PLEMENT

TOTAL LOSS - A 1985 Plymouth Horizon, with an estimated value of $7,000 was destroyed Sunday at 10:50 p.m. after the vehicle caught on fire. Jerome Root, chief of the Elkland Township Fire Department, said the vehicle, owned by Doug Smith, 3771 Colwood Rd., Caro, was being towed out of the ditch by a four-wheel drive truck, when a fire started in the left rear corner of the car. Elkland firemen were at the scene for about one hour. No injuries were reported.

Coaching shortage explained

by Wayne Kamidoi

It was rather alarming to see an advertisement in last week's Chronicle placed by Kingston Community Schools. The want ad seeks persons willing to coach its sports teams.

There are 13 varsity and junior sports at Kingston. Eight head coaches are needed. That's a 60 percent turnover in staff.

Among those leaving are Mike Schreiber, who guided the Cardinals to the Thumb D League championship in 1985, and Cheri Laycock, who filled three head coaching positions (boys' track, varsity volleyball and junior varsity girls' basketball). Schreiber, who is leaving for a teaching post in Lakeview, also was the varsity football assistant coach.

Varsity girls' basketball Coach Mark Dost is heading north for a job in Cheboygan. John Zeller (JV football), Helen Crane (girls' track) and Lynn Ewald (JV volleyball) are vacating their head coaching spots for various reasons.

Coaching, it seems, has fallen out of favor. Applicants haven't been exactly beating down the door to get those positions.

"They're all open at this time. I've had no responses yet," Kingston Superintendent Jerry Laycock said Thursday.

Eight openings, no takers. Not very good numbers.

There are several reasons why coaching has become more of a burden than a pleasure. Here are a few:

1. Complacency. The optimum high school athletic program consists of a staff made solely from its faculty, says the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA). But the recent trend, forced or otherwise, has "non-teachers" filling the coaching roles. Leery of those without certified teaching degrees, the MHSAA requires "non-teachers" to be approved then registered in its files. There are close to 4,000 of these "non-teachers" who are coaches, according to MHSAA Assistant Director Fred Sible.

William Dodge, superintendent at Unionville-Sebewaing Schools, points out that faculty has become "pretty stable...no longer transient." He said jobs are fewer and staying at one job ensures security.

"The teaching staffs are getting older," says Ron Nurnberger, faculty member at Cass City High School and coach for 17 years. "There's no new blood who are young and aggressive coming in to Coach."

Despite the lack of "new blood," Nurnberger's 12 years as boys' varsity basketball coach rank him in the top two in tenure in the Thumb.

"There's only one coach out of 26 schools who's coached more than I. There's something wrong. Please turn to page 18.

Totaling $30,000

County seeking 2 child care grants

Ann Bean, director of the Juvenile Probation Department will seek two state grants totaling about $30,000 following approval of the programs by the Tuscola County Commissioners Tuesday, July 23.

The programs are designed to divert first-time offenders and mildly troubled youth from the courts, and to provide in-home counseling to youths and their families. If the state approves the request Bean expects to save the county more than $7,000 a year, add two employees to the payroll, and provide services to more youths.

"If we do it ourselves we can double the amount of children we take care of, and it costs us less," Commissioner Royce Russell, Cass City, said.

The issue was originally brought up at a July 9 meeting. The board discussed the proposal, but took no action. Russell said they wanted to further investigate the proposal. He explained that another hold up was how to justify hiring in one department, after laying off in other departments. He added that by approving the request, they will save the county money.

In a letter sent to the commissioners, Bean explained that by hiring a county employee to operate the in-home care program the salary costs from the present program could be reduced from $33,735 for fiscal year 1984, to $19,300 for the 1986 fiscal year. One half of the wages are paid for by state grant funds. The county pays the other 50 percent.

Bean explained that last year the county hired Bob Ponder of Thumb Area Family Counseling to tutor a maximum of six youths and their families at one time.

By hiring a full time, county employee, please turn to page 18.

7 from Tuscola County arrested on drug charges

A 3½-month undercover investigation by officers from four Tuscola County law enforcement agencies culminated Thursday with the arrest of seven county residents on drug delivery charges.

Det./Sgt. Dan Miller of the Michigan State Police, Caro post, directing the investigation, reported one pound of marijuana, and 100 LSD pills were seized. The reported street value of the drugs was estimated at $800. Other law enforcement agencies involved in the investigation were the Caro and Millington Police, and the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department.

Thirteen warrants have been issued so far, and additional arrests may be made.

Those arrested are: Jacqueline Staten, 37, 4892 W. Center St., Millington, charged with one count of delivery of LSD; her son Joey, 18, Millington, two counts of delivery of marijuana; William E. Brewer, 17, 6280 Bevans Rd., Kingston, two counts of delivery of marijuana; David D. Blomquist, 26, 1032 S. Colling Rd., Caro, delivery of LSD and delivery of marijuana; Gary J. Periso, 23, 3595 Warner Rd., Cass City, two counts of delivery of marijuana; Dennis L. Kammerer, 30, 2501 Gerou Rd., Caro, two counts of delivery of LSD and one count of delivery of marijuana; and Marty McLellan, 21, 1727 Luder St., Caro, one count of delivery of marijuana.

The sentence for delivery of LSD carries a maximum of seven years in prison and or a $5,000 fine. The maximum sentence for delivery of marijuana is a four-year prison term and or a $2,000 fine.

$30,000 loss

Schneeberger's vandalized

Thirty-six pieces of furniture, including some of the most expensive items, have been vandalized at Schneeberger's Furniture Store.

The loss, estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000 by Clarence Schneeberger, owner, was discovered when the furniture was being dusted.

It happened sometime between July 8 and July 23, according to Opal Schneeberger, who discovered the vandalism.

Most of the marks were similar and consist of deep scratches in the wood. The vandalism occurred throughout the store. Clarence Schneeberger reported the loss to the Cass City Police Department and is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and arraignment of the person or persons responsible.

Anyone with information is asked to call the police, not the store, according to Schneeberger.

Area students report

Job outlook brightens for college grads

by Wayne Kamidoi

There's always value to getting a college education. That value, however, fluctuates with the times. For example, with recession at its peak about two years ago, job placement for the college graduate hit its lowest point since World War II. A college degree didn't automatically assure a job.

It still doesn't, but things, at least, are looking better. With a resurgence in the economy, the job placement figure has substantially increased and has made jobs relatively easy to find for 1985 grads, according to school placement officials.

"The employment market has been very good. The Class of '85 has had a good year," said John D. Shingleton, director of placement at Michigan State University. Shingleton pointed out 4,212 employers came to the East Lansing campus this year as opposed to only 3,000 in 1983.

Kelly J. Seurnyck, a June graduate at MSU, received a bachelor of arts degree in education. Seurnyck, Gagetown, said she has turned down three job offers since her graduation. That's luxury that comes with the improved job market.

"There's a lot of different factors involved (in turning down the offers) and the money situation. But the field is really opening up," said the 1981 Cass City High School graduate.

Job openings in the areas of engineering, science computer business, and most notably, education have skyrocketed in the last two years, placement officials said.

"We are seeing more jobs in education than we've seen in the past three or four years," said Jody Rich, placement assistant at Grand Valley State College, where 100 percent of special education degree graduates received jobs in 1984. "Children of the Baby Boomers are just starting school and we are seeing the results with the high demand for teachers."

Charles D. Alexander, director of placement and career information center at Central Michigan University, said there has been not only a dramatic turnaround in education administration but in numerous fields, such as marketing and technical areas.

"CMU is producing as many jobs as ever. Students have been finding jobs (in their fields of study) relatively easy, as opposed to the past," said Alexander, who said the placement rate is "around 80 percent."

"In terms of utilizing education, job entry has been more effective. In the past, they had to goof around before they could get a job in their field of study. That is not the case as much any longer," he added.

One premier engineering school in the state, Michigan Technological University, absorbed a major brunt from the economic downturn in 1983 when the job placement rate hit a low of 64 percent, according to Steve Vanek, coordinator of placement and cooperative education at MTU.

The placement rate hasn't hit the 96 percent figure it had seven years ago, but the 84 percent mark posted in 1984 is "looking good," Vanek said.

"It's been a good year; there's been a rebound. As the economy of the state of Michigan goes, so goes the job situation for our graduates," Vanek said.

Shingleton said about 100 percent of the engineering students at MSU are able to get jobs in their area of concentration.

Brad Erickson, Owendale, who graduated from MSU with a B.S. degree, received many job offers prior to his graduation, according to his sister, Kristine. He currently works for Consumers Power in Benton Harbor as a mechanical engineer.

James Baker, Cass City, an '85 graduate of Michigan Tech, is an engineer at FIF Controls and Engineering, Marlette. He had the job two months before his graduation, Baker said.

The area of business, which is traditionally a high-interest curriculum at most colleges, has room for employment, according to Delores Gale, registrar at Saginaw Business Institute (SBI).

"I'd say there's ample compensation out there. Our course curriculum can give our students varying backgrounds in business," Gale said. "There's nearly 100 percent placement for those in the secretarial curriculum."

"The last six to eight months have been very good," SBI Vice-president Jim Lewis said. "We've been getting a steady flow of calls (with job offerings) — with a noticeable increase since February."

Of course, getting an education is one thing, getting a job is another. Most colleges and universities offer job placement assistance — which, according to Seurnyck, are "extremely helpful" — but the bottom line is selling yourself.

"I think the placement office does offer some help, but they can only do so much. It depends on how far you want to go," said Teresa Scollon, Cass City, a June MSU graduate who received a degree in international relations.

Although her job as a bilingual assistant at Mazda Motors, Farmington, is not exactly what Scollon wants, it offers something "completely different," she said.

"We bring employers on campus, (but getting a job in business) is not like applying to flip burgers at McDonald's, you have to sell yourself," SBI VP Lewis said. "We will help them have the necessary tools (resume, job credentials, etc.) on hand for an interview, but they will have to hustle themselves."

Shingleton said at MSU there are two full-time employees at the placement office whose sole purpose is to teach students how to "sell themselves."

"It's a very sophisticated business. Job search strategy involves a whole family of things. Those who know how to get a job have a considerable advantage over those who don't," Shingleton said.

Bottle returns

There's a 90 percent return rate for beverage containers in states with deposit laws, reports International Wildlife magazine. That impressive figure may soon prompt Florida, New Jersey and Pennsylvania to join nine other states which already have bottle bills. Some environmentalists believe this will greatly boost the chances of a national law requiring deposits on all beverage cans and bottles.

"If It Fitz..."

Shantan lives on

By Jim Fitzgerald

"It could be much worse, and we should be grateful for that," I wrote in last week's column about a car-bike crash in which my 15-year-old granddaughter, Michele, suffered a badly broken wrist.

For 11-year-old Shantan Simper of Clarkston, it was much worse. He died. But his parents and grandparents still found something to be grateful for.

A surprisingly large number of readers empathized with Michele's damaged summer. A lot of area youngsters have lately suffered broken bones and other trauma, giving their parents and grandparents reason to worry and pray—and write to a columnist saying: "I know exactly how you felt when you heard your granddaughter was hurt in an accident."

My guiltiest little secret is I hate to write letters and usually don't, even when I know I should. So this paragraph is my only answer to those readers who might wonder why their injured-child story wasn't printed here. There just isn't enough space for all of them, and I know you'll agree that the thoughts of Shantan Simper's grandfather are the ones most worth recording.

Chances are this isn't the first you've heard about Shantan Simper. His sudden death early last month, and the events following it, were well publicized. Tom Marshall, medical reporter for WDIV-TV (Channel 4), did a splendid series of reports on the little boy who had so much to live for, but couldn't. At one brief point, Marshall lost control and cried, and thousands of viewers must have cried along with him.

But there was reason for elation as well as tears. Shantan's paternal grandparents, Frederick and Dody Simper of West Bloomfield, call it a "drama of triumph over tragedy." Listen to Frederick Simper describe the boy who suffered a cerebral hemorrhage June 8, due to an aneurysm, and didn't survive after five hours of surgery.

"Shantan was a vital 11-year-old, a gifted, creative, handsome blond lad, an excellent student at Pine Knob Elementary; a superb athlete excelling in baseball. The word in Clarkston was that one day 'Shantan would make the majors'...He was loved and admired by his schoolmates for his sportsmanship, his young wit and wisdom, and his kind and loving nature.

"When we learned the devastating news that he would not survive, Shantan's mother, Diane King, and father, Tony, decided Shantan would be an organ donor, a decision they knew he would approve with his generous nature. The Pediatrics Intensive Care unit at Pontiac St. Joseph Mercy Hospital kept his sturdy young body sustained, though he would shortly be declared brain dead.

"We grandparents, parents and relatives kept a three-day vigil, filling his final hours with soothing, loving words..."

Shantan's heart and lungs were transplanted into 14-year-old Elizabeth Burns of Norman, Okla. His kidneys went to a 27-year-old Grand Rapids woman and a seven-year-old Detroit girl.

"Elizabeth is doing well, hence we say triumph over tragedy. Even in his untimely death, our Shantan is heroic," Frederick Simper said. "You can well imagine that the void for us grandparents is enormous, but we take comfort in the fact that his heart and lungs beat strongly for another, and for future generations.

"My point is to urge people of all ages to become organ donors. The need is great; only one percent of possible donors are involved, while hundreds await vital organs and the greatest gift of all, life itself."

(For information on donorship, phone 1-800-482-4881 anytime or write Organ Procurement Agency of Michigan, 2203 Platt Rd., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104.)

Some say its good luck for a firefly to fly into the house.

AMIE HEDLEY was selected as the 1985 Tuscola County Bean Queen last Tuesday at the county fair. The 18-year-old college sophomore is the daughter of Unionville area farmers Barry and Sally Hedley. A psychology major, she will be attending Concordia College, Ann Arbor, this fall. Miss Hedley will compete for the Michigan Bean Queen title over the Labor Day week end. First runner-up was Mary Bauer, Richville. Cass City's Barb Root was second runner-up.

The Haire Net

There is a TV program that immediately follows the evening news that probably draws more than a fair share of the viewing audience during the time period.

It's call "The Rich and Famous" and the promos say that it features the life styles of famous persons. I've never watched it, but judging by the interest that heroes generate and the sale of magazines that feature glimpses of the private lives of persons in the news, the program has a lot going for it.

They are the majority, no doubt about it. But how about a view from the distinct minority?

Folks who can't understand what it is that tickles the fancy of all those who get their kicks reading that Rock Hudson has AIDS.

You know what? I can feel sorry for Hudson just like I would feel sorry about any person who has contracted a fatal disease.

But it isn't any more important to me just because he is a well-known movie star.

All that I really care about, concerning Hudson or any other movie star, is that the show he is in entertains me. His private life doesn't concern me one way or the other.

Movie stars aren't the only ones that capture the interest of an adoring public. Titillating stuff about sports heroes are also grist for the mill.

Why else would the metro dailies chronicle every bit of trivia concerning those eligible bachelors, Kirk Gibson and Dave Rozema, major league baseball stars?

As long as they play well on the field and don't draw so much money that I can no longer afford to watch the games, they can party all night or join a convent when not performing.

Another mania that is hard to really understand is the search for autographs. There are a few who can make a buck out of it, but most persons collect them, just to be collecting them.

Then they sit around the dresser gathering dust until the day finally arrives when they are discarded just like the heroes of the day when their time has come and gone.

It all seems like a useless

Erickson mixed in bid for new post

The second round of interviews were not as successful for Owen-Gage Superintendent Ron Erickson.

Erickson was one of the three finalists interviewed July 20 for the superintendent's post in the Watervliet School District. The field was trimmed to three from seven after a series of interviews July 12 and 13.

Bruce Watson, formerly the superintendent for the Whittemore - Prescott School District, was offered a contract last week to replace William Penny, who resigned effective July 1, Watervliet school officials said.

Erickson, 48, has been superintendent and chief negotiator for Owen-Gage since 1975.

Berry was waiting for someone to come over with a set of keys. His were locked inside the car.

Why editors get grey department: A news release from Gary M. Owen, speaker of the Michigan House of Representatives said, "Included in the budget for the first time is another $8.35 per student in kindergarten and the first grade for every school district that reduces its pupil-teacher ratio in those two grades to 25 pupils per teacher."

What the budget allows is $8.35 for all pupils in the district, not just for the two grades. In addition, only schools that are "in formula" qualify and that excludes 170 of the 570 districts in the state.

Geraldine Prieskorn has come up with an idea that she feels will help attendance at next year's July 4 Festival.

The all school reunion, held every 5 years, is slated sometime next year. Why not hold it the Saturday after the Festival? she asks. It's sure to draw many to town and keep many others from taking off.

Steve White of Caro was a speaker at Cass City Rotary last week and he talked about traffic safety. The talk switched to seat belts and their use and the legal exemptions to their use.

Seat belts in school buses are not required. There has been talk about this, he said, but the need is not considered urgent.

Why? Because there hasn't been a fatality among Michigan school bus riders in 23 years. That's an enviable record.

Perhaps one reason for the safety success has been the law requiring cars to stop both ways for school buses. A little known quirk in the law excludes school vans from the law.

You don't have to legally stop for vans. Every Rotarian listening agreed that they were going to continue to stop anyway.

liamston, the youngest. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Phil Colton, all of Durand, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones of Flint and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hewitt of Uby were first-time guests at the event.

Sanilac oat tour scheduled

Sanilac County farmers will have the opportunity to view the new Porter variety of oats at the county oats tour Thursday, Aug. 1, at 7:00 p.m. This tour will be at the Dick Ruggles farm on Gosline Road, 3/4 mile south of Marlette Road, according to A. REV. JOE ROBERTSON recently took over the ministerial duties at the Trinity United Methodist Church, Cass City.

Rev. Robertson appointed as new minister at Trinity United Methodist

Rev. Joe Robertson, the new minister at the Trinity United Methodist Church, Cass City, has spent several years of his ministerial career preaching before a different type of audience.

Rev. Robertson, an ordained minister since 1970, served as a chaplain at prisons in Ohio and North Carolina for about seven years.

"Religion is alive and well in prisons," he said. "I think it is an integral part of prison life." He explained that a majority of prisoners are very interested in some form of a religious experience. For them it is a way to seek reconciliation with God. Rev. Robertson added that for many prisoners, religion serves as a way to cope with their surroundings.

Rev. Robertson, a graduate of Alma College, received his master of divinity degree from Duke University, Durham, N.C.

He came to Cass City from the Port Huron area, where he was the minister at the Washington Avenue and Gratiot Park United Methodist Churches. He has also been a minister at the Homer United Methodist Church, near Battle Creek.

Rev. Robertson said he first became interested in joining the clergy as a youth attending summer church camps near his home in the Grayling area.

He has replaced Rev. James McCallum, who has been appointed as minister of a United Methodist Church in the Flint area. Rev. McCallum served in the Cass City church for about two years.

Rev. Robertson said his first objective is to get to know the people who attend the church. "I know little about them, other than a common faith and heritage."

He has found the people of Cass City to be friendly, and he feels the town has a lot to offer.

Rev. Robertson and his wife Mary Ellen have four children, Jenny, Jason, Jami and Angie. Mary Ellen is a certified elementary teacher, and was a substitute teacher in Port Huron area schools.

The first teabags were produced in San Francisco in 1920 by Joseph Krieger. Though they were originally designed for caterers, by 1935 most were sold for home use.

McLeody Days

By Bill McLeod

Attending the Tuscola County Fair last week ended a 15-year absence from carnivals and 4-H livestock pavilions for me. Things haven't changed much.

The fairgrounds were about the same as when I last walked them as a high school senior - dusty, and full of parents trying to convince their children they really didn't want to go on a stomach tossing loop-to-loop ride.

The most noticeable change was the cost of ev-everything has gone up. I remember going to the Crosswell Fair as a youth growing up on a farm in the Melvin area. As soon as I was old enough to fend for myself, my folks coughed up $1, and I spent the night on the midway while they went to watch the harness races. At that time I thought the midway was a lot better than watching some "dumb horses" dragging around a miniature Ben Hur cart. The drivers didn't even carry a sword.

If I carefully budgeted my dollar, I could ride three, maybe four rides, and still have some money left over to try and dig out a jackknife from one of the concession stands.

One thing that was in my favor, my older brother got sick whenever he rode one of the loop-to-loop rides. If I was lucky, he'd lose interest, but not his supper, early, before he spent all of his money. I took whatever was left over.

Last week I decided to make a photo assignment at the fair a family outing, and dragged Diane and Andy along. He was interested in the petting zoo, provided free by the 4-H's, and of course, the rides.

After feeding the goats about 10 handfuls of food, I was eventually able to drag him back onto the midway for his first carnival ride. I really wanted to go on the bumper cars. He didn't. One look at the double-deck ferris wheel brought back memories of "my older brother syndrome." We went to the area with the kids' rides. Andy opted for a ride on a motor-boat, at 90 cents a shot.

Five minutes, and $1.80 later, we headed for our final stop, the caramel corn stand. One bag, $1.25. Popcorn was $1. A glass of pop sold for 75 cents. We shared one.

Of all the things to see and experience, Andrew liked the petting zoo the best. As the old saying goes: "The best things in life are free."

MARKET LIVESTOCK SALE

PROCEEDS FROM the sale of a lamb donated by Theron Roach (left), and Hugh Milligan, went to establish a Don DeLong Memorial Fund to be used for future 4-H projects. The late Mr. DeLong was an avid supporter of 4-H activities in Tuscola County. Accepting the award was his widow, Lucile DeLong. The lamb was sold for $3.25 a pound, the highest price paid for any animal at the livestock auction.

New testing program to be implemented at O-G

by Wayne Kamidori

For all of the advantages attached to implementing a standardized testing program, the money spent may be well worth it, according to Owen-Gage High School Principal Wayne Wright.

For $850, which was taken out of the federal funds received last year, Owen-Gage purchased the California Assessment Test (CAT) package for grades

7-12 to be used in the fall. The CAT has been given to grades 3-6 at O-G, but no standardized test was given on a regular basis at junior and senior high levels, Wright said.

"Now we're getting into a normal standard testing situation. Not giving a test is an abnormal occurrence," Wright said.

The test will allow school officials to evaluate its students on an individual basis, as well as monitor the strengths or weaknesses of its curriculum," Wright said.

"It's money well worth the expenditure. The total result will be a strengthening of Owen-Gage Schools both from an individual's standpoint, and the curriculum's standpoint," he said.

The CAT will test the knowledge of the students in four areas: mathematics, language arts, science and social studies.

"This is a new test — an updated version with new norms," Wright said. The last updating was in 1979.

O-G had been administering the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) examinations, but tested students in grades 4, 7 and 12 in only two categories — mathematics and reading, according to Wright.

"At one time (Owen-Gage) used to give a good battery of tests, but they got out-of-date and the school didn't replace them," he said. "When I came in '81 they had nothing. We've wanted to do this a couple years ago."

Plans for the CAT are not concrete, but Wright expects to administer the four-to-five hour tests in early October. Wright said he foresees no unfavorable student reaction to the CAT because "it's for their own benefit...and there's nothing but advantages to this."

Unlike some school districts in the area, such as Laker and North Huron, Owen-Gage has no intention of using the test as a graduation requirement. Wright said students in those school districts are required to score a certain percentile on the MEAP in order to graduate.

Red Cross needs donors

Red Cross has a severe shortage of blood. Surgeries are being cancelled and the Wolverine Red Cross District has been getting blood from other areas to cover emergencies. The shortage was helped by an increase in donors. Normally 70 units of blood are given, but Tuesday 92 units were donated by 111 persons.

The 11 first time donors were Paul Dow, Russ Reed, Robert Gornowicz, Sheryl Evans, Dennis Nauseadas, Ed Pasant, Terry Block, Vicki Thane, Bonnie Johnson, Valerie Langenburg and Ann Jordan. Those who received gallon donor pins were Brenda Erla, Larry Pitcher, Ken Jensen and Randa Allen. Two-gallon donor pins were given to Gerald Auten, Elaine Jezewski and Marlene Erla. Eldon Stoutenburg was given a three-gallon donor pin.

Donated Red Cross Blood is now being tested for Hepatitis, VD, and AIDS. If any of these tests return positive the donor will receive a letter from Red Cross.

Mattresses

One should not lie down on the job when separating mattress fact from mattress fallacy. Some people believe mattresses are either all firm, or all gentle. In fact, mattresses which use individual water-filled cylinders, such as those from the Somma Mattress Company, can be adjusted individually. One side of the bed can be firm, the other soft.

Anxiety disorders: America's leading mental health problem

(First of two articles)

Anxiety is the number one psychiatric disorder in the United States. A study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) has estimated that 13.1 million Americans suffer from anxiety disorders. But how do you tell normal anxiety or fear from clinical anxiety?

Suppose you are driving in your car and suddenly the brakes fail. Your body immediately begins to react to the danger. Your heart beats faster, your stomach flutters. Hormones pour into your bloodstream to help you cope with the threat to your life.

Those are normal responses to a threatening situation. They are nature's way of helping you mobilize your forces to meet the immediate danger.

But suppose you suddenly go into a spasm of anxiety. In the absence of any apparent stress or danger, your heart begins to race, you feel dizzy and short of breath, with an overwhelming sense of choking.

That is a type of clinical anxiety -- not just a response to a threatening situation, but an actual disorder. "The suddenness of the symptoms, and the fact that they may occur without warning and without any unusual stress being present, set this behavior apart from otherwise normal responses to danger or stress," says Robert P. Purpura, M.D., medical manager, psychopharmacology medical research, The Upjohn Company.

"We realized before the NIMH data came out that there were a lot of people around with these problems," says David H. Bar-

Museum open in Parisville

St. Mary's Historical Society museum in Parisville will be open every Sunday in August from 1:00-4:30 p.m. and also from 12:00 noon until 7:00 p.m. Aug. 18 during the St. Mary's Festival.

low, Ph.D., director of the Center for Stress and Anxiety Disorders at the State University of New York at Albany. There has been a rapid growth around the country of programs dealing specifically with anxiety disorders, and most of these facilities have been inundated with requests from patients seeking treatment.

"At our center," says Dr. Barlow, "the waiting list is three or four months long."

The Many Forms of Clinical Anxiety

What is clinical anxiety? Who is affected by it? How is it treated?

Anxiety is generally defined as a feeling of fear and apprehension that may or may not be connected to a particular event or object. Anxiety is often accompanied by physical symptoms, such as dizziness, sweating, chest pains, racing or pounding heart, stomach problems and insomnia.

Clinical anxiety takes many forms. Two anxiety disorders that are most serious and most commonly treated in anxiety disorders clinics are panic attacks and agoraphobia. Panic attacks -- intense episodes characterized by the symptoms listed above -- may last anywhere from a few minutes to a few hours. In order to be diagnosed as having panic disorder, a person must experience at least three attacks within a three-week period that are not triggered by a medical condition, drug use or immediate danger.

Agoraphobia manifests itself paradoxically as both the fear of being in public places that are crowded or may have limited exits, such as shopping malls, supermarkets, tunnels or bridges, and the fear of being alone in these settings. It's often a complication of panic disorder.

Other anxiety disorders that present problems for many people are:

-Simple or specific phobia, in which a person avoids particular experiences without obvious reason -- for example, flying, heights or furry animals.

-Social phobia, the irrational fear of and desire to avoid situations in which a person can be observed and perhaps embarrassed by others, such as public speaking, dining out or using public rest rooms.

-Post-traumatic stress disorder, occurring when a person who was a victim of violence, military combat, a natural disaster or some other traumatic event develops anxiety symptoms following the incident.

-Generalized or free-floating anxiety, where individuals exhibit anxiety symptoms much of the time, apparently without external cause.

-Obsessive-compulsive disorder, when a patient has persistent ideas, thoughts or images that he or she seems unable to control (obsessive thoughts), or irresistible impulses to perform certain behaviors that the individual knows are senseless but feels compelled to act out (compulsive acts). Such obsessions and compulsions are devices by which some patients attempt to ward off anxiety.

Anxiety Symptoms Can Mimic Physical Ills

"Because anxiety can mimic physical disorders, we often see patients who have been worked up repeatedly for cardiovascular problems," says Michael Liebowitz, M.D., director of the Anxiety Disorders Clinic at the New York State Psychiatric Institute in New York City and associate professor of clinical psychiatry at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Symptoms of anxiety send people to many medical specialists. (Anxiety can also be a symptom of certain physical illnesses.) When no obvious physical abnormality can be found for the symptoms, the role of anxiety in producing physical symptoms should be considered.

"One gastrointestinal specialist estimates that as many as one-third of the people he sees may have anxiety disorders," says James Ballenger, M.D., chairman of the department of psychiatry and director of the Anxiety Disorders Clinic at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston.

Your neighbor says

Nagys enjoy news and educational programing

What do you like to watch on television?

Frank Nagy and his wife Virginia Lee both like to watch educational programs. They both enjoy watching the popular news-feature television programs 60 Minutes and 20/20.

"I liked George Perrot," Mr. Nagy said about the popular television show of the 1960's that featured films about scenic tours of the United States and foreign countries. "That was good television."

Mrs. Nagy likes watching the national news, but local news broadcasts seem to have about 10 minutes of news coverage, and 10 minutes of sports. She feels that with the increased time spent on sports it should be made into a separate program.

"You know what the problem is with television?" he asked. There is too much violence," He pointed out that cable television has added to television violence.

Mr. Nagy feels the main reason for the popularity of cable is so networks can show programing that wouldn't be allowed on regular television broadcasts.

"I think that's wrong. If they can't show it on regular television, they shouldn't be able to show it on cable," he added.

The Nagys, originally from the Cass City and Bad Axe area, now live in Huntington Woods. They were in Cass City Friday afternoon visiting friends.

New books at the library

SAUDI by Laurie Devine (fiction). In 1938 when oil engineer Tom Shannon loses his wife in an explosion in Saudi Arabia he sends his young daughter, Sunny, back to the United States but remains in the desert to atone for his responsibility in the related death of his friend's son, Rashid and Muhammad Al-Murrah, and the lives of these two families are intertwined for decades to come. There are several threads running through this story, including the intense rivalry between Muhammad, who is totally Westernized, and his strict Muslim brother, Rashid, and their interaction with Sunny, a woman whose ardent love for an Arab and his country takes her to live in the Saudi desert.

LOVE ALWAYS by Ann Beattie (fiction). A Vermont-based magazine devoted to the last remaining vestiges of the counterculture harbors a number of people who have turned on and dropped out but still haven't quite mellowed out. Beattie observes these characters over the length of a summer as they sort through their myriad distractions and cope with the stresses of an overprivileged country lifestyle.

THE TWO MRS. GRENVILLES by Dominick Dunne (fiction). Urse Mertens of Pittsburgh, Kansas, aka Ann Arden of the Copacabana chorus line, hits pay dirt when she captures William "Junior" Grenville, fabulously wealthy member of New York's social registry. Ann is a heroine you love to hate, a woman who cuckolds her husband while extracting from him a king's ransom in jewels, magic-carpet voyages to shoots in Scotland and safaris in Africa, and nursemaids for the son and daughter she grudgingly bears and coldly ignores. When the gentle and well-bred Junior asks for a divorce (having turned up a dirty little secret that Ann knows will scotch any chance for the huge settlement she's demanding), like the real-life society woman of a decade and a half ago, she "mistakes" him for a prowler and shoots him dead. His dignified mother, shunning publicity, chooses to believe Ann's story, thereby condemning her to a life of opulent ostracism and eventual though extraordinarily belated, repentance.

At speeds over 110 mph

Just a Sunday drive for Mike Lagos

To most people, a Sunday afternoon drive is a chance to unwind and enjoy the sights of the countryside before returning to the rigors of the working world Monday morning.

But a Sunday drive for Mike Lagos is anything but relaxing, and the only scenery he sees will be blurred as he races down the Ubyly Dragway quarter-mile track at speeds over 110 miles per hour.

But the best part of the ride comes when Lagos crosses the finish line ahead of his competitor, something that he has been doing a lot this year.

At the start of the racing year, Lagos and his crew chief Ben Gawrylowicz set a goal of representing Ubyly Dragway at the National Hot Rod Association's Division III Points Race to be held in Indianapolis in September.

"So far we are well on our way," Lagos, a former Cass

City area resident now living in the Caro area, said. He added that they still have about half of the season ahead of them. After races July 14, Lagos had accumulated 225 points in the professional bracket. He is tied with Bob Forsyth of Bad Axe for the most points at the dragway. Forsyth races in the 1970 Dodge Duster heavy bracket. Lagos is also competing for the top prize at Ubyly Dragway, a season driver's pass for next year. Other prizes include $500 cash and gift certificates ranging from $500 to $35. About five racers from each bracket will go to Indianapolis to race against the fastest cars from the Midwest.

"We worked hard to get into that position," Gawrylowicz said about being tied for first place.

Lagos drives a 1969 Camaro that is powered by a high compression 350 cubic inch engine. He estimates the engine is producing between 350 to 400 horsepower.

The engine he is presently using is a back-up engine to his high performance engine that is being overhauled. He explained his original engine blew up during a recent race. When the engine blew up, a thick piston rod was twisted until it finally broke. Parts of the rod were forced through the cylinder wall.

"Part of it ended up at the end of the race track," Lagos added.

Lagos first became interested in drag racing when he was in high school. His older brother raced, and he really got hooked on it when he saw his first fast street car.

He and Gawrylowicz first started racing in the early 1970's, but when Ubyly and other dragstrips in the area closed, they dropped out of racing.

In the late 1970's, Lagos bought the Camaro that he now races. He explained that when he bought it, the 1969 sports car had only two wheels and the body. The engine, transmission and rear end were missing. The car was brought home on a trailer. He originally restored the 1969 street racing car to its stock condition, but he wasn't satisfied.

"I came to the conclusion I was either going to have a street car, or a full blown racing car, and that's what I have now," Lagos said as he looked at the shiny Chevrolet.

To accommodate the car's 13-inch wide racing slicks, Lagos chopped the trunk out, and expanded the wheel wells several inches into the trunk area. The rear axles had to be shortened about six inches on each side.

Lagos spent over $1,000 to put axles and tires on the car. He estimated that it would cost $2,000 to $3,000 to have an engine and an exhaust system prepared for the car. Lagos said they have earned about $1,000 this year, enough to cover their expenses. During an average day's racing he uses almost eight gallons of gasoline for the 10 runs he makes.

He explained that when he changed the engine, after blowing up his original engine, he also had to change the rear axle gear ratio to accommodate the new engine. With the new engine and the old rear axle, the car would reach 110 miles per hour about 300 feet from the end of the race. "Even though it was going 110, it wouldn't go 111," he said, adding that because he was not accelerating in the last 300 feet he lost a race.

By changing to a higher speed rear end, Lagos was able to make the car accelerate until the end of the quarter-mile track.

Unlike the muscle cars of the 1960's, Lagos' car does not "burn rubber" when he takes off. Lagos explained that a special ladder bar rear suspension that forces the weight of the car on the rear wheels when he takes off, and improved tire and track conditions have eliminated the need to squeal the tires on takeoff. "The tires just bite," Lagos said about the traction combination he and Gawrylowicz have developed for the car.

The stock interior of his car has been removed, and Lagos is surrounded by a roll cage that will protect him if the car should roll over. A screen mesh over the driver's side window guarantees that he cannot be thrown out. He wears a special, fire resistant jacket, and of course a crash helmet.

Lagos and Gawrylowicz both said they were happy to see Ubyly Dragway open up again. They explained that not only is it closer than other dragstrips, but it gives people a safe place to race. Gawrylowicz added that he has seen an increase in kids street racing, a dangerous situation. With a dragstrip in the area they have a safe place to race.

SAFELY PROTECTED by a roll bar, Mike Lagos competes in the pro bracket at Ubyly Dragway each Sunday.

THE RACE CAR that Mike Lagos and Ben Gawrylowicz built reaches speeds over 110 miles per hour in the quarter-mile drag races.

FINAL TUNE-UP - Before heading to the drag strip Sunday, Mike Lagos (left) and crew chief Ben Gawrylowicz prepare the 350-cubic-inch engine for the 10 runs he usually makes during a day's racing.

Claims better food value

King grows chemically free crops

While some farmers look to chemists to develop better methods of insect and weed control in their fields, Lewis King counts on a natural balance to grow crops on his organic farm.

"Basically, it is just farming free of chemicals," King said. "It doesn't take away from modern tillage and drainage methods, or modern seeds."

King has been a certified organic farmer for the past 12 years. "To be a certified organic farmer you have to rotate your crops. That's a must," he said, explaining that growing the same crop over and over in the field depletes the soil of its nutritional value. He pointed out that corn, repeatedly grown in the same field, robs the soil of nitrogen. As an example, King said that about 40 years ago in the corn belt of Iowa and Illinois, where they grew corn year after year, the soil was drained of its natural nitrogen. It had to be chemically replaced. "Nitrogen, if the soil is in balance (from crop rotation), comes from nature." He and other organic farmers feel that without crop rotation, the field cannot produce crops with quality food value.

King said before he became an organic farmer he used herbicides and other chemicals, the same as most farmers. At that time he was growing crops to feed Holstein heifers that he raised to sell to dairy farmers. His goal was to raise the largest heifer possible, so it would be big enough to be a good producing dairy cow.

But he wasn't satisfied with the growth of the heifer.

After he switched over to organic farming, the heifers showed a "world of difference" in size. He attributes the increased growth to the additional nutritional value in the feed that was grown organically. "Boy, they did well," King said. "My feed did it."

King said another reason he chose to be an organic farmer is that he does not like the idea of putting chemicals on his crops. Chemicals that eventually end up back in the food supply.

"Basically, to me it is a moral reason; it is the right thing to do," King said about farming without chemicals. He added that when he did use herbicides, the smell of them made him sick.

To supplement the nutritional value of the fields, King uses natural, direct mined phosphate, potash and lime. These fertilizers do not contain salt, but do have trace amounts of magnesium and iron, both beneficial to the soil.

Since King no longer raises cattle, his crops are sold on the open market. His biggest buyer is People's Warehouse of Ann Arbor. The produce is then sold to food cooperatives.

This year he planted wheat, corn, soybeans, alfalfa, oats and dark red kidney, black turtle, pinto and light red kidney beans on the 155 acres he farms.

"It gives me a better variety for the market," King said about growing the different types of beans.

King added there is a growing market for organic wheat, and he is hoping the Japanese soybean market will improve.

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson reported there were no injuries in a two-car accident Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

AUTO-DEER ACCIDENTS

Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Deputy Pat Woidan reported a vehicle driven by Tracy L. Midgough, 23, 6940 Deckerville Rd., Deford, struck a deer July 23 at 6:45 a.m. Midgough was northbound on Cemetery Road, one-half mile south of Severance Road when she struck the deer.

Deputy Richard Blakely reported Hallie Greenwood Jr., 51, 1003 Day Rd., Vassar, struck a deer July 24 at 6:00 a.m. Greenwood was eastbound on M-81, near Cedar Run Road, when the mishap occurred.

CLEAN BEANS - Without the use of chemicals to control weed growth, Lewis King has grown soybeans that are virtually free of weeds. King has cultivated the field three times this season. The field was planted with 280 pounds of 4-8-4 organic fertilizer per acre. Lime was broadcast on the field before spring planting.

Fostoria man killed in motorcycle accident

A 31-year-old Fostoria resident died Monday at 6:05 p.m. from injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident Sunday at 2:37 a.m.

The Tuscola County Sheriff's Department reported that Danny L. Johnson, Fostoria, died in Hurley

Medical Center, Flint, after his motorcycle struck the rear of a motorcycle driven by Louis D. Hicks, 37, Fostoria.

Both motorcycles were southbound on Fostoria Road, near Murphy Lake Road, when the accident happened.

Both men were taken to the Lapeer County Hospital by the Mayville Ambulance Service. Johnson was transferred to the Hurley Medical Center. Hicks was discharged from the Lapeer hospital Monday.

Jury finds pastor, wife guilty

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered for Edward A. Francis, 43, and his wife, Maude, 44, who were found guilty Thursday by a jury in Saginaw Circuit Court of larceny by conversion.

Francis is a former minister of the Mizpah Missionary Church of Cass City.

The case stems from the use of $26,000 given to Francis by Sharon Lorranger, who was a member of the church.

She claimed it was given for Francis to invest, but instead it was used to buy a computer system, piano, van and other items.

Garner K. Train, assistant Saginaw County prosecutor, also claimed that Francis promised to invest the money at 20 percent interest.

The defense claimed that the money was given to Francis to keep it out of a divorce action.

The prosecutor presented documents showing that the money was moved through various banks and investment companies and claimed that it was to make the money hard to trace.

Authorities at the Saginaw Circuit Court said that presentencing investigations normally take about six weeks.

The felony charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $2,500 fine.

A Cass City High School alumni meet pitting the 1985 boys' and girls' cross country teams has been arranged.

The race will be held Tuesday, Aug. 20, and a boys' and girls' team will each compete. The races will be for two miles.

Spokesmen for the race said that the race will start at 7 p.m. behind the high school and is expected to be fun run.

Plans call for the race to be an annual event.

TWO THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY - Jeff Reed (left) and his friend Jamie Guc had a good day of fishing Friday on the Cass River, landing a 16-inch smallmouth bass and an 11½-inch rock bass. The two 15-year-old Cass City youths were fishing near the railroad bridge, using night-crawlers.

Cass City Police arrest 2

Cass City Police Officer William Hartzell arrested a 23-year-old Cass City woman Friday morning on charges of operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

According to the report,

Officer Hartzell observed a vehicle driven by Laura A. Yax, 23, 4790 Hospital Dr., Apt. 6, Cass City, eastbound on Main Street at 2:20 a.m. The vehicle crossed the center line five times before Officer Hartzell stopped Yax on M-81, near Schwegler Road. She was taken to the Tuscola County Jail.

Officer Hartzell also arrested Anthony R. Tiernan, 19, 9243 Brucedale St., Clarkston, on a charge of operating a vehicle with a suspended driver's license. Officer Hartzell observed the Tiernan vehicle take off, squealing its tires, on Main Street, east of Seeger Street. After Hartzell stopped the vehicle he discovered that Tiernan had a suspended driver's license, and the vehicle's license plate had expired.

Tiernan was taken to the Tuscola County Jail. The arrest was made July 25 at 12:15 a.m.

Seek to expand jury lists

State jury boards will be able to call jurors from drivers' license lists along with voter registration lists under legislation recently approved by the state House of Representatives.

The legislation is an effort to expand the lists of potential jurors by using drivers' license and personal identification card lists along with the list of registered voters.

Voter registration lists take in only about 85 percent of the state's adult population.

In some cases, citizens refuse to register to vote or drop their registration after major elections, to avoid being called for jury duty.

Beginning in 1986, the Department of State would have to provide annual drivers' licenses and personal identification lists to county jury boards.

The Department of State would also have to send similar lists to any federal, state or local agency needing to select jurors.

Drivers' license lists are already used by the Detroit federal district court to draw jury lists. Some 15 other states also use drivers' license lists for jury lists.

PET BILL

Legislation was introduced in the state Senate recently to prohibit the sale of pets in pounds to research facilities.

The bill, introduced by Senators Gilbert DiNello (D-East Detroit) and Harry DeMaso (R-Battle Creek), would make it a misdemeanor to sell or transfer animals to a research facility, prohibit transfer of such animals across state lines, and require all Michigan pounds and shelters to establish "mandatory pet neutering deposit programs."

"It is time to bring an end to the exploitation and needless suffering of thousands of dogs and cats that end up in pounds and shelters and then are sold to institutions for research purposes," DiNello said.

David Wills, executive director of the Michigan Humane Society, said the legislation would prohibit animals raised as pets for research, but not those animals raised for scientific uses.

"We believe that society has a particular responsibility towards those domesticated dogs and cats we call our pets, a duty that cannot be shirked because of scientific demands," he said.

The bills would, however, allow the use of pets, with existing ailments, in accredited veterinary technology programs at Michigan colleges.

More men
in kitchen

What's cooking in kitchens? There have been changes in both attitudes and appliances, according to a recent survey of over 800 United States extension home economists polled on the subject. Ninety-five percent said men are becoming more interested in nutrition, cooking and kitchen appliances. Many indicated that in the next decade kitchen duties would be assumed equally by men, children and women.

When asked what would be the most useful appliances for consumers starting their own households, the extension home economists selected timesaving appliances most frequently. First was the microwave oven, chosen by 60 percent, followed by the food processor, 49 percent. Third, was the old kitchen standard, the hand mixer (40 percent), with the toaster oven chosen by 39 percent.

Some of today's appliances will, of course, have less use or be obsolete by the next decade. Seventy-five percent predict this will be the fate of the deep fryer; 63 percent say the traditional oven and 60 percent the stand mixer.

Schedule no-till tours in county

No-till planting of corn and soybeans is gaining popularity in Tuscola County. The acreage of no-till has increased from 2,000 acres in 1984 to over 3,000 acres in 1985. No-till is competitive with moldboard plowing and can be done on most of the soils in Tuscola County.

The Tuscola County Soil Conservation District is sponsoring three twilight tours of no-till corn and soybeans. The landowners of the tour fields will discuss their management inputs for their no-till and other no-till techniques will be reviewed by S.C.S. personnel.

The tours will begin at 7:00 p.m. July 31 in the Kingston area, Aug. 1 in the Gagetown area and Aug. 7 in the Watrousville area. Specific locations can be obtained by contacting the Tuscola Soil Conservation District at 852 S. Hooper Street, Caro, phone 673-8174.

HELP WANTED - Certified respiratory therapy technician

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

America's newspapers will be carrying the story and picture of Gerrit Baker of 350 S. Ocean, Boca Raton, in months to come. All because he and his wife, Margaret, were smart enough right after the war to salt away their extra cash in U.S. Savings Bonds.

The story of the Bakers was first told in this newspaper over a year ago. We recited how this couple bought $15,000 worth of Savings Bonds every year for 10 years, starting in 1948.

Their total investment of $150,000 today is worth $717,000. And at least half of the years from then until now were years of low interest rates. For instance, Savings Bonds and U.S. government bonds were yielding around 2.5 percent in the 1950's. CD's, when they first came out in the late 50's, paid 3 and 3.5 percent.

"No wonder compound interest has been called man's best friend," said Gerrit in the quarter-page ad the Treasury Department has drawn up to run for the Savings Bond program. The ad is being sent to all newspapers and magazines in the U.S.

Whatever happened to investment clubs? In the 60's they flourished like crabgrass. It was no coincidence that the stock market was just as vigorous in that decade. Everybody was a winner in those days.

Recently we came across one that started in 1981, with a group of canny investors in Indiana. We know one of the group, and he is a very sharp fellow. Unfortunately for the group, our friend came to Florida and had little to do with the club, except to make his regular ante. We think if he had been on hand, the results might have been better.

The report shows a total of 34 stocks totalling nearly a million dollars. Of the total, 12 are worth less than they cost the club, and 22 are worth more.

The assets are up 12 percent over cost. But this goes back for four years for some of the holdings. It's an average of 3 percent a year, about a third of what the market averages were doing. Dividends, we estimate, ran about 5 percent a year, same as the averages.

Since the group were a bunch of men of big incomes, income taxes would take half the dividends. Of the gain in market value, if the club liquidated, capital gains tax would take 20 percent of the 3 percent average annual increase.

To re-cap:
Average after-tax income per year:

Dividends	2.5%
Capital gains	2.4%
Total	4.9%

In the same period they could have held tax-exempt bonds and gotten over twice that yield after tax. And with considerably more safety.

But it wouldn't have been half as much fun, getting together every month with a bunch of congenial friends and mulling over which horse to bet on in the great stock market sweepstakes.

We're pleased to note the Wall Street Journal has discovered compound interest. In a recent issue the Journal included a handy table showing what money invested at different rates for different periods would amount to when invested. Here are excerpts:

Value of $1,000 invested at 8 percent and 12 percent for certain number of years:

Years	8%	12%
5	$1,469	$1,762
10	$2,158	$3,105
20	$4,661	$9,646
40	$21,724	$93,051

The figures are for annual compounding. Since even bonds pay interest twice a year, and some savings accounts compound daily, the results would be somewhat sweeter for more frequent compounding.

Note the amazing difference between a 12 percent return and an 8 percent return over the 40-year period -- $93,051 vs. $21,724. Four and a half times as much, and yet 12 percent rates are only half again as much as the 8 percent rates.

Note, too, what that last 20 years does: The investment of $1,000 at 12 percent jumps from $9,646 to $93,051 -- nearly 10 times.

One of the Rothschilds proclaimed compound interest the eighth wonder of the world.

REV. ZINA BENNETT has taken over the pastoral duties at the Owendale and Gagetown United Methodist Churches.

New Methodist pastor takes reins at churches

As a small boy growing up in the Detroit area, Zina Bennett made a commitment that he has stood beside throughout his life.

Zina Bennett, now Rev. Bennett explained that as a youngster he was a sickly child, constantly fighting a battle with illnesses and bad ear infections.

"I decided that if I was going to continue in life, I was going to give myself to the Lord," he said. Rev. Bennett made good on his promise. For the past 31 years he has devoted his life to serving God.

Rev. Bennett, who recently took over the pastoral duties of the Owendale and Gagetown United Methodist Churches, still carries a reminder of the medical problems that plagued him as a youth. Behind his right ear he wears a small hearing aid. He began wearing the hearing aid about two years ago, and feels his loss of hearing came from his childhood illnesses.

To Rev. Bennett, taking over the ministerial duties of more than one church is nothing new. Before coming to the Owendale-Gagetown area he was the minister of the Deckerville and Minden City United Methodist Churches.

His Sunday drive from Gagetown to Owendale, about six miles, is a lot easier than the 100 miles he drove each Sunday when serving as minister of four churches in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

"It was a wonderful experience, but it was kind of wearing," Rev. Bennett said about preaching at four Upper Peninsula churches. He added that while in the Upper Peninsula he never missed a Sunday sermon because of a snow storm. This winter's blizzards caused him to miss a few Sundays at the Minden City United Methodist Church.

Rev. Bennett has spent about 15 years of his 31-year ministerial career in the Thumb area. His first assignment began in 1954 at the Caseville United Methodist Church. He has also served in Harbor Beach.

"Although I am a city slicker from Detroit, I basically always have had small town churches," he jokingly added. He has also served as a minister at the United Methodist Church in South Rockwood, located between Detroit and Monroe.

Rev. Bennett received his bachelor of science degree from Florida Southern, a United Methodist Church college in Lakeland, Fla. He earned a bachelor of divinity degree from Southern Methodist University, Dallas, TX.

Rev. Bennett spoke highly of his predecessor, Rev. Myra Sparks, who left to accept a position in Hudson. "She had a very good ministry, and was well liked," Rev. Sparks served the Owendale-Gagetown United Methodist Churches for five years.

"I am basically concerned with people," Rev. Bennett said about his duties as a minister. "I look for the church and the message to be the foundation for the betterment of life. It gives wholeness to life."

Rev. Bennett's first Sunday service begins at 9:30 a.m. in Gagetown. His second service, in Owendale, starts at 11:00 a.m.

Rev. Bennett said that although he uses the same topic for each service, his wife, Betty Lou, has told him the two sermons are quite different.

Rev. Bennett, 60, said that if his health holds up he hopes to be a minister for 10 more years before retiring.

Coaches needed: Low pay, long hours guaranteed

What we have are people coaching less, but less new blood coming in," he said.

Dodge admitted if a young teacher were to be hired, he or she would be pressured into being a coach. Such is not the case for the veteran faculty members — many of whom may have been coaches previously.

"Age plays a factor," Dodge said. "Many may have been coaches in the past because they liked it, they wanted to. Now those same people have families and there's more to do nowadays. There's no time to coach."

With tenure comes complacency.

2. Money, money, money. Let's be honest. Most of us do things for the money. Coaching takes up time. And as the saying goes, "Time is money, money is time."

"Coaching salaries have not kept up with the time," Dodge said. "So much time is needed to be a coach. Everyone is so busy. The time involved plays a very important role in deciding not to be a coach."

As a longtime coach, Nurnberger knows the feeling.

"It can get to the point where it is not worth the time. It's not the money, that's for sure. If the problems get to you and you're fed up with it, you get. Many are doing just that," Nurnberger said.

How much are high school coaches paid? Kingston and USA determine coaches' salaries the way most schools in the state do. It's based on a percentage of the teacher's base pay.

For example: At Kingston, the varsity football head coach earns 10 percent of his base pay. On the other hand, the JV volleyball coach, in a supposedly lesser role, earns four percent of his salary. Laycock said. Translated, if both earn $20,000 a year as teacher, the volleyball coach earns $800 while the football coach earns $2,000.

Is it worth it to coach? By today's standards it may not be, judging from the Kingston situation.

3. The Little League Syndrome. All that parental hootin' and hollerin' done at T-ball fields across the land doesn't stop there. It seeps into high school athletics.

At the high school level some parents not only demand that Johnny or Suzy play, but the team must win also. Team doesn't win, Johnny doesn't look good.

Team doesn't win, and Johnny doesn't play, Johnny looks worse.

If that happens, the parents don't like it. Who gets the blame? The coaches.

"It starts in Little League because the people there go crazy. And they stay crazy," Nurnberger said. "The more you lose, the more problems you have. Eventually, the problems build up and drive you out."

Laycock said he is concerned about the situation. He added, however, he was in a similar predicament last summer.

Laycock made do last time by "finagling" but he says, currently he is in a spot — "a spot to take what we can get."

Funding sought for county youth programs

ty employee, she feels 12 youths and family members can be served at a time.

Bean explained that for a youth and his family to be placed in the counseling program, the youth must have problems that are beyond regular probation, and be a candidate for placement in programs that take the youth away from his parents. She added the cost of out-of-home placements is more expensive to the county.

Under the diversion program, the county would be eligible for up to $15,000 in state grant funds to provide counseling in an attempt to help mildly troubled youths from getting into further trouble. Expenses from operating the program are reimbursed by the state. About $5,000 of the grant can be used for mileage, secretarial services, counseling outside the court, training and testing.

Bean has requested that if the grant is approved, the worker spends one-half of the time working on the diversion program, and one-half working as a juvenile probation officer.

"If both these plans are implemented, we will be employing two workers, but the savings to the county should be significant," Bean said in her letter to the commissioners.

Bean must apply for the grants by Sept. 1.
