"If It Fitz . . ."

What press release?

By Jim Fitzgerald

A woman who works for a public relations firm recently sent the Free Press a letter saying: "On May 4, 1984, I sent you a publicity release entitled 'Local physician installs revolutionary type medical examination equipment.' The doctor referred to in this release has asked that we don't have this printed in the newspaper. Would you please destroy the release?"

No. We couldn't destroy the release because we never received it. And we felt like the famous guy, possibly apocryphal, who received the note saying: "It is extremely important that you ignore my previous letter." He never received the previous letter, and he drove himself nuts worrying about what he should ignore.

What sort of equipment would revolutionize medical examinations? Why didn't a Detroit doctor want the public to know the equipment had been installed in his east side office? My curiosity was aflame, and I couldn't help speculating.

Patients would benefit most from a revolution that eliminated unnecessary surgery and lowered medical costs. A five-year study made in the Detroit area by Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield indicated that about a third of the people who get second opinions on elective surgery are told they don't need an operation. But their first doctors said they did.

Maybe the revolutionary medical examination equipment gives second opinions first!

Think about it. The Blue Cross study was partly sponsored by the UAW, and a UAW official estimated the use of second opinions to eliminate unnecessary surgery could save $4 million a year nationally in doctor and hospital bills.

Dr. Eugene McCarthy of Cornell University Medical College worked on the study. According to him, in a recent seven-year period there was a 5.5 percent increase in population but a 34 percent increase in surgery — 80 percent of it elective or non-emergency. Many people suspect that some doctors are performing appendectomies to improve their bank statement rather than to improve their patients' health.

Obviously, a patient might save money by skipping the first opinion and proceeding directly to the second. If some genius has invented revolutionary medical examination equipment that allows doctors to give second opinions to patients who didn't get first opinions, viva! the revolution.

Or how about saving the patient's time? To squeeze the most bucks out of every hour, some doctors purposely overbook appointments, so a patient with a 2 o'clock appointment might not see the doctor until 5 p.m. the next day. Three years ago an eye clinic receptionist got fired for telling me her employers often played backgammon while their patients waited long beyond appointment time.

So wouldn't it be grand if the revolutionary medical equipment featured a timing mechanism that caused sirens to shriek every time the doctor kept a patient waiting more than 20 minutes? And after the shrieking, a deep voice would loudly intone, over and over: "A patient's time is worth just as much as a doctor's time."

Those were my Utopian speculations about the publicity release that was never received. The truth fell slightly short of my dreams. Actually, the revolutionary type medical examination equipment in the publicity-shy doctor's office is something called a power lithotomy chair.

I found out after promising not to publish the doctor's name. The chair makes it more comfortable for female patients to undergo certain types of examinations. It may not be revolutionary, but it sounds like a good idea, well worth advertising. Why didn't the doctor want the public to know he has a power lithotomy chair?

"I guess he just didn't want people coming in and asking to see his revolutionary chair," a spokeswoman said.

Selling medical care is a lot different than selling Buicks. That's a second opinion.

Seek damages for car crash death

A lawsuit stemming from the death of a Caro area woman has been transferred from Wayne County Circuit Court to Tuscola County Circuit Court.

Plaintiffs are Dennis Cox of Caro and Beverly Potrykus of Deford as personal representatives of the estate of Marilyn Michrina, who was killed in the Feb. 19, 1983 crash.

Defendants are William Kelley of Caro, the other driver involved in the accident; the Ford Motor Co., manufacturer of the car Ms. Michrina was driving, and two Saginaw taverns, the Plant 8 Lounge and the Backstreet Saloon.

Each of five counts in the suit asks for more than $10,000 in damages, plus court costs, attorney fees and interest.

The accident took place on M-46, six miles west of Kingston.

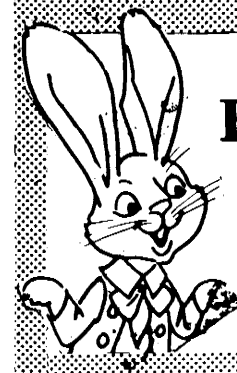

The suit claims that Kelley was intoxicated at the time of the crash and as a result, drove into the rear of Ms. Michrina's car, which caught on fire. She had slowed for a turn when the collision took place.

The suit further claims that Kelley drank at both taverns before the accident, causing him "to become intoxicated or contribute to such intoxication."

It charges Ford with negligently manufacturing the car "resulting in the hazardous condition of catching fire upon impact."

The suit was filed in Wayne County Aug. 2.

One of these days we will set a new record beating the current spring mark of one nice day in a row.

Prediction: Less than 20 percent of the registered voters in the Cass City School District will be at the polls Monday. It won't hurt a bit if you make me a false prophet and storm the voting booths to name school board members.

If you see Bill Zemke's picture in "Your Neighbor Says" this week, it's proof of one of two things...or maybe both.

One is that Bill isn't easy to photograph. Second is that if at first you don't succeed, try again...and again.

H.V. Wood, our summer intern, failed in one attempt and I flunked my test, too. The third was by editor Mike Eliason.

Circulating around town is a petition asking that parking meters be abandoned in Cass City.

A quarter century ago, debate about parking meters brought sharply divided opinion. It may do so again today.

For any businessman what is of the least importance is the amount of revenue meters generate.

It's not much. Last year gross revenues were $4,473.66. That's less than a quarter of a mill of village taxes.

That's insignificant if meters deter shoppers from staying in the village.

The argument for meters is that they make parking available on Main Street for customers.

Without meters employees and employers often park all day in front of stores. Sure, that's biting the hand that feeds them, but it happens.

It's the same in larger communities. A merchant in Bay City said that the meters that have been removed while the downtown is being renovated will be replaced.

We wish that they would be forgotten, he said, but they won't. But, he added, we did have trouble with persons in upstairs offices parking all day, starting at 8 a.m. Meters cured that problem.

It's fair to look around to other communities. For instance, Boyne City is a town very similar to Cass City. It competes for business with Charlevoix and Petoskey, neighboring county seats, just like Cass City competes with Bad Axe and Caro.

In Boyne City, meters went from full time to summer only to catch the tourists. Now they have been eliminated.

One thing that Cass City has going for it that we didn't have when meters were first installed is ample off street parking. Shoppers can park close to businesses and not use meters if they want to.

The trouble is that persons who think nothing of walking a couple of blocks in the cities just won't do it in small towns like Cass City.

If you get the idea after reading this far that there's doubt as to the best course to follow, you're reading me right.

It's certain that abolishing meters won't answer all of our problems.

Still, a case can be made for giving meterless Main Street a try. Placing hoods over the meters for 3 or 4 months won't make or break us and could answer a lot of questions.

Kingston facing millages

Kingston School District residents will vote Monday on three millage propositions, including an increase of six mills, and elect two candidates to the school board. Three are running. A millage information meeting has been scheduled this Thursday in the high school cafeteria, starting at 7:30 p.m. Voting will take place Monday at the high school from 7 a.m.-8 p.m.

Proposition 1 calls for a tax increase of 21 mills, which is actually a renewal of 16 mills and an increase of 5 mills for three years, 1984-86. It marks a departure from past board policy, which was that all the district's extra voted millage was voted on every year. The change, Supt. Jerry Laycock explained, is because of the district's need to borrow $300,000 in anticipation of taxes and three-year teacher contracts. The state won't approve the borrowing until there first is the millage to pay off the loan. Many districts borrow money to cover the gap between the start of the school year and receipt of property taxes, which start arriving in December.

As for the need for five additional mills, he said, "Mainly we need it because the board has eliminated the fund equity in order to keep taxes down." In 1980, the Kingston district had an equity or fund balance of $352,000. Rather than increase taxes as expenses increased, Laycock explained, the board chose to use up the equity, which now is "totally depleted." During the 1980-81 school year, Kingston had 85 employees. It now has 75, including three fewer teachers. Two more teachers were laid off at the end of the 1983-84 school year. A result of the teacher layoffs has been fewer electives and some courses offered only every other year.

8-mill renewal up for vote in Owen-Gage

Renewal of eight mills will be on the ballot in the Owen-Gage-Gagetown School District Monday. Voting will take place in the Owen-Gage Community Building from 7 a.m.-8 p.m. The district has 11 mills expiring, but the school board decided not to seek renewal of a three-mill levy that ran for three years, so property owners will have their tax levies reduced by three mills even if the eight are approved. The eight-mill levy, which will raise about $384,000 annually, is for two years. If approved, the district will be levying a total of 23.75 mills for operation. The two incumbent board members whose terms are expiring are unchallenged for reelection. They are board President Ronald Good, S. Pobanz Road, Sebawing, who has been on the board 20 years, and Donald Cummins, MacAlpine Road, Gagetown, who has served eight years. The terms are for four years.

The layoffs were due to declining enrollment and lack of funds, Laycock said. In addition to fewer teachers, the district also has one less administrator, teacher aide, bus driver and a couple of custodians than it once did. Offsetting the reduction in personnel have been increases in energy costs, reduced state aid as a proportion of total revenue (therefore more revenue must come from local taxes) increased payroll salaries (all employees received about 3 percent pay raises this year) and the need for increased maintenance, Laycock said.

Passage of Proposition 1, according to the district's June newsletter, "is needed to retain the school's present educational program. It is not to restore programs or positions that have been cut in recent years." Laycock warned in the newsletter, "The students of Kingston must continue to receive an education equal to others in the state or the (state) Department of Education will attempt to pressure the school (district) to consolidate (with other districts) and send our children elsewhere."

PROPOSITION II

The proposal, if approved, will increase taxes for one mill for three years, 1984-86, "for operating purposes to be used for the repair of roofs, buildings and facilities." The district had one additional mill in effect this past year, which was used for roof repairs, heating system repairs and new energy efficient windows at the elementary school. Revenue from the additional mill, if approved will be used for such purposes as improving the heating system to conserve energy and roof and parking lot repairs. If the total of six mills is approved (Propositions I and II) it will mean about $280,000 more in revenue to the Kingston schools in combined property taxes and state aid. The higher the millage, the more state aid the district will receive. About $220,000 of that will come from the passage of the five additional mills and $40,000 from the one mill. Laycock pointed out that Kingston's total revenue per pupil of $1,803 (state aid and property taxes) is the lowest of any district in the area except for Vassar. The state average is more than $2,000 per pupil.

PROPOSITION III

If approved, it will allow the district to authorize the full 9 allocated mills for operations. Without it, the district would have to roll back the millage in accordance with provisions of the Headlee amendment to the state constitution, which requires taxing units to roll back millages when valuations increase more than the consumer price index. If the proposal is defeated, Laycock said, Kingston will have to levy 8.97 mills this year, which will mean a loss of a little under $10,000 in revenue.

CANDIDATES

Two of the three candidates for the two four-year terms on the school board presently hold the office. John Borek Jr. of 5462 S. Phillips Road, Clifford, is serving his 14th year on board. A farmer, he and his wife, Joan, have eight children, all adults. Albert Ruggles of E. Sanilac Road, Kingston, has been on the board five years. A farmer, he and his wife, Glennadine, have three children. The third candidate, Jeffrey A. Newton of S. Hurds Corner Road, Mayville, twice ran previously for the board. He is manager of the Kingston Mini-Mart and is also a mail carrier. Newton is a 1978 Kingston High School graduate.

Ubly citizens to vote on millages

Residents of the Ubly School District will vote on two millage proposals and elect two members to the school board Monday. Three candidates are running. Voting will take place at the high school from 7 a.m.-8 p.m.

Proposal 1 on the ballot is renewal of five mills for five years 1984-88, for school operations.

Proposal 2 is an increase of one mill for one year "for the purpose of providing additional funds for operation and maintenance." If approved, it will raise about $72,000. All of the money will be spent to make repairs at the school buildings in Ubly, according to Supt. David Landeryou.

With the purchase of two school buses for next year out of the regular budget (to be paid for over five years) and the inflationary cost of operating the schools, there won't be any money left for the needed repairs, he said, hence the need for the additional millage.

The roof over the cafeteria and commons corridor were repaired last year. It has been estimated by the time all the high school roof is done, it will cost more than $150,000. Other needed repairs, according to the superintendent, range from a slipping roof on the gym built in 1966 (estimated $25,000 needed to repair it) to replacing outdated equipment.

For a homeowner with property worth $40,000 (valuation of $20,000), the added one mill will cost $20 for one year. For property with a market value of $100,000 the added tax will be $50.

The superintendent pointed out that most persons are allowed to deduct property tax payments on federal and state income taxes, therefore the actual cost should be lower than the examples mentioned. The two board members whose terms are expiring, Bernard Puvalowski and Evelyn Romzek, are seeking reelection. Running for the two four-year terms are:

Marshall Grifka of Bay City-Forestville Road, Ubly. A construction foreman, he also helps his son-in-law, who took over the family farm. He and his wife, Frances, have two married daughters.

John Rutkowski of Stambaugh Road, Ubly, works for Gemini Plastics in Ubly doing research and development. He and his wife, JoAnn, have three sons, the oldest of which is in kindergarten.

Jim Zulauf of Pike Street, Ubly, is a parts salesman for Gettel Equipment in Bad Axe. He and his wife, Doreen, have a son, Jeffrey, 2.

Pedaling Around

The fresher refresher

By Mike Eliasohn

Several years ago I flew to Arizona. Seated next to me on the plane was a couple who lived near Sarnia, Ont.

They were dairy farmers and they were going to Arizona to see some Brown Swiss dairy cattle at a farm near Phoenix.

Either they had been there before or had seen photos -- I don't remember -- because they were telling me about the farm. There were no enclosed buildings for the cows, only open sided shelters to provide shade.

I think they said all hay was purchased and shipped in. I don't recall if anything was grown on the farm. If it was, it had to be with irrigation.

What I didn't know until I read Dick Lehnert's recent column in Michigan Farmer magazine was why there are dairy farms in the Arizona desert.

The reason, he writes, is because, "We still haven't cured the problem of transporting milk. If we could deliver to Florida and the Southwest something that looked and tasted like fresh milk, we could likely change the whole pattern of milk marketing, favoring the traditional dairy area."

Lehnert suggests that the federal government will cut its price supports until those dairymen "whose costs can't meet the new price levels are weeded out." It could mean "15-20 percent less money for milk for a period of six or more years while the attrition takes place."

The reason why that will take place, of course, is because more milk is being produced than there is a need for.

O-G student gets award

Lisa Battisti of Owendale has won a United States Achievement Academy award for history and government.

A student at Owendale-Gagetown High School, she was nominated for the award by Arnie Besonen, a history and government teacher.

She is the daughter of Victor and Nancy Battisti and the granddaughter of Theodore and Elizabeth Battisti of Gallitzin, Pa., and Anna Whitman of Roseville.

The USAA selects winners based on recommendations from teachers and its own selection standards.

But, says Lehnert, "Just because there are about 10 percent too many dairymen in the United States, it does not mean there are 10 percent too many in Michigan."

Thus, he concludes, if a means could be developed to transport milk long distances without losing its flavor, that would benefit dairy farmers in such states as Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Preferable to driving dairy farmers out of business to solve the surplus milk problem is to increase the sale of milk.

Milk is milk, Lehnert feels, so all that promotion of one brand does is to attract customers from another brand.

He suggests more variety will attract more customers -- higher fat milk, Jersey cow milk, protein fortified milk, strawberry flavored milk, goat milk, etc.

As a three-times-a-day milk drinker at home, I think that is one area where the dairy industry has fallen flat.

Food product companies are coming out with new products all the time, in order to attract more customers.

But with the dairy industry, all there has been for years is homogenized milk, two or three varieties of low fat and chocolate.

Meanwhile, more and more of the market is being lost to other drinks, mainly soft drinks.

I have been sitting behind this window on Main Street for seven years now and I can't recall ever seeing a kid walking by sipping from a milk carton. They are always drinking soda pop.

And with the Pepsi Generation having been around for probably 20 years now, I suspect many of their parents are putting soft drinks on the table at home, not milk.

The dairy industry, which now gets 15 cents for promotion for every 100 pounds of milk marketed by every dairy farmer in the United States, should do two things in my opinion, especially now that it has more money for promotion.

More of its advertising -- as some already does -- should try to end the stereotype that milk is only for drinking with meals at home and that it's just for kids.

Secondly, it needs some new products, such as fruit flavored milk that can be drunk from cans. Maybe the stuff won't be as good as "the real thing," but for dairy farmers, it certainly will be better than Coke, Pepsi and Dr. Pepper.

Retiring teacher takes look back

"I taught for $45 a month. Teachers today couldn't believe that."

Not only did Emma Ackerman teach for that amount during her first year of teaching, she also was custodian, furnace stoker, etc.

Mrs. Ackerman, who is retiring at the end of the school year as third and fourth grade teacher at Deford Elementary School, has one special memory of her first day of teaching. It was at the one-room Center School near Fairgrove, which didn't have indoor plumbing, in fall, 1934.

"The opening day of school, the children pumped up grasshoppers (in the water) because the well hadn't been checked."

She taught for one year and then married Dave Ackerman, who taught in Chesaning. They came to Cass City in the summer of 1940, where Ackerman taught in the high school for all but two years until retiring in 1974.

The Ackermans have four children, six grandchildren and one great-grandson. Their children are Sharon (Mrs. Ray) Lawsen, Fairgrove; David Ackerman, the only teacher of the four, Midland; Ed, Lansing, and Scott, Cass City.

Mrs. Ackerman, a Fairgrove High School graduate, attended the Tuscola County Normal School for a year to get her teaching certificate. The first two summers after she got married, she accompanied her husband to the Central Michigan University campus, where both took teaching classes.

SHE RESUMED TAKING college classes in the late 1960s. "I had decided at that time that I might do a little subbing... just to have something to do."

She took most of the classes in Bad Axe and Marlette, a few in Bay City and one in Saginaw.

With the state moving at that time toward requiring substitute teachers to have college degrees, she decided she might as well get her degree, and as long as she had her degree, she might as well teach full time.

Her first teaching job was third grade at Deford Elementary School for the January-June, 1970, semester.

Mrs. Ackerman still didn't have her degree yet, and with CMU requiring some classes be taken on campus, that fall she attended school in Mount Pleasant. She received her bachelor's degree at the end of the semester.

She then taught third grade during the spring, 1971, semester in Marlette.

THAT FALL, MRS. Ackerman started teaching fourth grade at Deford Elementary and has been there since. She always taught fourth until the last two years, when she taught third and fourth. She has 14 fourth graders and eight third graders.

She would rather not have the two grades in one classroom. "No way. I would say the key word is stress. You're just going from one group to the other all day and feeling you're doing a half-way job when you're through."

Having to teach the two grades was one factor in her decision to retire. Another was, "I'm 68, so I could have been drawing Social Security three years ago."

Mrs. Ackerman decided to keep teaching past the normal retirement age for two reasons: "I wanted to build up my teacher retirement to make it a little more worthwhile." The other was, "I do enjoy teaching."

SHE AND HER husband have no definite plans, once she has retired. "If we decide to do something on the spur of the moment, we'll do it."

They will probably do some traveling and Mrs. Ackerman is looking forward to doing some reading for enjoyment. She likes to knit and crochet.

Looking back on her now almost ended teaching career, comparing the present to when she started, she noted one change. "You're expected to cover so much more material. Children are basically the same. Kids are kids."

"Some of the things they teach in fourth grade, I never learned until high school," she continued. She mentioned similes (comparing two unlike things -- "cheeks like roses"), metaphors (use of a word or phrase in place of another to suggest a likeness between them) -- and algebra equations (x plus y = z).

The students may not have a lot to learn about such complicated subjects at that level, but, "At least they're exposed to it from then on."

After 14 years in the classroom, Mrs. Ackerman said no doubt she will miss the children, "but, again, it's time to draw a line and this was the year for me."

RETIREMENT is near for Emma Ackerman, who has taught at Deford Elementary School for 12½ years. The last day of school is June 8.

Kids' reading club signup begins

Children can start signing up for the Rawson Memorial Library's summer reading club, this Thursday.

With a theme of "Go for the Gold," any child can sign up for the club, including those too young to read, who can have their parents read to them.

The first 100 kids to sign up and check out books will receive a "Go for the Gold" tote bag for their books.

Each participant will receive a card to record the books they read. They must read 10 books to receive a certificate of merit. A "Marathon Reader Gold Medal" will be awarded for every 10 books read.

The reading program will end with a decathlon July 30.

The library is sponsoring a balloon launch to kick off the start of all its summer programs. Everyone is invited to come to the front of the library Monday between 1-1:45 p.m. to fill in tags that will be attached to the balloons. The tags are for people who retrieve the balloons to fill out and mail back to the library.

Games will be organized for children while they are waiting. The balloons will be launched at 2.

Most other libraries in Tuscola County will launch balloons at the same time to promote their reading programs.

After the balloon release, the movie "Ben and Me" will be shown in the library activity room.

Three other programs will take place this summer. Story hour for children ages 4-7 will be every Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. from June 12-July 24. No registration is necessary.

Two cars parked in the General Cable lot during the night shift early last Thursday were the target of thieves.

Janet Lynn Marker of 5505 Shabbona Road, Decker, reported to Cass City police at 7:08 a.m. that her unlocked car was entered since 10:45 p.m. Wednesday. Taken were an electric impact wrench worth $150 and a tool box with tools, including sets of three-eighths and half-inch sockets, worth an estimated $300.

Entry to the car of Norma Stewart of 3270 Bevens Road, Caro, reported at the same time, was gained by breaking the right rear window. Taken was a case of cans of oil worth $24. The window was valued at $80. The car had been parked there since 10:20 p.m. Wednesday.

Two teenage boys, walkers from the Kingston Teen Ranch, have admitted breaking into Kingston High School Sunday, May 27.

The classroom of teacher Lynn Lehman was entered by breaking an outside window. Taken was approximately $50 in change collected in memory of Kenneth Damm, 14, who was killed April 20 when his bicycle was hit by a car. The money was kept in two vinegar jars.

The jars were later found outside and a total of $33.29 was recovered from various locations.

The missing boys, one 13 and the other 14, were found outside by deputies and questioned. They were then returned to the Teen Ranch, where they later admitted to staff members they broke into the school.

They had been reported missing early Sunday to the Caro state police.

Theft of $800 in cash and $200 in checks May 27 turned out to be a "joke."

Mrs. Calvin Caverly of 3052 Kingston Road, Kingston, reported to sheriff's deputies early May 27 that the money had been graduation gifts to her stepdaughter, presented at a graduation party the previous evening. About 30-40 persons were in the home.

At 3:15 a.m., Mrs. Caverly checked in the bedroom dresser drawer where the money had been placed and it was missing. The sheriff's department was then called and deputies came to investigate. Later in the day, the department was notified the money had been found "and it had all been a joke."

Two Kingston area thefts reported to sheriff's deputies May 29 are believed to have been committed by the same persons.

The first was reported at 6:29 a.m. by Gerald Harneck, 4653 Clothier Road, Kingston. Taken were 5-6 gallons of gasoline from a tractor, plus two other tractors were tampered with.

Albert L. McCoon of 7537

E. Mayville Road, Mayville, reported the other theft at 8:35 a.m. Taken were a battery charger, 20 gallons of gas from two tractors and 45 gallons from two Marlette school buses.

McCoon said about 10 gallons were taken from his car about a week earlier.

Cass City police stopped the pickup truck of Kevin M. Lowry, 21, of Rochester on Seeger Street near Houghton at 2:10 p.m. Sunday for exceeding the speed limit.

A check by the dispatcher found Lowry was wanted on a warrant charging him with larceny under $100 and littering Aug. 14, 1983, in Cass City.

He is charged with taking a stack of newspapers left outside a store by a distributor and scattering them.

He was taken to the county jail and released the next day after posting 10 percent of a $2,000 bond. A pretrial hearing in Tuscola County District Court was scheduled July 10.

Cyclist slightly injured in collision

An 11:45 a.m. Saturday collision northwest of Kingston between a pickup truck and motorcycle resulted in minor injuries to the motorcycle rider.

Seeking his own treatment was Steven P. Christensen, 20, of Clifford.

Sheriff's deputies reported Archie C. Rodenbo, 67, of 3985 Shaw Road, Kingston, was westbound on Silvernail Road, east of Froede Road, when Christensen started crossing the road from north to south.

The crossing was made on the crest of a hill and Rodenbo couldn't see the motorcycle until it was too late. His pickup hit the cycle broadside.

Another motorcycle accident took place that day at 1:05 a.m.

Deputies said Darwin D. Rushlo, 21, of 3351 Cedar Run Road, Cass City, was eastbound on Tomlinson Road, east of M-81, when he lost control on some loose gravel.

Rushlo told officers he had a sore left shoulder and knee. It was not reported whether he needed treatment.

Caro state police ticketed Jerry Cooper, 20, of 7724 Hadley Road, Cass City, on charges of violation of the basic speed law and no proof of insurance after a 1:25 a.m. accident Monday.

They reported he was eastbound on River Road, west of Warner Road, and lost control on a curve. His car went off the south side of the road, rolled over and landed on its wheels.

James D. Nichols, 30, of Lapeer, was westbound on Deckerville Road, west of Murray Road, at 10:05 a.m.

Buhl runs for Sanilac commissioner

Lloyd F. Buhl, publisher of the Deckerville Recorder, has announced he is a candidate for Sanilac County commissioner in the 5th District in the Aug. 7 Republican primary.

The fifth district consists of Evergreen, Greenleaf, Argyle, Austin, Lamotte, Moore, Minden, Delaware and Marion Townships.

Buhl, former assessor, councilman and village president in Deckerville, is chairman of the Michigan Probate Judge's Retirement Board. He was previously vice-chairman for eight years.

A former 8th District chairman of the Republican Party, he is presently serving his second term as chairman of the Issues Committee of the Michigan Republicans, and is serving for the second time as chairman of the Sanilac County Republican Party.

A former Marion Township official, Buhl is also former chairman and secretary of the Sanilac County Mental Health Board. A charter member of the Deckerville Lions Club, he has twice served as president of the club, three times as zone chairman and is a former deputy district governor.

An elder in the Presbyterian Church, he is a member and former president of Catholic Family Services of the Thumb and a former member of the Saginaw Diocese Board of Charities. He is a former chairman of the Sanilac County United Fund.

The candidate was assistant state chairman of the Republican Party in Michigan during the Eisenhower campaign, covering all of the counties in Michigan.

Married to the former Rosamond Davidson, the couple has four grown children, and nine grandchildren.

Saturday, according to troopers, when his car struck a deer.

Cass City police reported three accidents involving parked cars.

The first was at 5:20 p.m. Saturday. Beverly D. Little, 48, of Little's Funeral Home, 6385 W. Main Street, was backing up in the alley behind the funeral home and sideswiped the left side of a car parked in the alley.

Blake E. Fisher, address not listed, reported the right side of his vehicle was sideswiped by a hit and run vehicle while parked in the lot at the corner of Church and Seeger Streets from 6:30-9:50 p.m. Saturday. The other vehicle was probably red.

At 1:32 p.m. Monday, Lloyd C. Hickie, 65, of 6885 E. Bevens road, Deford was attempting to park in front of a car parked along the south side of Main Street, east of West Street.

Novesta board says 'no' to constable

The Novesta Township Board has dropped the idea of having a township constable.

The board first discussed the possibility at its May meeting. Most township residents board members talked to since then, Clerk Nurse Kloc said, didn't feel one is necessary, so the board at its meeting Monday decided not to take any action on the motion that had been offered to have a constable.

Also at the meeting, De-ford Country Grocery owner Harry Roth protested rental of the township hall once a month to a food cooperative. Supervisor Bill O'Dell will check into it.

The board voted to continue its policy of not collecting a 1 percent administrative fee on collection of property taxes, both those delinquent and those paid on time.

At the May meeting, the board decided to table Hessel Venema's request for cleaning the ditch along his property on Phillips Road, north of White Creek, and to have the mile of road he lives on graveled. The board decided Monday to get bids from the Road Commission for the work.

Delivery of the $15,569 tractor and mower the board bought last month is expected this week, Mrs. Kloc said. Mowing of roadsides should begin next week.

Two bids were received for purchase of the old tractor, a McCormick-Deering, and mower. Accepted was the bid of Stanley Kloc of Severance Road for $530. The board deemed the other bid received was improper because it offered to pay $25 more than the highest bid received, up to a maximum amount.

Thomas Roofing of Cass City has repaired the roof on the township hall, damaged during the recent wind storm, for slightly under $600.

The board decided to furnish a 12-inch culvert to Alex Paladi Jr. of Englehart Road to use for his driveway, provided he installs it.

It was stated in the Chronicle's report on the May meeting that caskets will now have to be encased in concrete burial vaults in the township cemetery.

The minimal acceptable standard will be a cement box, not a vault.

Repair bids taken for road work

Bids were taken Tuesday in Lansing for projects to upgrade and maintain the state's road and bridge system, according to the Department of Transportation.

Companies bid for contracts on 71 projects worth an estimated $15.5 million. Most of the projects involve road, bridge and highway repair and improvement. Twelve of the projects involve improvement of public airports.

The projects are located in 31 counties, including Tuscola and Huron.

The Tuscola County project involves resurfacing and shoulders on 5.9 miles of Kingston Road, beginning from the south village limits of Kingston. It is a Tuscola County Road Commission project slated for October.

Two Huron County Road Commission projects are set for October. The first is the resurfacing of and addition of gravel shoulders to five miles of Atwater Road from M-53 to S. Bad Axe Road.

The second project is the removal of an existing bridge over the Shebeon Drain, which will be replaced by a two-span concrete bridge and approaches.

"The Star Spangled Banner" bore another name when it was first published in 1814—it was called "The Defense of Fort McHenry."

Richter to run for register

Velna Richter of Sanilac Road, Kingston, has announced she is a Republican candidate for Tuscola County register of deeds to replace John Marshall, who is retiring.

Mrs. Richter, 58, worked in the register of deeds office from 1950-52. She held various other office jobs, including working for General Motors and the Caro Regional Center, before getting married.

Active in the Republican Party, Mrs. Richter has been a delegate two times to the state Republican convention and last year served on the reception committee at the convention for U.S. Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole.

Mrs. Richter has run for the Kingston School Board three times and for Kingston Township treasurer, but never was elected.

She has been a resident of Kingston Township since 1936 and is a Kingston High School graduate.

She and her husband, Emil, a farmer, have four children, Cheryl (Mrs. Leslie) Shaw, Decker; Karl, Lapeer, and Kevin and Keith, both at home, and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Richter is a member of the Kingston United Methodist Church and its Naomi Circle. She has been involved in 4-H as a member and then a leader since 1936, was a Help Line volunteer, is a member of the Community Radio Watch and was chairman of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital bike-a-thon May 12 in Kingston.

Applications taken for job corps

Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) offices Monday began taking applications for the Michigan Youth Corps program.

Applications will be accepted through Friday, June 15.

"Although the state legislature has not passed final Youth Corps legislation," MESC Director S. Martin Taylor explained, "we must begin the registration process now to insure that we will have a pool of eligible candidates ready for immediate referral to jobs once the program is approved and before too much of the summer has passed."

To qualify, applicants must be 18 to 21 years old, unemployed and Michigan residents.

Preference in hiring will be given to those from families where the principal wage earner is unemployed. In addition, older applicants will be referred to jobs before younger ones, Taylor said.

The jobs are expected to last from 6 to 12 weeks and pay $3.35 an hour. Corps members could work a 30 or 40-hour week.

Taylor said that anticipated work sites for the program will include public parks and recreation areas, highway areas, county fairs, hospitals and schools.

MESC offices are located in Caro, Bad Axe and Sandusky and are open weekdays, from 8:15 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

Quinn ends Walbro career

Catherine Quinn decided 28 years and 11 months was enough.

Last Thursday was her last day after having worked that long for Walbro Corp. She started work there in June, 1955.

Her first job was machining carburetor castings. Her last, which she held for several years, was as a receiving clerk.

"It doesn't seem like I've been here that long," she said.

A widow, Mrs. Quinn lives on Englehart Road, Deford.

What will she do once she's retired? "If it quits raining there's a lot of work to do," she replied. "I think I'll keep busy." She enjoys gardening and working on her lawn.

Mrs. Quinn has four children, Linda Yost, Deford, Rosalie Lenk, Deckerville, Joan McNulty, Romeo, and Owen Quinn Jr., Cass City, and seven grandchildren.

This summer, she and Rosalie will go sightseeing in New York state.

Mrs. Quinn, who celebrates her 66th birthday this month, has no regrets about the almost 30 years she spent working for Walbro, all in the Garfield Street plant. "I've enjoyed working here."

RETIREE -- Walbro Chairman W. E. Walpole wished Catherine Quinn well on her last day on the job last Thursday. She worked almost 30 years at Walbro.

Seek damages from HDC

did not know where the money to pay the damages will come from if she and the HDC ultimately have to pay the total of $125,000 in damages. Cubitt said his understanding of the law is that the money could come from federal funds received by the agency.

The HDC serves Tuscola, Sanilac, Huron and Lapeere Counties with a variety of federal and state funded programs, including manpower, emergency housing, weatherization, foster grandparents, displaced homemakers and surplus food distribution.

Haleys happy with damage claim award

very concerned."
HALEY'S PARENTS, Donald and Florence Haley, as part owners of the farm, were also plaintiffs when the suit was filed. Donald Haley died last August. "I feel if he were alive, he would be very happy," Florence Haley said Friday of her late husband and the settlement.

Roger Haley is a fourth generation farmer, his wife told members of the media, "and when things got bad, I'd say, 'Sell,' and he'd say,

"I just can't."

Monsanto fought the case every step of the way, the lawyers said, which is why the case took so long to come to trial. Attorney James Woodworth of Bad Axe guessed they were in court 100 times on procedural matters prior to the trial and once had to appeal to the Michigan Court of Appeals.

"Justice for me was for Monsanto to come up with the cash to cover these losses," Haley said. "...I feel justice has been done. I'm happy."

Many other similar cases filed in court

"Poisonous chemicals do cause problems. I think that is the message of this case," Bad Axe attorney H. Dale Cubitt told reporters gathered on the lawn Friday at the Roger and Valerie Haley farm east of Owendale, the day after a Huron County Circuit jury had awarded them $810,000 in damages.

Cubitt, one of three defense lawyers in the case, is representing three other Huron County farm families with similar suits pending in circuit court.

The significance of the 11-week Haley trial is that it was the first in the nation concerning farm silos contaminated by a sealant used containing PCBs.

Hundreds of such silos are believed to have been built in the Midwest from the 1940s-60s. The two Haley silos were built in the mid-1960s, before they bought the farm. (Three other silos on the farm were not treated with the PCB sealant.)

Attorney James Woodworth of Bad Axe, the key attorney along with Patrick McGraw of Saginaw, said there is no way of knowing how many suits have been filed against Monsanto, the PCB manufacturer, because the company has kept that information confidential.

He is only aware of two pending trials outside of Huron County, both in Ohio, plus other cases in several states involving non-farm use of PCBs.

In addition, Monsanto has made settlements with farmers in Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee because of PCB contaminated silos. Again, the number isn't known.

Last December, the firm offered a settlement to the Haleys. "We considered it (the amount) absurd," Woodworth said. "There was never any negotiation at all. They just said, 'Take it or leave it.'"

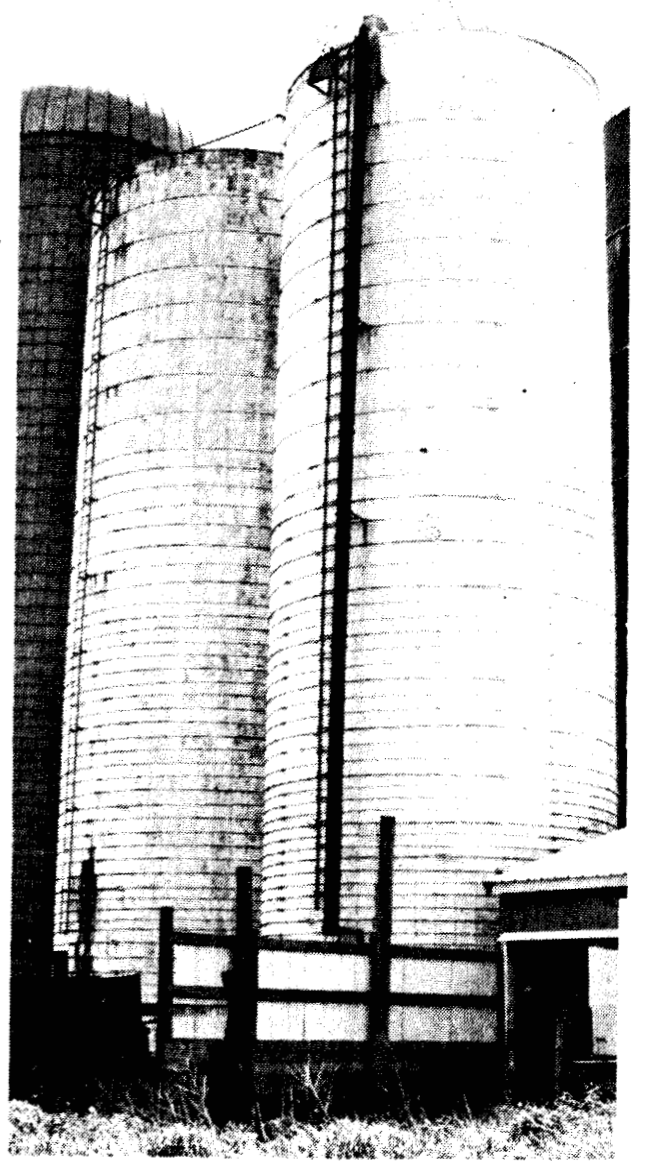

Roger Haley called the offer from Monsanto "peanuts." Neither he nor the attorneys would reveal the amount.

Cubitt feels the jury verdict may encourage Monsanto to settle out of court in other cases.

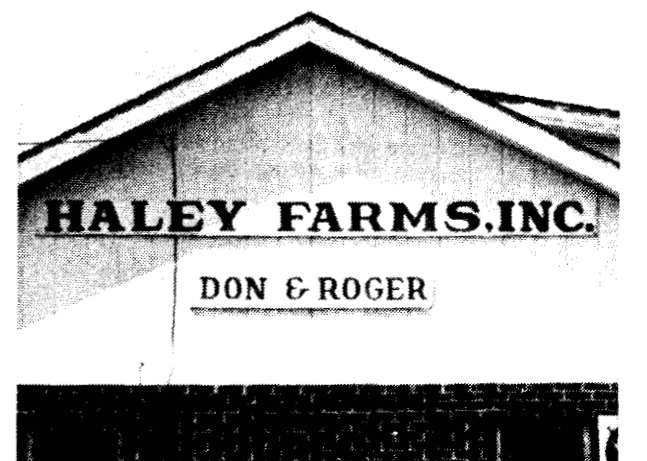

Should Monsanto appeal the case, Woodworth explained, it can only win if it can show "reversible error," that is, an error was made during the trial that if not made, would have resulted in a different verdict.

If the chemical firm does win an appeal, the appeals court will then send the case back to Huron County Circuit Court for a new trial.

As for why the jury only held Monsanto liable and not C and B Silo, which used the PCB sealant, McGraw speculated that it felt C and B wasn't responsible for the PCB used as an ingredient in the sealant. "Why hold C and B liable when Monsanto controlled the whole thing?"

THE TWO SILOS on the Haley farm treated on the insides with a sealant containing PCBs that led to the lawsuit. The state legislature has authorized tearing down PCB contaminated silos, Roger Haley said, but hasn't appropriated the money yet to do it.
