Wright, Salcido squabble

A battle between Princi- leave the classroom. pal Wayne Wright and board member Donna Salcido highlighted the regular meeting of the Owen-Gage Board Monday School night.

It was sparked by a request from a sophomore student for review of a onesuspension from day school.

The suspension was issued by principal Wayne Wright after the student left a classroom without the teacher's permission. The student claimed he was ill, and needed to go to the principal's office for an aspirin. The teacher refused to allow the student to leave. The sophomore later signed out of school and went to see his doctor.

Trustee Donna Salcido said there have been incidents where students have been given a three-day suspension.

Wright asked Salcido to name any students who had been given a three-day suspension last year. Salcido said she thought that a student was given three days off for fighting in the hallways. Wright said he gave the student a one-day suspension.

"Com'on, we're making accusations, let's back them up," Wright said to Salcido. He added that if Salcido had a problem with a disciplinary action, that she should come into his office and talk to him about it. "Not one time in three years have you ever come in and asked me about anything, yet you always have the facts.

Wright explained the student's father came to him and said that he didn't want his son let out of school. Wright said the teacher felt the student had been leaving class to smoke in the restroom, and he would no longer allow the student to Wright felt the student's leaving class was not an emergency situation. The student was suspended for leaving the classroom without permission.

'We can second guess every administrative decision I make. They are based judgement calls," on Wright said. "We can eliminate all rules and have total chaos. If that is what Donna Salcido wants, then so be Piasecki was serving a two-year, six-month to four-year prison sentence for two counts of felonious assault and two counts of possession of a firearm in a felony.

Joan and Elmore Leonard.

Gradually, I became aware that someone was standing quietly beside the TV screen. It was my wife. She was holding up a large sheet of paper on which this question was printed: What time do you want dinner?

I knew I was in trouble. A few minutes earlier, she'd started to say something and I'd shushed her because I didn't want to miss what the TV was saying about President Reagan's latest adventure on The Road to Germany. It was something about taking Bob Hope along to entertain at a Nazi SS reunion. I think someone said the presidential aide who arranged the Hope show would be allowed to buy the Rhine River from Germany at a 50 percent discount.

It bugs me to miss what shush and — you won't be-lieve this — I did it smack a TV reporter said because my wife was talking. TV news isn't like sports shows, where there are instant replays to give viewers a second chance. You might say that wives are also capable of producing instant replays, so they shouldn't mind being occasionally shushed in favor of a one-time-only report by Dan Rather. You might say that, but I wouldn't.

My wife enthusiastically resents being shushed so I can hear TV. Rather than risk being enthused to death, I usually fake listening to her while actually listening to TV news, even though she is the suspicious type. She asks questions later and often discovers that I thought our 10-yearold grandson missed school because he had to attend the disarmament talks in Geneva.

The punishment for failing a TV-vs.-Wife quiz can be severe — perhaps she will rig the refrigerator so I can't possibly reach a Snickers bar without a frozen roast of beef falling on my foot. But shushing is a far worse crime than faking. When it comes to listening priorities, according to

In my never ending quest to keep Chronicle readers informed with the latest breaking news stories (which sounds a lot better than admitting I was procrastinating), I find myself finally getting started on McLeody Days Tuesday night at 9:55 p.m.

Beer bash busted by deputy

Plans for a wet and wild senior skip day beer bash turned out to be a dry party for 32 area youths when an unexpected guest, Tuscola County Sheriff's Depart-ment Deputy Curtis Chambers, arrived.

The youths, most of whom were 16 and 17 years old, were having a May 3 party on state-owned land at the corner of Dodge and Mushroom Roads. Deputy Chambers confiscated two kegs, and numerous bottles of beer.

The youths, from Caro, Deford, Decker and Cass City areas, were given alcohol breath tests before being allowed to drive home. Although no arrests were made, each of the youths' parents were mailed a letter from the Sheriff's Department, explaining that their son or daughter had been attending a party where alcohol was being served.

My first Mother's Day mistake came when Diane was about three months pregnant with Andy. I just didn't think about it, until it was too late.

Last year I bought her some flowers at a gas station in the Port Huron area. I thought they were really nice, until these little bugs started climbing all over her. I guess I really put the old saying that "it's not the gift, but the thought that counts" to the test that

This year, because I knew my mother-in-law wanted a walleye dinner, I made the ultimate sacrifice to keep strong ties with the pasta people, and spent the day suffering on Lake St. Clair. Finally, after sweating it out for about two hours, I hooked a nice one that I am sure will bond my relationship forever. As for Diane, well, there's always next year.

THE BLOOD OF ABRAHAM by Jimmy Carter (nonfiction). Part official travelogue and part foreign affairs briefing in exile, Carter's analysis of the Middle East situation seems certain to earn the former president few new friends or admirers. While Carter's dedication to peace is evident both in his accomplishments and in the sentiments expressed here, his explanations of the complex reasoning behind the seemingly contradictory decisions made by his administration tend to retread familiar territory. In his behind-the-scenes accounts, however, Carter does present new information and important reconsiderations that shed some light on past events. As to the future, Carter can muster up only some lame generalizations. Thus, it's not the blood of Abraham but the words of Jimmy that sacrifice this enterprise from the outset.

THIN WITHIN: HOW TO EAT AND LIVE LIKE A THIN PERSON by Judy Wardell (non-fiction). The key to successful dieting, according to Wardell, is to think like a thin person. In 30 days, she guides the overweight in the fight to "release weight" by suggesting new ways of relating to food and eating. Included here are methods of reinforcing positive thinking, relearning habits and attitudes, and ways of really listening to what your body wants rather than gorging for psychological reasons. Dieters will be pleased to know that Wardell recommends throwing away the bathroom scale and "all those diet books and any Fat Machinery (unconscious or automatic eating that is triggered by external stimuli or internal programming) that reminds you of a diet." Accompanying charts and food logs complete the program. This inspirational method, which allows favorite foods and doesn't prescribe a specific food plan, is more a way of reshaping the reader's life than merely offering a diet.

THE RETURN OF THE GYPSY by Philippa Carr (fiction). The heroine is a well-born Jessica, whose unhappy fate it is to fall irrevocably in love with a hopelessly unsuitable man. The object of her devotion is the dashing Romany Jack, a footloose and fancy-free stranger who wears a gold earring and keeps company with a traveling band of gypsies. As luck would have it, Jack is found guilty of murder and, despite Jessica's attempts to save him, is packed off on a convict ship, not to return for seven years. During his absence, Jessica grows from girl to woman and England survives the Napoleonic wars. When Jack returns, his true identity is revealed and he is finally reunited with his heart's desire.

Applications are now being accepted for the Anthony L. Rapes Memorial Scholarship at the Cooperative Extension Service in Bad Axe. The scholarship is given in memory of Tony Rapes, long-time distinguished agricultural agent and educator.

Scholarships will be awarded in two categories: graduating high school seniors who will be continuing their education in a field of agriculture at either a four-year college or twoyear technical program and students who have already completed one or more years in such a program and will be returning this coming year.

The application deadline is May 20 and applications are available at the Extension Office, 104 County Building, Bad Axe, or from local high school guidance counselors. You must be a resident of Huron County to apply.

"Everyone who remembers Tony knows the importance he placed on education," says Andy Sommers, Extension Agricultural Agent. "There is certainly no more fitting tribute for a man whose whole life was dedicated to agricultural education.3

Summer heralds the unwelcome entry of ants into the home, especially the kitchen. These pests can be eliminated and kept away by a few simple measures. Most species of ants in Michigan do not cause any real damage but are a nuisance, so most people try to get rid of ant infestations in the home. Once ants have established themselves in a home, the most effective way of eradicating them is and their guests attended a by killing the queen ant, the

CASS CITY CHRONICLE-THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1985

CASS CITY, MICHIGAN

HEALTH TIPS Tailor arthritis medication to the individual and the disease

Individual variation seems the rule rather than the exception in arthritis. Not only are there more than 100 different forms of arthritis, but a given form can run many alternate courses. Moreover, people with the same disease vary in their responses to any one medication.

For these reasons, physicians who treat arthritis emphasize the need to tailor medications to the individual and to closely monitor that person's response. Medications widely used for arthritis, particularly rheumatoid arthritis (RA) and osteoarthritis (OA) -two very different diseases - are discussed below. Commonly used to treat most forms of arthritis are the first-line medications called nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). This family of compounds -- which includes aspirin and a host of newer agents such as ibuprofen relieves pain and, when used in high enough dosages, reduces inflammation while improving joint function. These actions probably are due to NSAID inhibition of hormone-like substances called prostaglandins. Some prostaglandins produced by body cells increase the sensitivity of nerve cells to pain and, therefore, amplify the pain signals transmitted from the injured area to the brain. Certain prostaglandins also play a role in inflammation -- the localized swelling, redness, heat and white blood cell invasion that is integral to rheumatoid arthritis and many other forms of the disease. Inflammation may accompany joint degeneration in osteoarthritis as well. "In England, (non-aspirin) NSAIDs are used almost exclusively in preference to aspirin," says Fre-deric McDuffie, M.D., professor of medicine at Emory University in Atlanta and medical director of the Arthritis Foundation. "The main disadvantage of aspirin is that it can cause stomach upset and ulcers." "I usually start patients on a (non-aspirin) NSAID, and sometimes on aspirin," savs Wilbur J. Blechman

NSAIDs. other forms of arthritis. prescription (Note: Acetaminophen, the active ingredient in Tylenol and Datril, is not an effective anti-inflammatory agent.)

Although a low-dose, nonprescription form of ibuprofen (Nuprin) is now available to treat headaches, menstrual cramps and minor aches and pains, sustained higher doses usually are needed to counter arthritis inflammation. Highdose, long-duration treatment with any drug should be undertaken only at a doctor's recommendation and with regular medical supervision.

Steroid hormones: when should they be used?

The discovery 35 years ago of the relief afforded rheumatoid arthritis sufferers by corticosteroids -hydrocortisone and its chemical relatives -- was considered significant enough to merit a Nobel Prize.

But researchers since have found that steroid hormones are not a cure for arthritis: Symptoms often become worse unless such drugs are tapered off slowly before withdrawal. And nearly all patients given long-term, high-dose steroids encounter potentially serious side effects. These drawbacks restrict the drugs' usefulness in arthritis to certain well-defined circumstances.

Osteoarthritis that affects only one or two joints may be treated by steroid injection into those joints. Experts recommend spacing injections a few months apart and warn that numerous repetitions can lead to joint damage.

In rheumatoid arthritis, corticosteroids taken by mouth or injected into the bloodstream are reserved for cases of rapidly progressing disease unresponsive to other treatments. When first-line drugs --NSAIDs -- are insufficient alone, steroids sometimes bring relief until secondline drugs called remittive agents begin to work. Steroids also are administered to counter potentially life-threatening complica-tions such as inflamed, weakened arteries.

Steroid use is more common for systemic lupus PAGE THIRTEEN

M.D., clinical professor of medicine at the University Miami School of Medicine. "But I've run into more side effects with aspirin.'

It sometimes takes a few trials to find the drug that best suits a particular person. Motrin is considered one of the NSAIDs easiest on the digestive system and, therefore, well tolerated by many patients. The dangers of Self-Medication: Because aspirin often is an effective arthritis painreliever, many people who suffer joint pain take aspirin rather than consult a physician. There are, however, compelling reasons why this course is unwise: 1. Proper diagnosis of the arthritis type is essential for appropriate treatment selection.

2. Moderate doses of aspirin may be adequate to mask pain, the major warning signal. However, a regular regimen of larger doses is required to reduce inflammation -- a crucial factor in prevention of joint destruction.

3. Appropriate aspirin dosage varies with the individual and should be matched by a physician to patient's weight, the metabolism and severity of disease. 4. Prolonged aspirin consumption can lead to digestive system complications ranging from stomach upset to internal bleeding, and sometimes aspirin toxicity. While physicians frequently start patients on aspirin because of its low cost, many people can't tolerate it and must be switched to one of the newer erythematosus and its complications. And short-term therapy sometimes is recommended for people with

How can you count on great

Many may say they have great claims service. Only some can prove it. Auto-Owners polled their customers, and found almost all of them are satisfied with Auto-Owners Claims Service. (Nobody's perfect, but we're trying.)

So right now there is a great effort to please the few that aren't and continue the "common sense" approach to settlements that made Auto-Owners so popular in the first place.

See your Auto-Owners agent. Because although there are many that say they have great claims service, Auto-Owners works harder every day to prove it.

17 errors cause losses to Lakers

Coach Jim Fox called it two very poorly executed games as the Hawk softball team bowed twice to the Lakers Tuesday, May 7.

Cass City was charged with 17 errors in the double header. Actually, Fox said, we made about 30 when you count the mental errors. It was a "very down" day. The scores were 15-8 in the first game and 14-4 in the second. It wasn't the fault of Julie

Miller that Cass City didn't fare better. The senior first baseman was five for seven for the double header.

The first game was actually a lot closer than the score indicated. The two teams were tied going into the last inning when the Lakers scored eight times. Lisa Benitez was perfect at the plate with three for three. Yvette Hurd took the loss, giving up 11 hits. The Hawk bats cooled in the second game, but the Green Machine just kept hammering away to log the 14-4 win.

The Hawks logged just seven hits and scored single counters in the first and fourth innings and a pair in the fifth. The Lakers scored twice in the second and five times in the fourth. After that it was merely a question of how large the final margin was to be.

Miller collected three hits and no other Hawk was able to collect more than one. Hurd took the loss, giving up 10 hits

Hawks bow to Lakers, split with Tigers

The long season continues for the Cass City Red Hawks as the baseball team lost three of four games played for the second week in a row.

The Hawks dropped two games to the Lakers Tuesday, May 7, when the pitching collapsed before the big bats of the Lakers. Thursday, the team earned a split with Caro.

In the first game of the twin bill, the Lakers ham-mered out 17 hits good for 17 runs and Gies held the Hawks to a single run in the 'irst inning. Supporting a comfortable lead in the fifth inning, the Lakers scored eight times in the sixth to complete the massacre. The Hawks collected only four hits.

Cass City bats came to life in the second game, but the defense and pitching couldn't keep pace. As a result, the Lakers pounded out an 18-12 decision. Cass City was led by Duane Wright with two hits in four tries as the Hawks garnered seven hits. The Lakers pounded out 18 hits led by R. Dubs with four for five including a home run. Gary Crickon started for

A BRIGHT SPOT for the Hawks in a game against the Lakers came when Lisa Benitez slapped a triple with a mate aboard and then came home when the ball was booted. Despite the hit, the Lakers won the game and the double header.

TOM WALLACE legs out an infield hit against the Lakers. The hits were few and far between as the Lakers took both ends of a twin bill.

Bulldogs spoil North Huron's shot at crown

Losers of five straight games in North Central Thumb League play, the Owen-Gage softball team decided it was time to become the spoiler -- not the spoilee

The Bulldogs' 6-3 win in the nightcap of Monday's double header over North Huron raised Owen-Gage's league record to 5-7. More importantly, however, the victory all but dashed North Huron's chance at the league championship.

North Huron, who beat the Bulldogs in the opener 13-10, finishes the year at 11-3 in the NCTL, one-anda-half games behind league-leading Peck, who has four league games to play.

'We were a spoiler," Owen-Gage head coach Judy Campbell said. "I like overall record to 7-7. North Huron scored four times in the top of the seventh inning to come away with a come-from-behind 13-10 victory.

RESEARCH FUND

Details of how Governor James Blanchard's proposed $25 million research excellence fund for the state's four major universities — Michigan State, the University of Michigan, Wayne State and Michigan Tech — were announced recently.

Out of the $25 million, $22 million would be earmarked specifically for the four research institutions, $1.5 million will go to an applied technology fund for the state's other public universities and the remaining $1.5 million will go for research being conducted at several universities.

The four research colleges would have to submit coordinated proposals for research grants which would detail long range plans to develop national excellence in research along with disseminating information learned to the state's economy, list other revenue sources for the projects and provide a pledge of continued university support for the projects.

WE, THE McDonald family, would like to thank everyone who helped with the benefit dance for my wife Cathy and made it a success. We received so much support from merchants and friends of Cass City, it would be impossible to thank each and everyone personally by mail. We know that God will surely bless all of you for your thoughtfulness. We especially would like to thank Milt and Brenda Phillips for organizing it and Marv and Janice Winter for donating the hall. So once again, God bless all of you and thank you. With much 13-5-16-1

In-home detection program begins for Tuscola juveniles

Tuscola County who have been ordered into an inhome detention program will have to toe-the-line now that a new program, designed to check on their whereabouts, has been started.

Ann Bean, juvenile officer for Tuscola County, said that youths who have committed offenses may be court ordered into the new program if the courts are 'apprehensive" about leaving the youth in their parents' rents' charge. Bean explained that workers in charge. the program will visit the youth's home once a day, and make telephone calls to talk to the youth, to make sure he is staying where he belongs.

The visits and calls will be made at random times so a pattern will not be set. This way the youths will not be able to leave, and come back in time to talk to the case worker.

"If you get into a routine, the kids would know when they (the case workers) are coming," Bean explained.

Bean said the juvenile department has been operating a similar program, but the time they spend checking on the youths has taken them away from their other duties.

Under the new program, six workers, whose wages and training are paid by the state, will be making the visits and telephone calls to Juvenile offenders in Tuscola County youths. The rooms in the Sheriff's Deworkers were given five partment office to house days of training at Gaylord. youths for up to 24 hours. They will be used on an on-Bean said it would be a place for the youth to stay call basis, only when needed. Bean expects that until a court hearing could throughout the year the be held to determine what actions should be taken. courts would place about 12 youths into in-home detention placement. She said that an average detention would last about two weeks.

If a case worker discovers that a youth is not following the court ordered inhome detention program, the youth could be placed in a detention facility. 'There has to be a consequence for not following the rules," Bean said.

Although the workers' wages are paid by the state, they will be working under Bean's supervision.

She pointed out that Tuscola County does not have facilities for juvenile detention, so youths must be housed in other counties, at Tuscola County's expense. Bean said it is "very expensive" to place a youth in a detention center.

The cost of housing a youth in the Genesee County detention center is $135 per day; Saginaw, $83 per day; Bay County, $76 per day, and Macomb County, $90 per day.

"We try to avoid it (housing youths in detention centers) if possible," Bean added

Another phase of the program is to remodel two

The two rooms will be separate from the jail prisoners. It is illegal to house someone 15 years old or younger in an adult facility. One of the rooms will be designed to be "very secure," so the youth can't escape. The other room will be used to house youths who come in of their own accord, needing a place to stay and talk to someone. The two rooms will be staffed by state paid case workers.

CASS CITY ROTARY will sponsor four students at the 14th annual Rotary District 631 Youth Leadership Seminar Camp in Clare, June 9-14. There will be approximately 126 outstanding high school students from the district at the camp. From left: Kerry Mellendorf, Tammy Iseler and Deb Sawdon. Missing is Sara MacRae.

claims that taxes from 1978 through 1981 are still owed the school. The tax levies were paid to the Cass City School District.

Owen-Gage recently because the total property increases is not known, they have scheduled the hearing. He estimated that a two percent increase in property values will generate the district about $15,000. The district pre-puterized the trust department, and charges $500 a year for sending out a total of six checks. About anyone could make out the simple income tax return, for the bonds are tax-exempts and there is no tax to pay. But no, a CPA has to be hired, and there's another $300. sently levies 25.3064 mills. The two trustees put in very moderate bills of $200 apiece. Total is $1300 to administer the trust. A girl at the bank sent out checks twice a year to the three children. It was simple and efficient at first, but here's what happened as some 16 years went by.
