Tot killed when car rolls over

A rollover Friday night on Cemetery Road, near Deckerville Road, claimed the life of a Cass City child.

Ashlie Sue Wright, 2, died from head injuries sustained in the mishap. According to the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department, the victim's mother, Sherry Sue Wright, 19, of 6720 Severance Road, lost control of the car she was driving when it hit a patch of ice. The car went off the shoulder of the road and rolled one and a half times before coming to rest in a field on the car's passenger side.

Sherry Wright and the other passenger in the car, Sarina J. Wheaton, 13, of Caro, were uninjured. The child had been sitting on Wheaton's lap when the incident occurred. None of the 3 was wearing seat belts. All 3 were transported to Hills and Dales Hospital, where the child was pronounced dead at 10:30 p.m. An investigation continues. It was Tuscola

Interment will be in Elkland Cemetery, Cass City.

ASHLIE WRIGHT

ALTHOUGH THE CAR is not extensively damaged, the accident it was involved in claimed the life of Ashlie Wright. Police said that the child was not in a child safety seat.

Predict light vote in village elections

Between 5 and 20% of the eligible voters are expected to go to the polls Monday, March 10, as annual village elections will be held in Cass City, Gagetown, Owendale, Kingston and Uby.

Registered voters in Cass City will find a slate of familiar names on Monday's ballot, after the field was narrowed down during last month's primary election. Seeking the office of village president is Larry L. Davis, who is currently serving as a trustee on the Cass City village council. Davis is the lone candidate for president. The office is currently held by Ray Armstead, Jr., who chose not to seek re-election to a second term.

All of the other candidates in Cass City are running unopposed. They include Joyce LaRoche, who is a candidate for both village clerk and treasurer, and Daniel Erla for assessor. Both are incumbents. All of the candidates for the village offices are seeking 2-year terms.

In the race for 3 positions on the Cass City village council, voters will find the names of 3 incumbents who are seeking re-election to 4-year terms. The candidates for trustees include Elwyn Helwig, Dorothy Stahlbaum and K. Michael Weaver.

All of the candidates running for office in Cass City are Republicans. Village Clerk Joyce LaRoche said based upon previous years, she anticipates a voter turnout of about 5%.

cept one, in the annual village election in Owendale are Republican incumbents who are running without opposition.

Seeking re-election to the office of village president is Walter Howard, Jr. Marie Susalla is running for another term as clerk, and Lois Blondell is doing the same for treasurer. Running for the office of village assessor is Republican newcomer Katherine Ricker.

Owendale voters will find 3 Republican incumbents seeking re-election to terms as trustees on the village council. The candidates include Martin Blondell, Robert Ricker and Joseph Schmidt, Jr. All of the candidates in Owendale are running for 2-year terms of office.

KINGSTON

The 6 candidates in Monday's election in Kingston will also have no opposition, as all of the incumbents are seeking re-election.

GAGETOWN

The largest percentage of voters going to the polls Monday may be in Gagetown, where village officials say residents are upset with high sewer bills. The turnout has been very low in the past, but is expected to be more this year because of the sewer bill issue in Gagetown.

Running for the office of village president are Democrat Claude Harry King and Republican David Abbe. King is a newcomer to the council, while Abbe is currently serving as a trustee on the Gagetown village council. One of the 2 candidates will succeed Village President William Downing, who is not seeking re-election. The lone candidate for both village clerk and treasurer is Democrat Elery Sontag, an incumbent.

Voters in Gagetown will choose between 5 candidates who are running for 3 positions as trustees on the village council. Seeking re-election are Republicans Thomas Reehl and Charles Wright. They are being challenged by Democrats Doris F. Bang, Richard Hines and Beverly Leyva. All of the candidates in Gagetown are seeking 4-year terms of office.

All of the candidates, ex-

Names appearing on the ballot will be Republican Arlo Ruggles for village president, and Republican Kenneth Boileau for clerk. Republican Beverly Heron is running unopposed for both treasurer and assessor.

There will not be much of a race for 3 seats on the Kingston village council, as well, with the names of 3 candidates appearing on Monday's ballot. Seeking re-election as trustees on the village council are Democrats William Kupiec and Marlene Powell, and Republican Paul Lalko. The terms for both officers and trustees in Kingston are 2 years in length.

County okays purchase of MESC building

The Tuscola County board of commissioners decided last Tuesday to buy a vacant building in Caro, in hopes of solving a space problem that many county offices have been trying to deal with over the past few years.

During its regular meeting, the board voted to purchase the former Michigan Employment Security Commission building at 362 Green Street, at a price of $85,414. The vote on the action was 6-1.

One of the commissioners voting in favor of buying the building was Royce Russell, (R-Cass City). "Many people don't realize it, but the county does have a space problem. We have people in district court running from floor to floor, not enough space in the prosecutor's office and a potential problem with the cooperative extension service office being in the same building as the jail," Russell said.

There was discussion during the meeting as to whether or not it was a good idea to buy a building located a distance away from other county property. But Russell said it was the price of $85,414 that helped him decide how to vote on the issue. "There were some mixed emotions on the board about spending money to buy a building, especially when the County is talking about asking for millage. But, I guess it was my business head that led me to vote the way I did. You can't build a structure like that one for that kind of a price," Russell said.

The former MESC office, which was closed by the state in November of last year, has a 60-car parking lot and is barrier-free. The board was told that remodeling of the interior will be needed for the building to be used by more than one office. A decision has not yet been made as to which offices or departments will be moved to the Green Street location. Money for the purchase of the property will come out of revenue sharing funds.

A number of personnel items were taken care of by the board during its meeting. County Drain Commissioner, Stanley Henry, requested that a part-time drain inspector be added to his staff. The request was approved, with the position

Audit indicates village in healthy financial condition

Cass City received a clean bill of health during last Tuesday's village council meeting in the form of the 1985 audit report, but village officials are casting a watchful eye on future revenue from Lansing and Washington.

The report was presented to the council by Gary Keller from the Marlette office of the certified public accounting firm of Yeo and Yeo. It showed that total revenues for last year came to $538,663 compared to $528,737 in revenues received during 1984. On the expenditure side of the balance sheet, the report showed 1985 expenditures of $566,661, which compared to a figure of $511,381 for 1984.

The council was told that the village had a fund balance at the end of 1985 of $113,853. That was considered good news by the council members as they had budgeted for an equity of $80,682. Cass City had a fund balance at the end of 1984 of $185,592.

The annual audit report from Keller was accepted by the council as presented and was forwarded to the State Treasury Department. It showed that the village received property tax revenues in 1985 of $309,662 compared to $281,181 in 1984. State shared revenues from Lansing increased from $144,224 in 1984 to $158,858 during last year. Cass City received $28,591 in revenue from charges for services rendered last year, which is up from $27,064 received the previous year. Interest earnings decreased from $34,905 in 1984 to $27,419 in 1985.

In breaking down the expenditures for the village, $193,949 was spent on general government in 1985 compared to $153,093 the previous year. Expenditures for public safety increased from $160,636 in 1984 to $175,976 last year.

Those for public works decreased from $79,008 to $75,078 in 1985. Capital outlay expenditures increased from $24,038 in 1984 to $29,848 last year.

"When people come into town, it is easy to see that Cass City has done a lot of things during 1985," Keller told the council. "I would say that the village is in very healthy shape."

Those feelings were echoed by Village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie, who said he was pleased to hear that all the books are in order. "We are not overly flush, but are in good shape. Our equity is down a little, but that is something that was expected."

OTHER BUSINESS

By adopting a single motion during the meeting, the Cass City village council wiped nearly half of the local ordinances that were

Sanilac commissioners delay TACA withdrawal

The Sanilac Board of Commissioners voted Wednesday to delay action on a resolution to withdraw from the Thumb Area Commission on Aging, but the resolution will be up for a vote at the next meeting, March 19.

The decision to postpone the vote was a result of a meeting Tuesday, Feb. 25, with the TACA board and commissioners from Huron and Tuscola Counties.

Sanilac County Commissioner Lester Kraft, to give their new director a chance. Sward expressed his belief that the situation could be turned around "gracefully" if they were given more time.

An ad-hoc committee consisting of the chairman of each board of commissioners and each commissioner's representative to TACA will meet March 7 to try to come to some sort of resolution, said Sward.

Sward said, "We came to the meeting Wednesday expecting that they would dissolve TACA within 30 days." The delay was a pleasant surprise.

Kraft said Tuesday that the last thing he would like to see is for TACA to pull out. Donna Rayl, Tuscola County Commissioner, said that Tuscola County would be disappointed because the 3 counties have worked together and pooled their resources in the past.

The latest board decision was a result of the ongoing controversy over the Sandusky senior citizen meal site. It's an emotional issue, but Sward believes that they should look objectively at both the positive and negative points of each meal site.

There was nothing fluky about his 300 game. Every ball was dead center in the pocket.

Cass City student spells her way to top in county

Stacey Klinkman, a 4th grade student at the Cass City Campbell Elementary School, is the top speller in her age group in Tuscola County.

Stacey proved to be the best of 34 students who participated in the Tuscola County spelling bee held Friday at the Tuscola Area Skill Center in Caro. She won the contest by spelling correctly the words "precious" and "quite." For her spelling efforts, Stacey received a trophy, and a traveling plaque will be on display at the Campbell School for the next year.

Second place in Friday's competition went to Aaron Soule of Caro. Eddie Park of Cass City came in 4th, while Betsy Gengler of Cass City finished in 12th place.

Karla Zinnecker represented the Deford School, and Evergreen was represented by Monica Smith.

Campbell Elementary School Principal Jacqueline Freiburger said each year, the 4th grade students study the various words, and go through classroom spell-downs until each classroom has a top winner. Those students then go to the Tuscola County meet to determine the top speller for the entire county.

Freiburger said the elementary principals take turns hosting the spelling bee. This year, the elementary principal in the Unionville-Sebewaing Area schools, Tim Edwards, hosted the event.

Stacey Klinkman is the second student from the Cass City schools to win the honor over the past 5 years. The 1st annual spelling bee was won by David Coe. Cass City is now tied with Caro, with each of the schools having 2 winners.

Burning wood

Many people are saving money on their winter heating bills by using wood to heat their homes. America's forests are full of trees that are of little use for wood products because they are poorly formed or diseased. They are an excellent source of firewood to heat houses. The state forestry office can help you identify appropriate firewood.

While you're gathering wood, remember that dry, seasoned wood gives you the most energy for your heating dollar. An efficient woodburning appliance is also important.

"If It Fitz..."

Does it pay to save?

By Jim Fitzgerald

"You could give up washing clothes for Lent; God would be pleased, and so would the Rev. Adams," I told my wife when she began to calm down.

Her calm went up Feb. 19, 1986, when her washing machine broke down. The machine, a small, apartment-size model, was purchased in 1978 for around $300. For the next seven years, we paid $84.95 annually on a service contract that guaranteed if anything went wrong with the washer, it would be repaired for free.

A repairman visited the washing machine faithfully, once every year, but there was never anything for him to do. The machine always worked beautifully. When he came last December, my wife confronted him with arithmetic.

"I figure we've paid around $455 to make sure we can get this machine fixed free, but it never needs fixing," she said. "We are paying more for unneeded repairs than the machine is worth. So I'm not renewing the service contract for next year."

"So you finally wised up," the repairman said.

Honest. My wife swears that is exactly what he said. Less than two months later, the washer motor suddenly collapsed while carrying a full load. During attempts at resuscitation, the motor made a grinding, chilling sound that said plainly: "It would be cheaper to buy a new washer."

"But we paid $455 for free repairs!" my wife wailed. I told her the dead washer had probably given us our money's worth and we could probably afford a new one if we didn't take a trip around the world again this year. That's how I pay all our bills: Every year we don't take a trip around the world again.

"Of course," I said, "we'll have to buy the washer in Detroit." That's when the soap hit the rinse cycle.

She groaned that there is no place in Detroit to buy a washing machine. She likes to buy appliances from Highland Appliance, and all their stores are in the suburbs. The same with Sears, Hudson's and the rest of the over-the-freeway gang.

Recently it has been strongly suggested that Detroiters should boycott suburban stores in an effort to pressure a mall tycoon to set up shops in Detroit. Most people insist upon calling this a black-vs.-white argument, but nuts to that.

My wife is white, and no one was angrier than she was when Hudson's left downtown Detroit. She began boycotting their suburban stores long before Dearborn closed most of its parks to outsiders and touched off the current ruckus.

You don't have to be black to resent big stores that say "Follow us or forget it" as they desert faithful old customers in favor of tax breaks and cheap land where parking spaces and cul-de-sacs run rampant. But you should be smart enough to realize the malls will always locate where it's most profitable and there's no way you can fight the bottom line.

Except boycott the suburban stores? The Rev. Charles Adams, president of the Detroit NAACP branch, recently said God revealed to him on Ash Wednesday that Detroiters should shop strictly in Detroit until Easter. "If you can't find it here, do without it," he said.

But can my wife go 30 days without a washing machine? Can I go that long without clean shirts? Life can be difficult.

There's a laundromat in our building, but she probably can't find it. After 10 years, she still has trouble finding the kitchen in our apartment. God doesn't reveal everything.

Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me. That old ditty came immediately to mind when I read the report of a speech made by Allen E. Murray, chairman and chief executive of Mobil Corp.

Speaking before the Economic Club of Detroit, Murray said that the low prices for crude oil would harm everybody. Oil will have to stabilize at at least $20 a barrel or there will be little incentive for risk takers to explore for new oil or to continue to pump oil from low volume existing wells, according to Murray.

If that happens, a new energy crisis with oil shortages will be inevitable.

Makes you kind of sad, doesn't it? Back to the days of filling the tank whenever and wherever possible so as not to be stranded.

There was a time when an analysis like that would be carefully considered and more than likely be believed.

But fool me twice....and a different picture emerges. Let's go back to about 1980 when the diesel craze swept in. Plenty of incentive to buy one then. After all, the price of diesel was a lot less than regular gas and mileage per gallon was great.

Strangely enough, when diesel fuel use became widespread, the price shot into the sky. It passed the price of regular and, in some cases, the price of no-lead.

It was then that the economics of mass production went into reverse. Instead of the more you manufacture the cheaper it becomes per unit, the price of diesel evidently increased with increased volume.

Fool me twice....Remember the shortage of natural gas? There was a shortage and the country was going to run smack dab out in a relatively short period. No new customers need apply. The price skyrocketed and suddenly we are awash with natural gas. There's a supply for the foreseeable future.

Fool me 3 times....Murray also said that consumers won't necessarily get the full benefit of lower prices because the state and federal governments will probably impose new taxes.

He has a point there, sort of. It's likely that new taxes will be imposed. Taxes will be levied if oil sells for $15 a barrel or $30 a barrel.

Meanwhile it's nice to drive up to the pump and fill the tank for $16 rather than $32 a barrel.

If that eventually leads to a shortage, too bad. I'm willing to risk it.

There's no fooling about that.

Accidents reported

Cass City police probe pair of Friday thefts

The Cass City police department is continuing its investigation of one of 2 larcenies reported within a 15-minute period Friday night.

At 11:00 p.m. Friday, police were told of the larceny of a purse from a house at 4364 Seeger Street, reported by Hazel Moore. She said she had last seen the purse around 6:30 p.m., when she placed it under a day bed in the dining room of the house. The purse was discovered missing at 11:00 p.m. Officers were told by Moore that she heard someone close the outside door to the house around 7:00 p.m., and that may have been when the purse was stolen. The purse contained about $100 in cash, a check book, and a hearing aid. As part of their investigation, officers spoke with several individuals who told police they knew nothing of the larceny.

Also Friday night, police were notified of the larceny of keys from the Cass City high school. The incident was reported by Christopher Garety of Cass City, who told police he had put his coat on a rack in the school at 10:00 p.m. The keys were left in the pocket of the coat, but were found to be missing at 11:15 p.m. Police were told that nothing else was taken from the coat. Officers said Garety checked his vehicle in the parking lot, and found everything to be in order.

In other police activity, the Cass City Police Department handled a car-deer accident that occurred in Elkland Township Saturday night. Officers said Robert G. Britton, 54, of 4916 Schwegler Road, was westbound on M-81, west of the intersection with Schwegler Road, when a deer ran into his path from the south side of the roadway. Britton was not injured in the 10:50 p.m. mishap.

Another car-deer accident in almost the same location was reported Friday night. Police said Gerald E. Houghton, 40, of Houghton Lake, was westbound on M-81, west of the intersection with Schwegler Road, when a deer went into his path from the north side of the road. The accident was reported at 7:35 p.m.

Wednesday at 9:20 p.m., Cass City police said Rusty L. Schneeberger, 16, of 4554 Schwegler Road, was westbound on Main Street, when he attempted to make a left turn onto Brooker Street, and struck an eastbound vehicle driven by Jefferson D. Auvil, 27, of 8844 Grassmere Road. Schneeberger told police he failed to see the Auvil vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Wednesday at 11:00 a.m., officers said Keith J. Langanburg, 20, of Mayville, was eastbound on Main Street, west of the intersection with Leach Street, when he tried to stop after a car cut across his lane of traffic. The Langanburg car went into a skid, and hit a parked car owned by David Lee Smith, of 6473 Church Street, which was not occupied. Police said the driver of the car who caused the accident failed to stop.

Tuesday at 8:00 a.m., Cass City police said Dyanette D. Beadle, 20, of 2536 Englehart Road, was backing out of a driveway onto Pine Street, when she struck a parked car. The vehicle was owned by Donna Cortimilia, of 6343 Pine Street, and was legally parked. The car was not occupied at the time of the accident.

Noreen Kay Bennett, 43, of Elkton was eastbound on M-46, Saturday, when a deer came from the south shoulder of the roadway into the path of her car. According to the Caro State Police, Judith F. Swoish, 33, of Deford was following the Bennett car and she was unable to avoid running over the deer.

Michael F. Withey, 3795 Cemetery Road, was southbound on Cemetery Road, near the intersection of Severance Road, Sunday, when he was unable to avoid a crossing deer.

Horse and buggy accident injures 2 Ubyly men

Two men from the Ubyly area were injured in an accident while riding a horse and buggy in Bingham Township Sunday afternoon.

According to Huron County sheriff's deputies, Clifford Golding, 64, and Richard Holdship, 42, were seated in a buggy being pulled by a pair of horses on McTaggart Road. Police said the tongue on the buggy slipped and fell to the roadway, causing the horses to become frightened and to run out of control. The men were then thrown from the buggy as the horses broke away from the vehicle.

Injured the more seriously was Golding, who was taken to Huron Memorial Hospital, and then transferred to the Saginaw Veteran's Administration Hospital for treatment of 3 broken ribs and a concussion. Holdship received minor injuries, and sought his own treatment.

The mishap was reported around 2:30 p.m.

Former bankers to be arraigned

Two former bankers from Ubyly and Caro were scheduled to be arraigned this week in U.S. District Court in Bay City, on federal charges of misapplying or embezzling funds.

Papers were filed last Tuesday by U.S. Attorney Michael Hluchaniuk charging Leonard R. Haist, 55, of Ubyly, with misapplying $21,000 in bank funds through a fraudulent loan in September of 1984. Haist was a vice president at the New Century Bank in Bad Axe, and resigned about one year ago.

In a separate case, Ronald O. Davis, 37, of Caro, was charged with misapplying and converting to his own use $123,706.13 in bank funds during a period from October of 1982 until March of last year. Davis was an assistant vice-president with the Peoples State Bank in Caro.

Both Haist and Davis face a maximum penalty of 5 years in prison, and/or a $5,000 fine, if they are convicted on the charges. They are scheduled to be arraigned in front of U.S. Magistrate Charles Binder.

The men from Ubyly and Caro were 2 of 8 people who faced charges last week, following an investigation by officers from the Saginaw office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The 8 cases are not believed to be related.

Court officials said the charges against Haist and Davis were filed as part of papers referred to as informations and a grand jury is not involved in the process.

Other people facing charges in the 8 cases involve former banking employees from Bay City, Pinconning, Midland, Mount Pleasant, and Chebaning. Some of the charges are misdemeanors involving amounts of money less than $100.

Review Board to hear your assessment appeals

Assessment is the process of determining the true cash value of property for the purposes of calculating property taxes. Under Michigan law, 50 percent of the true cash value of property is the taxable value.

According to a consumer report by the Michigan Tax Information Council, it is up to each of Michigan's 1,531 different units of local government to assess the value of taxable properties within their jurisdiction.

Assessments are done annually and are based on a number of factors, such as lot and house size and the quality and type of construction. The process involves some judgement, so mistakes do happen. If you think your assessment is too high, the council's first suggestion is to inspect your records at the assessor's office. When errors are pointed out, most assessors are willing to adjust your appraisal without requiring any formal appeal process. If you are still unsatisfied, there is a method for appealing property tax assessment.

The Board of Review in each jurisdiction is empowered to hear assessment appeals and render a decision. Most of the local township review boards meet March 10 and 11.

The tax council stresses the importance of observing relevant details when filing your appeal or you'll lose your chance this year. Here are some pointers to insure a favorable judgement: before filing your own appeal sit in on a hearing to get an idea of what it is like, take notes and ask questions; your appeal must be limited to questioning the validity of the tax assessment; do not include any arguments regarding the tax rate or the purpose for which the tax dollars are used.

McLellan's sentencing stems from two charges

A Caro man was sentenced Monday by Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge Patrick Joslyn on two separate charges. Marty McLellan, 21, was sentenced to from 30 months to 4 years on a breaking and entering charge, and 48 months to 6 years on a charge of delivery of marijuana. The sentences will be served concurrently. He was given 89 days credit for the breaking and entering charge, and 134 days credit was given for jail time served on the charge of delivery of marijuana. The sentences stem from the breaking and entering into the St. Paul Lutheran Church in Caro Nov. 2, 1985, and the delivery of marijuana, June 11, 1985. Gary R. Cain, 20, of Millington, pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted breaking and entering of an occupied building with the intent to commit larceny. His plea was accepted by the court. A pre-sentence investigation was ordered and May 12, 1986, was set for sentencing. His bond was reduced to $5,000. The charges stem from an incident in Millington Township Jan. 25, 1985. John S. Redfield, 17, of Vassar, was sentenced to 4 years probation on a charge of receiving and concealing stolen property over $100. He was also fined $50, costs of $50 and restitution of $20.62. He was ordered to serve 120 hours of community service and 30 days in the county jail. Redfield was originally charged with breaking and entering of an occupied dwelling stemming from an incident June 17, 1985. Terry Czekai, 20, of 7279 Elmwood Road, was denied petition for a court appointed attorney. He is charged with embezzlement over $100 stemming from an incident Dec. 14, 1985, at the Quaker Maid Dairy Store.

Vassar man indicted by Judge Joslyn

A Vassar man was indicted in Tuscola County Circuit Court last week, charged with embezzlement of property over $100 and conspiracy to embezzle over $100. John Evans Welch, 27, was issued the indictment following a secret one-man grand jury hearing. Judge Patrick Joslyn issued the indictment at the request of former Prosecutor G. Scott Stermer, who began the action in 1985. Welch was arraigned in Tuscola County District Court before Judge

Richard Kern, and pleaded innocent to both counts. His bond was set at $10,000. Welch is charged with the theft of automotive parts, mainly transmissions, from DAB manufacturing plant, 827 E. Huron, Vassar, over a 4-year period. The incident came to light on July 30, 1984 when state police in Flint intercepted a large shipment of stolen parts. Charges stem from an 18-month investigation by Caro State Police Detective/Sergeant Daniel Miller.

In a two-day trial last Wednesday and Thursday, a Caro man was found guilty by the jury of two counts of uttering and publishing. William A. Enos, 29, was found guilty of uttering and publishing at Cass City Automotive and First Automotive in Vassar, March 8, 1985. A pre-sentence investigation was ordered and bond was set at $10,000. Sentencing will take place March 17, 1986.

Alcohol & Drug series continues

Hills and Dales General Hospital's Alcohol and Drug Education Campaign project will present the seventh in a series of community awareness programs Monday, March 10, at the Rawson Memorial Library, 6495 Pine Street.

Health Promotion Specialist Betsy Dillon said a film entitled "The Intervention" will be shown at 7:30 p.m. A discussion on early intervention will follow the movie.

"Health statistics show that out of every 8 people who drink alcohol, one will become alcoholic," said Dillon. "This number is even higher among adolescents. Being prepared with the facts ahead of time may mean the difference between dealing effectively with problems, and riding the merry-go-round of guilt and denial. We owe it to ourselves and loved ones to learn all we can about chemical dependency before a problem arises," she concluded.

During the program Monday night, refreshments will be provided by the American Association of University Women.

The elephants' closest living relatives are the water-dwelling sea cows.

Teaching school at home is Rep. Walberg's proposal

Parents would have the legal authority to provide home schooling for their children, so long as they complied with certain minimal requirements, under legislation being prepared by Representative Timothy Walberg (R-Onsted).

Walberg, whose three children are taught at home by him and his wife, said his legislation will clarify the rights of home schooling parents while "establishing some reasonable standards for that education."

In that proposal, he said, requirements for home school teachers other than parents would be established, attendance in home classes would be mandatory, regular student testing would be required as would an annual assessment of a child's progress.

However, a child's records would be required to be recorded with any local school agency, Walberg said, although the bill would permit release of a child's attendance record through court order.

Walberg said there would be no educational requirement for a parent teaching a child, but persons other than a parent or guardian teaching a child would have to have either a college degree or an "equivalent life experience" in a particular subject.

He said there was nothing in the bill that would compel attendance of a child in a local public or private school if a child's progress is not up to that of regular schoolchildren.

Complying With Report Proposals Would Cost $74 Million

Complying with the recommendations of a House Corrections Committee report on early prisoner release could cost the state $74 million annually, along with the construction of the equivalent of three new prisons, a report issued by the Department of Corrections said.

The report was a formal reply to the House panel report which was issued in November, 1985.

That report, itself a response to a Detroit Free Press series, charged that the department had violated state law by awarding good time sentence reductions to drug offenders and by reducing the sentences of gun offenders.

That report also called on the department to develop new policies for community release and that other policies for extended prisoner furloughs be amended.

In its response the Corrections Department said it was trying to provide the Legislature with information on the costs and consequences of the proposals so it could determine if the changes proposed were actually in the best interest of the state.

While the report agreed with a number of the recommendations made by the House committee, it said the total annual increased cost of all the recommendations would be at least $74 million.

And even then, the report said, the cost of all the recommendations was not calculated. The largest single cost would come from hiring an estimated additional 1,500 corrections officers and supervisors at an annual cost of $49.9 million.

The recommendations would also require a capital outlay cost of $36 million for the addition of more than 1,700 prison beds, the equivalent of three new prisons.

In addition, several changes in state law would be required to meet with a number of recommendations. For example, one recommendation was that all prisoners participate in the halfway house program, which Corrections Director Robert Brown said, would require a statutory change to permit sex offenders in halfway houses.

Aquino will improve life in Philippines

The transition to a new government in the Philippines over the past week has been watched closely by a large number of people in this country. One of them is Ervie Hewitt of 4534 Downing Street, who has many friends from the Philippines. He traveled to the country in 1974, and again in 1984.

When asked how he felt about the U.S. involvement in the presidential election between Ferdinand Marcos and Corazon Aquino, Hewitt said he feels the United States did the right thing in sending Americans to the Philippines to monitor the election. "What we have read in the paper and seen on television is pretty much the true story. All of these activities connected with the election were just further proof that Marcos had to go. The people in the Philippines who had hard feelings against the U.S. felt the way they did because of our government supporting Marcos for so long," he said.

With President Aquino now in office, Hewitt says the overall situation in the Philippines is bound to improve. "It certainly can't get any worse than it was under Marcos. I think this will be a big blessing to the people there. I hope it will also mean increased financial aid from the United States," he said.

Hewitt says he sees no real threat from communism in the Philippines, or from increased strength of the National People's Army. "President Marcos had accused the NPA of numerous killings, when in effect, the killings had been sanctioned by his own army. As soon as the new government's army is straightened out, I feel there will be hundreds of members leaving the NPA and the group will dissolve. Then, there will be only 5% of the people left who are real communists," he said.

Hewitt says he is also looking for an improvement in the country's economy under the Aquino administration. "Both General Motors and Ford have had to close their plants in the Philippines because of corruption under Marcos. The country is rich in natural resources, but the wages are so low and prices are high. In the past, the working-class people have not had much of a say in dealing with the economy," he added.

Hewitt says he has talked to many of his friends from the Philippines over the past several days and all of them are happy with the recent events in their homeland. Hewitt is also planning to visit the Philippines again, possibly in 1988.

Evangelical youth hold church party

The youth of Evangelical Free Church sponsored a '50s party Saturday evening at the church for the entire congregation. About 120 attended.

The festivities started with supper served by girls on roller skates. The program consisted of playing "Name That Tune," introducing a homecoming queen; a Leave it to Beaver skit and devotions.

Area farm bureaus donate to EMAT

The Michigan Farm Bureau and its 69 county units, including those from Tuscola, Sanilac and Huron Counties, have made a $10,000 contribution for the addition of a 14th Extension Management Assistance Team (EMAT) to help farmers deal with agriculture's current economic challenges.

In a recent presentation at Michigan State University, Farm Bureau President, Elton Smith, told MSU's cooperative extension service officials that the organization supports the EMAT program "because we know it works."

"It works because it brings together all the people involved in a particular farm operation and provides them with the opportunity to discuss, in detail, what problems and opportunities exist on that farm," Smith said. "It works because the MSU specialists are there to help these farm families evaluate the operation and look at the alternatives. It works because a network of follow-up is provided to help the families make the necessary decisions."

According to Smith, Michigan Farm Bureau supported the formation of the first EMAT teams and worked in the legislature last spring to secure funding to continue and expand the program. Currently, 13 EMAT teams composed of extension specialists in agriculture production, economics and family life, along with the local extension agent, are responding to farmers who have requested assistance.

"It is also our intention to work with our county farm bureaus to provide an assistance network for farm families who need information and referral to the EMAT program or other agencies for help," Smith said. "This network will provide another contact point, and encourage families who need assistance to take the first step and ask for help."

HEALTH TIPS

Prevention is name of the game

In these days of 'living right,' you're sure to get a lecture from somebody if you smoke, eat foods high in cholesterol, or don't have your blood pressure checked regularly. "People have learned a lot about how to take care of their hearts and they would rather prevent heart disease than live with it," said Albert Sparrow, MD, president of the American Heart Association of Michigan.

Sparrow pointed out that the American Heart Association stresses prevention in its message, and that means paying attention to the four major controllable risk factors of heart disease: smoking, high blood pressure, high cholesterol foods and diabetes. Other major risk factors include heredity, sex, race, and age.

"Smokers have more than twice the risk of heart attack of non-smokers," said Sparrow. "And, a smoker who has a heart attack is more likely to die from it and is more likely to die suddenly (within an hour) than a non-smoker."

"When people stop smoking, regardless of how long or how much they've smoked, their risk of heart disease is rapidly reduced," Sparrow said. "For a long time we felt that it took ten years after a person has quit smoking to lower the risk of death from heart disease to the same level as people who have never smoked. More recent findings from the Framingham study are indicating your timespan for returning to the health of a non-smoker is a fraction of that. The best action you can take is to stop smoking before the signs of heart disease appear."

Another controllable risk factor is high blood pressure. "High blood pressure usually has no specific symptoms and no early warning signs," said Sparrow. "It is truly a 'silent killer.'"

High blood pressure adds to the heart's workload, causing it to enlarge and become weaker over time. It also increases the risk of stroke, heart attack, kidney failure and congestive heart failure. Sparrow noted that when high blood pressure is combined with other conditions such as obesity, smoking, high blood cholesterol levels or diabetes, the risk of heart attack or stroke increases several times.

You can detect high blood pressure with a simple, quick and painless test that either your doctor or the local health department can provide.

"People who have high blood pressure should work with their doctor to control it," Sparrow said. "Proper diet, regular exercise, restricting salt (sodium) intake and a continuing program of medication may all be prescribed to lower blood pressure and keep it within healthy limits."

"Something else we should limit is the number of calories we get from saturated fat and cholesterol," said Sparrow. "Too much cholesterol in the blood can cause buildup on the walls of the arteries which can narrow and eventually close the passageway that the blood flows through, ultimately resulting in a heart attack or stroke."

A doctor can measure the amount of cholesterol in the blood by performing a simple test. To do this, the doctor will withdraw a sample of blood and then analyze it to determine how much cholesterol is present.

A certain amount of cholesterol in the body is necessary to build cell walls, etc., but the liver produces enough cholesterol to meet those needs. The American Heart Association diet includes no more than 300 mg of cholesterol a day, and a balance of protein, carbohydrates and fats, which should help to lower levels of blood cholesterol.

"When you have your blood cholesterol checked, ask your doctor to share the results with you and explain whether you need to change your diet," he said. "The American Heart Association's guidelines suggest a level of 200 or less, but that figure can be affected by age and other factors. More than 50 percent of middle-aged Americans have serum cholesterol levels above 200 milligrams per deciliter of blood, a level at which the risk of coronary heart disease begins to rise sharply. (Most heart attacks occur in people with cholesterol levels between 210 and 265.)"

More than watching cholesterol, people with diabetes need to monitor their entire diet carefully. Diabetes appears most frequently during middle age, and most often in people who are overweight. "In a mild form, diabetes can go undetected for many years," Sparrow said. "Diabetes can sharply increase a person's risk of heart attack, so controlling other risk factors becomes even more important. If you have diabetes a doctor can detect it and prescribe changes in your eating habits, programs for weight control and exercise, and even drugs (if necessary) to keep it in check."

Other factors which contribute to heart disease include obesity, lack of exercise and stress. By monitoring these conditions in your life and controlling them as much as possible, you can help reduce your risk factors.

"The key is prevention," Sparrow said. "You are the most important person involved in taking care of your health. Take a little time to learn about what you can do to control the risk factors of heart disease. The American Heart Association has a number of free materials available that can help you establish a new lifestyle. Some of the titles are, Why Risk Heart Attack, Fact Sheet on Heart Attack, Stroke and Risk Factors, and Cholesterol and Your Heart."

The American Heart Association of Michigan is a United Way Agency.

Job of loggers requires many talents

Decker father and son are logging team

As people travel around the Thumb area in their cars, some people listen to music on the radio, while others pay attention to the road in front of them. Steve Papp, a logger and lumberman from Decker, does both of those things while driving, but he also does something different. Papp and his son, Shawn, keep an eye out for large, old trees that may need to be cut down in the near future.

Steve Papp, 47, of 3737 N. Van Dyke Road, is a person who talks about large trees in the same way that other people describe a large fish that almost got away. He started in the logging and lumbering business in 1958, and is now going on his 27th year.

"I got out of school then, and it was similar to the situation today as there weren't many jobs around. So, I took a job piling lumber at the Virgil Peters sawmill on Schwegler Road. With the exception of a few years in a shop, I have been in the woods ever since," Papp said. "I enjoy working outdoors, and being my own boss. I don't think I could stand being in a factory all day."

Since that time, logging has become a family affair for the Papps. 23-year-old Shawn started by riding a tractor at the age of 12, and has now graduated to using chain saws, as well. Steve Papp's other son, Jeff, worked as a logger for a couple of years, and is now in the Air Force. Not to be outdone by the younger members of the family, their grandfather, Dan Papp, 70, still cuts most of the firewood at home.

The Papps practice their logging skills within a 30 to 40-mile radius of Cass City, and work year-round. They recently brought down what is believed to be one of the biggest trees cut in this area. Steve Papp described it as a cottonwood tree that was about 80 years old, and was located in a wet spot all by itself. "This tree was part of a selective-cutting job for Gerald Kappen of Gageton. It had a diameter of 48", and the whole center of the trunk had rotted. The tree measured 46 feet from the ground to the first limb, and it contained 2,300 board feet of lumber."

Most of the logs cut by the Papps go to a pallet shop in Mayville or Carsonville. What are referred to as grade logs, or the ones of better quality of hardwood, are trucked to other mills. Papp says the demand for pallets has been picking up recently, due to the fact that many small factories are busy. However, if those same factories decide to change to plastic pallets, then the situation will change quickly.

On a similar note, Steve Papp says he would like to see a paper or pulpwood mill located within 25 miles of Cass City. "We have an awful lot of certain types of trees that could be harvested in the area. A mill would create quite a few jobs for farmers in the winter, or for other people. All you need is a cheap truck, and a saw," he said.

Papp says cutting down a tree is not as easy as it looks. "A logger is a mechanic, a bridge-maker, and a road-builder all rolled into one."

As part of their 3-man operation, Shawn Papp has the job of cutting the tree near the base to get it on the ground. After that is done, Jim Wutzke uses a vehicle called a skidder to get the tree in the proper position. The job of cutting, loading and hauling the trees belongs to Steve Papp. On an average, the 3 men cut about 6,000 board feet of logs in one day.

As can be expected, the logging business can be a dangerous one, but Steve and Shawn have been lucky over the years. Each one has been cut 2 or 3 times by the kick-back of the chain saw, but there have been no serious injuries. One of the challenges that Shawn deals with is standing near the tree as it starts to fall to the ground. "The safest place to be is within 10 feet of the base. That way, if the tree goes one way or the other, you just move a few feet and you're out of the way. But if you try to outrun it, you won't make it," he said. Steve Papp says he is very proud of the track record his crew has maintained. "We have not had any complaints on the work we have done. I think that comes from me growing up learning how to do the selective cutting of trees. At the same time, though, there are some so-called loggers who have put the bind on people by not paying them for the trees that were cut. People need to check out their record, and ask for references," he added.

As far as the future is concerned, Papp says in a few more years, this area may be wiped out for logging. "That could be the case unless farmers quit clearing their land, and leave a woodlot on the farm. With taxes being what they are, farmers are almost forced to clear the land and farm it. But things could be reversed, if they were to leave some of the land in timber."

Until that time arrives, though, Steve Papp says he will continue to search for the elusive largest tree in the Thumb. "Maybe I'll take the full length of the tree, and put a truck axle under it, and then pull it through town during the July 4th parade. The only problem may be in trying to turn a corner!"

BY CONTROLLING THE direction that the tree will fall, Shawn Papp is able to stand only a few feet from the base after the final cut is made.

IT TOOK SHAWN PAPP about 15 minutes to bring down this tree using a chain saw and a steady hand.

Kozan appointed to relief commission

A Cass City man has recently been appointed a member of the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Commission by W. Wallace Kent, Jr., Tuscola County Probate Judge.

Andrew Kozan, a WWII veteran, began his term of office January 1 this year and serves on the commission until Dec. 31, 1988.

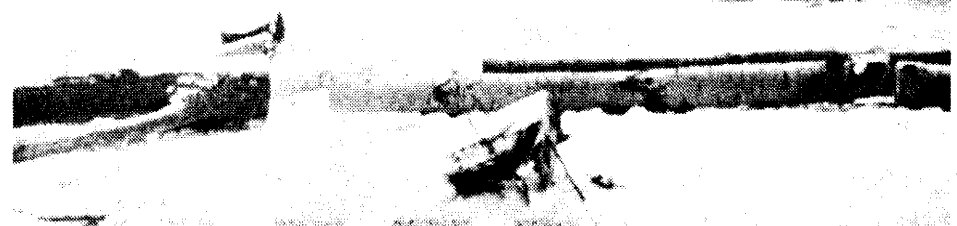

The relief commission was established in 1899 to give relief to veterans who needed some type of minor assistance and its work continues today.

"We also help people with burial expenses," said Kozan. "They sometimes run short and we can give them up to $300." The commission, however, investigates need for the money before the family is given any.

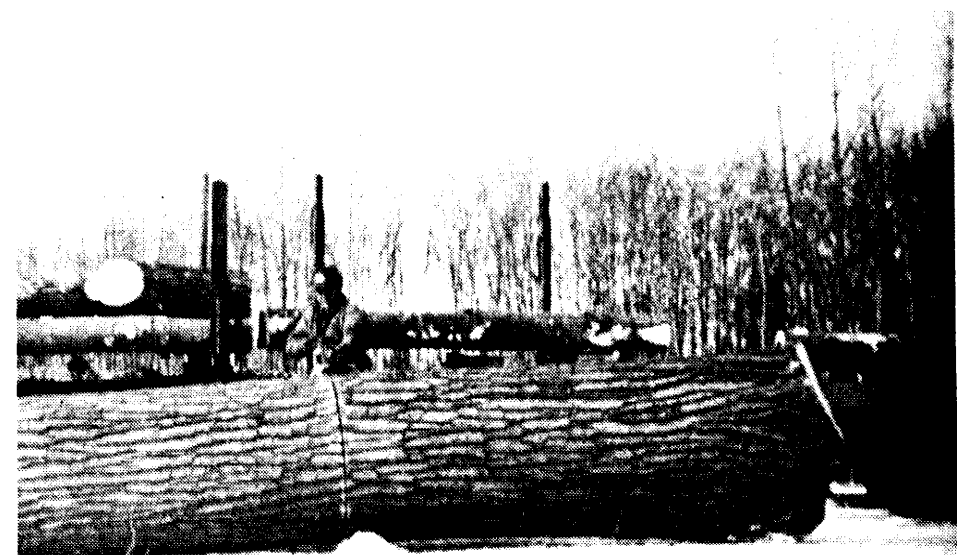

There are 3 people on the commission and Kozan finds that the voluntary position keeps him busy. "It involves a lot of travel to different areas," he said.

Kozan, 66, got involved in veteran affairs about 5 years ago. He is the chairman of the Veterans Trust Fund as well. The trust fund helps needy vets in Tuscola County. "If they get a shut off notice on their lights or heat, they call us and we keep them on." The trust fund also helps the veterans to buy food.

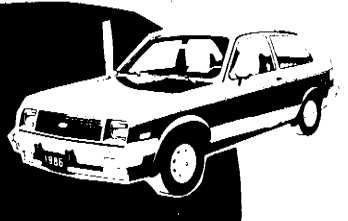

Kozan is commander and service officer of the Disabled American Veterans in Caro. He is also hospital chairman and chaplain of the VFW in Fairgrove. Anyone who has served 180 days of wartime activity is considered a veteran. Kozan, an Army veteran, spent over two years in Europe.

THE PROCESS OF cutting a tree down and getting it ready for placement on the truck usually takes about an hour and a half using a 3-man operation.

STEVE PAPP USES one of 7 chain saws to cut the logs into smaller segments before they are loaded onto the truck.

Land rental terms tough for farmer to negotiate

A sagging farm economy has made it difficult to negotiate land rental terms to the satisfaction of both landowner and renter, but going over the alternatives together helps to reach an agreement.

"Arriving at land rental contract terms is essentially a bargaining process between a landowner and a renter that is different for every situation," says William Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director. "There are basically 3 approaches to farmland rental agreements: fixed cash rent, crop share lease and flexible cash rent."

"With cash rental contracts, the renter has a free hand in crop production decisions, and the landowner knows exactly what the yearly income will be and can be minimally involved in farm production. However, both parties take on an equal amount of risk if the renter is unable to pay.

Basically, 2 forms of cash rental, fixed and flexible, are commonly used. A fixed cash rental policy is based on either land values or farm costs.

Fixed cash rental rates desired by the landowner can be determined by calculating the fixed costs for the land plus the profit desired. Then the renter needs to calculate the production costs, subtracting the expected crop value. The difference between the two values is the range from which the 2 parties can negotiate final rent payment.

Fixed cash rental rates can also be based on the market value of the land. Land values have been declining, however, and tenants have been able to negotiate lower rents as their income has declined. Rent may also be determined from property assessments; however, assessments may also be inflated.

Flexible cash rent can vary with crop prices or yields. The simplest method of flexing rent is to set the rent equal to the value of a given quantity of the main crop produced on the rented land. There are many ways to approach flexible cash rent, but for the agreement to work, it needs to be fair and not too complex.

With crop share land leasing, the landowner and tenant share the price and also share farm management responsibility. Many retired farmers who rent their land do not want the responsibility involved in this type of arrangement. Extensive record keeping is also needed to divide the crop at harvest.

Landowners and tenants need to review seriously their cost and return situations for 1986. If the current outlook for grain prices is correct, neither party may be able to cover their full costs for the next year or two. Working together, however, landowners and renters should be able to come to an equitable agreement.

Elliotts benefit from fund-raisers

There is no silver lining in a fire that destroys the home and brings about a loss of $60,000, but having good neighbors can save the pain at least a little.

Gene and Sally Elliott lost their modular home at 6862 Severance Road Friday, Jan. 23, despite the best efforts of the Elkland Township Fire Department to save it.

The firemen had not brought the flames under control when the first neighbor offered assistance.

"I don't know who it was," Mrs. Elliott said, "someone just put a sum of money into a friend's hand and asked that it be given to me."

That was the first of a stream of aid that poured in from all sides. Children at Deford School held a money march and raised $80. Mrs. Betty Murphy gave a Cabbage Patch doll to the Elliotts' granddaughter, who stays at the Elliott home.

Last week the Cass City Gun Club staged a pancake supper and the proceeds will be turned over to the family.

The family has been living in Kingston while a new home is being prepared on the site where the old home burned. Mrs. Elliott says that she hopes to be in the new home very soon.

A part of the loss was covered by insurance.

Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Service has announced the appointment of Tuscola County Extension Home Economist Betty Pattullo, to a dual-position role.

Funding plan comes before PIC

A plan targeted at offering both local and regional support to economic development comes before the Private Industry Council (PIC) for recommendation, at 1:00 Thursday, March 13.

There have been differences pertaining to the funding strategy of $180,000 which has been targeted for job creation. The recommendation is that $40,000 of that amount be set aside for special projects approved by the regional office. Some officials though, would like to see the entire amount go to the local Economic Development Corporation.

As proposed, the $140,000 would be divided among the 4 county EDC's in the region based on a formula which considers unemployment and low income statistics. Tuscola County would receive 29.8 percent of the funds or $41,813, using the formula.

According to Marvin Pichla, director of the Thumb Area Consortium, if the PIC rejects the proposal, the funding strategy will go back to the EDC committee. The TAC approved the plan last week.

He also said that the money in question is only 10 percent, or one phase of the total job training plan. He said that the agency plans to receive a base grant of almost $2 million for the year. The plan is expected to emphasize actual on-the-job training, with $1 million set aside.

Dryden next stop for regional-bound Bulldogs

A well-balanced attack by the Owen-Gage girls' volleyball team was the key to the Bulldogs winning the Class D district tournament held Saturday in Port Hope.

Coach Judy Porter's team wasted little time in showing their form by defeating North Huron in the first round 15-1, 15-1. The Bulldogs' next competition was provided by Caseville, with Owen-Gage winning again by scores of 15-11 and 15-8. In the district finals, it was Owen-Gage taking on Akron-Fairgrove with the Bulldogs coming up on top 15-8, 9-15, and 15-9.

Individual statistics show Marcie Draschil with 18 service points for the day. Cindy Enderle had 17 service points, and 24 sets. Senior Deb Engelhardt had 16 service points, and 18 sets. Not far behind was Marsha Lopez with 15 service points, and 18 sets. Junior Barb Hellebuyck had 14 service points, and 13 sets. One of the busiest players on the court Saturday was Susie Salcido, who had 12 service points, 20 kill spikes, 30 good spikes, 12 kill tips, and 21 good tips. Adding her fair share to the effort was Janie Billy with 16 kill spikes, 6 good spikes, 5 kill tips, and 5 good tips.

The Owen-Gage volleyball team now goes on to regional competition with an overall record of 33-3. The Bulldogs will play the winner of the Detroit Bethesda district in the regional tournament Saturday at Dryden.

The Owen-Gage volleyball team now goes on to regional competition with an overall record of 33-3. The Bulldogs will play the winner of the Detroit Bethesda district in the regional tournament Saturday at Dryden.

SEEING PLENTY OF ACTION in the district tournament volleyball game against Akron-Fairgrove was Owen-Gage's Susie Salcido, (number 7).

Peck press leads to 67-40 victory over Owen-Gage

A tough defensive press proved to be too much for the Owen-Gage basketball team, as the Bulldogs lost their final game of the regular season Friday to Peck 40-67.

Owen-Gage Coach Dean Roller said, "We held them off pretty well in the first half of the game, but their press killed us in the second half." He noted that the Bulldogs had 31 turn-overs during the game, and made 29% of their shots from the floor.

The second half of the game was all Peck with the Pirates scoring 23 points in each the third and fourth quarters, compared to Owen-Gage with 14 and 8 points.

The top scorers for the Bulldogs were Stu Stirrett and Dave Laurie, who each had 8 points in the losing effort. Leading the Pirates was Doug Kussrow with 14 points.

The JV game Friday was closer, but Owen-Gage came up on the short end losing to Peck 49-55.

The next action for the Bulldog varsity squad will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the district tournament in Akron. Owen-Gage will play the winner of the game between Port Hope and Michigan Lutheran Seminary.

The game Friday night got off to a slow start with Owen-Gage scoring 5 points in the first quarter, compared to 7 for Peck. The Bulldogs held their own in the second quarter by scoring 13, while the Pirates countered with 14, giving them a 3-point lead at

Deadline nears for Cass City citizen of year

This is the first year that the Cass City Chamber of Commerce has asked the public to nominate someone they feel is deserving of the Citizen of the Year award.

"We have a list that we use year to year with a list of their accomplishments that we add to when they do something worthwhile," said Kim Glaspie, a member of the selection committee.

What they look for in nominees, according to Glaspie, are their accomplishments in the community and what they have done either directly or indirectly to help the commu-

ity. But, he points out, there are no other specific attributes that the committee looks for.

The Citizen of the Year award and Junior Citizen of the Year award are both given at the annual Chamber of Commerce dinner in April or May.

Red Hawks shine in wide-margin victory over Lakers

It was the finest performance of the year for the Cass City Red Hawks, there is no doubt about that. The only question that remains is how much of the satisfying victory over this year's Thumb B Association champions was due to Cass City's fine play and how much could be traced to the fact that the Lakers were playing their second game in 2 nights and third of the week and had the league title socked away entering the game.

played solid defense for 4 quarters and we will have to stay that good to win the district.

District play starts Tuesday at Sandusky when the Hawks meet Deckerville at 7:30 p.m.

Cass City took control early against the Lakers. After both teams missed 2 shots, Dave Miller hit a jumper from the top of the key. Kurt Bliss scored on a drive from the side and added a free throw. Dan Ware hit a rebound and the Hawks were in front, 7-2, with just 2:45 run off the clock.

From there Cass City never looked back. By the end of the quarter the Hawks led, 17-6. Cass City used some tough defense to stop a mini charge by the Lakers in the second period. The defense caused numerous Laker turnovers and offset some vicious rebounding by the visitors.

Miller took charge of the offense in the quarter, scoring 10 points on drives, jump shots and foul shots. At the half Cass City was comfortably in front, 34-21.

The Laker defense tightened in the third period, but the Green Machine's attempt to get back on track was thwarted by the tight Hawk defense.

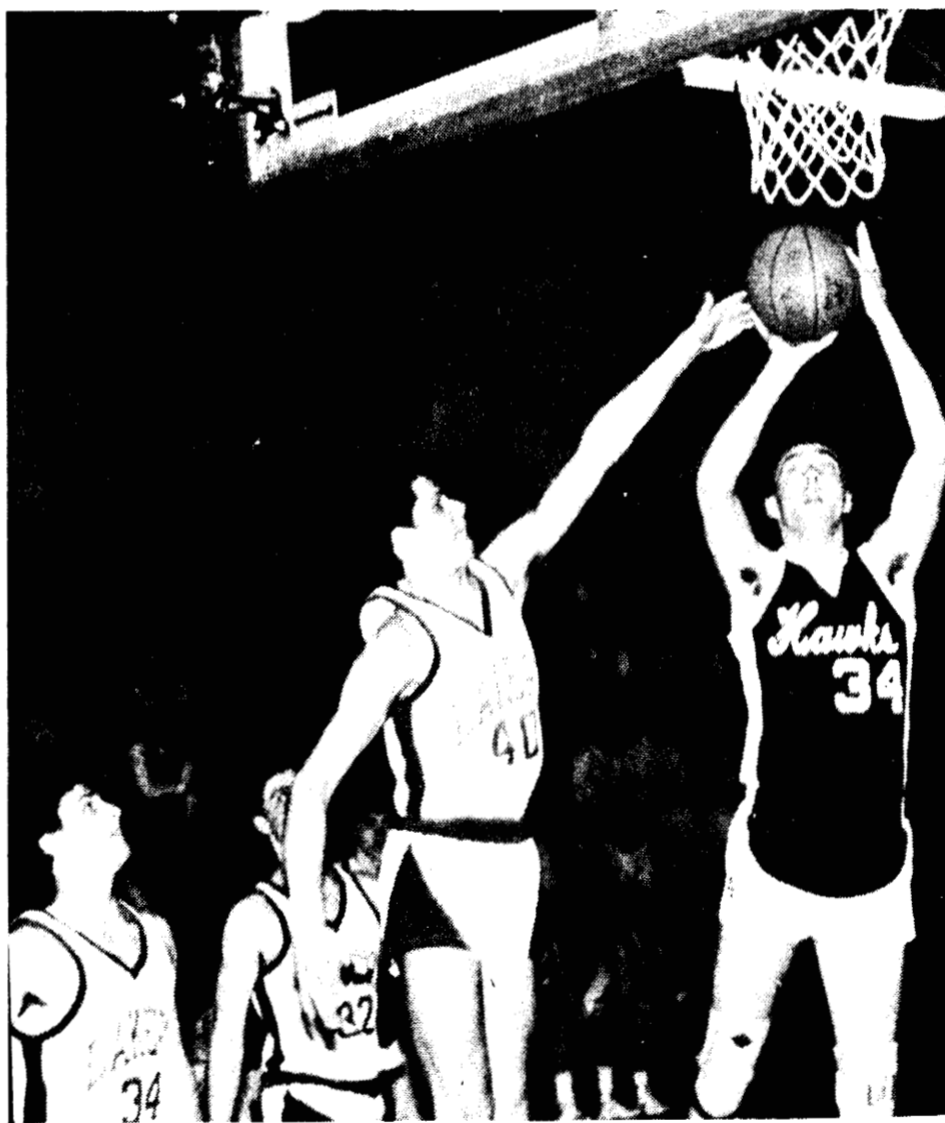

Tom Beer dribbled through Cass City for a couple of buckets, but his efforts were matched by Cass City when the team hit the open man for good shots. Scott Adams hit a pair of hoops and 3 other players added a bucket each.

The Lakers shifted to a man-to-man from their usual zone in an attempt to get back into the game and Cass City immediately widened its lead. Midway through the final quarter the Lakers threw in the towel and the bench finished out the game. Miller led all scorers with 22 points. Also in double figures for Cass City were Bliss with 15 points and Adams with 12 points. Beer was high point man for the Lakers with 16. Chris Eby, who ruined the Hawks in the first meeting between the 2 teams, was held to 6 points.

JUNIOR VARSITY
The Laker junior varsity made it 2 in a row over the Hawks with a 67-48 decision.

AN EASY 2 points were recorded by Dan Ware from the low post. Defending for the Lakers is Jeff Smith. Watching the action are the Lakers' Chris Eby (34) and Jim Warren, 32.

Barcia sponsors measure to save ruffed grouse

In an effort to prevent the continuing decline of the ruffed grouse population, the Michigan House of Representatives unanimously approved legislation that would reduce the number of days the bird could be hunted. The measure (Senate Bill 409), sponsored by state Senator James Barcia (D-Bay City), will provide for one hunting season extending from Oct. 1 to Nov. 14. Prior to passage of the Barcia legislation, the game law stipulated that the open hunting season for ruffed grouse extend from Sept. 15 to Nov. 14 in the Upper Peninsula and from Dec. 1 to Jan. 1 in the Lower Peninsula.

"I have been concerned over the dramatic decline in the ruffed grouse population (more than a 50 percent drop from 1980 to 1983)," said Senator Barcia. "I am pleased that the House of Representatives has overwhelmingly approved this vital piece of wildlife legislation that will help to secure the continued growth of the ruffed grouse population."

The Bay City Democrat added, "Despite the reduced number of grouse, the Department of Natural Resources has repeatedly increased the number of hunting days to the point where it extends into deer season." The end result has been a conflict between the two distinctly different types of hunting styles for deer and grouse. Whereas deer hunting is passive in its style, grouse hunting is active in that the hunter is constantly moving. "The legislation that I have sponsored will help the ruffed grouse population to flourish without conflicting with deer season. Many grouse hunters come to Michigan from out of state to hunt and we need to preserve the population in order to continue to bring tourist dollars into Michigan."

Senator Barcia also said that the Gladwin Chamber of Commerce, along with a number of organizations and hunting organizations were responsible for focusing attention to the grouse hunting season and helpful in securing the passage of the bill.

The bill now goes to the Governor where it is expected that he will sign the measure into law.
