NATURAL GAS

A typical homeowner heating with natural gas purchased from Southeastern Michigan Gas Co. can expect to save about $70 as compared to last year.

Jan Mitchell, a public relations representative for the gas company, projects an average residential household for this year will spend $682.17 to keep warm. This is down from last year, when projections were said the company has had

Last year, prices for petroleum gas ranged from 85.8 to 86 cents per gallon. This year, customers will pay 83 to 87.8 cents per gallon, depending on the supplier. The two dealers in the area said there is no danger of a propane shortage this year.

ELECTRIC HEAT

Because of a rate adjustment earlier this year, electric heat users can expect an increase of about eight percent in their heating bill this winter.

Walter Allison, marketing services representative for Detroit Edison, said the cost of heating a modern constructed $1,200-squarefoot house with baseboard electric heating units, is expected to be $880 to $900 this year. Allison said in Tuscola County about 1,650 to 1,700 customers use electric heat. He added about 150 households are using a water source heat pump, which he feels is the most efficient and economical source of heat available in rural areas. "It is great," Allison said, about the water heat pump. A water source heat pump draws ground water from a well, extracts heat from the water to warm the house. and returns the water to either a pond, river, or another well. Allison added that increased energy costs have made water source heat pumps more feasible.

of wood during the winter. Kappen, like Cass City wood hauler Dave Whittaker, cuts logs for sawmills. Logs straight and big enough to produce lumber to go to the sawmill. Smaller logs and trees are cut up for wood burning stoves. Whittaker estimates he will sell about 100 face cords, and 500 full cords (four foot by four by eight foot) this year. Full cords are delivered on a large truck.

Whittaker prefers to stay in the Cass City area, where he has a "'pretty good demand for wood.'

Cpl. Palazzola dies in crash

Corporal David W. Palazzola, a 23-year-old Snover resident serving in the Unted States Army, was killed Sunday, Nov. 17, in an off-duty auto accident near Fort Polk, La.

Palazzola, a 1981 graduate of Cass City High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Palazzola, Snover.

A family member said alazzola was killed instantly when the vehicle he was driving struck a bridge abutment. Palazzola apparently fell asleep. The accident happened at 3:20 a.m.

Palazzola had recently returned to the United States after serving one year in Korea as a heavy equipment engineer with the Fifth Infantry Division. Ie had served in the Army TACA Chairman Harlan Henderson explained that 61 meals were prepared at the Argyle Street site Tuesday, Nov. 19, and 25 seniors ate at the high school site.

Khan supported a statement recently made by Brown that a new site was needed to increase meal attendance. explained state rules require 25 persons per day eat at a meal site. In the past the high school has averaged about 16 persons per day. To keep the school open, Brown has gotten three waivers from the state, but he won't get a fourth waiver. Khan said that in other places, after the site was moved from a school cafeteria, attendance has doubled and tripled.

Also at the meeting, Khan told Sanilac commissioners they face two problems in getting out of the Argyle Street site, a 10-year lease, and TACA would be required to pay back a $24,000 grant from the state that was used to remodel the

"There is a 10-year lease. The man (building owner) has the right to sue the TACA board," said Henderson. He said he has talked to the building owner, and he will sell the Argyle Street building for $66,000 cash, or on a land contract with $35,000 down, and $717 per month for five years.

Henderson added he has asked the building owner if he would sue TACA to collect rent if they moved out of the site. Henderson said the owner did not say he would sue, but did add he is "not saying he wouldn't."

Khan said he would have Region Seven attorneys look over the lease agreement to see if there is a way they could close the site, and not have to pay rent for the 10-year lease agree-with Khan's recommendation to have an attorney look at the lease to see if TACA can "get out of it without costing an arm and a leg. We must know if we have a 100 percent chance of winning it, or a 100 percent chance of losing it," Jaroszi said about a possible lawsuit over the lease...

The discussion about the meal site ended with Khan recommending they use the Argyle Street site, and close the high school meal site. Khan said they could use the Argyle site for one year, and that would give them time to look at other possible sites, and find out about the lease agreement.

Also at the meeting, Khan told TACA and Sanilac County commission members that Region Seven auditors have found several bookkeeping errors that account for a difference of about $20,000 in the accounts.

"There is no misappropriation of funds...There is no fraud involved in it...It was very sloppy book-Edward Jaroszi agreed keeping," Khan said.

Planners discuss meter removal

Because the Cass City Retail Committee has appointed a committee to seek removal of parking meters in Cass City, members of the Cass City Planning Commission discussed the parking situation in the village at its regular meeting Tuesday, Nov. 19.

The discussion began after board member Kelly Smith asked Village Supt. Lou S. LaPonsie if the village would consider purchasing property at the intersection of West and Pine Streets, owned by Hunt's Construction, for additional off-street parking.

LaPonsie said he has talked to Hunt before, and the village "couldn't justify" purchasing the whole parcel of property, which includes a brick building on the site. Smith said Hunt may consider selling the building separately, so the village would just have to purchase the surrounding property.

LaPonsie said the village is investigating the purchase of parking lot property they are presently leasing. He added the village spends $6,000 a year for rent and property taxes on the parking lots. Fines and parking meter money amount to about $5,000 a year. The remaining $1,000 comes from the general fund.

LaPonsie said he has conducted a survey neighboring communities and Cass City is supplying a lot of free parking when compared to other villages. Cass City has a minimum of 116 off-street free parking spaces, not including parking in the alleys near Main Street.

Commissioner Jerry Stilson said he conducted a survey of merchants, and four said they wanted the meters removed, while 28 said meter patrols should be made, or the meters should be removed.

"I think they should be patroled, or not there (removed)," Stilson said, about the meters. "They (customers parking in metered areas) don't know when they are going to get a ticket or not." Stilson feels the village doesn't need to use a regular police officer to monitor the meters. He said they could hire someone for $3.35 per hour (minimum wage) to write parking meter violations. Stilson feels there would be a lot of people happy for the chance to work a few hours each day.

LaPonsie said the village budgets $600 yearly for parking meter reading manpower salaries. He added, the village has "slacked off" on writing meter violations because of complaints from merchants. He said the money

CARE AND SHARE

Cass City merchants will again help with the care and share project which is under the direction of the In His Name organization.

Spokesperson Elaine Klco said that last year, 25 families received food baskets, toys, children's clothing items and bedding. Klco stressed that adult clothing is not needed. Boxes will be placed in Cass City stores to receive donations for distribution. Among the most needed items are non-perishable food items, children's caps, mittens, sox, underwear, bedding, toilet articles, laundry items, new toys

Geological Survey, Grayling, prepares to lower a device that measures the water current at the foot of the Cemetery Road bridge. Nov. 15, water at the bridge was just over five feet deep, and was traveling at 2.5 miles per hour. A measuring station east of the bridge shows the deepest the water has gotten was 15.8 feet in the spring of 1948. About two weeks ago the water was less than eight feet deep.

"If It Fitz..." Hidden furniture

By Jim Fitzgerald

"Don't you hate that?" my wife asked, showing me a picture of some furniture. 'No." I answered

"You mean you like it?" "No. I don't like it or hate

"Just look at that couch and coffee table," she insisted. "I think they're awful looking. You must have some feeling about them.

"I'm sorry, but I just can't get emotional about the looks of furniture. If you say it looks awful, I'll take your word for it. If it will make you feel better, I'll say I hate it. But the truth is I don't care how furniture looks as long as it's comfortable to sit on.'

'That really bugs me. You don't care what our home looks like.

It was a familiar accusation. Whenever I don't have an opinion on the appearance of something - anything — she says I don't care how the living room looks, or how our son looks, or how the sky looks.

"Look at that sunset," she says every day. And when I give it a glance and a grunt, instead of awestruck inspection, she says I don't care how the sky looks.

The picture of the furniture was in an advertising brochure received through the mail. There is no such thing as an advertising brochure or catalog that isn't mailed to my wife. Usually she receives two copies of each. As near as I can figure, the extra copies are for her middle name. "Speaking of furniture,"

I said, "whatever happened to our stereo set? I used to like how it looked. If I remember correctly, the cabinet was about hip high, in brown walnut, and had a top you could lift open."

The top of the stereo is where our mail is dumped after being trucked up from our apartment building basement. Our mailbox in the lobby is used only for little slips that the mailman puts there to tell us to pick up the mail he had to leave in the basement because it was too bulky for the mailbox, not to mention the lobby.

Anyone who wants to play a record in our home must first find the stereo under the brochures and catalogs. I once straightened out a wire hanger and used it as a divining rod. I didn't find the stereo, but did find two grill shelves missing from the oven for several days. They were soaking in a bathtub full of water.

WHEN THE LAWRENCE Wright family sits down to the Thanksgiving Day feast they will be carrying on a family tradition that dates back to the first celebration in 1621. Lawrence and Karen Wright have three children (from left): George, Allison and Jason.

Wright's ancestry dates back to Mayflower Pilgrims

When the Lawrence Wright family sits down at the family dining table Thursday to enjoy their Thanksgiving meal, they will be carrying on a family tradition that dates back to the first Thanksgiving Day celebration.

Wright, a Cass City resident, explained after 13 years of research he has been able to trace his ancestry back to George Soule, one of the 61 survivors who came to the "new country" on the Mayflower in 1620. According to a book by the Pilgrim Society, an organization that has documented history about America's first settlers, Soule came to America from England as an indentured servant. He was required to work for a sponsor for seven years to pay off his debt to come to America. Wright said Soule eventually became a very wealthy man in "the land of opportunity. Wright said the first in New Jersey before the member of his family to come to the United States was William Wright, who came over on the Fortune in 1621. The Fortune was the second ship to bring settlers to America from England. A descendant of William Wright, Moses Wright, married Mary Weston, a fifth generation member of the George Soule family.

Through the marriage of Moses Wright, Lawrence Wright is also a relative by marriage to the well-known explorer and adventurer, Miles Standish.

Through his Wright has discovered four ancestors who fought in the Revolutionary War, but not all of Wright's ancestors fought on the same side. He explained Stephen Roblin, a cousin by marriage, remained loyal to the crown, and aided the English in their fight.

Wright said Roblin lived war and possibly supplied information to the British. Wright has military manuscripts, similar to a court preliminary hearing, that claims Roblin "seduced by the instigation of the Devil" because he assisted the British. Accounts of what actually happened to Roblin are incomplete. The next information Wright was able to uncover about Roblin is a document signed by King George of England in 1970 that grants 300 acres of land in Adolphustown, Canada. The land was given to Roblin because he helped the British in the war.

Other members

Wright's family served in the War of 1812, and in the Civil War. Weston Wright, the son of Moses and Mary (Weston) Wright was reported by his first wife to have been killed in the war of 1812. But Weston resurfaced again in Hastings County, Ontario. Apparently, his first marriage was dissolved, and he remarried. His son, Phillip Wright, was the first family member to move to the Cass City area.

explained Phillip came to the area after the Civil War. During the war, Phillip was shot in the knee at a battle fought in Peach Tree Creek, Ga. Because he was a wounded veteran, Phillip received a land grant for 80 acres of farm property onemile north of what is now the intersection of M-81 and Lawrence Wright has a copy of a document that is signed by President Ulysses S. Grant, dated May 20, 1870, that gives ownership of the property to Phillip.

Phillip, Lawrence great-great-Wright's grandfather. married Mary Jane McConnell. Phillip was killed by an enraged bull in 1907.

Wright said he first began tracing his ancestry after he received a four-generation family tree from his grandfather. From there, Wright spent countless hours in the clerk's offices of Tuscola, Sanilac and Huron Counties, tracing through marriage licenses, and birth and death records. His biggest snag came when he had to get information about his family while they lived in Canada in the mid 1800's. "I spent at least 10 years trying to get records out of Canada," he said. "Birth and death records, and marriage licenses were almost nonexistent.'

Wright went with a "back door approach," church records, family Bibles, and cemetery records to find missing information about his family.

Wright attributes one of his big breaks in finding his ancestry to the Mormon Church, a church that none of his family members belonged to. Wright explained he has taken several genealogy correspondence courses through Brigham Young University, and this training taught him the 'detective like" techniques to piece together incomplete information. Wright said many amateurs do not have the training to get them through difficult times, when records are u available. Wright said county tax rolls, and voting records were helpful in piecing together information about ancestors. "I wish I could go back into time, for an hour or two, and ask these people all of these questions," Wright said.

ENJOY YOUR HOME. WITHOUT CUTTING

With electric heat, winter doesn't mean bundling up to stay warm in those hard-to-heat rooms. Electric heating units can easily be installed to provide warmth to the areas your existing system can't handle alone. And you can enjoy the luxury of turning them on when you want, for as long as you want. So you can save energy by heating each room only when it's in use. This winter, make the most of your home and stay comfortable with clean, efficient, economical electric heat.

For additional information on electric heat, just call Detroit Edison or contact one of the local dealers below.

McLeody Days

By Bill McLeod

Writing a front page story about energy costs brought back a lot of memories about growing up in a 100ear-old farm house in ural Sanilac County. Back then we heated the five bedroom house, with windows "loose enough to throw a cat through," with an old pot belly wood burning stove, and a lot of wood. The funny thing about burning wood back in the 1950's and 60's was you weren't considered energy conscious, just poor.

While all of our neighbors nad forced-air oil burning furnaces to heat their homes, Dad had the "forced labor" of his two sons to keep the home fires burning.

Looking back at it, splitting and hauling wood night probably wasn't as bad as it seemed at the time (time heals all ounds). Just after supper, my brother and I hauled two sleigh loads to the wood box on the porch. Mom wouldn't let us stack up a big pile of wood on the porch because "it didn't look

people to know we burned wood.

This week end while driving through the suburbs around Mt. Clemens I saw a lot of homes with wood stacked around the back corner of the garage. The piles were too big to be used just in a fireplace. Well Mom, it looks like a lot of have become "energy conscious" these

When Dutch Elm struck our farm it gave Dad another excuse to keep burning wood. For the next 10 years or so we burned elm trees that had been killed because it was a good way to "clean up the mess," according to Dad. One thing about the disease, we didn't have to cut wood during the summer so it would season by winter. All of the elm trees seasoned where they stood. We were given the opportunity to cut wood when we wanted to, and not during the hot summer.

About three years ago. my Mt. Clemens father-inlaw put in a wood burning stove, not to be energy conscious, but to save money (at least he is honest about his reasons). Somehow I can't see how he saves any money because he has to buy almost all of his wood. The only wood he doesn't buy comes each year when I stop at my cousin's farm, grab a chainsaw and a tractor, and help "clean up a mess" that has fallen in his woods

Cutting wood as a hobby seems like a lot more fun than when I was a kid trying to handle an old McCulloch chainsaw that weighed as much as I did. Besides that, it gives me a chance to get close to my family "roots."

ELKLAND TOWNSHIP FIREMEN responded to a fire that totally destroyed a van valued at $3,000 Thursday at 4:10 p.m. The fire started in the van's engine compartment, after the engine backfired. AROUND THE FARM Monitor storage bin for mold

By Bill Bortel

Regularly inspecting stored grain will help you spot mold problems before become serious. Monitoring for mold development, insects, and moisture problems, is a key component of successful grain storage.

Start your inspection by looking at the grain for mold development, especially near the top where condensation and crusting are most likely to occur.

Feel around in the grain for hot spots that may be developing from the heat given off from mold growth. Trouble spots usually develop 1 to 3 feet beneath the grain surface. In the winter, hot spots tend to build near the center of the storage area. They are more likely to be near the side walls in the summer. A steel rod or grain probe should be used to check grain for wet spots, which are ideal for mold development. When the probe hits a wet spot, it becomes harder to push the probe through the grain.

Lastly, smell for musty or spoiled odors that will indicate mold problems. A fan should be run once a month for 15 minutes. Monitoring the smell of the exhaust for spoilage odors will help you catch any problems that may be developing in the center of the bin. Running the fan periodically also helps keep the motor bearings dry.

Farmers should never enter a bin of flowing grain while making a grain in-spection. A person can become trapped within minutes. Also, remember that moldy grain can produce an allergic reaction and may cause respiratory problems. If you have to work in or around moldy grain, wearing a tight fitting dust mask is recommended.

If storage problems arise, aerating the grain for longer than normal usually takes care of it. In cases of severe heat, wetness or mold, farmers may consider unloading the grain from storage. either storing the affected grain elsewhere or discarding it. For more detailed information on diagnosing and solving stored grain problems, contact your local Tuscola County Extension agents or obtain a copy of Extension bulletin E-1431, "Stored Grain Management."

women meet

A Woman's Christian Temperance Union meeting was held Monday evening, Nov. 18, at 7 p.m. at Veronica's Restaurant.

opened the meeting with prayer and Mrs. Joyce Hazard led group singing which was followed by pledges to the American, Christian and Temperance flags.

Mrs. Winifred Dorman conducted a quiz on the WCTU organization. A letter from Denyse Heronemus, on "Why We Should Be Members," was read.

Mrs. Martha Putnam led devotions and guests followed with Bible verses and told what they were thankful for. A story on alcohol was presented by tape, "Hooty the Owl and the Birds.

Mrs. Joyce Cameron told what WCTU has meant to her. Mrs. Ruth Dorman told of minors being served wine with meals on airplane flights. The matter had been reported to the company.

Plans were made for future meetings.

Snow and deer cause problems for area drivers

The area's first major snowfall Friday resulted in 12 auto accidents in Tuscola County from slippery road conditions. No serious iniuries were reported in any of the accidents.

Janice L. McKellar, 39, 5232 Brown Rd., Gagetown, was one of two area residents who had problems driving on a snow covered and slippery road surface. According to Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Deputy Richard Blakely, McKellar was southwest bound on M-81, and lost control of her vehicle. The vehicle went into the ditch, and collided with the ditch embankment. She was not injured.

Deputy James Jashinske Charles reported Damoth II, 23, 6729 Third St., Cass City, was northbound on Schwegler Road, near Milligan Road, when he lost control on the snow covered road. Damoth went off the left side of the ditch, and struck a tree. He was not injured.

Cass City's cage team could take it all this year

If Coach Ron Nurnberger shake the periods of playing little of the killer instinct to Red Hawks to their sixth major help in the title Thumb B Association title chase. in 10 years, and the first since 1984, a lot of "ifs" will have to be positively answered.

A top question mark is Kurt Bliss. If he can play over serious ankle injuries that kept him out of eight games and limited his action in several more last season and return to the form that made him one of the league's most exciting players as a freshman, Cass City's stock in the race will take a quantum leap.

If Dave Miller can continue to show the tremendous improvement that he exhibited last year (and play this summer indicates he may), the Hawks will have one of the top performers in the league, possibly the top performer.

the Cass City season. Cass City will not be big. Kelley and Ware are 6 feet. 2 inches, and Bliss is six foot. At 5-11, Miller gives the team good size at guard, one who could post up against smaller opponents.

Two seniors, each with experience, are available to flank Miller. Randy Teichman is a good defensive player and Scott Adams is adept at taking the ball to the hoop.

Another senior, Craig Hockey, showed promise on the junior varsity two years ago, but is hampered by lack of experience because he did not play last season.

Greg Erla, six-foot senior center, saw limited action last year, but provided Cass City with some important minutes when the starters ran into foul trouble.

Another positive factor this year is the number of boys out for the team. Six juniors from the junior varsity are available.

They include Dennis Hyatt, 6-1, who has played the pivot and Steve Ross. 6-1, forward who had games where he showed basketball talent.

The progress they make as well as the improvement of Chuck McPhail, 5-9 forward; Gary Suzor, 5-9 guard; Virgil Peters, 5-8 guard, and Jeff Lefler, 5-9 forward, will be important factors in the race for the thankful for when celebrating Thanksgiving Day this week?

"We have a lot to be thankful for," said Cass City resident Janet Leach. "We have a healthy family, and they are all employed.' She explained that six of her eight children, and all of her nine grandchildren live out of state, and will not be able to visit Cass City over the holiday. She expects to have the family together for the Christmas holiday. Leach and her husband Roger still have one son living at home, and a daughter attending Ferris State College, Big Rapids. This Thanksgiving it will be just the four of them celebrating the Pilgrim holiday.

"We will just have our own Thanksgiving, with turkey, stuffing and all the trimmings, and probably a lot of leftovers." she said. Roger and Janet Leach live at 4285 Woodland St.

The Bulldogs struggled during the first quarter against a North Huron fullcourt press. At the end of the period, Owen-Gage trailed 11-16. During the second period, the Bulldogs fought back, scoring 11 points, while allowing the Warriors to score eight points. At halftime the Warriors led 24-22. Owen-Gage kept the game close throughout the third quarter, but still trailed 32-35.

Girls upset Brown City in C cage tourney opener

Cass City pulled the upset of the Michigan High School District Class C tournament at Cass City Thursday by staging a last half rally to nip Brown City, 42-40.

The Hawk girls had waited until the final game of the regular season before winning a game and then made it two in a row with the win.

The victory placed them in the semi-finals Saturday against the Sandusky Redskins and they eliminated the Hawks, 59-38.

But the loss didn't take anything away from the fine effort in the opening tourney night win. Cass City fought back from a 25-17 deficit at the half to take the game.

It came down to the final moments when Kelly Deering made two free throws for the victory.

In the final games, the Hawks were helped by Darlene Monroe, tall freshman center, who helped in the essential rebounding department. Deering led the Hawks with 13 points. In double figures for Brown City were Shari Sauder and Tammi Geister, with 10 points each.

SANDUSKY GAME

The Redskins had too much firepower for the Hawks. Lucretia LeGault whipped in 28 points to propel Sandusky into the fi-the Cass City attack with 15 points and Chris Britt added 13. Helping LeGault with the Redskin offense was Lyne LeGault and Lara Touchette, 10 points each.

Hawk cagers break losing streak in final regular season game of year

For three quarters it game on the line. Tammy looked like the same old no cigar. The Cass City Red Hawks changed all that in the final regular season game of the year against USA Tuesday, Nov. 19.

The Hawks rallied in the last quarter to top the Patriots, 38-34, after 18 losses in a row.

Cass City jumped off to a narrow 13-11 lead in the first period only to see USA come back to lead at the half by a point, 18-17.

The two teams played nearly even in the third period. USA had a slim twopoint lead going into the final eight minutes. The Hawks used some outstanding foul shooting to win. Shannon McIntosh hit five free throws in the stretch drive and Christine Britt was four for four from the charity stripe with the story and the story of the 1984 Summer Olympics. Ueberroth's bold, dynamic style carries over into this account of his own entrepreneurial successes and the acclaimed success of the Los Angeles Olympics. He recounts political, economic, and organizational obstacles overcome, intricacies unravelled, and triumphs and satisfactions achieved. Revealed are details concerning the International Olympic Committee, terrorist threats, and negotiations with personages ranging from John Paul II, to Ronald Reagan, to Fidel Castro. mittee and Time magazine's 1984 Man of the Year tells his own American dream. She burst into the national consciousness and made history. Geraldine A. Ferraro, the first woman nominated by a major party to be Vice-President of the United States. Wherever she appeared, the American public responded with an outpouring of affection for the Congresswoman from Queens. Until this book, no one has known the true story of who put Ferraro's name forward as a candidate and masterminded the effort that resulted in her selection. Here, too, is Ferraro on George Bush, John Zaccaro, Archbishop O'Connor, and on her relationships with other key public figures. Ferraro never pouts about her own woes, but she does wonder whether the orgy of rumor-mongering indulged in by the press would have occurred were she a man.

THE IMPERIAL WAY by Paul Theroux and Steve McCurry (non-fiction). This book chronicles Theroux's revisit to the subcontinent of India to undertake "an imperial progress along the railways of the old Raj," from Pakistan, across the top of India, to Bangladesh, a route he took because "nothing has changed on this railway for over one hundred and fifty years." The photographs in this book will make a lasting impression. Award-winning photographer Steve McCurry has created a stunning visual record of the places and people encountered along the imperial way and Theroux provides brief captions to the photos, which capture both the squalor and the natural beauty of the country.

These are not scientific words. Cures for serious medical problems generally are not available through the mail. Products that can help less serious medical problems -- those that can be selfdiagnosed -- aren't miracles.

3) Ask to see the product's label. By following the instructions on the label, a user should be able to realize the benefits claimed for the product. If the label instructions don't explain how to achieve all the benefits, be suspicious. It is a violation of federal law to sell a medical product with inadequate instructions for use

4) Watch our for "cures" for serious diseases. The more serious the condition for which the product is offered -- e.g., cancer, heart disease, arthritis -- the more questionable the product. Serious medical problems normally cannot be treated by mail. Professional, in-person physical examination and diagnosis are needed. When competent treatment is delayed, disease may progress beyond legitimate help. 5) Be especially wary of claims that a product may be used for multiple health Generally problems. speaking, such products exist only in the portfolios of con artists.

6) Investigate any "star" endorsement or "big name" testimonial for any medical product. Sometimes, no permission has been given for the linkage. Any ad sponsor must be able to demonstrate that the endorser has agreed to the ad campaign.

7) Remember: If it sounds'too good to be true, it probably is.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

They'll rationalize their decision along these lines: 1. You can't find anything to rent.

2. It's cheaper to buy because you can deduct the interest on the mortgage.

3. After renting for many years you have nothing but a handful of rent receipts. Nothing to show for all your money.

4. Your house or condo is a good investment and will keep going up in value.

Let's take these reasons -- or excuses -- for buying, one by one.

Can't find anything to rent? In my case, and I'm fairly fussy about my living quarters. I've rented the past 15 years in south Florida. Locating the three different apartments I've been in those 15 years has taken a couple days each time. I read the ads, I call some realtors, and I put in an ad myself.

Cheaper to buy because you can deduct mortgage interest? Take a $100,000 condo. You borrow the whole bit at 12 percent for $12,000 annual cost. You're in a 30 percent bracket, so net cost after tax saving is

You also have bought the privilege of paying maintenance and taxes and insurance and carpeting and painting and keeping the appliances running. Round this out to $3,000.

But the place will go up in value. Maybe. Apartments around Delray Beach and Boca Raton that were bought in 1976, say, for $70,000, sold for $140,000 in 1981. The same ones today are crying for buyers at $110,000. It depends on the year you buy, and it depends on what happens to ordinance. In the past, the the neighborhood and the appreciation is 3.5 percent building. Now satellite dish a year. But houses are antennas will have to comrather individual things. You don't buy an average house any more than you buy an average book.

Offsetting this possible appreciation is a gradual depreciation in any structure. That's especially true the way many homes are built in Florida. Elevators break down (we have one undergoing $13,000 in repairs as I write this), roofs wear out, major re-painting jobs are needed every five

These future costs are going to come. You can be sure of that. What you can't be sure of is that the value of the home or apartment will rise in spite of the place gradually wearing out. Let's take some figures:

RENTING: $100,000 apartment, rental $700 a month. Total $8,400 a year. BUYING: Same place, interest cost $12,000 a year, less tax deduction of 25 percent or $3,000. Net money cost -- $9,000 a year. Major repairs, (roofs, painting), replacement of appliance, carpets -- $1,000 a year. Total costs per year when you own the place -- $13,000. It costs you to own in this example, $3,600 a year more than renting.

In my own case, I've saved $100,000 in the last 15 years of renting in Florida. It has worked out that way because I've invested the savings and let them compound the interest those tax-exempt bonds are still earning.

And now we approach a great contradiction to the whole argument:

We're going to buy this place we're in. Not because my arguments aren't valid. And not because it won't be more costly than renting.

We like our apartment very much. It has a wonderful view of the Intracoastal waterway and the Atlantic. We like our neighbors, and the way the condo is managed. And the thought of moving out and the work involved and then re-settling in a new place is too depressing to think about. We'll pay the shot, because there are things more important than money. The price tag is pretty high, as things. Incidentally, we'll borrow the money from a brokerage firm, using securities there as collateral. Cost will be around 10.25 percent and we can pay it back as we wish, and there's no paper work, no "points" for granting the loan, no appraisals, no red tape, no lawyers. Often I wonder why more people don't use the method. It's called a margin agreement, and that scares many investors. They think of "margin calls" when the collateral goes down in value. Well, you don't borrow that close to the line (50 percent of value of stocks, and up to 90 percent against value of bonds). And if you have mostly bonds, they don't move up and down like stocks, so your collateral stays pretty constant. It's convenient and it's cheap. Can't beat that com-

Parking meter removal discussed

Also at the meeting a public hearing was held on an ordinance to regulate installation of satellite dish antennas.

LaPonsie and several commissioners said they have talked to people who install satellite dish antennas, and no one has complained about the proposed village has treated a satellite dish with the same reg-Nationally, the average ulations as an accessory ply to the following regula-

> Only one for each residential structure; no advertising, logos or decorative designs shall be placed on the dish; dishes larger than 10 feet in diameter are not allowed; all wiring shall be below ground; the antenna or the base is not allowed to be closer than three feet to the property line or easement; the receiver shall be screened from view with natural plants, trees or other barriers, and the receiver should be anchored in an appropriate concrete

Roof mounted antennas shall comply to the following regulations: The receiver no larger than three feet in diameter, must be mounted directly to the roof or accessory structure. It cannot be mounted to chimneys, towers, trees, poles or spires; it is not to be three feet above the roof; the maximum electrical power to the driving motor cannot exceed 110 volts and the motor must be encased in protective guards, and the receiver must be bonded to a grounding rod.

Members of the planning commission recommended the village council adopt the new ordinance.

No fuel shortages projected

Continued from page one. this year's price slightly lower than last year. Even with the increase, the cost is cheaper than in 1982, when No. 2 sold for $1.149 and No. 1 was selling for $1.219 per gallon. In 1981, oil prices were two to six cents higher than in 1982. Winchester Gagetown Oil & Gas said some people are switching back to fuel oil because of increased insurance costs to operate a wood burning stove. "We are holding our own," Winchester added. Both suppliers feel there is an adequate stock of heating oil for the winter.

Bud Guest at Sanilac dairy banquet

The 50th annual Sanilac County Dairy Banquet has been scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the Marlette Middle School. The school is located one-half mile south of the stoplight in Marlette to Euclid St., then one-half mile straight east on Euclid.

Bud Guest, former WJR industry, dairying.

exams slated

The Michigan Department of Agriculture restricted pesticide exam will be offered Dec. 5 in Sandusky. The exam will be given from 9:00 a.m.-12 noon in the County Conference Room in Sandusky, according to Rex Sieting, Sanilac County Extension

According to Sieting, there have been a number of corn root worm chemicals and others that have been added to the restricted chemical list. Therefore, a farmer must be certified to purchase these restricted chemicals now.

private applicator's certificate may be renewed for a succeeding three-year period by paying the $10 fee and taking an exam of 25 questions. Farmers with a current certification will receive a renewal notice approximately 90-120 days prior to the expiration of their certification. If you know your certification is going to expire, or has, then these farmers should come to the exam. If an applicator has never been certified and wishes to become certified, then submit an application and $10 and pass a more comprehensive exam consisting of 100 questions. Materials may be purchased from the County Extension Service in Sandusky to pass the exam, according to Sieting.

Sieting states that a farmer must be certified to purchase RUP's stricted used pesticides). This certification or recertification can be accomplished in Sandusky at the County Conference Room Dec. 5 from 9-12:00 a.m. If the farmer is taking the exam for the first time. Sieting recommends that the study manuals be purchased from the County Extension Service office and the farmer prepares to take the exam.

The last time you had a cold, you probably cursed a microscopic entity called a virus. This confounding agent of disease breaks many biological rules. Scientists cannot even say for certain whether viruses are living, nonliving or somewhere in between.

Although most viral infections are not very serious, some of these tiny particles wreak destruction far beyond the common cold. Many diseases, major and minor, are caused by viral infections: measles, mumps, polio, hepatitis, certain rabies. pneumonias, some cancers and, of course, flu and some intestinal upsets. Viruses also are believed to trigger AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome). And the genital herpes simplex virus has disrupted the personal lives of millions of people. In addition, viruses may play a role in a number of diseases thought to have other causes -- diseases such as multiple sclerosis, diabetes and Alzheimer's disease

Viruses are so elusive that the few available antiviral drugs combat only two or three viral diseases. At this point, there are more vaccines to prevent viral diseases than drugs to treat them.

One of the most recent vaccines -- one for hepatitis B, a serious liver disease -may become the first anticancer vaccine. The World Health Organization plans to test whether the vaccine will prevent a lethal form of liver cancer believed to be caused by hepatitis B. Some experts predict the vaccine will prevent as much as 95 percent of such cause of major diseases

Living cells can grow, reproduce, extract energy from nutrients, respond to the environment and evolve over time, but the only independent talent of viruses is their ability to invade living cells. This ingenious parasitism is all they need. Once inside the cells, they subvert the metabolic and genetic machinery to their own ends: reproduction and evolution. Viruses are categorized according to the organisms on which they prey: animal viruses (including those that cause human disease). plant viruses and bacterial viruses (also known as bacteriophages). What do these culprits look like? Not impressive. Most are so tiny that their existence was not even suspected before the late 19th century. And it wasn't until 1935 that scientists recognized viruses and bacteria to be different entities. Visible only with an electron microscope, most viruses consist of an outer shell or capsid that in some cases resembles a geodesic dome built of individual protein molecules. This shell protects the key ingredient, a molecule of genetic material (nucleic acid).

Unlike the universal double-stranded deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) of cellular genes, viral genes may be double- or single-stranded DNA or RNA (ribonucleic acid, which is related to DNA). When a virus invades a cell, the viral genes which range in number from half a dozen to several hundred -- supply the host cell with a "recipe" to make multiple copies of that particular virus.

Why Do Human Cells Have

Suppose an influenza virion -- a free viral particle consisting of a capsid and day, Dec. 7. Dinner will be nucleic acid - chances upon served at 7:30 p.m., fol- a susceptible cell, in this lowed by the program and case a cell lining the redancing. The banquet will spiratory tract. How does

Scientists have known for some time that animal and plant cell surfaces have viral receptors -- chemical structures to which specific viruses can link, these receptors vary from one species to another, from one organ to another and even from one individual to another

This helps explain why humans are not prey to most of the same viruses that attack dogs, for example. It also indicates why some viruses preferentially attack one type of tissue and some individuals are resistant to certain viruses. These hardy souls may be blessed with fewer receptors for those viruses -- or none at all.

But it was not until 1983 that a team of Boston researchers succeeded in de-particles that are even lving deeply into the mysteries, of viral "attack." In the virus they studied, different capsid proteins play distinct roles.

'The function of one protein is attachment," says Bernard N. fields, M.D., professor and chairman of microbiology and molecular genetics at Harvard Medical School in Boston. "It fits exactly into the receptor. We don't yet know the precise basis of the attraction."

Third is what Dr. Fields calls "the killer protein,' because it disrupts the host cell's normal genetic and metabolic machinery.

What puzzles scientists most is why humans have receptors for viruses at all. Evolution generally eliminates harmful structures unless they also serve some useful purpose. Perhaps the receptors that bind to viruses are meant to bind body chemicals, such as hormones, that normally act on body cells.

The Myers Evangelistic Team has been in full-time evangelism in the Church of the Nazarene since 1968. Living and traveling in their own trailer, the team has held revivals, crusades and camps in a number of states.

Mrs. Myers plays the Cordovox, a unique instrument that offers a new dimension of special music to the services. The Myers' sons, Todd, Tony and Travis, travel with their parents. They are part of the singing ministry for the team. Services begin each evening at 7 p.m. Sunday services are at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. The church is located in Gagetown at 6609 Lincoln Street. Rev. Tom Humphreys is pastor of the church.

Everyone is invited to attend the services. The Myers are well-known in the Thumb, and this is the third occasion they have been in the Gagetown church.

Dear Friends.

Cass City is a very special community. The people who really care about this community are what make it so special. We at Rawson Memorial Library are proud to be a part of such a caring community, and we pledge to make the service we offer worthy

You have been very faithful in supporting the library with your tax dollars, and because of that we believe that we have been able to offer above average service to you. If, however, you would like to be a part of the library effort beyond your tax dollars, there are many areas in the library that your gift could be used. We are giving you some suggestions in this gift catalog of things that you could give to your community through the library.

In addition to being deductible on Federal Income Tax, current Michigan Income Tax legislation allows a tax credit of up to $200.00 on your Michigan tax for contributions to public libraries. A brochure with details is available at the library

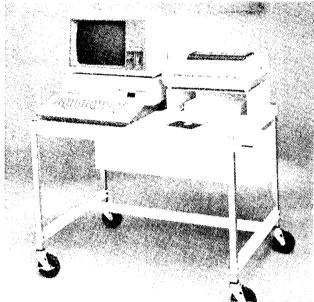

Best wishes this Holiday Season to you and yours, and a very special thank you for your continuing support of Rawson Memorial

Sincerely.

The Gift of the Year

A TIME FOR SHARING

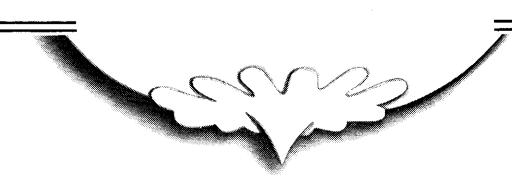

This year we invite you to consider a gift that will go on helping now and for the years ahead. Inside you will find suggestions for gifts to our school, our hospital, our library, our village.

Each of the gifts will make life a little nicer whether it's a picnic table for the park, a computer for the school, a book for the library or equipment for the hospital.

You'll be lending a helping hand for something we couldn't enjoy without your gift. There is a suggestion inside that fits nearly any budget.

You can be sure that whatever the gift, it will be deeply appreciated by us and, more importantly, by the folks who have it available when needed.

Your gift, of course, is tax deductible.

Cass City Public Schools

We are very proud of our school system and the comprehensive program provided. The youth in the Cass City Public Schools are receiving an excellent education.

As pleased as we may be with the quality of the program offered, we realize that there is always room for improvement. Your generosity in presenting a gift to the Cass City Public Schools, to help us improve, will be deeply appreciated. If you have any questions, please contact any of the building principals, any school board member or myself.

Sincerely yours,

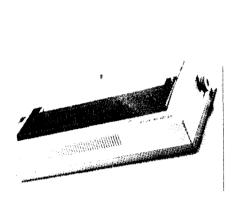

Donald G. Crouse

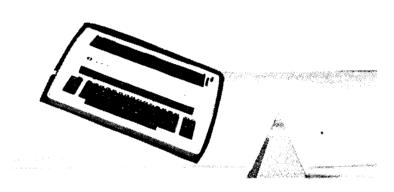

Superintendent of Schools

- 1. Additional Computer equipment. Our preference is for Apple Computers and Printers. Total systems are priced at about $1100.00. These would include computer monitor and disc drives. Printers are an additional $400.00. We currently have 8 computers for use with classes of 30 students.
- 2. Outdoor physical fitness equipment. These would include horizontal ladders and hurdles. Individual pieces range from $90.00 to $250.00 and a complete obstacle course at $1200.00.
- 3. Typewriters. We are currently using manual typewriters that have been in service about 15 years. We would like to begin to replace these with electric machines at $400.00 up.

If you wish additional information, please call Cass City Intermediate School at 517-872-2147.
