Firm seeks to tie into tie nabbers

In hopes of stopping the theft of railroad ties from the old Grand Trunk railroad tracks, the salvage company removing the ties and track is offering a $50 reward for information about anyone stealing the large wooden crossties.

Wilbert Burton, Superintendent for Hudson Crossties and Salvage Inc., Butler, Ala., said about 250 of the crossties, valued at $15 each, have been stolen from the railbed so far. He said most of these ties have been taken from Cass City south. The salvage company is removing ties and tracks from 60 miles of railbed from Caseville south to Kings Mill.

Burton explained the ties are property of the Grand Trunk railroad, and the company will prosecute anyone caught taking ties. Burton said a man in Florida was caught stealing 60 ties. Even after the man returned the ties to the state, a Florida Circuit Court judge sentenced the man to one year and one day in prison.

Burton said there are 3,000 to 3,300 ties per mile, with an average weight of 250 pounds each. He said two men could easily lift a tie into the back of a pickup.

Area residents who enjoy walking down the old railroad tracks do not have to be concerned about the company taking out the bridges. The railroad crossings over the Cass River, White Creek and drainage ditches will be left in.

2 die in separate crashes

A 22-year-old Ubyl man became Sanilac County's fifth traffic fatality Monday night when he was thrown from his car as it rolled over in rural Delaware Township.

Sanilac County Sheriff's Department Sgt. William Thomas explained Ronald K. Gracey, 22, 7001 Wheeler Rd., Ubyl, was eastbound on Bay City-Forestville Road Monday at 9:50 p.m., and failed to negotiate a curve in the road at the Potts Road intersection. Gracey's vehicle went into a ditch and rolled over two or three times. Gracey was not wearing a seat belt at the time of the accident. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

The Harbor Beach Ambulance Service responded to the one-car accident. The cause of the accident is under investigation.

A 21-year-old Fairgrove man became Tuscola County's 10th traffic fatality Sunday morning when he was killed in a one-car accident in rural Gilford Township.

According to the report filed by Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Deputy Patrick Woidan, Wesley J. Kraych was northbound on Quanicasssee Road, near Dutcher Road, when he lost control of his vehicle. The vehicle went into a 14-foot deep ditch on the east side of the road and rolled over. Deputies believe the accident happened at 1:00 a.m., but it was 10:30 a.m. Sunday before a resident living in the area discovered the vehicle.

Kraych, 21, 8886 Bay City-Forestville Road, Fairgrove, was taken to the Caro Community Hospital by the Bay Medical Hospital Ambulance Service. The autopsy was performed at St. Mary's Hospital, Jaganaw.

GATHERING CROSSTIES - Clatis Long from Hudson Crossties and Salvage, Inc., was in the Deford area, north of Deckerville Road, last week removing ties from the old Grand Trunk railbed.

About 250 railroad crossties have been stolen from the railbeds south of Cass City.

Police arrest suspect in robbery of Kingston Bank

Police officials believe a 45-year-old Emmett man who has been arrested for the Oct. 24, 1984 robbery of the Capac State Savings Bank, Allenton, is the same robber who held up the Kingston State Bank less than one month later.

St. Clair County Sheriff's Department Detective Robert Quain explained employees from three banks that were robbed last year picked Michael L. Terrey out of a six-man lineup as the person who held up their bank. So far Terrey, 3892 Connors St., Emmett, has been charged with only the Allenton robbery.

Because of the similarities in methods the bandit used to rob the four banks, Quain feels the same man was involved in all four holdups.

In the first two robberies the bandit wore a Band-Aid on his face. When the Kingston bank was robbed, the bandit wore a fake scar under his eye. In all four robberies the bandit used a two-car system where the car he drove to the bank was abandoned for a second car. In all four robberies the original car was found less than 1½ miles from the robbery scene.

Det. Quain said he first suspected Terrey of the bank robberies while investigating an insurance fraud charge against him.

Quain explained Terrey, then owner of the Yale Insurance Agency, was under investigation for a charge of taking $200 from a Yale couple for a homeowners insurance policy. Terrey accepted the $200, but never turned the money or the policy into the company. Terrey has since sold the agency.

Quain also discovered Terrey was also doing some "heavy gambling" in Atlantic City casinos, and may have needed the money to pay off some debts.

During the Capac Bank robbery, $6,000 to $8,500 was taken. About $3,000 was taken from the Kingston State Bank. A Nov. 8, 1984 robbery of the Commercial and Savings Bank of St. Clair County, Emmett, netted the robber between $6,500 and $7,000. Less than a month later the "Band-Aid bandit" struck the Emmett bank again, this time walking away with $9,000. Quain feels Terrey had an accomplice in all four bank robberies, but so far no additional arrests have been made.

Terrey was arraigned before St. Clair County District Court Judge Daniel J. Kelly on charges of bank robbery, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony. Terrey stood mute, a not guilty plea was entered. Bond has been set at $25,000. If convicted, Terrey faces a possible life sentence.

A preliminary examination has been set for Sept. 10.

County making 3rd attempt for added millage

Tuscola County Commissioners are hoping to improve on a 0 and 3 track record for passing millages by gaining voter approval for a nine-year 1.5 mill request at a Sept. 10 election.

During 1984 county voters rejected three separate millage increase requests. One request was for building maintenance improvements, and two requests were for building and site fund. The county has been operating on a 4.20 fixed millage levy since 1964, the lowest county millage rate in the state. If this request is approved, the additional money will be used to fund county operations.

Based on the 1985 state equalized value of all property in Tuscola County, a 1.5-mill increase would generate $1,050,422. On property with a true cash value of $40,000, $20,000 state equalized value, a 1.5-mill increase would result in an additional $30 tax levy to the property owner.

Commissioner Royce Russell, Cass City, said the county will be unable to maintain the current level of services without a millage increase. He pointed out the county has already reduced funding for the sheriff's department, health department and the road commission, along with cuts in other county funded departments. County employees also felt the budget cutting knife when eight employees were laid off in May.

Russell explained if voters do not approve the increase, additional cuts will be required. "Our budget will not stretch far enough to maintain the services we now have," Russell said. Commissioners have discussed additional cuts to the health department, sheriff's department, road patrol, and to other non-mandated service areas. Russell added that additional layoffs have been discussed as a possible budget cutting measure.

The county may also be facing additional funding losses, even if voters do approve the Sept. 10 millage request. Russell explained a decrease in land values is expected to reduce the property evaluations by 15 to 20 percent over the next few years, and future revenue sharing funds are in jeopardy.

Russell said the county will more than likely receive 1986 federal revenue sharing funds, distributed in October, but the funds will probably be eliminated after the 1986 disbursement. This year the county received $410,000 from federal revenue sharing.

Russell said if voters approve the millage increase it will give the commissioners an opportunity to "get the house in order," make necessary repairs to the county buildings, before the loss of federal revenue sharing.

"I don't think we're being excessive," Russell said about the 1.5 mills increase. "We should try to maintain the levels we once had."

Russell explained that for the past 21 years the commissioners have operated the county on the same millage rate. The only increase came from increased property values.

MILLAGE HISTORY

Tuscola County voters first rejected a 0.25-mill increase for the building and site fund at the Aug. 7, 1984 primary election by a vote of 2,198 to 1,697. At that election voters were more sympathetic towards the county's senior citizens, approving a four-year 0.2-mill renewal to fund projects for the elderly. Of the 4,027 ballots cast 2,753 were in favor of the senior citizen tax levy. 1,274 voted against the proposal.

At the Nov. 6 general election, commissioners presented voters with two proposals, a 0.25-mill increase for the building and site fund, and a 0.50-mill increase for maintenance repairs to the buildings. Both millage requests were to run for five years. Tuscola County voters rejected the 0.50-mill increase 9,685 to 8,237. The 0.25-mill increase was rejected by an even larger percentage, with voters casting 12,176 ballots against the millage, and 5,569 in favor of the increase.

NOVESTA TOWNSHIP

Voters in Novesta Township will be asked to approve a three-year 1.5-mills increase to fund road construction projects. Supervisor Bill O'Dell said funds will be used to resurface some of the township's 25-year-old paved roads, and to construct new township roads.

If approved, the 1.5-mills increase will generate the township about $19,000. The township currently levies 1.5 mills.

Harvest festival plans set

Plans for the first harvest festival in Cass City are about complete and there will be a full week end of activity Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 12-14, according to Jude Patnaude and Ken Jensen, co-chairmen.

One of the big events will be a "pajama party" from 7 to 10 p.m. Merchants and clerks will work in pajamas and customers that wear pajamas that evening will be given special discounts at many stores Thursday.

Free bean soup will be offered prepared by Wayne "Buck" Rabideau. This popular Friday noon event is a carry-over from the Farmers' Sale that the harvest festival is replacing.

A hoe-down group from Deckerville will be giving demonstrations.

Friday evening, musical groups are expected to perform. A search is on for a couple celebrating their 50th anniversary to serve as King and Queen of a Saturday parade.

A pie contest is scheduled. Persons interested in entering should call either of the co-chairmen, Patnaude and Jensen.

During the three days vegetables and fruit will be sold from old style trucks and pushcarts, planners said.

Who pays for Schell Street work?

Council awaits Fed ruling

At the regular meeting of the Cass City Village Council Tuesday, Aug. 27, trustees discussed whether they can assess Schell Street property owners for curb and gutter improvements to the street.

Village President Ray Armstead pointed out the grant requires the village to pay for its portion of the project from village funds. Trustees are not sure if they are allowed to assess and collect for curb and gutter costs from property owners along the street.

The curb and gutters have already been installed along the 880-foot long Schell Street by A.J. Rehms and Son Inc., Bay City. The curb and gutter project was bid at $6.70 per foot, for a total cost of $11,792. On other village streets the cost of the curb and gutter would be billed to individual property owners, based on the amount of frontage they have.

Michigan Small Cities Program grant that is paying for a majority of the project. Under the terms of the grant, the village is to pay $15,000 of the project, and the grant pays the remaining $35,000.

"You can't just let it slide because we have an ordinance on our books that we have to enforce," Armstead said. He explained the village has two choices, to go ahead with the assessment, or waive the ordinance.

Trustees decided to wait until LaPonsie is given a definite answer on the assessment question.

Armstead also brought up the issue of whether the village's work on preparing the road bed for Schell Street paving qualifies for their portion of the total project costs. Armstead explained village DPW crews have prepared the area for paving, but the workers are not approved contractors, a grant requirement. Under the terms of the grant, workers are to be paid union scale, and meet other federal requirements. Again the village has not been able to get a definite answer to the issue. LaPonsie said the total amount of village man hours and equipment costs have not been totaled.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other council business Dorothy Stahlbaum told trustees the village, the Hills and Dales General Hospital, Cass City High School and the Rawson Memorial Library will be producing a gift catalog that will be distributed to area residents.

The catalog will offer gift suggestions that persons can offer donations to pay for. Stahlbaum said when the hospital sent out the gift catalog last year at Christmas time they received donations that more than doubled the cost of production. The village's share of producing the 7,000 catalogs is $500 to $600.

The school's and hospital's mailing list will be used to determine who the catalogs will be sent to. The catalog is to be mailed out before Thanksgiving.

Trustees agreed to send a letter to the village's water tower engineering firm of Hubbell, Roth and Clark, Inc., Bloomfield Hills, expressing their dissatisfaction with the recent tower inspection.

Trustees felt the bid specifications on the tower were more detailed than they needed to be, raising the cost of bids. Of the two

by John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

Just when I feel that I really am an old-timer on the business front, Mrs. Reva Little walks in with copy for the paper.

Then reality hits and I know I'm a relative greenhorn. Mrs. Little completed 49 years as a Chronicle correspondent Sept. 1.

Warren Wood dropped in the other day and said that he couldn't quite pinpoint the date when the bridge on M-53 over the Cass River that is now being replaced was built.

One thing he does remember distinctly is the way it was constructed. It was a case of the cart before the horse, Warren says.

My dad took me out to see that new bridge and it looked a little strange. That bridge was all finished before the road was built, he said. Wood figured that it was around 1920.

Did you happen to catch that state highway crew marking lines in Cass City and Tuscola County three weeks or so ago?

If you did chances are you noticed that these markers are no longer painted. They are a ribbon of long lasting material.

According to the Michigan Department of Transportation these ribbons that are applied and then pressed onto the surface will last about three years. Painted signs last about a year if the winter is not too severe, one authority explained.

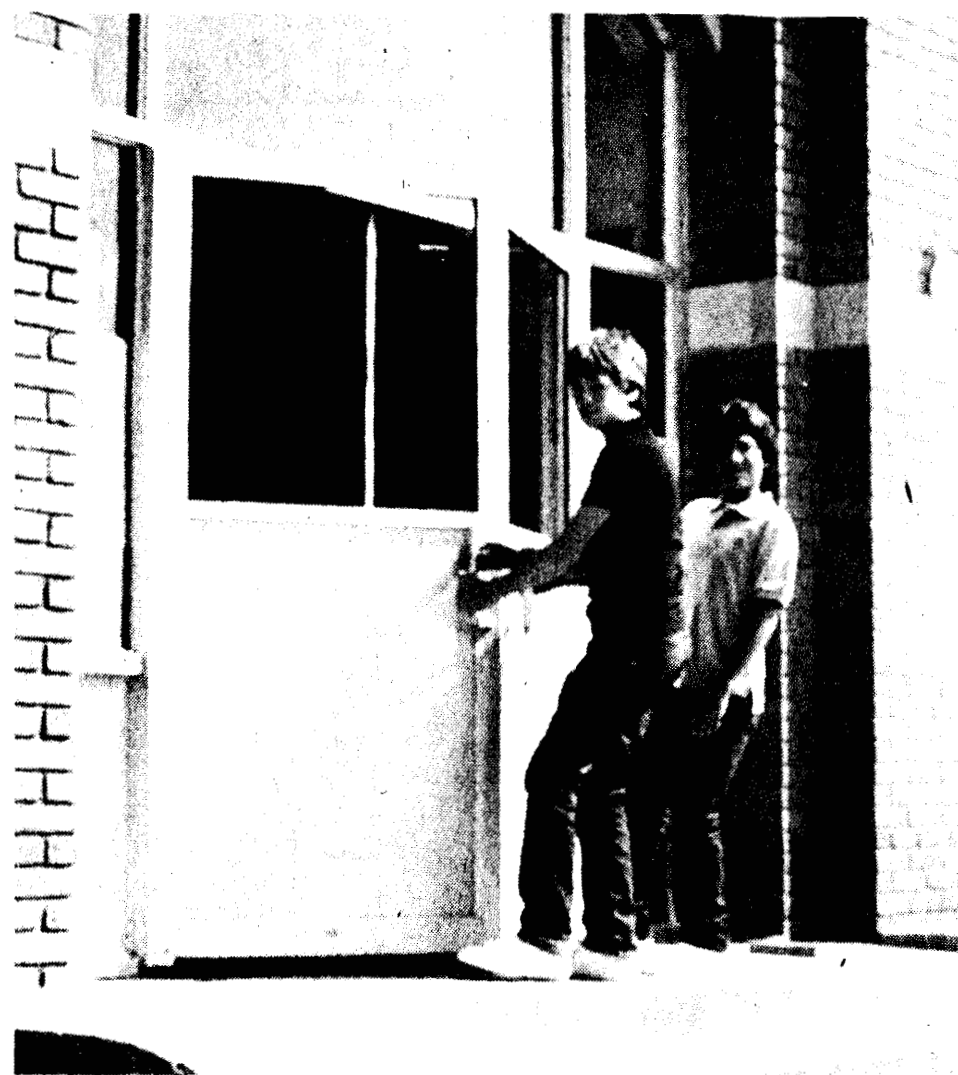

Marking of state highways is let to a special marking crew to do everything except lane lines. The contract is for Huron, Tuscola, Sanilac and Lapeer counties.

It's the first time that the State has been in the area in three years and it was about three years ago that traditional paint was abandoned for the ribbons.

Warrant sought for arrest of Cass City woman

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson reported he is seeking an arrest warrant for a 20-year-old Cass City woman after she allegedly took $200 from a Cass City woman's purse Aug. 25.

Hazel Moore, 4364 Seeger St., Cass City, told Chief Wilson she was lying on a daybed in her living room when the money was taken. The person who is suspected to have taken the money was at Moore's house that day. The suspect told Wilson she took $65 from Moore's purse. She reportedly gave some of the money to her brother, and spent the rest at a local tavern. A barmaid said the woman had her pockets full of money.

An arrest warrant for larceny from a building is being sought from the Tuscola County Prosecutor's Office.

Game shows

By Jim Fitzgerald

When you live on the 26th floor, it is unsettling to look up from the TV and see two men walking by just outside your window. My reaction earned me a familiar reprimand from my wife.

I was watching "Wheel of Fortune," the program that asks the question: "Can you fill in the letters missing from this well-known phrase, or are you completely stupid?"

According to viewership audits, "Wheel of Fortune" is watched in millions of homes. It's popular because it enables a husband to feel superiorly intelligent simply because he shouted "Little Jack Horner" a split second before his wife did.

I never watched "Wheel of Fortune" until I got a television set with a remote control device that allows me to easily tune out the inane chatter between host and contestants. I zero in on the questions only, and read my newspaper while Pat Sajak is asking a large man from Pasadena how he learned to applaud with his ears.

In the interest of truth in column writing, and despite my innate modesty, it should be noted that I am the world champion "Wheel of Fortune" player. The reason I don't follow my wife's greedy demand that I "go on the stupid show and win some prizes" is that contestants are required to jump up and down and scream like complete idiots. Also because there is as much dumb luck as intelligence involved in playing the game taped live and in person. Despite my brilliance, I could spin an unlucky wheel and end up winning a life-size statue of a black-and-white Saint Bernard, which isn't worth jumping up and down and screaming for.

At home, you can't win any prizes but playing the game is strictly skill. You won't believe this, but one evening I filled in all the missing letters. That is, there were no letters showing on the board when I holered the correct answer. The category was "place," the last word had four letters, and the first word had eight. As any fool could see, the correct answer was Columbus, Ohio.

Unfortunately, I was home alone. I had to phone my wife long-distance to tell her to quickly turn on "Wheel of Fortune" to see how smart I was. She refused and hung up. Maybe a life-size statue of a black-and-white Saint Bernard wouldn't be such a bad life's companion.

Incidentally, Vanna White, who flips cards on "Wheel of Fortune," signed autographs at the Michigan State Fair Monday. She probably wore off-the-shoulder slacks and signed: "V-n-n -- i-e."

Anyway, the two men were caulking the outside of my 26th-floor living-room windows, which cover two walls. Their long scaffolding approached silently, and it was too late to close the drapes without appearing rude. They were about two feet from my chair but I couldn't talk to them because the windows don't open. So I continued with what I was doing, hoping the caulkers would discern that I scratch my nose while watching "Wheel of Fortune," I don't pick it.

My wife walked into the room. "Did you smile at them?" she asked. "Did you wave?" It was her familiar "friendly" routine. She always gives me the devil for not hugging people I don't know. She exchanges recipes with strangers on the elevator, and demands similar behavior from me. But this was her first opportunity to reprimand me for not being sufficiently cordial to men who risked their lives to keep our windows from leaking, and I could tell she enjoyed it greatly.

I told her I was going to run away with V-n-n -- i-e. She couldn't figure out who I meant.

Officers arrest

Utica man

Cass City Police Officers Donald Miller and Dave McComb arrested a 40-year-old Utica man Saturday at 1:45 a.m. on charges of operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

The officers observed Richard C. Griem, 40, 7676 Rauschelbach Rd., Utica, drive left of the center line on N. Seeger St., near Rose Street. Griem failed a sobriety test, and was taken to the Tuscola County Jail, Caro.

ing, declared a third quarter dividend of 6 cents per share payable Oct. 31, to shareholders of record Sept. 30. The dividend will be paid on approximately 2,944,000 shares outstanding.

The 6 cents per share third quarter dividend represents a continuation of increased dividend payouts initiated in the fourth quarter of 1984. Dividends for that quarter and for the first quarter of 1985 were 12 cents per share, paid on approximately 1,469,000 shares outstanding. A two-for-one split of Walbro common stock occurred on May 28, 1985, and a dividend of 6 cents per share was paid on approximately 2,944,000 shares outstanding for the second quarter of 1985.

The Haire Net

There have been times through the years that the farm profit prospects were as dim as they are today.

If you go back to the depression days of the 1930's, of course, there were times when things were tougher. Believe it. I can remember my folks telling of taking potatoes in payment for work, but that's another story.

In modern times the farm outlook has ebbed and flowed from high to low tide. What makes it worse this time around is the speculation of four and five years ago when many speculators went off the deep end to buy land in hopes of continued appreciation.

Whatever the reason, in the agricultural Thumb when the farmer hurts, business hurts, too.

What the current downturn has done is make persons whose economic lifeblood is wrapped up in business in the Thumb appreciate what they have.

In Cass City and to a lesser extent, Caro and Bad Axe, too, the big plus is Walbro Corporation.

It's no secret that there has been a continuing effort to attract new industry in Cass City. The beat goes on, but success has eluded us. When it comes to attracting industry, it's a jungle out there.

More and more there is a growing appreciation for what we have.

Sure, everyone always agreed that industry has had a tremendous economic impact on the community.

No disputing that. It's just that when things are going along swimmingly, we tend to take for granted the dollars that wage earners have to pour back into the community.

Today everyone is aware of it, acutely aware of it. That's why the Chamber of Commerce and the village are attempting to come up with a program to tie in with the dedication of the most recent Walbro expansion in the community.

It makes sense, too. We've poured a lot of dollars into trying to lure more industry into the community.

It may pay off. But the odds of getting a new plant with the impact and the community support and awareness that Walbro has demonstrated over the years is like striking it rich in the lottery.

It's possible, but you'd better not count on it.

Landslides common for Peace Corps workers

Ziehm finds travel difficult in Ecuador

Editor's note: This story was submitted by Ron Ziehm, a 1978 graduate of Cass City High School. He is presently enrolled in a two-year Peace Corps program in Ecuador, working with local farmers. Ziehm is the son of Richard and Evelyn Ziehm, Gagetown.

Living in the Andes Mountains is not always easy, but it is beautiful here. This is the beginning of the Amazon jungle and the rivers all flow to the great Amazon River.

We get 21 feet of rainfall a year here, which causes a lot of landslides. This past week, the veterinarian I work with and I were stopped by landslides when we were about half-way home. We turned the car around and discovered another one had occurred behind us. We were trapped. People on the other side were able to get crews to open the area. After two hours of heavy work with tractors, pushing the dirt and rocks over the cliff when possible, they finally made a path for us. Our two-hour trip had turned into five hours. At present, snow has closed the road through the mountains.

I am located in Baeza, Ecuador, working in livestock extension after completing training and being sworn into the Peace Corps May 17, 1985. My Peace Corps training consisted of one month in the capital city of Quito studying Spanish, and then on to the coast for technical training and more Spanish. We began our series of immunization, which we get every four months. They consist of typhoid, rabies and gamma globulin. We also take malaria pills once a week.

Rancho Ronald is a model farm that the Peace Corps expanded and turned over to the Ecuadorian 4-F, which is similar to our 4-H. The Corps supplies advisors. Seven of our group trained there. We lived with one Ecuadorian family. One of our projects was to build a chicken coop that we made by cutting bamboo with machetes for the frame. The walls were made by making several slits in the bamboo pole before opening one slit all the way down. Metal sheets completed the roof.

One trip we made was to vaccinate cattle for a farmer. To get there we traveled 1½ hours by car, 15 minutes by canoe and 45 minutes by horseback. We vaccinated 70 head of Brahma with horns in 2½ hours. We immunized for blackleg, shipping fever and malignant edema. Since we were still learning the language, a Spanish teacher usually came along. Some of our time there was spent giving lectures, occasionally in Spanish.

Finally, we had the swearing-in ceremonies in Quito. Important people attended such as the president of 4F National, the Minister of Livestock and even the Beauty Queen of Quito.

I was sent on a 3½-hour bus trip through the Andes Mountains to the town of Baeza in the Province of Napo. The village is 6,000 feet above sea level. There I worked with an Ecuadorian veterinarian. While here I will be attempting to decrease the 40 percent mortality of calves caused by the tremendous amount of rainfall and poor pasture. I'll be researching the use of different types of grasses for feed. About 80 percent of the pastures contain Kiburo, a very hardy grass, but low in nutrition. Part of the area I work in is 15 miles away but only 2,600 feet altitude, so a wider variety of grasses are grown. This is a dairy cattle area with Brown Swiss, Holstein, Criollo (native cattle) and crosses of these.

Milking is still done by hand. Cows are usually milked once a day with average yields of one gallon to five or more gallons of milk per cow. Some farmers use horses to haul the milk cans to the road where they are stored in small wells with running water to keep them cool until the milk truck comes along. Small trucks bring the cans to Baeza, where the milk is stored in coolers until a big tank truck hauls it to a town near Quito for packaging. Each farmer has his number on the milk can and gets paid twice a month. Quality is always checked.

Another part of my work here will be at an Agricultural High School in Chaca, about 15 miles from Baeza. There I will give lectures and demonstrations to the students.

Recently another volunteer and I went to a farm located in virgin territory where they use machetes to cut a path back to their farm home. There we helped with construction of their house which is made of mahogany, a wood that is plentiful here.

This past week, Dr. Guanachanga and I vaccinated 25 cows and 10 beefalo, the cross breeding results of a beef cow and a buffalo, and treated some calves with bronchitis. I get a lot of exercise climbing mountains to get to the farms. One is a 1,800-foot climb to the top of a mountain, and 200 feet down the other side. Last week end I experienced my first earthquake here but it only rattled the tin roof.

I do my own washing, always by hand, which takes a lot of time. There is a concrete area where I scrub the clothes with a brush. I must boil my drinking water or catch rain water. I stay in a one-room apartment made of concrete and wood, with a window that overlooks the valley below. I usually cook my own meals on a gas stove. I eat lots of potatoes, beef, rice, bread and trout. This is an important fishing area, especially for trout.

Radio reception is bad, especially during the day because of the mountain range, but I do try to listen to Armed Forces radio or Voice of America to find out what is going on in the world.

I use all my spare time making furniture for my empty apartment. So far I've made a table and a bed. Now I'll go to Quito to buy a mattress and lug it by bus across the Andes.

McLeody Days

By Bill McLeod

Last week while working on a story about the railroad ties that have been stolen from the old Grand Trunk line, I ran into Clatis Long, who is no doubt known as a "good ol' boy" in his home town in Alabama.

Talking to Clatis reminded me of the years I spent in the south working as a surveyor with the government. Clatis has one of those slow, soft southern drawls that can make a two syllable word a whole sentence long.

"I'm a tie picker," Clatis said about his job. He was operating a back-hoe type machine that lifted the ties from the railroad bed.

I remember when I first left Michigan in 1970 to live in the southwestern part of the country, I swore I would never pick up what I always thought was a hick accent. Wrong again. Within three months I sounded just like one of those "good ol' boys" that stood around at the corner fillin' station. Every time I came home for a visit, family members and friends had a good time laughing at my accent.

While in the south I was able to adjust to the language difference easily. Learning to live in an area with intense heat, poisonous snakes and grits took some getting used to. The heat and snakes weren't as bad as the grits. No matter how much butter and sugar I put on the every meal side dish they still tasted like soggy sand.

After 'bout five years of trying to choke down three orders of grits a day (you don't order them, they come automatically), I finally returned to Michigan to finish college.

Going back to college when you're 25 years old is tough enough, but having only western style clothes and a pair of cowboy boots made it a little harder. The first few days weren't too bad, but eventually it came time to speak in class. I tried my best to sound like a Yankee, but six years of living south of the Mason-Dixon Line is a tough verbal habit to break. I am sure to them I sounded just like Clatis.

Aside from some good natured teasing about my drawl, I was getting along in class without any major problems, until one day when I read a rags to riches story about a successful businessman. The story was going well until I said the man grew up in a poor house. As soon as I said "poor house" the whole class started laughing. Undaunted by their laughter, I finished my story. Afterwards my teacher asked me if he really lived in a house that was used by prostitutes.

A southern drawl adds a lot of extra meaning in words, though. I remember listening to a radio talk show host who was interviewing a southern language professor. The teacher claimed southerners are the only people who properly pronounce the English language.

He explained that in the north we say naked, meaning a person has taken their clothes off. In the south, it's pronounced "neeked," meaning you have your clothes off, and "by God you're doing something."

If you have ever watched the movie "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" it's easy to understand what the professor is saying.

AROUND THE FARM Trash recovery program to cut landfill usage

By Bill Bortel

Michigan is one step closer to reducing its dependence on landfills, thanks to a $10 million appropriation by the state legislature, establishing the "Clean Michigan Fund." The program emphasizes resource recovery technologies as solid waste disposal alternatives to deal with the state's annual accumulation of 9.5 million tons of solid waste.

Most of the funding will be available as grants to public, private and non-profit groups interested in implementing or expanding programs for recycling, composting and waste-to-energy projects. Funds will also be available for closure of some landfills and dumps, construction of transfer stations and development of household hazardous waste collection days. In addition, a portion of the funding will be directed towards education efforts, market development, and incentives for recycling industry.

"Michigan must move aggressively to avoid a solid waste disposal crisis in the future," explains Ronald O. Skoog, Director of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. "We know that improper disposal in landfills is responsible for known and suspected ground water contamination, as well as air pollution and some pollution of our lakes, rivers, and streams. As existing landfills reach capacity, it has become extremely difficult to find and license sites for new landfills. All people need to get rid of their garbage, but few will agree to permit landfills in their neighborhood or community. We need to find solutions to these problems."

The DNR's Resource Recovery Section estimates that as much as 70 percent of the state's solid waste stream can be diverted from landfills through resource recovery techniques. The "Clean Michigan Fund" will provide feasibility studies and waste stream assessments for proposed programs and capital grants and operating subsidies for new or existing programs.

Between Oct. 1, 1985 and Nov. 5, 1985, the MDNR will accept applications for grant awards, feasibility study site selections, and waste stream assessments. Proposals must be consistent with and projects must be located in a county that has an approved solid waste management plan under Public Act 641, P.A. of 1978, as amended.

A few stings part of the job

Pierce begins harvesting honey crop

Buzzzzzz.

To most people that sound, the sound of a bee approaching, sends them running off in the opposite direction.

But instead of running away, Owen Pierce is able to walk into an area with thousands of the stinging insects flying about, and calmly go about his job of taking away part of their food supply.

Pierce, 4563 Spence Rd., Cass City, has been a bee keeper, an apiarist, for several years. He explained it started out as a hobby, but later became a full-time job. When Pierce was working as a full-time apiarist he had more than 800 hives, each with about 65,000 bees. He was harvesting about 100,000 pounds of honey yearly.

But a fire burned the barn where he processed the honey. His equipment was also destroyed. He rebuilt, but on a smaller scale.

Pierce now has about 300 hives, located at more than 20 locations in the area. Last year he gathered about 15,000 pounds of honey. Pierce also works as a foreman at Evans Material Handling, Gagetown. He has just begun harvesting this year's crop.

Pierce explained honeybees gather nectar from flowering plants and trees to produce honey. The nectar is brought back to the hive by the worker bees that have special storage stomachs. Enzymes in the stomach turn the nectar into honey. Pierce explained a bee's most important function is not to produce honey, but to pollinate plants. He said while a bee flies from one plant to another, it carries pollen with it that fertilizes the plants.

Without this pollination process, flowering trees such as apple and peach trees would not produce fruit. He added that when worker bees gather nectar, they will usually only work one type of a crop that day. Bees are able to gather nectar from all types of flowering crops, including alfalfa, red and sweet clover, and common flowering weeds such as dandelions and ragweed.

Honey produced in this area is a blend of the different types of flowering crops the bees are able to find. In other areas, such as in the western states where large fields are planted with one type of crop, the honey may have a different taste. The type of soil that a crop is grown on will also give the honey a different flavor. "Honey from alfalfa in Tuscola County may taste a little different than alfalfa honey from another area," he added. "Most honey is a blend from various sources."

Not only will the taste of honey change from area to area, the temperament of the bees varies from hive to hive. Pierce explained that if the queen bee in the hive has an aggressive temper, then her offspring, the workers, are more likely to attack when he removes the honey carrying frames from the hive.

Saturday, when he was gathering honey at a location east of Cass City, he explained that in one hive the bees were more aggressive than other bees. While removing the frame he was stung several times on his hands and arms. Pierce wears protective mesh over his face and neck. The complete apiarist's suit, worn by some beekeepers, are too hot.

Pierce said the so called "killer bees" are no different than any other bees, but generations of mistreatment has made them more aggressive.

During an average day Pierce is stung eight to ten times, something that he has learned to live with. Pierce cautions against wearing dark clothing, which he feels attracts bees. He used to wear a light colored jacket, with dark colored elastic around the wrists. He then generally got stung on the wrist.

He added if stung, brush the bee away, which hopefully will remove the stinger. The quicker the stinger is removed, the less poison is pumped into the body. A muscle in the stinger can continue to pump poison after it has been removed from the bee. Unlike a wasp, a honeybee can only sting once before it dies.

Pierce explained most people will only see the worker bee, the most common type. In a hive there will generally be only one queen bee, about 400 male or drone bees, and about 65,000 workers. The worker bees are sexless, and live only about six weeks. The queen bee is the largest of all bees in the hive.

The chances of a person seeing a queen bee are about one in a billion. Except for a three or four-day breeding period the queen bee does not leave the hive. A queen bee can live four to five years.

Pierce explained to start a new hive the queen and worker bees will leave the hive and swarm to a new area. To develop a new hive, sometimes beekeepers must purchase a queen and worker bees.

When removing the honey, Pierce harvests about one-half of the hive, leaving the rest behind for the bees' winter food source. "If I took all the honey away they wouldn't make it through the winter," Pierce said. During the winter the bees will move into the bottom of the hive, and live off the honey and pollen they collected through the warmer months. If the bees do not have enough honey to last through the winter Pierce adds sugar to the hive.

When harvesting honey, Pierce first blows a puff of smoke into the section of the hive with a small bellows incinerator. The smoke causes the bees to grab honey and flee the hive. He added that when bees load up on honey they are less likely to sting.

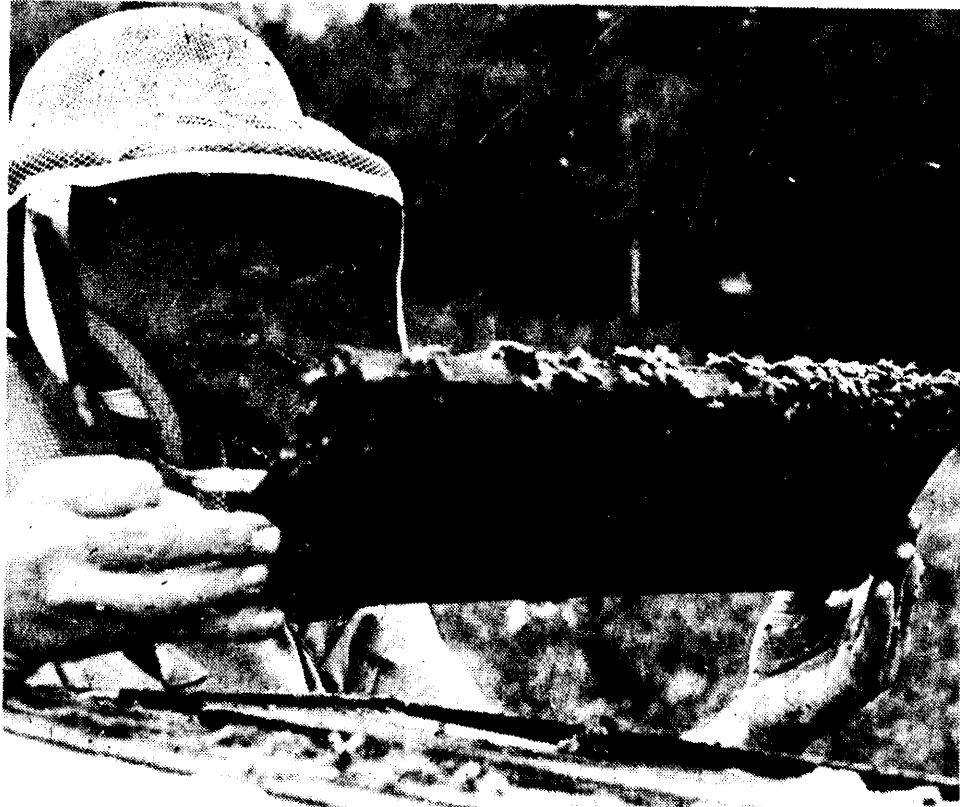

Pierce then pries the hive sections, called supers, apart, and blows the bees from the inside of open end frames with forced air. The supers are taken back to his barn where he extracts the honey.

When removing the honey from the frames, Pierce first cuts the wax cap off the honeycomb with a water heated vibrating knife. The frames are then put into an extractor that spins the frames at a high speed, forcing the honey out.

The honey is warmed, and any wax left behind floats to the top of a holding tank. When the tank is full, the honey is pumped through a filter into a holding tank.

The excess wax is sold for shoe and furniture polishes, and for commercial use.

When Pierce sells honey in wholesale lots to the federal government's Commodity Credit Corporation he is paid 65 cents a pound. He sells bottled honey for $1 a pound.

OWEN PIERCE examines a frame from a beehive super to determine if the hive is ready for harvest.

WITH BEES flying all around him, Pierce calmly removes a honey laden frame from the hive.

WITH A WATER heated vibrating knife Owen Pierce cuts the wax cap off a honeycomb frame.

State financial status improves

State officials are optimistic this year the state will obtain the highest possible rating on its short term notes for the first time since 1978, which combined with lower interest rates and a smaller loan, could cut borrowing costs in half compared to last year.

Treasurer Robert Bowman said the success of convincing New York rating agencies to boost the state's credit standing will determine if the short term borrowing will be made without outside support for the first time since 1981.

"We have talked about our plan being in place. Now, we'll be 60 days away from the darn thing being done," Bowman said.

The $350 million the state is planning this year is the smallest amount borrowed for cash needs since $200 million in April, 1978, at the onset of the late-70's recession. That was also the last note that carried a MIG 1 rating, without outside backing.

Bowman said he will also be talking with officials at Moody's, and at Standard and Poor's, about upgrading Michigan's long-term credit ratings.

Michigan now has an A rating from Moody's, a full three steps from the highest possible which it shares with only three other states, and an A-plus from Standard and Poor's.

Bowman said the discussions will occur near the end of the month or early September.

This year's event included numerous classes ranging from western and English riding and dressage to costume, trail and gymkhana events.

FIVE YEARS AGO

Six women of the Elmwood Missionary circle met Aug. 20 with Mrs. Ada Salgat. The September meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Bud Peasley with Mrs. Lyle Zapfe, hostess.

For the first time in 18 years, members of the James I. Brown family held a reunion Aug. 24. Mrs. and Mrs. Hazen Brown were hosts to 68 guests at their farm home.

Damage was estimated at $20,000 in a Tuesday afternoon fire that heavily damaged a home on Lam-ton Road. Its owner is Ann McGrath. No one was home when the fire began. Assistant fire Chief Jerome Root Jr. said the apparent cause was electrical and that the home had been burning several hours before it was discovered.

School got underway in the Owendale-Gagetown District Wednesday, despite lack of a contract between the school board and teachers. Supt. Ronald Erickson, the school board's lone negotiator, met with the teacher negotiating team for more than five hours Monday.

its monthly meeting Thursday at the village park. Hostesses for a picnic were Gladys Fort, Lena Patch, Helen Little and Clara Eberts. The Sept. meeting will be held at the township hall with a program prepared by Thelma Pratt.

Cass City Golf League staged a tournament Monday at Rolling Hills Golf Course that saw six trophies awarded to six youthful golfers. In boys' competition, Kurt Proctor took top honors, with Steve Richards runner-up. Darla Crouse won top honors in girls' competition, with Debbie Klinkman second. Also receiving trophies were Matt Prieskorn and Matt Woody, who took first and second respectively in five-hole competition.

Miss Karen O'Dell began her second year at CMU at Mt. Pleasant Monday. Also there is Miss Kris Ridenour, a freshman.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Kirn and daughters spent Aug. 24 with his mother, Mrs. Esther Kirn, at the Methodist home at Chelsea. While there, they also visited the Rev. and Mrs. Ira L. Wood, formerly of Cass City.

25 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Clare Carpenter, Cass City, topped the field in the first annual Michigan bean recipe contest held in conjunction with the Michigan Bean Festival at Fairgrove Monday. Mrs. Carpenter's winning entry was a bean cake. Mrs. Ed Golding of Cass City won third place with her Greek bean salad.

The Elkland Township Fire Department added a new accomplishment to its list of services Wednesday. When the electric pumps broke down at the Max Cooper farm, northeast of Cass City, the department rushed 1,000 gallons of water to him for his thirsty cattle. He has 26 milkers and 26 young stock.

Darlene Chippi, David Bullock and Jack Burns participated in the Marlette Horse Show last Monday. The show is an annual Labor Day event.

State Police Troopers of the Bad Axe Post are investigating a fire on the Henry LaFave farm near Gagetown, which burned an acre of wheat and oat stubble September 1. LaFave said two fires were also discovered on his property August 31.

New books at the library

AFTER THE REUNION by Rona Jaffe (fiction). Four Radcliffe "girls," graduates of the class of 1957, review their "innocent, idiotic days at college that had ruined a portion of their lives" as they embark upon sharp corrections of attitudes, life-styles, and marital status. The author inflicts a plethora of contemporary social crises upon each of these women, including unfaithful husbands, cocaine addiction, a retarded child, and suicide. Their inability to prevent or cope with these various tragedies is portrayed as being a result of their 1950s education, which stressed docility over self-reliance. Lessons are learned, problems solved, and new friendships created, all in a rather glib fashion.

CONFESSIONS OF A HOOKER: MY LIFELONG LOVE AFFAIR WITH GOLF by Bob Hope (non-fiction). Comedian Bob Hope may have played a hole of golf for every joke he's told. Here he combines his two favorite pastimes, the result of which is a book of anecdotes, oneliners, and puns that centers on Hope's lifelong devotion to the links. With his characteristic rapid-fire wit, Hope relates tales of playing golf with some of the world's most famous people, including Presidents Eisenhower and Ford, professionals Arnold Palmer and Ben Hogan, and fellow entertainers Bing Crosby and Jackie Gleason. With Hope poking fun at the celebrities, himself, and the game, readers will find his form definitely up to par.

NUTRITION FOR THE PRIME OF YOUR LIFE by Annette B. Natow (non-fiction). The authors, two well-qualified dietitians, discuss nutrient needs, caffeine, alcohol, drugs, menstrual distress, weight control, exercise, cholesterol, and salt control in an easy-to-understand manner. Afflictions such as indigestion, constipation, arthritis, gout, ulcers, diverticulitis, gallstones, diabetes, cancer, and heart disease are also covered along with evaluations of popular remedies. The information, geared for middle-age to older individuals, is organized in a question/answer format. No farfetched claims here, just solid, useful information.

THE HUMAN ANIMAL by Phil Donahue (non-fiction). In preparing this book to accompany an NBC-TV series on the nature of humankind, talk-show host Donahue consulted a prestigious list of authorities in the behavioral sciences to glean "hard-won conclusions of their life's work" on such topics as how we differ from animals, nature vs. nurture, biological and cultural evolution, and the human brain, along with sex, and differences between men and women. Among today's major concerns, Donahue notes, are stress, addiction, violence and the misuse of technology. With the astuteness and wit he displays on TV, he points out the peaks of individual and cooperative accomplishments, contrasting society's great and evil achievements and pointing out the confusing nature of the messages we send our children.

Make your refrigerator more energy efficient

By Betty Pattullo, Extension Home Economist

Refrigerators are one of the greatest energy-using appliances in the kitchen. They are often taken for granted because they do their job automatically, year after year, and require very little attention. However, proper care is required to keep them operating efficiently and to avoid wasting energy. Good care can also prolong your refrigerator's life.

Keep the condenser coils (located behind or under the refrigerator) clean by vacuuming them about every three months. The crevice tool attachment of your vacuum cleaner works well. Dust covered coils impair the efficiency of compressor operation and increase energy usage.

Make sure that your refrigerator door gaskets seal properly. You can test the seal by placing a piece of paper between the gasket and the refrigerator cabinet. When you pull on the paper, it should not slide out easily. If the paper moves easily, you may have one of three problems: 1) the door itself may be misaligned; 2) soil may be built up around the door gasket; 3) the gasket may have deteriorated and may need to be replaced. Be careful when you clean around the gasket. It can be loosened or damaged if you try vigorously to scrape away hardened soil. The better way is to wipe up spills at once and to carefully wash off the entire door seal area regularly.

Setting the temperature control colder than necessary on either the refrigerator or freezer (if the refrigerator and freezer have separate controls) unnecessarily uses more energy. Usually a good guide for the correct refrigerator temperature is milk. When it is as cold as your family likes it the control is usually set properly. Ice cream is a good guide for the freezer. If it stays firm to hard, the freezer control is set properly.

If you have a refrigerator that must be defrosted manually, don't allow more than 1/4 inch of frost to build up. When frost buildup begins to exceed 1/4 inch, more energy is used to keep the refrigerator cold.

You can save energy and money by opening the refrigerator as few times as possible and by closing it promptly after each use.

HEALTH TIPS

Viruses that threaten new lives

Last week, the Health Tips column discussed how viral infections are increasing. This week's column discusses viruses that threaten the fetus and the newborn.

Among those most vulnerable to the ravages of any virus are the fetus and the newborn, because their immune systems are not fully developed.

Cytomegalovirus: Found in most parts of the world, cytomegalovirus, or CMV, invades the fetus in the womb of an infected mother or the newborn passing through the birth canal. About 2 percent of all infants in the U.S. are born with CMV. The virus attacks immune system cells, rendering them less able to ward off disease. Rarely does the process produce any symptoms in either mother or baby. In fact, only about one percent of infected infants show signs.

When the virus does make its presence known, it is brutal. Neurological complications include impairment of speech, hearing and brain damage.

Even if newborns escape infection, there is a high likelihood that children eventually will acquire CMV. It is transmitted in a variety of ways, including mothers' milk. When saliva and urine samples of 70 children in one U.S. day care center were tested, more than half contained the organism. The rate is even higher - 83 percent - in many Third World nations. It peaks among toddlers who crawl, walk and bite or suck toys that may harbor the germs. (Diarrhea-causing rotavirus infections also are common in day care centers.)

"I don't think our results provide any argument for withholding children from day care centers," says Robert F. Pass, M.D., assistant professor of pediatrics at the School of Medicine of the University of Alabama in Birmingham. "There is no evidence that CMV causes significant illness in children with normal immunity. But there is justifiable concern about the risk of transmission to mothers planning subsequent pregnancies. Testing such women for CMV might be a good idea."

Herpes: The number of newborns who pass through infected birth canals and contract herpes simplex virus type 2 (HSV-2) has escalated dramatically in recent years. In one county in Washington State, the rate jumped from 2.6 cases per 100,000 live births in 1969 to 28.2 in 1982. More than one-third of newborns with herpes die; another fourth develop neurological complications - seizures, permanent brain damage and mental retardation.

When herpes is diagnosed in a woman going into labor, Caesarean delivery protects the baby. But the real problem is identifying women who have symptom-free herpes. At least one-third of herpes-afflicted infants are born to such women. Screening high-risk mothers - those with a history of recurrent herpes, those whose partners have such a history and those who had herpes earlier in pregnancy - is not sufficient. This approach would have missed 44 percent of the Washington mothers.

A new method of diagnosis - a 24-hour culture - is now available for routine screening. And faster tests are being developed.

Rubella (German measles): Rubella may strike the fetus in the uterus and cause a miscarriage or stillbirth. If the newborn survives, typical complications include impaired vision or blindness; deafness, heart defects, brain damage, retardation, bone lesions, hepatitis and enlarged spleen.

Thanks to massive vaccination, there were only 20 cases of congenital rubella reported in the U.S. in 1983. That isn't good enough, according to Benjamin Nkwane, M.D., of the immunization division of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"Immunization could have prevented those cases," he points out. "Furthermore, perhaps some cases weren't counted. Rubella isn't that easy to diagnose. The CDC estimates that only 10 to 20 percent of cases are reported."

While 95 percent of children who enter school in the U.S. have been vaccinated, the rate among pre-schoolers is much lower. This pool of infection easily spreads to pregnant women.

Hepatitis B: Newborns of mothers who are carriers of this liver inflammation are at high risk - 85 to 90 percent - of contracting the disease.

"We don't know the exact mode of transmission," says Cladd E. Stevens, M.D., head of the laboratory of epidemiology of the New York Blood Center in New York City. "The virus may pass through the placenta or be transmitted during exposure to the mother's blood. The infected newborn is at elevated risk for developing liver disease later in life."

If, however, pregnant women are tested for hepatitis B and found to be positive, the newborns can be vaccinated within a week. This approach, Dr. Stevens claims, reduces the child's risk of becoming a chronic carrier of hepatitis from 90 percent to about 5 to 15 percent.

High-risk mothers include refugees from some regions of Asia, health care workers exposed to blood and blood products, drug addicts, women who have had multiple transfusions, family contacts of patients with hepatitis B and prostitutes.

Some experts believe that screening these women is sufficient. Dr. Stevens disagrees. "My personal feeling is that all women should be screened," she says. "Otherwise, we're going to miss those who are not at high risk, yet are infected."

Besonen starts 17th year

Experienced players key O-G offense

Owen-Gage football coach Arnie Besonen has taken a trip "back to the basics of football" this year, teaching eight new players the fundamentals of the game, and showing two experienced players how to play new positions. Besonen, now entering his 17th season as Owen-Gage coach, said despite having so many new players, practices have been "a lot of fun this year."

Junior Stu Stirrett will be filling the quarterback position vacated by Reid Goslin who graduated last year. "He's got a real good arm," Besonen said about his 6' tall, 165-pound quarterback. "He's got the height, he will be able to look over the defensive line."

Dave Peters, a 5'11", 175-pound senior, will be replacing John Shope at the tackle position. This will be the fourth season for Peters. Guard Ed Dohring will add three years of experience to the offensive line. Dohring, a senior, is 5'10" and weighs 198 pounds, the biggest player on the team.

This year Besonen has moved Mike Mandich from his center's position to the starting fullback's slot. Mandich, a 5'7", 152-pound senior, is entering his fourth season as a Bulldog.

In addition to Dohring, Peters and Mandich, Besonen will be counting on halfbacks Ron Susalla, a senior, and junior Steve Root to add experience to the Owen-Gage offense. Besonen will be starting two freshmen, Jay Susalla and Nick Pavlichek at end positions.

Besonen said the team will miss Gabe Milbocker, a 5'10", 160-pound end who broke his leg in practice. Milbocker is lost for the season.

As usual Besonen will be counting on a strong defense to keep in the game. "We're pretty small, but we are heady," Besonen said about the heads-up style of defense that kept the Bulldogs in several of last year's games. The Bulldogs finished the 1984 season with a 5 and 4 record. In two of those losses the defense gave up a total of 20 points, but the offense was able to score just one touchdown.

This year senior noseguard Bill Richert is expected to be one of the key defensive players.

"It's going to be an interesting season," Besonen said about the 1985 Thumb D League. He expects Deckerville to be their toughest competition. "They outnumber our kids three to one," he said about the increasing number of students at the Sanilac County school. Besonen also expects Kingston and North Huron to be tough this year.

Owen-Gage will open their 1985 season with a non-league home game against Arenac Eastern Sept. 6. All home games will be played at Owendale. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The schedule:

Sept. 6 Arenac Eastern home
13 Deckerville, there
20 Caseville, home
27 Carsonville-Port Sanilac, there
Oct. 4 Peck, home
11, N. Huron, there
18, Kingston, home
25, Akron/Fairgrove there
Nov. 1, Morrice*, home
*Non-league game.

Owen-Gage girls' basketball coach Catherine Kropewnicki will be counting on team speed and a positive attitude to improve on last year's winless season.

Kropewnicki explained the team will have to rely on their overall speed to make up for their lack of height.

"I am looking forward to the season," Kropewnicki, who is coaching both varsity and junior varsity this year, said. "They are working hard and giving it their best. That's all any coach can ask for."

Kropewnicki will be counting on Susie Salcido to take over for last year's top player, Linda Retford. Ret-ford graduated last year. Kropewnicki said Salcido has a "lot of raw talent," which she hopes to develop throughout the season. "She can really jump," Kropewnicki said, about the 5'9" sophomore.

Junior Barb Hellebuyck and senior Deb Englehart will be the two guards responsible for setting up the Bulldogs' fast break offense. Two juniors, Tiffany Reinhardt and Dawn Harris, will also be seeing action this season.

Junior Cindy Enderle and senior Marsha Lopez are expected to start at the forward positions. Janice Cummins is also expected to see some action this season.

Kropewnicki feels Deckerville will be the toughest team in the Thumb D League this season. She also expects Peck will be one of the top teams this year.

"I am optimistic," Kropewnicki said about the upcoming season. "I am really stressing a positive attitude and physical conditioning to the players."

The Bulldogs had their first taste of competition already this year, losing to Port Hope 66-20 and to Caseville 53-20 in a pre-season tournament at Caseville last week.

The Bulldogs' first league game will be at Uby Sept. 10. Their first home game will be against Kingston other squads.

Sept. 12. All home games are played in the Owendale gymnasium. Junior varsity games start at 6:15 p.m. The varsity game starts about 8:00 p.m.

The club went undefeated in four games to qualify for the nationals. Martin pitches and plays first base.

The first game is Thursday and the tournament lasts from 10 to 14 days before a champion is crowned.

Hawks favored over Mayville in opening game

Coming off a 2-7 season with only five lettermen returning would indicate that the Cass City High School football squad would not be favored in many games this season.

That may still be true, but for the first game of the season Friday at Mayville, the Hawks will reign as solid favorites.

Mayville is coming off a winless season and the coach resigned a few weeks before the season was to start.

Now a new coach has taken over and more players have turned out for the team. But with limited practice time under the new coach, Cass City Coach Don Schelke figures that Mayville will be sticking mostly to basic stuff.

Certainly the opener this season will be easier than last year's opener against Tawas which had one of its stronger teams.

There will be some surprises for Hawk fans Friday. One will be the quarterback. Rob Nicholas, a junior, has won the starting nod.

He wanted the position and he went out and earned it, Schelke said. Nicholas isn't too tall and some play action passes have been inserted to get him away from the rush.

Greg Erla is a fixture at fullback, but flanking him will be a pair of juniors.

Jeff Lefler and Dennis Ziemba will open at the halfback spots. Sure to see action is Todd Stahlbaum, a small speed back that has shown in practice that he isn't afraid to mix it with the big boys.

The Hawks are in relatively good health. Only two players are nursing injuries and boys are expected to see action although they won't be at full strength.

Pete Leitnerman has a bruised shoulder and Brian Gyomory a sore knee.

Improved Hawks still face tough sledding in Thumb B

Coach Daryl Iwankovitch expects the Cass City Red Hawk basketball team to be better this season than they were last year, his first year as head coach.

That's the good news. The bad news is that the girls may not be enough better to win in the tough Thumb B Association.

Iwankovitch's charges are coming off a 2-20 season and will have just three veterans returning.

A major loss for the team is the graduation of Cathy Britt. Another problem is the lack of depth. There are just eight girls on the varsity squad, not enough to hold a practice.

There will be some junior varsity players brought up to fill the void.

Iwankovitch feels that the team will be improved this season, but just how much the won-loss record will show remains in doubt.

A better line on the team will come after Thursday's first game at Cass City when the Hawks meet Caseville.

Cass City will be handicapped in the opening games because the best player on the team, Shannon McIntosh, has not been attending pre-school practices because she worked at the pool at Cass City Recreational Park. She's a junior with two seasons of varsity competition behind her and will direct the team from her guard position.

Also counted on heavily will be Chris Britt, junior forward, whose experience on the varsity last season makes her a veteran that the rookies can turn to.

Another letter winner is Tammy Iseler, an all-around player in her final season.

If the Hawks are to better last season's record they will have to improve rebounding and defensive skills, Iwankovitch feels.

The coach says that the squad is playing better as a team this season. If the girls are to win, that's the way it will have to be.

The Hawks have no one playing that can dominate the boards. One of the strong points should be the quickness at guard. The coach also feels that the team will shoot better this

Bankers cop San-Cass loop title

The San-Cass softball league ended Aug. 27 with a Sandusky team, National Bank of Detroit, winning both the league championship and the playoffs. NBD finished the season with a 15 and 6 record.

In the first game of a four team playoff, NBD defeated Marlette Area Softball Hitters (MASH) 2-0. Mick Barron was the winning pitcher. Paul Martus was the losing pitcher for MASH. Doug Beatty drove in both runs for NBD. Mick Tank added two hits.

In the second game of the evening NBD easily defeated McGraw Edison 10-0 to claim the playoff trophy. Darryl Blank was the winning pitcher for NBD.

McGraw Edison earned the right to play NBD by defeating Charmont, the only Cass City team in the playoffs, 3-2 in eight innings. Charmont took third place by defeating MASH 4-2. The winning Charmont pitcher, Doug Powers, allowed only three MASH hits during the game. Powers also collected two hits in the second game.

Federal program pays for students' hot lunches

To guarantee that every student receives at least one nutritious meal a day, school districts in the area will again be offering free or reduced price lunches this school year.

Superintendents Don Crouse, Cass City, and Ronald Erickson, Owen-Gage, both expect about the same number of students as last year will qualify for the 1985-86 federally funded lunch program. Last year more than 31 percent of the 2,085 students in the two school districts received free or reduced price lunches. State-wide, about 50 percent of the students qualify for a free or reduced price lunch.

Of the 365 students enrolled in Owen-Gage schools last year, about 120 qualified for free lunches, and about 25 received a reduced price lunch. Erickson feels there could have been more.

"There are probably a lot of people who could have been on it, but were not... They have a little bit too much pride," Erickson said. "All kids deserve and need a good meal."

He pointed out Owen-Gage is primarily an agricultural area, and if crop prices continue to fall, more and more students will qualify for the guidelines for the lunch program.

One of the federal requirements for the lunch program is that it be administered so students cannot tell who is receiving a free or reduced price lunch. At both school districts, only the administrators know who is receiving a free or reduced price lunch. At the start of the school year all students are given an application form for their parents to fill out and return to the school. The form requires: The total household income and the source of the income, such as wages or child support; if the household is receiving food stamps, and the food stamp number; names of all household members, and the social security numbers of all household members over 21 years old.

"We get in touch with them," Crouse said, about distributing the forms to the students. "It is (then) up to the parents."

Last year of the 1,720 students attending Cass City schools, 81 students were on a reduced price lunch program, and 318 received a free meal at lunch time.

Reimbursement for the free and reduced price lunch programs comes from the National School Lunch, School Breakfast or Commodity School Program. For a free lunch the school district is reimbursed about $1.18, plus 12.5 cents, which is given to the school district for every student meal served. For a reduced price lunch the school district is reimbursed about 78 cents. The district also receives the 12.5 cents on reduced price lunches.

At Owen-Gage, the cost of a regular price elementary student meal is 70 cents. High school students pay $1. The cost of a regular price meal for an elementary student in the Cass City district is 85 cents. High school students pay 90 cents.

Your neighbor says

He's pleased with seat belt law

What are your feelings on the new seat belt law now that it has been in effect for more than two months? "I think it is a good idea. I think it will save a lot of lives," said Richard Parrott, a Cass City area resident. "I am pleased with it."

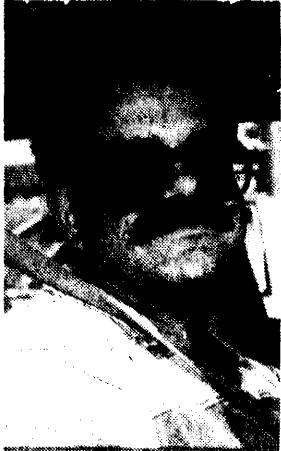

Parrott said he has been wearing seat belts for quite awhile, and now that the law has passed he has been wearing them whenever he gets into a car.

Parrott's reasons for wearing a seat belt are simple: "I would rather be alive than splattered all over the road," he said.

Parrott has his own proof that seat belts work. He said about 15 years ago his vehicle struck a bridge abutment. He was wearing the old lap style seat belts, and only suffered minor injuries. "I have proof...I realized after that it (wearing a seat belt) was a good idea," he said. He and his wife Deb have two children who always wear seat belts whenever they are in the car.

The Parrotts live at 3238 Dodge Rd., Cass City.

$240 loss in theft at Deford

Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Deputy Glen Skrent reported the theft of two bicycles and two portable radios from a Deford residence Aug. 29.

According to the report, the bicycles and radios, valued at $240, were taken from the Charlene Smutek residence, 6049 Wilcox Rd., Deford, while she was away from home. The bicycles were stolen from the yard, and the thieves took the two radios from a bedroom in the mobile home. The front door of the mobile home was not locked.

Smutek told Deputy Skrent she left home at 12:45 p.m., and discovered the items missing when she returned at 8:45 p.m. A neighbor saw a red car leave the driveway at 1:30 p.m.

It's official, MESC to close offices in Caro, Sandusky

An announcement by the Michigan Employment Security Commission last week made it official, the Caro and Sandusky MESC offices will close at the end of September.

The two area offices are among 22 offices statewide the MESC will be closing to bring their fiscal 1986 budget into line, according to Norman Isotalo, communications representative for the MESC.

Originally, the MESC announced they would be closing 23 offices throughout the state. The only office to escape the budget cutting ax is the Battle Creek office. Five offices in the state are moving to smaller quarters, and will provide only employment services. Payment of unemployment insurance at these five offices will be eliminated.

When the MESC board first announced the closing of the 23 offices throughout the state, after a July 30 meeting, they projected a savings of $735,000 a year in office expenses, such as lease payments and utility costs. The commission expected to eliminate 181 staff positions by closing the 23 offices.

Isotalo explained by eliminating the 22 offices the MESC expects to save about $700,000 a year in office expenses. He added they are projecting an overall savings of $6.5 million for fiscal year 1986.

Isotalo said when the Caro office closes, people signing up for unemployment insurance will have to drive to Bay City, Saginaw and Bad Axe. Persons in Sandusky will go to offices in Bad Axe, Lapeer and Port Huron.

Isotalo said people who will be forced to drive more than 25 miles to pick up unemployment benefits may be offered an option where they could receive their checks by mail. He added the person receiving checks by mail will be required to report to the MESC office for a claim review every eight weeks.

State-wide, about 180 positions will be eliminated by closing the 22 offices. The Caro branch has 12 employees. At Sandusky there are five employees.

O-G reaches settlement with union

A tentative agreement between the Owen-Gage Board of Education and the Tri-County Bargaining Association, the union representing the teachers, has been reached over a one word dispute in their present contract.

Both sides refused to release any terms of the agreement, that was reached at a meeting before the Michigan Employee Relations Committee Aug. 28.

The disagreement over the contract is the omission of the word severance for payment of sick days. The union claims the word was omitted in the contract, and the board claims the word was never in the master agreement.

Owen-Gage Superintendent Ronald Erickson is to present board members with the tentative agreement for their approval at the Sept. 9 board meeting.

The four-year contract, retroactive for the 1983-84 school year, went into effect last year. Teachers have received salary increases as specified in the agreement.

Messengers Quartet at Salem Church

The Messengers Quartet, a gospel group from Lansing, will be at Salem United Methodist Church, 4446 Ale St., Cass City, Sunday, Sept. 8. They will be singing during the 10 a.m. Sunday School hour as well as during the 11 a.m. worship service.

First organized in the fall of 1972 at Capital City Christian High School in Lansing, The Messengers Quartet has had the opportunity to work with some of the best names in gospel music today. They have shared the stage with such nationally known groups as Danny Gauthier, The Speer Family and The Imperials.

All of the current Messengers have full-time occupations. Bass singer and manager Rick Craft is an accountant; baritone Dennis Craft is a professional photographer; first tenor Walt Saxton is a welder; piano player and lead singer Brad Lockwood is an attorney; bass guitarist Dave Cokounger is an auto body repairman, and acoustical guitarist Kevin Nethaway is self-employed with the State of Michigan.

Salem United Methodist Church invites the public to hear this talented group of young men who have sung in concerts and churches throughout Michigan, the midwest and Canada.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

Second of Two Articles.

Last week we told of the crisis in liability insurance, how sky-high rates were driving people to sell out their companies or their private professional practices — or just abandon them.

In such critical times the victims look for a scapegoat. The handy and obvious one is the insurance industry. After all, it's your agent that gives you the bad news that your rate is tripled next year. It's your agent that collects his pint of blood — except now it will be well over a quart.

We went to the prestigious insurance company statistical firm of A M Best in New York for some figures on profits and losses in the industry for the past 30 years. The results are reprinted here. Note that these are underwriting profits and losses. They do not include investment income. A company takes in $1 million in premiums, say, and pays out in claims and commissions and expenses $900,000, and they've made $100,000 in underwriting profit. Those were the days.

Investment income the last few years has been high because interest rates have soared, and the stock market has gone up. As premiums failed to cover mounting losses, the extra investment income has kept companies from going bankrupt.

Two things have happened lately:

1. Juries have gone hog-wild in awarding vast sums in damages, all out of proportion to the injuries suffered.

2. Interest rates have come down. Government bonds that once yielded 14 percent now bring in 10.6 percent. Naturally, total income from investments is down.

Here are the A M Best figures for the whole industry for 30 years. Note how the usual rags-to-riches cycle of three years has now passed its sixth year of losses, and 1985 will make the seventh.

Look also at the top year for profits — 1978, when the total hit $1.284 billion. And then, glance at the last figure for losses — 1984 when the red ink hit $21 billion — 16 times the best profit year.

And yet Ralph Nader says insurance companies are making obscene profits and we should have laws to force premiums lower.

Plainly, the problem is with court awards for damages. There'll be a lot of political speeches made about this, but don't let your hair grow until changes are made.

You aren't apt to change the system of contingency fees for lawyers. Litigating these cases is expensive and the average person doesn't want to put thousands of dollars up front when he turns his claim over to a lawyer.

Legislatures aren't apt to put a cap on court awards. There'd be a hue and cry that some poor, aged or infirm might not get their full due for pain and suffering. And this could be the case for some. And there are more votes on this side than the insurance companies can dredge up on their side.

Something has to give. It's a genuine crisis. What to do?

If anyone asks me, and no one has, I'd stay away from insurance stocks in the liability field at the time. And if I were in a business or profession being slapped with these horrible insurance rates, I'd try to sell out, before the situation gets any better known. Maybe, like my friend in Toronto, you can find a company that can absorb yours and it along on a long-term lower-rate liability policy they already have.

If I were a doctor I'd advance my retirement schedule and try to sell the practice before the problem gets worse. If I had to keep doctoring, I'd try self-insuring, if the hospital where I was on the staff would permit it. I'd consider pooling this self-insurance with a few other careful, skillful doctors who wouldn't be apt to be sued. And I'd have a rainy-day fund of cash available to hire a good lawyer at the first sign of a patient about to sue.

It's a rotten outlook — rotten not just for people socked with the insurance premiums, but rotten for you and me as the ultimate ones who pay the patients the customers, the stockholders of companies.

A light at the end of the tunnel? Sure, there is. It's a train coming this way.

bids the village received, the lower was $39,000. Both bids were rejected.

LaPonsie told the council he had anticipated a maximum bid of about $20,000 for the maintenance repair.

Trustee Elwyn Helwig read the report from the engineering firm that listed the tower to be in good shape, but bid specifications required the 200,000 gallon tank be sandblasted. LaPonsie feels the tower only needs a high pressure water blast to prepare the surface for a new wax liner. By using a high water pressure blast instead of a sandblast the price of the job will be reduced. LaPonsie feels the tower requires only maintenance work, and not a major renovation.

Hubbell, Roth and Clark Inc. will be submitting a new bid specification sheet, listing the types of repairs that are needed. LaPonsie said the engineering firm's new bid sheet will be presented to the village at "very little cost."

Also at the meeting, trustees agreed to extend the tax collection date until Oct. 15. So far 89.9 percent of the village taxes have been collected.

Myers hits tree, avoids injury

A Warren man sought his own treatment for injuries suffered when he lost control of his vehicle and struck a tree while trying to avoid a large raccoon lying in the road Saturday at 11:40 p.m.

Sgt. Leland Teschendorf of the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department reported Donald M. Myers, 53, 22157 Marsch Rd., Warren, was eastbound on Deckerville Road, near Englehart Road, when he swerved to miss the raccoon. Myers went off the south side of the road and struck a tree. When officers arrived, the raccoon was still lying in the north lane of Deckerville Road. Myers was wearing seat belts at the time of the accident.
