Deputy fired for incident in jail

A Tuscola County Sheriff's Department deputy has been fired following a Dec. 31 incident at the Tuscola County Jail that resulted in a prisoner being taken to the Caro Community Hospital.

According to Under-sheriff Paul Megge, deputy Arthur Adam, an eight-year veteran of the force, was fired Jan. 11 at 5:00 p.m., following an investigation by the Sheriff's Department.

Megge refused to release the prisoner's name or the extent of injuries that he received. He did say that the incident took place in the holding area of the jail, and that the prisoner was treated and released from the hospital.

Adam joined the force July, 1976. He was suspended following the incident.

The Chronicle was unable to reach Adam for a comment.

SNOW REMOVAL - Cass City DPW employees have been kept busy this winter removing snow from the village streets. So far this winter they have removed 62 percent more snow from the village streets than they did last year.

Crews work overtime

Ice, snow, high winds buffet area

A two-inch snowfall whipped by 25 to 35-mile-per-hour winds gave area students the day off from school Tuesday. In Tuscola County all of the public school districts were closed. In Huron County only Caseville and Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port held classes.

Monday night school board meetings for the Owen-Gage School Board and the Uby School Board were both canceled because of the storm. Both meetings have been rescheduled for Monday, Jan. 21.

John Martin, secretary to the Huron County Road Commission Board, said that county crews began plowing snow at 5:00 a.m. Tuesday morning. They continued to work until 5:00 p.m.

"We were pretty well closed up," Martin said. He added that some of the county's trunk lines and primary roads were closed.

Martin added that the county had just barely recovered from the storm last week end, and the fresh snow filled in several of the county roads.

Mike Gleason, superintendent of the Tuscola County Road Commission said that they were able to keep the county's main roads passable all night. He said that by 7:00 a.m. Tuesday they had all of the state roads in the county cleared, and started plowing the rest of the roads.

With a majority of the winter weather still awaiting area residents, the Cass City Department of Public Works has already hauled away 62 percent more snow off the village streets this winter than they did last year, at the end of January.

So far this season, village employees have removed 436 loads of snow from the 17.32 miles of village streets. Last year, at the end of January, 272 loads were hauled to the village municipal park.

Village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie explained that last winter the village had 35 inches of snow by Jan. 10, but most of the snow came in small amounts, dropping one to two inches at a time. By Jan. 10, 1985, the area had received 19½ inches of snow. Most of the snow came from two large snow storms. The Christmas Eve storm brought six inches to the area. The New Year's Eve storm dropped eight inches of snow on Cass City.

"What really hurt us was the wet, heavy snow and the freezing rain," LaPonsie said about the New Year's Eve storm. He explained that the wet snow hit the cold pavement and froze. On top of the eight-inch snowfall a thick layer of freezing rain fell, making removal difficult.

LaPonsie added that the village has used 75 tons of salt this year to keep the village streets dry. By this time last winter the village had used 89 tons of salt. He explained that because the snow fell in small amounts last winter, instead of hauling it away, they melted the snow in the streets with salt.

To clean up the snow from the New Year's Eve storm, village employees hauled 356 truck loads to the village park.

LaPonsie said that although overtime has been used to remove the snow, the amount of overtime is about normal.

He added that DPW Supervisor Frank Guilds has been keeping track of how much snow fell over the past few years, and when the large storms came, they have been able to determine a pattern as to when to expect a large storm.

Jim Miklovich, secretary of the Tuscola County Road Commission Board, said Friday that they were still removing ice from some of

4 area school districts increase athletic eligibility requirements

Although all four area school districts have different approaches to their athletic eligibility requirements, all agree that state mandated requirements for athletic eligibility are too lax.

The state requires that a high school student must pass at least three classes before he is allowed to participate in athletics. A student could have three D's and three E's and still participate in high school sports.

Cass City High School principal Russ Richards explained that students must pass all of their classes before they are allowed to play. He explained that each week the teachers are asked what the grades are of students playing sports. If students receive a D or above in all of their classes, they are allowed to play that week. If the student receives an E in any class, he cannot participate. During the following week, the student must bring the E up to at least a D average to be eligible to play.

Richards added that the weekly grade is based on the student's performance throughout the entire semester. If a student has an E, he must bring the grade up to a D average for the entire semester, not just for one week.

"We felt that state requirements are too lenient for our situation," Richards said.

The athletic eligibility policy also requires that a student have an average or above rating in classroom citizenship. Richards said that if the student receives a below average citizenship report in two or more classes, he will not be allowed to play sports. Richards explained that two below average ratings are required because a student could have a personality conflict with one teacher, which could make him ineligible to play.

Richards said that he was personally opposed to having a C average requirement for students participating in athletics. He feels that some students, regardless of playing sports, may not be able to carry a C average in classes.

"Athletics might be keeping that student in school," Richards added. "I think that it is an injustice to say you have to have a C."

Kingston High School principal Joe Peet said that the school board has discussed several approaches to the athletic eligibility policy, including requiring a C average.

Presently Kingston requires that students be passing at least four of the six classes that they are taking. He explained that at the five-week midterm, if a student is not passing at least four of his six classes, he will be ineligible for the next seven days. At the end of the seven days, if a student has not brought his grades up to where he is passing at least four classes, he will be ineligible for the next seven days.

"The state minimum is the easy way to go," Peet said. He added that their junior high basketball team played another league school that had the same player on the eighth grade basketball team for two years in a row.

Peet feels that a C average requirement would penalize a lot of kids who really work hard just to get a passing grade. He added that students who participate in sports seem to do well in their classroom studies. "It is a motivational thing for them," Peet said.

Owen-Gage is the only school district in the area that requires that a student have a C average or better to play sports.

High School principal Wayne Wright said that a student must have at least 12 credit points from six classes to be eligible. He explained that each C that a student receives in a class will net him two points. If a student receives a D, only one point is given in that class. The student would have to have at least one B to balance out each D that he receives.

Wright added that the student's grades are tabulated at the end of each six-week marking period. If the student has less than a C average, he will be ineligible. Please turn to page 16.

37-year-old Gary Louks looks forward to change in career

When a lot of workers reach age 40, they are at a point where they are finishing up locking in their pension, and are making plans for retirement.

But when Gary Louks reaches 40, he will have just finished his college education, and he will find himself on the job market, entering a new career.

Louks, a 37-year-old Cass City resident, started attending Delta College when he was 36. His goal is to receive his degree in elementary education.

"They say that life begins at 40. I will let you know if it is true or not," Louks said about his future.

He added that while attending Bad Axe High School he wanted to be a teacher, but he never felt that he would get the chance to go to college. He explained that he came from a family of five children, and a college education cost too much, and would take too long.

After graduating from high school, he took a job as a "jack of all trades" at the Huron Daily Tribune. He worked there for about a year before being drafted.

He spent the next two years in the Army.

When his military hitch was up, Louks married and settled down to raise a family. He and his wife, Beverly, have three children. The oldest is 19, the youngest, 14.

Louks explained that he had been working for Evans Material Handling, Gagetown, for about four years when he got laid off in 1980. At the same time his wife was laid off from Saginaw Steering Gear.

"I knew that I wasn't going to get called back," Louks said about his lay off. It was during this time that Beverly suggested that he go to college. She told him that he had always talked about going to college, and it looked like a good time to go.

"It was a lot better than sitting around here and looking at the four walls," Louks explained. "Nobody was hiring."

Louks, then 36, signed up for classes at Delta College.

"I thought that I was going to feel like an outsider, but I haven't," Louks said about going to college. "I get along with everybody and ask me for advice." He added that most of his teachers are about his age. He feels that the average student is about 20 years old.

"I think that the biggest help with my going back to school is my wife working and paying all of the bills," he said.

He added that a student in one of his classes works 40 hours a week, and attends school full time. He feels that he could not do this because he would do a "lousy job" at both. Louks has been able to carry a straight "A" average in college.

He added that because his schedule requires him to leave the house early in the morning, and his wife works the afternoon shift, they do not see each other very often.

"We just pass notes back and forth until we see each other on the week ends," Louks said. He added that he tries to complete all of his homework during the week, so Sunday can be spent with the family.

"I put in more time going to school, more study time and more time in the library, than I ever put in going to work at the factory," he added.

Louks feels that the classes have not been too difficult for him, but the daily drive to the Saginaw area has become a chore.

"The driving is hard," he explained. "When it got towards the end of the last semester, I would be walking down the hallways at Delta, and I would stop and think, what am I here for. It seemed like I was there seven days a week. It was either going to class, in class, or coming back from class."

This semester Louks will be starting his student teaching at the Campbell Elementary School, Cass City.

"I was up to the school today (Friday). I am looking forward to it, but I had forgotten how small everything is," he said. "The drinking fountain is about this high off the ground," he said, pointing to his knees. "I am the biggest thing in the school."

He added that his family has been very receptive about his career change. "My mother was happy," he said. "When she found out that I was going to start student teaching this semester she went out and bought me a new suit."

Louks admits that as a teacher he will be earning a lot less than he could if he were working in a factory, but he would not accept a factory job if he were offered one.

"Eventually they are going to be replaced by robots," he explained. "Whether they are there or not, the cars are going to be made."

"But if you go into teaching, you are working with people. What you do with them is going to affect them the rest of their life," he said. "I think that that is more important than money."

Louks stated that statistics show that a person will have to change his career several times before he retires. He feels that he has chosen a profession that he can stay with.

"I like working with the little kids," he said. "I get tired of seeing the stories that Johnny can't read or write. If I can help one kid to be more than what he normally would have been, then I feel I will have been a success."

Your neighbor says This winter's not so bad

How bad has this winter been for you? "I've seen a lot worse winters," said Ervin Thompson, who has been through 79 winters so far. "I have seen the snow so deep you could step over the top of the telephone wires."

He added that when he was going to the Bad Axe High School he had to walk two and one-half miles to attend classes. In those days he got around in a horse drawn cutter or a bobsled.

"You had to be careful that you didn't tip the cutter over," Thompson said. "A bobsled was nice though."

Thompson said that a horse could get through the snow as long as it didn't sink up to its stomach. He added that a horse would get stuck, and they would have to dig the horse out with a shovel.

Thompson and his brother and father used to cut and sell firewood to people in the Bad Axe area. He said that one day he and his father went to a woods about three miles from their home. He said that there was no wind, and that the sun was bright, but they couldn't keep warm. The next day he found out that it was 30 degrees below zero that day.

Thompson said that people were unable to keep a house as warm as he does now, but that food tasted better when it was cooked by a wood burning stove.

Thompson, 79, 6274 V. Main Street, Cass City, retired from the Ford Motor Company after 40 years of service.

"If It Fitz...."

Genetic clock ticks on

By Jim Fitzgerald

Three-year-old Emily is currently two-faced. I enjoy taking her to the supermarket to amuse and confuse strangers who can't tell whether she's coming or going. This is something that actor John Travolta should think about before too much time ticks away on his genetic time clock.

Travolta recently told a TV interviewer that he knows he must deal with the genetic time clocks of the women he dates, but: "Recently I realized I've got to put their clocks aside and deal with my own clock — that is, what do I want?...For the next 10 years I really want to enjoy myself and not necessarily settle down and have a family. But in my 40s, I have the distinct feeling I would like to have children."

In my 40s, I began having grandchildren. Emily is the fourth, so far. For Christmas, my wife knitted her a large hat that has a lifelike face on the back. Emily likes to stand with her back to people and wave at them over her shoulder. She laughs on both faces. Watching her pull that stunt is the most fun I had during a holiday season that included a Southern vacation and several parties attended by witty, interesting adults.

The second-most fun was taking the three other grandchildren to the airport to board their first airplane. In the crowded United Airlines waiting area, 12-year-old Melissa shouted, "Grandpa, what if the plane crashes?" And, as silence spread through the possibly doomed passengers, 10-year-old John conceded that a crash would be disappointing, but it would be even worse if he didn't get the seat next to the window.

My point is that if John Travolta waits until he's in his 40s to have children, he may be 70 before he has grandchildren. I'm not implying that 70 is too old to enjoy a two-faced granddaughter. I know I'll love being a 70-year-old great-grandfather — if I live that long. But I might not.

That's why, if he really wants a family, Travolta should cut short his playboy years and go for it now, while his clock is still ticking. I am tempted to say he'll never enjoy himself as much as he'll enjoy children and grandchildren, but that is a highly prejudiced opinion. To each his own, I always say, and I'm reluctant to recommend children over dogs, yachts or throbbing address books.

However, something nice happened on the cards you sent me this Christmas. For the first time, Terrible Jean, my much-older sister, wasn't mentioned the most as a favorite column topic. Emily beat her by a wide margin, and I was encouraged to learn that there are so many other goofy grandparents. So I feel safe in telling most of you what happened Christmas Eve, with apologies to those readers who think Travolta should swing until the last tick.

Emily and her parents took Grandma and me to their church, where Emily promptly informed me that no talking was allowed "so we can hear Mr. Fox (the minister)." At the close of the service, the lights were dimmed, and each member of the congregation — including Emily — held a lighted candle while singing "Silent Night."

It was then that Emily reached up and put her chubby hand in mine. She left it there for several minutes, and it was her idea, not mine. Emily's mother — my daughter — saw her do it and smiled at me, and I smiled back.

If it had been permissible to talk in church, I would have said thank you. Thank you for Emily.

No injuries in 4 area accidents

Cass City Police officer Kenneth Schott reported that there were no injuries in a minor traffic accident Jan. 10 at 6:35 p.m.

According to the report, Geraldine H. Hutchinson, 4630 Spencer Rd., Cass City, was exiting from Erla's parking lot onto Church Street when she struck a vehicle driven by Jay M. Herman, Lot 9, Valley Estates, Valley Rd., Mancelona. Herman was eastbound on Church Street when the accident happened. Both vehicles were driven away from the accident.

Police chief Gene Wilson reported that a vehicle driven by Peter J. Rienstra, 77, 4543 Oak St., Cass City, struck a parked vehicle while he was attempting to back into a parking space on Main Street, between Seeger and Oak Streets.

The parked vehicle, owned by Dennis Rivert, 6546 Third Street, Gagetown, was not damaged.

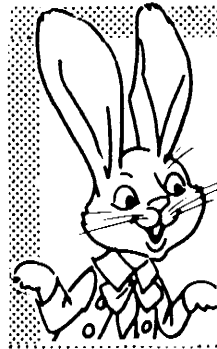

Officer Schott reported that a three-year-old maple tree in the back yard of the Terry King residence, 4691 Hospital Dr., Cass City, was damaged by a snowmobile.

According to the report, the tree was run over by the snowmobile between 6:00 and 9:00 p.m. Jan. 11.

Officer Donald Miller Jr., reported that Alan W. Kretzschmer, 27, 3602 Sixth St., Owendale, struck a deer Jan. 14 at 5:15 a.m.

Kretzschmer was driving on Cemetery Road, about one-quarter mile south of Merchant Road. He was not injured in the accident.

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

The Chronicle is indebted to Lucille Stafford, a former resident who lives in Vermilion, Ohio, for a tip that enabled us to pass on the story of Mrs. Aniela Wrzesniewski's 100th birthday.

Many of the features and unusual stories that we pass on are the result of interested readers like Mrs. Stafford. Much of the "good news" we print is the result of this help. And, yes, we do enjoy writing good news. As much of it as we can get.

In a TV interview Sunday over ABC, David Stockman, budget director, said that subsidies for farmers that reached $60 billion over the last four years will have to be cut.

He also said that medical treatment for veterans regardless of income should also be cut.

Of the two, cutting treatment for affluent vets should be the easiest to establish. Although something must be done about farm subsidies, you have to question if now is the time.

It's been a tough, tough year for area farmers. Low prices, coupled with increased costs and falling land prices have many in shaky financial shape already.

Stockman made no mention of placing a lid on defense spending.

In my government that would be the first place to feel the budget cutting axe.

Editor Bill McLeod starts a column this week on page five. At this writing it doesn't have a name. It may never have a name. But then it might. He could use some help. Any brilliant ideas out there? Pass them along. I can't say that he'll adopt any of them. After all he's already rejected several brilliant names I've suggested.

Chemical Corp. profits up

Robert B. Bennett, Chairman of Chemical Financial Corporation, reported net income for the year 1984 of $6,216,000 or $4.99 per share. This represents an increase of 9% over per share net earnings of $4.58 for 1983 and a 9.25% increase over total net income for 1983 of $5,689,000. Mr. Bennett stated that the results for 1984 continue the record of consecutive annual gains achieved each year since Chemical became a bank holding company in 1974.

For the fourth quarter of 1984, net income was $1,829,000 or $1.45 per share, up 11.5% from the per-share earnings for the fourth quarter of 1983.

Cash dividends increased 10% over the previous year. A 10% stock dividend payable in January suggests a similar increase in 1985 and will mark the 10th consecutive annual increase in the cash dividend paid to shareholders.

Consolidated assets at Dec. 31, 1984 were $770 million, an increase of $52 million, or 7% from Dec. 31, 1983.

Chemical Bank Cass City is one of the banks owned by the holding company.

The talk these days is for a simpler tax method. One that we can understand.

If you drive a car for business you know we are off to a blazing start. That's blazing like in burned up.

For, starting the first of the year it is now necessary to record all trips you've made for business within a day of completing the report. Included in this report will be where you went and the purpose of your visit. No detailed daily records, no allowance for your car on the 1985 tax return.

Perhaps this new system will be a more positive check on the use of cars for business or for pleasure. There's no doubt that it doesn't fit into a simpler income tax system.

No one knows what the legislature and the executive branch will be coming up with in income tax reform.

Forgive me if I feel that the new "simpler" form will be as big an enigma as the one that keeps the accountants in business today.

The talk is to eliminate most of the tax shelters and have a flat rate income tax. One is impossible, the other unfair.

You might get by with not allowing taxes paid on a second home to be deducted. You could eliminate the incentives for investment by doing away with the investment tax credit.

There's no practical way to eliminate tax exempt bonds for governmental units. You change the way that depreciation is figured and the fragile economy goes into a tizzy.

The truth is that we've created a monster that we can't control.

In the proposed new simpler tax the poor are said to be taken care of with exemptions. According to summaries I've read, the flat tax would still hit the low income families while the rich wage earners would pay less.

That's an over-simplification. You can't pay less than nothing and hundreds of persons making $200,000 a year are reported to have legally paid nothing.

The argument for the flat tax is that these persons would be paying their fair share.

Well, not really fair, but paying something anyway. Given all the problems, it's almost sure that whatever reform is enacted will be found wanting.

There's only one thing that is for sure. We'll be paying taxes, the money will be collected.

And down the road we'll be paying more than we are paying now. The money has to come from the average guy with the average income. You could take all the money that the filthy rich possess and it wouldn't be enough to keep the country going more than a few months.

HEALTH TIPS
Unpasteurized milk a health hazard

Cow's milk is regarded as one of nature's most perfect foods. But drinking raw (unpasteurized) cow's milk has been proven time and again to be hazardous to our health, according to a review in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Moreover, consuming raw milk will not confer any unique nutritional or health benefits beyond those of pasteurized cow's milk, state Morris Potter, DVM and his colleagues from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, GA.

Raw milk is milk that has not been pasteurized. Pasteurization of milk and milk products is a method of heat treatment which results in the destruction of any harmful bacteria that may be present. This assures the safety and prolongs the shelf life of the product.

In recent years, "health food enthusiasts" have led some consumers to believe that raw milk is nutritionally superior to pasteurized cow's milk. In fact, there are no meaningful nutritional differences between raw and pasteurized cow's milk. In addition, there is no scientific evidence to support claims that drinking raw milk has a number of health virtues such as increasing resistance to disease, enhancing fertility, reducing dental caries, and helping in the treatment of arthritis.

What the advocates of raw milk fail to tell consumers is that drinking raw milk is hazardous to health. Raw milk is a source of bacteria that can cause infectious disease in humans. The CDC has reported cases of severe illness resulting in hospitalization and even death due to drinking raw milk which contained Salmonella dublin, a particularly virulent strain of bacteria.

Risks associated with consuming raw cow's milk are even greater for persons who already have less resistance to infection such as infants and young children, the elderly, and the sick. For this reason, the American Academy of Pediatrics endorses only pasteurized cow's milk for infants and young children.

The availability of raw milk depends on where you live. The sale and distribution of raw milk are regulated by state and local government, not federal law. In Michigan, it is illegal to sell raw milk over the counter, whereas in some other states raw milk may be found in health food stores.

Although the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has no direct control over the availability of raw milk, it nevertheless is concerned about the health implications of consuming raw milk products. Consequently, FDA recently held a public hearing to obtain information to help determine whether the federal government should require pasteurization for all milk and milk products sold to the public.

I hate to admit it, but since moving to Cass City I have developed a new vice. Collecting calendars.

I just can't pass a pile of free calendars without picking one up. I am now the proud owner of about 10 calendars, and the pile keeps growing. My desire to take one has long since passed my need to know what the date is. I'm hooked.

You have to understand my background to clearly see my perspective on collecting the dated material. I moved to Cass City from a more populated area, where free calendars were at a premium. One year the only calendar we had was given to us by my father-in-law. In 1984 we had to resort to buying one.

But Cass City has turned out to be a true Mecca for the calendar lover. They seem to be everywhere. I have some from the bakery, the banks, the place I buy fuel from, etc. If they are giving them away, I got one.

I look at the calendar as being one of the handiest inventions that mankind has ever made. Each week my wife writes in the small square when a bill is due. At the start of the month a quick glance lets us know whom we can afford to pay, and whom we are going to stiff during the next 30 days. By turning back to the previous month, we can be sure we have not gotten too far behind to anyone.

Unlike magazines, or I hate to admit, newspapers, a calendar hangs around a long time. I particularly like the style that rotates the photo each month. Coming from the St. Clair River area, I like photos of ships the best. Without getting on my soap box, I disapprove of the type you find in the back room of gas stations and other "men's only" places.

There are two features on a calendar that I really like. One shows when the fish are biting, and the other shows the different phases of the moon.

In years gone by, when I used to do a lot of fishing, before going out I would check the calendar to see what the experts had to say. It never helped, but it was reassuring to know that the odds were in my favor.

When I used to work at a hospital that had a psych ward, a calendar that listed the next full moon was a handy tool for everyone. I never completely understood the "werewolf syndrome," but on the night of a full moon, things generally picked up.

My wife and I were able to accurately predict the birth date of our son, Andrew, by using a calendar. The doctor, using all of his medical wisdom, said that Andrew would arrive Nov. 2. Our calendar showed that on Nov. 1 we would have a full moon. Who needs all that medical training. We put our money on Nov. 1, and won.

Mobil moves in again

After 69 years, Standard Oil bids village adieu

THIS PHOTO of the original gas station was taken while it was still owned by the Keating family. The building was torn down and a new gas station was erected. The new station was later remodeled to its present appearance.

Monday was the first day in 69 years that residents of the area have not had a Standard Oil (Amoco) gas station in Cass City. The decision to close the station was made by Standard Oil.

"Amoco (Standard) is leaving the smaller towns and villages, and they are sticking mostly to the big cities and freeways," said station owner Floyd "Shorty" Luettkie. "After 20 years of selling Standard gasoline I am now going to be selling another brand."

Luettkie said that he has decided to sell Mobil gasoline. He chose Mobil over three or four other major companies because he felt that they offered the best service and delivery.

The station was originally opened by Edward Keating and R.D. Keating in 1917. At that time they sold gasoline and bulk fuel.

Luettkie began operating the station in 1965.

Monday workers from the Standard Oil Company were removing their company signs from the station.

Luettkie explained that the changeover will leave the station without gasoline to sell for about five or six days while Standard removes their underground gasoline storage tanks, and the new tanks are put in.

"Everything is going to be about the same, except it is going to be L & S Service instead of L & S Standard," Luettkie said. He added that during the period that they are without gasoline, the service bays and the car wash area will remain open.

Luettkie added that customers have been coming in and asking him if he is closing down. They told him that he just can't go out of business.

"We are going to be open, and continue to serve the area," he said. "Service will not change."

Luettkie added that all of the Standard Oil credit card customers will have to change over to a Mobil credit card.

CHANGING TIMES - Workers were busy removing the Standard Oil sign from the L & S Standard Service gas station Monday. The station will no longer be selling Standard gasoline, but will change to Mobil gasoline.

Health Department names Wenta as chairperson

At the annual meeting of the Tuscola County Board of Health, held Jan. 11, the board elected Margaret Wenta, Fostoria, to serve as board chairperson. Sheila Everts, Caro, was elected as vice-chairperson of the board.

Health Department Director John Niederhauser said that the board still needs one more member to replace Maynard McConkey, Cass City. The Tuscola County Commissioners appoint board members. McConkey retired from the board at the end of 1984. His term was to have ended at the end of this year.

At the meeting, Niederhauser told the board that the total for the 1984 fund balance, which will be used to meet 1985 budget expenses, is $126,000.

At the end of 1983, the health department had a fund balance carryover of $189,000 for the 1984 budget.

This was $59,000 more than the carryover for the 1985 budget. Niederhauser explained that the department received $4,000 during 1984 that is part of the fund balance. The money was an advance on a state grant that will be spent during 1985.

The 1985 budget is $829,801. This is $159,185 less than the 1984 budget. Niederhauser said that because all of the fund balance is being used to meet 1985 budget costs, the department will not have any money to fall back on in case of a budget overrun.

As an example, during 1984 the department budgeted $11,000 for tuberculosis expenses. An increase in the normal tuberculosis caseload ran the total cost of the program up to $30,000. The additional $19,000 came from the fund balance.

Niederhauser said that before the budget can be finalized, they have to find out how much of an allocation they will receive from the county commission's federal revenue sharing funds.

He explained that in previous years, the commissioners have allocated the health department $75,000 a year of federal funds. This is in addition to the $190,000 that they budget from county funds.

This year, because of the county budget crisis, Niederhauser requested one-half of the money from the county.

The commissioners have received their funds from the federal government, but it has not yet been decided how much will be allocated to the individual departments.

Also at the meeting the board authorized the health department to recover costs of their alcohol prevention sessions. Niederhauser explained that in the past the seminars were presented without charge. Now the department will charge enough to cover expenses. The charge will be based on the hourly rate of the person presenting the information, and total miles driven.

The board also approved a request from Niederhauser that the health department join the Michigan Association of Local Health Departments. He explained that the association better informs state legislatures of the needs of county health departments.

Carol Hrycko, Director of Nursing, and Ed Kimbrue, Director of Environmental Health, will represent Tuscola County Health Department on the board.

Some curious applications of language and logic: On Channel 10 late news, Dr. Myers (no kin, I am quick to say) commented: "The best response to nuclear war is to prevent it."

In a story in a nearby metro daily on the new commuter bus service from Boca to Lauderdale: "There were no passengers the first day. The service got off to a slow start."

Bernard Kalb on "Meet the Press," in a question to Kenneth Adelman, arms negotiator: "Are there any secret negotiations going on?"

O. J. Simpson on the Monday night football telecast: "A defensive line like that will wreck havoc on a passer."

Move over, Howard Cosell.

In Lauderdale there was a great fuss over the Coast Guard's refusal to allow a speed boat race on the Intracoastal. Danger to manatees was cited as one of the reasons for denying permission. "I think the Coast Guard has gotten themselves way out in left field on this," says Chuck Hagen, coordinator.

From Fred Bold, the San Francisco curmudgeon, and a real crank on language, comes a bumper sticker: I (emblem of heart) ENGLISH.

We were talking the other night with a middle-aged couple, both college graduates (one with a Master's) about plain, poor grammar being so general. "What difference does it make," one of them asked, "as long as people understand you?"

I suggested a few other fields of comparison. "Why do you clean your fingernails? You're still the same person. A little dirt doesn't hurt anything. If you were playing the piano, what difference would it make if you hit a few sour notes? Others can probably make out what you're trying to play."

"Would you send out a business letter with misspelled words, with faulty grammar and typing errors? It just might go to a customer who would think your firm a sloppy one."

This man and woman were a product of the post-war generation, when rules, especially in school, were ignored. You did what you felt like and the teacher gave you a B.

Athletes need better grades

ble for the next six weeks. Before the student can return to athletics, he must bring his grade average up to a C or better.

Wright said that he has heard a lot of "bad mouthing" about the policy that he worked to have implemented, but he feels that it is in the best interest of the student.

"We are not running a sports camp here," Wright added. "This is an academic institution. We need to educate these kids."

Wright said that the policy may have deprived a few students of the right to play sports because they were unable to keep a C average. "Where we have hurt one student, we have helped 10," he added.

The policy has been in effect since the start of the 1984-85 school year. During the 1983-84 school year it was used as an administrative rule. Wright said that during the first year seven students were unable to participate in sports because of the policy.

Wright added that several state school boards have made it a state requirement that the student must carry a C or better grade average to play sports.

Wright said that a student at Owen-Gage who was a good football player, and could have competed at the college level, was not admitted at colleges because his high school grades were not high enough. After graduating the student told Wright that if the school had made him "buckle down and study" he could have been playing college football.

"A lot of kids are just not motivated at this stage of their life," Wright added.

Richard Holdship, Uby High School principal, said they are presently using a system where the student who is participating in sports takes a card to each of his teachers for a weekly grade. If the student is receiving a D or above in the class he receives a yes on the card. If he is below a D, he receives a no. The student has two weeks to bring the grade up to a D. If at the end of the two weeks the student still has an E in the class he is ineligible.

"It is on a trial run basis this year," Holdship said. "We feel we have been able to reach a few of the students."

Mrs. Aniela Wrzesniewski

100th birthday party set

Today (Thursday) will be a big day for Mrs. Aniela Wrzesniewski, a former Cass City resident who now lives at the Taylor Living Center for senior citizens in Taylor.

Thursday is the day that Mrs. Wrzesniewski will celebrate her 100th birthday. Even more important to her is that the family will gather to pay her homage on her birthday.

It is a remarkable achievement to reach 100 years. Especially remarkable when considering what she endured.

Mrs. Wrzesniewski came to the United States from Poland when 16, joining two brothers, a tailor and shopkeeper.

She married Mr. Falandysz and the couple had nine children, six sons and three daughters. He died when the youngest was three years old and she ran the family farm near Pin-
