You buy what you can ting he is looking into policies with a lower liability coverage. Reid does not have any liability suits filed against him, which earns ance companies. He plans on keeping it that way.

"We don't serve drunks in here," Reid said. "Other places will serve them, but we don't. I am not going to take that chance... I know we lose quite a few (customers) each week... I am not going to serve them, so they go someplace else."

Reid explained his bar has live entertainment, which adds to the cost of the insurance policy. Bars in larger cities are cutting back on how many nights of entertainment, eliminating it all together, or closing.

"It seems like every week I get a call from a band saying they need a job ... The bar they were playing at just closed," Reid said.

Bar owners throughout the state are working through the Michigan Licensed Beverage Association to convince legislators to put a $100,000 cap on the amount a person can sue a bar owner for, which they hope will reduce their insurance costs.

"Everybody today is lawsuit conscious," said Clare Comment, owner of the Charmont and two other bowling alley bars in the area. "That's the way the world is, and it shouldn't be that way."

Comment feels it will take four or five years before legislators can change the current system.

"I've seen it like this before," said Comment, a 25year veteran of the travern business. "I've seen premiums go up, and then come back down."

"Insurance costs have forced a lot of bars to go without the insurance, which is not a safe situation," said Chuck Hadden of the Michigan Licensed Beverage Association. Hadden is the director of association's Techniques of Alcohol Management course, which teaches bar owners and employees how to recognize if a person has had too much to drink . Walsh feels the legislators should pass a law that will make each person who drinks responsible for their actions.

'We're worried about it,' she said about a possible law suit, adding they are more alert about serving an intoxicated person than other places. "We're trying to be careful."

During the last two years in Tuscola County five cases have been filed in Circuit Court against bar owners. On each of the cases the amount specified is in excess of $10,000.

LaPonsie said another feature of the vacuum is a 12-inch diameter flexible hose that will allow a village employee to suck leaves from hard to reach places.

LaPonsie said he has looked at other types of leaf vacuums, including a cheaper model that hooks onto the front end of a dump truck. He feels the unit wasn't as safe to operate as the rear end model. LaPonsie explained he has talked to other village superintendents that use the front end loader, and they told him the dump truck drivers complain they sometimes lose sight of the man operating the vacuum hose. Village superintendents from neighboring communities told LaPonsie they are "very happy" with the trailer model that Cass City purchased.

LaPonsie said when the leaves start to fall, the village will announce a starting date when residents are to begin raking leaves into the gutter. Each morning village crews will look over the streets, and decide what areas need vacuuming.

Popcorn slob

By Jim Fitzgerald

I have a dream. It begins dismayingly when my wife and I get lost on the way home from a movie. It ends happily when I save her from starving to death and she is forced to apologize for calling me a big slob.

The part about getting lost is, I must admit, slightly surreal. It isn't likely that we'd be marooned on the freeway, cut off from all civilization, without a fast-food restaurant within reasonable walking distance. But that's what dreams are for — to give slob husbands a supreme satisfaction unavailable in real life.

In real life, my wife says she can't believe the way I eat popcorn at the movies. She says I shouldn't do it in front of the grandchildren. She says all polite people eat popcorn the way she does: one kernel at a time, held between the thumb out" the raceway. and one finger and so deftly inserted into her mouth that people watching don't even

The subject came up again last week when we took our 11-year-old grandson John to see "Fright Night." Usually, John's visits to the big city are arranged around baseball games, but somehow that didn't seem important this summer, and John didn't mind that the Tigers were losing in Cleveland while he was watching movies in Detroit.

Incidentally, earlier in the summer, Hazel Park Raceway frequently ran newspaper ads showing a baseball player, with the headline: "Watch the Ti-gers Tonight." The idea was that no one would come out to watch the horses run if they couldn't watch the Tigers play at the same time, on "300 TVs through-

In September, Tiger stadium probably will advertise horse racing during every game, with patrons allowed to bet on which horse is fast enough to run from second to third on a ground ball to shortstop without being lassoed by Sparky Anderson.

But back to popcorn. I eat it by taking the largest handful possible and cramming it into my mouth. Naturally, a few kernels fall by the wayside. For me, this is an acceptable hazard, much like risking buttered-earlobe disease when eating corn on the cob. For my wife, it is unacceptable slobbiness and grounds for shame.

"Fright Night" is a hoot of a movie, but plenty scary, especially for grandchildren. At one point, John went to the john (neither likes to be called Jack) and didn't come back. My wife dispatched me to give John courage enough to watch a vampire suck on Roddy McDowell, which I did. But when I stood up, misbegotten popcorn cascaded off my lap and onto the floor like a rockslide, and the people sitting in front of us hunched their shoulders.

'You big slob, that is really embarrassing," my wife hissed. I didn't say a word, but I dreamed my dream..

We have been marooned on the freeway for several days, and my wife says she will die if she doesn't get something to eat. I don't say the same thing because I may be a slob, but I hate cliches. However, I remember something crucial that I've often noticed while undressing. All the popcorn that misses my mouth doesn't fall in my lap.

It falls in my shirt pocket. So I ask my starving wife if , she wants some popcorn; she protests that we don't have any, and I smile worldly, reach casually into my pocket and save her pocket popcorn keeps her alive until the U.S. Cavalry comes over the freeway to put up a "Lane Closed" sign. We live happily ever after, and every day I lovingly remind my wife: "You'd be dead if you hadn't married a slob."

Because Labor Day falls on Monday, the Chronicle will be printed on Wednesday instead of Tuesday. There will be no changes in deadlines with the exception of classified advertising, which will be accepted Tuesday. The normal publishing date will, of course, be resumed next week.

If you figure on heading north for the holiday, be forewarned. Michigan State Police will spend an additional 3,700 hours on patrol over the week end.

Authorities say that the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit and safety belt law will be enforced.

If the speed limit is enforced, it will be a change. The police haven't been stopping cars on the expressway that are traveling at 65 this summer.

Perhaps that's because many of them are cruising at 70 or more and the police are settling for the best of the worst.

While it's no secret that hospital usage has declined in Cass City and in the nation, there is still plenty of interest in the facility.

For the first time in many a moon the parking lot was filled, with cars parked across the street, as visitors swarmed in Sunday for the festivities celebrating Hills and Dales Hospital's 25th anniversary.

Mrs. Jennie Deneen has been reporting the Owen-Gage Senior Citizens Club news for a year now.

She's the club secretary and she said that she wasn't supposed to serve two terms, but was drafted by members for the job anyway. That's not surprising to the Chronicle staff. Mrs. Deneen has been a careful, conscientious reporter of news. People like that are in demand. It's also reporters like Mrs. Deneen that make life a little easier for the paper and enable us to get less than earth shaking news in the paper.

We don't wish her any bad luck, but it would be nice for us if the club drafted her again next year... and the next, and are paid more doesn't mean that the education of the children is better. A story appeared in the daily papers recently saying that Connecticut has salaries among the lowest in the nation, averaging a little over $13,000 yearly, yet its students rank near the top in student tests.

A recent poll of teachers indicated that 75 percent would not recommend the profession to others, saying they were underpaid and bogged down by excessive paperwork.

There's a feeling in the public mind that teachers have a soft job. Advocates point to the hours and the short workday as evidence.

Teachers say that when school's out they work at home and really put in long hours. It's safe to say that some do, some don't. It's sure that handling a it comes right, back up again," Mrs. Hutchinson said about Alaska's famous 24-hour summer sunshine. At 3:30 a.m. the sun finally went down, but at 4:30 a.m. it was bright again. "At no time was it really dark. It was like our twilight."

tourists started a baseball game at 11:00 p.m., without artificial light. At 3:00 a.m. Mrs. McComb took pictures of Alaskan wild flowers, without a flash.

The Hutchinsons spent their vacation in a pick-up camper. The McCombs took their van. Mr. McComb said the van did not have enough room for him to stand up inside, which was uncomfortable. "I had cabin fever real bad," Mrs. McComb said, about sleeping and traveling in the van. The four adventurers were joined by former Cass City residents Leb and Hazel Pomeroy, now of Florida.

They began their vacation by first driving to Prince Rupert, British Columbia, where they boarded a 408-foot long cruise ship for Haines, Alaska. The ship took the passengers, and about 120 vehicles on a 32hour, 580-mile trip through the well-known Inside Passage. The Inside Passage is a string of American is-lands south of the Alaskan mainland. At one point of the tour, called the "narrows," the ship has to time its passage so it goes through at high tide, when the water is deeper and the channel is wider, leaving just enough space for the boat.

Mr. Hutchinson said the boat trip, including sleeping quarters and meals. cost $502, but it saved them a lot of driving. It also gave them the opportunity to see killer and hump-back whales, porpoises and sal-

Mr. McComb and Mr. Hutchinson both felt Mt. McKinley was one of the most impressive sights on the trip. They explained the entire mountain range is visible only about 30 percent of the time. The rest of the time it is covered with clouds or fog.

"A fellow right across the campgrounds had been waiting for two weeks to see it," Mr. McComb said. On the second day in the park a neighbor came over and woke them up early in the morning. For the first time in more than two weeks the entire mountain was visi-

Mr. McComb, a retired carpenter, said there was a lot of new home construction in Alaska, but prices were very high. He saw an advertisement for a fiveroom house with an asking price of $180,000.

Mr. Hutchinson was told the average age of people living in Juneau, the capital city with a population of 17.100, is 29 years. "It takes a young person, an aggressive person, to stay up there," he added.

Mr. Hutchinson said 90 percent of the vehicles they saw were campers and motor homes. "There were a lot of tourists." During their stay they went out fishing a few times, but

Otherwise When I first came to Cass when I lost sight of the City I had to learn a lot of flashing light on the fire things about the area, like truck I would have had to stop and ask directions. One thing that has always amazed me about people, including Cass Cityans, is their curiosity with auto accidents. Driving to the scene seems like a parade. Every time the fire engine goes out I have to pass about 20 cars before I finally have a chance to see the red or green trucks. If I don't get to "the action" before the thrill seekers arrive I am forced to park about a mile away and run to the scene.

At a recent accident, Sheriff's Department Deputies had to tell a group of teenagers to leave the area three different times. They kept walking in from different directions, just wanting to get a look at "the action." At 3:00 a.m. I would be willing to give any of them my press pass and a camera. I would rather be home in bed.

When I am in the private world, any place 15 miles outside of Cass City, I would never go out of my way to see "the action." I learned my lesson the hard way, while I was still in college.

This stop at the Flanagan farm is where the "Dry Edible Bean Board" has variety trials. The public will see the latest varieties and hear Greg Varner, Re-

The Sanilac County Dry search Director, explain about them.

The group will move to the John Parrent and Sons farm pond for the potluck picnic and all farmers are encouraged to bring a dish to pass. Hot dogs and drink will be furnished.

All growers and interested individuals are invited to attend this tour and picnic.

(rare Kaposi's sarcoma). Most evidence points to one family of viruses as the cause of AIDS. Because these viruses reverse the usual genetic process, they are referred to as retroviruses. Their genetic information is coded into RNA (a nucleic acid), which they use to make viral DNA within infected cells. By joining this DNA with that of host cells, retroviruses are able insidiously to alter the cells' nor-

French researchers have detected evidence of LAV (lymphadenpathy - associated virus) in 90 percent of patients tested who have the earliest stages of AIDS, called pre-AIDS disease. A U.S. research team, headed by Robert C. Gallo, M.D., of the National Institute in Bethesda, Md., has found a similar virus, HTL-III (human T-cell lymphotropic virus) in an equally high proportion of pre-

AIDS disease patients. Whether these two viruses are identical was, for some time, a critical question. Recent data show, according to Dr. Gallo, that they are actually variants of the same virus -- the prime suspect in AIDS.

The U.S. research team also has developed a test that can detect HTLV-III antibodies in blood samples, and the test is now approved for use. This is a crucial breakthrough because most transmission of AIDS by means of transfusions with virus-contaminated blood may be eliminated when this test becomes widely available. The test detects the presence of antibodies against the AIDS virus -- a sign that one has been exposed to AIDS. It is not a diagnostic test for the disease, as many who have the antibodies never develop

While many experts believe that HTLV-III and its variants cause AIDS, some scientists point out that other viruses, such as CMV (cytomegalovirus) and EBV (Epstein-Barr virus), also are implicated in the development of the disease.

School questions hookup fees

Gagetown — O-G discuss sewer costs

At a special Thursday night meeting of the Gagetown Village Council, trustees explained to representatives of the Owen-Gage School board their reasons for charging the district $13,000 more than Owendale is, for hookups to the sewer system.

Both Gagetown and Owendale are currently putting in new sewer systems and lagoons. The school district's charge for the Owendale hookup is about $15,000, while Gagetown is charging the district $28,010. The meeting between the village and the school district was requested at the Aug. 12 last year would have come school board meeting. to $229.50 for three

"I need some rationale on the $28,000 (hookup charge). It seems substantially higher to me than maybe it ought to be," said Owen-Gage Superintendent Ronald Erickson. "The reason I say that is because we are getting a $15,000 nab at Owendale.

"In Owendale your usage fee is $400 a month," said Gagetown Village President William Downing. "Your usage fee is quite a bit more than in Gagetown. You're talking $400 a month (in Owendale). Your highest (Gagetown) usage for

New TV station to be available to area viewers

Michigan's Thumb will be receiving public television following the award of a $315,000 federal grant to WUCM-Channel 19 at Delta College, according to Congressman Bob Traxler (D-Bay City) and Channel 19 General Manager William Ballard.

The federal grant, along with a $115,000 match from Delta College, will allow for the extension of Channel 19's noncommercial signal to Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola Counties, providing Channel 19 service to an additional 75,000 people in Mid-Michigan.

Channel 19's signal will be extended to the Thumb by the activation of a repeater station, which involves the construction of a transmitter and tower in the Bad

Axe area. Thumb residents will be able to receive Channel 19 programming on Channel 35 on their UHF

"For a long time we have wanted to extend our programming to our friends and supporters in the Thumb," said Ballard. "Our long term objective has been to improve our signal and provide the services of Delta College and Channel 19."

The grant has been awarded under the Public Telecommunications Facilities Program of the National Telecommunica-Information Administration, which is part of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Completion of the repeater station is expected in 24 months, according to the Department of Commerce.

A few game fish found

DNR surveys Cass River fishing sites

A Department of Natural Resources survey of the Cass River is proving what experienced area fishermen already know. While there are a few game fish, pike and small mouth bass in the river, it is home for a large number of "trash fish" such as carp, suckers and red horse.

If the survey proves the river is lacking in game fish, the DNR may kill off areas of the river, and restock with game fish.

According to Vern Nurenberg, a DNR fisheries biologist from the Imlay City post, the Cemetery Road bridge, south of Cass City, is one of the better "fishing holes" in the river. He explained that when the area was treated with a chemical that deprives the fish's gills of oxygen, they found five or six legal sized small mouth bass in the area.

The Cemetery Road site was one of nine the DNR has surveyed so far. Before the project is complete they will survey 14 sites along the Cass River. The surveys began last week in Sanilac County, where the north branch of Cass River

At each site a five-man DNR crew surveys a 700foot long area of the river. The width and depth of the river is measured, and the cubic feet of water flow is calculated to determine how much rotenone, a chemical that deprives the fish of oxygen, is needed.

Before the rotenone is put into the river, a green dye is first added to tell crews where the chemical is in the water. At the end of the 700foot area, a net is stretched across the river, trapping all the fish. On the other side of the net, DNR workers spray the rotenone treated water with potassium permanganate, a purple colored chemical survey area.

After the treatment is finished, DNR workers gather up all of the fish, count the number of game fish, and weigh the "trash fish." At a site near the Deckerville Road crossing of the Cass River DNR workers harvested over 200 pounds of carp, suckers, red horse, and other bottom feeders, but found only four or five legal size small mouth bass and pike.

Nurenberg explained a river is capable of supporting only so many fish, and the survey will determine if it should be restocked. While the walleye may not have survived, the 2,700 brown trout planted in

Derfiny completes 133-mile "around Thumb" bike ride

It wasn't exactly an added. If he makes the trip "around the world in 80 days" adventure for Dan Derfiny, but a two-day 133 mile trip around the "tip of the Thumb" was a good bicycle ride for the Cass City resident.

"It was something I from the Port Austin area wanted to do," Derfiny, 35, to Forestville, and back acsaid about the two-day trip. ross the Bay City-He added that when he left Forestville Road. On the first day he rode about 60 miles, to Port Austin where he spent the first night in his sleeping bag. While riding on the first day he noticed that from Sebewaing to east of Port Austin the road has a gradual uphill climb, something he had never realized when he drove the road in a car. "It's not bad, but you can notice it on a bike," Derfiny

"For the most part the motorists were pretty courteous," he said about meeting cars on the road. A few times he had to pull off the road to avoid a collision. The worst part of the ride, for cars, was from M-53 to Cemetery Road, where he felt detouring motorists were trying to make up for lost time because of the detour.

What do you do when the players are small and inexperienced? You look for quickness. We do have that, Schelke says. Whether or not this will be enough to compete in the Thumb B Association remains to be seen. Certainly the Hawks could use the skills of several of the players lost through graduation.

There were 13 lettermen that graduated, including several outstanding players. Brian Beecher was a three-year veteran at quarterback and Joe Viney was Cass City's best all

Some rugged linemen also have graduated. Todd Sweeney was an all conference guard and Rod Anker earned all conference status at linebacker. Scott Anker will be missed at center. Among the graduates are Strickland, 15, and Dale Belanger, 15, all of Marlette, and Steve Wright, 14, of Cass City recently returned from a northern backpack trip to Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore in Michigan's upper peninsula.

Bob Sims, youth director at Lamotte Missionary Church, north of Marlette, was in charge of the trip. Sims said the youths asked for rugged and re-mote campsites at Munising and found it.

The group found not only the camping to be rugged, land and Fuller were especially fascinated by the small integrated caves which they explored the first evening of their outing after setting up camp. The caves were formed by the action of weather and the waves of Lake Superior just above water level at the base of 150 to 200 foot sheer

Joslyn sentences Cass City man to county jail

In Tuscola County Circuit stood mute before Judge Court action Aug. 19, Judge Patrick Joslyn sentenced a 20-year-old Cass City man to 90 days in the county jail on an attempted larceny charge

Judge Joslyn also placed Randy D. Bosley, 6217 Bay City-Forestville Road, on two years' probation for his involvement in the Sept. 20, 1983, theft of $50 worth of quarters from the Robert Bassett residence, 4434 Woodland Ave., Cass City.

Bosley was originally charged with breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny. He pleaded guilty to the attempted lar-ceny charge July 15. Bosley was given credit for 45 days already served. He was also ordered to pay a $200 fine and $500 court costs.

In other Circuit Court action, Judge Joslyn sentenced Martin M. Cooper, 17, 138 S. Sherman St., Vassar, to a one-year delayed jail sentence for a charge of attempted larceny.

Cooper was originally charged with breaking and entering of an occupied dwelling with intent to commit larceny. The charge stems from the July 13 breaking and entering of the Ann Hadden residence, 5964 Doubois Rd., Vassar.

In addition to the delayed jail sentence, Cooper was ordered to pay $200 court costs. Allen G. Putman, 20, 632

County agrees to $200,000 out of court settlement

Richard Mayville, has settled out of court for $200,000 from the Tuscola County Road Commission in compensation for discrimination while he worked for the commis-

In Bay City Federal Court Griffis had been awarded a total of $400,000 by a jury for being let go for voicing concerns to the Commission.

He was laid off Aug. 27 1981. He previously had charged misuse of county equipment and parties during work hours.

The complaint brought no action and his wife also voiced the same concerns to a member of the Commission. Fifteen days later he was discharged because of lack of work.

The settlement calls for the Road Commission to pay $150,000 cash at once

The jury had awarded Griffis $50,000 in compensatory damages from Engineer Robert Wellington, but the settlement relieves him of the obligation.

Forrest Walpole, attorney, said that Griffis settled to receive payment now rather than wait until 1988 or 1989 for final determination by the court.

By Bill Myers

First of two articles

Pete, our friend from Toronto, was not so jolly on his last visit at our place. He had just had a call from his insurance agent before he left.

"Know what they told me our premium would be on our rental car operation?" he asked. "A million dollars for next year!" What did it used to be?"

"Two hundred and seventy-five thousand. We could stand that--but there is only one thing I can do now--sell out." Who would want to buy," I asked. Some chain that could take over our cars and already had a long-term policy at the old rates."

Pete maybe has an out as he confronts an insurance rate crisis that is hitting both United States and Canada. But others won't be so fortunate as they try to escape ruin. The famous old Park Place hotel in Traverse City, Mich., with two fine dining rooms and a popular bar, has quit serving liquor. Not for lack of business in this tourist mecca, but because of insurance rates. In Michigan, as in most states, if you've had a drink in a bar and get in an accident after leaving the place, then the bar is liable. Fair or not, that's the law, and juries favor the victims, and the bar pays the shot, innocent though it may have been. At the general hospital in my home town of Lapeer, there was a rule that doctors must carry $1 million in liability insurance, or they couldn't be on the staff. The hospital has had to drop the requirement. Several doctors can't get insurance at all, except at premiums over $100,000 a year. New doctors just don't make that much money in a small town. Look at the figures on medical malpractice awards -- averages the past six years:

Average award 404,000 850,000 1981 962,000 888,000 954,000

A doctor, getting on in years, and wanting to sell his practice, would be hard put to find a buyer who faced a yearly premium of $100,000 to cover himself against damage suits.

On Mackinac Island, where there are no cars, there are many horse liveries, where you can rent a horse to ride or to pull a buggy. The owners say this may be their last year, their new insurance rates are going up so high.

it difficult to attract directors from outside their companies. Candidates find the exposure to damage suits too risky. Manufacturers all over have been beset by "product liability" lawsuits that stem from something as trivial as a label that might be high school counselor interpreted wrongly. Did Wayne Dillon at 872-2148.

the Drano can warn you positively not to drink the stuff? Was the warning not to put your foot in the lawn mower when you started it, printed in big enough letters?

If you listen to Ralp. Nader, it's the fault of the greedy insurance companies, conniving to rape the public, whilst they fill their money bags with obscene profits from high premiums.

I've been around the insurance industry for some 30 years in various capacities. I can tell you they're just as greedy a you and I. Their love of money, though, makes them foolishly competitive. The whole industry is obsessed with building volume by cutting rates, or taking crazy risks. These cycles of cut-throat prices go on for a few years, and with each cycle some of the weaker companies go belly-up. The strong su vive and make money for a while, and then the ratecutting years start up again. Just when canny investors thought they had the cycles timed, and bought in at the low point, a funny thing happened: The curve went down but it didn't come up. The year 1981 according to history should have marked the end of the usual down cycle of three years. Instead, losses went from a factor of 100 in 1981 to 160 in 1982, to 210 in 1982 and 340 in 1984.

Next week we'll have actual figures for you, compiled by the firm of A M Best & Co., the unquestioned authority in the insurance industry. See for yourself whether Ralp. Nader knows what he is talking about when he attacks the industry for raising its rates.
