Street project over estimate

Council lowers Cass City millage rate

Cass City property owners were granted relief on their property taxes this year thanks to action taken by the village council Tuesday evening.

The council approved a millage rate of 15.1230 mills, a reduction of .1765 from last year's levy. The new rate will be reflected on tax bills to be mailed in about three weeks.

The levy consists of 9.918 mills for operating (10.0567 last year); 2.705 for streets (2.7428 last year), and 2.5 for debt retirement for the sewage treatment plant bonds (no change).

The total millage times Cass City's state equalized valuation of $23.44 million means $354,501 in revenue, an increase of $15,611 from 1983. The 1983 SEV was $22.15 million.

The revenue gain will be because of new construction since last year. Because of the state truth-in-taxation law, had the council chosen to levy the same millage as last year, it would have first had to conduct a public hearing.

By not holding a hearing, the millage levy had to be rolled back so that the village won't gain revenue from inflationary increases in property values.

Whether individual property owners will pay more in property taxes, the same or slightly less depends on how this year's assessment compares to last year.

SEGER REBUILDING

Hunt Construction Co. of Cass City was awarded the bid for rebuilding the quarter mile of N. Seeger Street between the old and present village limits, including curb and gutter and widening to four lanes.

Its bid of $90,266 was the lowest of five received. It was, however, about $15,000 more than the estimate of the village engineers, Hubbell, Roth and Clark, Inc., apparently due primarily to the increase in the cost of asphalt. Added to that must be about $15,000 in engineering costs.

To pay the increase, streets committee Chairman Elwyn Helwig explained, the village will probably have to delay paving the four blocks of alleys downtown east and west of Seeger, for which $15,000 was budgeted this year.

The state Department of Transportation, may, however, pay the village $13,000 as the state's share for repaving that portion of Seeger as part of the detour when the M-53 bridge over the north branch of the Cass River is rebuilt next year.

If it does, then the alleys can be paved this year. Hunt is to have the job completed by Aug. 15.

PROVINCIAL HOUSE

Provincial House Administrator Alan Sward told the council Beverly Enterprises, owner of the Provincial House chain, is considering building 16 apartments on the site for senior citizens. They would be for persons who could mainly live on their own, but could utilize Provincial House nursing services and eat some meals there.

"I'm really in the preliminary asking state....," he said. Council members were supportive of the idea and advised him to meet with the village Planning Commission.

OTHER ITEMS

The council accepted the bid of Harris-Hampshire Agency of Cass City for general liability insurance for three years, at a base bid of $15,286 for the first year premium, the lower of two received.

The agency recommended some changes in coverage, including increasing the "umbrella liability" from $1 million to $2 million, with the result the actual first year premium will be $16,104. It will be less the second and third years because the first year premium includes all three years for public officials liability and the treasurer's bond.

Village officials will meet next week Tuesday with a representative of the Department of Natural Resources and the East Central Michigan Planning and Development Region for an update on the village landfill. The landfill is supposed to be closed by Sept. 1 if the council decides to do so, though that will no doubt be delayed.

A public hearing will be held at the July 31 meeting on abandoning the alley that runs east from the Parkway Store for four lots, three of which are owned by the store.

The Michigan Department of Transportation has notified the village its crews will be removing all non-standard and unauthorized traffic signs on state highway (M-81) right of way.

Under new regulations, the village will have to make all its buildings barrier free for the handicapped in order for it to continue to receive federal revenue sharing ($40,000 this year). The plan has to be completed by Oct. 17 of this year and access ramps, bathrooms that can accommodate wheelchairs, etc., must be installed by Oct. 17, 1986.

Esther McCullough, long-time library board member, has resigned, effective July 1. In her place, the council appointed former council member Nat Tuttle.

The former police car used by village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie will be sold to the highest bidder. The 1979 Chevrolet has about 115,000 miles on it. The village is getting a new police car and LaPonsie will then drive the oldest one, a 1981 model.

Owendale woman loses life in Monday morning house fire

The cause of a house fire southeast of Owendale early Monday that took the life of Imogene P. Ricker, 57, is still undetermined.

Mrs. Ricker, a widow, lived there with her son Matt, 17. Results of an autopsy performed Tuesday at Huron Memorial Hospital, Bad Axe, were unavailable Wednesday morning.

The house was located on Gagetown Road, 1½ miles south of Sebawaing Road. Owendale firemen received the alarm at 6:30 a.m., and later were joined by firemen from Gagetown, Elkton and Sebawaing. Fire Chief Robert McPhail said. The fire was out by 11 a.m.

Jim Albrecht of Owendale, who does chores for Charles Timmons, a neighbor of the Rickers, reported the fire. When he passed the Ricker home at 5:30 a.m. on his way to work, there was no sign of fire, McPhail said.

As Albrecht was leaving one building at the Timmons farm, he saw smoke at the Ricker home, a mile away.

Albrecht and Dennis Robinson, an Owendale fireman who was driving by the Ricker home, were the first persons at the scene. The northeast corner of the home was already in flames, and the two men could not enter, according to McPhail.

The house was completely in flames by the time the Owendale firemen arrived. They did not realize there was anyone in the house until Matt and his brother Kit arrived at the scene. Matt had spent the night at Kit's house in Gagetown.

Firemen were at the scene for nine hours. Forty firemen battled the blaze and four pumpers and five tankers were used. Owendale fireman Alan Kretzschmer said.

The body was found on a ground-floor entranceway to the back door of the house.

Representatives of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department arson squad were at the scene at 11:30. The arson squad should have a report on the cause of the fire ready some time this week, McPhail said.

No exact estimate of the loss has been determined, but he said it is over $100,000. There were valuable family heirlooms and antiques inside the house.

The house itself was the old Ricker homestead, a two-story structure with pillars supporting the front of the house, McPhail said.

Matt lost all his belongings in the fire, according to his sister-in-law, Jessica (Mrs. Kit) Ricker. He will now be living with her and her husband.

Mrs. Ricker was born May 13, 1927, in Michigan, the daughter of Norman and Ada (Hoffman) Wales. She married Donald Bruce Ricker Oct. 5, 1946. He died Feb. 22, 1981.

She was a member of the Owendale United Methodist Church and an active member of the Owendale United Methodist Women's Society.

She is survived by three sons, John Ricker, Saginaw, Kit Ricker, Gagetown, and Matthew, at home; eight grandchildren; one brother, Richard Wales, Bay City, and a sister, Mrs. George (Jean) Martin, Zilwaukee, and several nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by two sons, Mark and Paul, and a brother who died at birth.

Funeral services will be at 3 p.m. Thursday at the Owendale United Methodist Church, Rev. Myra L. Sparks officiating. Burial will be in the Grant Township Cemetery.

Memorials may be made to her church.

Jobs often different from training

Is county Skill Center doing its job? Administrators say 'yes'

The Tuscola Area Skill Center, supported by 1.75 mills paid by county property owners, is in its fourth year of operation.

Are taxpayers getting their money's worth?

Principal Howard Napp says they're getting a bargain.

"They're getting their money's worth and more," said Gene Niedzwiecki, assistant principal for student services.

The Skill Center, on Cleaver Road, Caro, operated by the Tuscola Intermediate School District, opened in September, 1980, with the aim of teaching vocational skills to high school students. Presently, 775 students are enrolled, approximately half in the morning and half in the afternoon. They come from the nine local school districts in the county and attend their home high school half a day and the Skill Center a half day. About 30-40 percent attend the center two years; the rest, one year.

The students, 11th and 12th graders (and a very few 10th graders), are enrolled in 24 different programs: automotive body shop, automotive mechanics, agricultural mechanics, welding and cutting, drafting, electricity and electronics, child care, building trades on-site and in-school, general merchandising, heating and air conditioning and cosmetology (taught at Howard's Beauty Academy in Caro).

Also, health occupations, nursing aide, building maintenance, data processing, stenographic, commercial arts, food management, machine trades, graphic arts, landscaping and turf management, floriculture - greenhouse management and management information systems.

A SURVEY WAS made in spring of last year of the 1982 graduates. Contact was made with 418 of them, which is 84 percent of those who graduated.

Of those, 32 percent (133) were attending school, either college, trade school or an apprenticeship.

Fifty-three percent, 222 students, were working full- or part-time (excluding the military), which includes students who were going to school and working part-time.

That meant 15 percent were either looking for work, homemakers or had joined the military.

Of the 133 students who were in school, 74 said they were receiving advanced training in the field they studied at the Skill Center, 21 said they were using "some" of what they learned there in their advanced training, six "hardly any" and the rest not at all.

Of the 222 with jobs, 54 were using their Skill Center training "a lot," 33 were using it "some," 19 "hardly any" and the rest, "not at all."

IN SIMPLE TERMS, the majority of students aren't getting jobs in what they were trained to do, which seems counter to the purpose of the center.

There are various explanations, according to Niedzwiecki.

One is that some students, after attending the Skill Center for one or two years, discover that what they learned to do isn't what they want to do for a living.

Some skills taught at the center require more training if the student is to find work in that field.

For instance, of 16 students enrolled in health occupations, 12 of those surveyed were enrolled in post-high school training, such as x-ray technician, physical therapist or hygienist.

In data processing, 19 of 27 students were enrolled in further training. "It's a very technical program and students in that area are not necessarily looking for entry level jobs" (hence the need for more training), Niedzwiecki explained.

Another factor was the poor economy.

Of 19 nursing aide students -- a field needing no advanced training -- only four had full-time jobs nine months after graduating and none as nursing aides. The three with part-time jobs weren't working as aides either. Four were taking more schooling and eight were still looking for jobs.

Graphic arts (printing and related trades) had a similar poor placement record. Of the 13 surveyed, five had full-time jobs, none of them in graphic arts. Four were attending school (two in graphic arts).

The assistant principal pointed out that the Skill Center isn't necessarily training students for jobs in this area, that some may have to move out of state to utilize the skills they were taught in order to earn a living.

OFFERING COURSES for which there is a need is something the Skill Center administrators must take into account.

It is partly self-regulating. "Enrollment reflects what is happening in the trades," Niedzwiecki said. "Students realize that and we realize that, too."

One result of declining student interest and lack of enough jobs is that the on-site building trades class is being suspended after this year. During 1984-85, there will be only one section of building trades, which will be taught in school. There also will be only one heating and air conditioning class.

"If It Fitz . . ."

Hanging loose

By Jim Fitzgerald

The front page of the May 1 issue of the Honolulu Advertiser featured a United Press International photograph of two unidentified people clinging to a tree near my home so the terrible wind wouldn't blow them into the freezing Detroit River. That photo made my wife and me feel great because we were sitting on Waikiki Beach when we looked at it.

We felt great all the time we were in the 50th state and it wasn't just the gorgeous scenery and the perpetually lovely weather -- warm sun, cooling breeze, eater optional and no sweat unless you really want to. There are a lot of joggers polluting the air with expended energy, but no place is perfect.

Mostly, it was the friendly natives that made us want to return to Oahu and Maui. I am under strict orders from my wife to tell you how nice everyone in Hawaii is to the tourists. She is a real stickler about wanting to exchange non-stop warm smiles and kind words with everyone who enters her life. I long ago trained myself to chuckle kindly in my sleep, just in case she's awake.

On Maui, at the foot of a mountain, there is a sign directing people to look up and see John F. Kennedy. It is not like Mount Rushmore, with famous faces carved into the rock by sculptors using dynamite. The Kennedy profile was chisled by Mother Nature, and it's difficult for tourists to spot the resemblance.

"See the large bush halfway down the east slope of the mountain? Look just a few yards below that and you'll see him," our guide directed, and my wife looked and looked until finally she saw Kennedy. "Why isn't he smiling?" she asked.

Anyway, in recent years we've vacationed in such tourist-infested places as New York City, New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlantic City and Las Vegas. Always we found much to enjoy, but also always we found considerable rudeness. I'm not nearly as gregarious as my wife. I never talk to strangers unless they're bartenders; she shows photos of her grandchildren to tree stumps. But I'm just as dismayed as she is by the curt answers and almost beligerent indifference so often received from people who resent having to take the time to take my money.

There was none of that in Hawaii. The state's largest industry is tourism, and the natives appear to appreciate the visitors and want them to return. That's just smart business, of course, but the natives also appear to be nice to each other.

My wife was most impressed by the auto traffic. Drivers are continually stopping and motioning -- with a smile -- for the other guy to go ahead, on wheels or on foot. "Look at that, look at that," she kept saying. "If I ever saw that in Detroit, I'd drop dead from shock."

Everywhere we went, we were told -- in words and song -- that the national motto of Hawaii is "Hang Loose." And there is a "Hang Loose" signal: Clinch the three middle fingers, stick out the little finger and the thumb, and wave at strangers. Don't stick out the wrong finger.

Despite the rampant friendliness, there must be crime in Waikiki, otherwise there wouldn't be a safe in every room of the Sheraton Waikiki Hotel. It made my wife feel like a millionaire to lock up whatever jewelry she wasn't wearing whenever we went out. Except it costs 25 cents per lock, she locked the safe 14 times, and $3.50 is more than I spent for the Crackerjacks that came with her jewelry.

Speaking of money, you might like to know the total cost of the seven-day vacation, including air fare, tours and double room, topped $2,500. That's enough to make a poor man stop chuckling kindly in his sleep, but it was worth it to Hang Loose in Hawaii.

I even visited the grave of my journalistic idol -- Ernie Pyle -- and rubbed my typing fingers against the banyan tree that Robert Louis Stevenson sat under while writing "Treasure Island." If that doesn't improve my writing, please don't be rude enough to tell me. Be Hawaiian.

TOM STIMPFEL, a Cass City High School junior, was chosen by his Tuscola Area Skill Center classmates in drafting as "drafter of the year," based on quality of work, attendance, attitude and initiative. The son of Thomas and Doris Stimpfel received a certificate and drafting equipment donated by two Caro businesses.

Contestants needed for festival queen

Contestants are needed for the Cass City Fourth of July Festival queen pageant, which will be July 2 at the high school cafeteria, pageant coordinator Sally Doerr said.

Entrants must be 15-18 years old and live in the Cass City School District. The deadline to enter is Monday and interested persons should call the Clothes Closet in Cass City, telephone 872-3930, for details and to enter.

Candidates will have personal interviews prior to the pageant. Three judges will ask them questions about themselves. That will count for 50 percent of the competition.

Candidates will give a 4th of July speech at the pageant. "This speech is about history or something special that happened to them," Mrs. Doerr said. This speech will count for 25 percent of the contest. All candidates will participate in a dance choreographed by Mrs. Doerr. They will be judged for overall performance and how well they learned the dance, she said. That will count for 10 percent.

The final event will be the evening gown competition, where candidates will be judged for poise, coordination and smile, Mrs. Doerr said. That counts for 15 percent.

About 13 girls on the average sign up for the competition, she added. "A lot of them have felt it's a lot of fun. And they get to know girls they went to school with but did not know," Mrs. Doerr said.

Road board appealing big judgment

The Tuscola County Road Commission is appealing the $400,001 judgment it was ordered to pay by a federal district court jury.

The jury in Bay City May 11 awarded the damages to Richard Griffiths, who was laid off from the Road Commission Aug. 27, 1981. Although the letter he received at that time said the action was due to "lack of work," he claimed the real reason was because he had expressed concerns about the possible misuse of county Road Commission equipment and social activities being held during work time to two members of the county Board of Commissioners.

The jury, in agreeing with Griffiths, awarded him $350,000 in compensatory damages from the Road Commission, $1 in compensatory damages from Highway Engineer Robert Wellington and $50,000 in punitive damages from Wellington. The verdict came at the end of a three-day trial.

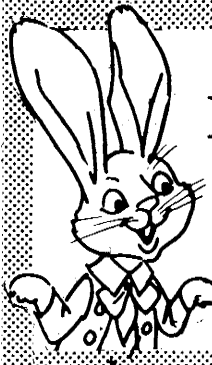

Wellington told the Chronicle Friday that the Road Commission's attorney, William Stertz Jr. of Saginaw, has filed some motions with the district court, one of which is for a new trial.

He said the attorney is also working on the question of whether the Road Commission's insurance carrier has to pay the damages if the verdict is upheld on appeal. Stertz feels such civil damages are included in the policy, but if the insurance company feels it isn't liable, Wellington indicated, that could also be the subject of legal action.

"It's probably going to be a long, drawn out affair," Wellington predicted.

Frog killer

A single drop of Australian tiger snake venom contains enough poison to kill 25 people, reports National Wildlife magazine. Fortunately, this medium-sized snake normally uses its toxin only to kill small frogs.

Rabbit Tracks

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

Detroit Tiger baseball fans are everywhere. Now that the team is winning, winning, winning, they are drawing crowds of transplanted Michiganians when they visit other parks.

Some of them live in California, some just visiting. Among the visitors watching a game against the California Angels were Mark Guinther and his dad, Stan.

Mark is finishing school out west and the Guinthers were there for his graduation. I learned about the visit to the ball park because the radio announcers mentioned the Guinthers while broadcasting the game.

Jack Esau completed his 25th year as master of ceremonies for the annual Memorial Day services at Elkland Township Cemetery.

In the 25 years the ceremony has never been rained out. But it has been rained on. This year the proceedings were conducted in a steady drizzle.

A check of the record revealed that Memorial Day 1983 wasn't all that great either. It rained before and after the service at the cemetery.

The month of May was said to be three degrees colder than normal. We don't have the statistics for May 1984 but we can tell you without looking that Tuesday was cold, cold, cold.

Last week I was taken for a ride in my elder daughter's father-in-law's DeLorean. The driver was my son-in-law and he obviously gets as much kick out of exotic cars as his dad.

And his dad has the bug bad. He sold his Corvette to buy the DeLorean. He uses his new car to drive to the weekly dance for senior citizens. He's 70, but that's another story.

Love affairs with cars and mechanics is as American as apple pie.

Well, apple pie I love but a car is something that takes me where I want to go. I get some strange looks when I tell a buddy that my latest car is an eight cylinder, I think, and is a 1982 model, I guess.

I am a little fuzzy about any of the innards. Well, really all I know for sure is that without gas the darn things won't run. Remind me to tell you some day about the time I ran out of gas twice with the same car the same afternoon.

There are a few things that I am fussy about with a car. Never mind a little dirt or a scratch here and there. I can live with that, and do.

What I absolutely demand is that it runs when I want it to.

Any car that won't start will be started on the road to the used car dealer.

That's the only MUST for my cars. There are other desirable items that I look for.

One is that it be comfortable. I forgot to tell you that in the DeLorean you sit in bucket seats that seem to be about a foot off the pavement and I'd hate to have to ride in it all day!

I want my cars quiet, too. Wind sounds rushing around the windows make it hard to hear the radio and is one of the reasons that I regret buying my current hardtop.

If you have small kids, the DeLorean would probably give you problems in addition to finding a place to sit.

Those gull doors that open up work on the touch of a button. But when you want to close them it takes a hefty pull to do it.

DeLorean buyers aren't looking for comfort or convenience. Power and performance? Maybe.

But what they really buy is the looks of other car bugs when the car is ogled in a crowded parking lot.

Cars like the DeLorean are undoubtedly making a statement.

The only trouble is that I never receive the message.

Firemen called to Provincial House

Elkland Township firemen were called to Provincial House at 1:15 p.m. Sunday because of a short in the air conditioner mounted on the roof.

Wiring in the unit burned and the fire department was called after smoke was smelled coming through the ducts.

Firemen climbed on the roof to inspect the air conditioner and removed some parts to make sure it wasn't still burning. It wasn't.

Fire Chief Jerome Root Jr. estimated it would cost at least $2,000 to repair the unit.

REV. JAMES McCALLUM of Trinity United Methodist Church gave the address during the Memorial Day service at Elkland Township Cemetery. On the stand with him is Jack Esau, who was serving as master of ceremonies for the 25th year.

"TAPS" -- Jon Garety (left) and Jim Vernier of the Cass City High School band played "Taps" to end the Memorial Day service, which was shortened because of the drizzle.

Pedaling Around Great spectacles

By Mike Eliasohn

As I start writing this, the real Indianapolis 500 ended about two hours ago and the televised version begins in four hours.

I will watch tonight, if for no other reason than nothing better is on. "The Greatest Spectacle in Racing," as the Indy 500 likes to bill itself, isn't much of a spectacle when one already knows who won.

For those who like automobile racing, television doesn't offer much unless they have cable television and ESPN. The networks televise maybe three races live a year and the rest are tape delayed.

I don't care what the sporting event is, it isn't much fun to watch when the viewer already knows who won. That certainly held true for this year's Winter Olympics. When ABC broadcast them in the evening, anyone who listened to a dinnertime sports news roundup already knew all the winners.

The delay in showing the Indy 500 can't be blamed on ABC. The promoters of the race won't let it be shown live, out of fear some would-be spectators decide to do their spectating at home.

The management, by the way, never releases attendance figures, but estimates are more than 350,000 persons come every year, making it probably the world's largest one-day sports event.

Those who do brave traffic jams to see the Indy 500 at least get to watch a race that is three hours long.

In contrast, the appeal of the Kentucky Derby escapes me. Sure, there's lots of pageantry, the race is exciting and there is betting, but two minutes and it's all over. Imagine looking forward all year to something that lasts two minutes.

The only sporting events that are sometimes shorter are boxing matches. Pay $100 for a ringside seat and 39 seconds of the first round there is a knockout and it's over. That works out to $2.56 a second. Definitely not cheap thrills.

As for this year's 500 -- call me a liar if you want, since I can't prove it -- but I had a feeling very early in the race that Rick Mears would win.

Although 33 cars start, it's a safe bet in any year that no more than maybe 10 drivers have a chance to win. The other drivers aren't good enough and/or their cars aren't good enough.

For presumably understandable reasons, the best drivers usually have the best cars.

Unlike most other sports, there are no sure things in auto racing, which is probably why little betting is done on it, except for some friendly wagering.

Sure, Mears, who had won the race once before, was one of the obvious favorites to win, but who would have thought rookie Roberto Guerrero of Colombia would finish second.

Detroit Free Press sports writer Charlie Vincent's top three choices to win were Mario Andretti, Tom Sneva and Howdy Holmes. None finished.

Guerrero was one of six foreign drivers in the race.

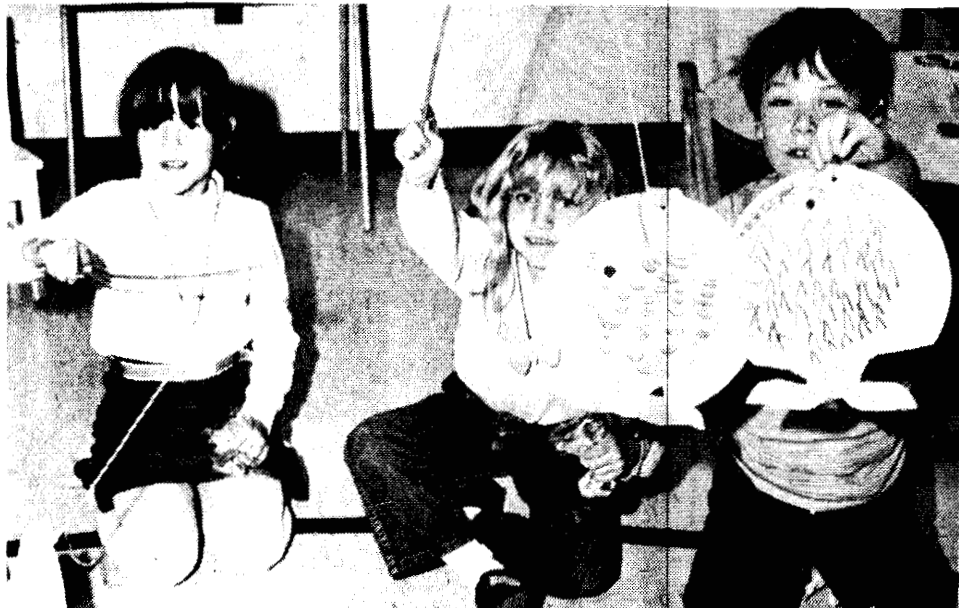

As for foreign cars, put it this way -- there was only one American built car with an American built engine in the race.

Twenty-nine of the cars were British built Marches and two were British Lolas. Thirty cars had British made Cosworth engines.

Speaking of wheel-to-wheel competition, there will again be a bed race prior to this year's Fourth of July Festival parade.

If you have any questions or want to enter, contact me at the Chronicle.

Wednesday, June 6, is the 40th anniversary of the Normandy invasion, D-Day. My efforts so far to find someone who was there have been unsuccessful. If anyone reading this was there and is willing to talk about it for an article, please give me a call at the Chronicle, 872-2010, day or evening.

YOUNG AUTHORS -- Leana Edwards, 6, LeeAnne Soldan, 6, and Steve Vaughan, 8, show off the fish they made in the "Gone Fishing" workshop of the Young Authors Day Friday at Campbell Elementary. Students discovered literature through stories and arts and crafts at the all-day event.

PARADE -- Rita Coe, a parent volunteer, leads a children's rhythm band on accordion and harmonica in the "I Love a Parade" workshop, while Gary Truemmer, 7, and Jake Lounsbury, 5, play along on tambourine and triangle respectively. Later the students participated in their own parade down the hallways.

Theft in Vassar has reported worth of $722

Items worth an estimated total of $722 were stolen from a Vassar area building owned by a Cass City man.

Wendell S. Honsinger of 4754 Hunt Street reported the theft to Tuscola County deputies May 16. The building is on Sohn Road.

Taken since May 12 were a 6 horsepower engine worth $200; acetylene tanks, gauges and hoses for a welder, $200; 3 1/2 horsepower mower, $150; two 25-foot air hoses, $75; assorted tools, including a saber saw, $85, and 5-10 gallons of gasoline, $12.

Theft of a steel file box was reported to Cass City police last Thursday by Sandy Weltin of 4262 Oak Street.

The box, stolen from her bedroom, contained three checks worth a total of $171, $50-100 in cash, her Social Security card and birth certificate and her mother's marriage license. It was taken between May 8 and 22.

Theft of $1,000 from a home on Kingston Road, Kingston Township, was reported to sheriff's deputies early Sunday. No further information was available by Tuesday.

Lee A. Deeg of Unionville told village police Saturday afternoon that a radiator hose was cut on his car while it was parked from 12:10-2 a.m. that day behind The Station, 6432 W. Main Street.

The engine then seized after driving the car, causing an estimated $500 damage.

Cheryl Wilson of Marlette told village police at 2:45 a.m. May 19 that the windshield of her car was smashed while it was parked behind Fort's store, 6468 Main Street, since 8 the previous evening. Cost of replacing it was at least $150.

Cass City police arrested two persons on charges of driving with license suspended or revoked.

Arrested at 9:30 p.m. last Wednesday was Maryneen T. Samuelson, 45, address not available, whose car was stopped on Main Street near Doerr Road because of a broken taillight.

No district court information was available by Tuesday.

Ivan E. Stilson, 24, of Hazel Park, was arrested at 1:45 a.m. Monday after the car he was driving was stopped on Seeger Street near the south village limits after the police officer observed it crossing the centerline.

Stilson pleaded guilty to the charge Tuesday morning in Tuscola County District Court. Judge Richard F. Kern accepted his plea and fined him $57, plus $47 court costs.

A 16-year-old girl was apprehended for shoplifting in the parking lot of the Caro Fisher's Big Wheel store by a store security officer late Friday afternoon.

The officer told sheriff's deputies the girl took a pair of sunglasses and two bracelets worth a total of $21 and asked that she be placed in the juvenile diversion program. The girl was turned over to her parents.

LORA NOLAN, 7, puts the finishing touches on the gingerbread house she made for the "Witch's Gingerbread House Cookies" workshop. The students listened to the story of Hansel and Gretel prior to making the houses.

Young persons are confirmed

Fifty young persons were confirmed at St. Pancratius Catholic Church May 21 in a ceremony to reaffirm their faith in God.

Bishop Kenneth Untener of the diocese of Saginaw was the celebrant at the service, where students in grades 10-12 and young adults received the rite of confirmation.

The ceremony involves presenting the persons for confirmation, renewal of their baptismal vows, the bishop placing his hands on their heads and anointing the persons with oil.

"Paul laid his hands on the disciples. It is an ancient symbol of the passing on of the spirit of faith," explained Rev. Julius Spleet of St. Pancratius.

The anointing with chrism, or perfumed oil, symbolizes the gift of the Holy Spirit from God, Father Spleet said.

The hymns sung at the service were contemporary compositions, which are favorites of the young persons, he said.

"We do it so it is more a personal commitment to the Lord," he said of the service. "It's more psychologically and theologically appropriate. We make this their personal act of faith."

Students attending were from Cass City and Owendale-Gagetown High Schools. They were:

Lisa Benitez, Greg Bliss, Kevin Bliss, Janis Burnette, Laura Dunn, Carol Ehrlich, Marcy Enderle, Michelle Frank, Chris Garety, DeAngela Garety, Jon Garety, Karen Goslin, Reid Goslin, Paula Herron, Paul Hirn, Emily Hoppe, Mark House, Raymond Hrycko, Gerald Kocan, Martin Kocan, Del Kostanko, Leigh Langenburg, Aaron Lefler, Marsha Lopez and Tina Lopez.

GTE to have new service repair number

The repair service telephone number for many communities in this area will be changed June 3, according to Bill Buschle, Division Manager for General Telephone.

Buschle said the number change is occurring because General Telephone is centralizing and utilizing computers to handle customers' trouble reports faster and easier, with the objective of improving customer service.

Telephone exchanges switching to the new system include Cass City, Elkton and Kingston.

"The new system, called Trouble Administration System, creates an efficient, paperless environment to handle repair requests," Buschle said. "It cuts the time needed in half to get trouble reports to the proper repair group."

Customers wanting to report trouble will be able to contact the repair answer center toll free at 1-800-524-1957.

Horses need mosquito virus vaccine

Eastern equine encephalomyelitis (EEE), a mosquito-transmitted viral disease carried by birds, has been a problem in the Lower Peninsula of Michigan during the past three summers.

This virus invades the brain tissue and spinal cord of a horse, disrupting its function. The horse experiences a rise in temperature, becomes depressed and develops a poor appetite. It then has trouble eating and drinking and typically becomes uncoordinated before going into convulsions and finally a coma before death occurs. Surviving animals usually suffer complications requiring euthanasia.

There is no effective treatment for equine encephalomyelitis. Ear vaccination is strongly recommended before the mosquito season begins. The vaccine takes 10 days to two weeks to become effective and can last from six to nine months, depending on which vaccine product is used. For further information, contact your veterinarian or Dr. Ken Gallagher at the College of Veterinary Medicine, MSU, at (517) 353-9710.

Ridge tillage demonstration set for June

June 19 the Sanilac County Soil Conservation District and Cooperative Extension Service will host a Conservation Tillage Field Day, according to A. Rex Sieting, Sanilac Extension Director.

This Field Day will be at the Gilbert and Kay Clark farm at 5940 E. Galbraith Line Road, Croswell, one half mile east of Wildcat Road.

Ridge tillage is a new concept in the area of conservation tillage. A long narrow crest of soil is constructed with a tillage implement the previous year. The current year's seeding is done on top of this narrow crest by scalping the top of the ridge and planting.

The field day will start at 10 a.m. Lunch will be furnished by area implement dealers. The morning will be spent in the field with specialists, looking at corn planted on these ridges. Insect, diseases and herbicides will be discussed as they relate to this tillage system.

After lunch the audience will view the ridge tillage equipment and listen to a farmer panel discuss their experiences with ridge tillage.

Canner gauge testing to be done in Caro

Bicycle safety clinic Saturday

The Cass City Jaycees will conduct a bicycle safety clinic for children Saturday at Cass City Intermediate School, starting at 10 a.m.

The Jaycees will also inspect the bikes for loose seats, chains, etc., and make any such minor adjustments.

The free program should last no more than about 90 minutes.

Thirty-five members were installed.

Settlement reached

Southern Milk can sign farmers

By Mike Eliasohn

An out-of-court settlement clears the way for Southern Milk Sales, Inc., a San Antonio, Texas, based cooperative, to sign up Michigan Milk Producers Association members in the upper Thumb once their MMPA contracts expire.

The settlement, reached May 11, involved two lawsuits filed as a result of Brown City dairy farmer Larry Behr, an MMPA member, signing a contract in February to market his milk through Southern Milk.

MMPA filed suit against Behr, Southern Milk and Donald Martin of Leslie Road, Decker, who hauls milk for Southern Milk to its one customer, the Borden's dairy in Detroit.

The MMPA, Michigan's biggest dairy cooperative, charged in the suit that Behr violated his marketing agreement with it by signing with the other cooperative.

Sanilac County Circuit Judge Allen E. Keyes conducted a hearing in early March and then issued a temporary injunction barring Southern Milk from marketing the milk of Behr or any other MMPA member with a valid contract.

Southern Milk, Behr and Martin then counter-sued. The case was to be heard May 14 in U.S. District Court in Detroit, but the out-of-court settlement made the hearing unnecessary.

As part of the settlement, according to the MMPA's attorney, David VanderHaagen of Lansing, both suits will be dismissed.

The key part of the settlement from the MMPA's standpoint, he said, was that both cooperatives agree to honor the other's marketing agreements with their members.

That means that Southern Milk can't sign up any MMPA members until their contract with the cooperative has expired and vice-versa.

There are two exceptions. Behr was released from his MMPA contract immediately, so is now selling his milk through Southern Milk.

In addition, eight MMPA members had expressed interest prior to March 2 in signing with Southern Milk. They have until June 15 to do so, otherwise, they will remain with MMPA.

One of the complaints in the Southern Milk counter-suit was that the MMPA contracts were automatically renewed annually unless the farmer gave notice 30 days in advance of the expiration date and that the cooperative did not routinely notify members of that date.

As part of the settlement, VanderHaagen said, both cooperatives will send copies of membership agreements to all their members, along with a notice they will be strictly enforced. The contracts specify how they can be terminated.

Lastly, the settlement calls for MMPA to give Southern Milk a list of its members in the upper Thumb and the termination date of their marketing agreements. The area specified is Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac Counties, plus the top tier of townships in Lapeer and St. Clair Counties that border Tuscola and Sanilac.

MARTIN, WHO IN addition to hauling milk for Southern Milk, also recruits members, told the Chronicle he is picking up milk from 16 farmers roughly between M-81 and Brown City. The only one who was an MMPA member was Behr. Martin started working for Southern Milk Feb. 16.

During the time Judge Keyes' injunction was in effect, he was only barred from picking up Behr's milk. Martin resumed making stops there May 16.

Southern Milk is seeking more dairymen, according to Martin. "We're looking for quite a few more. When it gets more members, he said, it will sell to dairies in addition to Borden's."

Southern Milk presently sells to 25 Borden's dairy plants in the United States, according to him.

The advantage for dairymen to switch to Southern Milk, Martin said, is that it pays 40-50 cents more per hundredweight than does MMPA because of lower overhead costs.

MMPA PRESIDENT ELWOOD Kirkpatrick of Kinde couldn't confirm that, when asked by the Chronicle, but pointed out that since Borden's buys a higher percentage of Class I milk than does the market as a whole, Southern Milk can afford to pay its members more.

The highest premium is paid for Class I milk, which is used for bottling. Uses for Class II, which pays a smaller premium, include cottage cheese, ice cream and yogurt. Class III uses, which has no premium, include butter and powdered milk.

Kirkpatrick pointed out that a key role played by the MMPA is to balance the milk supply with the market. The cooperative operates four plants that turn surplus milk into butter, dry milk powder and cheese.

Southern Milk, being so much smaller and with only one customer, doesn't have to worry about a surplus. Borden's buys all the milk that Southern Milk delivers. When the dairy needs more than that, it buys from MMPA.

Kirkpatrick asked rhetorically what would happen to Southern Milk members in Michigan should Borden's close its Detroit dairy.

The MMPA president and dairy farmer doesn't feel Southern Milk poses a threat to his organization. "I don't view it as having a major impact. We as a major organization have proven ourselves over the years."

KNOCK WOOD by Candice Bergen (non-fiction). Candice Bergen is one of America's most beautiful and glamorous movie stars. She is surely the "girl who has everything" - background, looks, money, fame, opportunities mere mortals dream of. In "Knock Wood," the real Candice Bergen - the sensitive, problematic person who lives inside the exquisite facade - tells her story.

DEEP-SIX by Clive Cussler (fiction). This action-packed thriller features a sinister linkup between an Asian shipping empire, headed by an evil matriarch, and the Soviet Union. The intrigue involves the kidnapping of some senior U.S. officials and their transfer to a Russian cruise ship and the abduction of the President himself aboard his yacht in the Potomac River. He is returned to Washington after a little "mind-intervention" has made him the involuntary mouthpiece of Russian policies. In order to foil these dark machinations, the story's protagonist, Dirk Pitt, tough assistant director of a government marine agency, must undertake dangerous investigations of sunken ships, one of them containing drums of a deadly chemical.

KINCAID by Henry Denker (fiction). Kate Kincaid, RN, is a compassionate, dedicated, talented nurse who is constantly battling the hierarchy of physicians who fail to respect her medical expertise and humane judgment. She is finally driven away from a prestigious midwestern university hospital by such an encounter and finds herself studying family nursing and midwifery in a challenging hospital training center in the mountains of West Virginia. Kincaid struggles as much with her pride (and the local dialect) as with the incredible demands of her course work and nursing assignments.

Counseling for veteran benefits

Veterans and their dependents will be able to get information about veteran's benefits Friday, June 8, from 10:30-4 p.m. at the sheriff's department, 420 Court Street, Caro.

A service van with national service officers from the Military Order of the Purple Heart will be available.

The Purple Heart was first awarded by General George Washington and at that time it was known as the "Badge of Military Merit." It was the first award ever given to soldiers.

The organization was founded in 1932 and was subsequently awarded a United States Congressional Charter. It is an advocate for combat wounded veterans of all wars.

HEALTH TIPS Studies show more dangers in smoking

There may be a way to avoid the sore throat, aches, sniffles, and general misery of the flu.

"A new study shows that pack-a-day smokers are 25 percent more likely than non-smokers to catch the flu," says Rex Archer, M.D., chairman of the American Lung Association of Michigan's Smoking or Health Committee. "It's another reason to kick the habit."

The study, published in the "New England Journal of Medicine," was conducted among more than 300 healthy young men in the Israel Defense Forces during a 1978 influenza epidemic.

The risk and severity of the illness increased with the number of cigarettes smoked daily.

In order to cut the number of work days lost by smokers with the flu, the physicians who conducted the study suggested that large employers adopt programs to discourage smoking and encourage flu immunization.

Another study, conducted at Beth Israel Hospital, Boston published in the "Journal of the American Medical Association" revealed evidence that smoking may increase the prevalence and severity of acute respiratory tract illness (ARTIs) in young adults.

Chest congestion, acute asthma, viral bronchitis, aggravated coughing and pneumonia are all acute illnesses of the respiratory tract.

ARTIs are the most common problems for which people seek medical attention in the United States, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. More than a million days of bed disability are produced each year by these illnesses.

The study showed that the young smokers in the group had a statistically significant greater likelihood of having a lower respiratory tract illness, a nagging cough and wheezing than did nonsmokers.

Study subjects were 867 young adults, men and women aged 16 years and older, with an ARTI and a control group of 289 women.

More funds for road repairing

Reflecting the turnabout in the state's economy, gasoline sales in Michigan are increasing for the first time in more than 4½ years, according to the state Department of Transportation.

That, combined with a 2 cent per gallon increase in the state motor fuel tax which went into effect Jan. 1, means that county Road Commissions and incorporated cities and villages will receive more money for roads for the first three months of this year, compared to the same period in 1983, as their share of Motor Vehicle Highway Fund revenues. License plate fees also go into the fund.

Cass City will receive $19,490 for the first quarter, compared to $15,507 for that period last year; Gagetown, $5,686 ($4,562 in 1983); Kingston, $3,772 ($3,023); Owendale, $4,147 ($3,327); and Ubyly, $7,025 ($5,628).

The Huron County Road Commission will receive $620,169 for the period (499,531 for the first quarter of 1983); Sanilac County Road Commission, $658,902 ($533,177); and Tuscola County Road Commission $714,860 ($577,775).

Statewide, the increase in fuel sales, combined with the tax increase, produced 25.6 percent more tax revenue for the first three months of 1984, compared to the same period last year. License plate revenue was up 4.9 percent.

Your neighbor says

Having first child a 'neat experience'

Cindy Clark became a new mother 3½ months ago when her son Adam was born at Saginaw General Hospital. Being a mother has offered her new and exciting challenges, she said.

Mrs. Clark, 30, is working temporarily at Schneeberger's tending plants. Her husband Keith works for Schneeberger's TV Sales and Service.

Before Adam's birth, Mrs. Clark had to change her diet, eliminating all sweets and salt. The salt part was difficult because salt was so much a part of her regular diet, she said.

The Clarks decided they wanted to have a natural childbirth, and he wanted to help in the delivery room. They were required to take a Lamaze childbirth class, in which parents learn natural childbirth techniques.

When Adam was born, Mrs. Clark was in labor for several hours. The natural childbirth method was quite interesting, she said.

"It was kind of a neat experience. I was able to help deliver him. My husband cut the umbilical cord. I was in labor 16 hours," Mrs. Clark said.

During labor she said she went through many feelings.

"When you're in labor it seems like it drags on forever. But when the baby's finally born, you forget about all the pain and labor you went through," she said.

After she got out of the hospital, she was on her own. Raising the baby can be "scary," she said, because she wants to bring him up right and she has never raised a child before.

"There's nobody to ask questions of because there's no nurses there. You're kind of on your own after you leave the hospital," Mrs. Clark said.

Mrs. Clark, who has been married for six years, waited to have her child. She worked full-time while her husband worked on a college degree. She said she decided to wait because her husband wanted to have a job so she would not have to work full-time and try to raise a child.

The experience is enjoyable.

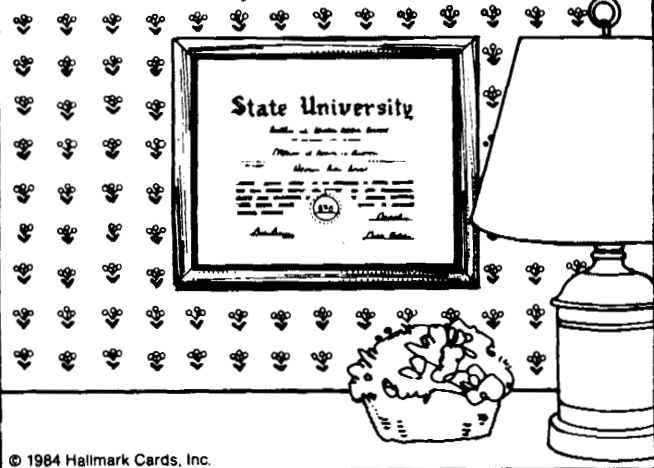

"Just watching them change. It's fast, it's incredible. They just grow, and change, and you see their first smile. It's just so exciting," Mrs. Clark said.

Livestock and crops net farms $3 billion

Michigan farmers received nearly $3 billion from 1983 marketings of crops, livestock, and livestock products, an increase of 3 percent from the previous year, according to the Michigan Agricultural Reporting Service.

Crop cash receipts, at $1.8 billion, increased 5 percent while livestock receipts, at $1.2 billion rose nearly 2 percent. The higher crop cash receipts were due to a combination of larger marketings for some commodities and higher prices for many commodities. The combined effects of the payment-in-kind (PIK) program and the summer drought led to the higher prices.

The higher livestock receipts were due mainly to larger volumes marketed.

Cash receipts from dairy products increased 3 percent during 1983, more than offsetting a 3 percent drop in meat animal receipts. Dairy receipts accounted for 25 percent of Michigan's total cash farm receipts. Cash receipts from poultry and egg marketings rose 5 percent.

Increases in cash receipts from marketings of vegetables, fruit, and wheat offset lower receipts from corn and soybean marketings. Wheat sales more than doubled from the low level of 1982. Vegetable receipts (including dry beans and potatoes) rose 7 percent while fruit crops increased 14 percent.

Soybean receipts dropped 27 percent and feed grains (primarily corn) fell 1 percent. Corn remains Michigan's most important crop in terms of cash receipts, as 1983 marketings accounted for 20 percent of the total.

Nationally, 1983 cash receipts from farm marketings dropped 3 percent from 1982. This drop was due to lower crop receipts as livestock receipts actually showed a slight increase. Crop receipts declined 6 percent from the previous year.

Cash receipts provide only a partial measure of gross farm income and do not reflect the net income realized by farmers.

The best hay silage belongs in silo right away

To make good hay silage, get it out of the field and into the silo as fast as possible.

"There probably is no other feed crop that is so susceptible to undesirable nutrient changes as haylage," says Dennis Stein, Tuscola County extension agricultural agent. "Most of the damage that can happen to haylage can be easily controlled by the farmer."

He makes the following recommendations:

--Harvest when forages are at the bud stage.

--Wilt to between 60 and 65 percent moisture before putting into upright concrete silos. In bunker silos, the moisture can be between 65 and 70 percent. In sealed, oxygen-limiting silos, moisture can be 50 percent.

--Exclude as much air from haylage as possible. Air causes molds and heat damage. Make sure silo doors seal tightly. Resurfacing older concrete silos can reduce air seepage. Close doors to oxygen-limiting silos after each day's filling.

--Chop haylage to 3/8 inch. Haylage that is chopped finer can cause cow health problems such as displaced abomasum.

--Fill the silo rapidly. This will help reduce heat damage.

--Use wetter (65 to 70 percent moisture) haylage on the top of the last 10 feet of the silo to help pack haylage and exclude air.

--Seal the top of haylage with plastic to help prevent air seepage. Crown the center slightly before laying plastic. Cover plastic with haylage, especially around the wall, to make the seal tight.

These recommendations apply to bunker silos, where packing is even more important. Cover the top of the entire bunker with plastic in the same manner as an upright cement silo.

The key to making good haylage is knowing the moisture content of the forage. You need a moisture tester for this. The forced-air type that has a fan and electric heater to blow air through the forage sample is the most accurate. The newer electronic testers work well on grains but not forages. If the moisture content is too low, pull out of the field and wait for dew to settle or allow it to dry for baling.

If large baler is used, the bale should be placed under a roof to avoid contact with rain to keep spoilage to a minimum. Outdoor storage of bales increases losses of quality and nutrient availability for livestock.

SPRING HAS SPRUNG? — Some days this spring, it felt like winter was approaching, but nice spring days create scenes like this. This is White Creek, just south of the St. Michael Catholic Church Cemetery at Wilmot.

Area accidents

Record 6th traffic fatality

Lynne Marie Chantiny, 22, of rural Kingston, died Friday at St. Mary's Hospital in Saginaw of injuries suffered in a 2:45 p.m. accident Thursday midway between Caro and Kingston. She was the sixth person to die in a Tuscola County traffic accident this year.

Sheriff's deputies reported she was northbound on Hurds Corner Road and her car was struck broadside at Bevans Road by an eastbound vehicle driven by Herman R. Wiegert, 72, of Cooper Road, Marlette. He and his passenger, Robert Brandt, 65, of 215 Germania Road, Snover, sought their own treatment for injuries.

They told officers they saw the Chantiny vehicle stop at the stop sign and then proceed into the intersection. Deputies noted the only skid marks were from the Wiegert vehicle. The only stop signs at the intersection are on Hurds Corner.

Miss Chantiny was transferred from Caro Community Hospital to St. Mary's, where she was pronounced dead at 3 p.m. Friday.

She was born March 30, 1962, in Caro, the daughter of Oscar and Patricia Chantiny and lived with her parents at 4074 S. Hurds Corner Road.

She was a 1980 graduate of Kingston High School and a member of the National Honor Society.

In addition to her parents, she is survived by three sisters at home, Lisa, Lori and Lana; a daughter, Heather; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fowler of Clio, and several aunts, uncles and cousins.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at the Mills Memorial Baptist Church, Mayville, Rev. John E. Manning officiating. Burial was in Rich Township Cemetery.

Her parents suggest that memorials be made to the church.

The car instead went into the ditch along the east side of Colling, went over a culvert, then went airborne for 25 feet, with the front end touching ground first.

Ms. Allen was ticketed on a charge of failure to stop.

Cass City police reported that at 12:45 a.m. Saturday, Ronald S. Karr, 18, of 3508 Cemetery Road, was backing up and backed into the front end of a car parked along the south side of Pine Street, west of Woodland Avenue. Owner of the parked car was James Fox. Karr was given a ticket for no proof of insurance.

At 1 p.m. last Wednesday, according to village police, Russell Alger, 78, of Prescott was turning left from southbound Brooker into the driveway at the B.A. Calka residence and office, 6306 W. Main, and ran into Calka's parked pickup truck.

Kings win 10-team tourney

The Croft-Clara Kings got the bats going this week end in Frankenmuth as they defended their tournament title.

The 10-team round robin tourney was hampered by rain.

The Kings defeated Auburn Fertilizer, 2-0; Al's Sport Shop of Midland, 2-0; Jumbo's of Owosso, 7-0, and lost to Chelsea Softball Club, 1-0, for a second place finish in their division.

The playoffs put Croft-Clara against Lansing Irish Pub and Frankenmuth against Chelsea.

The Kings played one of their best all-around games besting Irish Pub, 1-0, coming up with some good defensive plays and a fine pitching performance by Craig Helwig.

The win advanced the Kings to the championship game against Chelsea. Croft-Clara took an early 3-0 lead in the first inning and finished with an 8-3 victory over Chelsea for the championship.

Mike Martin, Mike Rea, Dean Elbers and Ken Martin all had seven hits in the tournament. Ken Martin was selected most valuable player and Craig Helwig was awarded the most valuable pitcher trophy.

Last week in league play, Croft-Clara defeated Nite Cap Tavern, 4-0, and lost to AUL, 1-0, which puts the Kings in a tie with Nite Cap for second place, with AUL in first.

Croft-Clara will play at Whaley Stadium Thursday night starting at 7 p.m. against Snitko of Flint and at 8:

No second vote on Sanilac bus service

Sanilac County residents won't vote a second time on a millage to fund the Thumb Area Transit (TAT) system, though very limited service may continue without it.

A 0.2 mill tax increase to subsidize the bus system for three years beginning Oct. 1 was defeated by voters May 15, 1,607-974. The same levy was approved the same day in Huron County, 1,596-1,412, so service there will continue.

Dates set for Thumb area fairs

Dates have been announced for the three upper Thumb county fairs.

The Tuscola County Fair in Caro and the Sanilac County 4-H Fair in Sandusky will be the same week, July 22-28.

The Huron Community Fair in Bad Axe will be Aug. 5-11.

Last Wednesday, the Sanilac Board of Commissioners was presented with two alternatives to continue TAT service on a reduced basis.

Presenting the proposals were TAT Director Brad Diamond, Roger Phillips and Kip Grimes of the Urban and Public Transportation Branch of the Michigan Department of Transportation and Dr. Roger Dean, director of Sanilac County Community Mental Health Services.

The alternative that got nowhere with commissioners was to put a 0.1 mill levy on the Aug. 7 primary ballot and reduce the amount of service available to the public to correspond with the reduction in funds.

The board took no action, which means there won't be a levy on the ballot again. "There was no support on the board," said Commissioner Don Decker of Deckerville, explaining commissioners felt that the public had spoken.

That leaves the other alternative, which likely will become reality, he indicated.

The mental health agency and the Sanilac County Intermediate School District (ISD) presently contract with TAT to transport clients and handicapped students respectively to the programs the agencies provide for them.

That contracted service could continue, the transit officials told the board. The buses would travel over fixed routes to pick up their clients, but the public could use the buses on a space available basis. Priority would be given to senior citizens and the handicapped and the buses would not deviate from their routes.

On that basis, combined state and federal funds will still pay half the cost of providing the limited service, the same as if the millage had been approved. Mental health and the ISD would pay the rest of the cost of transporting their clients. Fares for the public might be increased, Decker said, and the county board might have to provide a small subsidy.

A meeting has been scheduled Tuesday of next week with ISD and mental health officials to discuss the proposal.

Although there won't be a transit millage on the ballot, there will be two other levies to be voted on Aug. 7. The board last Wednesday approved the wording for both.

Both will be 0.2 mill for four years. One, a renewal, will be to provide funds for use by the Sanilac County Council on Aging to provide services for senior citizens.

The other, a new levy, will be for use by libraries "to maintain library service to the citizens of Sanilac County."

Decker said the appearance of those two levies Aug. 7 wasn't a factor in the board's decision not to put the requested 0.1 mill for TAT on the ballot, although one commissioner did mention it during the discussion.

Skill Center works, administrators say instead of the present two.

It can also work the other way. A management information systems class was offered for the first time this year because it was felt there was a need. In MIS, students use computers and learn such things as word processing, electronic mail (sending communications from one computer to another, which in a business, might be in another city) and computerized record keeping.

A Career Education Planning District Council, composed of representatives of various occupations, advises the Skill Center staff on course and equipment needs.

EVEN WHEN THE classes don't change, technology does and it is necessary to have up-to-date equipment for training students.

Such technology doesn't come cheap. The TISD spent $276,808 for equipment for the current school year, according to William Pratt, TISD vocational-career education director. The state will reimburse it for half the cost.

Among them were the 16 computer terminals and related equipment needed for the MIS class, which cost $41,000. The drafting classroom now has two computer aided design terminals and one plotter which makes the blueprint drawings after being designed on the video display screen. That was an investment of $47,000.

Although it may seem like the Skill Center is meeting with only mixed success in that most students aren't working or taking further training in the field they studied, Niedzwiecki said, experience at other county vocational training centers has shown that the longer it is since the student graduated, the more likely they will end up doing what they were first trained to do.

To find out if that is true with Tuscola, a long-range study will be made of the graduates, from 1981, 1982 and 1983.

Pratt can provide one example that that is true. His son studied data processing at the Skill Center and graduated in 1981. He did other things before getting a job last year in Texas in data processing.

Skill Center budget over $2 million

The Tuscola Area Skill Center has a budget for operations and equipment purchases of $2.19 million for the 1983-84 school year, according to Jerome P. Thienes, Tuscola Intermediate School District deputy superintendent for business and finance.

The biggest share of revenue, $1.35 million, will come from the 1.75 million paid by the Tuscola County property owners for the center.

The state is providing $159,641 this year for operations and $130,668 for equipment purchases.

Federal aid will total $186,000. Revenue from student provided services (fixing cars, Skill Center restaurant, etc.) was projected at $84,825. Revenue from adult evening classes will be about $78,000; interest on investments, $50,000, and annual land contract payments on the two houses sold that were built by students, $8,500.

The revenue and expense figures were all from the budget prepared about a year ago, so the final figures may differ somewhat.

The revenue adds up to slightly over $2 million, which is about $136,000 less than projected expenditures.

The deficit is due primarily to the purchase of a lot of equipment, Thienes explained, but there is enough of a revenue surplus from previous years to comfortably cover the deficit with money remaining.

GAIL EVANS, a Cass City High School junior, makes a ribbon in the floriculture-greenhouse management class at the Skill Center. The facilities, which include a greenhouse, look more like a flower shop than a classroom.

Witch doctors and remedies disappear

Operating on the well-founded belief that "witch doctors" rely as much on the healing powers of native plants as on mystical powers, scientists are rushing to unlock the secrets of these fabled healers before their primitive cultures disappear.

The demise of witch doctors in the face of expanding civilizations is tragic, scientists say, because they have vast knowledge of the healing properties of plants which may, in turn, hold the key to the development of new medicines.

There is another problem. According to an article in International Wildlife magazine, deforestation of jungles and other forested areas is depleting plant species on which the witch doctors rely for their healing potions.

Native people have made significant contributions to medicine. Many of the "wonder drugs" of the 1930s and 1960s, such as digitalis for heart failure, reserpine for tranquilizers and vincristine for treating leukemia, were derived from plants that native peoples had used for centuries.

Anthropologists and botanists are intensely studying the remaining witch doctors among Amazonian Indians, African nomads and other primitive peoples before their folklore and healing traditions are lost forever. Their study has evolved into a new science -- "ethnobotany" -- which is dedicated to promoting the most promising finds of witch doctor secrets.

Ethnobotany was largely created by Harvard botanist Richard Evans Schultes. During a 1941-54 stay in the Amazon, Schultes collected 24,000 plants, 5,000 of which he expects to one day prove beneficial to man.

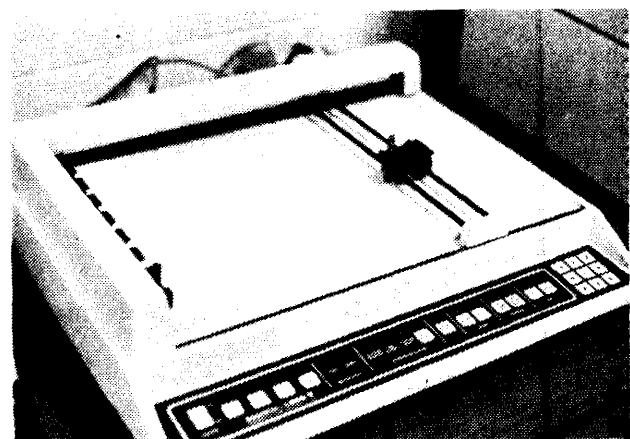

"The Indians use 1,370 of these plants in some way, so that indicates that they have at least one active principal," said Schultes. "The Indians are actually quite sophisticated in their analysis of what works and what does not. They basically use the trial-and-error method and will combine different plants to produce a desired result."

A group of ethnobotanists dedicated to promoting their most promising finds is currently studying a plant root the Aztecs used as a dental anesthetic, bark used as an arthritis treatment, tree sap that stimulates wound healing and helps peptic ulcers, and a mushroom that seems to stimulate the body's immune system.

The most critical problem facing the scientists is the race to learn as much as they can before the witch doctors and their habitat disappear.

COMPUTER AIDED DESIGN -- William Holdburg, a second year drafting student, designs a part on the computer display screen. When the design is completed, the plotter, shown below, makes the drawing in a couple of minutes.

Toxic waste cleanup costly in Michigan

In recommendations recently sent to the Legislature, Gov. James Blanchard is targeting $9.5 million to take care of immediate health problems at 108 toxic waste sites and another $10.7 million for long-term evaluation of problems at 27 sites.

The cleanup recommendations, which include $750,000 as a contingency for immediate action at newly discovered locations, cover about half the sites given preliminary environmental-health risk rankings last fall.

The program, operated separately from the federal recommendations calling for $154,000 for immediate activities such as providing alternative water and $269,000 for environmental studies.

The Steven's Landfill in Monroe County, which was the highest-ranked site in the preliminary list released last fall, is second-ranked now, but still with one of the highest recommended spending levels of any site -- $1.4 million.

Recipe for salmon in Newburg sauce

Red salmon in creamy Newburg sauce is an elegant company meal. But it tastes equally wonderful served over toast points as a last-minute main dish to serve the family.

- 1 cup + 3 tablespoons milk
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- Dash cayenne pepper
- Dash nutmeg
- 3 egg yolks
- 3 tablespoons sherry
- 6 frozen patty shells, baked, or toast points
