Sunday march spurs school controversy

"If you go ahead with this,

It took a special board meeting to do it, but the Cass City High School Band marched in the Pumpkin Festival at Caro.

The band has been marching in the Festival since it started, but a new board policy states that any school activity on Sunday needs special board approval before it can be allowed.

The school administra-tion overlooked the new policy and a special board meeting was needed if the band was to march.

The meeting sparked again the continuing controversy between local church pastors and the school for allowing activities on Sunday.

Three pastors attended the special meeting to protest the board action. They were Rev. Robert Taylor, Cass City Missionary Church; Rev. Vern Loc-kard, Novesta Church of Christ, and Rev. Eldred Kelley, Evangelical Free

The pastors' position was that it was wrong to force students to march on Sunday. Students are given 100 points for participating in each marching event. If they miss and bring an excuse they receive 50 points. In the semester it is possible to earn 900 points.

That, say the pastors, is wrong, but band director George Bushong said that operating in the black.

ception that competitive mandatory to attend. Now we are changing that policy. If we take away grade points for not attending, we are really telling the stu-dent you "got to be there." That's not right.

Council President Dr. Edward Scollon said that the Cass City Band Boosters and the Student Council were both in favor of marching on Sunday.

Rev. Taylor said that he has always been a strong supporter of the school and is a member of the Citizens' Advisory Committee.

Cass Čity's enrollment is declining now, he pointed out. "If you go ahead with this, you are forcing pas-tors to put more children in Christian schools.'

On a motion by Scollon, the band was allowed to participate. It was a 4-2 vote. Thresa Burnette and Horner voted no. Voting to allow participation were Scollon, Kenneth Micklash, Wallace and Fred Matthews. Ben Hobart was ab-

The 1983-84 financial audit for the Owen-Gage School District once again shows that the school is Certified Public Accountant Walter Moore of Laine, Appold and Company, Bay City, told school board members Monday night that the district has $81,090 in surplus revenues. This is ot $17,261 in surplus over last year. For the 1983-84 school year, the district had a total revenue of $1.262 million. This is an increase of $26,660 over the 1982-83 school year.

The largest gains in revenue for the district were salaries for the year. an increase of $41,653 in taxes levied, interest gains on investments and state school aid. School Superintendent Ronald Erickson said that the increase in state school aid, $5,804 over the previous year, was due to increased funding from the state for transportation costs.

Erickson said that the $6,785 increase of revenue from interest on investments over the 1982-83 school year was because the district had enough surplus money to invest in interest bearing accounts. Erickson said that in the past the school had just enough money to meet expenses. Now the district has funds that they are able to invest and draw interest on before they are needed to meet the operating expenses. The district, currently involved in legal battles, reduced the 1983-84 attorney fees from $66,869 for the previous year to $62,828, a savings of $4,041.

The financial audit lists the Goslin Transfer property taxes as a $423,795 asset. The property was transferred to the Cass City School District in 1978, but the Michigan Supreme Court did not rule on the case until March, 1982. The district claims that they are owed property taxes on the property until March, 1982. The district is presently preparing an appeal for re-consideration of the case by the Michigan Supreme

Moore said that the district has a fund balance of $275,352. The $423,795 from the property taxes for the Goslin Transfer is added to the total to put the fund bathe district will have additional money in the fund balance.

Erickson said that the retroactive wage and insurance benefits paid to the teachers for the 1983-84 school year will have little effect on the audit. He said that because the district laid off two teachers due to a decrease in enrollment, the retroactive costs will have minor effects on the total costs of teacher

GAS DISCOUNT

Also at the meeting, board members discussed possible alternatives to reduce the cost of operating the bus fleet.

Wayne Dubs, owner of the Owendale Union 76 gas station, and Maurice Win-chester of Gagetown Gas and Oil, were invited to the meeting to see what could be done about lowering the price of gas for the school district. Presently the school buys from both sta-

Dubs and Winchester were asked if they could give the school district a discount on the price of the Winchester said that he was already selling gas cheaper than Dubs, and he was filling fewer buses than the Owendale station.

Dubs said that because Owendale was a small town he had to charge a higher price than other stations in the area to make a profit. 'If what you want is for the two of us to get into a gas war...No I am not going to. I am not going to change my price. I have to work at a certain quota," Dubs said.

Board member Patrick Goslin asked Dubs if the school could get a five-cent per-gallon discount off the

"If I give that five cents off to you, Pillsbury is going to want it, and the next guy is going to want it, and everybody's going to want it," Dubs said.

Erickson said that the . school district has looked into purchasing an underground tank and buying their gas on the open market. He said that in the past they have not done this because the school district wants to help the two gas stations servicing the area.

Dubs said that he would survive without the school bus gas business, but that Please turn to page 18.

Open heart operations enable tiny Aeron to beat survival odds

By Bill McLeod

Eight-month-old Aeron Mills sat in his wind up swing, sucking on a pacifier and curiously looking about ae room.

The only evidence that he was any different than any other baby was the feeding tube in his nose and his small size.

Under his warm, blue sleeper are the scars of two open heart surgeries. It was these surgeries that gave Aeron the opportunity to fight for life, when even the surgeons said that he ould probably not survive the operation.

healthy, strong baby. For the first two hours of his life, his parents, Scott and Janeen Mills held and loved their new addition to the family.
At that time they had no indication that before the day was through, Aeron ould develop heart com-plications that would plications threaten his life.

Aeron was born Feb. 5 at 10:00 a.m. in Saginaw General Hospital. He was a full term baby and the delivery was normal.

At 6:30 p.m. Scott returned to the hospital with his mother to show her his newborn son. It was then he found out that Aeron, now bout nine hours old, was in trouble. He had been taken to the neonatal unit on the seventh floor of the hospi-Janeen did not yet know about Aeron's serious condition. She only knew that he had not been brought to her room for a feeding because he needed additional Together Scott and Jameen went to the neonatal unit. Aeron was in an incubator. Attached to his tiny body were several IV lines. The nurses were preparing Aeron for a transfer to Mott Children's Hospital, Ann Arbor.

Dr. Chai told them that instead of hearing a normal heart beat, they heard a swishing sound in Aeron's

"It was really strange.... We were really up-set....We really didn't get to hold him at any point. Just before they closed the incubator they took a polaroid picture of him and handed it to my wife," Scott said. "That really sur-prised both of us. A few minutes later you realized that maybe you might not ever see him alive again."

Dr. Chai, a pediatrician specializing in cardiology at Saginaw General Hospital said that the problem would not have been noticeable until the hole in Aeron's heart started to close. The hole, the Foramen Ovale, is common to all babies. It allows oxygenated blood to flow from the placenta to the fetal circulatory system. Within hours after birth, the opening begins to close so that the infant's heart will function normally. At about 10:00 p.m. they received a telephone call from Mott Hospital explaining that they performed a cardiac catherization on Aeron. They discovered a second hole in the bottom of his heart and a collapsed aorta artery. They also suspected that Aeron's aorta and pulmonary arteries were transposed.

Scott said that the doctors intentionally ruptured the Foramen Ovale so that blood could flow through the heart more easily. "The only reason he was even living was because he life. did have a hole in his heart," Scott said.

Scott explained that because of the transposition of the aorta and pulmonary arteries, Aeron's heart was a closed system. Without the hole in the bottom of the heart the dirty blood returning from the body could not mix with the clean blood. "He would never have survived the pregnancy without that hole in him. He would never have formed,'

Janeen said. At about 4:30 a.m. Dr. Crowley from Mott Hospital called with the results of the second catherization. Aeron definitely needed surgery to repair the collapsed aorta and to restrict the blood flow to the lungs. Scott, a nursing student at Delta Community College, said that Dr. Crowley was trying to break the news about Aeron's condition to him gently. "I told him I wanted to know what we got from the surgery. Whether it was six months or a year or a chance of a normal life," Scott said. "He told me right out that he didn't expect Aeron to survive the surgery." Without the surgery he would not live more than five days.

Dr. Crowley told Scott that if Aeron survived the surgery, a second open heart surgery would be needed within a year. The second surgery would be to reverse the aorta and pulmonary arteries. The first surgery was scheduled for Feb. 6, 26 hours after Aeron was born

Dr. Crowley then gave Scott some encouraging news. If Aeron did survive the second surgery, he would have a chance for a normal

After a five-hour surgery to correct the collapsed aorta and place a restricting band on the aorta artery to slow down the blood flow to Aeron's lungs, he was taken to the intensive care

"It is certainly bad luck to have a child born like this, but through it all there has been a lot of good luck,"

Scott said.

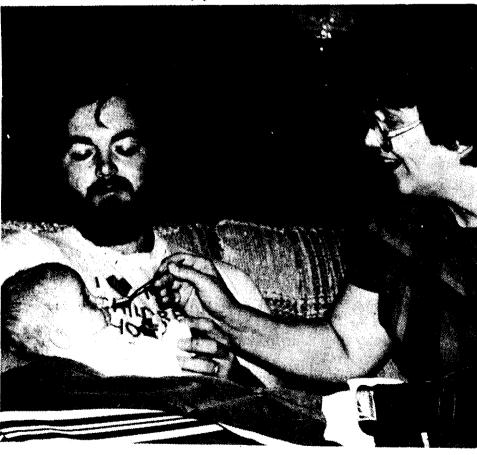

To sustain his breathing Aeron was put on a ventilator. When they removed the ventilator tube from his throat, Aeron was unable to make any sound. The doctors told the Millses that Aeron was unable to cry because his throat was irritated from the tube.

Three days later Aeron was still unable to make any noise. A doctor told them that it was possible that his vocal nerves may have been cut during the surgery. He might never be able to speak.

"He would attempt to cry, his mouth would open and you would see tears, but there wouldn't be any sound at all," Scott said.

Last words

It is incredibly incongruous that Farrah Fawcett made me think of Gladys Cooper, a retired schoolteacher whom you proba-bly never heard of unless you read the Lapeer County (Mich.) Press.

Everyone who keeps track of really important cut. I remind them that people knows that Farrah Fawcett is a famous actress, one of Charlie's original angels. A tousle-haired blond, she recently told US magazine that she has fi-

So now, instead of my hair, my nose is more important than I am, and I feel more in control of my life, especially when I blow it. I am grateful that Farrah Fawcett's last words reminded me of what's really important, and what's not. And they reminded me of Gladys Cooper.

For over 20 years, Gladys Cooper wrote béautiful columns, poems and articles for the Lapeer County Press. For many of those years, I was her editor. She often wrote about people and how they should be nice to each other. She never wrote a mean word. Sometimes I thought she was too kind to be true. I was days it makes me madder wrong. Two Cass City youths injured in Friday accident

Two Cass City youths were admitted to Hills and Dales Hospital after a car they were in left the road and struck a tree. Two other youths in the vehicle were not injured in the Friday night accident.

James A. Palmateer, 17, 6292 Main St., Cass City, was ticketed with careless negotiate the curve on Huron Street near Hunt Street, and traveled 126 feet before he struck the tree. Also taken to the hospital was Eric H. LaJoie, 17, 6328 River Road, Cass City. LaJoie was admitted Friday and released Sunday. Palmateer, listed in fair condition, is still in the hos-

The other two passengers in the vehicle, Colleen Whittaker, 6766 Third St., Cass City, and Barbara Craig, 6577 Seed St., Cass City, did not seek medical treatment.

Cass City Police Officers Robert Moore and Phillip Klaus said that Palmateer was driving west on Huron Street and failed to negotiate the curve where the street turns north. He drove across the yard of Duane Chippi, 4607 Huron St., Cass City.

Officer Phillip Klause reported that a vehicle driven by Irene G. Rudy failed to stop at a stop sign on Church Street and struck a vehicle driven by Shirley A. Griffen, 42, 5844 Main St., Deford, last Wednesday at 3:20 p.m.

Klause reported that Rudy, 59, 3801 Cumber Rd., Ubly, told him that she did not see the stop sign be-cause an illegally parked truck blocked her view. Rudy was issued a ticket for failure to yield right of way. No injuries were reported. Both vehicles were

If you asked what has been my biggest thrill as a true blue Tiger fan, the answer would be easy. Not going to jail when the Cubs played the Tigers in the 1935 series. There really wasn't any danger of that, but as a 13year-old kid, it appeared to me that the police were going to pounce at any mi-

Two adults and two kids, not related. We got in by standing in line all night. No problem. As soon as the gates opened, we settled into the left field bleachers and waited for the players to come on the field. Long before game time the pitchers were out doing wind sprints and shagging fly balls. One of them was Lon Warnake. He tossed a ball over the fence, I ended up with it and he autographed it. During the game, Hank Greenberg slammed one into the stands over our heads. The adults promptly decided that we would tell everyone it was Greenconning Journal, decided that it would make a good Optometrists item and she used it. Meanwhile, this 13-year-old was getting more and more nervous. Cautioned to keep my mouth shut by the group, that's what I did. But a couple of days later, disaster struck. The Bay City Times called and wanted an interview. Right then I wanted to confess and throw myself on the mercy of the authorities. No way, said the boys, just go along like it was the real thing.

So off to Bay City I went. Treated royally, too. A tour of the plant and a talk with the big city reporters. And, horrors, a picture with me and the ball. After that, I was certain the jig was up. Certainly, I reasoned, the guy who really caught that ball would be showing up to show me

There were four of us. For several days after that picture appeared, I spent my days looking over my shoulder and my nights waiting for a knock on the door. After the crisis passed and it was apparent that I was home free, the incident became a conversation piece each time any of the four of us got together. Now it's likely that I'll be in the bleachers again Sunday watching the Tigers. If I come back with Kirk Gibson's home run ball, you can be absolutely sure that it is a real one.

Rabbit Tracks By John Haire (And anyone else he can get to help.)

An advance copy of George Sparky Anderson's new paperback, "Bless You Boys" came to the Chronicle a couple of weeks ago.

An avid Tiger fan, the book was mildly interesting to me, but a word of caution, if you are not a baseball nut, forget it. It lists the box score of every game and is sprinkled page after page with Sparky's comments. All of which have been read or heard before by Tiger fans.

If you are into that sort of thing the book provides a review of the championship season for the years ahead.

If not, save yourself $7.95.

It was one of those rare weeks when Go Green replaced Go Blue. Steve Garvey and Kirk Gibson, most valuable players in their respective championship series, are Michigan State alumni. And then there was that Michigan-Michigan State game on Saturday.

Let me set the record straight. It will not cost you one thin dime to see the displays and attend the Fire Prevention Seminar at Colony House Saturday, Oct. 27.

If you want to attend the dance that follows the seminar there will be a $2.50 admission charge. Elkland Township Fire Chief Jerome Root Jr., stresses that he wants as many as possible to attend the Seminar regardless of whether they go to the dance that follows.

Joan Kroc owns the San Diego Padres and she can dress up in a baseball uniform and trot out to the mound to throw the first ball if she wants to. But it grossed me out.

Wait, before calling me a male chauvinist. I'd feel the same if it were Tom Monaghan, Tiger owner, decked out in a uniform and taking the field. Just because you have a zillion bucks doesn't give you a moral right to interfere with the players before the game.

The program is a joint ffort of the Cass City School District and Hills and Dales Hospital. Funding for the three-year. $98,260 program was do-nated by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, Battle Creek.

During August, several of the school district's teachers, administrators and counselors attended five inservice seminars on substance abuse. During these seminars, they received training on assessing and treating a student with a drug abuse problem.

Baker said that national statistics show that one out of every four children come from a home that has been affected by chemical de-pendency. This may be the child's parents, grandparents or an older sibling that is involved with drugs, including alcohol.
"People don't feel that alcohol is a drug because you don't need a prescription to buy it. Alcohol is one of the most abused drugs," Baker said. She added that children from a family with a chemically dependent parent are considered to have coholism and other drug dea high risk of becoming pendencies. chemically dependent chemical dependency. Baker added that children can become chemically dependent faster than an adult because their bodies aren't fully developed, and the body will grow up under the influence of the chemical.

"Kids aren't capable of handling large amounts of chemicals," Baker said. She added that the children are missing out on the development of their coping skills because the chemicals are masking the skills that they will use throughout their life. That's the sad part about kids drinking to feel like an adult. They are just slowing down that part of their mat-

Baker said that the kindergarten through third grade students will be taught that they do have a choice about using chemicals. She said that they want the students to know that they can say no to taking drugs and feel all right about their decision. The children will also be taught that they are not responsible for an adult's drinking problem.

Baker said that junior high and high school students will be given indepth information on the problems of drug abuse. She added that the program will present students with alternatives to drugs, such as walking, talking the problem out with friends or family, or athletics.

The second part of the program will be the assessment and group referral. Baker said that students who are suspected of hav-ing a chemical abuse prob lem will be referred to one of three groups. In these groups, similar to Alcoholics Anonymous type groups, students will be given needed support to stay away from drugs.

The third part of the program will be community education. Beginning Oct 15, at 7:30 p.m. Baker will conduct the first of five seminars on alcohol/drug uses and misuses. The first seminar will talk about alcoholism, early indications of addiction, and physical complications associated with drug dependency. The speaker will be Joan K. The seminars will continue for the next four Mondays at the Cass City High School cafeteria. Each seminar will give additional information on chemical abuse and drug depen-

County traffic fatality Oct. 2 after his motorcycle struck a deer on Morrison Road, about one quarter mile east of Nugent Road.

Michigan State Police Troopers Kenneth Daniel and Clifford Cushard re-ported that Kevin Osentoski, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Osentoski, 4857 Nugent Road, Ubly, was riding his motorcycle with his friend, Brian Bensinger, when the Bensinger motorcycle struck a deer.

Bensinger told the troopers that Ösentoski was riding behind him when the deer came out of the ditch on the north side of the road. Bensinger struck and knocked the deer down in front of the Osentoski vehi-

"THE GOOD WAR," AN ORAL HISTORY OF WORLD WAR TWO by Studs Terkel (non-fiction). Author Terkel talks with more than 100 people who experienced World War II; women and men; blacks and whites; wives, mothers and children; blue-collar workers, medics, economists and scientists; Americans, British, German, Japanese, Russians. The heart of the book consists of the memories, both poignant and humorous, of little-known but amazingly articulate survivors who fought the war, in factories as well as at sea and on the battlefields; those who were bombed and those who did the bombing; the Japanese-Americans who were uprooted and put into concentration camps and those who permitted that to happen;

those who were taught to hate the enemy, who suffered the loss of comrades and the sorrow and degradation of torture

FIRST AMONG EQUALS by Jeffrey Archer (fiction). We learn all we need to know about the British Parliament - by no means a dull topic. One of three promising young men will climb the ladder of political success to the pinnacle of the prime ministry. All three of these unseasoned members of Parliament have their talents, as well as their Achilles' heels. Raymond Gould is the driven Labourite from London who uses his working-class origins to win the unions trust.

Having married without love and under duress, he is all too susceptible to other women's charms. Charles Hamilton is the aristocratic Tory, so duplicitous that his schemes to trip up rivals are reflective of both his talent and potential downfall. His competitor, Simon Kerslake, is a handsome, honorable Conservative who embodies the phrase "public the first of the breed - and rises to be president of a giant pharmaceutical organization. Ambitious, superconfident and supremely forthright, Celia is never more than a superficial character whose spectacular success in a ruthless industry is simply made to look too easy; she is possessed of impeccable instincts, superb business sense and flawless moral judgment. Celia battles against greed and grossly unethical conduct among various members of Kappen Sawmill operates under new ownership

'Sam" Springstead and Jack Kappen decided to buy the Kappen Sawmill and go into business toether, the decision on how to split up the work load was an easy one: Springstead in the summer and Kappen in the winter

Kappen, farmer, had to have the crop growing months off to work on his cash crop farm. engineer for the Detroit Area Public Schools, likes to spend his winters in the warmth of Florida. The partnership was formed.

"I was looking for some-thing to do," Springstead said. "I was bored just sitaround." He had worked for the Detroit area schools for 30 years.

Kappen said that one of the reasons he was in-

Last May when Kenneth Springstead, a retired chief terested in buying the De-Sam" Springstead and engineer for the Detroit ford based sawmill from his brother, Wallace Kappen, was because he was looking for something for his two sons to work at during the > Kappen said that one of the biggest problems that they are facing in running the sawmill is getting enough trees to cut into

> He said that because of the high demand for wood for home heating , the cost of buying trees for lumber has escalated to the point where it is difficult to make a profit. Kappen said that recently he went to look at 120 acres of standing lumber for sale. He said that the landowner would not come down from his $40,000 price, and that the trees would not produce very much lumber because they were small and all scrub wood.

Kappen added that because people are cutting down young, small trees for wood to be used for heating, the trees don't have a chance to grow big enough to be used in the sawmill in the future.

He said that the high demand for wood for heating has added a source of income for the sawmill. They take all of the slabwood that is trimmed from the logs, and cut it into 18-inch logs to be sold as firewood.

Springstead said that most of the lumber that they cut is used for their production of wooden pallets that they sell to area factories. The pallets are made from cottonwood, a tree common to the area.

He said that they also cut some hardwoods such as ash, oak and maple that is purchased by farmers in the area. These are used for building pens, fences and doing repairs to their Kappen said that farmers will request them to make 4x10-inch hardwood beams to be used as wagon stringers. "If they want some-thing that is strong and going to last, this is what

Another source of problems that they have found in the business is nails that have been hidden by bark growing over them. He said that last week they had to replace two guards on the teeth of the blade, after they hit a nail. The guards cost about $6 each. A new four-foot diameter blade costs about $1,600. The sawyer sharpens the blade each day before he starts cutting. They are also care ful to remove all the dirt that the log may have stuck on it because it dulls the Kappen remains optimistic about the future for the sawmill and hopes to exoperations. "You pand can't stand still," he said. "If you're not going ahead you are going to lose.

Sleep apnea and hypertension

An interruption in normal breathing patterns during sleep may be a factor in the development of high blood pressure, according to a study by California researchers.

Adrian J. Williams, M.D., of Wadsworth Hospital and the University of California at Los Angeles, reporting at the recent annual meeting of the American Lung Association and its medical section, the American Thoracic Society, said that people who have numerous episodes of breathing cessation for short periods, ten or more seconds, during sleep may be at risk of developing hypertension.

Abnormal breathing cessation, or sleep apnea episodes, averaging 20 seconds were observed in 45 percent of 23 randomly selected patients in the Hypertension Clinic at Wadsworth Hospital.

"These patients." Williams said, "had blood pressures of greater than 165 over 95, or were on antihypertensive medicines. and had not previously been identified as having sleep apnea syndrome (SAS)."

When observed and evaluated over three hours of sleep, he said, 11 patients were found to have sleep-induced apneas and an average of 19 percent of sleep

"These episodes can cause a drop in the oxygen levels in arterial blood,' Dr. Williams said, "and two-thirds of those with abnormal sleep apnea were found to have oxygen level drops that were significant.

"We have proposed that SAS may give rise to high blood pressure," Dr. Wil-liams said. "From here, it will be a matter of studying more patients and developing new ways of treating sleep apnea.

tached to this person be-cause we just don't know how long he is going to be here. We felt that way, too," Janeen said.

In late July Aeron, now six months old, developed an ear infection, a common childhood illness. It took its toll on Aeron. Janeen said that the hospital was very concerned about the illness, and discussed moving the date of the second surgery up before he got sick again. The surgery was originally scheduled for September or October.

Scott said that the next day he got a call from the doctor telling him that they had a cancellation. They could do the surgery next

"About a half hour later I was sitting with my daughter (Linsey, 3) watching television. The next thing I knew, I burst out crying. I couldn't control myself. I can't even tell you why," Scott said.

"I think that the hardest part was taking him in the night before the surgery," Janeen said. "The surgeon came in and said I have to be really honest with you. Babies this small do not survive this surgery. We don't expect him to sur-

"I just really felt devastated. I telt like turning around and taking him home. I thought that he just doesn't have any hope. I knew he was just trying to be honest," she said.

Then the assistant surgeon, Dr. Landrinow, came in and said that they wouldn't do the surgery if they didn't have any hope.

"I thought, Oh God, I needed someone to give me some hope. I didn't think that I was going to make it through the night," Janeen

The doctors said that the most difficult part would be to start Aeron's heart beating after they reversed the

'We both thought about packing him up and bringing him home. The last several months had been pretty comfortable," Scott said.

"As soon as you think that, you start feeling guilty over the fact that you're being selfish. We have gone this far. We need to go the rest of the way and give him that chance," he said.

"The irony of it all was that he was standing there telling us that the kid wouldn't survive the surgery. But they told us that six months earlier,' Scott said. "I'll never forget the week we went home after the first surgery. I asked him what was the long range prognosis. He said we want you to just take him home and enjoy him. We had done that for six months.

Janeen said that before they took Aeron down for his surgery he was happy and smiling at them all the

"We spent the last few hours before surgery trying to remember what it felt like to hold him...what he smelled like," Scott said.

Aug. 6, after five hours of surgery, Aeron, for the first time in his life was no longer a blue baby. Aeron was finally getting enough oxygen in his blood.

'It was like having a new baby. He was hot pink," Scott said. "They opened the elevator door and he was glowing."
He was taken to the intensive care unit, where he would spend the next three weeks.

Aeron was not out of danger yet. After three days his kidneys were not functioning. Saturday, five days after the surgery, Dr. Landrinow told them he had to go back in and find out what the problem was. He told the Millses that if there was a problem with the heart, it would be worse this time because Aeron was still weak from the surgery.

The doctors found nothing wrong with Aeron. They said that when they reopened the incision his body was like a vacuum. The heart cavity was filled with liquid. By the time that Aeron was taken back to the intensive care unit his kidneys were working.

For the next two weeks Aeron was drugged to keep him from exerting himself. Scott said an occasional flutter of his eyelids was the only way they could tell he was still alive.

During this time Scott and Janeen stayed in the hospital. They made occa-

Army ups aid for students

The Army College Fund (ACF) is now bigger and better starting this October, with the maximum benefit being increased to $26,400, according to Lt.Col. mander of the Lansing Recruiting Battalion, which covers most of out-state

Michigan. 'The Army is increasing the benefits to be earned through the Army College Fund because we recognize that college costs will increase between the time the soldier enlists and the time he begins or returns to col-lege," LTC Madden commented.

"Another major change in the ACF is that soldiers entering the Army with two years of college credit will also earn an increased benefit. This change is in line with the Army's drive to recruit more soldiers with college backgrounds. A soldier who falls into this category can earn up to $20,100 for educational expenses after just two years in the Army."

To take part in any of the ACF programs, the soldier must be a high school graduate, be entering the Army for the first time, score in the top half on the Armed Forces aptitude examination and enlist for skill training considered critical to Army needs. The soldier must also contribute to the Veterans Educational Assistance Program

To earn the maximum benefit, the soldier is required to enlist for four years and make a personal contribu-tion of $2,700 ($60 per month) to the VEAP. The government will match the $2,700 on a two-for-one basis ($5,400) and add a contributon of $18,300.

"Soldiers who have high school diplomas, but who lack the two years of college, still may qualify for a $15,200 package with a twoyear enlistment," LTC Madded added. "The soldier is required to contribute $2,400 to the VEAP and the Army will add the remainder.

Army College Fund benefits may be used for any educational program which is approved by the Veterans Administration. Funds are paid directly to the soldier by the government. Should the soldier not continue his education, the personal contribution of the soldier will be returned in a lump

During the past three years, about a third of the soldiers entering the Army for the first time have met the qualifications to take part in the Army College

Cass City moved into a spoilers role this week after a disappointing homecoming loss to Vassar, 35-0, Friday at Cass City Recreational Park.

To spoil the perfect season of the annually powerful and currently unde-feated Lakers, the Hawks' next opponents, will take some doing.

Girls better, still lose

Coach Daryl Ivan-kovitsch said the Cass City Red Hawks played probably their best game of the season despite losing to Vassar 51-25.

Two low scoring quarters kept the Hawks from making any sort of serious challenge to the Vulcans. Cass City was outscored 10-2 in the first quarter and 18-4 in the third period. In the second, the girls played on even terms, 10-10, and were outscored 13-9 in the final period.

As usual the Hawks featured balanced scoring with five girls scoring points, led by Chris Britt with 8 points.

For Vassar, Laura Lee netted 20 points and Ann Barnett added 12.

"They should be the best class D team in the state," Deckerville.

He is expecting that North Huron will come at the Bulldogs with their high yardage passing attack. North Huron has a passing average of over 250 yards per game this season. Friday night the Warriors beat Kingston 28-20 with a total of 222 passing yards.

Winter puts an extra strain on belts. Today's belts don't show wear the way they used to. Even an experienced mechanic can't always tell if they are about to go, just by looking. And most car owner manuals don't say when to change them.

The fact is, after four years, even the best belts can go at any time. So if your car is four years old or more, you ought to change the belts. It's just part of good maintenance.

And be sure to ask for Gates — the leading brand of belts. We carry the complete line of top quality Gates belts. Remember, after four years, it's time for a change.
