Who crossed centerline?

Leach innocent in Bruner traffic death

By Joe Bower

A Tuscola County Circuit Court jury last Thursday found Roger F. Leach innocent of a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the Jan. 29, 1982, traffic accident which took the life of Cass City school teacher Bonnie Bruner.

The 12-member jury deliberated for 3½ hours over the course of two days (one hour Wednesday evening and 2½ hours Thursday morning) before reaching its verdict.

Leach, 27, of 5688 Hugh Drive, Lot 50, Millington, and Miss Bruner, 30 at the time, were involved in a two-car collision on M-15 about four miles south of Vassar. According to sheriff's reports at that time, the pickup truck Leach was driving crossed the centerline and struck Miss Bruner's car. The accident took place shortly after 9:30 p.m.

The prosecution's accident reconstruction expert, Sgt. Jon Cluff of the Michigan State Police Traffic Service Division agreed with the sheriff's reports.

"Based on my investigation, the defendant drove left over the centerline striking the victim," he testified.

Cluff estimated Leach was at least one foot over the centerline traveling northwest when his truck collided with Miss Bruner's car. He thought that Leach's vehicle was at an approximately 30-degree angle when he struck the victim's car.

However, defense witness Jonathan R. Crane, an accident reconstruction engineer with a Birmingham, Mich.-based engineering firm disagreed with Cluff's estimated angle of impact as well as his certainty as to the exact location of the accident. He testified that a person "cannot determine who crossed the centerline with any degree of certainty... anyone who tries is giving a false answer."

Crane stated the point of "maximum engagement" occurred one foot in the southeast-bound lane, Miss Bruner's lane, but, the location of the "initial engagement" was impossible to pinpoint.

"For this accident, there are virtually an unlimited number of scenarios which could have taken place," he said.

Both accident reconstruction experts came to their conclusions based on many factors including photos of the scene, damage to the vehicles, gouge marks on the pavement and personal visits to the site. They used separate diagrams to clarify their findings and help explain their theories to the jury.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY Brian R. Schroppe of Caro called only three witnesses to the stand in addition to Crane. One of them, Ronald E. Schnell of Millington, testified that he talked with Leach in Walt's Bar in Millington shortly before the accident. He stated that Leach was not intoxicated.

Chief Assistant Prosecutor Scott Stermer brought 16 witnesses to the stand including Tom Sedler, the defendant's foreman at the General Motors Truck and Coach plant in Flint. He testified he had seen Leach stumble while on the job and smelled alcohol on his breath. He sent the defendant home shortly after 7:30 p.m.

Through cross-examination, Sedler admitted he had been unable to determine whether Leach was intoxicated.

LEACH, WHO SUFFERED lacerations to the head and knee, a slight concussion and a broken shoulder blade in the crash, testified he consumed a half-pint of peppermint schnapps shortly after 4:30 p.m. plus a 12-ounce can of beer after leaving work and a 7-ounce glass of beer at Walt's Bar a short time before the accident.

A motion by Stermer to allow the results of a test made of the defendant's blood-alcohol content following the accident was suppressed by Judge Patrick R. Joslyn. According to the Chief Assistant Prosecutor, a 30-day period elapsed in which the blood sample's exact location was unaccounted for while changing hands from St. Luke's Hospital in Saginaw, where Leach was taken for treatment, to two police crime laboratories.

Stermer said the suppression hurt his case. With this lack of evidence he felt the defense's expert witness, engineer Crane, was able to sway the jury in reaching their decision.

"He created a definite impression in their minds that made the cause of the accident scientifically uncertain," he commented. "They couldn't find who crossed the centerline."

Defense attorney Schroppe's case centered around the prosecutor's inability to prove "beyond a reasonable doubt" that Leach was guilty. He added that if a "certified expert couldn't determine in which lane the accident occurred" then no one could.

If convicted of the charges, Leach could have faced a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison.

"I think what did it (convinced the jury) is the fact that no expert could put him (Leach) on the wrong side of the road," said an elated Schroppe after the trial. "No one can attest with any certainty as to who did it."

Tentative accord for county staff

Negotiators for the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners and the union representing courthouse employees reached tentative agreement on a new contract last Wednesday, the day before the old pact expired.

Members of Local 2697 of Council 25 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, are scheduled to vote on the tentative agreement this Thursday.

If the employees approve it, county commissioners are slated to vote on it at their regular meeting Tuesday.

The two sides have agreed not to release details of the contract until and if it is approved.

Tentative agreement was reached in only two negotiating sessions.

VICTORY -- Leslie Colling beat the rest of the pack of 2-4-year-olds in the lollipop crawl, just one of the many children's games held Monday in the park at Cass City's Fourth of July Festival.

WATCH 'EM GO -- Cass City Sports women's bed race entry pulls away from Surgery Silver Streak in Monday's popular contest. Cass City Sports went on to win the women's division.

Queen -- Susie Sheldon, daughter of Lena Teller, was crowned festival queen at the Saturday evening pageant by Chamber of Commerce President Curt Strickland. She outpointed nine other contestants for the honor.

KING KONG, having climbed the Empire State Building, found a new height to conquer in Monday's Fourth of July parade.

TALL CORN -- Willard Dodson's corn was more than knee high by the Fourth of July. He is shown with his grandchildren, Tara and Ian Guernsey, 6 and 3 respectively. Dodson, of 6742 Main Street, planted the corn at the end of April. The only water it got other than rain was when he watered some vegetables planted between the corn. Dodson has 22 different vegetables growing in his one-third of an acre garden.

Estimated 8,000-15,000 attend Fourth of July Festival

The Fourth of July Festival was declared a rousing success by just about everyone involved.

Estimates of the number of spectators milling around Cass City Monday ranged from 8,000-15,000.

Co-chairman Curt Strickland thought there may have been as many as 10,000 persons lining Main Street for the big parade which lasted approximately 70 minutes.

Parade chairman Kim Glaspie was extremely happy with the way the main attraction turned out. He noted many entries took part in the procession which cost about $1,300 to put on.

"We had about 70 entries and some of those were multiple entries (having more than one attraction under one name such as the Detroit Corvair Club)," he explained. "I bet with the total there would be close to 100."

After the parade many visitors flocked to the park where most of the day's events were taking place.

One of the biggest draws was the flea market and arts and crafts exhibits in the storage building.

"People said they had really good days," said chairman Sandy Nicholas. "Two or three people have already reserved a spot for next year."

She estimated that the festival committee made about $600 from exhibitors, which was not as much as last year. However, she pointed out that in 1982 the arts and crafts plus the flea market were held over the course of two days.

A TORRENTIAL RAIN which started at 1:20 p.m. appears to have hurt some exhibitors while helping others.

Many people ran for cover in the storage building as soon as the rain started. Due to the sudden influx of shoppers, many of the 38 exhibitors' said sales were up. Outside, it was a different story.

Ed Bergman who had his display of photos and paintings outside said he didn't suffer too much damage to his products but sales were hurt.

"I couldn't sell for about two hours after the rain because of the puddles in front of my table," he said.

Another flea marketer, Buck Service, said, "It was too bad about the rain, they were just starting to come through when we were hit."

One exhibitor had an entire table of glassware turned over by the heavy winds which accompanied the rain. Her glass goods were a total loss.

CONCESSION BOOTHS fared slightly better than the flea markets, Strickland said. The eight concession stands "did extremely well."

The coals in the Lions Club chicken barbecue pits were doused by the heavy showers and took about an hour before they were hot enough to cook the chicken. However, sales of the dinner were not down. Of the 1,200 chickens the club started out with, only about 100 remained at the day's end.

Figures were not yet available but, festival planners are expecting the four-day celebration to just exceed its budget. Strickland said the event will probably be $1,000-1,500 short of breaking even.

The festival's big revenue-generator, the beer tent, did just what it was supposed to -- make money.

"Both Saturday and Sunday we had good turnouts at the beer tent," Strickland noted.

The bands, Fast Break and the Irish Gaels, proved quite popular with the crowds.

THE FESTIVAL BEGAN Friday with the 12-team softball tournament, which ended Monday evening. The rain Monday interrupted play three hours.

Saturday, the queen's pageant was held in the high school cafeteria. Susie Sheldon was picked as the 1983 festival representative. The three member judging panel also selected Barb Root as first runner-up and Rochelle Peters, who was voted Miss Congeniality, as second runner-up.

Strong winds caused cancellation of the ultralight airplane demonstration, scheduled to take place Sunday evening behind the high school.

The pilots and planes planning to come stayed home. Skilled pilots can fly

Accident sends three persons to hospital

An accident Monday evening west of Kingston sent three persons to Caro Community Hospital.

James A. Brun, 30, of Warren, one of two drivers involved, was reported in good condition at the hospital Tuesday afternoon.

The other driver, Julius E. Jones, 39, and one of three passengers, Kenneth Jones, 33, both of Dotham, Ala., were treated and released.

Sheriff's deputies reported the Jones auto, eastbound on M-46, had signaled a left turn onto Hurds Corner Road when the car driven by Brun attempted to pass it.

The Brun auto hit the left rear corner of the other car, then went sideways, rolled over at least twice and landed on its roof northeast of the intersection. The Jones auto spun around and came to a halt facing west in the eastbound lane.

A witness told officers the Rabbit Tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

That downpour that followed the parade Monday in Cass City was expensive for organizations and the July 4 Festival.

It sent visitors scurrying for cover, some going home not to return. At the Rotary food booth it was estimated that revenues were cut 20 percent by the rain.

Since the Festival is paid 25 percent of the gross from all concessions, it's easy to see how revenues were dampened.

While it appears that the economy is improving, there's still evidence that it has a way to go.

A former area resident we know, now an office manager, said that an ad in the Grand Rapids area for a receptionist generated over 200 replies.

Time out for a commercial. In the progress edition the story on Cass City's population showed that it was 1,762 in 1950 and at that time the paper's circulation was just under 1,900. Now the population is 2,258 and the paper's circulation is just under 4,000, including 400 additional subscribers in the last 8 months. That's good news for us and for the community. Newspapers just don't grow in dying towns.

Three injured in accident

Jones vehicle's turn signal was on, but hadn't started to turn yet when hit.

The accident remains under investigation. It was reported at 8:51 p.m.

Phillip R. Miller, 19, of 6330 Pine Street, sought his own treatment after riding his bicycle into the side of a car at 4:50 p.m. last Wednesday.

Cass City police said he exited the sidewalk onto Oak Street, headed west, and ran into the right side of the northbound auto driven by Doris A. Golding, 57, of 6316 Church Street.

Officers said Miller suffered minor cuts on his lips and both hands.

Police ticketed Martin G. Louks, 18, of 6633 Pine Street, on a charge of no proof of insurance after a mishap at 5:45 p.m. Saturday.

They said he backed out of a driveway into the side of a car parked on the opposite side of the street, in front of 6729 Third Street. Between noon and 1 p.m.

Monday, police said, the vehicle driven by Lynwood G. LaPeer, 44, of 7681 Elmwood Road, ran into the rear of a car driven by Kevin W. Bliss, 16, of 6336 Brenda Drive.

The accident took place on Church Street near Scotty McCullough Drive.

Daryl T. Hoagg of 4137 Vulcan Street reported to Cass City police early Sunday that an unknown vehicle struck the right front fender of his car while it was parked at the Northwood Heights Apartments.

At 10:50 p.m. Tuesday, June 28, sheriff's deputies reported, Gary A. Swallow, 32, of 3444 Lamton Road, Decker, was westbound on Deckerville Road, east of Englehart Road, when his car hit a deer.

The pickup driven by Gary Lee Adary, 31, of Marlette, struck and killed a deer at Lanway and Kingston Roads, according to deputies. Report of the mishap was received at 1:29 p.m. last Thursday.

Festival called rousing success their lightweight aircraft in winds of up to 20 miles per hour, but the wind at times was stronger than that.

Event chairman Mike Eliason estimated at least 200 spectators came to see the ultralights.

CASS CITY POLICE had a busy week end, but not directly because of the festival.

Officer Donald Miller said they issued 15 traffic tickets during the holiday week end for such offenses as squealing tires and driving left of center and six appearance tickets for open intoxicants in a motor vehicle or minor in possession of alcoholic beverages. The host of a loud party early Sunday was ticketed for creating a public disturbance. There was a minor two-vehicle collision on Church Street in the park during the festival Monday.

Miller said police did not receive any calls to the beer tent because of noise or persons creating a disturbance, which he said was unusual.

Officers seized four or five small rockets and four packages of small firecrackers, all of which are illegal.

While the festival was not a financial gem, organizers stressed that it was never intended to be.

Before the week-end celebration started, Dave Lovejoy stated, "Our objective is not to make money, it's to show off Cass City."

In that sense, the festival was a rousing success.

KICKING UP DUST-- Randy Rieck of Fairgrove won the 1,800-lb. limited modified mini-tractor division in front of an estimated 700 people at Sunday afternoon's popular Tractor Pull.

Successful Tractor Pull featured many winners

Despite a smaller than expected turnout of entrants, the tractor pull was still considered a success by chairman Kelly Smith. "I was really pleased with it," said Smith who was in his first year as the event organizer. "It was

Scholarship

Five students who completed community college programs of study have been awarded scholarships to continue coursework towards bachelor's degrees at Saginaw Valley State College.

The recipients include Robert A. Johnson, 7070 Greenland Road, Cass City, who earned his associate from Wayne County Community College. He plans to major in pre-med.

Eligibility for the scholarships include a 3.5 minimum grade point average at the community college and service to the community. These scholarships pay up to $1,000 per year and are renewable if a 3.0 grade point is maintained at SVSC.

real good. We had enough people at the gate, but not enough entrants."

Fifty-three drivers participated in eight classes, which was significantly more than the number who took part in the event last year, but Smith was hoping for more. He had hoped as many as 80 contestants might enter.

In spite of the less-than-expected number of entrants, spectators were treated to a good show. Smith estimated 700 persons filled the bleachers and lined the sledding hill to watch the contest.

Winners were: 1,050-lb. open garden tractor: 1) Tony Childs, Munger, 2) John Doss, Washington.

1,600-lb. mini-tractor: 1) Randy Rieck, Fairgrove, 2) Lynn Childs, Munger, 3) Allan Childs, Munger.

1,800-lb. mini-tractor: 1) Randy Rieck, Fairgrove, 2) Lynn Childs, Munger.

5,800-lb. stock four-wheel pickup truck: 1) Rick Helewski, Uby, 2) Joe Booms, Uby, 3) Scott McDonald, Uby.

6,000-lb. farm tractor: 1) Merl C. Allen, Corunna, 2) Charles Fleming, Yale, 2) Jerry Czewski, Uby.

6,000-lb. limited modified tractor: 1) Scott Benson, Fairgrove, 2) Robert Jungeraeld, Bridgeport, 3) Jim Storm, Marlette.

7,000-lb. antique tractor: 1) Kim Czewski, Uby, 2) Lyle Truemner, Cass City, 3) Dana Truemner, Cass City.

Two-wheel stock pickup truck exhibition: 1) Don Osentoski, Uby.

The pull was sanctioned by the Thumb Tractor Pulling Association and was one of the first contests of the season. Many members of the association officiated.

Smith credited Red Osentoski, Ken Osentoski and Carl and Darlene Russell for helping make the event run smoothly. He added that the Cass City Jaycees helped prepare the area.

"If It Fitz . . ."

Most important

By Jim Fitzgerald

"If you don't think President Reagan should run for re-election then you shouldn't read any further."

That was the first paragraph in a four-page letter recently sent to my desk. My desk has always been a Democrat, except for its bottom drawer (which has always been ajar), and it thinks President Reagan shouldn't run for anything except cover. So my desk didn't read any further, as instructed.

When it comes to presidential politics, I usually go along with my desk, except for its bottom drawer, which really has no business being ajar. It's OK for doors to be ajar, but drawers should only be left open, or perhaps unbuttoned. The difference hinges mostly on hinges, or the absence thereof. So whenever that bottom drawer claims to be ajar, I say put a lid on it. If a drawer can't put a lid on, it can't be ajar, and is most likely unhinged.

Anyway, my immediate inclination was to follow my desk's example and read that letter no further. But I was curious to know who would write a four-page letter that began with an excellent reason for not reading it. So, feeling like the sticky-fingered jerk who didn't believe the "Wet Paint" sign, I peeked ahead at the last page.

The letter was signed by U.S. Sen. Richard G. Lugar (R-Indiana). And under his signature he added a post script that began: "This is by far the most important letter that I've written."

My God! I really don't think President Reagan should run for re-election, but I felt it was my civic duty to read the most important letter ever written by a U.S. senator. So I read every word of it, even ignoring a second, more threatening warning on page two which said: "But don't read any further if you're not really positive that you want to help. Because I need only those people with the utmost confidence in our president."

Sen. Lugar was speaking for the National Republican Senatorial Committee, of which he is chairman. The gist of his message was that everyone who read it should send the committee $33 so Reagan will run again. That amount represents $1 for each Senate seat up for election next year.

"The President might decide not to run if he thought we were going to lose the only sure support he can count on — our Republican Senate Majority," Sen. Lugar explained. "Send President Reagan the special ballot I've enclosed personally urging him to run — before the press, Tip O'Neil and the rest of his enemies convince him not to."

That sounds like a lot of gift to me. Even though I ignored Sen. Lugar's clear warnings and read a letter I had no right to read, I'm not going to try to cleanse my soul by sending him $33. I understand Tip O'Neil plans to paint anti-Reagan slogans all over his body and replace the Goodyear blimp at the next Rose Bowl game. So the least I can do, as a member of the enemy press, is not send Lugar $33. Instead, I'll send him $32 and completely ruin the brilliant strategy behind the most important letter the senator ever wrote.

Incidentally, if you think President Reagan should run for re-election, then you shouldn't read any further.

I think Reagan shouldn't run because of the answer he gave when asked if he thought it was strange that none of his aides can remember much about the campaign strategy paper ers allegedly stolen from the Jimmy Carter camp in 1980.

"I don't think it's at all strange...Look, ask me what paper came to my desk last week, and I couldn't tell you," the president said.

This nation certainly pays its president enough to expect him to be able to remember what paper was sent to his desk a week earlier. Otherwise he is left open to charges of incompetence, and left open isn't the same as ajar, because he's too unhinged to put a lid on it.

Moral: If you're still reading this, please send me $50. That amount represents $1 for each of the 50 times I will tell myself that this was by far the most important column I ever wrote.

2 receive music scholarships

Two Cass City students have been awarded music scholarships for summer student study at Blue Lakes Fine Arts Camp near Muskegon.

They are Paul Asher, an intermediate school student and the son of David and Sharon Asher, and Annette M. Stachura, a high school student who is the daughter of Raymond and Antoinette Stachura.

The Lansing firm awards the scholarships to students based on musicianship, citizenship and musical achievement, as determined by the school music staff and administration. Each scholarship is for $150.

The Haire
Net

It's no secret that schools in Michigan are struggling financially. They may be struggling academically as well, but that's another story.

The recent supreme court ruling that says allowing tuition tax credit for students attending private colleges is constitutional promises to make things even tougher.

The theory behind appointing justices to the supreme court is that with lifetime appointment they will not be subject to political pressures.

What it boils down to is justices deciding cases on individual philosophy. Given President Reagan's track record, it's not surprising that his appointees would feel that separation of church and state lines can be blurred.

At this time it doesn't appear that the president's tax credit scheme will make it through the legislature.

There's probably more room for concern at the State level than nationally.

The nitty-gritty of all this is the future of our local schools.

Already operating in the Cass City district area are two private schools.

These schools have already siphoned students from the public school and reduced the amount of state aid received. That increases the local taxes to operate the school.

It also increases the probability for parents of private school to vote against public school taxes.

The private school boosters say that by paying for the education of their children they are saving money for taxpayers.

That's not true. Cass City Schools, for example, have virtually the same costs with 2200 students as they do with 1850.

Right now in Michigan it's hard to see a tuition tax credit law enacted. Probably the most powerful lobby in the state is the Michigan Education Association.

Certainly it will do its best to protect the public schools.

It needs protection. There is little doubt the threat of private schools is greater today than ever before. Most parents sent kids away from public school in the past for religious reasons. Now they are taking them from the public schools for academic reasons.

That's a challenge to administrators and teachers and to all of us who think public education is essential.

The challenge is offering more and better education than we have in the past.

We must work to improve or face the possibility of seeing the system go down the drain.

Owendale Festival to begin Friday

The "Main Street Owendale" festival will take place Friday through Sunday.

The first ever festival is sponsored by the Owendale Community Club.

The opening event is the blooper ball tournament on the high school diamond, which starts at 5 p.m. Friday. The tournament will continue starting at 8 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday.

The Owen-Gage senior class will be busy, starting with sponsorship of a spaghetti dinner from 6-7 p.m. Friday in the high school cafeteria. The seniors will also have a dunk tank, across from the high school in front of the old garage, run a concession stand and sell watermelon.

From 7-8 p.m. will be a family program, featuring musical entertainment, and crowning of a festival queen, who will receive a $50 savings bond. The program will be in the park across from the high school, so spectators should bring lawn chairs. In case of inclement weather, the program will be held in the high school gym.

The beer tent will be set up on the road near the football field. Playing from 9-11 p.m. Friday and Sunday nights will be "Domestic Delivery." "Countryfied" will play Saturday night starting at 9.

The parade down Main Street will start at 11 a.m. Saturday. Line-up will start at 10 behind the high school and any last minute participants are invited to show up then.

Following the parade, at 12:30 p.m., the Owendale Lions Club will be serving barbecued chicken in the cafeteria.

The firemen's water ball competition starts at 1 by the bank. Chainsaw competition begins at 2 on the football field.

Behind the bank at 3 will be a greased pig chase, divided into two classes, for 6-7-8-year-olds and 9-10-11-year-olds. A candy drop for children will start at 3:30 at the baseball field.

The ice cream social at the United Methodist Church starts at 4. "Community volleyball funtime" begins at 5 at the south end of the football field.

Also Saturday afternoon will be a stamp show in the post office lobby.

Early risers Sunday can enjoy a pancake breakfast in the cafeteria, starting at 7.

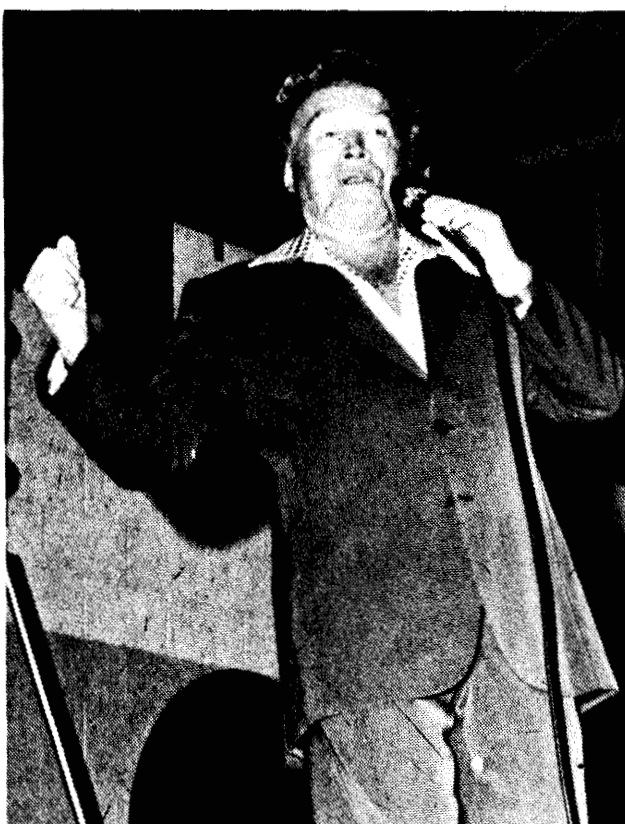

Starting at 12:30 will be the pony pull at the high school field, horseshoe tournament by the bank and euchre tournament in the Community Building.

Signup for the horseshoes will be Saturday at the horseshoe pits. The amateur competition is for ages 16 and up.

A softball game between the Owen-Gage girls' team for 8-11-year-olds and the boys' team of the same age will start at 1.

The final event of the festival, other than the beer tent, will be the tug-of-war at 3 p.m. on the high school field. Weigh-in of teams will be from 2-2:45 at the Sohigro scales and last minute entries can sign up then.

Carnival rides were to be part of the festival, but the company that was to provide them cancelled at the last minute, according to festival chairman Sandra Parks. There may be one ride for kids, on little three-wheel all-terrain vehicles.

MERRILL WOMACH delighted a crowd of more than 400 persons with his 1½ hour concert featuring many popular gospel songs.

Ministerial alliance happy with concert

Gospel vocalist Merrill Womach gave a stirring Fourth of July concert before a large crowd in the high school gym Monday evening. It was hard to determine who was enjoying the show more -- Womach or members of the audience.

The concert which lasted about an hour and 45 minutes was sponsored by the Cass City Ministerial Alliance and considered a big hit by alliance president Rev. Robert Taylor of the Cass City Missionary Church.

"We felt it was quite successful," he said. Everyone we've talked to seemed to indicate it was a success.

Taylor estimated between 400-500 people were in the audience. "The response was positive enough that we're going ahead with it (another concert) next year," he added.

The alliance has already lined up Doug Odham, another nationally known Christian vocalist, for 1984.

In spite of the large turnout at $5 per person, the alliance still did not meet costs. Taylor said the group came up about $165 short of breaking even. Expenses included advertising, gym rental and the amount needed to bring Womach to Cass City, a total of $2,300-3,000.

"It was kind of a big project for our small ministerial with a small backing," Taylor said, "but we were real happy."

It's special

The most important citrus fruit—the orange—is really a special type of berry known to botanists as hesperidium. Ten to 15 segments in each orange contain the juice that's very high in vitamin C, and provides vitamins A and B as well as important mineral salts.

Area food closet need slumping

Things have quieted down a great deal since its inception March 29, but the Cass City area food closet is still in operation at the First Baptist Church, 6420 Houghton Street.

The food closet, one of several in Tuscola county, was established to give food to persons or families unable to qualify or not yet qualified for other types of public assistance, according to Carol LaPonsie, who is in charge of a volunteer group working on the program.

"It was designed as an emergency program only for people out of work with too many material things like cars (being worth more than the allowable maximum) who couldn't qualify for other aid," Mrs. LaPonsie said.

"It's like a feeder program. We send the names of people getting food assistance to James McCann (county emergency services coordinator), then they counsel people and try to get them further help."

She explained that state and federal officials, in encouraging creation of such programs, hope that citizens will take it on themselves to open their purses to help needy residents of their community.

Since the program started three months ago, Mrs. LaPonsie reported that the number of persons seeking food has decreased.

"We've serviced as many as nine families per week to as few as one family," she added. "The past few weeks have had only one or two families but, Mr. McCann told us a drop-off during the summer is to be expected."

Another factor influencing the number of recipients is the economy, she added. Improved economic conditions will eventually mark the end of the food closet, which "is supposed to be phased out as the economy gets better."

As recipients have decreased, so has the amount of non-perishable foods and money donations. Last week the Salem United Methodist Church donated a "generous check," but more such donations are needed.

"We know there are still some needy people out there who could take advantage of the program," she noted. They are the needy ones we are trying to reach but won't come forward for many reasons such as embarrassment."

Workers have been helping to distribute the food on Tuesdays from 9 a.m.-noon.

Food donations are accepted on weekdays, 8 a.m.-noon.

"We would appreciate more community involvement in terms of donations or leads to people who need help," she added.

Assn't prosecutor found in contempt

A Tuscola County Circuit Court jury Friday found a Caro man innocent of the charge against him and the judge who presided ruled the assistant prosecutor was in contempt of court.

William J. Bennett, 20, of 1136 Riley Road was found innocent of a charge of breaking and entering an unoccupied dwelling. He had been charged with breaking into the Caro Packing House on Weeden Road last Sept. 15.

When Assistant Prosecutor David Myers made his closing rebuttal, he mentioned some evidence Judge Patrick R. Joslyn ruled earlier that he could not introduce.

The judge then found Myers in contempt and ordered him to pay a $100 fine or serve 15 days in jail. Appeal bond was set at $200.

Prosecutor Artis Noel said he had the transcript of Myers' rebuttal read to him and then advised his assistant to apologize to the court and pay the fine, which Myers did. There won't be an appeal.

Lack of good nutrition is a problem that plagues persons across the nation, including Tuscola County.

Despite being one of the richest countries on earth, the U.S. has the 18th highest infant-mortality rate in the world, according to nutritionist Martha Kern.

A special program for women, children and infants (WIC) is aimed at helping reduce the number of persons suffering from bad nutrition.

WIC is a special health and supplemental food program that benefits low to moderate income mothers and children four years old and under who are at health or nutritional risk.

Michigan's WIC program recently received an additional $3.7 million from the federal government to allow more persons to join the approximately 90,000 now participating in the program.

Tuscola County established its program in January, 1981, and there are now 900 persons enrolled, said Mrs. Kern, who is the county WIC coordinator.

She is one of two full-time workers, along with one part-time employee, who operate the program.

Huron and Sanilac County Health Departments also offer WIC programs.

Many of the persons participating in WIC do not qualify for other types of public assistance because the value of their assets is too high.

To enroll in the program, pregnant women, breast feeding mothers and children under four years old must meet the following three guidelines:

Reside in Tuscola County, show medical or nutritional risks and have an income not greater than $8,660 for one-person families, $11,510 for two persons, $14,360 for three-person households, $17,210 for families of four, etc.

"People come in every other month to be certified," Mrs. Kern said. "We do a health screening, talk to them on how to feed children and do a nutrition education lesson."

The patients are also checked for anemia in addition to having their height and weight recorded.

The accumulated facts are then sent to the Michigan Department of Public Health (MDPH) in Lansing for computer processing.

Supplemental food is prescribed according to the individual's need. Milk, cheese, eggs, dried beans or peas, cereal, peanut butter and juice are available to women and children. Iron-fortified formula, juice and cereal are foods available to infants.

In addition to the free food, coupons are distributed to participants based on need which enable them to purchase necessary nutritional foods. The coupons are redeemable at various grocery stores throughout the county.

"It's a marvelous thing for infants," Mrs. Kern said. "Very few families in the program would be able to have infant formula without the program."

According to Gloria Smith, director of the MDPH, studies indicate that the program improves the birth weight of infants, significantly decreases infant deaths, accelerates normal growth and development and decreases anemia in children.

Mrs. Kern added that the program passes on an overall savings in medical costs because low birth weight infants require longer stays in the hospital and frequent medical treatment -- all at taxpayers' expense.

"A recent Harvard study showed that for every $1 spent in this program, $3-4 are saved on medical expenses," she said.

MSU slates tour in Sanilac County

Dairy, cash crop and livestock production are featured during the Michigan State University State Farm Management Tour Wednesday, July 13, in Sanilac County.

Sponsored by the MSU Cooperative Extension Service, the tour will review the advanced management practices of nine farms.

The farms will be open for viewing during the day. During the scheduled interview times, a Cooperative Extension Service specialist will interview the operators of the farm and they will answer questions from the public. Brochures describing the tour, which include a map, are available at county extension offices.

The dairy operations are those of Jack Kaufman, 381 Freiburger Road, Sandusky; Tom Stamp and Linwood Dale, 2875 Wood Road, Marlette; and Henry, Ken and Glen Miller, 2411 McGill Road, Marlette.

The Kaufman farm consists of 225 acres that support a herd of 40 registered Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 23,300 pounds of milk and 898 pounds of butterfat. A highlight is the use of on-farm embryo transplants in the herd breeding program. The interview will be at 10 a.m.

The Stamp-Dale operation maintains a 110-cow herd of grade and registered Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 19,500 pounds of milk and 633 pounds of butterfat. The family manages 1,200 acres of corn, alfalfa, wheat, dry edible beans and oats. The interview is at 2:15 p.m.

The Miller brothers partnership operates 1,000 acres that support 130 Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 19,000 pounds of milk and 676 pounds of butterfat. The cropping program includes shell corn, corn silage, alfalfa and wheat. The interview will be at 1 p.m.

THE CASH CROP FARMS on the tour are Gilbert Clark, 5940 Galbraithline Road, Crosswell; Mezo Farms, 1640 W. Walke Road, Sandusky; and Wadsworth Farms, 2191 N. Sandusky Road, Sandusky.

The Ken and Ida Wadsworth partnership operates on 3,808 acres and produces dry edible beans, sugar beets and shell corn. The interview is at 1:45 p.m.

Mezo Farms consists of 3,900 acres that produce shell corn, alfalfa, wheat, soybeans and barley. This partnership between Margaret Mezo and her sons, Frank and Paul, forward contracts most of the crops. The family will be interviewed at 11:15 a.m.

Gilbert and Kay Clark operate on 994 acres, producing shell corn and soybeans for market and for certified seed. The Clarks follow the Chicago Board of Trade reports nearly hourly to help them in their grain marketing. The interview will be at 9:30 a.m.

THE FARMS OPERATED by Earl and Charles Hendrick, 5318 Pringle Road, Decker; Albert Stoutenburg, 70 N. Stoutenburg Road, Sandusky; and Charles Cork, 236 W. Mortimerline Road, Peck, are the livestock stops.

The Hendricks have a farrow-to-finish operation that produces about 750 market hogs annually. Most of their marketing is through the Michigan Live Stock Exchange. Their 700 acres produce corn, navy beans, wheat and oats. The public interview is at 9:45 a.m.

Stoutenburg combines the production of about 200 fed Holsteins, most of which are sold locally, with a cash crop operation consisting of 1,550 acres, on which he produces corn, sugar beets, alfalfa, soybeans, wheat and navy beans. The interview is at 1:15 p.m.

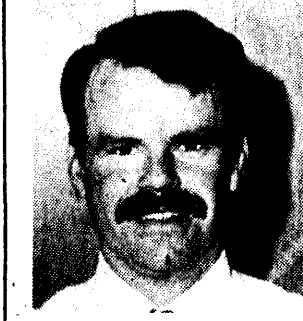

Charles and Dorothy Cork manage 975 acres, on which they produce corn silage that is sold annually through the 2,000 beef cattle they market, primarily through Michigan Live Stock Exchange. The interview is at 2:45 p.m.

A catered lunch will be available to tour participants from 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at the fairgrounds in Sandusky.

Pedaling Around

Baring
my soles

By Mike Eliasohn

I can remember owning two pairs of shoes during my three years in high school -- black penny loafers and brown ones.

In winter, I wore galoshes over my penny loafers. I must have owned a pair of what everyone called tennis shoes, because I had a gym class in 10th grade, but I don't remember them.

Back in those days, all canvas shoes were called tennis shoes even though few persons played tennis. It wasn't possible 20 years ago to become a millionaire batting a ball back and forth over the net, which is why few persons played tennis.

Tennis shoes for boys came in one style, high tops, in black or white.

I think low top tennis shoes started coming into style about the time I graduated from high school 20 years ago.

Never having been one to keep up to date on styles -- some day I'll write about my white socks -- when I had to buy tennis shoes for a physical education class my junior year in college, in 1965 or '66, I bought a pair of high top PF Flyers. By then, everyone was wearing low tops.

I still have the PF Flyers, which I don't wear much any more, maybe because I've only washed them once since I bought them.

The PF Flyers are the first pair of shoes I can remember buying that weren't penny loafers. Since then, the number of shoes I have owned and own have proliferated, partially because I can't stand to throw any out as long as they are wearable, even though they may look like &*&?%.

The only shoes I ever got rid of when still in good condition, probably by giving them to a rummage sale, were some wing tips I bought when I was starting a new job. The wing tips weighed as much as the Army combat boots I later wore, which is why I got rid of them.

My shoe collection really increased when I was in the Army. I came home from two years of service with four pairs of combat boots and one pair of dress shoes.

The advantage of having gone to Vietnam and sitting behind a desk there was that I came home with two pairs of jungle combat boots in excellent condition because it's hard to wear jungle boots sitting behind a desk.

The jungle boots have canvas sides and ventilation holes for quick drying of the wearer's feet after foraging a stream or walking in a monsoon rain storm. I got caught in few monsoons when I was in Vietnam, but fortunately, I never had to ford a stream.

I figure had I not gone to Vietnam, in two years' time, I would have worn out my two pairs of regular all-leather Army boots, thus I would have come home with nothing except the dress shoes, which stylewise don't go with anything.

Considering what I now do for a living, the combat boots are only slightly more useful than the dress shoes, since I have avoided long marches since I got out of the Army. (In civilian life, long marches are known as "hiking" or "backpacking.")

Monday's Fourth of July celebration was one of the few times that I wore my Army combat boots (the all-leather ones), since they are very comfortable for standing in and walking around all day.

I have accumulated other shoes along the way.

There are my two-tone blue saddle shoes, which go well with the various shades of blue pants I have. The shoes are semi-comfortable.

When I decided penny loafers were no longer in style, I bought a brown pair of shoes with a strap and buckle and a black pair. The brown pair are semi-comfortable. The black ones are uncomfortable.

When I discovered leather shoes with thick rubber soles were popular for the casual look, I bought a pair.

The first pair I owned were stolen -- not while I was in them. The second pair I bought are now so shabby, I rarely wear them. One place I wear them is while driving my car, for which they are very comfortable. Some shoes aren't comfortable while driving long distance.

My present pair of wear-in-public-leather-shoes-with-thick-rubber-soles are semi-comfortable.

You may have noticed a lot of footwear I own is, at best, semi-comfortable. That's why I hope when I die, the undertaker will bury me in my stocking feet.

Cowboys may like to die with their boots on, and I presume be buried in them, but for me, no thanks.

The trunk of the African baobab tree is sometimes as wide as the tree is high. The tree is pollinated by bats, and its blossoms open only in moonlight.

Grant Twp.
elections set for July 12

Residents of Grant Township will be voting Tuesday on two issues, a 3-mill levy for three years for road maintenance and dust control and a renewal of a franchise with Detroit Edison.

Polling place is the township hall on Rescue Road and voting hours will be 7 a.m.-8 p.m.

Renewal of the franchise for 30 years allows Detroit Edison to continue to operate in the township. Grant is one of several governmental units in the area where such franchise elections are being conducted this summer.

The township board thought it would be an opportune time to try again for a road millage, according to Supervisor Betty Powell, since the utility will pay part of the cost of the election.

The board has asked voters five times since 1976 for a road millage and each time the proposal has been defeated.

If the levy is approved this time, it will raise $47,972 the first year, based on the present state equalized valuation of the township. It will be assessed on tax bills starting with the ones mailed near the end of this year.

All the township had money for this year, about $8,000-9,000, Mrs. Powell said, was for one mile of graveling. Some money will also be spent for patching, cutting brush in ditches and dust control.

The board won't decide on what roads work will be done, according to Mrs. Powell, until it sees whether the millage is approved.

Probate court charging
for services

The Tuscola County Probate Court has begun charging for probate and other juvenile court services.

Judge W. Wallace Kent Jr. explained that the legislature recently passed an amendment to the Juvenile Code permitting juvenile (probate) courts to charge families a reasonable amount for their services.

Accordingly, his court has begun assessing parents of all juvenile probationers who are able to afford it a monthly fee for probation services delivered to their son or daughter.

The normal assessment will be $10 per month, not to exceed a total of $100, according to the judge. Depending on the family's financial situation, the amount will be adjusted for individual cases.

"All monies so collected will be turned over to the county general fund and as a result, we will hopefully reduce the net expense of court services which has been paid by the county," Kent said.

Editor's note: Hawley was expelled from school because he had more than the maximum allowed number of demerit points for disciplinary infractions.

What those infractions were is not public information, but the demerit points are assessed for such violations of school policy as tardiness, skipping school, misconduct and smoking in school.

Supt. Donald Crouse said when students are assessed the demerits, they meet with the principal or assistant principal.

In addition to those meetings, according to the superintendent, Hawley was warned after he accumulated enough points that he was close to being expelled and that further violations could result in his being kicked out of school.

I have heard from friends that know Martin Hawley that he is a person with good character. I've heard that he is an honor student with a scholarship.

According to my sources, he was not allowed to receive his diploma because he missed one day over the allotted absences. Did anyone question why he missed that one day too many? He could have a very good reason.

Why is the school board handing out such harsh punishment?

From what I've heard, it seems to me that he really cares about his future. How many kids try for scholarships if they don't care? If he didn't want to make something of himself, then why would he work so hard in school?

As a high school student with a 3.5 grade point average, I know how hard a person has to work to get good grades. They have to work even harder to get a scholarship. Not everyone is willing to work that hard for anything.

In closing, I want to ask why are they punishing him so much just for trying to get ahead in the world?

Was the disturbance that big and destructive to warrant such harsh punishment? I don't understand the reasoning behind that ruling.

Letter to the editor

School board is too harsh

Dear Editor,

I am a student entering my senior year at Owen-Gage High School.

I have been following your articles concerning Martin Hawley. After reading these and talking to friends about Martin Hawley, I have become very agitated with the ruling of the Cass City School Board.

I have heard from friends that know Martin Hawley that he is a person with good character. I've heard that he is an honor student with a scholarship.

According to my sources, he was not allowed to receive his diploma because he missed one day over the allotted absences. Did anyone question why he missed that one day too many? He could have a very good reason.

REV. CLARE PATTON

Storm downs tree

The wind and rain storm which hit the area about 1:20 Monday afternoon downed a large willow tree on the farm of Ken and Cathy Hampshire on Legg Road, Kingston.

The tree, which measured about 14 feet in circumference, could have fallen on any of three farm buildings, Mrs. Hampshire said, but missed all of them.

All it knocked down was a fence.

In addition, half a tree which was growing in two directions and a small tree on the farm also were blown down.

Mrs. Hampshire said between the wind and the rain and rushing to close windows in the home, "We didn't hear a thing," when the big tree fell.

Salem pastor likes Cass City

Rev. Clare Patton is the new pastor of Salem United Methodist Church.

He and his wife, Louine, come to Cass City from the United Methodist Church in Vassar, where they had been since June, 1972.

Rev. Patton first served the Methodist Church in Columbiaville from June, 1962-67, then was at the church in Wisner for five years before going to Vassar.

He said he and his wife feel good about having stayed within a circle of 50 miles during his years in the ministry.

Before being called to the ministry in 1959, the Pattons lived in Flint, where he worked in construction and built custom homes. Woodworking is still his hobby.

The Pattons have three grown sons: Steve and his wife Laura live in Virginia Beach, Va., where he works for a company that makes sight and sound media presentations and his wife is a computer programmer. Brian is beginning his final year at Candler School of Theology in Atlanta, Ga., and expects to return to the Detroit Conference of the United Methodist Church for ministerial appointment next June. Terry and his wife Judy live between Vassar and Caro. He is a grain inspector for Grain Inspection Inc. and his wife is employed by the Tuscola County Department of Social Services near Caro.

The Pattons said they like living in Cass City, expressed appreciation for the reception they received and said their aim in the ministry is to "pool their gifts and graces with those of the members of the Salem congregation for ministering to those in need."

Shabbona Area News

There will not be church services at the Shabbona RLD Church this Sunday, July 10. Church officials hope everyone will attend the Eastern Michigan District Reunion being held at the Blue Water grounds near Lexington. Every one is welcome to attend the meetings.

Mrs. Clarence Cox (Phyllis Churchill) of Cass City was a Monday evening caller of Mrs. George Krause.

Donnie Smith was admitted to Hills and Dales Hospital, Cass City, Monday afternoon with pneumonia.

Julie Smith left Wednesday for Chicago, returning Friday. This was the trip she won at Fashion Square Mall in Saginaw.

Different gases are used to produce the colors of "neon" lights: argon for blue, neon for red, helium for yellow, and carbon dioxide for white.

Teachers finish training course

Marilyn Peters, Campbell Elementary School reading specialist, and Marlene Erla, Campbell kindergarten teacher, recently completed an intensive three-day workshop at the Intermediate School District office in Saginaw on administering the Gesell Developmental Readiness Test.

The Gesell test measures the developmental age of a child. It allows one to determine a child's readiness for school and make decisions regarding school placement.

ment. The test is based on a set of norms obtained by examining thousands of children at every age level and is scored in terms of age and not in terms of points or percentages.

Many schools are currently focusing their attention on this new method of determining a child's readiness for kindergarten, which uses developmental age as the criterion for school placement instead of the usual criterion of chronological age.

Rather than looking at the child in terms of intelligence, chronological age, or academic achievement, the concept of developmental age attempts to understand the child at his or her present level of functioning, which includes physical, intellectual, social, and emotional growth.

Evidence is accumulating that indicates not looking at a child's developmental age can lead to highly unsatisfactory behavior on the part of the child and possibly lead to a disastrous school career.

A child needs the maturity to cope and learn at the same time. One who is not ready will spend his or her energy trying to cope with all the distractions in a classroom and have little energy remaining for learning, according to the two teachers.

It is important to realize there is no way the growing process can be rushed by anyone. Pushing and hurrying tend to put a child's natural development out of balance.

Your neighbor says

Japan's U.S. car export quota should be extended

The Japanese government announced Thursday it will end its voluntary practice of limiting the number of cars it exports to the U.S. effective April 1, 1984.

Russ Schneeberger of Schwegler Road believes this could present serious problems if the American government does not impose a refined import tax and quota system on the number of automobiles Japan is allowed to bring into the U.S.

"I think we should automatically put a tax on the cars as soon as they come into the country," he said. "The tax should raise the price so they would be equal with American cars. They (the Japanese) should not get a cut rate (on car exports to the U.S.) like they do on TVs and radios."

In his opinion, the reason Japanese cars sell for less is because American employees will not work for wages as low as those of Japanese workers.

"They don't have the taxes we do so they can work cheaper," Schneeberger explained.

"They (the Japanese) pay more over there for things they export than they charge (for them) over here."

If the American government will not put an increased tariff on Japanese-made cars, he feels President Reagan should put pressure on the Japanese government to impose another limit on the number of cars exported.

Many economists are debating whether the economy can handle an influx of foreign cars after finally showing signs of escaping the grasps of a recession. Last week Ford Motor Co. revealed that car sales were up a whopping 73 percent over June 1982 figures.

Will this come to an end if a limitless number of Japanese cars are again available on the market? Schneeberger like everyone else does not know.

"People should think American," he added. "We should start a campaign to buy American, but not just cars — everything."

While auto makers are saying their models are equal to or better than Japanese-made cars, not all buyers agree. Many Americans feel they can get a better vehicle for less money if they buy a Japanese make.

"I'm not sure all American cars are equal (to Japanese cars) but we have better service," Schneeberger said.

He added that American auto makers are better at admitting problems exist with their makes and will not wait to recall defective vehicles. Japanese auto makers will "just let problems go."

Schneeberger is the co-owner of Schneeberger TV Sales and Service. He and his wife Olga have one son and two daughters.

HEALTH TIPS

First aid for the unconscious

A large amount of oxygen is supplied to the brain through the body's circulatory system.

When the normal blood-oxygen flow is temporarily interrupted, we faint or lose consciousness.

Experiencing severe emotional upset, going without food, or standing still too long can stimulate the vagus nerve, which is connected to the brain, heart, and secretory glands of the stomach.

The pulse slows, the heart curtails its work, and blood vessels dilate. Blood collects in the lower extremities, depriving the brain of oxygen, which can induce fainting.

Fainting is usually not serious, though severe injuries can occur due to the fall. Lay the person down, elevate the legs, and the person will usually regain consciousness. Don't shake, shout, or throw cold water. Do not try to make the person drink anything until consciousness has been regained.

Before fainting, a person generally feels weak and nauseous; skin perspires yet feels cold.

If you feel these symptoms developing, sit with your head between your knees and breathe deeply and slowly. Or kneel as if to tie a shoe. The feeling should pass.

Fainting can be caused by serious disorders (stroke, epileptic fit, confusion, diabetic coma, drug reaction, shock, concussion, fracture, heat exhaustion, sunstroke). It is important to know when a loss of consciousness requires medical attention.

First, if breathing is slow (less than 10 breaths a minute) or stopped, give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation at once.

Second, look under the eyelids. Unequal-sized pupils can indicate brain injury or stroke.

Third, control any bleeding by pressing with a clean cloth or your hand.

If the cause is not obvious, look for nearby clues such as live wires, empty bottles, or signs of an accident. Also look for a wristband, necklace, or card identifying the person as diabetic or subject to other medical problems.

If no symptom of a serious disorder is present:

--Keep the person lying flat and warm, but not hot;

--Loosen any restrictive clothing;

--Do not let a crowd of people close in;

--After consciousness is regained, reassure the person in a calm voice.

Get medical help if the person:

--Is not conscious within a few minutes or faints repeatedly;

--Shows difficulty breathing;

--Shows partial paralysis;

--Lost consciousness after a blow to the head;

--Seems to have pain in the chest;

--Has unequal-sized pupils;

--Lost consciousness for no apparent reason;

--Is elderly.

Heat exhaustion. Hot weather can bring about heat exhaustion, especially in someone unaccustomed to the heat. Heat exhaustion occurs when a person's body lacks enough liquid and salt to tolerate excessive sweating.

Symptoms include pale, clammy skin, nausea, dizziness, and faintness. Breathing and pulse rate may rise; headache and muscle cramps develop. If the heat exhaustion is not treated, heatstroke may develop.

Lay the person down in a cool place, out of the sun, and elevate the feet.

Loosen clothing. If the person is conscious, give water to drink with a little salt added, if possible.

Prolonged exposure to intensely hot weather or the sun can cause heatstroke or sunstroke.

Symptoms include a high temperature; flushed, hot, dry skin; a strong, rapid pulse; confusion, and unconsciousness. Body temperature must be rapidly reduced. At a temperature of 107 degrees or 108 degrees F, not uncommon in heatstroke, brain damage or death can occur.

--Move the person to a cool place.

--Remove clothing. Wrap the person in a cold, wet blanket or sponge with cold water. To reduce a very high temperature, immerse the person in cold water or pack with ice.

--Fan the person.

--Rub the person's arms and legs toward the heart.

--Continue the fanning and rubbing until the temperature drops to 101 degrees F. If the temperature starts to rise again, repeat the cooling procedures.

--Get medical attention for the person as soon as possible.

Hawks' across Michigan run expected to raise $2,000-$2,500

The Cass City High School boys' and girls' cross country teams combined efforts to complete their goal of making the 209-mile run across the state last Thursday in order to raise money.

According to girls' cross country coach Doug Grezeszak it took the group 22 hours, six minutes and one second to make the trek -- two hours ahead of schedule.

The eight girls and nine boys ran the distance in relay fashion passing a baton to the next runner. The furthest interval anyone ran at a time was one mile.

Despite the rapid pace, the trek was not easy for the eight girls and nine boys. Blisters, aching muscles and exhaustion troubled everyone. A few of the runners suffered upset stomachs.

In spite of those minor problems, they succeeded. That in itself was no small task.

"Everyone kept saying, 'I can't believe we're gonna do it,' and when we got to Lake Michigan, someone said, 'Are we really going to do it?'" noted Grezeszak.

The runners undertook the challenge in order to raise money to buy shoes, orange juice for meals and a trip to Sleeper State Park. Coaches estimated between $2,000-2,500 in pledges will be collected.

It was a big accomplishment which many could not even attempt to do.

"If you take an ordinary group of runners," Grezeszak noted, "they couldn't do it."

After starting in Montague on the shore of Lake Michigan, the squads kept up a staggering pace which put them as much as three hours ahead of schedule. They started to feel the effects of the run, the heat and lack of sleep after Bay City. In the approximately 45-mile stretch to Cass City, Grezeszak estimated they lost an hour.

In the end, however, they made the distance and rewarded themselves with a swim in Lake Huron in Forestville.

"I doubt I'll do it again," Grezeszak said about making this an annual fund raiser. "It was just too much work and too exhausting for the runners."

In addition to Grezeszak and boy cross country coach Dennis Meck, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Meck, Danny Gee and Katha Cleland helped do the behind-the-scenes work such as driving the vehicles.

Croft-Clara 2nd at Midland

Croft-Clara finished second in a 10-team round-robin tournament June 25-27 in Midland. A 4-1 record was good enough for first place in its division, pitting the Cass City team against Auburn Fertilizer in the playoffs. Auburn went down 3-2 in eight innings.

Mitchell Corp., which Croft-Clara had defeated in bracket play, was the opponent for the championship game. Mitchell won 4-1.

Croft-Clara played last week end in Ludington and finished the round-robin tournament with a 2-2 record. The first loss came against Custer VFW, 1-0, which put away all chances of making the playoffs.

OVERALL WINNERS in the five-mile run Saturday morning were Tim Brown of Caseville in a time of 27:40 for the men and Gayle Bond of Williamston among the women at 35:01.

Keen competition

Tug-of-war draws crowd

NECK AND NECK — Mike Forthun and Scott Kieser make it a race to the wire in Monday's tug-of-war. Kieser finished less than half a step faster with a time of 6:33.

Even though only eight teams competed in the festival's annual tug-of-war Monday afternoon, chairman Wayne Dillon felt they provided the best competition ever in the five years the event has been held.

"It was excellent," he said. "Everything went smoothly without any problems. We had a lot of good teams."

Helping Dillon make sure "everything" went smoothly in the hour-long double elimination tournament were Ron Nurnberger, who did the announcing, and Anton Peters who served as official starter.

In the women's competition, Stauffer Seeds of Sebewaing prevailed as the top team with an unblemished record. J.D. Market of Snover finished second and Sal's Country Clippers, last year's champs, were third.

TOP RUNNERS IN Saturday morning's five-mile run were, kneeling, from left, Sara Strickler, Peck, women age 30-34; Corey Bradley, St. Louis, Mich., boys 14 and under; Deb Moore, Kingston, girls 14 and under; Betsy Light, Reese, women 40-44. Back row, Flave Stimpson, Saginaw, men 45-49; Jeff Gunn, Harbor Beach, boys 15-19; William Schumacher, Port Austin, men 40-44; Gayle Bond, Williamston, first overall for women and 15-19 age group (time of 35:10); Paul Mayes, Port Austin, men 20-24; Tim Brown, Caseville, first overall and 26-29 age group (27:40); Steve Hammett, Cass City, men 30-34; Joe Gravin, Bay City, men 50 and over, and Bob Parrott, Cass City, men 35-39. Fifty-three runners started and 52 finished.

Stauffer Seeds' men's team beat the three other men's entries to defend their one-year reign as champs. Finishing second was Miller Thrillers of Pigeon and the Sod Busters, also of Pigeon, were third.

Dillon estimated about 800 persons attended the event, located in front of the football grandstand.

"The crowd was very good," he commented. "The bleachers were full and people were standing everywhere. I thought it was well attended."

1-2-3 PULL! The Sod Busters tug-of-war team from Pigeon give it all they got during the intense competition of the show of strength contest Monday.

BIG BERRY — "It looks like a pin cushion and it's as big as a tomato, but that's a strawberry," said Marion Whitefoot, 63, 6396 7th Street. She found the fruit in a quart purchased at a local grocery store.

FUTURE REMBRANDT? — Jenny Rick demonstrates her creative skills at one of the easels of the AAUW's paint-in for kids.

Cancer patient help

Reach to Recovery is a group of volunteers who have had cancer and want to help others with the same problems. New patients are often confused by advice and stories from friends, co-patients, and articles in magazines. They often need someone "just like them," to share with the psychological aspects of surgery and chemotherapy.

therapy, according to Glenis R. Kirkey of Caro. Teresa Lasser began Reach to Recovery after she had breast surgery in 1952. The American Cancer Society has taken over the program since then.

The volunteers for Reach to Recovery have had a brush with cancer in their own lives, and lend their help and support to new breast cancer patients, who are often confused and worried about their future, Ms. Kirkey said.

They must learn to cope with a change in their body image and often some form of chemotherapy and perhaps financial problems because of the cancer.

A Reach to Recovery volunteer will be there to help with the patient and the patient's family.

For more information, call Ms. Kirkey, of the Tuscola County chapter of the American Cancer Society, at 673-5231.

Police issue ticket for loud party

Complaints of a loud party sent Cass City police to a home on Leach Street at 2:45 a.m. Sunday.

The person hosting the party, Scott M. Murphy, 20, of 4294 Leach, was ticketed

Smoke bombs start three small fires

Three smoke bombs, apparently thrown from a car, started three small grass fires about a half-mile east of Schwegler Road Sunday evening.

Elkland Township firemen received the call a few minutes after 8.

The three fires were about a quarter-mile apart, Fire Chief Jerome Root Jr. said, and all were started by smoke bombs, about one inch in diameter, which firemen found.

The fires were all close to the road. The biggest area that burned was about 10-by-20 feet.

GRASS FIRE

Elkland Township firemen were called to a grass fire at 5603 Elizabeth Street Sunday afternoon at 5:48.

The fire was reported by Danny Gee Jr., 6603 Elizabeth Street, and burned about a half-acre, according to Fire Chief Jerome Root Jr., before being extinguished.

The property is owned by Alfred Horne of 4118 Seeger Street.

Root said the cause of the blaze has not been determined.

on a charge of creating a disturbance in public.

One of the guests, James P. Shaw, 19, of Madison Heights, was ticketed on a charge of possession of open intoxicants in a motor vehicle as he was about to leave. He was taken to the county jail and later released after posting bond, pending appearance in district court.

Murphy is to appear in district court within 14 days of the date he received the ticket.

Police said the noise was being made by a loud stereo and banging on a bell.

Stephanie Hartwick, 5, was treated and released from Hills and Dales General Hospital after being hit with a stone last Wednesday.

Her mother, Karen Hartwick of 6684 Huron Street told police her daughter was playing in the village park and a young boy was throwing stones. His parents told him to stop, but he threw another stone and it hit Stephanie just below her nose.

The boy then got into a car with his parents and they left.

William K. Pretzer, 13, of 2815 Froede Road, Kingston, was treated by a physician after he was bitten by a dog while riding his bike at 4 p.m. June 24.

Sheriff's deputies said he was riding in front of 2401 Froede in Wells Township when he was bitten by an Airedale owned by Sandra Moery of 2385 Froede.

The owner was told to confine her dog 15 days for observation. Dorothy Stoddard of Vassar reported to Cass City police June 28 that at 8:27 that evening, she heard a noise and discovered the rear window of her car was broken. It was parked in front of 6327 Houghton Street at the time.

A 14-year-old boy later told police he had done the damage with a BB gun. He said he was shooting at a stray dog to drive it away from his dog and didn't know until later he had hit the car window.

A report on the incident was turned over to the prosecutor's office for a decision on possible petitioning the youth into probate court.

25 entries compete in festival dog show

Twenty-five children and their canine companions took part in the Fourth of July Festival dog show Monday afternoon sponsored by the Thumb of Michigan Dog Fanciers.

The dog judged as being the best overall was Ming Toy, a Shih Tzu, owned by Kara Kole of Sebawaing. Ming Toy was also voted the best looking dog and the funniest.

Other winners in the competition were:

Shortest tail -- Bruiser, a rottweiler owned by Missy Forester, Elkton, with a tail measuring 1 1/2 inches.

Largest -- Tiger, a Great Dane, owned by Marhi Kole, Sebawaing, at 34 inches tall.

Longest tail -- Nick, a German shepherd, owned by Jeff Gibor, Cass City, with a tail of 21 7/8 inches. Best tricks -- Libby, multi-breed, owned by Bobbie Fischer, Cass City.

Best costume -- Ashley, a miniature schnauzer, owned by Carry Baker, Cass City, which also won "best behaved."

According to chairman Judy Rocheleau, plaques were awarded to the individual winners. Everyone else who competed in the show received a ribbon.

She felt everyone seemed to enjoy the show.

"We had a good turnout," Mrs. Rocheleau said. "The old people enjoyed it just as much as the young people."

Next year's dog show will probably have a different format than this year's show. Mrs. Rocheleau noted a drill team demonstration may be conducted.

Taking stock

My old friend, Dr. Charley Redfield, the squire of Juno Beach, sent along a sheet from a wine-tasting service, and I'd like to share some of the comments in it.

Incidentally, Charley is not an MD, so there is no medical endorsement implied.

He got a PhD from Cal Tech in a previous century and uses the term doctor only in making reservations at the race track restaurant and in ordering vitamins wholesale.

Some selected paragraphs from the experts' appraisals of California wines:

Taylor's California Cellars dry red wine: "This wine displays the 'cooked fruit,' sweetish low acid, juggy character typical of Central Valley reds at their worst."

(Juggy character? I know a few people whose profile could best be described as "juggy," but a juggy wine, Charley, you'll have to explain.)

Turner's California Burgundy: This raisiny and cheap red offers no real redeeming features, but on the other hand, it is not distinctly foul.

(Sounds like an ideal wine to have on hand when unexpected callers drop in at 5 p.m. and you'd rather they'd stayed home.)

Donna Marie Vineyards, Sonoma County Red Wine: Apparently made by the technique at its worst, in a sharp, nasty, gassy palate impression.

Further excerpts from the dissertation of the experts (mind you, Charley paid for this service): "I was startled by the poor showing of the 1978 Jordan (a French Red) because I thought its richness and youthful fruit would stand out in dramatic comparison...but it was for those very characteristics of drama and assertiveness that the tasters marked it down!"

Enough said about wine. Personally I prefer beer, the working man's drink. I have only two objections to American beer — it has no taste and it's served too cold.

On the other hand, I have only one objection to foreign beer — it costs too much. If there is a solution to this dilemma, other than drinking water, let me know.

And enough said about beer. On to more cultural subjects.

If you're driving north (or south) on either the Blue Ridge Parkway or Interstate 81, you'll find Lexington, Va., a delightful place to stop.

It is the home of Washington and Lee University, which has as pretty a campus as you'll ever see.

The whole school looks just the way a school should, with classic pillared buildings, great expanses of beautiful oaks and well-kept lawns and a whole air about it of dignity and charm and seriousness.

The Robert E. Lee Chapel on the campus has many mementos of this great man, and it is a pleasure to visit.

After getting back to Florida I learned that a fellow townsman and neighbor of little ol' Lapeer, my home town, was president of Washington and Lee.

Johnny Wilson was one of the more successful products of Lapeer High School and later, Michigan State University.

He was one of the lads who excelled in everything — scholarship, athletics, and in leadership. When he went to Michigan State, his talents developed as he grew, and he won one of the 96 Rhodes scholarships awarded each year to students all over the United States.

He got into the educational field after returning to America from his stay at Oxford and has come up through the ranks to head this fine university.

I was so sorry not to have known he was there at Lexington and to have visited with him again after all these many years.

There is another famous school at Lexington: Virginia Military Institute, whose alumni have been such greats as Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and General George C. Marshall.

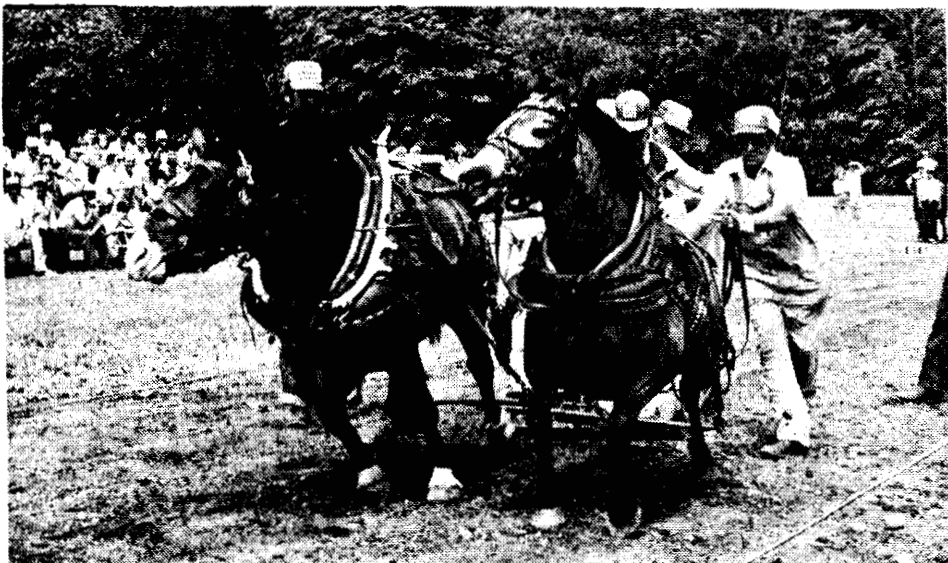

The Marshall museum there, completed only recently, is an impressive tribute to General Marshall, whose concept of the Marshall plan to restore Europe after the war, will forever be a tribute to his foresight and character. Please visit it.

Down the road about 10 miles is the famous Natural Bridge, unfortunately in private hands, as it has been since Thomas Jefferson first bought it and 158 acres two centuries ago.

You enter the grounds through an area best described as the world's biggest bus station mated with tons of cheap souvenirs and catch-penny devices.

The nightly "sight and sound" presentation would be all right if they had omitted the sound, which consisted of dreary recorded hymns along with a reading of the first chapters of Genesis, which had really very little to do with this geological curiosity.

It was a lazy man's cop-out to steal this ready-made, no-copyright script, however inappropriate.

PONY PULL -- Keith Walsworth, shown here, of Rothbury won first and second place with his two teams in the heavyweight division of Monday's pony pull, with the winning team pulling approximately 5,000 pounds. Lyle Bowers of Weberville was third. The lightweight division was won by Don Brown of Perry, with his team pulling 4,000 pounds the 14-foot maximum distance. Second and third with his two teams were Paul Phillips of Decker. Ten lightweight and seven heavyweight teams participated.

JUST BROWSING -- Karen Osentoski and her mother, Clara Gaffney, look through some handicrafts Monday. They were just two of the many shoppers who visited the arts and crafts booths in the park's storage building.

UP AND OVER -- Motorcycles trials riders would never get caught in a traffic jam. Another obstacle they went over in the exhibition Monday was a station wagon, starting from the back end without a ramp. A few hundred persons watched.

O-G waits for hearing results

It's time to wait for the Owendale-Gagetown Board of Education, which last week was involved in four hearings in two days in Lansing.

Wednesday, the State Tenure Commission completed its hearing concerning teacher Nancy Folk and the school district's withholding part of her pay as reimbursement of unemployment compensation she received. The hearing was Tuesday and Wednesday.

No immediate decision is expected. "You're probably talking six months," Supt. Ronald Erickson guessed.

Wednesday, Ray Godmer, hearing officer for the state Board of Education, conducted three supplemental property transfer hearings.

Two involved requested transfer from Owen-Gage to Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port. Board President Ronald Good said Mr. and Mrs. Richard Welchner spoke in favor of transferring their property. They have two children in school.

No one appeared to speak in favor of transferring the Dietzel territory to E-P-BP, which also involves two children.

The third hearing concerned requested transfer of the Schaper-Kain properties back to Owen-Gage from E-P-BP. It had been transferred to the latter district as part of the much larger Elenbaum transfer in 1975.

E-P-BP Business Manager Robert Drury spoke in support of keeping the property where it is, according to Good, but admitted its loss would hurt the Laker district less than it does Owen-Gage. The board president didn't know how many children are involved.

Huron Intermediate School District Supt. James McBride answered questions concerning the requested transfers.

Doing most of the talking for Owen-Gage was its attorney, James F. Schouman of Dearborn, and Erickson.

The transfer requests have been tabled since 1976 or 1979, depending on the property involved.

Good said Godmer will enter into the record that the high school addition has been completed since then, the high school is now accredited, curriculum has improved and the district is willing to pay tuition for students to take elsewhere courses that Owen-Gage doesn't offer, such as vocational agriculture.

Godmer will make a recommendation to the state board, which will then approve or deny the transfer requests.

More grain in storage 11 teams compete in festival bed races

The June 1 grain stocks report for Michigan showed higher stock levels for corn, soybeans and oats compared to the same time last year.

Corn stored in all positions at nearly 177 million bushels was 34 percent higher than a year ago, according to the Michigan Agricultural Reporting Service.

Soybean holdings at over 9 million bushels reflect a 16 percent increase from last year.

Old crop oats in storage totaled nearly 7 million bushels, more than double last year's quantity.

Old crop winter wheat continues to be the only major crop in Michigan to display lower stock levels. June 1, holdings totaled just under 7 million bushels, 26 percent below last year's level.

Nationally, corn stored in all positions June 1 totaled a record high 5.08 billion bushels, 30 percent more than last year's level.

Soybean stocks in all positions totaled a record high 867 million bushels, up 33 percent from a year ago.

Old crop wheat stored in all positions totaled a record high 1.54 billion bushels, 32 percent greater than the 1.16 billion bushels on hand a year earlier.

Old crop oats stored in all positions totaled 229 million bushels, 51 percent more than a year earlier.

"What is easy is seldom excellent." Dr. Johnson

The first bed races staged as part of the Fourth of July Festival proved to be a popular event.

Seven men's and four women's teams competed in contests held on Main Street before the parade.

Teams covered the one block-long races in rapid time. Many of the entries had times of 17 seconds or less.

Emerging as the winners in the men's bracket was the team of Cass City Sports which was made up of Dave Heacock, Phil Martin, Dale Doyen, Dave Luanna and rider Cheryl Ganley. Second place team was the Cass City High School custodians.

Cass City Sports also prevailed in the women's bracket.

Team members were Becky Nye, Joan Hahn, Bonnie McDonald, Kathy Nye and Cheryl Ganley.

Best appearing bed and crew was Hills and Dales surgical entry nicknamed "Surgery Silver Streak." Members were Jean Anthony, Gayle Nicol, Dr. Robert Genovese (the rider), Karen Bock and Viki LaPratt. They finished second in the race.

The races were scheduled for only half an hour in order for the parade to start on time, therefore the competition was forced to be single elimination. Festival planners were pleased with the new event and said next year they will schedule more time for it.
