Special tax spurs work on bridges

Residents of Tuscola County can take comfort in Robert Wellington. "We knowing that a five-year, one-half mill increase to fund county-wide bridge projects has paid off.

You're not doing too bad, when compared to other counties," said Dave Abbott of the Michigan Department of Transportation. referring to the total number of bridges that are considered defective.

Abbott explained that when the last inspection of bridges was completed in October 1984, 39 percent of the county's 242 bridges were considered deficient. Abbott pointed out that as of Oct. 1, 1984, in Huron County 48 percent of the bridges are considered deficient. In Sanilac County 60 percent are deficient. Neither Huron or Sanilac County has a bridge mil-

Abbott said the bridges that are considered deficient are still safe, but they are not able to carry the full weight load they were originally designed for.

"Either they were designed for a horse and wagon, or they are deteriorating away," he said. "You should be perfectly safe as long as you are not in violation of the posted weight load limits.

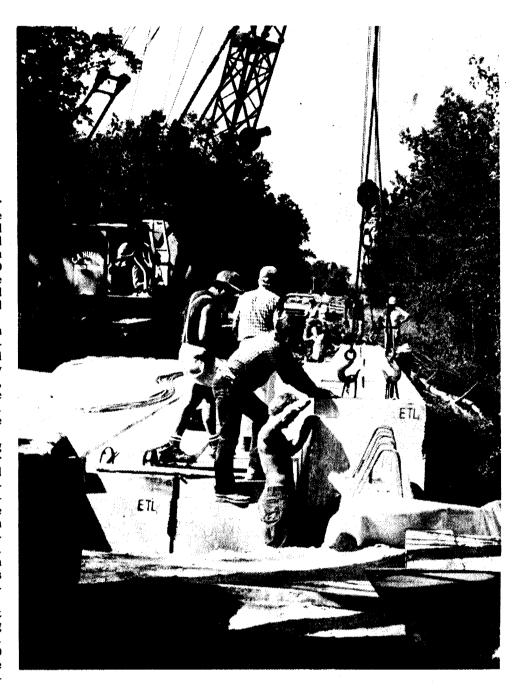

"Without the millage we would be in bad shape,' said Tuscola County Road would have a lot of closed bridges." He explained without the millage, which generates about $250,000 yearly for bridge work, the county and townships could not afford the needed bridge repairs.

Last year, 48 bridges in the county were either replaced or repaired at a total cost of $407,779. The county paid $219,934, and the state, through the "critical bridge paid $148,905. Township payments for the bridge work were $38,938.

To qualify for funding from the state, a county or other local governmental agency must submit requests to replace the existing structure. Last year the state received $23 million from the federal government for bridge repairs. The state added $5 million to the fund. Each request is looked at, and given a critical need factor.

MDOT Engineer Abbott explained there is a long waiting list for the funding. He estimated there are 500 to 600 requests waiting. The critical need factor is determined by the traffic flow, and importance to the community for school bus routes and emergency fire service. The bridges that have been determined to have the highest critical need factor are the first to Please turn to page 20.

FRIDAY CONSTRUCTION workers set 75 and 80-foot long concrete beams into place on the M-53 bridge over the North Branch of the Cass River. The beams, brought through Cass City on specially modified semi truck trailers, weighed 25 to 30 tons each. Completion of the bridge is expected in seven weeks, weather permitting.

Parent charges lack of concern at Deford school

A request for a student transfer led to a charge by a parent of a Deford School child, Mrs. Jay Reynolds, that the administration showed a lack of concern about students and there was chaos in the classroom.

She appeared before the Cass City School Board Monday evening to request a transfer of her son to Campbell Elementary School.

The board approved the transfer but voiced concern about the charges. It was the first complaint of that nature that any member of the board had heard about the Deford School Trustee Louis Horner said that Mrs. Reynolds should meet with Campbell Principal Jacqueline the and Freiburger superintendent to get specific information about the incidents that led to the charge. Trustee Ken Micklash said that he realized that Mrs. Reynolds' concerns were genuine, but pointed out if the conditions were as bad as painted, others with students at Deford would have voiced complaints previously.

Trustee Alan Hartwick said that he had four children that attended Deford School without any problems and with a good background academic when they entered high

The transfer of Mrs. Reynolds' son was one of three approved. Rvan Brinkman was transferred from Deford to Cass City and the daughter of Linda Krause to Caro Community Schools.

Transfers are becoming a headache for the school board. It started when the board approved the transfer from Deford to Cass City of two children of Fred Hicks.

That set the guidelines and the board transfers students on request providing there is no additional cost to the district.

Mrs. Freiburger said that the sizes of classes at Campbell are swelling and adding more students might not be the best for educating the children. Trustee Ben Hobart said that the board will have to sit down and look again at the policy and perhaps make some hard and fast rules concerning transfers. Supt. Donald Crouse said that if you turn down requests like this you have a dissatisfied family in the district.

Trustee Fred Matthews. a long opponent of transfers out of home school areas, said that the board should roll everything back so that students attend the school where they live.

It's sure that the question will be on the agenda of a future board meeting.

ment this year. That was the conclusion reached Monday night at the regular meeting of the school board at the high school after Supt. Donald Crouse told the board of a revised curriculum option.

The board previously had toved with the idea of asking for a mill for curriculum enrichment because the Citizens Advisory Committee had suggested that the district should do so. The board felt that an effort should be made to show the committee that its work was being carefully considered.

Crouse said that he felt it was just not the time to ask for extra funds and the board agreed with him after he outlined a plan to restore a full time coun-

Crouse told the board that the counselor could be added by increasing staff by just 3/10 of a person, an amount that the school can afford and stay within budget.

The superintendent feels that the change can be made because Marilyn Peters will adopt a new program for remedial reading.

Mrs. Peters said that her study indicates that better results may be achieved by working with the teachers instead of taking each student that needs reading help out of the regular

The district will lose the services of Bob Ponder, who worked one day a week with student problems. Add all the changes and it comes up to three-tenths of one person increase in staff.

While there will be a change in the way the remedial program is conducted in Campbell Elementary School, there will be no change in Deford or Evergreen Schools.

With the cut in staff, Mrs. Peters said, we can't start this new system at these schools this year, but if it works we could make changes next year.

Rambo dolls

Last Saturday in Chene Park I watched dozens of little kids laugh and play. And I said to myself: They wouldn't be so happy if they realized what a terrible future they face.

Just a few days earlier, a newspaper article had alerted me to the awful threat hanging over all our children. The dreaded words are still seared into my brain:

"Industry sources predicted that Coleco would have difficulty getting out many Rambo dolls in time for this Christmas shopping season.

Everyone knows about the movie "Rambo: First Blood Part II ." It is Sylvester Stallone's latest attempt to prove he isn't a big sissy even if his parents did name him Sylvester. If they'd named him Percy, there would be no one left alive in the world today except Percy Stallone.

The British Safety Council is trying to ban the ... Rambo movie, scheduled to open in Britain Aug. 30. James Tye, head of the council, called it "truly sickening...95 minutes of mindless violence. It is sadistic in the extreme. He (Rambo) speaks in a language that appeals to street-gang mentality.'

That will give you an idea how important Rambo and his semiautomatic gun are to America's children. Those British wimps don't know anything about blowing people away. The United States has more shooting deaths every Tuesday morning than England has in an entire year. Lacking the support of the National Rifle Association, London kids have to accidentally put holes in their heads while playing with Daddy's walking stick.

It is deeply ironic that I was at Chene Park when I began worrying about how our children could possibly survive the cultural hazards of a Rambo-less Christmas. The park is Mayor Young's newest jewel on the riverfront, a grassy amphitheater perfect for listening to music while watching boats glide by. It's peaceful. And I was there for "The Children's Afternoon Peace Festival" put on by Ford Motor Co. and the Detroit Recreation Department. That is enough peace to make even the weakest Rambo fan homesick for shredded stomachs and mangled limbs. Granddaughter Emily took me to the Chene Park festival. She is into peace, probably because she's only three years old and doesn't know any better. She clapped her hands for the silly adults who sang simplistic songs peace. She was thrilled when a young woman wearing a dumb "Peace" T-shirt painted a rainbow of peace on her cheek.

And Emily was so grateful when Ford Motor Co. gave her a red peace balloon, you'd have thought she'd received something important — semiautomatic like maybe.

Obviously, all the happy kids at Chene Park were like Emily - innocently unaware of the dismaying possibility that they may not receive Rambo dolls, guns or backpacks this Christmas.

It was just this month that Coleco Industries was awarded the license to market Rambo products. Coleco concedes there isn't enough time to get the full Rambo line into stores for this holiday season, but promises a Rambo doll, at Other industry least. sources claim there won't even be many dolls.

I don't mean to spread panic, but we're talking serious deprivation here. It is probably better that we don't tell the kids until they really have to know how cruel the world outside Chene Park can be.

We're talking about Christmas trees with no Rambo under them, or an unarmed Rambo with no

What does stand out now after a quarter of a century is the time that Auten took me out to eat. Back in those days, eating at a first class restaurant was rare, reserved for some momentous occasion. So, when we stopped for lunch at Joe Muer's and I could get what I wanted without looking at the right side of the menu I, of course, ordered steak. Never mind that Muer's was a well-known sea food restaurant. We killed the rest of the afternoon at Kresge's and then it was off to supper. Let's go to the London Chop House, Auten suggested.

Okay with me. The London Chop House didn't cut any more ice with me than the White Castle Restaurants. (There weren't any McDonald's then, can you believe it?)

We sauntered into the Chop House basement and were escorted to a table. Looking over the prices I thought that the price was a little high for steak, even for an obviously high class establishment.

But a chance for free steak wasn't to be passed up. Ever. I ordered one with potatoes, vegetables and I noticed the quizzical smile on my benefactor's lips but couldn't fathom the reason. Not until the bill came and I found out that everything I ordered was a la carte. I still remember distinctly that the potato was 50 cents extra.

I tried to explain to Meredith that I didn't know they charged that way.

He didn't seem to mind at all. In fact, when I learned the scandalous amount of the bill and it showed on my face, he appeared to be having the most fun he had all

Regular readers of this trivia will recall the saga of the stray rooster that wandered around the yards in south Cass

Well, I can now reveal where that rooster came from, but not where it went. It probably belonged to Roy Dean Nicol

The bird was a pet and enjoyed getting in the Nicol automobile. It was a stowaway when Nicol went to visit his daughter Cheryl Gee on Elizabeth Street. It stayed around the Gee house for a couple of days and then vanished and hasn't been seen since.

I was now ready (or so I thought), for the rigors of treacherous fishing Saginaw Bay.

Before I left, I threw two dozen worms off the end of the dock. Ever since Diane mistakenly opened a plastic can of worms that I stored in the refrigerator, I know there isn't any sense in trying to keep them. I've fattened a lot of fish this vear.

One fish dinner: $35, including worms, license, and knife. By now I could have treated Diane to a meal at the Red Lobster.

After two week ends of strong winds that whipped white caps on the bay. I decided it was time I took care of the paint job on the inside of my boat. One thing led to another, and now almost half finished (and flat broke), I've spent about $125.

Since I bought my boat about three years ago, I've caught six fish that were worth keeping. The cost of being a fisherman would pay for a week-end trip to the east coast for my meal, crab cakes.

Maybe next season I will try charter fishing.

Diabetes and diet - the cornerstone of treatment

rots for diabetic patients' blood-sugar levels?

After years of neglect, di- of plenty minished interest and even ignorance, there is a re- may should eat.

The result: new informaand strategies for controlling blood-glucose (sugar) levels and answering such practical questions as:

normal blood-sugar levels?

-Are complex carbohydrates like potatoes, rice and legumes better for diabetic patients than the simple sugars -- glucose, sucrose and fructose?

-What about high-fiber diets? Is brown rice better than white?

Diabetes and Diet --Cornerstone of Treatment

There are two major types of diabetes: Type I (also called insulin-dependent and formerly called juvenile-onset diabetes) and the much more common Type II (also referred to as non-insulin-dependent and previously called adultonset diabetes). Each requires a different dietary approach.

In Type I diabetes, the pancreas can't secrete adequate amounts of the hormone insulin, so patients must have insulin injections in order to live. In their diets, these individuals must attempt to balance carbohydrate intake with the amount of insulin injected.

In Type II diabetes, a big part of the problem is in the proper use of insulin. There is often a reduced response to insulin rather than insufficient production of the hormone. Insulin's main function is to help glucose cross from the bloodstream into the cells, where it fuels cell activity. In Type II diabetes, cells may be "blind" or insensitive to insulin's presence.

> A Weighty Issue --The Problem of Obesity

The excess fat in overweight people with Type II diabetes diminishes their cells' sensitivity to insulin. Thus, weight reduction alone often can correct the problems in Type II diabetes, improving sensitivity to insulin and even improving insulin production in some cases.

There are as many ideas for achieving weight reduction as there are letters of the alphabet, but limiting caloric intake is probably most important strategy. "crash" diets rarely work in the long run. Gradual reduction of daily calorie intake is more likely to succeed.

The Sucrose Question: To Limit or Avoid?

For many years, simple sugars such as glucose, sucrose and fructose were thought to be rapidly absorbed from the intestines into the bloodstream, causing a relatively large rush sugar into the bloodstream after a meal. On the other hand, it was believed that complex carbohydrates such as the starches found in such foods as rice, potatoes and legumes were digested and absorbed more slowly, resulting in smaller increases in blood sugar. Based on these ideas, diabetic patients were told to avoid simple sugars. But new experimental findings call this advice into question. Consuming sucrose may not necessarily be off limits in Type II diabetes.

When glucose, fructose, sucrose, potato starch and wheat starch of equal carbohydrate content were compared, fructose produced the smallest rush and rise of sugar levels in the blood. But dietary sucrose was no more active than the potato or wheat starch in aggravating high blood sugar. This type of evidence is shaking the foundation of the sucrose ban for diabetes.

REV. ELDRED KELLEY and congregation members of the Evangelical Free Church of Cass City held a ground breaking ceremony Sunday to kick off the construction of a new church building.

One of the world's most nutritious root crops is perhaps this country's best secret. National Wildlife magazine says groundnuts, about the size of golf balls, are as tasty as potatoes and have four times the protein. They were not always unwanted and forgotten, however. The Pilgrims might not have survived their first winter without these nutritious nuts. And now, after some 300 years, scientists are trying to make this wild vine vegetable a household word, that may one day compete with potatoes.

"It's doing excellent," Rev. Kelley said, about the church's growth. "God is blessing us...I am thankful for His leadership.

Sunday marked another day in the church's growth, when members gathered at a 7.5-acre site in Cass City's Northwood Estates subdivision for a ground breaking ceremony. Recently church members decided it was time to build a 6,100 square foot building to care for the needs of the congregation.

Immunizations

Act 299, Public Acts of 1975, authorized the Director of the Michigan Department of Public Health to specify, by regulation, the immunizations and tests required of all children enrolling in Michigan schools for the first time. This year the following immunizations are required: Diphtheria, Tetanua, Rubella, Pertussis, Measles, Poliomyelitia.

In addition, each new school entry must have had a vision screening test.

The parent or guardian who, because of religious or other convictions, does not want his child protected from these diseases must submit a signed-statement to that effect. As part of our school admission procedure for your child, we must enforce the law stated above. We must have the health record or a similar statement in order to admit your child officially to school.

If you have questions about this, please consult your local school, your doctor, or the Thumb District Health Depart-levels shown are eligible for free or reduced-price meals. Application forms are being sent to all homes with a letter to parents or guardians. To apply for free or reduced-price meals, households should fill out the form and return it to the school. Additional copies of the application form are available at the principal's office in each school. Households should answer all questions on the form. Wellington said the county has received more state and federal money from the critical bridge fund than other counties in the area.

'We've done real well, and it is because of advanced planning," Wellington said. He explained because of the additional funds from the bridge millage levy, whenever money from the critical bridge fund is available, the county has enough funds to pay their required 10 percent of the construction. The county is also required to pay for the total cost of engineering the project.

'We've been real fortunate over the years," Wellington added. "Next year we are hoping for 10 or 12 concrete bridges from that

Last year the Lion's share of the state's $148.905 for bridge repair was spent on replacing a bridge in Akron Township over the Sellars Drain. The county's share of the $105,675 project, on Waterman Road, was $16,232. The state paid $82,424.

As an example of total costs for installing a new bridge, the estimated cost of replacing the Cemetery Road bridge over the Cass River is over $300,000.

Wellington said this year the county is putting in mostly metal culverts because they are cheaper than concrete bridges. The Road Commission has a policy that if the bridge is four feet wide, or less, they pay the entire cost. If the bridge is over four feet wide, the township must pay 25 percent, up to $2,000, for the total cost for re- Engineer-Manager Jack pays four percent. To replacement or repair to the

"We want them to pay something," Wellington said about the costs to the townships. "That way we know they really want to replace the bridge.'

When the October 1984 study was completed, 95 of Tuscola County's bridges were considered deficient. Wellington said at the start of this year he estimated about 50 bridges in the county needed to be repaired or replaced. This year 42 bridges will be taken off the deficient list, but this year's inspection will turn up more deficient bridges. He estimated about 30 bridges will be listed as deficient by the end of the year.

Each year the county hires an independent firm to inspect the bridges. Wellington explained the engineer analyzes the structure to determine if the bridge's support strength has depreciated. He added they use an outside firm so the inspector is not pressured by individuals to put in a new bridge where it isn't needed. "What you want is an honest appraisal," Wellington said

Next year will be the last year of the five-year onehalf mill bridge levy.

"I can't say we are going to take care of all the bridges, but at the end of this millage we are going to be in pretty good shape," Wellington explained.

The county received $180,316 from the state to replace the Deckerville Road bridge over the Black River, and $167,645 to replace the Aitken Road bridge over the Elk River. Twelve other bridges, with a 20-foot or larger span, are being replaced this year with township and road commission funds. Since 1970 the county has replaced 67 bridges with a 20-foot or larger span.

'We're making progress on it, but it is going slow," Kineman said, about repairing bridges throughout the county. "It would be faster if we had a bridge fund." A 0.75-mill bridge fund request was rejected by

Sanilac voters in 1982. For culvert replacement, the county pays one-third of the cost, and the township pays the remaining two-thirds. Kineman explained Argyle Township passed a millage increase so they could afford to replace seven major culverts

Kineman added that by the end of the year, the county will have 36 bridges with restricted weights, and four that are closed to traffic. These 40 bridges have a 20-foot span. Critical bridge funding has been applied for to replace 14 of these with concrete bridges. The rest of the bridges will be removed,

stock By Bill Myers

Taking

A fellow golfer was telling tales about the stock

"Occidental Petroleum was around 5. Long time that was." Tommy. "But I had a hunch it might amount to something. So I ordered a big batch of the stuff at 4 3/4. Figured I'd buy it a quarter under the market.

"Well, it got down to 4 7/8, and it never did hit 4 3/4. And I never bought it. Later it hit 40.

"If I hadn't been after that quarter point, I could have bought it at 5, and watched my money multiply by 8 times — 5 to 40.

'There was another stock, that I had bought cheap, like 25, and saw it go to 59. I put in a sell order at 60. Wouldn't you know — it got to 591/2 and never did hit 60! I hung onto it, and it went down to 15. I kept thinking it could get back up there, you know.

This script has played in every hearth in America. You try to buy cheaper than the market. You try to sell a little higher than the market. When you don't, and the stock goes down, you hang on, figuring it's going back up there. Why not? It was there once.

There was a canny stock broker in Detroit, George "Doc" Dillman. Ran the office of Harriman Ripley. We were talking about this subject one day of otherthan-market orders.

'Look Bill," said Doc. "Why do you want to buy a particular stock in the first place? Because you think it's going to be worth more some day. If you're expecting it to get cheaper, then why would you want it?

Same when you decide to sell something. If you're expecting it to go higher than the current market price, then why sell it? I tell you, I've seen more people miss trades because they went after that extra quarter or eighth of a point."

The third point my golfing companion recited was having a stock that went down, from 60 to 15, and Only one insurance com- from $4,233 to $5,929.17. Cass City at an interest rate waiting for it to come back, just because it was 60 once. There was no more chance for that stock to rebound from 15 to 60 than there was of any other stock you can name to multiply its price by 4. The past history doesn't mean any-

I've told the story about the widow who held onto a bundle of Consumers Power, watched it drop to 5 and 6, but held onto it, "because I bought it at 36." This was the tragedy of a company harrassed by a vicious attorney general of Michigan, and a mischievous lot of anti-nuclear power plant people. Other companies, though, that had no particular problems like this have been hit, too, over the years. Some real Eastman Kodak, Avon Products. Even GM, which once was 114 - now 40 percent less than that.

"Cut your losses short." is one of the oldest adages around. But people hate do it. They hate to admit their guess on a stock turned out wrong. If they keep it, then it's only a paper loss.

Paper loss, indeed! What other kind is there in the security market? Everything you own besides your house and car and dog and some clothes is on paper-If you paid 80 for GM and no it's 65, then you've had loss of 15 points, whether you sell it or not. The terms are "realized" and "unrealized." But it's a loss either way.

There's an advantage to realizing such a loss. Even though you have no capital gains in that year to offset the loss against, you can still take $3,000 in loss against regular income.

Take the lady who still has Consumers Power, Say she had 100 bought at 36, and after much agonizing, sells it at 6. Loss: $3,000.

Consumers is not allowed to pay dividends for some years ahead under a pact forced on it by Michigan's attorney general, so the lady is not forgoing any future income.

The $3,000 deducted from her other income will save her $1,000 in income tax this year. And she'll have $600 salvage from the 100 shares of the stock.

My suggestion, which I am sure will fall on deaf ears, would be to take the $600 plus the $1,000 tax saving and buy some 10-year zero-coupon municip bonds. There will be no tax to pay on these, not during the 10 years, nor when they come due in 1995. The $1,600 worth of zerocoupons bought now will amount to $5,000 in 10 years.

To match that, Consumers would have risen from 6 to a price of 50. That would be a resurrection unmatched in 2,000 years.

Fly underwater

Puffins do it differently. Unlike other diving birds which propel themselves through the water by kicking their webbed feet, pu fins use their wings to actually fly underwater. After converting from a "plane" to a "submarine," puffins can move rapidly enough to catch fast-moving fish, such as herring.

Resignations were accepted from Roland Pakonen, assistant high school thing. principal, Thomas Smith, guidance intermediate counselor, and tentatively from Gretchen Watkins, high school English and publications.

Dick Partlo was hired to replace Smith and Nancy Folk will replace Watkins when her resignation becomes official.

The board approved a 50 cents per hour raise for community education teachers. The boost will give these teachers $11.75 per hour. The wage includes a 25 cents per hour bonus if 80 percent of students enrolled are in class through the official enrollment date.

A discussion about adopting goals for the school as suggested by the citizens' advisory committee was tabled for further study.

The board wants to check them against the present Trustee Louis Horner said that the goals when adopted should be studied and checked to see if the school was doing whatever it can to achieve

For that reason, we should be very certain that the goals we adopt are the ones we want, he said.

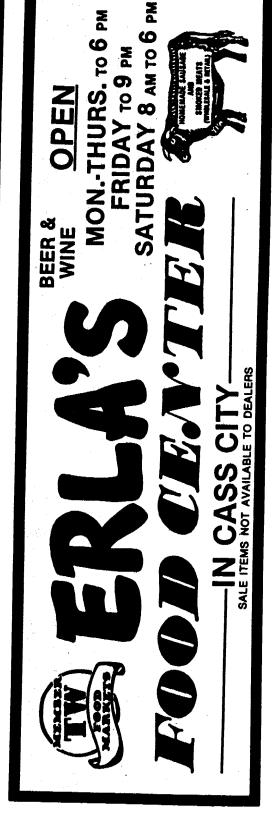

There will be a change in math for ninth graders. Instead of consumer math the board approved new texts that could be used as an introduction to algebra. Thirty new texts will cost the school $720.
