3 Hampshires win $1.3 million in suit

When Ronald, Randy and Kenneth Hampshire began a lawsuit against a large corporation claiming a design flaw in a milking system caused extensive damages to their dairy herd, the Deford area farmers knew the odds were against them.

"When they look at that $220,000 savings, they are going to think twice about appealing." Attorney William Drillock

Seek parking meter removal

At a meeting of the Cass City Retail Committee Tuesday, Nov. 5, three members were appointed to a committee to ask the Cass City Village Council to remove parking meters from Main Street.

Appointed were Bill Kritzman, Mike Weaver and Clarence "Bud" Schneeberger. Village Supt. Lou LaPonsie said that meters together with parking fines in the village bring in about $5,000 annually.

Parking meters were installed in Cass City in 1962, according to Chief Gene Wilson.

Advocates of meters say that their chief benefit is that they control parking for long periods on Main Street and allow customer's cars to park close to stores visited.

Advocates for removal point to larger communities such as Sandusky which have removed meters because of their adverse effect on business.

We need to get the meters off the street, Schneeberger said, and then have a heavy fine for anyone abusing a two-hour parking limit.

Money from the parking meters is now used to pay rental for the large lot near the north corner of Main and Seeger Streets and the smaller lot in back of Fort's Store in the alley south of Main.

A survey by Schneeberger of Main Street merchants indicates that a large majority favor removal of the meters.

The three committeemen are expected to appear before the council at its next regular session Nov. 26.

"Proving a design flaw is one of the hardest things to do in court," Randy Hampshire said. The Hampshires were also fighting DeLaval Agriculture, a world-wide milking system manufacturer who has won several similar cases in the past.

After more than two weeks of courtroom testimony, including testimony by experts from the educational fields, video tape testimony, and video tapes of the system in action, a Tuscola County Circuit Court jury decided the Hampshires were right. After about eight hours of deliberation, the four-women, three-man jury reached a decision Wednesday, claiming that DeLaval owes the Hampshires $1.311 million, plus 12 percent interest for the last two and a half years.

The Hampshires' attorney, William Drillock, Marlette, said the total settlement would be about $1.57 million. He feels the trial was error free, and he wasn't surprised about the outcome.

Drillock said because the Hampshires are in danger of losing their farm because of financial problems that have plagued them, he has given DeLaval the opportunity to pay the Deford farmers $1.35 million, if payment is made within 10 days. Drillock explained he wouldn't make that offer, except the Hampshires could possibly lose their farm. DeLaval has 20 days to appeal the decision.

"I think when they start looking at that figure (the $220,000 savings if they agree to pay within 10 days) they are going to think twice at appealing," Drillock added. "The only thing that has kept them (the Hampshires) going is this lawsuit." The Chronicle has twice contacted the offices of DeLaval attorney Stephen Anderson, Minneapolis, Minn., for comments about a possible appeal. Both times Anderson was unavailable for comment. He has not returned a call to the Chronicle.

The Hampshires claimed a DeLaval 100 milking system, installed on their farm in 1962, caused cows to suffer mastitis.

Shirley Hampshire, Randy's wife, explained the DeLaval 100 milking system would suck the milk from the cows' teats faster than it could be pumped to the milk tank. This excessive milk would then cause the milk opening at the bottom of the teat. She explained when the opening was damaged, the cows were more susceptible to bacteria, causing mastitis.

"There was something doing it (causing the mastitis), but they just couldn't put their finger on it," Shirley said. "They (her husband, and father and brother-in-law) knew the best way to run a dairy farm." Randy had graduated from Michigan State University with an associate's degree in agricultural technologies. Kenneth completed one year of MSU's dairy programs.

During the 17 years the Hampshires had the DeLaval system, they checked it, checked the feed and the cows' environment, and everything looked all right.

"Everybody told us it was the best (milking) system," Shirley said, explaining the milking system was checked several times, and it was operating at factory

O-G eases athletic eligibility rules

Trustees of the Owen-Gage School District decided to change an academic eligibility policy so students can still practice, but not play, if they receive grades totaling less than a C average on their report cards.

The new academic policy, approved at a regular meeting Monday night, also allows a student who is close to a C average to be placed on probation, so his academic performance can be reviewed weekly to determine eligibility. If a student on probation improves his classroom grades, he will be allowed to play. Under the old rule, approved last year, if the student earned less than a C average he was ineligible for the next six weeks.

The policy change was made at the first board meeting following the first grading period of the 1985-86 school year, when six football players were declared ineligible. Because of the loss of six players, football coaches at the school considered forfeiting the last two games of the season.

"I would like to state very emphatically that we are not going to lower the standards," Supt. Ronald G. Erickson said. He explained the change has been requested because he has found some inequities in the extracurricular academic eligibility policy. Erickson pointed out the present system does not take into consideration a plus or a minus that is recorded on the student's report card. A C+ or C- is recorded as two points when the student's eligibility is tallied.

On a blackboard, Erickson listed a student's grades with six C's. Each C- is worth 1.7 grade points, but on the academic eligibility scale it is recorded as two points. Although the student's overall grade point average is actually 1.7, he would still be eligible to play because he has earned 12 points.

On the other side of the blackboard, Erickson listed a student with five

C+'s, and one D+. Using a 2.3 grade point for each C+, and a 1.3 for the D+, the student has an actual grade point average of 2.13, but he is ineligible because he earned only 11 points, two points for each C, and one point for the D.

Under the new system, students will still earn the same number of points for each letter grade, but if a student has 10 or 11 points he will be placed on academic probation. He will be allowed to practice, but not play. Students who earn nine or less points will be ineligible for the next six weeks, and not allowed to practice.

A student who earned 10 or 11 points at the end of the six-week marking period will have his academic performance reviewed each Monday. If his grades have improved enough to have a C average he will be allowed to play. High School Principal Wayne Wright explained a student may be eligible one week, and ineligible the next week. At the end of the six-week grading period, if the student has earned 12 points, a C average, the student is removed from probation.

Wright added the grades of five students fell into the area where they would have been placed on probation under the new policy, but under the old policy they were declared ineligible.

Board President Ron Good felt the new policy was good because a player would be allowed to practice with the team. This would eliminate the risk of the player getting injured because he was out of condition.

Treasurer Jack Brinkman was the only board member to vote against the proposed change. He explained it wasn't fair to students who were not allowed to play last year. Brinkman added he wasn't in favor of the new academic policy when it was adopted. "It never should have been that," Brinkman said about the required C average for students.

Owen-Gage is the only school in the area that requires a C average for students to participate in extracurricular activities. The new policy went into effect immediately.

O-G reports varied state test results

Counselor Larry Romain presented board members with copies of the 1985 Michigan Assessment Test report showing the grades of students in the fourth, seventh and tenth grades remained about the same as last year. "Overall, in math and reading I think our students did well again this year," Romain said.

The percentage of tenth grade students who were able to answer at least 75 percent of the reading questions correctly increased from 80.6 percent for 1984, to 86.4 percent for 1985. Math scores dropped from 74.4 percent for last year, to 68.2 percent for this year. Romain explained, because the school has only a few students taking the test, one student amounts to about three percentage points.

Seventh grade reading skills increased from 67.9 percent for 1984, to 86.2 percent for 1985. Math scores dropped from 72.4 percent attaining a passing score to 58.6 percent.

Fourth grade reading skills remained the same with 83.3 percent of the students answering at least 75 percent of the questions correctly. Mathematics scores slipped from 87.5 percent to 79.2 percent.

Gary Tetreau, 31, killed in 3-vehicle accident

A 31-year-old Cass City man was killed Thursday afternoon in a three-vehicle accident on Caseville Road in Huron County's Winsor Township.

Since Monday was Armistice Day it's appropriate to lay a few figures on you which may, in part, explain why World War II grabbed the attention of the entire country and the Korean and Vietnam wars did not.

In World War II there were 16,535,000 participants, 406,000 killed and 10.46 million still alive.

Compare that to the numbers involved in Korea and Vietnam when the population was smaller. Korea had 6.8 million with 55,000 killed and Vietnam 9.2 million with 109,000 killed.

Simply, in WW-II every family was affected. In subsequent wars only families with servicemen.

Based on the number of participants, the American Revolution was really small potatoes. There were 290,000 involved, with 4,000 deaths.

Fighting in the Civil War for the union were 2.12 million with 364,000 dying. For the confederacy, 1 million fighting with 133,821 dying.

And wasn't it all a horrible waste?

Progress report: The Elkland and Novesta Townships United Way has a ways to go to meet its quota for the year. Chairman Arthur Holmberg reports that $11,000 has been collected, leaving $6,000 to go to reach the magic $17,000 figure.

Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Leonard Huff reported a showroom window, valued at $500 was broken at Ouvry Chevrolet-Olds, 6957 E. Cass City Rd., Cass City, early Sunday morning.

Entry was gained into the auto dealership by breaking open a window in the rear garage area. The thieves also pried open a locked office door, then before leaving, threw a fire extinguisher through the showroom window. The extinguisher was found about 25 feet from the building.

Police were alerted of the break-in by the building's alarm system. Sgt. Huff contacted Donald Ouvry, son of owner Gloria Ouvry, to investigate the damages. He discovered one set of keys to a new car parked on the show lot were missing.

Police have checked for fingerprints on the fire extinguisher. So far no arrests have been made.

Deputy Glenn Skrent reported three tires were taken off a vehicle parked at Bob's Bump Shop, 4068 Cemetery Rd., Cass City, Nov. 9, sometime after 9:30 p.m.

The thieves were attempting to steal a fourth tire off the vehicle, but apparently had to leave before they could get all of the lug nuts off. No arrests have been made.

Police report two bicycles stolen

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson reported two bicycles were stolen in Cass City last week.

A bicycle was stolen from Randy Johnson, Elkhart, Ind., sometime after Nov. 5, and before Nov. 7, while he was visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James "Doc" Johnson, 4286 Oak St., Cass City. The bicycle, parked on the patio, was a yellow 24 or 26-inch boys' bicycle.

A 20-inch silver and black bicycle was stolen from David McNaughton, 4875 N. Seeger St., Cass City, while it was parked in a bicycle rack at the Cass City High School.

The Huff bicycle was taken during the evening hours of Nov. 8, after 9:00 p.m.

The other day Bob Talbert, columnist for the Detroit Free Press, tried to explain the difference between small towns and the big city.

The "small" town he was comparing Detroit to has a population of about 25,000, Talbert says. It may be different in towns that size than it is in towns of under 5,000. If it isn't, Talbert missed the mark when he tried to tell how it is in small towns.

First of all, he says that living is cheaper in the big city than in the small town. That's open to serious question when you figure the cost of housing and transportation in the small town compared to Detroit.

Darn few urban dwellers can walk to work and the prices rentals bring in Cass City would make apartment dwellers in urban America drool.

He goes on to say that the major difference in living in small towns is that you are apt to meet someone you know at any time, any place.

That's where he misses the mark. As Talbert pontificated about small town, big town differences, I couldn't help but think about something Holly Althaver told me as we were discussing this year's Bach Festival slated Nov. 26, 29, 30 and Dec. 1.

The guest artists coming to Cass City have found something here that they haven't found in the larger cities where they usually perform.

That's the warm friendly feeling that they experience from the audience and the persons with whom they stay while in the community.

That's great, but nothing more than these same visitors could experience if they were visiting other similar size towns around the country.

Folks aren't basically much different in Cass City than they are in any Michigan community, large or small.

Transport any of us to Detroit and we would probably be the same towards strangers as any native born Detroiters.

Maybe it's the anonymity that hordes of people bring that causes it.

I'd buy it if you told me that there are differences between folks in different areas of the country even though they live in the same size communities.

It always seemed to me that easterners are more reserved, southerners more clanish (maybe that's because I'm a Yankee), and westerners really friendly.

In short, the percentage of good guys and nerds in the city and the country don't vary all that much.

In the small town you just get to know them better.

TV program listings, in daily newspapers or weekly guides, provide the most exciting, imaginative and yet succinct writing available to today's busy reader. In just a few words, the synopsis writer lures viewers by taking the dull lives led by television characters and making them sound interesting.

I seldom watch the programs, but I always read the listings.

My favorite is "Dynasty." The most recent listing in my favorite newspaper said: "Joel accelerates his extortion plans; Alexis receives news from Moldavia; a shadowy figure watches vacationing Claudia and Adam."

Probably, Joel is merely planning to reveal that Blake Carrington, who prides himself on finding at least one of his 784 long-lost children every week, is actually a bachelor with only two kids and one bearded nanny.

The news from Moldavia is most likely something humdrum like the immaculate resurrection of the long-dead king who has an uncontrollable fetish for the chrome evening gowns that the mother of Carrington's long-lost children wears for chasing male models

Armed robbery charges filed

A 22-year-old man, charged with two counts of armed robbery and a felony firearm possession charge, stood mute in Tuscola County Circuit Court Monday, Nov. 4. A not guilty plea was entered.

The charges against Nolan Nash, address listed as Genesee County Jail, stem from the Sept. 19 armed robbery of an automobile, rifle and money from Caro residents John and Emily Piske. During the robbery Nash allegedly tied the Piskes up and fled with their vehicle. Nash had been paroled from the Flint area jail 19 days before the robbery.

Nash is being held in the county jail without bond. A pre-trial hearing is set for Nov. 12.

through swamps.

And probably the shadowy figure watching Claudia and Adam is nothing more than the anti-discrimination ghost of the bishop who killed himself because he was the only male resident of Colorado, not seen in bed with Claudia on ABC-TV, the Puritan network that refuses to say "contraceptive" in commercials that might be seen by Blake Carrington's 146 teenage children who, although still lost, may have access to a television set.

That's all pretty dull stuff, obviously, but the synopsis writer made it sound interesting. By a brilliant choice of subtle words — "vacationing" instead of "copulating," for instance — the writer made that episode of "Dynasty" sound irresistible to the discriminating viewer.

I sometimes imagine how my boring life would sound if described by a TV listings writer: "Jim's wife accelerates her talking; Jim receives phone bill; Jim's AT&T credit card stashed for capture."

Doesn't that last line sound exciting? I got it from a friend who inserted his Comerica bank card into an automatic teller machine and didn't get it back. He complained and subsequently received a letter from Comerica saying it was a mistake because his card "was not stashed for capture."

It may well be that the Comerica employee who wrote that letter is a former writer of TV synopses. If you read in TV Guide that my credit card was stashed for capture at 9 p.m. Wednesday, you surely would be excited.

You would envision a posse of bankers astride armored cars waiting in ambush for me to walk by while packing the credit card more often brandished by my wife. You would expect to hear them muttering about how many times the card had been brandished in tight situations with nothing to back it up.

Swayed by the magic words of the TV listing writer, you would tune in my life hoping to see a credit card lassoed from behind a boulder. After the capture, you would expect the head banker to purr: "Sorry, card, but that's what happens to the stashed ones."

You would be disappointed by the reality of my life wherein a credit card is allowed to expire peacefully in its wallet, just as long as no renewal is sought. But you wouldn't be disappointed until after a clever TV synopsis writer had persuaded you to improve my ratings.

That's the real news from Moldavia. Also, the king just died again. He was pouted to death by Claudia.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Area needs physical therapist

To the Editor,
I recently sold my place in Sanilac County and moved to Cass City, the county of Tuscola, thinking that my wife, who had a severe stroke in February, would receive the same kind of help she was getting in Sanilac County. The only thing she's getting is speech therapy, and occupational therapy. And none of the physical therapy she was getting three times a week, which is very important for rehabilitation. Why is there so much difference from one county to the other? We are senior citizens. I didn't work all my life to be treated this way.

Blood Bank coming Nov. 19

The Red Cross Blood Bank will visit Hills and Dales General Hospital Tuesday, Nov. 19, from 1:00 to 7:00 p.m. This holiday season blood bank is sponsored by the Cass City Zonta Club.

You can give blood if you are over 18 years old, weigh over 110 pounds, are in good health and have not given blood in eight weeks. It is important that you eat a good diet on the day you give blood. Your body quickly replaces the blood you've given and the small amount of blood you donate will not be missed.

According to Dr. Mueller, M.D., Medical Director of the Wolverine Red Cross Blood Bank, "It is impossible to get AIDS by donating blood." Everything used in the donation process is entirely disposable. The sterile needles used in the donation process are used once and then discarded per health regulations.

Donating blood takes about one hour and everyone is encouraged to donate. No appointments are necessary.

Volunteers are needed to help with the blood bank. They help with registration of donors and run the canteen. If anyone would like to help, call Jane Mitchell, RN, at Hills and Dales General Hospital, 872-2121.

LOOK BOTH WAYS when crossing a railroad crossing, warned Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Deputy Richard Blakely to Jason Nicol and Pam Leiteman at a Safetyville program at the Deford Elementary School. Blakely was at the school Monday to teach students about pedestrian and traffic safety. About 1,500 preschool, kindergarten and first grade students throughout the county will participate in the program.

Five appear in circuit court on sex charges

Five persons appeared before Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge Patrick Joslyn, Monday, Nov. 4, to be sentenced or enter pleas on charges of criminal sexual conduct.

The first to appear in circuit court was Reymundo Martinez, 44, 189 Andy St., Vassar, on a charge of criminal sexual conduct, first degree. Martinez faces charges stemming from an alleged April, 1985 involvement with a Vassar girl under age 13. The charge carries a maximum life in prison sentence.

Martinez stood mute before Judge Joslyn. A not guilty plea was entered by the court. A pre-trial hearing has been set for Dec. 2. Bond continues at $25,000.

A guilty plea from Scott W. Reinert, 20, 4430 Murphy Lake Rd., Millington, to criminal sexual conduct, second degree, was refused by Judge Joslyn. Reinert has been charged with first degree criminal sexual conduct for his alleged July 20 involvement with a Millington boy under 13 years old. The case has been remanded to district court for a preliminary examination.

Joseph S. Coscia, 37, 418 Emmet, Ypsilanti, was sentenced to one year in the county jail, and five years' probation, on a charge of second degree criminal sexual conduct. He will receive credit for time already spent in jail.

The charges stem from Coscia's involvement with a Cass City boy under age 13. Coscia pleaded no contest to the charge Aug. 26.

Coscia was ordered to pay a $300 fine and $300 court costs.

Guadalupe Garza, 39, 4932 Quinn St., Gagetown, was sentenced to one year in jail and five years' probation on a charge of criminal sexual conduct, second degree. He will receive credit for time already served.

The charge stems from Garza's May 25 involvement with a Gagetown girl over 13, but less than 16 years of age. He pleaded guilty to the charge June 18.

In addition to the jail sentence and probation, Garza was ordered to pay a $300 fine and court costs of $300. During his probation period, Garza is to receive counseling.

Walter J. Arn, 56, 6725 Bevens Rd., Deford, was sentenced to 18 months to five years in prison on a charge of third degree criminal sexual conduct. The charges stem from Arn's May 3 involvement with a 13-year-old boy. Arn pleaded guilty to the charge Sept. 23.

Judge Joslyn recommended Arn receive psychological counseling while in prison. Arn was given credit for time already spent in jail awaiting sentencing.

In other circuit court action, Gary J. Periso, 23, 3595 Warner Rd., Cass City, was sentenced to one year in the county jail, with credit for time already served, on a charge of delivery of marijuana.

The charge stems from Periso's May 1 sale of marijuana to an undercover law enforcement officer.

The court accepted a guilty plea from Ray J. Klein, 20, 5246 W. Saginaw Rd., Vassar, on a charge of attempted larceny from a motor vehicle. Klein was originally charged with larceny from a motor vehicle Aug. 22, when he took a tire from a vehicle at the My Olds auto sales lot in Vassar.

Klein will be sentenced Jan. 6. Bond continues at $5,000.

Christine F. Urban, 23, 500 S. Almer St., Caro, was sentenced to three years' probation, and ordered to do 180 hours of community service after she pleaded guilty to attempted delivery of LSD. The charge stems from Urban's June 14, 1984 sale of LSD to an undercover law enforcement officer from the Lapeer County Sheriff's Department. The officer was working with Tuscola County Sheriff's Department officers. The officer purchased 10 LSD pills from Urban for $2 each.

Urban was ordered to pay a $300 fine and $300 court costs.

Raymond E. Staten was sentenced to two to four years in Southeastern Michigan Prison, Jackson, on a charge of delivery of marijuana.

The charge against Staten, 46, 4892 W. Center St., Millington, stems from a Jan. 9 sale of marijuana to an undercover law enforcement officer. Staten will receive credit against the sentence for time already served in jail. As part of the plea bargaining agreement, two other delivery of marijuana charges were dismissed.

Register now for the Battle of the Books

The sixth annual Battle of the Books, sponsored cooperatively by Rawson Memorial Library, and Cass City Elementary and Intermediate School Libraries, will begin Nov. 11. According to Librarian Barb Hutchinson, the purpose of Battle of the Books is to encourage more reading among third, fourth, fifth and sixth grade students by introducing them to twenty-five enjoyable books.

All children in grades 3-6 are invited to participate. Children form teams of six members, and must have an adult team manager. The team manager will act as contact person between the team and the library. He will also arrange transportation, and provide help with scoring and timekeeping for the battles.

Hutchinson added, each year some teams have a difficult time getting a manager. Any adult interested in helping with a team should call the library, 872-2856, for more information.

Registration forms may be picked up at Rawson Memorial Library or the school libraries, beginning

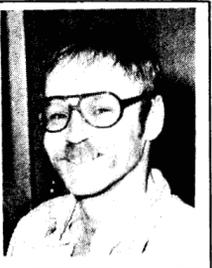

Nov. 11. Registration will end Dec. 13.

Students without a team who wish to participate should bring their permission slip to the librarian. The librarian will make every effort to assign them to a team.

Reading lists and the books on the lists will be available at Rawson Memorial Library beginning Nov. 11. The battles will begin Feb. 25.

McLeod Days

By Bill McLeod

Last week, a $6 investment at the McLeod household paid for itself a hundred times over. I'll bet Bill Myers ("Taking Stock" columnist) would agree that a smoke alarm is one of the better investments a person can make. I am sure they have helped a lot of people reach their golden years.

It was a usual Tuesday afternoon when the two-year-old smoke alarm finally earned its keep. I arrived home exhausted from putting out another edition of the Chronicle (I used to refer to putting the paper to bed as giving birth. After seeing my son born, I realize putting a paper out is a lot easier). This time, instead of heading straight for the sofa for a couple hours of well deserved rest, I stopped at the kitchen stove and examined a frying pan I have been trying to rejuvenate. The pan's so called non-stick surface was no longer working, so for three days I had been pouring oil into it, and heating it on the stove. The pan looked like it needed another treatment, so I cranked the burner on high, and let the gas stove go to work.

The next few minutes were spent playing on the bedroom floor with Andy and his new race car. Diane was in the living room relaxing and reading a book. Life at the McLeod house resembled a scene from "Ozzie and Harriet."

But suddenly, the tranquility of a quiet afternoon was shattered by the high pitched shriek of the smoke detector, a sound I have cursed many times on a humid day when cooking my famous sliders (hamburgers a la grease).

Diane quickly raced to the kitchen (she's used to my forgetfulness, and my sliders), and whisked the sizzling pan off the stove. Fortunately, the pan hadn't erupted into flames.

Andy did just what he has been told to do during our fire drills. He knows that when the alarm goes off he is not to go looking for the fire. We've also taught him how to stay low in a smoke filled room, and how you have to feel a door to see if it is hot before opening it.

After all of the commotion finally stopped, and while I was kicking myself in the behind for being so stupid, Diane went through our fire drill procedures with Andy.

Later that day, I bought a new battery for the smoke detector. I figure it should be rewarded for doing a good job.

The pound cake gets its name from the pound of butter it contains.

LAKE WOBEGON DAYS by Garrison Keillor (fiction). The irrepressible raconteur of Public Radio's "A Prairie Home Companion" sets down in print the unlikely doings of the larkly inhabitants of Lake Wobegon, Minnesota. Beginning with the town's beginnings, Keillor narrates the hazards of its first explorers, Fr. Pierre Plaisir and Count Carlo Pallavinci. He recalls his school days, and the fervent wish of his Protestant youth - to be Catholic so that he might be burned at the stake. And around him, in their glory, the denizens of Lake Wobegon - Ralph of Ralph's Pretty Good Grocery and the Statue of the Unknown Norwegian. A warm, witty, unforgettable portrait of small-town American life.

JEALOUSLY by Nancy Friday (non-fiction). A revealing - sometimes shocking - look at a pervasive yet frequently denied emotion. Friday draws on wide-ranging research, and unsparing reconnoitres of her own and a companion's psyche, to explore this powerful force in human behavior. In a survey that moves from Melanie Klein's theories on primal rage to the Old Testament, from Medea to Jean Harris, Friday marks a path to understanding and liberation.

ARE YOU STILL MY MOTHER? ARE YOU STILL MY FAMILY? by Gloria Guss Back (non-fiction). The author, a counselor for families of Gay children and the mother of a Gay son, addresses the emotional needs of parents with Gay children. She examines the back-ground of homosexuality and gives detailed case histories from her practice - stories told by parents and their Gay children about how the family dealt with the crisis. She also details her own feelings and the struggle she experienced when her son told her he was Gay.

AROUND THE FARM

Pesticide certification

By Bill Bortel

A large percentage of the Tuscola County farmers are expected to become certified pesticide applicators for the first time this winter. A small percentage of the farmers became certified a few years ago, however, the addition of several new pesticides to the restricted list will result in many more farmers being forced to take the pesticide test this winter.

Many commonly used granular insecticide products have recently been classified as restricted use pesticides (RUP), necessitating field crop producers to become certified by the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA). Becoming certified to use RUPs will legally allow growers to continue to use these products effectively and safely during future growing seasons. Most all corn root worm insecticides are now on the restricted list.

State certification for farmers to use RUPs begins with obtaining the self-study guide, "Safe, Effective Use of Pesticides — A Manual for Private Applicators," CES bulletin E-1025. This manual is available from your county Extension Office or from the MSU Bulletin Office, P.O. Box 6640, East Lansing, MI 48823-6640. The cost for this bulletin is 70 cents.

The manual contains information on the laws and regulations that govern pesticide use in this state, pest identification techniques and pest management, the chemistry of pesticides, labels and labeling information, application equipment and techniques, and safe use guidelines.

Thoroughly studying this manual will provide applicants with the necessary information to use pesticides effectively and safely and assist them in gaining the 70 percent minimum passing score required for certification. Additional information and instructions are available at the Extension Office in Caro.

An application for state certification is provided in each self-study guide. Fill out the application and send it, plus a $10 check made out to State of Michigan, to the MDA. The MDA will then process the application and inform the applicant about the certification exam schedule. It is up to the applicant to set up a date with the MDA to take the exam. The MDA issues the appropriate certification documents after an applicant has passed the test.

The date of Thursday, Feb. 6, 1986, has been reserved with the MDA to give the test to applicants in Tuscola County. The location of the testing will be in the Extension Office meeting room, 420 Court Street, Caro, at 1:30 p.m.

HEALTH TIPS

Drinking milk today may prevent future bone problems

Drinking milk during childhood and teenage years is known to be important for growth and development. But it also may help protect against osteoporosis in later years, say University of Pittsburgh researchers, Rivka Black Sandler, Ph.D., and colleagues.

These medical investigators measured bone mass in 255 white postmenopausal women and asked them whether they "always," "sometimes," or "rarely" drank milk during childhood, adolescence, and adulthood. Bone mass was significantly greater in the women who reported drinking milk with every meal during childhood and adolescence than in those who consumed milk less frequently in early years, said the researchers in their article published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition.

Osteoporosis, or age-related bone mass, is a major public health problem in our society. Bone fractures experienced by osteoporotic individuals, mostly postmenopausal women, not only lessen the quality of life but increase risk of death.

A major factor determining susceptibility to osteoporotic fractures in menopause is skeletal mass. Both peak skeletal mass reached in early adulthood and bone mass lost during adulthood influence the amount of skeletal mass at menopause, explain Sandler and associates. The greater the peak bone mass and/or the smaller the amount of bone lost, the less risk of osteoporosis.

Most of the efforts to prevent and treat osteoporosis have focused on decreasing adult and postmenopausal bone loss. However, if bone already is lost, it cannot be replaced. Therefore, increasing skeletal mass at the time it reaches its peak in early years clearly protects against osteoporosis and fractures in later years, suggest these University of Pittsburgh researchers.

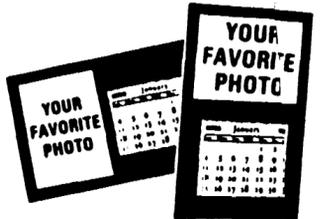

About 99 percent of the body's calcium is in bones. When calcium intake is inadequate, calcium is removed from bones to maintain blood calcium levels. The loss of calcium from bone is largely responsible for adult bone loss and eventually osteoporosis.

Milk and other dairy foods are the main dietary source of calcium. "The effects of milk consumption in childhood and adolescence on bone density may manifest as higher bone density decades later in menopause," say Sandler and coworkers. These investigators speculate that milk intake during early years not only increases peak skeletal mass but helps to establish life-long favorable nutritional habits which in turn may decrease adult bone loss.

Spends two years in Africa

Kueffner finds Peace Corps rewarding

Before Anthony "Tony" Kueffner decided to settle down to a career as an engineer, he wanted a chance to see how people in other parts of the world lived. But instead of running off to Europe for a backpacking tour of the continent, Kueffner decided he would rather spend some time offering a helping hand to people in other countries. He joined the Peace Corps. Kueffner, now an engineer with Walbro Corp., quit an engineer's position with the American Can Co., Green Bay, Wis., in September 1981, to join the Peace Corps. "I was in an engineer's position...I felt I was locked in," Kueffner said. "I had the feeling 'this is my job, and this is what I was going to do until I retired'. I guess I was scared." Kueffner's first stop as a Peace Corps volunteer was in Washington, D.C., where he took a one month training session. Kueffner, originally from Frankenmuth, would next go to Nairobi, the capital of the African country of Kenya. Kueffner spent the next two months in Nairobi learning the native language, Swahili, and getting to know the east African country. From Nairobi, Kueffner went to Lukore, a small village about 70 miles from the Indian Ocean. There he spent the next two years teaching science to Kenyan high school students. While in Lukore, Kueffner learned to live without a car, electricity or running water. "After a while it just seemed normal," he said about living without luxuries Americans take for granted. His house, which he described as "pretty good for the area," had mud walls covered with mortar, and a corrugated steel roof. His housing was supplied by the school he taught for. During the rainy season, Kueffner's drinking water came from the torrential rains. Parts of Kenya receive an average rainfall of 70 inches yearly. In the dry season, when temperatures reach 110 degrees, his drinking water came from a nearby river. Kueffner boiled all the river water before drinking it. In the two years he spent in Africa, he never got sick from drinking impure water. Kueffner described the Kenyan school system as having a "rigorous curriculum" that is similar to schools in the United States. Students took classes in geography, history, chemistry, science, English and Swahili. Classes are divided into four groups: seven years of primary school, four years of secondary high school, two years of advanced high school and three years of university type studies. At the completion of the first three educational steps, students take a national examination. Top ranking students will be allowed to attend the best school available.

As a teacher, Kueffner was paid $200 a month. Kenyan teachers earn about $175 per month. Many of those teachers send part of their pay home to support family members. In comparison, a Kenyan farm worker earned about $15 per month. Talking to native Kenyans was not a problem for Kueffner. He explained Kenya was once a British colony, and most of the people who went through a primary school could speak enough English so he could talk with them. He added their English was better than his Swahili. Kueffner said Kenyans were content with their government. "They did have a coup (a military takeover attempt) while I was there, but it failed." The country has a one-party political system, and the president serves a life term. Kenya is divided into parliamentary districts, with each district sending a member to parliament. The mainstay of the Kenyan export economy is coffee and tea. Kueffner said most of the farmers in the area he lived in worked a one or two-acre farm with a hoe. A "lucky" farmer had about 10 acres and a steel plow that was pulled by oxen.

During his stay in Kenya, Kueffner lost 13 pounds. He explained people ate a lot of Ugali, a cornmeal paste, and vegetables similar to greens. When he ate meat, generally once a week, it was either goat or beef. Kueffner added, it took a while for him to get used to eating goat. The village butcher shop was without refrigeration. The slaughtered meat would hang in the open air market until it was sold.

Not all of Kueffner's African stay was spent in the small village. The schools closed every three months for a one-month vacation. During this time, Kueffner and other Peace Corps volunteers from neighboring communities would take sightseeing trips to other parts of Africa, including trips to wildlife areas where they saw African animals running free. He also vacationed on Kenya's eastern coast, a resort area for Europeans. Kueffner said he enjoyed his stay in the Peace Corps, and recommends it for others. He added they are in need of persons with agricultural, medical and science backgrounds, along with people who have training in other areas. "It's something I wouldn't trade," Kueffner said about the Peace Corps. "If you asked other volunteers, 99 percent would say the same. 'They didn't save the world, but it's some-

Two states tops for volunteers

The two state region of Michigan and Ohio was responsible for the highest percentage of new Peace Corps volunteers in the nation last year. According to Duane J. DeBruyne, Peace Corps public affairs manager, over the past 12 months, 310 Michigan and Ohio residents have gone overseas to serve in the Peace Corps. This number has exceeded the agency's recruitment goal for the two state region by 24 percent. This is the highest recruitment rate for any of the 16 regional recruitment offices located in the U.S. and Puerto Rico. Since 1961, when the Peace Corps was started, nearly 4,700 Michigan residents have served as volunteers in 90 developing countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean and the Pacific. For the second year in a row Michigan State University won top honors among colleges by placing 44 graduates into Peace Corps service. The University of Michigan finished third with 39 graduates leaving this year for overseas assignments. "The wealth of skills and education found in this state align closely with the needs of emerging nations," DeBruyne said. "The skilled trades professionals, backyard gardeners and the college graduates in science and math areas are in great demand overseas." DeBruyne said the Peace Corps is currently seeking new applications for its 1986 assignments. Nearly 3,500 openings are anticipated. County 4-H'ers to attend December workshop

4-H teens and adults from Tuscola County will team up to learn more about themselves and others during the 4-H Peer Plus and Group Dynamite workshop Dec. 6-8, at Kettunen Center, the state's leadership training facility in Tuscon.

"The purpose of the workshop is to provide teens and adults, both those who are new and those who are experienced with Peer-Plus and/or Group Dynamite, with an opportunity to expand their communication and facilitation skills," says Peggy Kuhr, Tuscola County Extension 4-H Youth Agent.

Peer-Plus is designed to increase a teen's interpersonal communication skills. The Group Dynamite program aims to improve a teen's leadership and group interaction skills.

Participants may choose from three sections:

Section A is for individuals new to the program. It focuses on developing interpersonal and group skills. Workshop topics will include problem solving, decision making, value development, leadership and self-esteem.

Section B, for experienced program members who wish to improve their facilitation skills, will discuss various facilitation styles and present practice exercises.

Section C is designed for individuals who have experienced Workshop B or who have had prior experience in group facilitation. They will explore personal qualities and focus on learning to develop and teach skills that will help 4-H'ers look at themselves and others objectively to improve understanding.

All three sessions will include films, discussions and recreational group exercises to reinforce the workshop objectives.

Reservations for the workshop are due at least two weeks prior to the event.

The workshop is made possible by a grant through the Michigan 4-H Foundation.

For more information about this workshop or other 4-H activities, contact Peggy Kuhr, at the Tuscola County Cooperative Extension Service Office, in Caro.

Veterans Day not special for Karr

Does Veterans Day, originally called Armistice Day, the day World War I ended, have any special meaning to you?

"Not a whole lot," said Preston Karr, 73, a retired Gagetown area farmer. Karr explained he was too young for World War I, and didn't get drafted for World War II. Karr was 39 when WW II started.

"I did a lot of work for it," Karr said, about his efforts to support troops abroad during the second world war. He not only operated a dairy and sugar beet farm, but also worked in a sugar processing plant. Karr, like other Americans, bought war bonds to help support the United States during the crisis.

Karr said the most noticeable war time shortage was in the production of farm machinery. Factories changed over from building farm equipment to producing goods for the war effort.

Even after the war, in 1949, Karr found it difficult to find new farm machinery. He explained he tried to purchase a new tractor in Cass City, and was told he was the 11th in line. He was able to find a tractor at another implement dealer. "I would have had to wait until now to buy it," Karr added.

Because he worked in sugar industry, getting sugar was not a problem. The Karrs also had their own beef.

Karr said in the past it seemed like more was made of the Veterans Day celebration than today.

Karr and his wife Florence live at 5132 Penny Rd., Gagetown. They have one daughter.

Farmer certification required

Rootworm insecticides added to restricted purchase list

A new ruling by the Environmental Protection Agency will require area farmers to pass a certification examination before purchasing insecticides they have been using for several years to control corn rootworms.

The ruling, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1986, requires farmers to prove they understand how to apply commonly used insecticides such as Dyfonate and Furadan. These two insecticides, used for corn rootworm control, and nine other pesticides are now on the Michigan Department of Agriculture's (MDA) list requiring certification for purchase.

Tuscola County Cooperative Extension Service Director Bill Bortel explained the EPA and the MDA have had a restricted chemical list for several years. The list was recently expanded to include rootworm control insecticides. Bortel added that farmers who have taken the test in the past have had very few problems passing the examination if they use common sense, and read a study manual to prepare them for the examination. Bortel estimated 95 to 96 percent of the farmers taking the examination have passed.

"I don't think they are going to find the test all that difficult," Bortel said. Bortel feels if a farmer reads the manual, "Safe, effective use of pesticides - a manual for private applicators," for a few evenings before the examination, he should easily pass. A farmer must correctly answer 70 percent of the questions to pass. The manual is available at the Cooperative Extension Service office for 70 cents. An examination application form is included in the booklet. The cost of the examination is $10.

Bortel has scheduled an examination for Feb. 6, 1986, at the Cooperative Extension Service office in Caro. During the morning, Bortel will conduct a training session for the afternoon test. He hopes to schedule a test in the evening for farmers who are unable to take the test during the day time. He encourages one farmer from each farm to take the test.

Bortel said to pass the examination the farmer must be aware of how to safely handle the insecticides.

"All this (the examination) is trying to do is safeguard the farmer and their family." He added that some farm wives are glad to see that more emphasis is being placed on farm safety, something Bortel feels has been neglected.

Bortel explained workers in factories and other businesses work under regulations that force employees to be safety conscious, but very little has been done to see that the farmer operates in a safe environment.

As an example, Bortel said farmers have told him they have been sucking on plugged up herbicide sprayer nozzles, to clean out obstructions, for 30 years, and have never experienced any health problems, but other farmers have ended up in the hospital for doing the same thing.

"There are certain farmers who will be susceptible to these chemicals," Bortel said, explaining some farmers will find it harder to breathe, and their heart will beat faster when they work with insecticides. "That's the reason legislators got on the band wagon and got this thing passed."

After passing the examination, farmers will receive a plastic card that will be required before purchasing the insecticides. The agribusiness will record all sales of restricted pesticides and the list will be sent to the MDA.

Some farmers will be able to get around the new law, by purchasing insecticides that were manufactured before Sept. 1, 1985.

According to Bob Newmann of Michigan State University's Agricultural and Natural Resources Information Services, if a farmer can locate chemicals made before the cutoff date, they can be purchased without a certification card. He said after Jan. 1, 1987, all farmers must have a certification card to purchase the restricted insecticides, regardless of their manufacture date.

Newmann added, farmers should get certified as soon as possible to eliminate any delays during the spring planting season.

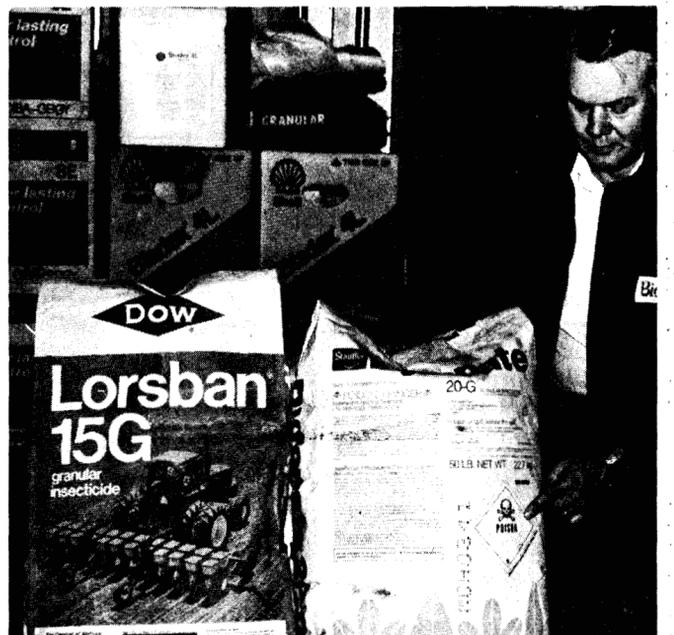

Dick Shaw, sales representative for Pillsbury Co., Cass City, said they have a large supply of commonly used insecticides that were manufactured before Sept. 1, possibly enough to get them through the planting season. The company also has Lorsban 15G, which is not on the EPA list requiring certification for purchase. Shaw feels quite a few farmers will switch to Lorsban to eliminate the need for certification.

Shaw said in the past they have recommended farmers wear goggles and gloves when handling any farm chemicals. He also recommends farmers stand upwind when working with the chemicals.

DICK SHAW of Pillsbury Co., Cass City, points to the skull and cross bones indicating the chemicals inside are poisonous. Beginning Jan. 1, 1986, farmers will have to pass a certification examination proving they safely know how to handle the herbicides before purchasing them. The bag of Lorsban (left) does not require a farmer to be certified before purchasing.

No injuries reported in accident

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson reported there were no injuries in an accident Thursday afternoon, when a vehicle driven by Jack L. Spencer backed into a vehicle driven by Dawn S. Deering. Spencer, 65, 4405 Woodland St., Cass City, and Deering, 24, 4578 Hill St., Cass City, were both stopped for a stop sign at the intersection of Ale and Main Streets. Spencer saw an eastbound vehicle approaching near the curb. When he backed up to avoid the vehicle he struck the Deering vehicle. The accident occurred at 2:45 p.m.

Barbershoppers seek recruits

The Prospective Lake Huron Chapter of Sweet

Adelines, Inc. held a guest night Nov. 4 at Trinity United Methodist Church in Cass City. Several ladies from the surrounding communities including Caro, Elkton, Harbor Beach, Bay Port and Caseville were in attendance.

The Prospective Lake Huron Chapter is in a membership drive in the surrounding areas with a focus on chartering in April 1986. As a result, the group has been mobile traveling to various communities in the hopes of sparking interest in barbershop music and increasing membership.

Mondays, Nov. 11 and 18 and Dec. 2, they will be meeting in Sebawa at the USA Middle School Cafeteria, 628 E. Main, from 7-9:30 p.m. with Dec. 2 designated as guest night.

All interested people are invited to attend at anytime. Nov. 25 the Prospectives will be entertaining patients at the Medical Care Facility in Bad Axe but will return around 8 p.m. to the First United Methodist Church, Bad Axe, for regular rehearsal.

Season opens Friday

DNR predicts 1,200-buck harvest in Tuscola County

If this year's deer hunting season is anything like last year, about 1,200 bucks will be harvested in Tuscola County during the 15-day rifle season. The deer hunting season begins Nov. 15 one-half hour before sunrise.

Bud Jarvis, wildlife biologist for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Caro office, said the deer herd in the county looks as good as in previous years.

Jarvis expects more deer to be shot in Huron County, and the northern half of Sanilac County, because of a special "double deer" season. The DNR has designated the two counties as having too many deer, causing auto-deer accidents, and damage to crops in the area. The area in Sanilac County is north of M-46.

To be able to legally shoot two deer, a hunter must have a special license, and hunt in the designated area. A hunter must first qualify for a regular antlerless deer license, or a landowners preference license. A computer will select the names of 3,000 licensed hunters holding antlerless permits, and 2,500 landowners preference license hunters. A hunter must first shoot an antlerless deer in the area, and have it checked at either the Imlay City or Caro DNR post, or at the Bad Axe Michigan State Police Post. The hunter is then issued a second tag, with which he can legally shoot another deer. With the second tag a hunter can shoot either a buck or doe.

An estimated 2,600 deer will be taken from the two-county area.

Michigan deer hunters are urged to stop at a DNR field office or highway check station to have their deer checked by DNR wildlife biologists.

According to DNR Director Ronald O. Skoog, by examining the deer, the DNR can document information on future management of state deer herds.

Beginning Nov. 16 until Nov. 18 from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. at selected highway rest stop areas, DNR officials will check a hunter's deer. The areas are: I-75 south of Clio, U.S. 27 south of Shepherd, U.S. 131 south of Paris, and M-37 south of White Cloud. Wildlife biologists will record the date shot, season in which the deer was taken, antlerless deer permit area, township and county where deer was taken, sex, age, total points, and for yearling bucks specifically, the antler beam diameter. After registering his deer, a hunter will be given a "Successful Deer Patch" for the 1985 hunting season. DNR officials remind hunters they are to wear the highly visible Hunter Orange when out in the field. Hunters must wear at least one of the following orange items to legally hunt: hat, cap, vest, jacket, rain gear or other outerwear. Last year, 88 hunting accidents were recorded in the state. Hunting season begins Nov. 15, and ends Nov. 30.

Thumb D Conference

Susalla named all-league

Freshman Jay Susalla of the North Central Thumb D all-conference team selected by league coaches. He was named at offensive end.

In addition, two Bulldogs were named to the second team. Mike Mandich was elected at linebacker and Dave Peters, defensive lineman.

Receiving honorable mention were Ron Good, center, Peters, offensive lineman, Stu Stirrett, quarterback, and Dave Laurie, tackle.

LEADING SCORER for Cass City with nine points was Shannon McIntosh, a junior completing her third year on varsity. She slips by Laura Lee (44) and Beth Bergdolt for this layup.

Hawks still seek first cage win

In some games this year the Cass City Red Hawks threatened to break the season-long losing streak only to fall in the final moments. Unfortunately, Friday's game against visiting Vassar wasn't one of them. The Hawks were never in it and bowed, 63-23.

The contest was over for the parents who attended parents' night and the other fans, almost before they had settled back in their seats after team members and parents paraded for recognition between the junior varsity and varsity games.

The Vulcans scored the first 15 points before Lisa Nicholas scored the first Cass City points of the game on a rebound with 2:25 left in the quarter.

The visitors continued to widen the victory margin throughout the game. At the half it was 30-9 and at the three-quarter mark, 46-17.

Renee Schiefer, with 23 and Beth Blasius with 16, led the Vulcans. Shannon McIntosh led the Hawks with nine points.

JV IN OVERTIME

Most of the excitement for the fans was provided by the junior varsity where the Hawks made a valiant bid for their third win of the year before bowing in overtime, 28-26.

Cass City led by three points with under two minutes left, but couldn't maintain the lead when the starting center fouled out and the control of the boards went to the Vulcans.

MARLETTE GAME

Cass City jumped off to an early lead against the Marlette Red Raiders but the host Raiders got their game in gear in the second period to register an easy win over the Red Hawks, 58-24.

The big second quarter obliterated Cass City's 5-point first period margin. Cass City scored just two points in eight minutes while the Raiders chalked up 23. At the intermission the score was 30-14. Marlette's 22-4 third period advantage removed all doubt about the game.

Shannon McIntosh, with 10 points, led Cass City. Kelly Deering added eight. For Marlette, Deb Ross, 17 points, Kathleen Andrakowicz, 15, and Marla Long, 11, were in double figures.

Lisa Hirn snagged seven rebounds for the Hawks.

Cass City grid honors announced

Coach Don Schelke announced awards earned by various members of the 1985 Cass City Red Hawks football team.

Most valuable player was Troy Sweeney. Most improved was Chip Creason. Most improved lineman was Brian Gyomory and the most improved back was Ken Pasanski.

Pete Leiterman was named the most valuable back.

Co-captains for 1986 are Leiterman, Pasanski and Dennis Steely. Serving as captains this season were Mike Stevenson, Troy Sweeney and Greg Erla.

On defense, Pasanski earned 93 points under Schelke's rating system to lead the team. Leiterman was the top ground gainer with 401 yards in 97 attempts.

Dan Ware led the receivers with 13 catches good for 125 yards. The Hawks were outscored during the season, 164 to 83 points. Cass City's worst scoring quarter was the fourth when just 14 points were registered.

Sweeney is all-league

Cass City placed one man to the Thumb B Association all-conference teams selected by coaches Monday, Nov. 4, at a meeting held at Cass City High School.

Honored on defense was Troy Sweeney as a linebacker. Named to the second team from Cass City were Dan Ware, offensive end, Mike Stevenson, interior defensive line, and Tony Yost, defensive end.

In addition, Gary Suzor, Ken Pasanski and Brian Gyomory received honorable mentions.

The offensive first team:

Quarterback - Steve Marchlewicz, Caro. Backs - Jim Troyer, Bad Axe, Lee Carto, North Branch, and Chris Eby, Lakers.

The defensive first team:

Randy Heckman of Lakers was named placekicker and Todd Finkbeiner of Vassar, the all-league punter.

The offensive second team selections were:

The defensive second team selections: Stevenson, Cass City, Jeff Guwca, Bad Axe, Gary Miller, Caro, interior line; Ed Draves, Bad Axe and Yost, Cass City, ends; Rod Demmy, Vassar, Mike Avery, Caro, Earl Will, Bad Axe, Troy Brown, Marlette, linebackers; Brad Krohn, Lakers, Dan Griffin, North Branch, safeties.

CASS CITY SCHOOL NEWS

Consider teaching career

HELP WANTED

She was happy. There was an air of serene contentment about her and her eyes sparkled as she told me that her son had finally settled on a vocational choice. He was going to teach!

Five years ago if that choice had been made she might not have been as happy. At that time the chances for employment in the teaching field were bleak. There was a surplus of teachers and many people trained in the art of teaching were forced to find employment in other areas. The sage advice at that time was, don't select teaching as a career.

The prospects for employment as an educator have changed dramatically. The slim supply of teachers in other states has become increasingly evident with shortages in the southeast and southwest being depicted by the national news media. A teacher shortage in Michigan in the near future appears to be unavoidable. The factors that will cause this shortage are:

1. There has been a significant reduction in the number of college students choosing teaching as a career. Michigan has experienced a 51% loss in five years.
2. Other states are aggressively recruiting Michigan graduates of teacher training programs.
3. Forecasts predict that the population of the Michigan public schools will increase over the next few years.
4. Under the new retirement program for Michigan educators, 18% will be eligible for retirement after January 1, 1986. By the 1990-91 school year, 31% of all teachers and administrators in Michigan will meet the requirements for retirement.

For those people that have the ability, interest and inclination to pursue a teaching career, the future seems bright. If you know any one like that, please give them a word of encouragement.

Sincerely, Don Crouse

Sweaters save on heating costs

By Betty Pattullo
Extension Home Economist

American families have been gradually changing their lifestyles to conserve energy and energy dollars.

With the cost of living continuing to climb, families are learning to think about the consequences of their actions and learning to accept a little less convenience, a little cooler temperatures during the winter and a little more planning ahead. Here are some ways they've found to help keep the budget in balance.

COOLER TEMPERATURES

Most families know that when family members wear an extra sweater or bundle up in a quilted sack or afghan when sitting, fewer dollars will have to be spent on fuel each month. Some family members prefer the cooler temperatures; others have adapted with modern versions of some old time garments to feel warm enough.

When a family can't afford to heat every room to a comfortable temperature in the winter, family members are learning to sleep in a cool room with proper bedding. This means all play and work then take place in rooms that are heated. This requires more consideration for each family member because privacy and space are limited.

HOT WATER

Busy and varied schedules as well as ever-rising standards for cleanliness have meant that families have come to expect hot water on hand at all times. New methods of water heating and lowered thermostats on some water heaters now mean that family members have to think before turning on the faucet and plan their use of large amounts of heated water.

SWITCHING OFF

All family members are learning to think before reaching for a switch and to make use of free light and heat from the sun on sunny days. Some families remember to dial down the thermostat at night and during the day when all family members are gone. Others are investing in an automatic thermostat that does this every day. Whatever method is chosen, it is clear that families are "thinking before using" and that behaviors are changing.

THINKING AHEAD

Planning ahead for meal-times can mean small but regular energy savings. Defrosting in the refrigerator can save extra oven or microwave time. Planning one dish or one appliance meals not only means saving energy, but will usually mean lower food costs, because less costly food items may be used. Planning ahead to cook two meals at one time saves the cook time as well as energy dollars.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

The bloom is off the rose of the deferred annuities that were peddled so widely in recent years.

It used to be you could make withdrawals and they were considered to be from your original investment. So the tax was deferred until you got your first cost out.

Alas, no more.

Now, the first withdrawals you make are held to be interest, and fully taxable. Besides this, interest taken out before age 59½ carries a 5 percent Federal penalty. This is akin to the penalty on IRA withdrawals before 59½, except in those cases, the penalty is 10 percent.

Some of the insurance companies tack on a surrender charge if you want to cash in the whole thing.

When the original annuity is sold, of course the salesman gets a commission, but it is buried and doesn't show. This varies depending on the size and type of policy. In any case, it's money you will never see again, and won't be working for you. The commission or 'load' or fee could run from 2 percent to 8 percent.

After reading all this, if you're still gung-ho to get an annuity, one of the better deals is offered by Sun Life Insurance Company, headquartered in Atlanta. Sun Life has been around for 90 years and has earned the top rating of A+ from A.M. Best & Co., which evaluates all insurance companies.

Currently, Sun Life offers a choice of three interest-guaranteed periods — 3 years, 5 years and 10 years. Currently, the rate is 10.5 percent — same as long-term government bonds.

It guarantees the initial premium will be invested in governments and government agencies. It doesn't say where future income from the premiums will be invested. To maintain the 10.5 percent level they'd have to get into something of less quality.

There is no apparent "load" on the way in, and there is no surrender charge. You have to leave the annuity alone until the original guaranteed-interest period of 3, 5 or 10 years is up, and then you have 30 days to cash in. Remember, if you're under 59½, though, the Feds will tap you for a 5 percent penalty.

So, on the plus side, your money is with a good company, and the rate is about two percentage points higher than comparable CD's. And you don't pay tax until you start making withdrawals. This deferring of tax is an important money-saver.

Compare such annuities with CD's, which penalize you for withdrawing ahead of the due date, but do not forbid withdrawing, as does the annuity. But CD's yield less, and the interest payments are not usually deferred. So you pay income tax each year.

If anyone asks me, which is rarely, I think either government bonds or zero-coupon tax-exempt are a better deal than either annuities or CD's.

First, you can sell them when you feel like it. No penalty, except for a commission of 1 percent or so. Next, the yield on taxable bonds is as good as on annuities, and better than CD's.

On tax-free municipal bonds, if your family income is $25,000 or more, they'll yield you more net than any of the above choices.

Zero-coupon, tax-free municipals not only defer tax on interest earned, they eliminate the tax entirely. Take a 10-year zero coupon municipal. You buy it for about 33 cents on the dollar, to yield 10 percent net. If your income tax bracket was only 30 percent, you'd have to find a 14 percent return on a taxable item to equal that.

If you are buying zero-coupon bonds, have your broker get out the Standard & Poor publication called the Blue List. In the back part of the book (it comes out every week-day) are several pages of zero-coupon offerings. They are listed in order of maturities, and it is easy to pick out something to fit your needs. But have your broker help you, to get ones of good quality.

You can get a free booklet on annuities by writing: American Council of Life Insurance, 1850 K Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20006

The pamphlet gives an example of the return a 65-year-old man could get from buying a straight annuity, taking effect at once:

For a payment of $100,000 he could get a return between $10,000 and $12,000 a year for life.

Such a deal is for suckers. With $100,000 you could invest in $100,000 worth of U.S. government agency bonds which will pay $11,600 a year from now until the bonds mature (in a moment, an example). That's not just for life, but on and on and on. And when you die, your beneficiary still has the $100,000 worth of bonds.

The bonds I refer to are ones of the Federal National Mortgage Association, 12.35 percent due Dec. 1993. They are rated AAA and are not callable.

Why should you pay $100,000 to get assured income of $10,000 to $12,000 a year, but only for life? At age 65 your expectancy would be around 14 years, and then the payments would stop and the insurance company could keep the original investment.

Bill Myers is a retired editor and investment counselor.

Hampshires' $1.3 million award biggest in Thumb specifications. Randy added, the DeLaval system has been sold to 40 percent of the dairy farmers in the United States.

Shirley said in 1982, Ken Hampshire got the first clue as to what was causing mastitis problems. She explained Ken was told about a book that explained how milking machines operate, and what was wrong with several manufacturers' models, including the DeLaval 100. "Ken finished reading the book the day he got it. As soon as he finished reading it, he realized for the first time the milking system was causing our problems." Within a week the Hampshires installed a new milking system on their dairy farm, and filed suit against DeLaval.

"It didn't cost us that much," Randy said, about putting in the new system. "We could have done it in 1966."

"Right now, our farm is not breaking even, we have eaten up a lot of equity in the last two years," Shirley said. "The milk checks haven't been enough to keep the farm going."

She explained when they first filed suit, they based their losses on a 15 percent decrease in production.

They estimated a loss of $300,000 to $400,000 from the mastitis problems. They later hired an economist who projected where the production levels of the farm would be today if they had not suffered the mastitis problems. He determined they would be milking 140 cows, instead of the 80 they are presently milking. The total loss was estimated in excess of $1.4 million.

Shirley pointed out one of their cows was the 1982 state champion for a two-year-old. The cow produced almost 29,000 pounds of milk that year. Shirley said the cow was the result of a genetic breeding program on the farm. They were planning on using her calves as a way of building up their herd. But the cow developed mastitis and was sold.

"We didn't even get a daughter out of her," Shirley said, adding the cow never reached her peak as a milk cow. It takes a cow about seven years to peak out. "This cow never passed on her genetics...It was hard...She went for hamburger."

Now, about half of the cows in the herd were once milked with the DeLaval milking system. Shirley said these cows, many with mastitis, will never reach an average milk yield. "We treat them and treat them," she said and the older cows. "The only reason we keep them at all is because we couldn't afford to replace them. Our young herd looks good. We have seen some definite results in the system we have now."

"We did our best," Randy said, about trying to operate the farm with mastitis problems. "And when you think where we could have been without that milker," Shirley added, "if we would have had offspring from this cow (pointing to the plaque awarded to their two-year-old cow that won the state championship), there is no telling where we could have been."

Randy, who still has the DeLaval milking system since it was taken out of service in 1982, has no doubts about what he will do with the milkers. "I don't want to sell it to anybody else...I don't want to hurt anyone...When it leaves here it will go to the junk yard."

Randy also has no doubts about how he will use the money from the lawsuit award. "I would like to use it to keep on farming, so the next generation can keep going," he said. Shirley is expecting the couple's first child next month.

Prich injured in mishap

A Gagetown resident, George Prich Jr., 60, remains in fair condition at Hills and Dales General Hospital after a vehicle he was riding in collided with a tractor scraping mud off the Bay City-Forestville Road Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Tuscola County Sheriff's Department deputies reported the Prich vehicle, driven by Dorothy Prich, ran into the rear of a tractor driven by Clarence L. Wildner, 60, Unionville, about one mile east of Unionville. Wildner was scraping away mud that had been tracked on the road by farm equipment. The tractor's rear lights were operating, and a slow-moving-vehicle sign was on the back of the tractor.

Dorothy Prich, 55, was treated and released from the Cass City hospital. She was issued a ticket for failing to stop within an assured clear distance. Wildner was not injured.

O-G reports mixed state test results

this year, the health test, showed 37.5 percent of the fourth grade students answered at least 75 percent of the questions correctly. In the seventh grade 20.7 percent received a passing grade. Only 9.1 percent of the tenth grade students taking the test answered 75 percent of the questions correctly. The health test was not required by the state.

Romain said he was concerned about the low scores on the health test, when compared to the math and reading scores. Romain said he has talked to another area school counselor and Owen-Gage students' scores were higher than theirs.

In other business, trustees were informed that Manuel Thies, the teachers' union representative, has filed for an arbitration hearing to seek sick pay wages for teacher Kay Nguyen. Nguyen had been on sick leave for several weeks at the start of the school year. At the last board meeting Thies told trustees Nguyen has earned 21 sick days pay, 11 from last year, and 10 from this school year. Thies claims she has only been paid for the 11 days she built up last year.

At the October meeting, board members felt Nguyen had already been paid for her 10 days of sick leave for this year. Brinkman explained she has received two paychecks for the 1985-86 school year, and has not yet been in the classroom.

The discussion ended with a motion approved that the board would pay Nguyen according to the master agreement, and any money paid in excess, or less than the master agreement will be reimbursed or taken back. No date has been set for the arbitration hearing.

Corrections

In the Nov. 6 edition of the Chronicle, a headline in the story read that Lt. Col. Brewster Shaw's second flight was to be Nov. 27.

This was an error. As explained in the story, the flight will be two days before Thanksgiving, Nov. 26.

In the explanation below the picture showing the awarding of a prize to John Tomczak by Mike Weaver, a microwave oven was listed as the prize instead of a television, which was actually given away.
