Attractions are many at 4th annual Village Bach Festival

Sing-along with Bach is one of the new attractions at the fourth annual Village Bach Festival, which takes place Friday through Sundav.

As in the past years, the concerts -- Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon -- will be held at the-First Presbyterian Church, but this year there will be several other activities in conjunction with the festival for local residents and out-of-town visitors.

Way tops fund goal

The 1982 Elkland-Novesta United Way fund drive has ended, having exceeded its goal by a wide margin.

The goal was $14,000. The amount collected in pledges and cash as of Saturday morning, when the last money donations were turned in, was $15,517.54.

"For the state of the economy, I think the community and the area have really come through for us,' said fund United Way President Ruth Grassmann. "I'm well satisfied.'

Still to come is a promised contribution from General Telephone, which won't be received until January, and a possible one from another corporate contributor, which gave last year but hasn't responded yet to a request for a donation this year. Although the amount raised was more than the goal, it was less than was collected last year, when $16,370 was raised.

The next project for United Way will be distribution of Christmas boxes of food for needy families and individuals, the list for which is being compiled now.

The United Way board will meet in the spring to determine its allocations.

This year, 14 local organizations and activities were aided with money raised in 1981, plus 12 countywide organizations through Tuscola County United Way and 23 state and one national organization through Michigan United Way.

5 police cars answer call to small scuffle

A dispute last Wednesday evening in a Cass City apartcar. ment turned out to be less serious than was indicated by the five police cars that responded to it. A 16-year-old boy has been charged with felonious assault in connection with the incident and petitioned into probate court, but the complainant has asked the prosecutor's office to drop the charge.

The incident took place in a unit of the Northwood Heights Apartments, 4788 Hospital Drive.

According to Cass City police, Robert L. Carpenter got into a dispute with his 17-year-old brother-in-law and then was struck with the stock of a shotgun by the latter's friend, age 16.

Police were then called by someone in the apartment at 9:57 p.m. The dispatcher was told guns were involved in the dispute.

The result was one Cass City patrol car, two sheriff's department cars, one from the Caro Police Department and the Gagetown patrol needed, although police did confiscate the shotgun and one other weapon. The latter gun was later returned.

The 16-year-old, according to Police Chief Gene Wilson, was taken to the county jail after a writ was obtained from probate court. He was released the following day after he appeared before Probate Judge W. Wallace Kent Jr.

Carpenter has since requested that the charge against the 16-year-old be dropped. According to Assistant Prosecutor Kathleen Boyle, who talked to Carpenter Monday, whether the charge will be dropped is a decision to be made by the prosecutor's office, but as of now there will be a probate court hearing unless the

According to New York nagazine, Nancy Reagan ecently rejected a proposed fficial engraving of her iusband because it made trombones ii Jook like he was wearing polyester suit "and the president doesn't wear polyester."

His tailor told the magaine the president prefers suits of Italian and English vool.

Thomas Hipschen, the artst at the Bureau of Engravng and Printing who creited the spurned engraving, was surprised. "I thought 1 ' might have wanted to smooth out some of his facial vrinkles," Hipschen re-portedly said, but he didn't expect his work to fail on abric.

Some people suspect Ronild Reagan of simple snobery. Polyester material is ften associated with loud eisure suits worn by perons who scratch in public, v r curlers in the supermarket, and light up in the lark. In fashionable circles, it is generally believed the only reason a person wears polyester is because he or she doesn't know any better, or can't afford any better. But in view of the unmuted plaid suits the president President Reagan's sartor-president would thumb down his engraving simply for fear it would give voters the impression he lights up in the dark. People who live in plaid houses must be careful about casting the first stone at aluminum siding salesmen . It would be nice to believe that Reagan has nothing personal against polyester but simply prefers Italian and English wool for their friction. Polyester is slippery. People in polyester pants are more likely to over-slide second base. Certainly a U.S. citizen has the constitutional right to avoid making a fool of himself, especially on artificial turf. However, there is no denying that Italian and English wool are foreign fabrics, except in Italy and England, respectively. I know this to be a fact because I read it in Readers Digest. So a vigilant defender of this nation's clothing industry can't help wondering if

Or have those tastes been shaped by subversive influences that infiltrated the White House — perhaps Italian and English tailors disguised as Sophia Loren and Lady Diana, respective-

After all, President Reagan himself often makes a similar argument against those U.S. citizens who favor a verifiable nuclear freeze here and in Russia. These freeze people are obviously snobs who object to nuclear warfare simply because it affects everybody, darlings, even people wearing curlers in the A&P, with no exclusivity whatsoever. But the president insists American freezers have actually been duped by Soviet agents who deviously deluded them into believing that no one ever wins the Readers Digest Sweepstakes. Obviously, if millions of U.S. nuke-freezers can be manipulated by foreign agents, there is no reason foreign agents can't nourish the Italian and English wool business by persuading one measly president that polyester is too slippery to stop at second base.

Ronald Reagan may honestly believe he prefers Italian and English wool pants simply for their friction, especially on artificial turf. But, however unwittingly, he is definitely favoring foreign imports over American polyester, and our clothing industry is the worse for it.

You may say it is McCarthyism to charge that Italian and English wool are unpatriotic, except in Italy and England, respectively. But a president must beware of what is being pulled over his eyes. Ronald Reagan should never forget the wise warning shouted at the man playing ball in a cow pas-ture: "Watch out where you're sliding, man, that ain't second base.'

too far.

I don't remember as a kid ever having the word "generic" on a spelling test. Now it's a word hard to avoid while shopping in the supermarket.

Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines it as: "Relating to or characteristic of a whole group or class, general; not protected by a trademark registration."

The first time I remember hearing the word used was perhaps 10 years ago when it was first publicized widely that if physicians would prescribe drugs by their generic name instead of by a brand name, they could save their patients money.

Drug X will get you just as well as Smith Laboratories version of Drug X, to invent a brand name, but the unbranded version is a lot cheaper.

Now there is a state law that lets consumers ask pharmacists to substitute a cheaper generic drug unless the doctor prescribed a brand name one and "no substitutes.

It was probably about five years ago that generic brand foods started to invade the supermarkets.

Being cheap, I use some of the brandless products. The peanut butter and peaches aren't bad, but I did find the applesauce too watery for my tastes, so I stopped using it. I don't like applesauce that can be consumed through a straw.

I also eat generic brand macaroni and cheese, which I will use as an example of what I don't understand about generic brands.

What I don't understand is how they can be so much less expensive than stuff with fancy labels. I know enough about the printing business to know that if boxes or labels are being printed by the hundreds of thousands, it doesn't cost that much more to print a fancy colored label than to print black on white. Probably the difference is a fraction of a cent

So how come I can buy a $7\frac{1}{4}$ ounce box of no name macaroni and cheese at one of the local supermarkets for 21 cents while the cheapest brand product, which is the store's house brand, is, I

Part of the usual answer is that no money is spent for advertising the generic product, but no money is spent advertising the house brand product either.

I may have picked an extreme example and in some instances, the price difference between the generic brand and a branded product isn't that great.

Part of the price difference for some products can be accounted for because the generic brands aren't as good or of consistent quality.

There is the aforementioned watery applesauce and the peaches may come in less thick syrup and the pieces may be of irregular size. Who cares what size they are, because they're all going to be eaten.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE-WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1982

After 27 years

Knight quitting Grant Township treasurer's post

For the first time in more than 27 years, Grant Township residents will be going elsewhere starting in December to pay their property taxes.

Saturday marked the last day in office for Ephraim Knight, who has been township treasurer since 1955. Before that, he was a justice of the peace since May, 1938, so his retirement marks the end of 441/2 years in township government.

Knight, of S. Elkton Road, Cass City, was elected to a four-year term in 1980. He and his wife, Mary, decided they had other things to do and as long as he held office, they wouldn't be able to do them.

Knight thus told the township board two months ago of his intention to resign effective Nov. 20.

The board appointed Ted Sheldon of 4049 S. Maxwell Road, Owendale, an accountant, as the new treasurer. His wife, Joyce, is the new deputy treasurer. For the past six years,

Mrs. Knight has held the title of deputy treasurer, "but she did most of the bookkeeping work for 27 years," he pointed out. He added with pride that since the state started requiring audits of township books 10 or 12 years ago, the accountants have never found a mistake in her bookkeeping.

MENTIONED. AS Knight was first elected justice of the peace in 1938, when township officers were elected at annual meetings in the spring. Townships had four just-ices in those days. Two at a time would serve for two years on the township board, along with the supervisor, clerk and treasurer, as well as perform their judicial duties.

The other two would only perform their judicial duties, which consisted of settling claims resulting from dogs killing livestock and fence line disputes and trying minor civil claims and misdemeanors, though Knight can't recall ever trying any of the latter. Justices of the peace could

She may have thought she had something to say about administering the affairs, but actually she was only a rubber stamp.

Bank trust departments move about as fast as glaciers. And a number of lawyers are not much better, but if you're lucky (as I have been generally) you can find ones that don't dilly dally.

In a case of one of our family, whose assets had been distributed 14 weeks after death, the tax return went in promptly after six months and the whole thing was wrapped up in eight months.

I have yet to find a logical reason why a person shouldn't set up a "living trust" and avoid probate, avoid delays in settlement of an estate, and avoid a lot of costs. Offhand, I'd say you'd save $25,000 in settling a $500,000 estate.

See a lawyer who is experienced in estate work, and tell him you want a living trust. The legal term is "inter vivos" if you want to appear professional.

John M. Schwartz of 6128 Deckerville Road, Deford, reported to the sheriff's department Nov. 9 that a 11/2 horsepower engine used to power an insulation blowing machine was taken from the trailer on which everything was mounted.

Replacement value of the engine was $619. It was taken late Nov. 8 or early Nov. 9, while the trailer was parked on Schwartz' property.

Doreen Walker of Revere's Too restaurant at M-46 and Hurds Corner Road told deputies Nov. 4 a front window was broken by stones apparently flying from the spinning tires of a vehicle that drove a "doughnut" in the gravel parking lot. The 3-by-6-foot window was valued at $300.

The above two reports weren't available at the sheriff's department until Monday.

Kelly M. Dillon of 5658 McGregory Road, Gagetown, reported to Cass City police early Sunday that the left rear window of her father's car, which she was using, was broken Saturday evening while it was parked in Caro. The owner is Fd ward Dillon Jr.

Mrs. J.M. Quinn of 6469 Sixth Street told village police at 5:12 p.m. Sunday that five windows of her garage were broken by two seven-year-old boys.

The boys were turned over to their parents, who agreed to make restitution. Ella Cumper of 4182 Maple Street told village officers Friday morning that two days earlier, someone shot a hole in her window with a BB gun. The shot was fired about 9 p.m.

A 16-year-old Deford boy was apprehended Nov. 13 as he tried to leave Fisher's Big Wheel store near Caro wearing a hat he didn't pay for. It was valued at $6.88. A request was to be made to petition him into probate court.

CLARIFICATION

It was reported in last week's Chronicle that Arlene Szarapski of Kelly Road left her purse in a shopping cart in the IGA Foodliner parking lot Nov. 12 and when she returned, the purse was gone.

Actually her purse was found and turned in to the store office, where she got it back, however, she told police, before it was found, someone took $112 from it.

Girls' tourney trail ends with Marlette loss

Cass City came to the end of the tournament trail at Mayville Saturday night when highly regarded Marlette topped the Hawks for the third time this. season. The score was 53-43.

The defeat came in the second round of the districts. In the opening game, Cass City edged Reese, 54-51.

Marlette, which was the regular season Thumb B Association co-champions, was played to the wire by the underdog Hawks.

Cass City had played the Raiders to a standstill in the last meeting between the two teams and Thursday's game was a repeat performance. The Hawks jumped off to a 14-12 first period lead and stretched it to four points, 30-26, at the intermission.

The Hawks fell before a tight Marlette defense in the third period and were out-scored 16-8 and after that the winners made it look easier than it was with an 11-5 advantage in the final eight minutes.

Jill Hutchinson poured in 15 points for Cass City while Penny Cook of Marlette led all scorers with 21 points and her teammate, Cheryl Miller chipped in with 11.

Marlette outrebounded Cass City, 31-29, and that made the difference. The Hawks' best rebounder, Michelle Fahrner, missed the tournament and much of the season with a knee injury. Kim Wagg led the Hawk boarders with 9.

REESE GAME

Using balanced scoring and outstanding rebounding by Laura Richards, 15, boards, and Barb Craig, 13 boards, the Hawks eased past Reese in the first round of the districts Thursday. The Hawks were led by Hutchinson with 14 points, Richards, with 11 points, and Carrie Lautner, 10 points. Cindy Cramer led Reese with 14 points.

The loss Saturday ended the careers of some outstanding Hawk veterans. Lautner and Fahrner were outstanding three-year starters for the team. Also leaving are Jamie Fox and Richards, both of whom improved steadily as they gained playing time this season. The finals of the districts were to have been played Tuesday night when Brown City meets Marlette. Brown City rates as slight favorites in a clash between two fine teams.

FIRST YEAR TROPHY -- Virgil Peters, 14, shot this eight point buck Saturday morning in the Deford area in his first year of hunting. It weighed 160 pounds. His father, Dwaine, shot an eight-pointer opening day. The Peters live at 4325 Woodland Avenue.

Federal funds available for economic development

For the second year, the Private Industry Council (PIC) of the Thumb Area Consortium will provide funds for "innovative economic development and employment generating activities promoting the three county area of Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola."

The PIC voted at its bimonthly meeting Nov. 9 at Cass City to fund economic development projects in 1983 by means of $17,730.00 grant from the Thumb Area Interagency Collaborative Board. Consortium Executive Director Frank Lenard said governmental units and economic development organizations in the three benefits. After the first three months, if they don't cooperate a second time, benefits for them and their children are eliminated for one month and then repeated for one month each time they don't cooperate.

Persons on GA have their benefits eliminated for three months for each time they refuse a workfare job.

REDUCTIONS

What effect has the reduction in welfare benefits had on recipients?

"If you're at the bottom rung and you get cut, then it makes a difference," said John Eckin, DSS child welfare supervisor.

In extreme cases and presumably not in Tuscola County, there have been instances of persons dying from not having enough food, Dillon said.

More likely, he continued, is that persons will become ill more often and thus need medical care more often due to not being able to eat adequately.

The reductions in benefits bothers those who work at the DSS. "We can give you the figures on the cutbacks,' said Mrs. Detwiler, "but my concern is what happens to the people."

STRINGING ALONG -- The Midland String Trio played and explained their music last Wednesday and Friday for students at Campbell, Deford (shown here) and Evergreen Elementary Schools in conjunction with this week's Village Bach Festival. sale chairman expects all reserved seats will be sold by the time the concerts begin.

She expects some general admission tickets will remain by concert time. If any are, they will be sold at the door.

Tickets can be ordered by calling Ouvry Chevrolet-Olds, 872-4301.

Last year, a total of 782 tickets were sold for the three concerts, with the Saturday evening performance considered a sellout. The church seats about 300. Ticket prices are the same as last year.

Even if every performance was a sellout, ticket sales would come nowhere close to paying the total cost of the festival.

The biggest single source of revenue is the statefunded Michigan Council for the Arts, which is providing $7,700, which is $1,940 more than it gave last year.

The third source of revenue is donations, which came from patron ticket sales -- a minimum of $15 more than the reserved ticket price for all three concerts, plus outright donations from individuals, businesses and the Chamber of Commerce.

HELPERS

A music festival could not run with musicians alone. In addition to those too numerous to mention who are helping in one capacity or another, committee members or special helpers include: Mrs. Ouvry; Bill and Alice Lovejoy, general helper and hospitality and education respectively; Jeanne Auten, housing; Arthur Holmberg, arrangements; Karen Fischer and Rita Capps, hospitality and receptions; Celia House, Cass City Arts Council representative; Dave Lovejoy and Karen Wallace, holiday art fair; Lambert Althaver, business manager; Joanne Hopper, secretarial work; Rev. Harry Capps, church arrangements, and Alice Guernsey, education.

Still lives on centennial farm

Edward Buehrly recalls early years

Edward Buehrly has only moved from his centennial farm twice in his life, and the first time, he didn't move very far.

The first time was in 1898, a short distance down the when he and his parents road. The second time was in moved in with his mother's parents so she could take 1918, when he was drafted care of them. That was only into the Army.

The home where Ed lives now was built in 1876 and survived the Great Fire of 1881. The home, barn and granary on the other side of Short Road that belonged to his grandparents burned.

His father,

Buehrly had three brothers and three sisters and all but the youngest, who was born after the family moved. lived in the house when it consisted of what is now the living room and one bedroom. The house was later expanded.

Buehrly lived in the home down the road -- also a centennial farm, now owned by the widow of his brother, Lawrence, who died last year, and her son -- until he entered the Army Aug. 27, 1918.

His unit was scheduled to sail for Europe to fight in World War I when a flu

Buehrly not only still drives, he drives without glasses. "That's not so bad for an 87-year-old guy." He does wear glasses for reading. The first tractor was pur-chased for $875, "but $875 was quite hard to get in 1926." Tractors were quite rare then. Many farmers didn't get their first tractor until after World War II.

Funeral held

Buehrly did keep norses around until about 1960, but in later years, it was more of a hobby.

ELECTRICITY CAME IN 1937. "That was something. The younger people don't realize what life was like in those days" (before electricity). "It sure was wonderful when electricity came."

Indoor plumbing wasn't installed in the Buehrly home until 1959. He remembers many a winter morning when having to go to the bathroom first required shoveling a path to it.

Buehrly got his first television in 1960 and is still using the same set.

His father died in 1939. Ed had taken over the farm the year before, but didn't become the official owner until after his mother died in 1954. He was still farming it until six years ago. Larry Merchant now farms the acreage Buehrly has one son, Carl, who works for the Michigan State University animal husbandry department, and three grandchildren.

THINGS LIKE AUTOMObiles and tractors and electricity aren't the only changes Buehrly has seen over the years.

Property taxes on his 80 acres were $32 a year back in 1919. Now they are $1,200. Some farm prices have changed and some haven't. "We sold a good many 200 pound pigs for 3 cents a pound and cattle for 4 cents and made money.

Farmers didn't have much expenses in those days, however. He pointed out they didn't have electric prices for such things as fertilizer and seed corn, he said, "I don't know how the boys do it.

But while prices of some things have gone up a lot some haven't.

"I made a good living from those 80 acres," Buehrly said. "In 1919, we got $3 a bushel for wheat and a car was $365 and now we sell wheat for less than $3 and a car costs $10,000. That doesn't make sense, does

Jean Nidetch (non-fiction). Contains over 600 mouth-watering, pounds-off recipes arranged by food category - vegetables, fruits, milk products, meats, cereals, etc. The recipes cover all three levels of the plan: the liberal "full choice" plan, or the more restricted "limited choice" or "no choice" plans featured exclusively in this book for faster weight loss. Also includes the Weight Watchers Plan for life-long weight control.

TOUGHLOVE by Phyllis and David York (non-fiction). A loving solution for families being torn apart by unacceptable teenage behavior, no matter what the cause; drug or alcohol abuse, promiscuity, cutting school, or general surliness. Toughlove teaches parents how to be tough and when to be loving. It recognizes that unacceptable behavior is not the parents' fault, but is supported by today's culture, and it shows how to change the patterns of this support.

HEALTH TIPS Wood stoves may harm children's health

A pilot study conducted by a Michigan State University pediatrician shows that woodburning stoves, used as the primary or substantial source of home heating, are a significant factor in the breathing problems suffered by pre-school age children, according to the American Lung Association of Michigan. In 1981-82, Richard Honicky, M.D., a former American Lung Association fellow. and other doctors from Michigan State University, studied 31 of the clinical center's pediatric patients and compared them with a control sample of other children matched for age, sex and home town. The findings showed an increase in coughing episodes at night during the winter months among children exposed to indoor pollution by woodburning stoves. Honicky also noted a dif-a ference in the children's tendency to wheeze. In 9 woodburning homes, 71 per-cent of the children wheezed during a cold and 55 percent did without a cold. In the control sample, only a 19 percent wheezed during a cold and none wheezed without a cold. He said that wheezing is a "distinct sign of an airway problem." đ Persistent coughs, especially those lasting more than six weeks, also spell trouble, he said. The researchers checked whether the chil-dren coughed four or more days in a week. None in the control sample did, but 45 percent in the woodburning đ sample did. 9

Honicky also found that children with respiratory đ disease had aggravated training. During his six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, he studied the Air special training in human how the woodburning stove ranks with other lung-aggravating sources of indoor air pollution such as exposure to cigarette smoke, cooking with gas, asthma in the family and the use of formaldehyde urea foam for insulation. "Because conversion to woodburning stoves is on the increase as a means of cutting down on heating bills it is extremely important to resolve any questions about them," Honicky said.

Although many types of woodburning stoves are in use, most of them function similarly to the most popular type -- the Franklin Stove. The Franklin-type stove operates as a delayed combuster of wood, releasing carbon monoxide, particulate carbon, carbon dioxide, sulfur dioxide, and possibly aldehydes into the atmosphere. Therefore, the question arises whether hydrocarbons and other hazardous constituents in the wood are being sent into homes, being produced in increased concentrations in the ambient air -- a factor that might account for the higher incidence of respiratory problems.

And, in this situation, are there any possible changes in either the design of the woodburning stoves or in the design of homes that might eliminate the problem?
