DUIL stats dip slightly in Tuscola, not peril

There were 156 fewer drunk driving arrests made by State Police troopers in Tuscola County in 1985 than the year before.

But police officers contacted in a Chronicle survey warned the decrease in arrests doesn't lessen the menace.

"The percentage of alcohol-related accidents in which someone was hurt fatally or seriously still hovers over 50 percent," said Deputy Jeff Bagocius of the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department in Caro.

State Police statistics for 1985 show 15 fatal accidents, in which 17 persons perished. Nine of the 15 fatal accidents involved drivers who had been drinking.

Sheriff Department records show six of 11 fatal accidents investigated in 1985 involved alcohol.

"Statistics don't tell the entire story about drunk drivers," said Deputy Bagocius. "But we do know that the more serious the accident, the more likely drinking alcohol was involved."

In 1984, a year after new state legislation toughened drunk driving laws and penalties, 596 drivers were cited for driving under the influence of liquor (DUIL), while 440 were cited in 1985.

In Cass City, according to State Police statistics, 24 drivers were charged with DUIL in 1984 and 26 were cited in 1985.

State Police Sgt. Lee Wilber, of district headquarters in Saginaw, noted that Tuscola County is one of several in Michigan that received special funding to create an alcohol countermeasure program.

The program is a joint effort between State Police and the sheriff's department aimed at keeping drunk drivers off the roads. Extra money is granted to increase road patrols during peak traffic periods.

Most drunk driving arrests come on weekends, and many occur after midnight when taverns are near closing, police said.

Today, under the new tough drunk driving laws, a tipping driver faces an eight-hour stint in jail, fines that average $450 for first offense, and sentences that could send offenders to special drug and alcohol abuse centers to undergo rehabilitation training.

Fines and sentences skyrocket for repeat offenders at the discretion of judges who are bowing to public pressure to bear down on drunk drivers.

Police today are equipped with Preliminary Breathalyzer Test instruments which can tell on a digital scale whether a driver has a blood-alcohol rate over the legal .10.

"The breathalyzer test is only part of the field sobriety testing methods employed by us," said Sgt. Wilber.

"A driver believed to have been drinking is commanded to walk heel-and-toe nine paces forward, turn to the right, and then take nine steps back. It's a pretty easy test for someone who is sober...very tough for someone who has had too much to drink," said Wilber.

Other typical sobriety tests include having the driver recite the alphabet backwards, and to hold arms outstretched and touch the two index fingers in a slow forward movement.

During 1985, 99 motorists were charged with DUIL by sheriff's deputies, 56 others cited for possessing open alcoholic beverage cans while operating a vehicle.

Fifty-three of 739 property damage accidents investigated by sheriff's officers involved alcohol; 75 Please turn to page 14.

A POTENTIAL KILLER? This grain silo, typical of most grain bins on area farms, is empty and not in use anymore. But similar silos have been sites for tragic deaths in the area in recent months.

"They shouldn't happen..."

Tragic bin deaths shock safety aides

Two tragic grain bin deaths in the Cass City area within the last three months have triggered warning signals from safety experts and farm body officials.

A Marlette teenager died last week when he lost his grip on a safety rope atop a two-story tall grain bin. He was sucked into the bin and became wedged in a grain chute where he suffocated.

Only last March, a three-year-old Kingston toddler fell headlong into a grain bin and died before help arrived.

Several years ago, a Cass City farm boy helping unload a large grain bin on his father's farm died in a similar tragic mishap.

"Such accidents are not uncommon throughout Michigan where about a half a dozen grain bin deaths occur yearly," said Robert Neumann, agricultural information coordinator at Michigan State University in Lansing. "What's so tragic about them is there's no reason for them to happen," he said.

"We're constantly warning farmers not to go into a grain bin when its working, either being emptied or filled. And if it's necessary to go into a bin, make sure all machinery, especially the auger, is shut off."

"No one should go into a grain bin alone. And anyone going into a bin should fasten a safety rope around the belline," Neumann said.

Neumann noted there are a couple of ways a grain bin mishap victim might be able to save himself.

If caught atop a grain pile, you should lie on your back and do a sort of back crawl, like you were swimming. Try to move toward the side wall of the bin and then try to get out.

Grain bins on area farms are mostly idle this time of the year, but some farmers are emptying storage grain to sell or to move to a new location. Activity reaches a peak in late July when the wheat harvest gets underway and continues through the fall months when corn is harvested and put in storage.

Neumann also warns that no one should be allowed to ride on a vehicle or wagon being towed.

"I've often seen people, kids mostly, sit on the edge of grain wagons and watch as the vehicles dump grain into gravity unloading boxes. It's very dangerous."

Dennis Stein, Tuscola County agricultural agent, warns that anytime it becomes necessary to work inside grain bins, two people should be involved and both should wear safety ropes.

"One of the most dangerous times to enter a grain bin is when it is partially filled or in the process of being emptied," he said. "There's a good chance a pocket might have formed in the loose grain."

"And, you should never go into a grain bin when it's working."

Neumann added another warning:

"This time of the year, many farmers are spraying anhydrous ammonia on their corn plants and they should be very safety-minded when working with the unstable gas." "The pressurized gas is very cold, about 143 degrees below zero. At the 60-degree normal temperature this time of the year, the gas actually is 80 degrees below freezing." "Unwary farmers could suffer severe freeze-fried injuries. Anyone spraying anhydrous ammonia should wear safety glasses to protect the eyes and rubber gloves."

"Also, there should be adequate amounts of fresh water on the tank cars. If an accident occurs, use lots of fresh water to cleanse the burn area."

Donald Root, plant superintendent at Berger and Co., said, "We don't allow anyone in our elevators when they're being filled or emptied."

"If the grain becomes clogged or bridged up in the bin, we have a method in which we poke the grain from a bottom position that is protected."

"We don't allow anyone to stay in vehicles while they are in the process of being loaded or unloaded," he said.

David McClain, manager of Elkton Co-op Farm Produce Co., said "We never allow a man to go into the bin alone, and when we have to go into a bin, we use safety ropes."

He said grain is moving through his firm's elevators most everyday and "we're very safety-conscious."

One of the dangers most all grain elevators face is grain dust explosions.

"We've got a good fire safety system," he said. "It includes a built-in fire alarm and sprinkling system."

"We're very careful with welding around the elevators and we make sure that water and sand are available around the welding area in case of a fire."

Fledgling Cass City "politician" pins hopes on radical's shirttail

"For years I've heard my co-workers and friends gripe about the government and politicians in general, so I just decided to take a shot at it."

Larry A. Samuelson, 48, of 4551 East Shabbona Road, father of three children, one of whom is deceased, a journeyman millwright and welder and member of Millwright Local 1102, AFL-CIO, is a candidate on the Democratic ticket for the 8th District Congressional seat in the Aug. 5 primary election.

"A lot of my co-workers are surprised. They probably think I'm crazy. But, darn it, I'm going to give it my best shot," he said in an interview with The Chronicle Monday, June 16.

"What gets me about people who gripe about the way things are going is that when you ask them whether they voted in the last election, they say no. The way I figure it, they deserve much of what they're getting."

Samuelson admits he's never been active in politics before. Then, last September, he picked up a newspaper in an Ypsilanti K-Mart center published by Lyndon LaRouche called "New Solidarity" and found "It made sense to me."

"He, LaRouche, prints a positive outlook on worldwide issues, and he doesn't pull any punches," said Samuelson, who also admitted he takes some of the LaRouche philosophy with a grain of salt.

"He claims the Queen of England is a pawn of dope interests because she is a stockholder in the Bank of England. The bank handles money from dope dealers, so, ipso facto, it and the queen are guilty by association."

"He's (LaRouche) also after banks in this country for the same reason. Dope is the biggest money maker in the U.S. They (dope peddlers) don't count their money, they weigh it."

"He's after AIDS too," said Samuelson. "LaRouche believes AIDS is one of our biggest menaces and he thinks we should mobilize, like we did against small pox and measles, to stamp it out."

Samuelson said when he returned home from Ypsilanti and after reading the LaRouche paper, he decided to send in $45 and get a subscription.

It was last January when Samuelson's political ambition first stirred.

"I was out of work. January is a slow period in construction. And two men came to the house and introduced themselves as belonging to the LaRouche organization."

"One name I recall was Pat Noble, the other a Jerry something, I can't remember his last name, asked me if I would run for election. I thought they were crazy."

"They must have just picked my name out from their newspaper mailing list. And here they were asking if I'd run for Congress."

"I'd been thinking for some time that politicians just didn't seem to be responding to the common people."

"Farmers weren't getting a decent price for their crops. People in the labor force were having a hard time. Industry was leaving the U.S. Everything seemed to be going downhill. And no one seemed to be doing anything about it."

Samuelson's campaign for the Congressional seat didn't get started until June when he and two LaRouche men started handing out petitions at a K-Mart center in Saginaw to get him on the primary ballot.

"We needed 1,000 signatures and got more than 2,300 in one weekend," Samuelson said.

"A lot of people asked questions. Many said it was good that a new face would be on the ballot."

Samuelson said the ease in which he and his two LaRouche helpers garnered the necessary signatures on the election nominating petitions indicates "there are a lot of people out there who are as disgruntled as I am. And they might vote for me."

Since the weekend petition effort, Samuelson and his fledgling Congressional campaign have been pretty much at a standstill. Although, "I was interviewed the other day by Susan Please turn to page 14.

July 4th festival plans shape up for a big bang

Plans for the 4th of July celebration in Cass City are moving along.

The Queen's Pageant will be held Wednesday, July 2, at 8 p.m. in the Cass City High School cafeteria.

Thursday, July 3, the Irish Gaels will be back in town at the Charmont from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Anyone attending their previous fun-filled show will make this a must.

Friday, July 4, start the day off at 7 a.m. with breakfast at the Rotary tent in the park. Then be sure to attend the bed races, which get underway at 10 a.m. on Main St. before the parade, which begins at 11 a.m.

After the parade, a wide variety of activities will be held in the park. Have a look at the arts and crafts displays, the antique autos, play bingo with the Caro Moose Lodge and then head over to the chicken barbecue put on by the Lions Club.

At 1 p.m. is the first annual Thru-Up Bowl free throw contest and at 1:30, the Thumb of Michigan Dog Fanciers will put on a pet show.

There will be a Lumberman's Exhibit and kids games at 2 p.m. and later in the afternoon a softball tournament and All-Star Little League game will be held.

That's not all. Don't miss the AAUW paint-in, Jaycee R.V. Pull, mud volleyball, tot run and adult and teen games.

At 6 p.m. the Community Choir will sing and the Sally Doerr Dancers will perform and there will also be square dancing in the old pavilion.

The day will draw to an end with a teen dance in the green municipal building from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. The fireworks will begin at dusk.

Saturday, arts and crafts will be displayed along Main St. from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The softball tournaments will take place Saturday and Sunday.

To get into the spirit of things, Fourth of July T-shirts will be available at $6 for adults and $5 for children.

"I'M JUST GONNA give it my best shot," says Larry Samuelson, who's running for Congress.

DUIL story in error

David Dorland of 604 West Deckerville Road was the owner of a parked car that was hit by a driver of another Saturday, June 14, on Main Street, near Sherman Street.

The Chronicle, in a page 1 story in its June 18 edition, incorrectly reported that Dorland was the driver of the moving vehicle, who was cited by police for driving under the influence of liquor.

The Chronicle sincerely regrets the error.

Regular readers of this trivia know that the only speech making banquets attended are those made necessary in the line of duty. That's the reason an invitation from the Sweet Adelines to attend its charter night party won't be accepted.

If the invitation were only to hear the singing, every effort would be made to get out and enjoy it. But the suspicion is that to hear the singing, it would be necessary to sit through a round of speeches. That's too high a price to pay.

Coming your way this week are a couple of short columns with opinions on a topic of the day. Called "The City Slicker" and "Main Street Charlie". They will appear from time to time as inspiration strikes. Also new is a column by Melva Guinther that will appear weekly. Enjoy!

Weaver selected to attend weeklong Tech workshops

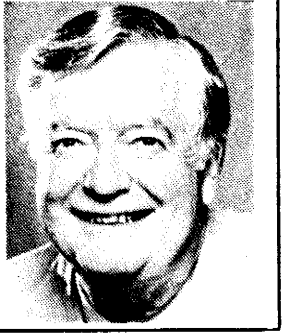

Jean Weaver was one of approximately 70 high school women selected to participate in one of the 3 week-long sessions held annually at Michigan Tech. The workshops provide exposure to 8 fields of engineering, applied technology, and bioengineering-forestry through laboratory projects and lectures by practicing women engineers. Participants are chosen on a competitive basis and must have a strong background in mathematics and science. Weaver attends Cranbrook Kingswood in Bloomfield Hills, where she is a member of the jazz and symphony bands, and a member of the basketball, volleyball, and softball teams.

"If It Fitz..."

Ford's favorite tune

By Jim Fitzgerald

According to "The Fords: An American Epic" as excerpted in the Free Press Sunday, the favorite song of Henry Ford II is "When The Saints Go Marching In."

That's not what I read in 1972. At that time, Ford's favorite song was reputedly "Hey Bop a Re Bop."

Before delving further into the socially significant question of Henry Ford's musical taste, I should admit I never read the best-selling books written about such famous people as Ford and Rock Hudson. I just read the excerpts published in People magazine or newspapers.

Actually, I should admit I never read People. I read what newspapers excerpt from what People excerpts from the book. I find that this double distillation gives me sufficient important information to give an intelligent answer when my grandchildren, ever thirsty for knowledge, ask how many times Henry Ford and his children have been divorced.

Furthermore, when a newspaper runs a five-part series of excerpts from one book, beginning on Sunday, I read only the Sunday chapter. As a serious journalist, I realize all the important, socially relevant stuff is published on Sunday, and by Monday there'll be boring flashbacks about the childhood of Dolly Parton's grandfather.

For me, these book excerpts serve the same function performed by my friend Ralph when we were college students. While reading best-sellers, Ralph would unconsciously mark the most intellectual parts with sweaty thumb stains. To further my education fastest, I rifled through Ralph's books and read only the sweat-stained pages.

It is from this youthful experience that I derived my strongest ambition for the future — to live my life entirely in excerpts. But, faced with the constraints of having to pay bills, I soon learned one of life's great truths — for most of us, excerpts are weekends. The other five days are all Mondays at Dolly Parton's grandfather's childhood home.

But back to music. In Sunday's excerpt, Henry Ford's behavior at his daughter Anne's coming-out party was described: "He got drunker and wound up conducting the band in his favorite tune, 'When The Saints Go Marching In.'"

However, only a few years later, according to the newspapers, U.S. Ambassador Walter Annenberg gave a party in the U.S. Embassy in London at which Ford "sang his favorite song, 'Hey Bop a Re Bop.'" The Meyer Davis band was flown in from New York to play for dancing — and Ford's singing.

Fourteen years later, I still have the column I wrote about that London party. I was intrigued by the fact that Annenberg feared flak from the British Musicians Union. Instead of hiring the Davis band as musicians, thus taking bread out of 76 English trombones, the ambassador made the band "temporary members of the ambassador's household."

They went on the payroll as butlers, bartenders, footmen and so on. So I wrote: "What about Henry Ford? Would a British auto manufacturer object to Ford being imported to sing? Maybe Ford also joined the ambassador's household for that one night ('Honest, Duchess, I'm your upstairs maid.')"

That was in 1972, remember, so I also questioned the wisdom of buying the product of a company headed by an executive whose favorite song was such a moldy oldie: "What would you do if you went into the local Ford dealership and found the owner singing 'Hey Bop a Re Bop'? I'd order a 1948 V-8 with running boards."

I'm running those excerpts from that old column just so you'll realize I was ahead of my time. Long before the current crop of Ford books, I was writing really important stuff about Henry Ford II.

Unfortunately, Ford is famous for not complaining or explaining. The world will probably never know whether "Hey Bop a Re Bop" or "When The Saints Go Marching In" is his favorite song. I'll have to admit to my grandchildren that there is some socially significant information that I can't add to their education.

The Haire Net

The odds are great that it rained every day last week end. By the time this is read, of course, the week-end weather will be ancient history. But this is written on a Thursday. One of the days, which everyone constantly reminds us, on which there is nothing to do because the paper is out.

Depending on viewpoint, this could be a pessimistic or a realistic outlook. It's certainly not optimistic. It's hard to be positive about anything when its dark, dank and gloomy outside. It's hard to be positive when a day reserved for fun and frolicking is cancelled by Mother Nature. Next Tuesday (press day) the sun will be shining in all its glory.

The reason I know it rained last week end is that a family trek had been planned to the cabin up north. On 2 other occasions this spring when business (no kidding, it WAS business) took me north and the plan was to mix a little business with a lot of pleasure, it rained, rained, rained. It was a classic case of you should have been here yesterday. Both times the natives were telling me just how dry it was and how much the rain was appreciated.

If the sun were shining, chances are negative thoughts like this wouldn't come breaking out. Maybe a brighter day would have been a reminder of the fine weather that Cass City has always enjoyed for its Fourth of July Festival. Oh, it's sprinkled a little off and on a couple of the years, but it never has been a drenching that ruined the day. Never a day like today when it started raining early and just kept on coming down.

Intellectually I know that it just might rain and our 7 years of good weather will end. Why is it that I just don't think it will rain on Friday, July 4? It's probably the "it can't happen to me" syndrome that sustains soldiers in areas of combat.

It's easy to feel that it might rain and mar a week end, because at worst it's only a minor inconvenience. With the Festival, it's a different story. There is so much time and effort, not to mention money, spent on the celebration that for one reason or another I find it hard to think that everything won't come up roses when the parade comes wending its way down Main Street.

If the sun would only start to shine and the weather would climb into a reasonable for June reading of 80 degrees or so, it might be reasonable to feel that the sun will shine this week end instead of being sure that it won't.

Hospice program eases pain

"Treating a dying patient is a heart-wrenching job."
 "Sometimes, with terminally ill cancer patients, the pain is terrible."
 "I remember one patient begged: 'Just let me die!' I had to tie her hands down so she wouldn't tear off her oxygen mask."
 "You feel so helpless. There are rules, regulations, systems, procedures in a hospital."
 "Hospitals are where the ill go to be treated, cured."
 "Pain is part of the curing process. We can ease pain, but can't take it away entirely... even for a dying patient. It seems so cruel."
 Delores Garety, 7405 Bay City-Forestville Road, a licensed practical nurse, expressed her thoughts in explaining why she readily volunteered for Hospice training when it was offered at Caro Community Hospital recently.

living."
 "This includes maintaining friends and relatives; monitoring pain medicine; providing spiritual understanding; relieving financial and household stresses whenever possible."
 That's what is printed in a brochure circulated by Saginaw St. Mary's Hospital Hospice Care Program. St. Mary's joined Caro Community Hospital to operate a so-called "satellite" program for Tuscola County.
 Delores Garety, along with many more interested persons in Tuscola County communities, enrolled in an extensive Hospice training program which ended in mid-March.
 The Hospice program, itself, was offered to area terminally ill patients in April. Four patients, none from Cass City, enrolled.
 "Before I took the Hospice training, I didn't know that there was a way for a patient to die pain-free," said Mrs. Garety.
 "I learned that there are other types of pain besides physical pain: spiritual pain, psychological pain and even social pain—dealing with the stigma of being a cancer patient."
 Mrs. Garety had another reason for volunteering in the Hospice program.
 "My dad, Rudolph Losik, died when he was 38 of cancer. I remember how helpless we all felt, my six brothers and sisters (and I)."

 Almost every one of the volunteers who took the Hospice training course earlier this year at Caro seemed to have some personal involvement with a dying cancer patient, she said.
 Joanne Hulburt, 7409 Daus Road, is one of them. She explained:
 "I want to give something back. I sense a need for such a program which allows a patient to die at home with his family, instead of being confined in a hospital until death comes," she said.
 "My mother died five years ago of cancer. In the three months she underwent treatment, she was allowed to come home for short periods only four times. We weren't aware of the Hospice program then."

 Neither Delores Garety nor Joanne Hulburt have been called in as volunteers to aid a Hospice patient in the Cass City area yet, but both believe the program will become an important part of the community once people here become fully aware of it.
 Mrs. Hulburt, who is a nurse's aide at Hills and Dales Hospital, said she is looking forward to a new Hospice training program dealing with bereavement, and the needs of family and friends after death of a loved one.
 There are four conditions that must be met for a patient to join the Hospice program:
 * The patient is eligible for Medicare (Part A) hospital insurance;

 * The patient's doctor and Hospice medical director certify that the patient has a terminal illness;
 * The patient signs a statement choosing Hospice care instead of standard Medicare benefits for the terminal illness;
 * The patient receives care from a Medicare-certified Hospice program.
 If you might be interested in more information on Hospice, write or phone Rejeana Heinrich, community relations department, Saginaw St. Mary's Hospital, (517) 776-8303.

The quotes above are not hers, word for word. But they do reflect her sincerity and support of Hospice, a plan to treat and care for terminally ill patients and their families.
 The goal of Hospice:
 "To maintain the patient's quality of life, knowing life is most fully enjoyed when a person is free of pain."
 "Hospice hopes to provide both the physical and emotional comforts of daily

Pain control is the single most important aspect of Hospice, said Dr. Charles O'Shaughnessy, of Hospice of Southeastern Michigan.
 Pain, when associated with the disease of cancer, does not respond to the conventional medications used in the hospital for post-operative discomfort, he added in a lecture on pain control delivered recently to the Marlette Community Hospice nursing staff.
 "To not adequately treat pain in the terminally ill patient is inhumane," said Helen Atkins, RN, Hospice director.

 The patients and families have a limited time to be together and it is important that pain not get in the way of resolving past problems, sharing hope for the future and saying "I love you!"
 No one wants to die without knowing they have been important and will be missed. This is very difficult to hear and say when pain gets in the way, it was brought out at the lecture.

The City Slicker

A foreign exchange student who first came to Cass City remarked recently that it was the smallness of the community, contrasted to the big city that is his home in Sweden, that impressed him the most.
 As a city slicker myself, the word "small" rankled.
 It's not a big rankle... just a small one.
 Now we, who trod the local streets here, know, and even boast, that there's nothing at all small about Cass City.
 It may be little, compared to bigger. But, it definitely isn't small, compared to great.
 It's these small little connotations that some words

CC man uninjured in single car mishap

A Cass City man was uninjured when the car he was driving left the road, according to a Tuscola County Sheriff's report.
 Richard Green, 28, 3920 Little Rd., was traveling north on Washburn Rd. Sunday when he ran off the east side of the road and into a small drain ditch. Passenger Cathleen Green, 24, was slightly injured and sought her own treatment and passenger William Louks of Caro was uninjured in the mishap.
 A car driven by Lisa Sleight, 17, of Akron was eastbound on Akron Rd. Thursday, when she stopped at a sign at M-81, then proceeded to pull out, failing to see a northeast bound car on M-81 driven by Scott Hutchinson, 19, 4630 Spencer Rd. Hutchinson swerved to avoid Sleight and lost control on the wet road, rolling over into a ditch on the north side of M-81, according to the sheriff's report. Hutchinson and his passengers, Norris Lounsbury of Cass City and Lynnea Rabideau of Bad Axe, were uninjured.
 A car driven by Arthur J. Pratt, 50, of Deford was northbound on Kingston Road when he was unable to avoid hitting a deer.
 The State Police at the Caro Post report a breaking and entering at the Colwood Bar sometime between 2 a.m. and 10 a.m. Tuesday, June 17.
 It appears entry was gained through a window. A large amount of cash was taken as well as other small items. The incident is under investigation.
 Keith R. Frappart, 26, of Gageton was northbound on McEldowny Rd. near Bay City-Forestville Rd. Wednesday morning when a deer ran into the path of his car.
 Willard Dodson, 70, 6742 Main St., was eastbound on M-81 near Koepfgen Rd. Monday night, June 16, when a deer ran into the side of his car.

Handbags are essential
 By Melva Guinther

Women who don't carry handbags are an enigma. The free spirit who sticks a comb in her jeans pocket and ventures forth to face the world, unencumbered by the prospect of indigestion, an irresistible bargain or a broken strap, is truly awesome.
 Occasionally I become bold enough to leave home without it, but it never feels right. Basically, I'm a bag lady. Checking the contents of my current carryall, it was reassuring to note that I'm prepared should anything become lodged in my eyes or teeth, get lost in the dark, or need clipping.
 Among the staples are: lip gloss, hair pick, cotton balls, toothpicks, eye drops, Kleenex, house, car and office keys, wallet, checkbook, dusting powder, Roloids, flashlight, hand lotion, nail clippers, makeup, watch, cough drops, pieces of hard candy, gum, coupon clipper, dental floss, pen, pad of paper and towelettes. That's in the small one, and doesn't include the shopping list and coupons.
 In the larger bag, for more serious or distant shopping, the necessities also include a handkerchief, breath spray, calculator, pill box, rubber bands, safety pins and a pack of trivia cards.
 Husbands, who carry those skinny little wallets that hold nothing but a $10 bill and a driver's license in their back pockets, and women who don't carry purses, often cast aspersions at those of us who do. But have you ever noticed how often the husband turns to the wife and says, "Will you stick this—checkbook, letter, tool, glasses—in your purse?"
 On a shopping trip recently with a mixed group of carriers and non-carriers, those of us with ample handbags bore the brunt of jokes and derisive en route. During the course of the day, however, we dispensed nail files, safety pins, hand lotion and aspirin. And towards the end of the day, when the toilet paper in the restroom was gone, guess who was in the next stall, without a Kleenex.

Larry Samuelson is for real... really.
 He took his construction cap out of his pocket and tossed it into the political ring. And no one has tossed it back at him... yet.
 Now a lot of us in our knock-about, work-a-day world, can sit back in our vain self-righteous, cynical poses and envy his quixotic shot at political stardom.
 Look out, you entrenched political bastions. Raise the drawbridge. Man the pulpits. Defend your rear. For the troops (make that troop) are coming.
 Samuelson, clinging precariously atop his revered war horse called Lyndon LaRouche, has unshielded his lance, unfurled his colors, raised his life, and sounded the charge.
 His goal will be to unseat a wily opponent, J. Bob Traxler, battle-scarred veteran of hardly noticeable political confrontations in past elections.
 The titanic struggle of a political gnat and an entrenched elephant is expected to draw as many sparks as a befuddled firefly battling the night's darkness, a ferocious moth attacking a dim light bulb.
 It'll draw a sparse crowd of mildly interested spectators to the Aug. 5 primary poll to crown the winner, bury the loser.

Summer reading program proves to be big success

Over 150 children have entered the "Come to the Fair" summer reading program at Rawson Memorial Library. The program has resulted in a marked increase in reading. An average of 340 items have been checked out daily, an increase of 88 per day over a similar period last year. Library authorities say most of the increase has been in books checked out by children.

In the program, children keep track of books read, informing the librarian when 10 have been read. The reading card that records the books read will be used for admission to the "Library Fair" July 29, when 10 books are read, a ticket for an event at the fair is issued. Children continuing to read receive a bonus of 5 tickets.

In another activity at the library, authorities reported that 11 tags from the 150 balloons launched June 9 have been returned. Tags were returned from Sebewaing, Deckerville, Lexington and Ontario. One was fished out of Lake Huron by a man from Mt. Morris.

Nicolette Zawilinski, 5, received a call from a girl in London, Ont., who found her balloon and wants to be a pen pal.

A map showing where balloons were recovered is on display at the library.

Gifted children learn clown artistry and dress

There was some real-life clowning around last week, June 17-20, in a classroom at Highland Pines school, Caro, showing that learning can be fun and funny.

Fifteen specially selected and gifted Campbell Elementary School children, grades 2-4, learned how to make up their faces to resemble professional circus clowns at the four-day "Project Think" sessions aimed at "developing divergent and creative thinking skills."

Five Cass City teachers, led by project "teacher leader" Marilyn Peters, took part in the Michigan Department of Education funded project which seeks to utilize higher level thinking in the teaching of language arts.

Last step in the makeup session was for each of the students to think up a clown name, which then was written on their individual bow ties.

When the entire class was completed with the makeup, they did "brain-teasers" using glasses of water, rope tricks and solved logic problems.

Later on, the children became involved in creative drama where they acted out in mime a clown ordering lunch at McDonalds, a clown playing golf with a rubber golf club, a clown riding a bike with flat tires, a clown painting a house with a toothbrush.

Then students were divided into separate groups and made up their own mimes and presented them.

Still using the clown theme, the students, in a visual imagery activity, sat back-to-back. One student had a clown face and the other described it to the other students who had to draw it by listening to the description.

The 15 local students were selected by the following criteria, said Peters:

Second grade: Honor roll and Stanford Achievement Test scores;

Third grade: Honor roll, Stanford Achievement Test scores and Mental Maturity Test;

Fourth grade: Honor roll, Stanford Achievement Test scores, Mental Maturity Test, 100 percent in math and reading on Michigan Assessment Test.

Peters explained that "although we had more children with high scores, we were able to send only the top 15 students" to the Highland Pines school sessions.

Peters took exception to

Farm Bureau urges farmers to vote no on upcoming wheat poll

Area wheat farmers will be receiving a wheat poll conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture between June 25 and July 7. It will ask if they favor mandatory production and marketing controls in order to raise the price they receive for their product.

According to Tuscola Farm Bureau president, Barry Hedley, the higher prices sound good but the consequences of a positive vote could be detrimental to growers.

"Higher prices might sound good, but the bottom line is that the net income of wheat farmers would be less because mandatory controls would force them to cut back their production as much as 50 percent. The higher price would then completely put the United States out of the export business," Hedley said at a meeting Monday, June 16.

Relationships well beyond wheat. "Once controls move from wheat to feed grains, the resulting sharply higher feed costs would be devastating to red meat producers," he added.

Hedley said that mandatory production controls would have an adverse impact on rural communities. Reductions in seed, fertilizer, fuel, pesticide and equipment purchases would seriously hurt local private and cooperative farm supply businesses.

"When growers are asked if they favor mandatory limits on wheat production that will result in prices not lower than 125 percent of the cost of production, excluding land and residual returns to management, they may be tempted to vote yes," he said. "But there is nothing on the ballot that tells them how much land they must take out of wheat production to get those higher prices, or how they would be allowed to use those idled acres."

Hedley said that the Tuscola County Farm Bureau is involved in a nationwide campaign to urge wheat growers to vote NO in the poll.

Hedley stressed the fact that only those polls which are sent back are counted. Not sending one will not count as a no vote. To be counted, the poll must be filled out completely and sent back by July 7.

Peters, and nine other project "teacher leaders" from other area schools, have been meeting since March to plan teacher in-services and the summer session with the children that has just been completed at Caro.

The session opened with Shirley Tuckey appearing already dressed and made up like a clown.

To the delight of the young students, Tuckey then helped direct, and explain, various makeup techniques that were being applied to fellow Cass City teachers, Linda Gray, Peters, Fran Lovejoy and Sherry Dillon.

After the teachers' makeup was explained, step-by-step, the youngsters made up their own faces. Each selected a clown's hat to wear and was given a unique bow tie with button attached that the teachers had made up previously.

Gagetown Area News

Gen Kehoe
Phone 665-2221

Sister Helen (Happy) Shondell, lately of Berkeley, Cal., was the overnight guest Monday of Sister Nancy Ayotte. Sister Happy is spending time at the IHM Mother House in Monroe and will visit her parents in Chicago, Ill. before assuming her new duties at Precious Blood Parish in Owensboro, Ky. Monday evening the Sisters attended a class on spirituality at St. Mary's Ministries Institute in Saginaw. Segundo Galileo of Chile conducted the class. Mrs. W. C. (Irene) Hunter suffered a light stroke last Saturday evening at her home and was taken by ambulance to Hills and Dales Hospital, Cass City. After a few days treatment, she is recuperating at home, where her sister, Mrs. Al (Theresa) Johnson of Bad Axe, was an overnight guest.

Mrs. Carl Sieland of Caro, Velma Helwig and Harry and Gen Kehoe were callers last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rocheleau in Caro. Mr. Rocheleau returned home recently, after surgery at St. Mary's, Saginaw. His granddaughter, Denise Rocheleau, was a caller Monday evening. While on her daily walk early last week, Mrs. Keith (Marie) Goslin suffered a broken foot and will be in a cast for a month. Sue Penrod and Mary McKellar paid a recent visit to Mrs. Maud Sarosky at the home of John and Ruth Zmierski, Cass City. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Kain attended open house last Saturday in honor of their grandson, Paul Mika, at the home of his parents, Kathy and Rick Mika, on Green Rd., Cass City. Paul is a graduate of Cass City High School and he plans to enter the service in July. Mr. and Mrs. Elger Generous also attended the open house.

Generous marked their 48th wedding anniversary Wednesday, June 18. Mrs. Generous was the former Margaret Johnston. The couple has three sons and six grandchildren. Area residents in the hospital recently were Harry Comment, Madeline Sontag, Harlan (Stub) Rabideau and Irene Hunter. All were patients at Hills and Dales Hospital, Cass City.

Annual festival slated for St. Mary Church

Plans are being formulated for the annual summer festival of St. Mary Catholic Church of Parisville to be held in August on the parish grounds.

James F. Maurer of Ruth is general chairman. Members of the festival committee are: Kenneth Dekoski of Ruth, James Donnellon of Minden City, Mrs. Marie Pionk of Ruth, Joseph McCoy Jr. of Harbor Beach, Mrs. Gloria Smalley and Mark Tenbusch, both of Ubyly.

The festival will kick off on a Saturday evening with the crowning of the queen, who will reign throughout the festivities. A free dance will be held with music by the Styl-Stix of Ubyly.

The Sunday celebration will begin with a Polka Mass to be celebrated by Rev. Fr. Leonard Wilkuski, pastor of St. Mary Catholic Church. The family style chicken and ham dinner will begin at noon in the school social rooms. Games and amusements along with refreshment and lunch tents will be available for entertainment for all ages. Music for dancing will be furnished by two bands: Floyd Grocholiski and His Little Naturals of Beaver, Mich., and Terry Dekoski and the Golden Stars Band of Ruth.

St. Mary of Parisville parish is the oldest Roman Catholic Church in the United States with a long rich heritage and tradition that is still maintained. The Polish colors of red and white are worn in costume and dress by the ladies of the parish. Hundreds of people travel from all over Michigan to attend the annual festival.

Owen-Gage senior citizens plan picnic

Owen-Gage Senior Citizens held their monthly meeting at St. Agatha's parish hall with 56 members present. Leila Martines and Evelyn Williams were guests.

President Mabel Ondrajka opened the meeting. Vernita Jaster read a humorous poem.

After discussion, it was voted to hold the July picnic at St. Agatha's hall instead of the park.

Happy birthday was sung by Clara Adams, William Ashmore, Nettie Doan, Louis Ouvry and Florence Schell. Also expressed were congratulations to Mike and Stella Pisarek, celebrating 55 years, and Donovan and Doris Schell, Lloyd and Wilma Finkbeiner on their wedding anniversaries.

President Ondrajka read a letter concerning free gifts members will receive in November.

Door prizes went to Jim Winchester and Venita Kling.

Forty-five attended the potluck dinner June 19 with Rev. and Mrs. Zina Bennett of Owendale as guests. Helen Kubiak was welcomed as a new member.

A card was signed for Maud Sarosky and sympathy card for Mr. and Mrs. William Ashmore.

Maryann Vandemark, Caro, of the Human Development Commission, gave a short talk.

Euchre winners were men's high, Louis Ouvry, and low Mike Pisarek; women's high Iva Peterson, low Mary Kuehne. Traveling prize went to Mike Pisarek and door prizes to Les Munro and Mabel Ondrajka.

The committee for July includes Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schell, Onaltee Heltsley, Nettie Doan, Jennie Deneen, Myrtle Evans. The meeting is July 3.

DUAL CELEBRATION

While the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Goodell, Joane and Mary, and their families were here for Father's Day, two other occasions were celebrated with a party Saturday, the 30th wedding anniversary of the Goodells and the retirement of Mr. Goodell.

Jacqueline Stapleton and Bill Goodell were married June 9, 1956, at St. Agatha Catholic Church, Gagetown.

They have two daughters and two grandchildren. Bill retired from Agra-Sales after 29 years. Among the guests at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Louis (Mary Kastner) Pitts of Riverview, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kolb of Pontiac, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Burns and their granddaughter, Amanda, of Pontiac and Mr. and Mrs. Don Wolfgang of Medway, Mass.

Kendra Reehl and Sean Smith, Tuscola County 4-H King and Queen, took part in the parade last Sunday at the Bavarian Festival in Frankenmuth and Saturday, in the parade at the Sugar Festival in Sebewaing.

Weekend guests of Mrs. Sue Penrod were Pat and Dominic Buffa of Warren and Larry Mauk and Rose of Detroit. Saturday they attended the Sugar Festival in Sebewaing. Mary McKellar also attended.

Mrs. Gerry Carolan received word Friday of the sudden death in Caro of her nephew, Edward Romain, age 70. A memorial mass was celebrated at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Caro at 11:00 a.m. Saturday. Gerry Carolan, Gene and Marian Comment and, from Bay City, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Birch attended the mass.

They cost a little less... but they're more than worth it

For years we've been telling you that a John Deere costs a little more, but it's worth it.

Now there's a John Deere that costs a little less and is worth more than you might expect. We call it the "R" Series Riding Mower.

John Deere "R" Series riders are worth more because they offer you a package of features most of the competition can't match. And at a price, that you'll probably have to hear twice to believe.

All three models have a full-length welded steel frame and a 5-speed gear-driven transmission that lets you clutch and shift on the go.

The new high-performance 30-inch mower and optional 6 1/2-bushel rear bagger provide cutting and bagging second to none.

A tight 27-inch turning radius and sector-and-pinion steering get you in and out of tight places easily.

A cushioned seat and 2-position, rubber-mounted footrests soften the ride.

See us today for a John Deere 8- or 11-hp "R" Series rider. Because when it comes to quality... more really can cost less.

HEALTH TIPS Urge use of pertussis vaccine

Attention, new and expectant mothers and fathers: Make sure your new bundle of joy gets vaccinated against pertussis (whooping cough) shortly after birth. Otherwise, doctors warn, your baby may be at risk of death or irreversible lung damage from this common childhood ailment.

The use of pertussis vaccine has been the subject of controversy in recent years because of associated severe neurological consequences seen in a small number of children. Despite the possible side effects, a team of researchers is strongly urging continued use of the vaccine.

In a study presented at the recent Annual Meeting of the American Lung Association — the Christmas Seal People — and its medical section, the American Thoracic Society, Michelle Howenstine, M.D., of the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis, said that pertussis is a severe and sometimes fatal bacterial infection of the respiratory tract. It also may contribute to abnormal growth and development of the lungs in infants who survive.

"As with any drug or biological product, the risk of use of this vaccine must be weighed against the benefits," Dr. Howenstine said. "I certainly believe that, because of the possibility of death or permanent lung damage in youngsters who acquire pertussis, the use of the vaccine is justified."

Pertussis infection produces violent coughing spells (usually accompanied by the distinctive "whoop" sound) that leave the child gasping for breath, often followed by episodes of breathing cessation (apnea). The mortality rate is highest among infants under six-months of age. Death usually results from the apnea or from complicating pneumonia. Antibiotics, which are useful for treating pneumonia, have little effect on the disease process and cannot prevent damage to the lungs.

A vaccine for the prevention of pertussis that is 90 percent effective has been routinely administered to infants, along with protective agents against diphtheria and tetanus, for over 30 years — pertussis the "P" in the familiar "DPT" injection. However, many children born in recent years have not been vaccinated against this disease. Government figures show that the incidence of pertussis in the U.S., which has been declining steadily since 1950, has risen sharply since 1981.

For further information about lung disease, write the American Lung Association of Michigan at 403 Seymour Avenue, Lansing, Michigan 48933, or call toll free at 1-800-292-5979.

New books at the library

THE MOTH by Catherine Cookson (fiction). In the English county of Durham prior to World War I, marrying out of one's class is social suicide. But a remarkable man named Robert Bradley bucks the establishment. A carpenter by trade but self-educated and sensitive, Robert escapes conventional marriage, but in so doing falls prey to violence. A chance encounter with Millie, the strange daughter of the castle, brings him into the orbit of the crumbling Thormans. Millie, dubbed "The Moth" by the locals because of her flitting escapades, ruins her elder sister Agnes's chances at a suitable marriage. When Agnes, shouldering the crumbling family fortunes alone, finds in Robert a source not only of common sense but of love, the two of them defy convention.

THE BOARDWALK JUNGLE by Ovid Demaris (non-fiction). This is a sizzling expose about Atlantic City. Although casino gambling in that resort city is less than 10 years old, the annual take amounts to some $2 billion. And, of the 10 gaming palaces now in operation, most have ties to either organized crime or to figures whose backgrounds are unsavory, charges Demaris. He shows that big money overcomes all opposition; many casinos open with temporary licenses, spend millions on their buildings, hire hundreds of workers and then apply for permanent status; the state control commission is not likely to deny approval under such circumstances. And, while the high rollers arrive via free jets and the low rollers via day-trip buses, Atlantic City has become a boardwalk jungle; there has been no filtering down of casino prosperity to local residents.

THE GOOD MOTHER by Sue Miller (fiction). Anna Dunlap gets a divorce and settles into a new life. She meets another man and, as a result, the realm of the senses, with which she was relatively unfamiliar, is opened up to her. But the new sexuality she now so freely expresses reaps awful consequences — her young daughter is removed from her custody.

Criminal calls up in May TCS D report

The number of criminal calls tallied by the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department jumped 127 in the month of May, from 571 in April to 698, according to the monthly report.

Emergency calls were also up from an April total of 151 to a May total of 169.

The breakdown of criminal calls for May showed a rise in larceny, auto theft and assault calls.

Larceny calls went from 45 in April to 56 the following month. Auto theft calls went from 8 to 14, and the number of assault calls took a substantial jump in May, from 18 to 32.

Also up considerably were the number of disorderly/vagrancy calls, from 28 to 41, and disturbance calls, which totaled 4 in April, increased to 23 in May.

The number of burglary calls dropped slightly in May from 39 to 36. Vandalism calls also fell slightly from an April total of 68 to 61 calls in May, and fire calls fell 5, from 40 in April to 35 last month.

Field erosion a concern

The Conservation Reserve Program is a provision of the new farm program which is targeted to retire highly erodible farmland. The program participant will receive annual rental payments, based on accepted bids, for the 10-year contract, for retiring this erodible land from crop production.

The Soil Conservation Service is responsible for determining the highly erodible farmland eligibility.

Many fields in Tuscola County are eroding at an excessive rate; however, they are not eroding at high enough rates to qualify for the Conservation Reserve Program. Phil Dakin, district conservationist for Tuscola County, states there are many factors used to determine the erosion of a field and each field is treated as an individual case.

He says that the wind erosion and water erosion are considered but that concentrated water flow creating gullies is not considered in this soil loss calculation.

The factors used include field size, orientation of the field, slope, slope length, type of soil, cropping sequence during the 1981-85 crop years, tillage during the 1981-85 crop years, and the presence of brush or tree barriers adjacent to the fields.

Approximately 4,000 acres of cropland in Tuscola County may qualify for this program. Landowners voluntarily submit bids to retire their erodible land for the 10-year period. Contact the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service or the Soil Conservation Service at 852 S. Hooper St., Caro for eligibility for farmland in Tuscola County.

Excedrin deaths are frightening

There have recently been 2 deaths attributed to poisoning thought to be linked to cyanide found in Excedrin capsules. For most, this brings back memories of the Tylenol incident and the precautions people took in buying those capsules.

Will you stop buying the Excedrin capsules?

"Probably," said Lee LaFave. "Who in their right mind wouldn't?" She said that she always checks for the seal now because it's dangerous not to.

"The pharmaceutical companies are taking such precautions to insure the safety of the product they put on the market you have to wonder how this is happening," she remarked.

She said that the reimbursements the company is making do little good if someone has died. "No amount of money can bring someone back," she said. "Who does she think is doing it? 'You have to wonder if it's someone inside,' she said. 'It's kind of scary,' she added.

LaFave is a realtor at Osentoski Realty. She lives in Gagetown with her son and has a daughter who resides in Bay City.

Parrot talk

Don't be too impressed the next time your friend's parrot says "hello" when you walk in. Ranger Rick magazine says that a parrot can be taught to speak when someone enters a room, but the bird doesn't understand it has just uttered a greeting. But parrot owners take heart, your bird might still have a future in politics.

Why not keep your cooling system in shape too?

People can get sluggish, listless and out of shape all too easily. Your air conditioning system can get run-down too. If it isn't what is used to be, it's costing you in comfort, operating efficiency and higher cooling bills. But unlike your body, your air conditioner can be replaced with something better... a new, energy saving Lennox central air conditioning system. It will tone up your comfort, trim your cooling bills and strengthen the value of your home.

A LITTLE CHRONICLE WANT AD GETS Big Results

Cool weather chills attendance at Cass City park pool in June

Unseasonably cool weather has trimmed attendance at the Helen S. and Albin J. Stevens Memorial Pool in the village park to an average of 93 a day since it opened for the summer season.

But better swimming days are coming and Suzy Scollon, pool director, expects capacity crowds of up to 225 a day soon.

She and her nine-person staff, which includes three who are still in high school and the rest either in college or college-bound, have been at their jobs since Memorial Day and will be busy through Labor Day, when the popular community pool closes.

The staff includes two assistant directors, Laura Richards and Diane Russell; three lifeguards, Phil LaPonsie, Scott Horner and Jennifer Davis, and four water safety instructors, Matt Jones, Shannon McIntosh, Tim Davis and Alicia Bliss.

Tim Davis and Phil LaPonsie are coaches for a 25-member Cass City swim team, which has three intramural competition meets scheduled for June 29, July 13 and July 27, starting at 1 p.m.

Members of the swim team are broken down in age groups, 11-12 and 13-14, said Davis.

The meets will have competition in diving, free style, backstroke, butterfly, breast stroke and relay events.

"We used to compete with swimming teams from other area communities, such as Caro and Marlette, but apparently they lost interest and we're not competing with them anymore," said Davis.

Davis, 17, of 6644 Pine Street, recent Cass City

High School graduate, will enter the University of Michigan in the fall and is considering going out for the Wolverine swim team. The Helen Stevens estate contributed some $205,000 to build the pool in Cass City Village Park. "It was Helen Stevens' decision to grant the money specifically for the swimming pool project as a memorial to herself and her husband, Albin," said Robert Keating of the Chemical Bank of Cass City, who handled the estate for the Stevens family.

Total cost of the pool, which opened in 1976, was $254,000. Major contributors besides the Stevens estate were Walbro Corp., Anrod Screen Cylinder Co., Zonta Club, Cass City Student Council, Lions Auxiliary and Gagetown Athletic Club.

Cost to operate the pool runs around $46,000 annually, said Lou LaPonsie, village superintendent. Half of the operating cost goes for salaries, the remainder for chemicals, maintenance, and other expenses. Pool entry fees generate about $8,000 annually. The junior olympic-size pool holds 200,000 gallons of water and was designed by Saginaw architects Tosack and Sobzjac.

Swimming lessons for 131 youngsters began June 16 and are held morning hours up to noon.

The pool opens at 9 a.m., but there is an early bird swim for adults from 7 to 8 a.m. Open swimming is allowed usually from 1 to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. daily.

Suzy Scollon, 20, of 4849 N. Seeger Street, a junior at Michigan State University majoring in art education, is in her fifth year as a member of the pool staff, her first as director.

BRRRRR! The staff at the Helen Stevens Memorial Pool is hoping for better swimming weather when on a busy day 225 swimmers will be splashing in the near-olympic size facility. From left are Suzy Scollon, pool director, Phil LaPonsie, lifeguard, Scott Horner, lifeguard, Matt Jones, water safety instructor, Shannon McIntosh, water safety instructor, Laura Richards, assistant director, Diane Russell, assistant director, Tim Davis, water safety instructor, Alicia Bliss, water safety instructor, Jennifer Davis, lifeguard.

Elmwood township tax issues expected to bring out voters

Elmwood Township voters will ballot Aug. 5 on four tax issues dealing with improving deteriorating township roadways and financing the township fire department.

A larger than average turnout at the polls is anticipated due to the fire department issues, said Township Clerk Joanne Sattelberg.

Voters will ballot on two separate proposals, each calling for addition of one-half mill in taxes.

One proposal is for renewal of one-half mill, which raises about $10,000 yearly, for five years to finance the fire department. The current one-half mill fire department millage expires this year.

The other proposal would raise an additional one-half mill, also for five years, for maintenance and improvement of the fire department and its equipment.

"Our liability insurance costs will almost double this year and costs of running the fire department have been exceeding the $10,000 we budget annually," Sattelberg said.

"Last year our 20 firemen, who are all volunteers, didn't take any salary and they bought a used van with the money that was saved," she said.

"They (firemen) have asked the township board for some money to buy some needed air pack equipment, but we had to tell them no. There just isn't any money."

The fire department also wants to improve its equipment with the possible purchase of a new or used pumper to replace an old one that's now only used in emergencies. Cost of a new fire truck could run as high as $70,000, and it will have to be equipped with two-way radios, lights and sirens, etc., said Sattelberg.

"If the two fire department millage proposals pass, we could set money aside for the truck purchase so we wouldn't have to borrow so much to buy one."

The 20 firemen, who know what the needs are, will probably spur the turnout because they'll be out campaigning for the millage increase, Sattelberg said.

One of the two road improvement proposals would raise 1 mill for a period of five years; the other asks for an additional two mills for five years.

"Our township roads are really getting bad," Sattelberg said.

The township currently budgets $30,000 to maintain the roads, which is a decrease from years past.

Money to pay for road maintenance and improving comes from the township's general fund and federal revenue sharing, but Sattelberg expects the federal funding will decrease as the revenue sharing program is phased out.

Township voters have rejected increased taxes to improve roads in past elections.

Tigers split pair, Reds add to unbeaten string

The Tigers split a pair of games in the Cass City Little League softball competition during the week.

Saturday, June 14, the Tigers won a slugfest over the Pirates, 28-10. Alex Pakonen bested Melanie Churchill on the mound.

Rapping out hits for the winners were Alex Pakonen, Mya Pakonen, Stephanie Leiterman, Missy Nicholas, Julie Knowlton, Mary Polega, Melissa Micklash, Heather Herringshaw and Jennifer Knowlton.

For the Pirates, leading hitters were Churchill, Roxanne Rutkowski, Dee Jackson, Jill Rutkowski and Kerry Guinther.

In a game Tuesday, June 17, the Lions bested the Tigers, 23-14. Shannon Sapien was the winning pitcher and Julie Knowlton took the loss. The Lions rallied to win the game behind 2 home runs good for 7 RBI's by Sandy Lockard. Samantha Horn cracked a triple and single and Sapien hit 2 doubles and a single.

Alex Pakonen led the Tigers with 3 hits.

The Reds continued to roll in league action, winning 2 more games to remain unbeaten.

Monday, June 16, the Lions gave the league leaders a scare before bowing, 7-6. It looked as if the Reds would have no trouble, going into the last inning with a four-run lead, but the Lions came roaring back to score 3 times and put the tying and potential winning runs on base. But Jan Erla picked up a crucial strike-out to end the rally and the game. Erla and Leann LaRoche led the Reds with 2 hits each while Sandy Lockard, with 3 hits, and Jenny Nye, with 2 hits, paced the Lions.

The Reds had an easier time winning Wednesday with an 11-3 decision over the Pirates. Erla bested Leslie Navarro on the mound. Erla struck out 7 and walked 5, while Navarro struck out 8 and walked 6.

LaRoche, with 2 homers and 2 singles, paced the Reds while Jandi Hillaker, Beth Powell, Suzy Britt and Jodi Hillaker each collected a hit. Navarro was the top slugger for the Pirates, with 3 hits, while Kim Morley and Ronda Fee had a hit each

LETTER TO EDITOR

Radiation no problem in Finland

To the writers of the Cass City Chronicle - Hello(!) from one of your local Rotary exchangees, presently in Finland.

Among other things, I'd like to say that there's been no radiation problem here from the blow-up in the USSR, not only because we're 1000 miles away, but because Finns take care of themselves and country.

Then I'd like to ask if you could put this postcard and message in the paper to surprise Rotary and relate to Becky and Lana, Cass City's next exchangees, that their experiences abroad will probably be wonderful, assuming they try everything. Sports, food, language and lifestyles will vary - but meeting people and asking questions solves the problems.

Thanks, Julia Hrycko. P.S. Hope to meet you two exchangees-to-be at Calvin College!

Plaques reflect Kingston's pride

by Cymbre Sommerville
Kingston is an example of a small town with big ideas.

Like any small town it has its share of history, but what sets it apart from most is that the people are making their heritage public knowledge.

Careful sifting, digging and listening to stories of the past has produced historical plaques which have been placed in the windows of Kingston businesses. A walk through Kingston's downtown is a walk back through time.

Resident Jan Peter has been a central figure in the development of the idea, which she thinks serves a number of beneficial purposes.

Split in half by M-46, Kingston, with a population of 400 (give or take a few), is one of those highway towns that are often passed by at a high rate of speed or are a nice quiet place to stop, stretch and grab a cup of coffee. What Peter hopes the plaques will do is grab the attention of that weary traveler and pull him both into the town and into the past. "We hope to see them looking through windows and then go place to place and maybe help out the business people," Peter said.

As a member of the village's economic development committee she sees the plaques having a positive impact on residents as well. "We want to show pride in our community and understand our heritage. We also want school kids to be proud of our town. We're proud of it and we just want them to see what we see," she pointed out.

The signs, Peter said, relate to the building, business or some person who may have been quite interesting. For example, she said that at one time there was a 3 story opera house in Kingston. The main floor was stores but upstairs the community put on plays, and brought in musicians and vaudeville shows. "It's no longer there, but signs will tell some of its history," remarked Peter.

Kingston residents had gathered information for a history book about Kingston to coincide with the 1982 quasi-centennial (125 year) festival. "We had all this information about stores, businesses and their histories and some of it was so cute and unique, and as you walk through our town you don't know these things." So last year during the annual festival Peter went out and put up poster board signs and stuck them on the walls of businesses with masking tape. "They had sketchy incidents of what happened there and how the building began or something about it. During the festival so many people had their noses right up to the signs reading them that we got thoroughly inspired to have permanent plaques made to put someplace visible," she said.

Peter said her sources for the project were some very sharp older people in town and the business people. "People have been here for many, many years and there hasn't been a lot of changeover, so they can remember the way it was," she said. There were also a lot of photographs taken about 1910, according to Peter. "From the photographs you could see the names above the stores like the Columbus Wagon Shop. There are a lot of people here who still remember those shops," she commented.

Kingston is rich with history. It was founded in 1857 by Alanson K. King, first property owner in the village. A sawmill was begun in 1866 and by 1880 the population was 200. There were 7 stores, a harness shop, sawmill, gristmill, elevator, 2 hotels, a livery stable, school, church and post office.

The first mail route was established in 1857 and in 1858, King became the first mail carrier. According to the plaque, the first mail was left in a hollow log, but was eventually carried by stage bi-weekly from Wahjamega.

The Collins service station is the site of the first gristmill built in 1874, and the first school was built in 1865 along a wagon trail. "Parents took their children to and from school to protect them from bears that were plentiful in the area woods," reads a plaque.

Fire has raised the most havoc in the village. One fire in 1886 almost destroyed the town, leveling 22 buildings and leaving only 3 buildings on Main St. Another fire in December of 1909 was chronicled in the now extinct Kingston News, which was destroyed in the fire but continued to print.

The paper reports that Mr. Noble, one of the owners of the News "tried to ring the fire bell, but the rope was out of commission and that could not be done." The gas pump would not run and the wells and cisterns were run dry. The fire was finally put out by shoveling snow onto it. The News was printed in Cass City the day after the fire. It read, "This little sheet was printed in the office of the Cass City Chronicle thru the kindness of Mr. Lertzner."

There are 26 plaques at present and Peter is expecting more. Some of the stories are accompanied by a photograph. She praised the work of Terry Bell of Bell Signs in Caro who made them.

Peter said that very few business people have said no to the idea of the plaques. "We've been thrilled with the response," she added.

The plaques are a reflection of Kingston past and present. "As we've been told at conferences on tourism: Don't change what you have, and try to be something you're aren't but grow on what you are."

JAN PETER, co-chairman of the Kingston Community Dev. Committee, and Bob Barrons owner of Barrons' Antiques in Kingston, hold one of the historical plaques that are in windows throughout downtown Kingston.

Cass City police report property destruction

A two-vehicle accident, involving a semi-truck and a passenger car, occurred Friday about 8 p.m. at the stoplight at Seeger and Main streets, resulting in slight vehicle damage but no injuries, village police report.

Driver of the auto, Kevin R. Parrish, Deford, heading south, pulled up alongside the semi, which was stopped awaiting the light change.

Police said the semi, driven by Daniel E. Copeland, Wapakoneta, Ohio, proceeded to turn right onto Main Street. Copeland told police he did not see the approaching Parrish car but did have the truck's turn signals on. The semi straddled both lanes to make its turn.

Parrish told Police he didn't see the truck's signal lights, but then said he could not have been paying attention at the time of the collision.

Neither driver was cited by police in the mishap.

Village police report two thefts and three reports of destruction of property were investigated within the past week.

Carolyn Ferrer, Vassar, reported theft of a lawn mower from the back of her pickup truck about 6:45 p.m. Monday, June 16, as it was parked in the IGA Foodliner parking lot at 6121 East Cass City Road.

She described the stolen lawn mower as a "Diamark" model, 22-inch push-type, red with a black motor.

Mary Hondra of 4557 Seeger Street reported theft of an 8-foot picnic table sometime overnight Tuesday, June 17.

The table, painted red with a black iron frame and a hole for an umbrella, was sitting on a two-wheel trailer parked in her yard. The table was missing when she awoke Tuesday morning. Its value was estimated at $75.

Robert Wischmeyer, manager at Berger and Co. elevator, 6210 Main Street, told police someone, probably kids, climbed to the top of a grain storage elevator and tossed off three quarts of oil and a gearbox that had been placed there for repair use. A light fixture was also broken in the vandalism, he told police.

Thomas Herron, 4861 Spruce Street, told police that a house his firm is building in Crestwood Circle had been entered by an intruder sometime overnight Monday, June 16.

Herron said the intruder somehow opened a new garage door and then took a steel tool to cut a hole into new drywall to enter the locked part of the dwelling.

Police said the intruder apparently entered through the hole in the drywall, looked around and then departed. Nothing was reported missing and no other damage to the structure was found.

Damage to the drywall was set at about $30.

Virginia Zawilinski, owner of the Cass Tavern, 6448 Main Street, reported to police that someone apparently kicked on the door on the east side of the tavern and broke the door jam so that it was not secured sometime Sunday, June 22.

A witness, Kevin Terry, 6537 Main Street, said he went to the door of the tavern early Sunday evening and found it locked. He then went to another tavern, returning past the Cass Tavern about 8:30 p.m. when he noted that the tavern's door was open.

Police said apparently no one actually entered the tavern through the broken door and that nothing appeared missing.

Novesta tax hike sought to fix roads

Novesta Township voters Aug. 5 will ballot on a 1.5-mill tax hike covering the next three years, which will be used for road construction and improving.

Township Clerk Nurse Kloc said the money raised by the new millage, about $2,500 annually, would build roads up to specifications for future black-topping.

The township board has budgeted $39,000 for road improvement projects this year. The money comes from general fund and federal revenues.

Either underway or completed so far this year is recapping of the pavement for two miles on Severance Road, east and west of Cemetery Road.

Nine miles of other roadway improving, such as grading, graveling and ditching where needed, has also been scheduled this year.

Area photo shop owner gives talk

Carl Miller, owner of Carl's Studios in Fairgrove, was the keynote speaker at the recent Pechman Partners growth seminar held in Lansing. Pechman Partners is a group of clients of F. J. Pechman Color Labs in Kawkanna,

Carl Miller

Wisconsin. Membership in the group is dependent on business volume and marketing performance. The Pechman Partners Growth Seminars are a new feature to help members by learning from outstanding photographers in areas across a several state area.

Miller, who is a member of the group, was asked to speak based on his business success and photographic award winning talents. Miller has also been asked to present photography programs in other areas of Michigan and in other states in 1986.

Owen-Gage tax-hike issue may spur meet's turnout

Owen-Gage school board members are hoping to see a large turnout at the Monday, June 30, budget session so questions about a 3-mill additional levy for one year can be brought out into the open.

Voters in the school district rejected the 6-mill additional tax by 44 votes at the June 9 poll and some school board members, including School Supt. Ronald Erickson, think voters believe the 6-mill package might be too much.

The annual budget session, which auditors will attend, was selected as a sort of "informational meeting" by the board, at its June 9 meeting. Aim is to have a forum to explain to the district voters why the district needs the additional money. Erickson fears an anticipated 10 percent drop in the district's current $44,019,055 state equalized valuation, the base on which tax income is figured.

Each additional mill in taxation would net the schools some $44,000 in new money, it was brought out.

In addition to the anticipated drop in the state equalized valuation, Erickson said he sees a 7 percent hike in costs facing the district schools in the 1986-87 school year.

The school board, at its June 9 session following the defeat of the 6-mill package at the polls, agreed to seek another vote on the tax plan as soon as possible.

The move was taken somewhat reluctantly after much discussion dealing with the possibility that a new tax offering should possibly be trimmed to make it more acceptable to district voters.

It was during the discussion on whether to trim the tax package that the idea of promoting an "informational meeting" with disgruntled voters to be linked to the important annual budget session was born.

The annual budget session deals with specific financial figures that are used in setting up next school year's spending plan.

The budget and informational meeting will be held at Owendale High School at 8 p.m.

Teachers attend workshop

Several Gagetown Elementary School teachers have been attending workshops to learn new methods and ways to stimulate gifted children.

William Britt, elementary school principal, told the Owen-Gage Board of Education at its recent meeting that the goal of the workshops is to get working guidelines that can be utilized by other teachers in classes over the next three years.

Cost of the program, which is state-funded, runs about $3,700, he said. No local school district funds are needed.

Some of the new methods to spur creativity and thinking among gifted children are to be implemented in the elementary curriculum next school year, he said.

"I'm enthused about the program," he told school board members. "It's good for better education. And all students, not only the gifted youngsters, will benefit from more stimulating teaching methods."

Area students named to Dean's List

Six area students, including Pamela Merchant of Cass City, were named to the spring term dean's list at Great Lakes Junior College of Business in Saginaw.

In order to be placed on the dean's list, a student must achieve a 3.5 or better grade point average for the term.

Others honored were Rita Sharrard, Deford, Deborah Czewski, Karen Koch and Ladonna Midyett, all of Gagetown, and Anna Kietzke of Kingston.

Obituaries

Todd Izydorek

Funeral services for Todd E. Izydorek, 16, of Marlette were held Thursday at St. Elizabeth Catholic Church, Marlette. He died Monday, June 16, in a farm accident.

He was born March 28, 1970, in Wyandotte, the son of Eugene and Patricia Izydorek. The family has lived in Marlette since 1979 where they moved from Colorado.

Surviving, besides his parents, are a sister, Michelle, and a brother, Ryan; grandparents, William and Louise Ashmore of Gagetown and Lorraine Calvin of Southgate, and great-grandmother, Hattie Calvin of Ohio.

Burial was in St. Elizabeth Catholic Cemetery, Marlette.

Memorials may be given to the Jean Patrick Scholarship Memorial Fund.

Claude Harry King

Harry King, 81, of Gagetown succumbed Thursday, June 19, at his residence in Gagetown.

He was born in Piedmont, Mo., the son of James and Nancy (Huff) King.

He was united in marriage to Miss Kathleen Haas Sept. 20, 1936, in Flint. Following their marriage, they made their home in Flint, Indiana, Ohio and moved to Gagetown from the Cass City area in 1967.

King was a former police officer in Gagetown and a former member of the village council. He was a member of Tyler Lodge F and AM No. 317, Cass City.

He is survived by his wife, Kathleen; one daughter, Mrs. Jack (Helen Marie) Anderson of Flint; one brother, Ray King of St. Louis, Mo.; one sister, Mrs. June Heaven, St. Louis, Mo.; and one granddaughter. Ten brothers and sisters preceded him in death.

Funeral services were held Sunday, at Little's Funeral Home, Cass City, with Rev. Thomas Humphreys, pastor of the Gagetown Church of the Nazarene, officiating.

Burial was in Elmwood Cemetery, Gagetown.

Harper family has much to celebrate

The June 7 commencement ceremony at Michigan State University climaxed a three-tiered celebration for the Lewis Harper family of Kingston.

Two sons, James C. and Gregory A., donned graduation gowns to get degrees - a Master's degree in criminology for James, a Bachelor of Arts degree in special education for Gregory.

Only a week preceding the MSU commencement, another son, Michael, was married to Stacey Hutchinson of Clio, and the brothers were in the wedding party.

James, 32, who earned his Bachelor's degree in criminology at MSU in 1976, is serving as an Air Force captain. He attended MSU to get his Master's degree under an AF-sponsored program and will soon be assigned to Kirtland AFB, N.M., Office of Security Police.

James and his wife, the former Bonnie Walaert of Saginaw, have two daughters, Elizabeth and Kimberly.

Gregory, 26, is married to the former Melody Wolf of Palms, a former teacher at Owen-Gage, who is now involved in special education at Lansing.

Michael, 21, a fireman in Portage, Mich., is also undergoing special training. He has a year to go to become a paramedic and is currently enrolled in special courses at Grand Rapids.

Wyoming was the first state to allow women to vote.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

That great newspaper, The Wall Street Journal, occasionally runs articles of some wacky columnists. I suppose it's to give "balance" to the fine, substantial writings of all the others.

Anyhow, recently there was an editorial page column of some left-wing contributor, concerning tobacco companies and smoking.

This writer said the tobacco companies shouldn't be allowed to consider sums spent on advertising as business expense. Thus such funds would be after tax (say 50%) and so double the cost to the company.

Why, it sounds like Teddy Kennedy. Remember when he wasn't going to let businessmen fly first class, unless they paid with after tax money?

The Wall Street Journal writer said that when a tobacco company paid say $100,000 for an ad it really cost the shareholders $50,000, because the other $50,000 was an expense item. His claim was that the government (taxpayers) subsidized half the cost of the ad.

What nonsense! The tobacco company had to first make $100,000 in operations before it could spend it. If the company didn't invest in an ad, then it would give the government $50,000 more in tax, and keep $50,000 for itself. Who's subsidizing whom?

The company also wouldn't have the benefit of $100,000 in advertising.

You might as well say that the government subsidizes half the company's payroll, because this is a business expense, and is pre-tax. Why not forbid the company to deduct this from income? Or the company could avoid the tax by firing everybody and cut labor costs to zero.

It all boils down to the wacky idea that somehow the government is "subsidizing" business because it only snatches half the profits, and lets the business keep the other half.

Businesses do all the work, invest all the stockholders money, take all the risks and then give the government half the profits. That makes us only 50% socialists. Which is plenty close enough to the real thing.

In all this argument, mind you we have not discussed the evil effects of tobacco, for that has nothing to do with the matter of phony tax ideas.

Tax policies should be based on raising money fairly. They're not meant to cure bad habits.

What a Pandora's box would be opened if we told all corporations how to spend their money. If we followed Ted Kennedy's lead and stopped businessmen from flying first class, then we should dictate how thick the carpet on the office floor and the size of the company car.

And then we could get into health matters. Liquor would be the next obvious target for that is just as harmful as tobacco. Then you could legislate out the coffee ads, for more than five cups a day isn't good for you.

Eventually the left-wingers would get around to prohibiting sex, through a tax, or some device. Studies show that non-virgins have more cancer of the cervix than abstainers, such as nuns. The reasoning then is that since sex has some bad effects, therefore it should be discouraged by the government by an extra tax.

The Journal misses with its own reporters, too -- but not often.

In the April 25 issue in a story on Montana gambling the Journal said the visiting Canadians didn't like it because the exchange rate meant they were out 35¢ on each dollar before they started. Yes, indeed, but the payoff is in American dollars. The discount comes back to them in dollars that are at a premium in Canada. The exchange doesn't kill 'em -- just the game.

DAN ULFIG RECEIVES congratulations from Chester Gaszczyński, former Jaycee president, when Ulfig was named Jaycee man of the year. Ulfig is credited with leading the club's work for the July 4 Festival and helping the club move to a solid financial position while in charge. Ulfig and his wife, Peggy, moved to Cass City in 1974. They have 3 children, Paul, 10, Corey, 8, and Shelly, 5.

LaRouche tactics stir up Dems to analysts' dismay

Who is Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr.? And why is he causing such a furor among Democrat leaders and candidates nationwide?

His detractors, of whom there are many, label him stridently:

"He's a neo-Nazi," charges Adlai Stevenson III, candidate for governor in Illinois where he fled the Democrat ballot because two LaRouches had won primary election victories for two top spots on the state legislative ballot.

"A crazy," says Wesley McCune, director of the Washington-based Group Research Inc., which studies right wing organizations.

"Beyond the Fringe," says Newsweek Magazine in its April 7 issue, which attempts to define the LaRouche mystique as well as its possible threat.

"A Deceiver," says Nation Magazine in its April 12 issue in tracing LaRouche's political machinations that bridge a lowly start as a Trotskyist to a right wing cultist leader.

LaRouche, who is rarely seen outside his heavily guarded estate in Leesburg, Va., fearing assassination, was born Sept. 8, 1922, in Rochester, N.H., and was brought up as a of 306 accidents in which people were injured involved alcohol.

Gene Wilson, Cass City police chief, said the DUIL arrest rate on village streets has remained fairly constant despite the tougher drunk driving laws and resultant crackdown.

"There are probably four or five accidents that can be traced to alcohol and probably about one personal injury accident a year where the driver had been drinking," he said.

Quaker, according to a 1974 biographical sketch printed in New Solidarity Magazine.

The article says he served in WWII as a conscientious objector, due to his Quaker upbringing, and was assigned to a non-combat role overseas. He reportedly joined the Communist Party in Calcutta, and, on returning home, joined the Socialist Worker Party, remaining a member into the 1950s.

The article says he switched to right wing populism in the early 1970s.

Time Magazine, in an article in its April 21 edition, said LaRouche made three "almost invisible tries for the White House, virtually ignored by voters."

Nation Magazine, in its April 12 article, noted he popped up in 1976 as a presidential candidate of the U.S. Labor Party, although he had no labor backing.

Under a new monicker, the National Caucus of Labor Committees, he ran as a Democrat for the presidency again in 1980. In 1984, he reconstituted his organization as National Democratic Policy Committee. The Nation Magazine called it a blatant attempt to gain ballot support.

"He expertly practices politics of fear," the article comments, adding: "add a readiness to bring libel suits at drop of a critical word, devout belief in brainwashing, and a pervasive paranoia..."

LaRouche appeared at a recent National Press Club session at which he accused White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan with "drug-money laundering" while he was head of Merrill Lynch.

Time Magazine (April 21 edition), in an article covering LaRouche's comments at the press meeting, said he also accused ex-Ford Foundation president McGeorge Bundy of financing the Weathermen radicals in the late 1960s, and named Agnes Harrison, 60, a former Leesburg, Va., garden club president, as belonging to a "highly organized nest" of Communist fellow travelers.

McCune, Group Research Inc. director, thinks

Local man gets home care post at Saginaw meet

Rod Hildebrand, of Allen Home Care, Inc., Cass City, was named treasurer of the East Michigan Home Care Providers at a meeting held at the Sheraton Inn in Saginaw recently. Other officers elected were Dorris Sando, president, and Chris Chesney, secretary.

continued exposure of LaRouche to the public may sink his cult in a sea of ridicule.

Estimates differ as to how many devoted followers LaRouche has cultivated over the past decade. One report estimated he has about 300 at the top of his national caucus organization, from 1,000 to 2,000 loyal workers who hand out literature promoting his ideas.

Yet, for all its efforts, LaRouche and his cult have yet to win any major political post around the country.

The recent victory in the Illinois primary, where two LaRouches won places on the Democratic ticket for lieutenant governor and secretary of state, has been the lone political laurel so far.

For the most part, LaRouche candidates are thrown into local level primary elections, seizing opportunities in uncontested or low-interest contests and capitalizing on voter confusion about their party name.

Nation Magazine says LaRouche's attraction is a negative one to "the lost, the alienated, the cynical, the callow, the indifferent."

"They embody the emptiness in American Party Politics today...For starters, the wimpishness of regular Democrats who have let them (LaRouches) get away with purloining the party name.

"But in a wider sense, they exploit the despair and cynicism that has seeped into our political system," the magazine charges.

Clair White, 70, of Bay City, admittedly a political maverick and "gadfly" himself but an astute student of Michigan Democrat politics over the last four decades, says of LaRouche:

"If it was 1932 and the country was deep in the depression like Germany was, Lyndon LaRouche's name would be Adolph Hitler."

White says LaRouche lives like a king at his estate in Virginia, backed by some very wealthy industrialists.

"He (LaRouche) started out as a Communist, turned to Socialism for awhile, then to the extreme right wing, which brings in a lot more money," said White.

The extreme left in the Democrat party doesn't have any money, says White.

White, who was elected to the Board of Governors at Wayne State University in 1959 as a Democrat, and to the Board of Governors of Michigan State University in 1964, believes the two-party political system is under heavy pressure these days.

"Both parties are fractured by special interest groups and causes. These don't support the party system, only candidates who are loyal to their special interests."

"A splinter group, such as the LaRouches, could woo a lot of votes from a large number of angry people. There is a wide feeling among political analysts today that the 'haves have had it with helping the have-nots.' It's disaffecting a lot of formerly loyal Dems from the party."

The LaRouches are targeting the industrial Midwest this primary election and they have candidates running in every Congressional district in Michigan, said White, long-time political science teacher in the Bay City school system.

"LaRouche is crazy...crazy like a fox. He's symptomatic of the political tenseness of our times," White concluded.

Local "pol" bids for Congress job

Norczyk (news director of Radio Station WKYO of Caro) and she said she also writes for the Bay City Times and will send it on to them."

"Carl Yoder, who is running in the primary in the 9th District, which covers Midland, phoned me and we sort of compared notes. I called the LaRouche office in Detroit (125 West Nine Mile Road, Ferndale) but couldn't get through to anyone who might tell me what issues I should bring up. Six or seven newspaper people or seven newspaper people have tried to reach me at home for interviews, but I'm kinda hard to get hold of."

Samuelson's construction job takes him away from home weekdays. He's working at a new addition to Gray Iron foundry and lives in Saginaw in a mobile van, returning home on weekends.

He was born in 1937 in Bagley, Minn., the oldest of nine children, to Lester and Buda Samuelson. His father operated a small shoe repair store "and we were very poor," he recalled.

Samuelson graduated from Bemidji, Minn., High School and got a full-time job working as a typewriter and platemaker for a weekly newspaper, Northland Times, in Bemidji.

"I started out at 30 cents an hour and worked my way up to $1 an hour when I got married," he said. He wed the former Marlyne Morey in 1957 and shortly afterward the newspaper and his job folded.

He took his family to Nebraska in 1959 and got a job at a construction site at Lincoln as an unskilled laborer. He's been in construction ever since.

In 1970, he moved to the Cass City area from Detroit and soon purchased a 148-acre farm, where he and his wife raised cattle.

"We had the farm for about 10 years, but never made any money at it. My wife ran the farm while I was away at my construction job. I figure with all the hours we put in, we averaged about 25 cents an hour."

Bad times came to the Samuelson family in the mid-1970s. A son died of an incurable disease and Samuelson came down with diabetes and high blood pressure, ailments that still afflict him.

"I sold the farm for $95,000. We made out OK, I guess. I owed $45,000 and paid that back. It's just a good thing that we had the money coming in from the construction work or we couldn't have made it through."

Samuelson will oppose a popular veteran, J. Bob Traxler, in the Dem primary Aug. 5. Traxler has chewed up lesser known opponents in the last three elections, by garnering as much as three times as many votes as his adversaries.

"I've met Bob Traxler. He's a very pleasant fellow. But I think that he's going to lose some farmer support in our area because of his votes on farmer credit issues," said Samuelson.

When Samuelson talks about farm issues, he's on familiar ground, voicing his own views mostly, not those he gained through the LaRouche organization.

He thinks farmers should get parity for their crops.

"Most farmers don't make minimum wages, for the time and money invested in land and equipment."

"Food in America costs less for the average consumer than anywhere else in the world. Farmers should get a fair share of the profits, and not let big business get it all."

"I support stronger protective tariff policies to aid our farmers in competing against foreign imports."

Samuelson pictures himself as a conservative Democrat. He studies the teachings of Thomas Jefferson.

"You know, one time Thomas Jefferson and Ben Franklin agreed that a law should be enacted barring lawyers from Congress. They thought then that lawyers, if elected, would enact and write the laws that only lawyers would understand. And that's what happened."

He thinks a law should be enacted banning Congress from touching the Social Security system.

"I've worked all my life paying into Social Security and I'll bet when I'm old enough to qualify for benefits there won't be any money left."

Samuelson is not tall, about 5-foot, 8-inches. He weighs on the hefty side but with a construction worker's girth. He sports a full-blown beard, clipped in a dignified style. He speaks softly, and with an intent seriousness. But he hasn't lost his humor.

"I heard that some of my friends and acquaintances in the county Democrat party in Caro were mad at me. One told me I should have informed them that I wanted to run for Congress. But I didn't know I was going to run for Congress until I did."

It is sort of heady for political neophyte like Samuelson to be running for such a prestigious post, he's the first to admit. But there's been a lot of things that happened to him the last few years that have changed his outlook.

"I used to drink, like construction workers do, before my son died and before I found out I had diabetes. Now I don't drink and I have had to have something important take its place. I'm not a church-goer. But I'm a student of the Bible, and I guess I'm kinda religious bent."

"Each Sunday, over the last three years or so, I watch the Worldwide Church of God program on television. It's made a big difference in my outlook on life."

MEAT NUTRI-FACTS

This Weeks Feature:

4 pork loin rib chops, cut 1 to 1 1/2 inches thick
 1/2 cup chopped onion
 1/2 cup white wine
 1/2 cup white wine
 2 tablespoons water
 2 cloves garlic, minced
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
 1/2 teaspoon crushed tarragon leaves
 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 Brown onion in butter in saucepan. Add vinegar, pepper sauce, tarragon and pepper. Simmer 8 to 10 minutes. Meanwhile trim excess fat from pork chops. Face chops on grill over ash-covered coals for 5 to 7 inches in broiler pan. Broil at moderate temperature 10 minutes on each side. Brush chops with sauce and continue cooking 15 to 20 minutes or until done. Turn and brushing with sauce occasionally. Serve remaining piquant sauce with pork chops. 4 servings.
