DESCRIPTION: "Money market funds" are mutual funds that invest in short-term securities. The funds' investment money is put mostly in large certificates of deposit (CDs) of major banks, and in Treasury Bills; a small part, around 15 percent, goes into "commercial paper" of large corporations. They are very liquid and with a minimum exposure to risk.

2. CHECK WRITING: About all the funds offer check-writing privileges. Minimum amount is usually $500. Return of cancelled checks is often slow - like two months. Unlike banks, checks don't come back as statement enclosures. Investors would use the checks only as a way to transfer funds from the "money market" fund to replenish their regular checking account.

3. RETURN ON INVESTMENT: Figures published for any fund don't mean much. You'll see advertising such as "15 percent current return" and some claiming only "14 percent," for example. It depends on the bookkeeping system, and also on whether a lot of fresh money happened to come in when rates were high, such as mid-December in 1980.

The month in and month-out return is about the same for all of them. Right now, say 15 percent.

As a rule of thumb you could count on about the same return as from Treasury Bills. Now T-Bills are 2½ percent under.

ADVANTAGES: Any size deposit can go in, anytime. Original deposit has typical minimum of $2500. Any size withdrawal ($500 minimum) can come out, anytime. No minimum balance is required.

Contrast with CDs, which lock you in and penalize for early withdrawal. They require large sums for top rates.

Treasury Bills require $10,000 minimum. They don't lock you in, but do entail a commission to buy. Unless held to maturity, there's another commission to sell.

VARIABLE RATE - GOOD OR BAD?: CDs do guarantee the rate set when you buy. Money market funds have a different rate every day. This works both ways. If rates go up after buying a CD, then you would be better off in a money-market fund. If rates go down, the CD would have been better. Over the long run, it would average out.

FUNDS NOT INSURED: Banks insure deposits up to $100,000. Money market funds don't. Their assets, though are in top-grade securities - government obligations and CDs of large banks. Investments are also short-term and therefore liquid and not subject to much market fluctuation.

WHAT ONE TO INVEST IN? Wall Street Journal carries ads each day for half a dozen money-market funds. I know of no one that would not be satisfactory. Send for their literature, or ask your broker.

United Business Service recommends these funds for small accounts:

1. Fidelity Cash Reserves, 82 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

2. Rowe Price Prime Reserve, 100 East Pratt St., Baltimore, Md.

For large accounts:

1. Fidelity Daily Income trust.

2. Merrill Lynch Ready Asset Fund.

3. NYTA-AARP U.S. Govt. Money Market Trust. (See local chapter of American Assn. of Retired Persons, or write 421 7th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.)

Walbro earnings down, sales up

Walbro Corporation's 1980 consolidated net sales totaled $43,316,000 with earnings of $1,001,000, Walter E. Walpole, chairman and chief executive officer, said at the annual stockholders' meeting in Cass City April 27.

The 1980 sales figure represented a 6 percent increase over 1979, but earnings were down, he noted, from the 1979 level of $1,436,000. On a per-share basis, earnings for 1980 amounted to $1.28, compared with $1.84 for 1979.

"In view of the overall economic conditions which prevailed throughout the year, we feel that the company's performance was respectable," Walpole told stockholders.

Lambert E. Althaver, president and chief operating officer, attributed the decline in earnings to higher manufacturing costs, unfavorable foreign exchange rates and high interest expenses, combined with an overall decline in economic conditions in 1980.

He noted, however, that for the first time in its history, Walbro Corporation's assets exceeded $20 million. Total assets were $20,452,000 in 1980, compared with $18,882,000 for the previous year.

Walbro management noted several bright spots in 1980, including the firm's continued strong share in the diaphragm carburetor market, strong sales for the company's Diecast Group, technological improvements for the Plastics Group, and the development of new products by the Automotive Products Group.

"With continuing efforts toward increased operating efficiency and an expected improvement in economic conditions, the prospects for the future remain bright," Walpole said.

Stockholders elected three directors to three-year terms on Walbro's board. They were: Althaver, William T. Bacon Jr., a partner in Bacon, Whipple and Co., and Warren E. Jones, chairman, JECO Industries, Inc.

In addition, Robert D. Tuttle, president of Sealed Power Corp., has been named to complete the term of William B. Hoey, who recently retired from the board.

Pregnant pupil classes ending

pregnant during the past three years.

Of the 11 girls, only two chose to enter TAPPS. The rest stayed at the high school and all 11 graduated. The school gives an excused absence to the girls when they are out of school just before, during and after they give birth.

Although TAPPS was beneficial for those girls who did enter it, he said its demise won't create a great hardship.

School districts, due to a state law or court ruling, can no longer force a pregnant student to drop out of school.

TAPPS

Gayle Green, the TAPPS

coordinator, didn't care to speculate whether most pregnant students in the future will choose to attend regular classes or drop out of school. "It is our hope," she said, speaking for herself and fellow staff members, "that these kids will remain in school, rather than dropping out."

She said she and the other staff members will be meeting this week with representatives of local school districts to share information the program has gathered over the years.

During the present school year, a total of 25 girls have been enrolled in TAPPS, 20 the first semester and (with some overlap), 12 presently.

A "few" at most are married. The youngest girls ever enrolled in the program have been 14.

The last couple of years, Mrs. Green said, a "very high percentage" of girls enrolled either remained in school or graduated.

During the 1979-80 school year, 26 girls were enrolled in the program, of which 21 completed it. Of the 21, as of last fall, 19 had graduated or were still attending school.

In addition to aiding students during their pregnancy, Mrs. Green said, some return later on occasion to have their baby checked by the nurse and to enable the staff to help them with any needs they have.

TAPPS serves students from the Akron - Fairgrove, Caro, Cass City, Kingston, Mayville, Millington, Reese, U.S.A., and Vassar school districts.

Tree planting tips

Spring is a good time of year to add new trees and shrubs to the yard. If you plan to add a new tree or shrub, here are some tips which will help you provide the best possible growing conditions to help them thrive:

Dig a hole about twice the diameter of the root ball, placing the soil to one side (preferably on a large tarp to protect the lawn).

Next, fill the hole with water and let drain. Then, mix an equal part of Canadian sphagnum peat moss with the soil which has been removed from the hole.

The sphagnum peat moss conditions the soil assuring that water and nutrients stay at root level where they are needed.

Fill the hole halfway with the peat moss/soil mixture and water thoroughly. Set the tree or shrub in the hole making sure the original soil line matches the soil level of the new location.

Loosen the burlap around the root ball and fill the hole with the remaining soil/sphagnum peat moss mixture. Tamp the soil and water thoroughly. Leave a slight depression to collect rainfall.

Improvement seen in 1981

1980 builders' down year,

Last year was a memorable year for building contractors, but for the wrong reason. Business was far from booming, but the builders the Chronicle talked to look for 1981 to be no worse than last year and see signs that it may be better. Construction was down in only 79 new homes built, 1980, compared to 1979, any way it's measured.

In 1979, the Tuscola county building codes department issued permits for 139 homes with a total value of $6.23 million. In 1980, there were only 79 new homes built, with a value of $3.34 million. The total value of all construction -- houses, mobile homes, industrial, commercial and miscellaneous -- declined from $12.2 million in 1979 to $8.07 million last year.

So far this year, said Paul Leffler, administrator of the building codes department, permits for new homes haven't increased, compared to 1980, but the total number issued has increased because of home remodeling projects.

"I tend to be a little optimistic," he predicted for this year, adding as a precaution, "I don't think it's going to be a banner year, by any means."

The many persons out of work aren't about to be buying new homes, but there are persons who are working who would like a new house.

What is holding them back, Leffler said, in addition to high interest rates, are substantial down payments being required by some financial institutions. They are reluctant to make too many long-term home loans lest they get stung should interest rates climb after making home loans at present rates.

"Once interest comes down, I think there will be all kinds of demand for houses," predicted Dan Cliffe, owner of D & D Construction of Cass City.

For young couples getting married and starting families, he said, "renters aren't the answer." He feels they are not afraid of making big payments, only of paying high interest rates.

The rate for home loans presently ranges from 14 1/2 to 17 1/2 percent, depending on the lending institution, number of years of the loan and amount of the down payment.

As for now, Cliffe said, most customer interest is in additions and remodeling of present homes.

Elmer Francis also predicts a lot of additions and remodeling for persons who in better times might want a new home.

Francis, who does a lot of commercial work, feels it will improve this year. Businessmen who might have held off last year in hopes that interest rates would go down are going to proceed this year, even though rates haven't declined as much as they would like.

All in all, he said, "Last year was down from the year before some, but this year looks like it will be at least as good as last year."

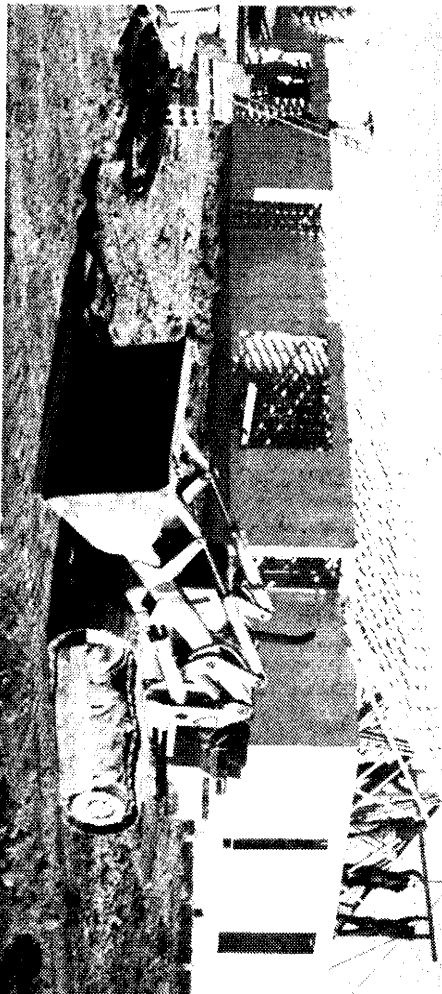

The most optimistic forecast was that of builder and developer Tom Herron. "Excellent, it looks much better," was his forecast for 1981. He added, however, "I think I'm just fortunate."

Although his prospects look good, he feels that isn't necessarily true of building in general.

Two reasons why his business looks good are because he is doing more commercial work and he is getting established building homes in the Pigeon area, where the economy is less dependant on persons employed in the auto industry, unlike Cass City.

Last year was not a good year, he said, although there was enough work to keep him and his employees busy.

In 1980, permits were taken out for construction of

Mix and match wallcoverings for a customized look at home

Today, anyone who can coordinate her clothes and accessories can create a customized look in her home. With many wallcovering manufacturers now producing entire collections which offer coordinated wallcoverings as well as coordinated fabrics, a mix-and-match decorating scheme is easy and mistake-proof.

Coordinated fabrics—once available only through professional designers—are very prevalent today, and an important aid to the custom look, according to the Wallcovering Information Bureau.

They can be used for upholstery fabrics, curtains, draperies, slipcovers, pillows, tabletops, shower curtains and bedspreads.

Many types of coordinates

Coordinated wallcoverings are usually done in matching colors, but some are in contrasting or analogous colors. Matching colors are easiest to correlate with existing furnishings, but contrasting and analogous colors give you variety with harmony.

Usually the size of the coordinating patterns will differ. A single motif in one pattern can be repeated in the companion wallcovering, or the patterns can be completely different but use the same colors.

There are also wallcoverings with identical designs printed in the reverse colors, giving a totally different effect but a pleasing continuity.

Decorating tips

Here are some tips on decorating with coordinated designs, offered by the Wallcovering Information Bureau.

- You can use as many as three patterns in one room, but what you select will largely depend on the scale and the layout of your rooms.

- All rooms visible from another room should be compatible. The foyer or entry is a good place to start.

Whatever you use to say "welcome" should be in harmony with whatever areas are within sight. Frequently, the entire home should be coordinated, and this is especially important in open plan designs.

- Colors should always be compatible, but the scale may vary depending on the size of your rooms.

One method is to select a larger pattern for the larger areas. Then, select a smaller pattern—either a smaller version of the same design, or a plaid, stripe, geometric or textured wallcovering—in the same or very similar colorway for the smaller areas.

- In smaller homes or apartments, the secret to mixing patterns is to keep the scale quite similar for major areas. The same pattern in reverse colors could be an easy and interesting solution.

- Select the predominant pattern, then use one color in the pattern as the key decorating shade.

WOOD LOUVER DOORS OFFER ALTERNATIVES

Closet doors don't have to be mundane.

Wood louver doors, for example, available as folding or sliding units, are ideal for closets in narrow hallways or foyers where there is little space for conventional swing-out doors.

The louvers also permit the free circulation of air, which makes them ideal for high humidity areas like laundry rooms, kitchens and baths.

It's a lot easier to find room for improvement than it is to find satisfactory building materials.

10 homes in Elkland and Novesta townships, including four in Cass City. Average value was $56,604, with the homes ranging in value from $37,152 to $87,456.

Permits were also taken out for 11 garages, 14 additions, seven remodeling jobs, and four mobile or modular homes.

Other than the $6 million Cass City wastewater treatment plant expansion and improvement project, which should be completed about a year from now, the most expensive construction project in the two townships in 1980 was the Deford Community church addition, valued at $237,248. Dedication of the structure will be May 17.

As of early last week, there had yet to be any permits taken out for any new homes in Elkland or Novesta townships this year.

Permits had been issued for five home additions, one remodeling job, two garages and installation of three mobile homes and one modular unit.

The most expensive project so far is the clinic of Dr. Hoon K. Jeung, MD, on Hospital Drive, $104,803, according to the permit.

CHANGES

"I think you're going to see quite a few changes in home building," Herron predicted.

Most changes will be due to the ever increasing cost of keeping homes warm, such as passive solar systems and other energy saving measures. (Passive solar systems incorporate windows or greenhouse

Check building codes before beginning home remodeling jobs

Though time is said "to wait for no man," anyone who doesn't take it when planning a home improvement is rash.

A remodeling project carefully planned not only safeguards the major investment you have in your home, but most likely will improve its resale value as well.

Such planning should include satisfying building codes, advises the National Home Improvement Council. Established by most cities, towns and counties, building codes vary from one community to another.

As a general rule, a building permit is required whenever structural work is involved or when the basic living area of a home is to be changed, adds the Council. For example, if you have a house with an unfinished section that you want to complete as a room, you would need a building permit in most localities. This is because you have changed the area from storage to living space.

Any reputable home improvement contractor should be able to take care of the complex details involving building permits. You pay any fee required by your municipality and are responsible for any penalties for failure to file required permits.

But, you shouldn't fear these matters if you hire a reputable contractor who knows the rules. Have all such restrictions and fees spelled out in your contract.

Use those leftover insulation scraps to quell energy gobbler

Just as leftovers make convenient snacks for the "nibblers" around your house, leftover scraps of fiber glass insulation

WORKING WIVES SHARE EXPENSES

The move from "housewife" to "working wife" has turned the dream of homeownership into reality for many married couples. More than 56 percent of married couples who recently bought a home had working wives reports Chicago Title Insurance Company.

can be used to nibble away at reducing your family's energy costs.

If you've recently eased your home's energy appetite with a diet of fiber glass attic insulation, you probably have scraps around that can be put to use for this energy-saving bill of fare.

Or, if you had a contractor do the job, he may have left behind usable insulation scraps for these a la carte projects

Joist band

An important area that is often overlooked because of its out-of-the-way location is the joist band—that space between the top of the basement wall and the floor joist above.

If left uninsulated, this critical area can be a major source of heat gain during the summer and heat loss during the winter around the entire base of your home. (Savings vary. Find out

MILDEW: CAUSES AND CURES

Mildew is a problem familiar to homeowners and apartment dwellers alike. It is a thin, usually black (sometimes white) growth produced by molds on many household surfaces. And, while molds are always present in the air, those that cause mildew need moisture and warm temperatures to grow.

To prevent mildew, get rid of dampness in areas of your home which are prone to musty smells. Circulate the air by opening windows in dry weather or by using air conditioners or dehumidifiers. A commercial cleaning product may be necessary where advanced mildew is a problem.

To err is human -- trying to hide it is even more.

why in the seller's fact sheet on R-values. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power.)

Ductwork

If your heating or air-conditioning ducts pass through an unfinished attic or basement, you are likely losing cool air in the summer and heat in the winter.

Encircle these ducts with fiber glass insulation, keeping the foil to the outside. Seal the seams where ends meet.

Anywhere there's an opening on an outside wall—a space for your clothes dryer vent, for example, or an access space for cable television wires—your air-conditioning or heat can quickly escape and let the ravenous outdoor air in.

To help save energy, simply stuff these openings with fiber glass insulation.

Scuttlehole

Last, but not least, check the scuttlehole that leads to your attic. Even if your attic is properly insulated, an uninsulated scuttlehole can create a draft effect, much like your chimney, and suck heat right out of the living area of your home.

To solve the problem, just use your insulation scraps to cover this opening.

ALMOST DONE -- Complete except for the landscaping is this ranch house on Hospital Drive, which faces Provincial House.

It's spring and the decorating ideas are really blooming at Maxwell Interiors!

"Now that the outdoor environment is coming back to life, it's a good time to think about sprucing up inside. You know, it's very easy to get used to an old chair or sofa that's become a well-worn friend. But if you were to see such a piece through an unbiased eye (as your guests do), would it look quite so friendly and inviting? Remember, your home is where the majority of your time is spent — it's your haven from the world — and it should be representative of your good taste and good judgement. We've all been educated to spend a substantial part of our income on an automobile in which we spend very little time. Let's also consider a reasonable budget to express ourselves more completely AT HOME... allocating an appropriate amount to create a beautiful and comfortable environment to enjoy in the home as we do when purchasing that automobile. It's surprising to learn how little it takes to surround yourself with a beautiful and harmonious interior: a recovered chair, new paint, different wallcovering, perhaps even new draperies.

At Maxwell Interiors, personal service and individual solutions to your design problems are our specialty. Now, during our first anniversary, save up to 50% on in-stock merchandise and up to 30% on special orders. And remember, we'll be happy to design the interior of your new home or help remodel your present home. We find no challenge too great and no service too small!"

SIDING:

Whose Side Are You On?

Few if any home improvement projects can give the total face lift that new siding does. It's instant improvement, instant increased value.

It's also one of the most confusing projects for the average homeowner to deal with. Not only are there dozens of different sidings on the market, but each siding contractor you talk to may recommend a different one as the best.

BOILED DOWN The Rules Seem To Be

Rule 1: Avoid cheap siding of any kind.

Rule 2: The installation job can make or break your house. Nails pounded in too tight will leave a ripple effect. Overlapping seams should face the rear of the house. The use of small scrap pieces can ruin the job. "Watch how much waste a contractor has," Armstead advised. "In one house, we often end up with a truck load of scrap because we use fewer seams. But I've seen siding applications on new houses where the waste amounted to little more than a bushel basket full."

Rule 3: Before you sign a siding contract, ask for the name and addresses of other clients the contractor has had, then go look. While you're there, ask the homeowners how they like it. Don't worry - they will be glad to tell you.

The company also offered the option of deviating from its blueprints while still pre-cutting all the materials.

"We altered this one so much, you might as well say we drew our own blueprints," she explained.

The firm furnished additional material, in case of mistakes. They allow extra for your boo-boos.

"It's just like putting together a model car," is the way her husband explained the procedure. The plans that came with the materials listed a step-by-step procedure to put the materials together.

To help make sure they didn't go wrong, the couple hired Bill Lydorek to help in his spare time with that phase of construction.

THE HOME HAS A walk-out basement, covered with earth on three sides, with a ground level doorway and two windows facing the fourth (west) side. With such natural insulation, the owners find the basement is cool in summer and warm in winter.

The upper level has a ground level entrance on the east side.

Two changes that were made from the original plans were the Klinkmans added a porch on the east side, built by his father, Dorus (Dutch) Klinkman, and a deck extending from outside the dining room on the other side, which overlooks the pond, which unfortunately has yet to fill completely with water.

By the end of the summer, the outside of the house was basically done and it was time for the second truck load of materials, such as drywall, insulation, moldings, and particle boards for the floor, for the inside of the home.

From October through December, the time was spent drywalling, installing insulation, carpeting, wall-paper, electricity, plumbing and heating, and in January, 1980, the proud owners moved in.

A heating firm was hired to install the furnace, which with all pre-cut lumber, programs offered by various companies before selecting one offered by a Minnesota firm. One reason why the firm picked the firm, according to Mrs. Klinkman, was that it offered the best financial terms.

Be sure to check rootballs on container grown trees

Container-grown trees should have fibrous roots developed so that the rootball will remain intact when the plant is removed from its container. Bypass trees with roots which have kinks or circles, which can obstruct the flow of water and nutrients to the rest of the plant. If circled roots are not im-walls and 6 inches of fiber-glass plus a foot of blown-in insulation overhead.

WORK TO BE DONE YET includes finishing some trim work inside and painting the trim outside, installing shutters and storm doors.

Further down the road will be finishing a recreation room in the basement and possibly installing a bathroom there. The downstairs also contains a laundry room and fruit cellar. The Klinkmans plan a garden this summer, which will give them lots of fruits and vegetables to store there.

Also on the agenda this summer is construction of a garage and tool shed, separate from the house.

This year, and for many years to come, the Klinkmans will be planting trees. They hope to eventually have their entire 19 acres covered with trees, as a windbreak, for fuel and because, Fred said, "I like to watch them grow."

AS MENTIONED, there are a few things the Klinkmans would do differently if they had it all to do over.

The fruit cellar, the top of which is the porch, was a last minute addition after the basement was constructed, and required cutting a doorway in the basement wall. Styrofoam insulation was placed on the inside of the upper level walls and should have gone on the outside. They now wish they would have built the house at an angle so that it faces the pond, which instead is off at an angle.

All in all, the Klinkmans are well satisfied with what they did. "It was a lot of work, but kind of fun," Fred said.

They decided to build a house themselves, instead of buying a used one or hiring someone to build a new one, in addition to saving money," according to Cheylene, "so we knew what we had instead of what somebody tells you you had."

UNDER CONSTRUCTION -- This is how the Klinkman home looked in the summer of 1979, prior to the addition of the deck in September of that year.

FINISHED PRODUCT -- The home of Fred and Cheylene Klinkman on Robinson Road. Construction began Easter weekend of 1979 and the couple moved in January, 1980, though the home was not completed yet. The opposite side of the home has a ground level entry to the upper floor.
