Area schools over state average in most, not all, test categories

Statewide results of the Michigan Education Assessment Examination show that of the four area schools, students from the Ubyly School District scored above state averages in all of the six categories that the test covers. The percentage of students passing the test is based on the students answering at least 75 percent of the questions correctly.

The total number of Cass City School District students passing the examination exceeds state averages in all categories except for 7th grade math. The total number of Owen-Gage students passing the exam fell below state averages in 10th and 7th grade mathematics. Kingston School District students fell below state averages in 10th grade math and reading, and in 4th grade reading. All four of the school districts use the test scores as a comparison as to how well their students perform compared to other schools. From these scores they are able to determine areas that they need to improve in. This is not the case at Bad Axe Public Schools, where 10th grade students are required to pass the examination before they are allowed to graduate. The scores of the students reflect the additional requirement placed on the test, with 80 percent of the students passing the mathematics examination, and 94.1 percent passing the reading requirements. Nancy Williston, guidance director for Bad Axe Public Schools, said that because the students know that they must pass the examination before they can graduate, they take the test more seriously.

Williston said that the students who fail the test when it is first given in September, have an opportunity to take the test again at the end of their sophomore year. If the student does not pass the test on the second try, they can still be promoted to the 11th grade if they receive a passing grade in their regular classroom studies.

The student has two opportunities to pass the test as a junior, and they may take the test twice as a senior.

Williston said that students who fail the test are given extra assistance in the classroom, and in some situations, tutors and computer programs are available for the student. Of the 135 sophomores who took the test this fall, 108 passed the mathematics examination, 127 passed the reading exam.

Ubyly High School counselor Hilary Cook feels that the tests are a minimum requirement of the student. He added that they teach the students the material covered in their academic program, and not specifically for the assessment examination only.

"My feelings are that they haven't established this test well enough to be used as a graduation requirement," said Wayne Wright, Owen-Gage High School principal. He added that the school's curriculum committee has shown an interest in an exit examination for high school students, but the state assessment test is not what they want to use.

First baby in 1985 will receive a host of prizes from merchants

The countdown will start at midnight, Jan. 1, to see who will win the 1985 baby derby sponsored by Cass City merchants and the Chronicle.

Sometimes the countdown takes awhile. The host of prizes that awaits the first baby born at Hills and Dales General Hospital doesn't always make its appearance early.

During the 24 years that the new baby has been feted with prizes, prizes have arrived as much as four weeks after the new year and as quickly as less than four minutes after the stroke of midnight.

Whenever the new arrival makes his appearance, prizes galore will be waiting.

Baby will need a new pair of shoes and Randalls Shoes has a $10 gift certificate waiting. Kids' Village also has a $10 gift certificate for mom to spend.

In case baby or the family needs a little medical help, $10 is available for prescriptions from both Old Wood Drug and Coach Light Pharmacy.

It's wise to start saving early and Cass City's financial institutions make it easy. Thumb National Bank and Trust will open a silver key account for $25 at its Cass City office. Chemical Bank, Cass City, has a $10 savings account waiting and Mutual Savings and Loan Assoc. in Cass City will be happy to start the new arrival with a $10 prestige account.

There will be food and baked goods for the first arrival and the family. Cass City IGA Foodliner has $15 in baby food or merchandise. Sommers Bakery will present a decorated cake to celebrate the occasion and Konrad's Bakery has $5 worth of baked goods waiting. Erla Food Center will have a basket of toys for the first arrival.

A free sitting for baby's first birthday is offered by Tim's Photos.

The family can eat out, too. Charmont has a $10 gift certificate and Johnny's Family Inn has a $10 gift certificate to give away.

The family can have the choice of the stores with a $10 gift certificate each from Bigelow Hardware, Quaker Maid Dairy and Kritzman's, Inc. Also giving $10 in merchandise is Albee Home Center.

Last, but not least, a decorating item from Special Scents is available to the lucky family with first baby, 1985.

History of mental problems

Charge Colby with attempted homicide

A 38-year-old Caro man with a history of mental problems is being held without bond in the Charlevoix County Jail following the Friday night shooting of an East Jordan hotel owner.

Norman D. Colby, Caro, has been charged with three counts of attempted homicide, and three counts of felony firearm charges after shooting Robert J. Baker, the 54-year-old owner of the Westbrook Hotel, East Jordan. The shooting happened Friday at about 9:45 p.m.

Baker said that Colby, registered as Mr. Smith, had been staying at the hotel since Wednesday of that week. Colby was staying with his semi-invalid father at the hotel.

Baker reported that he was checking the heaters of the hotel's rooms when Colby entered the unlocked hotel office and walked into one of the bedrooms attached to the office. Baker returned to the living area to find Colby inside his son's bedroom, with a 12-gauge shotgun.

"He told me to move it or lose it," Baker said when he asked Colby what he was doing inside his residence. "He said 'I don't give a damn, you're not putting my father in a home'."

Baker left the residence, and called the police. After law enforcement officers arrived, Baker went inside the hotel office to see if Colby had taken one of his shotguns. All of his shotguns were still in the gun cabinet.

As he was walking across the driveway in front of the hotel, Colby fired a single blast through the picture window of the hotel owner's residence, striking Baker with 16 pellets from the 12-gauge shotgun.

The pellets entered Baker from the neck down to his lower left leg. His son Mark helped him to safety behind a pickup truck in the parking lot. Colby also fired a single shot at the two law enforcement officers. Neither was struck by the shotgun blast.

Baker added that he had talked to Norman Colby several times during the two days prior to the shooting, and that he was friendly with him.

"I had no inkling that he would become violent," Baker said. Baker was treated at the Charlevoix Area Hospital, and released at about midnight.

Baker returned to the hotel where law enforcement officers were waiting to find the whereabouts of Greg Baker, another of his sons. The police were concerned that Colby might be holding Greg Baker hostage, or that he was hiding in another room in the living quarters of the hotel. At about 4:00 a.m. they found Greg Baker sleeping in one of the hotel rooms. Police entered the living quarters of the hotel, finding Colby sleeping in one of the bedrooms. He was arrested without further incident.

Colby had escaped from the psychiatric unit of the Caro Regional Center on about July 27. He was apprehended by the Michigan State Police, St. Ignace post, August 1, after he smashed a stolen pickup truck through a toll gate at the Mackinac Bridge. During the pursuit, he also smashed the pickup into a St. Ignace Police Department vehicle. He was captured in a woods about 15 miles from St. Ignace. Colby was returned to the Caro Regional Center by the Caro post of the Michigan State Police. He was released from the center Sept. 28.

Tuscola Health Department announces cuts in services

To meet a 1985 budget of $159,185 less than was budgeted for 1984, the Tuscola County Health Department will be cutting services that county residents have come to expect.

Health Department Director John Niederhauser said that they will be eliminating two of the four monthly immunization clinics in 1985, and they will not be hiring a part-time sanitation inspector this summer, when sewer inspections are most needed. He added they will also be reducing their in-county travel costs by 30 percent.

Niederhauser explained that the Tuscola County Health Department board has given tentative approval to the 1985 budget of $829,801, but additional cuts may be required if the department does not receive the requested $37,500 federal revenue sharing funds from the county commissioners.

He added that in previous years, the department has received $75,000 of federal revenue sharing funds from the commissioners. This year he requested one-half of the usual amount, to help the commissioners with their budget. "We understood that the county had a problem, and we are willing to work with them," he said.

County Commission Chairperson Donna Rayl said that they have not yet received their federal funds, so she is not sure how much the county will receive. She added that she talked to U.S. Congressman Bob Traxler, and he indicated that the federal revenue sharing funds are an area that the government is looking at as a budget cut for 1986.

Another source of funding that will be used for the 1985 budget will be the surplus funds left over from 1984. He explained that the entire surplus, an estimated $125,000, will be used to meet needed budget expenses for 1985.

"Everything we have that we can fall back on is budgeted for next year," he said.

He explained that for 1984, they budgeted $11,000 for tuberculosis expenses. An increase in tuberculosis cases in the county ran the total expense for the program up to about $30,000. The additional funding for the program came from the surplus.

The department will receive $190,000 from the county for their 1985 appropriation, the same as for 1984. He added that a state average of county funding for a comparable sized county is $284,000. Lapeer County, which is also under state averages for a county Please turn to page 18.

County offices to close Fridays

In order to reduce operating costs, the following offices of the Tuscola County Courthouse will be closed on Fridays during 1985: County Clerk's office, Treasurer's office, Register of Deeds, Building Codes, Drain Commission, Equalization Department, and the Personnel office. The Co-operative Extension office will be closed on Fridays, but emergency telephone calls will be accepted.

The animal control center will be open from 7:30 a.m. until noon on Monday through Thursday. It will be closed on Friday.

The following offices will be open five days a week, but will be operating with reduced staff: Circuit Court, District Court, Magistrate's office, and the District Court probation juvenile division.

Ah! A white Christmas. Most everyone enjoys a little of the white stuff on Dec. 25. After that, well.....

Despite the heavy rain, sponsors report that many shoppers were present at the drawing sponsored by the Cass City Retail Committee Friday evening. Despite the attendance only one of the 22 winners, Leona Piaskowski, was present. Winners present received $100, those not present, $50.

Reminder. Because of New Year's, the same early deadline for Chronicle copy will be in effect for the next issue as it was for this issue.

Friday was a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde night. Until about 7 p.m. the weather was, to put it mildly, B-A-D.

So terrible that several mothers of cheerleaders refused to let their daughters attend the basketball game in Vassar. A school bus that slipped into the ditch earlier didn't do much to reassure the worried mothers.

It was raining and freezing until about 7 when the weather warmed and it only rained. By 9:30 the rain stopped, the main roads were clear and driving was easy.

A typical weather day in Michigan.

Walbro announces 12-cent dividend

The Board of Directors of Walbro Corporation, at a regularly scheduled meeting, declared a fourth quarter dividend of 12 cents per share payable Jan. 31, 1985, to shareholders of record Dec. 28, 1984. The dividend will be paid on 1,468,143 shares outstanding.

The 12-cent-per-share fourth quarter dividend follows a year-long trend of 8-cents-per share quarterly dividends.

In announcing the increased dividend payout, Walbro President and Chief Executive Officer L.E. Althaver expressed a positive outlook for Walbro Corporation for the coming year.

"While shipments during the fourth quarter of 1984 were slightly below forecast levels due to slow start-up of some 1985 model year automotive programs, demand for Walbro products remains strong and is expected to increase throughout the coming year," Althaver noted.

"Deliveries of fuel system components to automotive original equipment and small engine customers are expected to increase significantly in 1985," Mr. Althaver said. "Shipments of custom manufactured products, including aluminum and magnesium die castings and injection molded plastics parts, are also scheduled to increase," according to the Walbro chief executive.

Walbro Corporation has facilities in the U.S., Mexico, Japan, Singapore, and West Germany. Walbro is traded over the counter under the symbol "WALB" and is listed in the NASDAQ NMS stock table.

The Haire Net

It's a case of don't do as I do, do as I tell you, when it comes to a mandatory seat belt law in Michigan.

State Rep. Dick Allen, of our 77th district has mailed a questionnaire asking constituents if they favor or oppose mandatory use of belts in cars.

Well, Dick, here's a vote for a compulsory law. I'm for it even though more often than not the belts in my car hang uselessly by my side.

My intentions are good. I really mean to start regular use. I know that using the belt is a life saving practice and there's no real excuse for getting behind the wheel without one.

The devices in newer cars are much better than the first to be used. It's like comparing a Model-T Ford to today's luxury cruisers. Unless you have a serious physical ailment, buckling up shouldn't be uncomfortable and it isn't.

Buckling up only takes a moment, too, and the units are self-adjusting. Not like the early versions where each time the driver changed, a major refitting of the belt was necessary.

Although the trend appears to be moving towards a new mandatory belt law, right now there are probably more folks opposed to a new law than there are those in favor.

There's a suspicion that part of the opposition stems from the very human reaction against change. It takes awhile for new ideas to become popular.

Did you catch the story the other day about the latest trend in preppy men's clothing? It's skirts, that's what it is.

Sort of makes you gulp a bit and feel that the designers have gone off their rocker. But be careful before you say, no way will that be me.

Go back a couple of decades or so. Back when men's shorts moved off the beach into everyday casual street attire. The first wearing or so most of us felt a little silly, a little conspicuous. Now we think nothing of it. Maybe skirts will be the same.

When shorts became popular, wearers forgot the times they announced it was silly for men to go around in little boy's clothing. Shorts became practical, cool and comfortable. That resistance to change and the reluctance of all of us to having "big daddy" intruding even more in our lives has kept mandatory seat belts unpopular.

Then, too, most of us have that "it can't happen to me" syndrome. Basically, we all feel that accidents will always happen to the other guy.

We all know that isn't always true. It shouldn't take a law to make us behave in a sane, rational way.

But there are too many persons like me, so it does. The law is needed, pass it.

"If It Fitz...."

It was dumb of me --

By Jim Fitzgerald

It was dumb of me to take my wife to Charleston, S.C. Historic Charleston is full of old stuff that our ancestors never knew enough to throw away. Every time we toured an antebellum home, she pointed at the ancient furnishings and said: "If people didn't save things, there would be no history."

Currently, she is trying to find room in our apartment to save everything her mother and grandmothers never threw away. And she eagerly seized upon our Charleston experience as the ultimate example of how future generations will suffer from history loss if I refuse to give up a bathroom to make space for a 120-year-old china cabinet.

With unassailable logic, I pointed out that in Charleston we were standing on the same stone floors where George Washington once stood, and walking through the fort that received the first shot fired in the Civil War. The old stuff in Charleston memorializes great events that shaped this nation's TV mini-series for generations to come.

But it is unlikely that tourists, in 2084, will be interested in pausing behind the velvet rope strung around the china cabinet that in 1984 forced Jim Fitzgerald to regularly run to the corner gas station.

My wife rejected my unassailable logic, thereby preserving tradition. I don't mean the new tradition of our home containing more china cabinets than china dishes. I mean the old tradition of rejecting my unassailable logic. Although she never throws things away, she does lose them. In a Charleston suburb she lost the packet of clearly routed maps the Auto Club had given us to keep from getting lost while driving 2,000 miles. She noticed it was missing immediately after we left a theater and, in her position as chief navigator, she was unable to tell the pilot how in hell to get back to our motel.

My first suggestion was that the map packet, half the size of a football, had probably been mislaid within the confines of her purse, twice the size of a football field. But a 15-minute search, made while rolling on the wrong road, proved fruitless, although it did raise the fascinating question of why one woman would carry 32 ballpoint pens and 12 half-empty Kleenex boxes in one purse.

The next step was to retrace our steps to the theater, which was possible only because the navigator could follow my teardrops on the road. The pilot always hangs his head out the window and cries when he fears he will never again return home to see his remote-control TV switch. The switch is what I missed most while lying on motel beds across the room from TV sets that constantly needed channel changes. Otherwise I would have writhed my body into untieable knots while watching local newscasters suffer from the terminally embarrassing cutesy disease which is sweeping like the plague through TV stations everywhere.

Anyway, with the aid of an usher and his flashlight, my wife searched the theater auditorium and rest room for the map packet that might have dropped from her purse. Meanwhile, I was prostrated on the parking lot, searching under cars. We both failed.

Finally, to get rid of us, the usher provided directions back to our motel where the map packet was found on the bed where my wife had left it. Later I will tell you how unassailable the pilot reacted to this brilliant bit of navigation which, in at least one family, will surely go down farther in history than a china cabinet. I have to write a lot more about Charleston so I can deduct a truly historic sum from my income tax.

No power shortage foreseen

Current state electrical supplies are sufficient to meet consumer demand up until the early 1990's, a study released by the Department of Commerce reported.

However, there are differences on how much demand will grow after that time and current emphasis on policy makers should be on finding the lowest cost alternatives to maintaining the state's electrical needs, the study said.

Following the release, Governor James Blanchard issued a statement, directing the Commerce Department to conduct a study to find the least expensive way to help produce future power needs.

"Michigan's citizens and businesses must be assured that an adequate and reliable supply of energy to match the needs of our growing economy will be available at a reasonable cost," he said.

The study, conducted by the department's Energy Administration, concluded that at the current rate of retiring power plants, the state will have a sufficient electrical supply through the 1980's and into the 1990's.

THE WALBRO LOGO at the far right indicates that the company is one of over 70 corporations sponsoring students at GMI Engineering & Management Institute.

Walbro Corporation of Cass City currently is sponsoring one student, Ed Sadro, a graduate of Kinde North Huron High School, in the work-study program at GMI Engineering & Management Institute. Don Tonti, human resources director at the corporation, reports.

Sadro is in his second year of the five-year program where he works at the factory for 12 weeks and then spends the next 12 weeks at the school. While in the factory Sadro works in project engineering and manufacturing engineering.

He is paid while at work and is not paid when he attends school. Two students were originally in the program but a student that worked at the Caro plant dropped from the program. Students pay tuition costs and Walbro and other organizations with students at the school pay a sponsoring fee.

GMI was formerly a subsidiary of General Motors Corporation, but became a private, independent college in 1982 when GM dropped it as a subsidiary.

Ninety-seven percent of the students that graduate work for their corporate sponsors. Sadro is working towards a degree in mechanical engineering.

Tonti said that presently he is interviewing Thumb area senior students for possible enrollment in the school next fall.

New books at the library

CLOUD NINE by James M. Cain (fiction). Sixteen-year-old Sonya Lang, pregnant after being raped by Burwell Stuart, seeks the help of her attacker's half-brother, Graham Kirby. Graham marries the girl and for a while they are content ("Cloud nine"). However, news of the marriage soon upsets an old widow who loved Graham, throws a new light on the terms of her will, and brings Burwell back into the picture. Jealousy, betrayal, and hatred are the major themes of this story, and murder is the vehicle through which they are conveyed.

THE FOREIGNER by David Plante (fiction). The time is 1959, a nineteen-year-old college student is on a trip to Europe, ostensibly to study but, in fact, simply to do things differently. That indeed happens as he becomes embroiled in shady deeds carried out across international borders by two mysterious people to whom he is drawn by an attraction that could have been fatal, under different circumstances.

OUT OF SEASON by Michael Z. Lewin (mystery). When bank executive Belter's wife, Paula, can't get a passport because her birth certificate is false, private investigator Albert Samson is called in to find out why. (Paula, herself, is baffled.) Sleuthing back through the records and interviewing anyone who might be connected, Samson discovers the secret of Paula's birth, who her real mother is and the reasons for the coverup. Meanwhile, a second case, involving ex-private eye Normal Bates, suddenly seems to have a lot more to do with Paula's past than it should. In the end, Samson has unraveled a deliberately tangled trail involving a long-ago high society murder, the victim's vengeance-seeking sister, a Japanese-American family, a nightclub singer named Daisy Wines, the elusive Vera Edwards and a killing in a nursing home.

Name Stine to head Farm Bureau membership

Maynard Stine of Deford has been named chairman of the Tuscola County Farm Bureau's 1985 membership campaign. The announcement was made by Barbara Mohr, president of Tuscola County Farm Bureau. Under his leadership, volunteer farm leaders in the county will aim at a goal of 2722 member families, which is Tuscola County's portion of the total Michigan Farm Bureau state goal of 85,553 family memberships. Mohr explained that every Tuscola County Farm Bureau member has the opportunity to voice an opinion on local, state, national and international issues through the organization's policy development system. "Agriculture will be faced with many challenges in the year ahead," she said, "and the stand our organization will take on these issues is determined by the members themselves. By joining together, we can get things accomplished which we could not do alone."

HEALTH TIPS

Weight loss will help you sleep

When overweight people shed a few pounds, they not only look but feel better. It's been shown that they sleep better, too.

Many overweight people have trouble sleeping—particularly men. According to Philip L. Smith, MD, assistant professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins Medical Institution of the Baltimore City Hospitals, these heavier folks often have several episodes each night of apnea, or breathing cessation. "They will awake during the night to find themselves gasping for breath," Dr. Smith said. "Their total number of hours of sleep is considerably lower than people of normal weight." His findings were announced at the annual meeting of the American Lung Association.

As a result of less sleep, these individuals are more prone to accidents and other consequences of a poor night's sleep.

Dr. Smith can't explain why losing weight helps these people to sleep, but shedding a few unneeded pounds sure beats some of the other remedies for apnea. In the past, upper airway surgery has been used to treat the problem. More recently, certain drugs have been used with varying degrees of success. Surgery is quite a drastic measure, however, and drugs are not as effective as weight loss.

"Overweight patients have a strong motivation to lose weight," Dr. Smith said. It's scary to wake up during the night gasping for breath.

For more information about lung disease and its prevention call your American Lung Association of Michigan toll free at 1-800-292-5979. In the Greater Lansing area, call 484-4541.

Bliss burns net, but rally just misses Vassar upset

Sophomore Kurt Bliss caught fire in the last half against Thumb B Association defending champion and league leading Vassar Friday, but his heroics fell just short of pulling out a come from behind victory for Cass City. The final score of 52-47 doesn't tell how close it was.

Bliss, looking like a young Larry Bird, made shots from the outside, inside and in between as he racked up 23 of his 26 points in the last half, 17 in the final 8 minutes.

The game started without any real surprises. Coach Ron Nurnberger started the game with a stall, with the Hawks holding the ball for just under four minutes without shooting after Vassar won the tip and quickly scored.

The stall didn't help the Hawks much. It did take the host Vulcans out of their run and gun game, and their first shots just were not falling. But Vassar lives on vicious rebounding and the second bucket was netted after Vassar had ripped off three offensive rebounds. The Vulcans simply kept shooting until they scored.

Twelve of the first 14 points scored by Vassar came after offensive rebounds.

Meanwhile Cass City did little on offense. The first Hawk score came at the buzzer in the first quarter on a basket by Tracy Lapp.

Things weren't much better in the second period and Vassar was comfortably in front, 23-8, at the intermission.

It was a different story in the third period. Dan Ware, who has received little playing time since the opening game, was inserted in the front court and his rebounding helped stem the big Vulcan rebounding advantage.

Cass City slowly closed the gap in the third quarter. Dave Miller hit a couple of shots from outcourt and Bliss added two free throws.

Vassar counted with a pair of buckets by Jeff Tyson, 6-5 center, and another by Aaron Fletcher, 6-2 burly forward.

It was 33-23 with less than two minutes left and that's when Bliss started his astounding basket barrage.

He hit a basket and followed with one of two foul shots. A 20-footer at the buzzer moved the Hawks to within seven points, 33-26, at the end of the quarter.

Ware netted a pair of free throws and Vassar countered with a bucket by Dan Main.

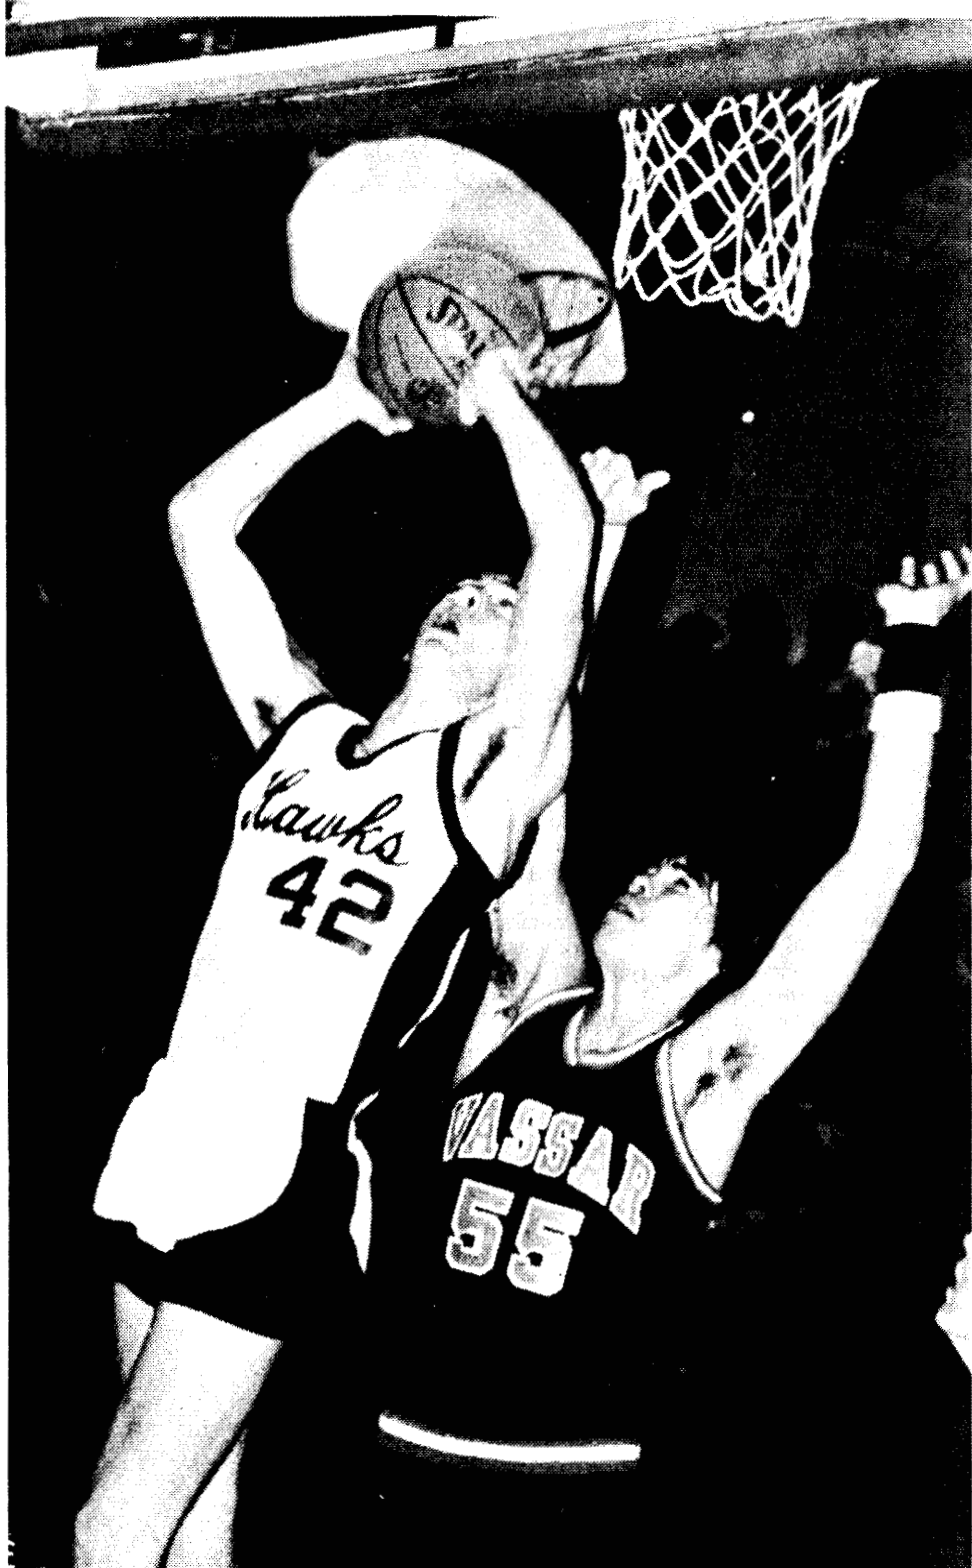

It was then that Bliss's one-man show swung into high gear. He just couldn't miss. He scored from 12 feet and it was 37-30. Coach Oarie Lemanski quickly inserted Tyson and Fletcher back into the game. There was 6:26 left. Bliss continued his rampage. He scored, was fouled, and converted and it was 37-33. A pretty in your face jumper from 15 feet found nothing but net and it was 37-35. A pair of foul shots at 5:09 pushed Cass City into a tie for the first time since the opening tip-off.

Vassar answered that challenge as Fletcher hit two quick baskets from the low post position. Bliss kept his team in the chase with another basket and it was 41-39. Bliss then scored a free throw and it was 41-40 with 3:33 left.

Fletcher then netted 3 of 4 free throws to give the Vulcans a 44-40 edge before Bliss scored again. When Miller scored a bucket the Hawks trailed by a point, 45-44, with a minute left, but Vassar went into a stall and was able to convert fouls when needed to preserve the win.

DAN WARE SNAGS a rebound as 6-5 Jeff Tyson of Vassar attempts to stop the shot of the Cass City sophomore. Ware's rebounding helped the Hawks against the league leaders.

Governor promises action on commission report

Implementing the recommendations of the Commission on the Future of Higher Education will take a "statesmanlike" approach to the overall problems of higher education, along with strong support from the state colleges and the executive office, James K. Robinson, chairman of the commission said in releasing the commission's report.

Governor James Blanchard immediately called the report a "landmark not only to Michigan but probably in the rest of the country," and promised it "won't gather dust."

The two spoke at a press conference releasing the report, which recommends stabilizing tuition increases, increasing student financial aid, creating better overall planning, cutting back on funding for health care training and gubernatorial appointments of all university governing boards.

While the Governor pledged to give it a strong push towards implementation, he shied away from completely endorsing all its provisions.

"I'd like some time to read the report and see how far we can go in implementation," he said.

Robinson said the report was meant as a broad outline of policy proposals. He said it was important not to get bogged down in specifics but to look to the report as a framework for future action.

The report recognizes that colleges are largely autonomous, but it also provides "a basis for interaction" with the state in planning through the roles and missions it outlines, he said.

Robinson said he was not concerned that parochial concerns over such issues as denial of state support for programs not approved by a state review process would doom much of the report.

"The Legislature and the Governor have to be concerned about those interests, but we have to look at the big picture," he said.

Although the report calls for formula funding, program review and budgetary approval, he said it does not necessarily mean constitutional autonomy will be violated.

"These efforts are a way of getting macro effort to get the system on the right track. The constitution doesn't say you give those universities a blank check," he said.

Robinson also said he was confident that the inclusion of many of the proposals in the State of the State message and the Executive Budget, along with general support from the higher education community, could be enacted.

Both Robinson and Blanchard said public scrutiny of the report has failed to concentrate on the economic development proposals it recommends.

The report seeks a "full partnership" with the state and business in building economic development, Robinson said, through such things as business financed teaching chairs and research opportunities.

Initial reaction to the report was generally favorable.

Diamonds in the Snow

Lawrence Wright produces first book

A Cass City resident recently opened a new chapter in his working career by writing and publishing his first book.

Lawrence Wright, 41, began writing "Diamonds in the Snow," a 92-page soft covered book, about two years ago. Although he has just received copies of the new book, he is almost finished with his second book, "The Paralyzed Mind."

Wright said that he began writing "Diamonds in the Snow" for people who possessed suicidal tendencies. While writing the book he realized that everyone could benefit from reading it.

"It ended up being an inspirational, self-help book for the reasonably normal individual who wants to work out their own problems," Wright explained.

It is written as a question and answer book, Wright answering questions that he feels many teenagers and adults in today's society have. The questions are letters to God, asking for help.

"I didn't play the role of God," Wright explained about the answers he gave. "It is my interpretation of what I think He would tell people."

The book deals with issues such as drug abuse, suicide, the sexual revolution, fears and loneliness. For each of the answers, Wright responds with a parable from nature.

As an example, when a 17-year-old boy runs from a fight with a bully, and is embarrassed about it, Wright responds to the problem by explaining how a rabbit uses its speed to stay away from a predator. He writes that even though a rabbit must run to save its life, it will give up its life to protect its young. Wright explained that this is not the sign of a coward.

Wright added that the book is nondenominational, with answers to problems that everyone may experience at one time or another. "It's inspirational. It is meant to help," he said.

Wright feels that most people who want to write a book, but never do, use the excuses that they don't have the time to sit down and write.

"If people would write one page a day, they could have a book in 200 days, or at least a rough draft of the book," he explained. "Editing is the hardest part. Each page was redrafted at least five times."

In order for Wright to have complete control over the publication of the book, and to save time and money, Wright set up his own publishing company, Dove Publications. He added that the company is named after the bird of peace.

After Wright completed the manuscript, it was sent to the printer, where minor errors were corrected, and the book was typeset. He received a copy of the manuscript in book form, to be edited for any mistakes that the typesetter may have made. He found 17 errors in the manuscript.

After the errors were corrected, he received the material for his final approval before it was printed.

Wright explained that if he had gone to a publishing firm, instead of doing the editing himself, he would not have had complete editorial control over the final version of the book. He estimated that it would have taken about 18 months for a printing house to complete the book. Because of breakdowns and other problems that the printer had, it took almost seven months for complete production, five months longer than expected.

"You have to keep busy," Wright said about the seven-month waiting period. "If you just wait on the book you will lose your shirt, and go bananas."

In addition to the book that he is presently writing, Wright has written two self-help pamphlets on subjects that he has had personal experience with. One pamphlet deals with will and inheritance taxes, and the other is on allergies of infants and toddlers.

He and artist Randy Bliss have also produced three picture coloring books, which are almost complete.

Wright's education background is as varied as the subjects that he deals with in his book. He dropped out of high school in 1963 to join the military. After the military, he worked in a factory in the Detroit area. Eventually he received his high school degree, and later graduated from Macomb County Community College. He has a bachelor of science degree in education, and a masters degree from Wayne State University in guidance and counseling.

Wright has also taken correspondence writing courses from Brigham

Young University, University of Oklahoma and the Hollywood School of Writing.

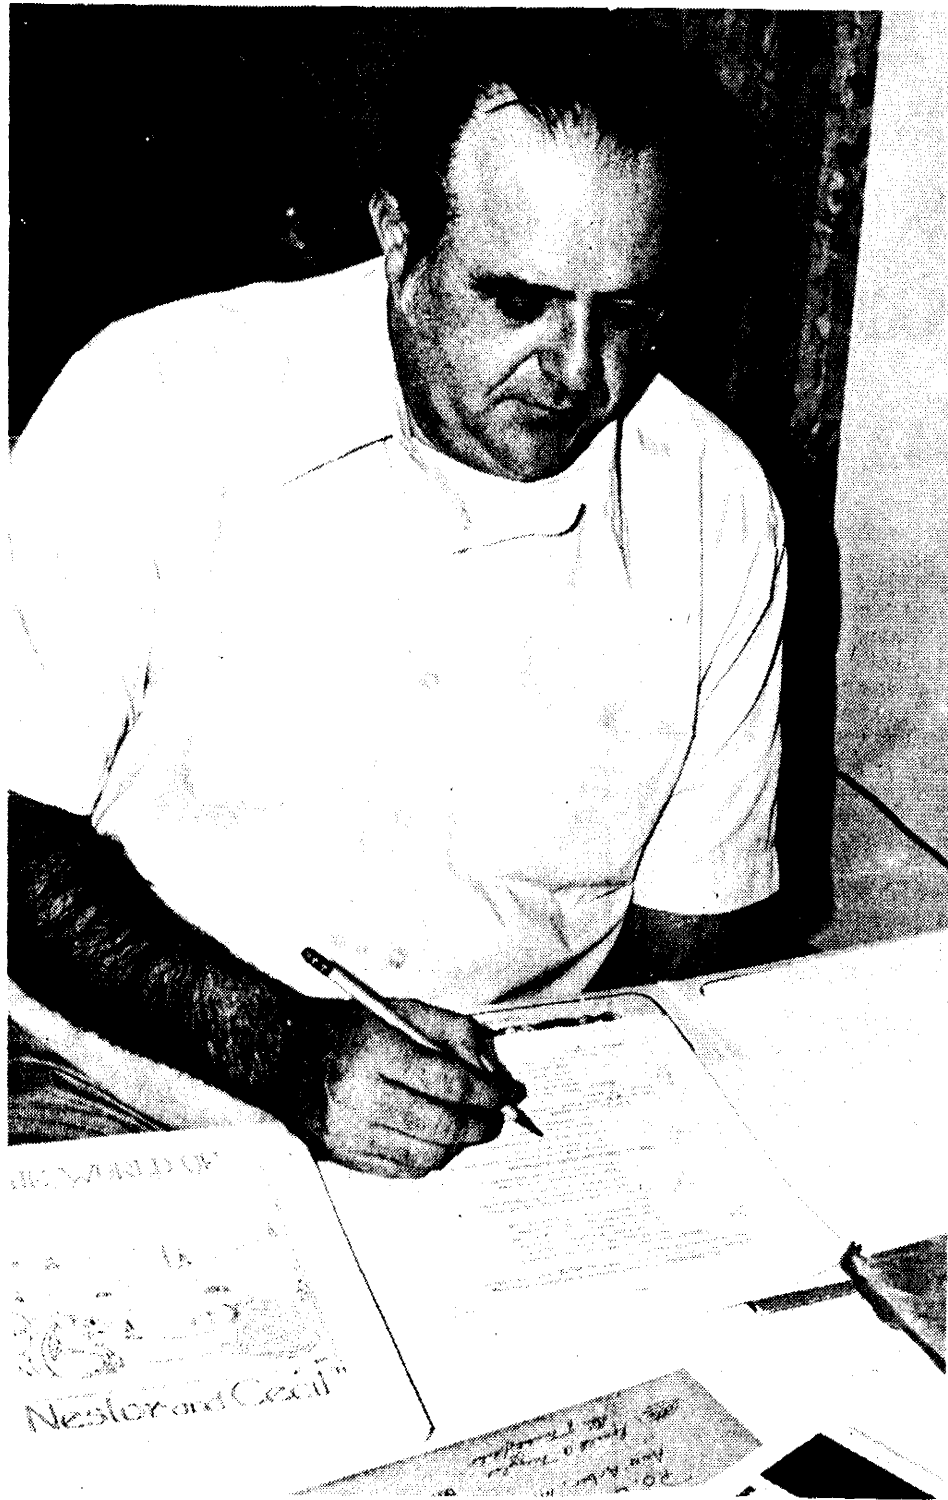

Wright has been sending copies of "Diamonds in the Snow" to major newspapers and book reviewers across the country, hoping that they will give his book a favorable review. He has also contacted local radio and cable television stations, seeking an on the air interview.

Wright said that he will use about 400 of the 1,000 copies that he ordered for promotions and book reviews. He added that he will have to sell the remaining books to break even. So far he has sold more than 100 copies.

"Basically I won't make any money on the first printing. On the second printing I will," he said.

The book sells for $6 and is available from Dove Publications, P.O. Box 33, Cass City.

LAWRENCE WRIGHT edits the copy for his new book, "The Paralyzed Mind."

- f) Any substance which may cause the POTW's effluent or any other product of the POTW such as residues, sludges, or scums, to be unsuitable for reclamation and reuse or to interfere with the POTW's operation. In no case, shall a substance discharged to the POTW cause the POTW to be in non-compliance with sludge use or disposal criteria, guidelines or regulations developed under the Act, 33 U.S.C. 1342, or other guidelines, or regulations affecting sludge use or disposal developed pursuant to the Solid Waste Disposal Act, the Clean Air Act, the Toxic Substances Control Act, or State criteria applicable to the sludge management method being used.

- l) Any wastewater which causes a hazard to human life or creates a public nuisance.

When the Superintendent determines that a User(s) is contributing to the POTW, any of the above enumerated substances in such amounts as to interfere with the operation of the POTW, the Superintendent shall: (1) Advise the User(s) of the impact of the contribution on the POTW; (2) Develop effective limitation(s) for such User to correct the interference with the POTW.

Quarter horses win championships

Bullocks develop prize winners

If you think that feeding and caring for a horse is as simple as throwing them a bale of hay and a pail of grain, talk to Dave and Rose Bullock about it. They have a different approach. For them it is a proven winner.

The Bullocks raise and train quarter horses for show competition. Their top horse, Classic Country, has beaten horses in halter competitions that have sold for over $1 million.

From start to finish, the Bullocks use their knowledge of horses to produce the best possible animal.

"Quality is something that you strive for," he explained. "Quality is what sells the individual, and quality is proven in the show ring."

When breeding a mare, they study the qualities of the mare, and choose a stallion that they feel will produce a foal with the best traits of both horses.

"To breed for quality horses, you just don't go out and say 'here is a stud and a mare, let's go out and breed a world beater.' Your chances are just about as good as winning the lottery. You might get one, but your chances are so small," he said.

He added that the goal of a breeder is to continually improve on the quality of the foal by breeding with top notch horses. "The better foals that you can raise, the better off you are," he said. "That comes from experience."

They not only care for their own horses, but they also train and show horses that are owned by other people in the business.

When they take over the responsibilities of training a horse, it is first assessed and put on a training and feeding program designed to develop the horse's show characteristics. Rose is in charge of feeding and Dave takes over the responsibilities of training the horse.

"There is a very technical program that is followed when a horse comes here," she explained. "Both programs have to work hand in hand or you cannot achieve what needs to be accomplished. You have to have both ends working together to be successful."

She added that no two horses are identical and that a feeding and training program has to be tailored to fit the horse.

"That balance has to be worked out for each individual horse. There is no set amount for every horse," she said. "You have to know the individual." She watches the weight of each horse daily, to be sure they are eating the right amount for the training program.

"In the training program they have to be fed more because they are being worked and exercised more," she explained. They are careful to add weight over a period of time to maintain the muscle tone of the horse.

"It has to be worked week by week until you build them to a certain point," she added. "When you get them to that point, you have to sustain them."

"Some horses will take a lot more feed to keep the weight on them," Dave said. "They are usually horses that have a lot more energy, a little bit high strung." He added that it is easier to keep weight on a milder horse than a high strung horse. "It is just like a lot of hyper people. They can't keep weight on."

They feed the horses the best quality hay and feed that they can get. He added that in days gone by, farmers fed their horses second grade hay, and saved the best for their dairy cattle. "If you want to get the most out of the animal, you have to feed them quality feed. It can't be second grade stuff."

He explained that when conditioning a horse, the results that he wants to achieve are similar to a body builder's goal of developing a perfectly conditioned body.

"It is up to the trainer to use their knowledge, their eye, as far as this horse needs to be tightened here, or to develop him more here," he said. During cold weather a fitted blanket is kept on the horse so that they will not grow a heavy coat of hair, which would hide the animal's muscle tone.

This is Dave's second year as a full time trainer. He got his first horse when he was 11 years old. He has been training horses for about 25 years.

His experience as a trainer starts at the ground up. In the past, before business was so demanding on his time, he used to shoe all of his horses. He explained that in order for a farrier to shoe a horse properly, the correct shoe must be properly fitted to the horse so that they can walk and stand correctly.

"When you are showing horses, and in all phases of the horse business, if you have no foot, you have no horse," he said.

Once a week, Kenny Ferguson, a farrier from Sterling Heights, comes to the Bullock farm to shoe the horses. Dave still shoes his top show horse, Classic Country.

During the summer months, when the horse show season is at its peak, Dave and his 14-year-old son Brad, load up the six horses that he shows, and head out on the circuit. The two stay in the living quarters of a gooseneck trailer that is used to transport the horses. Last season he showed at events as far away as Dallas, TX., and Marlborough, MD.

At these shows, Dave shows in the Halter and Western Pleasure classes. None of his horses are in the same division, so he does not compete against himself.

Dave explained that a horse is judged on its conformation, overall appearance, and a well balanced look. He leads the horse on a short lead line in a ring.

Rose explained that when preparing for the show, the horse is thoroughly cleaned. The mane is trimmed and the whiskers and hair in the ears is clipped. "It is just like a man who shaves every day," she said about the grooming of the horse.

Dave knows that his appearance is also being looked at by the judges. He is well dressed in western wear.

The horse is judged by standards set by the American Quarter Horse Association.

For every first place finish that the horse receives in halter competition, as long as there are at least five horses in the class, one point is received towards the championship title. If there are ten or more horses in the class, two points go to the first place horse. The second place horse gets one point. It takes 15 points to be considered a champion.

Rose explained that Classic Country has earned 16 points in only two and a half months of showing. They hope to have the stallion earn 50 points, a superior title. Dave added that as a rule of thumb, for each point earned, the horse increases in value about $1,000.

This year Classic Country will be shown in the Western Pleasure classes. In this competition Dave will ride the horse in the show ring.

He explained that in the Western Pleasure competition, the judges will be looking at the horse's ease of riding, attitude, and the athletic ability of the animal. He added that it is up to the horse and the rider to work as a team to make the horse perform to the best of its abilities. A good rider can make an inexperienced horse look better than an experienced horse with an amateur rider.

Dave said that when they purchased Classic Country as a colt, the stallion's father was a Western Pleasure superior, and his mother was a superior in Halter competition.

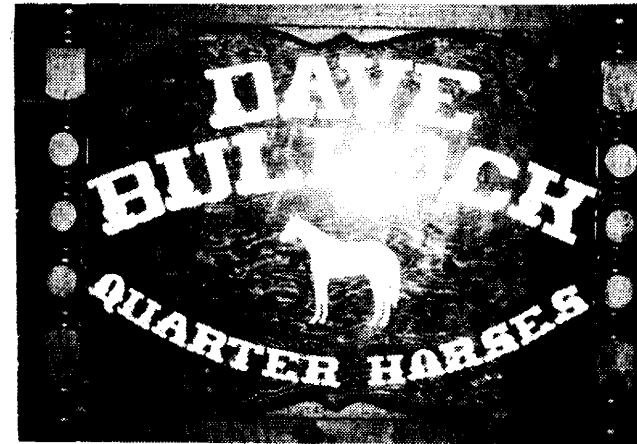

"People want to see records," he explained. "You can tell people you have a world's champion standing out in the barn, but they want to see a record."

The Bullocks show at the major shows in the nation, where they get the most exposure. Rose added that although they have competed at only a few Michigan shows, they finished high enough in the ratings to earn second place in Michigan for a two-year-old stallion.

While showing, Dave will spend about 20 hours a day preparing the horses for the show.

"It is tough, but we are trying to make this business go," he explained. "There is no better advertisement than winning."

Longest worm

The longest worm in the world is called a ribbon worm, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. Some ribbon worms grow to be 90 feet long -- which is longer than three school buses parked end to end.

Your neighbor says

Prayers answered during 1984

Was 1984 a good year for you, and what are your outlooks for 1985?

"It was a fair year, it could have been better, it could have been worse," said Betty Avery, wife of Mr. R. O. Avery, 6610 Seed St., Cass City.

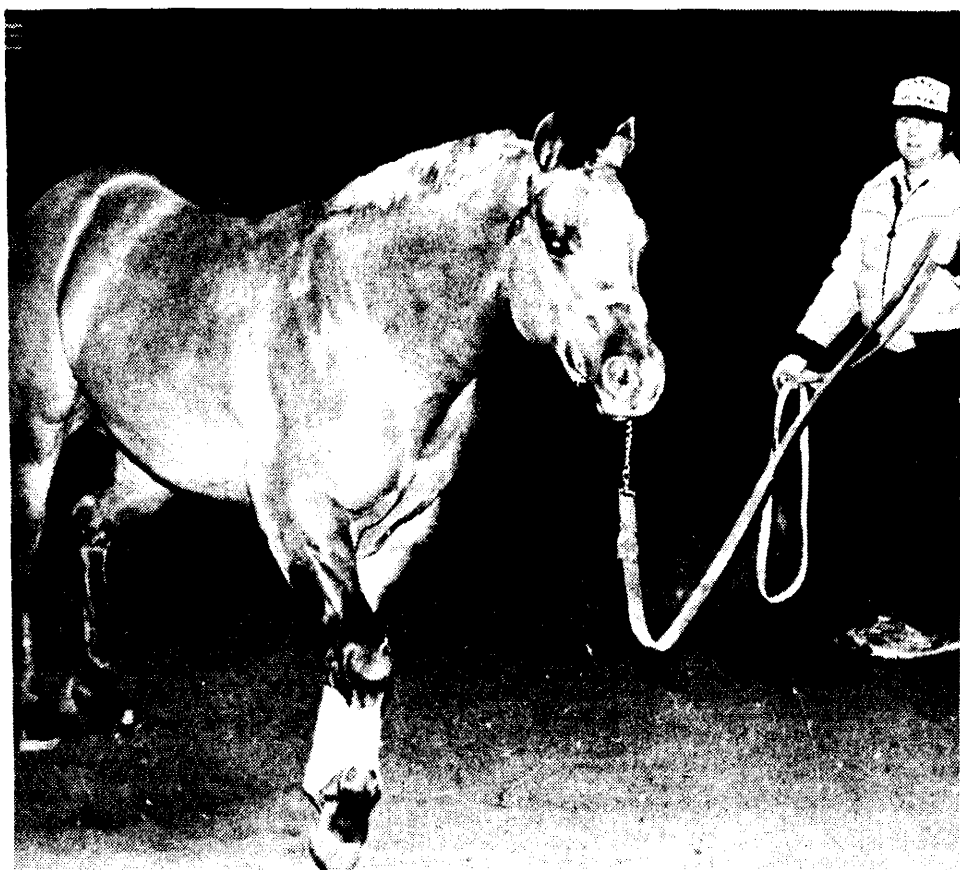

She said that she hopes that 1985 will be a good year for her and her husband.

Mrs. Avery said that in 1984 a prayer that she made had been answered. She asked for financial help from her husband's rug weaving business. Mr. Avery has been blind since he was in his 20's. It is a hereditary disease that has affected other family members.

In order to generate additional income they began weaving rugs. She said that they earned $105 from the business, just when they really needed it the most.

She added that they received another blessing this year, just in time for Christmas. They were one of the families in the area who received a Christmas food basket from the United Way. She added that she received a large basket of food items, including a large chicken for their Christmas Day meal.

Schmandt dies in auto accident

A Millington woman became the 15th traffic fatality in Tuscola County for 1984 when she lost control of her pickup and struck a roadside tree Dec. 19 at 6:55 p.m.

According to Tuscola County Sheriff's Department deputy James Compo, Marilyn F. Schmandt, 59, 9311 S. State St., Millington, was westbound on Barnes Rd., about one-half mile east of Lane Rd., when the accident happened. According to the report, Schmandt was driving down a hill on Barnes Road, when she lost control on the slippery road surface and struck the tree on the left side of the road. Schmandt died as a result of injuries to the head. She was not wearing a seat belt at the time.

Ubly highest in test scores

He explained that they are looking at a California Assessment Examination to use as a graduation requirement test. The test deals with more subjects than does the Michigan test.

Wright added that he is pleased with the total number of students passing the examination this year. As compared to the 1983 results, more students achieved a passing score on the mathematics examination for all three grade levels tested. He explained that because Owen-Gage has a small number of students in each class, one student can raise or lower the total percentage of students passing the exam by three percent.

Wright added that some schools teach their students material so that they can achieve a high score on the examination.

"We teach topics that we feel the students should know," Wright explained. "We want our students to be able to compete."

Cass City High School counselor Jerry Cleland said that schools that have begun requiring passage of the exam before a student can graduate have made it difficult for other schools to meet state averages of students passing the tests.

"This is a tremendous incentive for them (students) to pass this test," Cleland said.

Birds sleep wherever

Birds sleep in many different places, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. Most sleep in old nests close to where they feed. But sea birds snooze while floating on the water and a ruffled grouse will dive into a snowbank to catch 40 winks.

By Bill Myers Taking stock

Dear Brother Willie:
I read this in U.S. News & World Report:

"...This is what would have happened to $10,000 investment in quality stocks made in December 1933, then sold in 1981:

Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing would have been worth $6,540,000.

IBM would have been worth $2,704,208, and Eastman Kodak, $569,533.

So why didn't you tell me about this in 1933?

—BABY SISTER

as Kodak did in 1933-1981. It's twice as good as IBM, and about 20 percent less than 3-M. It's 1.6 multiplied by the average of the three.

If you think any of the above blue chips will multiply your money by 528 times in the next 48 years ahead, then go with one of them. My investment in government bonds is guaranteed, so I assume you would get some sort of a guarantee from your broker or maybe U.S. News, for the future of your funds.

—LOVABLE BROTHER

Dear Baby Sister:
Because, my dear sibling, in 1933 you were not yet housebroken, and there were other more pressing problems to attend to in your development.

It appears your development in financial matters still has a ways to go. The first step is to quit reading U.S. News, and to read The News, in which this column appears.

Figures like the ones you quote have been used since the dawn of time by writers who can't think of anything else to write about. Conveniently they pick out market lows and market highs. They ignore two other things: taxes on dividends and capital gains, and the hundreds of other stocks that fell out of bed in the same period.

So let me play by one of their rules and also ignore tax implications in my example. But instead of using hindsight, your lovely brother will look ahead. I will not be like Charlie Brown, whose fond hope is that yesterday will be better.

U.S. News used a 48-year period. I will too, except mine will start in the summer of 1984 and go on to 2032.

I will invest $10,000, same as the U.S. News figures, but in zero-coupon government bonds, now selling to yield about 13.5 percent, compounded twice a year.

Sit down and take a firm grip on the chair arms. That $10,000 by 2032 will amount to $5,288,300!

That's five times as much be in 2014 and I hope you will then be mature enough to do this by yourself and will not be pestering me.
