Freak hailstorm pummels area

"I never saw anything like it for a long time," said Mardell Ware, 2918 N. Cemetery Road, of a freak hailstorm that pummeled the north side of her home, and plowed over a small flower garden.

Frances Justin, the Ware's next door neighbor, ran her finger over the siding of her home discovering pit marks and dents left by the mothball-sized hail.

Charles Carpenter, 7724 Severance Road, said that hail swept across his farm land, one more problem of bad weather he's had to cope with this summer.

The freak hailstorm apparently hit only a few scattered places around Cass City between 8 and 8:30 p.m.

Neither the agriculture or sheriff's offices in Tuscola and Huron counties had any reports of widespread damage. Spokesmen did say that dark clouds and some brisk winds buffeted widely scattered areas in the two counties about the same time the hail struck here.

It took much of last Thursday for the Wares and Mrs. Justin to clean up their yards following the short hailstorm. Leaves and broken flowers and rose bushes were victims.

"I couldn't imagine what was hitting the house," said Mrs. Ware. "I went to the bathroom window on the north side of the house and discovered it was big hailstones.

The hailstones, resembling tiny pieces of hard ice, gathered in small piles on the ground, but melted quickly, she said, leaving dents in the aluminum siding and littering the yard with fallen leaves and bits of flowers and flower stems.

Bill Bortel of the Tuscola County Extension office in Caro said hail storms usually occur only in scattered areas.

"I heard that some areas near Cass City were hit, but we did not receive any reports of wide-spread crop damage in the area," he said.

Small beans would be easiest victims of hail, but apparently the storms that struck near Cass City were not serious, said Bortel.

The crop picture overall in Tuscola County is becoming "very respectable after near drought conditions early in the growing season, and very wet and cold weather in recent weeks," said Bortel.

"When you have to throw off the sheets when sleeping at night, it's the best growing weather," said Bortel. "But there still is a lot of work that has been delayed in the fields, harvesting hay, cultivating."

LaBelle crowned Festival queen

Village president Larry avis crowned a teary-eyed Katie LaBelle queen at the 6th annual Fourth of July queen's pageant held Wednesday night, July 2. LaBelle, 16, is the daughter of Ed and Pam LaBelle, 6793 Third St.

Second runner-up in the pageant was Lisa Nicholas, 15, daughter of Sandra Nicholas, 4721 N. Seeger and first runner-up was Tracey Grindey, 17, daughter of Mike and Norma Bigelow, 6742 Pine St.

Nine girls competed for the crown and were judged on a variety of qualities.

The pageant opened with comments from emcee Wayne Dillon. "It takes a great deal of courage to get up here in front of an audience, to give a speech and do a dance routine and so in my estimation, and I think most of you agree, they're all winners, but one must be selected," he told the audience. That one girl was selected, but the decision did not appear to come easily. The judges

St. Pancratius to dedicate chapel

Bishop Kenneth E. Untener, of the Saginaw Diocese, will dedicate the new organ and Eucharistic Chapel at St. Pancratius Church Saturday, July 12.

The dedication program begins with an organ recital 6 p.m., performed by Steve Schlesing of Musical Heritage, Inc., Royal Oak.

He was winner of the First Annual Liberace Talent Contest and has performed with Liberace on stage and television.

The new Rogers organ 770 Exeter was installed in July of 1985. Head organist for the church is Paul Kerbyson, with Don Greenleaf, assistant organist.

The Eucharistic Chapel was formerly the main sacristy. Remodeling started in mid-February and work was finished in mid-April. D & D Construction Co. of Cass City was the contractor.

The dedication liturgy will follow the organ recital. A potluck supper will be held in the parish center. Those attending are asked to bring a dish to pass.

The recital-dedication is open to the public, as well as the potluck supper, said Fr. Julius Spleet, church pastor.

New Walbro contract includes profit sharing

Walbro Corporation and local 213 of the United Auto Workers have reached agreement on a 3-year contract calling for a salary increase of 25 cents per hour each year and for profit sharing, Don Tonti, director of human resources for Walbro, said this week.

Tonti said it was an innovative contract that the union and the company negotiated and signed more than 4 months before the current pact expires Nov. 8. Workers at Walbro currently are paid wages ranging from $7.89 to $9.32 per hour.

The profit sharing is based on stockholders' equity in the company and the money is placed in a pool. The higher the pool, the more money there is available for each employee, Tonti explained.

Payment is made each 6 months and the forecast for the year is $1,000 per worker and the first payment was estimated at $500. The profit sharing is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1986.

The company received major revisions in job classifications, which were reduced from 17 to 7 with only 4 major classifications, Tonti reported.

Health insurance terms were also changed. Employees entering the hospital or requiring surgery can have part of the deductible they are required to pay if they phone in for approval before receiving the medical attention.

Another innovative feature of the medical insurance offered is utilization review. Today, Tonti pointed out, many employees and their spouses both work and one is covered by the other's insurance. If that is the case, the employee can elect to have the money that would have been spent for hospitalization insurance used for another benefit, or receive a cash payment.

Tonti pointed to the early settlement as a great example of cooperation between workers and management. It was vital to the company and a benefit to the employees that we settled, he continued. Walbro is a single source supplier for several customers. They require an assured source of parts. If a settlement had not been reached 60 days before the current contract expired, Walbro would have been forced to find a warehouse not connected with the present company facilities and stockpile it with inventory to assure its customers that their production would not be interrupted by a strike at Walbro.

The extra costs would certainly have affected what we could do for our employees, Tonti concluded.

Dennis Beadle, local 213 president, was too busy to comment on the new pact prior to press time.

No mishaps reported

Annual Festival draws thousands to Cass City

Crowds thronged both sides of Main Street to view the annual July 4th parade and to take part in festive activities that ran the gamut from arts and crafts to athletic events, mud volleyball and fireworks.

Some 100 separate marching units took part in the parade, including a stirring flyover by three jet fighters.

Guesstimates of the number of people who enjoyed the day-long events differed, "but they'd run into the thousands, and they come from all over," said Lou LaPonsie, Cass City village superintendent.

Despite the large crowd, there were no reports of serious injury, or vandalism.

Streets downtown were swept clean by village work crews both the day before and hours before the parade events were launched.

"We also had our park crew handy at Cass City Village Recreational Park to keep up with trash and debris," said LaPonsie. "There was a little more debris to contend with this year, probably caused when many scurried home when the downpour came."

The rain started slowly, gave hints that it might dissipate as the last marching units and floats were midway down the parade route. Then it really poured.

It caused some scary moments as parade watchers and participants scurried through traffic seeking cover. But no mishaps were reported.

"We didn't have one accident," said village policeman Phillip Klaus. "Traffic snarled up for awhile when the rain came, and also after the fireworks, which is to be expected." This year's festival queen, Katie LaBelle, and her court reigned in the parade, which was preceded again by the popular bed race.

Nine teams competed for trophies.

Hills and Dales Hospital women's team won that division, with Walbro taking second; Co-Op Elevator of Pigeon took the men's team trophy, with Ben Franklin Store, second. The youth group of First Baptist Church was the only youth entry, therefore winning the trophy in that division and also the best decorated award.

The tot run was cute as Danny Loeding sprinted to the finish line first in the up-to-2 years old contestants; Misti Jensen puffed in second.

Other winners in this event were Travis Eyer, first, and Rikki Loeding, second, in the 3-4 years old race; Peyton Daniel, first, and Jenny Rick, second, in the 5-7 years old race; Benjamin Hobbs, first, and Jason Daniel, second, in the 8-10 years old.

Provincial House, a virtual perennial winner in the float contest, won the Meredith B. Auten prize for its float, themed "Veterans Still Care."

Four service veterans, all residents at Provincial House, along with Frank Middaugh of Caro, who was named American Health Care Association's volunteer worker of the year, rode in honor on the float, which consisted of a large red, white and blue arch and thousands of pieces of 2-by-2 inch square tissue papers on ends of pencils.

Residents at Provincial House spent weeks of labor constructing the prize-winning float. Also on the float were Provincial House administrator Connie Schwaderer, Betty Hurford, director of nursing, and Mary Vatter, activities director.

John A. Ecken of Caro played patriotic music on his accordion as VFW members from the Cass City and Caro posts marched alongside as a color guard.

"It's the biggest thing of the year for us and our residents," said Vatter, who added, "Be sure to mention the driver of the tractor that pulled the float. It's a very important job." The driver was Lynn Hurford.

The First Baptist Church of Cass City won the president's prize for its float depicting the Statue of Liberty with the theme: "Bring Back the Glory." Stan Guinther, Sunday School superintendent, headed the committee that built the float. The statue was made from a mannequin robed in drapery liner and spray painted. Helen Rayl and Jean Wood drove the cart that pulled the decorated trailer.

Cass City Business and Professional Women's Club also won a plaque for its float marking the club's 25th anniversary. All charter members rode on the float.

The Salem and Trinity Methodist churches combined talents for their prize-winning float with the theme: "He's Got The Whole World in His Hand."

It featured a giant hand, made of wire and papier-mache, holding a shuttle rocket and an astronaut. It was depicted sitting on a cloud. The hand turned by a special motorized rig.

It took some 15 workers from the two churches more than two months to construct the winning float. Arnie Nieboer was chairman of the float committee and Carl Schell was co-chairman.

There were so many interesting marching units.

There were clowns a-plenty, tossing candy to children along the parade route, old cars, marching servicemen, fire trucks, color guards.

It was the eighth annual July 4th celebration here. If you were out of town, you missed a grand day.

Sometimes overlooked by revelers attracted here to view the activities, but not by service organizations and relatives, were the area cemeteries, festooned with colorful American flags, waving proudly over well cared for gravesites of loved ones who gave the last great measure of their devotion serving in wars past.

This year's July 4th was marked by the grand Statue of Liberty festivities in New York harbor celebrating our freedom and the immigrants who came to this country to pass through the golden door of opportunity, as well as the restoration of the symbolic statue.

MOM AND DAUGHTER parade watchers were still all smiles as they covered up against the first sprinkles of what minutes later turned into a deluge, washing out the last units in the torrent.

Sidewalk Days to feature games, parade, bargains

The annual sidewalk sale in Cass City is scheduled for July 16, 17, 18 and 19 and the Cass City Retail Committee is going all out to make it one that area shoppers won't want to miss. Bill Kritzman, co-chairman, said this week.

The special events start Wednesday, July 16, with a quilt show and demonstration. It will also be new Thursday and Friday. Four clowns will be passing out free candy Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. till noon.

A big children's parade will wind its way down Main Street Friday, July 18, starting at 9:30 a.m.

Also scheduled Friday is a penny hunt in the parking lot on Seeger Street just north of Main Street. At the same location children's games will be played starting at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

The biggest attraction for many are the bargains that are traditional with the sidewalk sale. Retailers say that they will be greater than ever this year with merchandise and prices for just about every budget.

Meg's Peg

Spin that wheel!

By Melva Guinther

Wheelies, unite! Let our protests be heard until the winning lottery numbers cease to obscure our puzzles!

A wheelie, in case you've been living in a cave, is an individual who doesn't answer the phone, the doorbell or the spouse between 7:30 and 8 p.m. And for good reason. He or she is totally engrossed in — R — S on the TV screen.

— E — T — ER

If the wheelie has figured out the puzzle phrase, he may be sputtering, "Take an H or an F, you dummy!"

More often than not, some fiendish clod, cloaked in anonymity, chooses to superimpose the day's winning lottery numbers over an especially intriguing puzzle. This causes untold distress to the dedicated wheelie, who is unable to study the blank spaces and letters.

The phenomenal success of "Wheel of Fortune" has been scrutinized, analyzed and publicized. No one can figure out why 40,000,000 Americans have become addicted. It seems simple enough to me. People like word games, and they like to participate.

Pat Sajak is an amiable and unpretentious host, and Vanna White is ... Vanna White. They give away some neat prizes on the program, but the real appeal is in playing the game.

To the dismay of fellow viewers, an overzealous wheelie is quite apt to announce the answer to the puzzle when the first letter is revealed, if not before, thus eliminating any suspense or interest in the rest of the round. Perhaps that's why so many of us wheel alone.

There's a daytime version of "Wheel," which I rarely get to watch. However, if I just happen to be home at 10:30 and there happens to be some bit of housework that needs attention in the area of the TV set, I have been known to tune in.

A few things on the show bug me, for instance, the contestant who obviously knows the answer, lands on the $1000 or $5000 space and chooses the lone P in the puzzle instead of taking the three L's or C's. Undoubtedly, it's easier to be logical in the relaxed atmosphere of your living room than in the studio before cameras and audience.

Another thing that boggles the mind is going for a pair of cuff links or ear clips when one could have a Corvette, motor home or a trip to Australia. Obviously, we all have different tastes.

About those lottery numbers, couldn't they display them while Vanna's modeling her outfit?

What do you like to do on summer vacation? "I like to go swimming and to play at the park a lot," said 8-year-old Kim Barnes (left). Stephanie Hartwick, 8, said, "I like to go swimming, playing at the park and playing with friends."

When asked if they look forward to summer vacation they answered with an unsurprising and resounding YES!! They also said that it's their favorite time of the year.

In the evenings the girls said that they watch T.V. and can stay up late.

New books at the library

110 SHANGHAI ROAD by Monica Highland (fiction). Reserved, principled Matthew Granger and amoral Harley Compton Fitch III meet in 1926 as youthful classmates in Shanghai while sociopolitical turmoil is wracking China. Granger tenderly woos coquettish Englishwoman Jordan Logan-Fisher, Fitch beds Tailing, a prostitute's daughter. A decade later, upon discovering that Tailing is his half-sister, Fitch discharges his rage by raping Jordan, now Granger's fiancée. As Westerners flee the encroaching Japanese, she grimly remains behind to have Fitch's illegitimate child and marry an impoverished disciple of Mao Tsetung. Granger eventually weds a senator's daughter while Fitch nurtures his California-based conglomerate, but their innate antagonism resurfaces to taint their families and Jordan.

VENDETTA by Steve Shagan (fiction). Someone is killing the porn stars of Los Angeles. To Lieutenant Jack Raines and his partner, Silvio Martinez, the murders look like the work of a serial killer; each corpse has a valentine drawn in high-grade cocaine beside it. To the Mafia, who control the pornography industry, and to the Colombians, who deal in cocaine trafficking, the killings mean war between archenemies. This novel explores the inner workings of the Cosa Nostra and develops a tender, ambivalent relationship between Raines and Karen Dara, a possible suspect and/or victim.

OUT OF BONDAGE by Linda Lovelace and Mike McGrady (non-fiction). Lovelace is the erstwhile porn star of Deep Throat who disclosed several years ago that she had been forced at gunpoint by her sadistic first husband into doing the famous flick and other unsavory sex acts. Thus, she became a star witness in feminist's case against pornography as a variety of white slavery. In this installment of her story, she picks up where she left off, relating her years of flight and hiding after leaving her first husband and marrying Larry Marchiano; her decision to write the first book, "Ordeal," the trials of becoming a public figure at first disbelieved and scorned; and her meeting with Gloria Steinem and other feminists who have helped her join the anti-porn crusade. Her experiences raise many disquieting questions about the exploitation of women and our society's attitudes about sex.

*"If It Fitz..."The Kenmore affair

By Jim Fitzgerald

Standing in front of the chair where I was training for the next sitting marathon, my wife bent forward at the waist and faced the floor. Spreading her arms wide apart, she said:

"Do this to the washing machine if it starts to move."

Naturally, I said: "What in God's name are you talking about?"

She explained. She said she hated to leave home while a load of clothing was being washed, but it was necessary. She had to go to the grocery store because she'd just discovered two square inches of vacant space in the freezer compartment of the refrigerator and if the void wasn't immediately filled, I might open the door and be shocked to death by not having a frozen roast of beef fall on my foot.

And while she was gone, I would be in charge of the washing machine.

"Sometimes it tries to walk out of the utility room. You'll hear it jiggling across the floor. The way to stop it is lean on the top of the washer and wrap your arms around it," she said, again demonstrating by bending over and hugging an armful of air.

I was nonplussed, which is unusual for me. Most of the time, I am plussed. But never before had it been suggested that I have an unnatural relationship with a Kenmore washing machine. I've always been partial to Maytag.

"Wouldn't it be more dignified, and less emotional, if I simply turned the machine off? I could probably learn how to do that," I said.

"I'm sure you could turn it off," she said (rather snidely, I thought), "but then the clothes wouldn't get washed."

"How long do I have to hug the washer?" I asked, blushing slightly.

"If you hang on tight, and don't back up, it usually stops vibrating in a few seconds," she said.

"What do I do then, say, 'How was it for you?' to a Kenmore washing machine?" I asked.

At this point she suggested that maybe I'd like to go to the grocery store instead and she would stay home on washer watch. No. My last purchase of food and sustenance, just a week earlier, had resulted in too much trauma. I went to two stores and got too smart for myself.

At the first store, for food, I bought bread and stuff. At the second store, for sustenance, I bought a half gallon of vodka and some tonic water. I had to walk home, so to make my burden less awkward, I cleverly put the bottles in the same bag as the food.

I do very little grocery shopping, and I had no idea that vodka and tonic could permanently disfigure an entire loaf of Wonder bread.

Back home in the kitchen, it was a horrible sight to behold. The loaf of bread was compressed into half its original size. It was also grotesquely twisted into a shape more like an aborted pretzel than sliced bread.

I tried to restore the bread to loaf shape before my wife saw it. For the first of two times so far this year, my plus was none. That bread was gooey, almost wet. It refused to be decompressed. It must be called Wonder bread because it makes people wonder whatever happened to bread crumbs.

Later, my wife explained that the ingredient that keeps Wonder bread fresh for the average life of an octogenarian also prevents it from regaining its figure after the loaf is slipped under a door before being unwrapped.

She served that poor misshapen bread for breakfast. I can't really explain it, but somehow I felt guilty eating wizened toast. It was as though it had already suffered enough.

So I wasn't ready to return to the grocery store so soon after my traumatic experience with Wonder bread. I stayed home with the washing machine, and when it began moving, I embraced it just as my wife had instructed. It soon stopped vibrating.

I would not lie and tell you that now, every time I walk by the utility room, the Kenmore is automatically turned on. But I think I hear it sigh.

HOURS OF HARD WORK earned the Provincial House float another parade award to add to their growing collection.

Area students awarded music camp scholarships

Stacey Patera of Cass City High School and Jennifer McNaughton of Cass City Intermediate have each been awarded music scholarships to attend Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp by Marshall Music Co. of Lansing.

Stacey, daughter of Ronald and Violet Patera of 5739 Severance Road, DeFord, and Jennifer, daughter of David and Connie McNaughton of 4875 N. Seeger Street, each will receive grants worth $175 to help pay expenses at the camp, located at Twin Lake, Mich., near Muskegon.

The Marshall Music Co. grants are awarded students deemed worthy on musicianship, citizenship and musical achievement, as determined by the local school music staff and administration.

The Lansing music firm annually gives more than 300 scholarships to students in schools served by the company throughout Michigan.

Students participate in concentrated sectional and large group studies along with other outstanding students. They also have the opportunity to play under the direction of nationally known conductors.

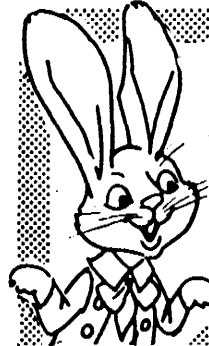

Jennifer, 13, will be joined by Kathy Bolton, 13, also an 8th grader at Cass City Intermediate, Aug. 8-20 at the camp.

Kathy won a $100 award from the Cass City Band Boosters to attend the camp. She is the daughter of James and Sandra Bolton, 3971 East Cass City Road, and plays the flute. Kathy also was named one of two outstanding music students by her teachers last school year. Another recipient of the citation was Bryce McIntosh.

Jennifer plays the clarinet, for which she earned the Marshall Co. scholarship, and the piano.

Stacey, 15, who also plays the clarinet, will go the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp Aug. 22 for two weeks.

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

Port Sanilac must have a mover and shaker interested in art. It's at this little town that the Sanilac County Museum is located. We visited the museum for the first time and it was impressive. Now from Port Sanilac comes word that the Sanilac Consortium for the Arts is sponsoring the Northshire Renaissance Faire on 2 weekends, July 19, 20, and July 26, 27.

It features 16th century music and jugglers, dancers, puppets and similar acts all day. This will be the fourth year for the Faire.

Sometimes it pays to wait. Cass City has had a modern sewage disposal plant on which the final improvement was completed in November of 1982.

Village residents are still paying for the improvement. Vassar will build a new plant and also complete sewer rehabilitation work at a cost of $1.92 million.

The difference is that the work will be completed with the help of a Farmers Home Administration loan to be paid back over a 40-year period at a government subsidized rate of 6 percent.

We can't say it never rains on the Fourth of July Festival anymore. But it could have been worse, much worse. In other sections of the state it rained most of the day on the Fourth. The brief rain in Cass City was inconvenient, not catastrophic.

Car hits guardrail and lands in ditch

The Tuscola County Sheriff's Department reported a one car mishap at 12:15 a.m. Wednesday on East Dayton Rd.

Daniel J. Spencer, 26, was injured when he failed to stop at the sign at the intersection of Hurds Corner Rd., according to a witness. His car continued through the intersection and began to slide sideways. It struck the guardrail and went over it into a deep water-filled ditch, according to the report. The 2 passengers in the car, Lonnie and David Piehl of Caro, were uninjured.

Kevin J. Richter, 23, of Kingston, was northbound on Froede Rd. at approximately midnight Saturday when he saw a deer in the road and pulled onto the shoulder. He lost control of the motorcycle he was driving when it slid off the edge of the pavement.

The Haire Net

I confess. One of the columns I read practically every day is "Dear Abby". Another is the advice column written by her twin sister "Ann Landers". But forget about her, the one that sparked this column was written by Abby.

Before we go any further let me clarify one thing. The answers aren't what makes me a regular reader. After all I know that they are written by persons who aren't any more qualified to make suggestions than any writer who can turn a phrase and can stomach the job.

What entices me is the problems that readers write about. They must know down deep that Abby can't really solve their problem. Is it therapy for the disconsolate to jot down grievances and see them in print? Exhibitionism? That's doubtful, but then what do I know? The whole idea seems farfetched to me and, no matter what the torment, writing a stranger and pouring out intimate secrets of my personal life I could never do.

All of this is merely a prelude to the topic for the day. As I said it is the writers that interest me. The other day I read an item where the writer was pouring out her resentments against her in-laws because they came and stayed for a couple of weeks making extra work for her. She ended by saying the in-laws should stay in a motel when they come to visit.

In the same article there was (naturally) a letter from a family that feels a visit from the in-laws is the best thing to happen since the Creation.

The purpose here is not to talk about who is wrong or right, but it does seem as if the writer that wants to banish the in-laws to a motel must have a sour feeling about them and about life in general. The letter didn't say if the husband felt the same way as the wife. If not, whoa, boy, it's easy to see trouble ahead in the family.

But I digress. Let's get back to the column and the persons who write in. I often speculate about the percentage of persons who read the column and would never even think about writing about their own troubles.

Maybe the percentage of non-writers is lower than I think. Because I know how advice columns are written and how they are regarded in most news rooms, it's possible that they are looked on with a more jaundiced view than most readers have. I also often speculate about the number of closet writers that take pen in hand. I'll bet there are plenty in every town that do it, persons that you would never expect.

It's probably true that letting off steam publicly is good therapy when up against a difficult or hopeless situation. Maybe the same personalities that are helped by joint exercising or joint weight loss efforts or stop smoking clinics find writing letters makes it easier to cope with a problem that bugs them.

If so, more power to them. Keep those letters coming. I may not think much of letters as a solution to a problem, but I still read them every day.

It's millions of guys and gals like me that have kept the columns in the papers. When I wear my publisher's hat, it's easy to understand why they have gone merrily along year after year.

If they had been submitted to me as an editor when first created, they never would have made it into print.

Who would want to read such nonsense?

Wet corn yellowing

By Bill Bortel

Many corn fields that received 5-6 inches of rain 2 weeks ago are showing severe signs of nitrogen deficiency due to the saturated conditions and a lack of oxygen in the root zone, states Bill Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director. Early planted fields that are well tilled do not appear to be as severely affected. Poorly drained sites which were flooded or have not been adequately tile drained are showing severe yellowing of the entire plant and firing of the lower leaves. In many of these fields the plants are still small and should benefit from sidedressing nitrogen fertilizer when the soil dries out long enough to get back into the field. Many of these fields have received additional rain in the last week and are still too wet to cultivate or sidedress.

Some of the fields showing the worst symptoms may have received only 10-30 pounds of starter nitrogen and plans are to sidedress remaining nitrogen as soon as possible. Time may be running out for use of standard equipment for sidedressing corn because some corn in the field may soon be too tall. It is doubtful that there is sufficient high clearance equipment available for sidedressing tall corn. Aerial application of urea nitrogen is a possibility and can be done up until tasseling time, however, do not apply urea fertilizer when the foliage is wet. Growers who want to fly on urea should be cautioned that some rain after application will be needed to get the nitrogen in the root zone for efficient uptake. Some nitrogen may also be lost by volatilization if the nitrogen source is urea and it lays on the leaf surface for several weeks. Growers should be reminded that there is no assurance that rescue attempts such as this will be cost effective. The severity of the nitrogen shortage and conditions following the nitrogen applications will be very important in determining the success of the application. The amount of nitrogen that should be applied depends on how much has already been applied.

If the full complement of nitrogen (1.2 lb. nitrogen per bushel of expected yield) has already been applied, additional nitrogen may not be needed. If growers in this area of high rainfall have applied 1 pound or slightly less per bushel of expected yield, we would suggest an additional 40-50 pounds of nitrogen per acre. For growers who have not yet applied their sidedress nitrogen, we suggest applying one pound of nitrogen per bushel of expected yield.

HEALTH TIPS

Some factors increase breast cancer risk

Until very recently, breast cancer was the number one cancer killer of women and has only recently been surpassed by lung cancer. One out of every 11 adult women in the United States will develop breast cancer during her lifetime.

The cause of cancer still remains a mystery, but diagnosis and treatment of breast cancer is becoming more sophisticated. Today, there are victims of the disease who can expect to live a normal, healthy life. In addition, women themselves hold the key to early diagnosis of the disease—monthly breast self-examination.

Any woman can develop breast cancer, but there are certain factors that appear to make a woman more "at-risk" for the disease. A woman who has had breast cancer or cancer of the uterus, ovaries, and colon; or a family history of breast cancer—mother, sister, aunts, and grandmother, is at higher risk. Also women who are over age 50; have had a first child after age

Steffke in workshop at CMU

Stephen Steffke, a science teacher at Cass City High School in Cass City, is one of 18 outstanding high school and junior high teachers chosen to participate in a summer internship project co-sponsored by Central Michigan University. The project is designed to introduce experienced mathematics and science teachers firsthand to applied science and technology.

The project began with a one-week orientation session on the CMU campus. Participants then were scheduled to start industrial research internships at cooperating industries. Steffke was selected for an internship at Dow Corning Corp.

"The goal of the program is a new enthusiasm in the classroom," because teachers will have a new understanding of what applied science is really all about," said Myron Henry, dean of arts and sciences.

The 18 participating teachers will be employed on a full-time basis at one of the three industries. They will also receive graduate credits and will develop classroom materials.

Participants were selected by a committee of CMU project staff and industry representatives.

Cut cable stalls long distance calls

Phone service in the Thumb area, including Cass City, was interrupted for several hours last Wednesday, July 2, because of a cut cable in the area, a General Telephone Co. spokesman said.

"Cass City phone customers, along with those in several other Thumb area communities, were affected by the cable cut," Vivien Feagin, a Gen-Tel spokesman said, noting that delay in long-distance service was most affected. She said many customers couldn't get long-distance calls through as "busy" signals lit up the switchboard.

Location of the cable cut wasn't known immediately and phone crews were out searching for the damaged line throughout last Thursday in attempts to repair it, Feagin said.

Long distance service was out from about 9:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

U.S. REP. ROBERT Traxler accepted the Thumb Electric Cooperative cap and jacket that were presented to him in his Washington, D.C., office by John Gillig of Decker. Gillig visited the capital city recently while on the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association's Annual Youth Tour representing Thumb Electric Cooperative. Gillig was recently elected to the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association's Youth Consulting Board.

James Jackson in exercise

Marine Lance Cpl. James R. Jackson, whose wife, Darla, is the daughter of Alvin and Carol McKee of Krapf Road, Cass City, recently participated in exercise Agile Sword '86.

The two-week exercise was conducted at Eglin Air Force Base and Naval Air Station Pensacola, FL. Nearly 4,000 Marines and sailors participated in the first exercise of a maritime prepositioned Marine Amphibious Brigade to test and evaluate all phases of a maritime prepositioned operation. The highlight of the exercise was the unloading of the Military Sealift Command from an anchored position off shore.

Jackson is currently serving with 2nd Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, NC. A 1984 graduate of Cass City High School, he joined the Marine Corps in July 1984. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson of Fort Wayne, Ind., formerly Cass City.

Better refuge

Old cars, scrap tires, and construction rubble provide better refuge for marine life than natural reefs, says National Wildlife magazine. Fish need privacy for spawning and protection from strong ocean currents and discarded junk does a better job than nature of providing protection.

American League all-star champs

The American League (AL) edged the National League (NL) in a double header held the Fourth of July. In the first game the AL squeaked through with a 4-0 victory.

Kevin Mika was the starting pitcher for the AL and pitched 3 scoreless innings. Greg LeValley continued where Kevin left off and shut out the NL the remaining 2 innings. Troy Osentoski was the starting pitcher for the National League, relieved by Mark Kubacki in the third inning.

The AL scored 2 runs in the second inning. Kent Winter walked with one out. Rodney Romain followed with an infield single. Stan Dunevant then cracked a solid double that drove them in. Bart Hall stroked a double that drove in 2 runs in the fourth.

The AL took the second game, 10-5, jumped out to an early lead in the top of the first. Troy Benitez, Brad Gray, Greg LeValley and Kevin Mika started the inning with base hits scoring the first runs. Mika later scored on an infield hit by Ben Schott.

The AL added another run in the second inning. Mika tripled and scored on a base hit off Ricky Krueger. The NL scored one run in the second. Mark Kubacki walked and scored on back-to-back hits by Ryan Satchell and Mike Furness.

Dick Erla making 4th try for political office

"My wife says I could sell a blind horse, and I think I could," says Dick Erla, who's out to sell himself to area voters for the fourth time.

The retired livestock and meat dealer, now 62, is running as a Democrat against State Rep. Dick Allen, Caro Republican, for the 77th state representative district seat. Both candidates are unopposed in the Aug. 5 primary and will oppose each other at the November poll.

Erla, a lifelong Democrat, has been rejected in three previous elections for various political posts, including state Senate, Tuscola County Board of Commissioners, and the Michigan Constitution Convention delegation.

"Politics is a lot like baseball," Erla said. "Look at the Tigers. They lose four games in a row, then turn around and win four in a row."

"Maybe I'll win the next four times out."

Erla, who lives at 4633 Huron Street in Cass City, was born in Hamtramck, one of 13 children of a Polish family involved in the grocery store business.

He served in the U.S. Navy, 1942-1945, as a dental prosthetic technician. It was while stationed in San Diego that he met his wife, Christine, who also was serving in the Navy at the time.

After they returned to civilian life, the Erlas operated a dairy farm at Imlay City and Erla also imported cattle from Canada in a livestock dealership business for some eight years.

Erla moved to Cass City in 1953, where he formed Erla's Inc. Packing Center, which is still operating under a son's management.

Very active in business and service organizations, Erla, over the years, has served as chairman of the Tuscola County Draft Board, commander of the local post of the American Legion, president of Rotary Club, president of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce, chairman of the Tuscola County Democratic Party.

As for his previous defeats for public office, Erla said:

"Before, when I was defeated in an election, I just figured that maybe I was too young for the job. And maybe because I was so busy with my business and other activities, I just didn't have the time to go out and campaign hard.

"Now that I'm retired, I can give it (the coming race) full time."

He knows he's facing an uphill battle.

Most of the 77th District voters are entrenched Republicans, he said. "I'm hoping that because of the issues, more people will be voting for the man, instead of the party this time."

One of the main concerns, he notes, is "Farmers are in trouble and in debt. They're looking for help. Agriculture and farming form the base in the nation's economy. I'd hate to see small farmers forced out of the industry."

Another concern, "Automation in industry is resulting in loss of a lot of jobs. Some way we're going to have to come up with something to regain those lost jobs."

On current political topics, Erla said, "I'd have to vote against the governor (James Blanchard) on the abortion issue. I don't believe in abortions, and I do sincerely believe in the right to life."

On other issues Erla's inquiries have shown public interest in currently are:

—Tougher gun laws: "I think our current laws are strong enough, but maybe there should be some curbs put on the indiscriminate purchase by anyone for pistols or revolvers, maybe some sort of registration process. A guy who is going to murder someone, or use a gun to rob a store, isn't going to be stopped by a law."

—Women's rights: "I'm for 'em. Women are just as good as I am, in fact, many are a lot better. And I support equal pay for equal work. I've hired a lot of women employees over the years. Many of them could outwork a lot of men. And most of them were very dependable and more loyal, very important to an employer."

—Taxes: "I agree with Blanchard in the way he raised the income tax to bail the state out of the red. But now that the state is back in the black, I think the state income tax should go back to its original rate."

There are a lot of people facing tough times in our district. A tax cutback could really help them out."

—Elderly: "I support our seniors in every way possible. They're the backbone of the country. Everything they've been getting through social security and other programs, they've earned and paid for. People are living longer now and a lot of them can use some help. Seniors today represent a very important and potent political force. I like that. I'm now a senior myself (even though I still feel young)."

Erla thinks state government today needs businessmen.

"I've been in business most of my life. And government is the biggest business in the state. I think sometimes that we've got too many lawyers and too many professional politicians running our government."

Erla said he'll wait until after the Aug. 5 primary election to start campaigning for the legislative seat.

"Most people in the district know me, so I don't think I'll be marching around door-to-door knocking for votes."

"I think that we're going to have a strong Democrat ticket this November with Blanchard running for governor and Robert Traxler for congress. I'm hoping this can help my campaign."

Erla is also hoping that his long-time political pals, Traxler, Senators Donald Riegler and Carl Levin, maybe even Blanchard, could stop by the area and do a little stomping for the long-suffering Cass City Democrat...a three-time bridesmaid who's never given up hoping.

DICK ERLA HOPES to mow his way to victory in the November election in his fourth try for political office.

Money, booze lost in break-in

The Cass City Police reported malicious destruction of property over $100 Saturday night.

According to the report, the video screen on the automatic teller at Mutual Savings and Loan was broken by what appears to have been a pop bottle. Police are investigating the incident.

Martin Zawilinski reported a break-in at the Cass Tavern sometime the night of Sunday, June 29. It appears that the east side door was kicked or forced open. An undisclosed amount of money and some liquor were taken.

Valerie Francis reported the theft of a radar detector out of her car while it was parked behind 6519 Main Wednesday. The detector was valued at $280.

George A. Schmidt, 37, of Otisville was arrested for QUIL by the Cass City police Saturday night. The report states that Schmidt was on Main near Seeger and was speeding and swerved across the center line.

Barbara Jamieson, 6727 Pine St., reported a break-in at her home Friday night.

According to the report, she told police that she was in her backyard watching the fireworks and came in the rear entrance to find a man standing in the kitchen area, who ran out the door shortly after she came inside. Jamieson reported nothing missing and the man left empty-handed. He was later picked up by the police and identified as Scott A. Bastion, 18, of Caro. He told police that he was looking for his car. Bastion was arrested and is lodged in the Tuscola County Jail.

Owners can see road work plans

An open house will be held at the Caro Municipal Building July 30 to explain plans and right-of-way acquisition procedures for planned widening of the two-lane M-24 stretch from Frank Street to State Street (M-81) in Caro.

Joyann Kime, Saginaw district real estate agent for the state Department of Transportation, said the open house from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. "is to allow property owners affected by the planned widening to come in and talk to us about what parts of their property might be affected, how long the construction will take, and what are the acquisition guidelines."

She said most of the planned acquisition would be small sections of land fronting on the existing roadway and a couple of buildings, a garage and other small structures.

"There has been quite a lot of discussion about the planned widening to three lanes and we've had public meetings last fall on the improvement plan," she said.

There is no estimate yet on how much the project will cost. The widening does not affect the main business district downtown.

The open house meeting with property owners will begin the acquisition process. Preliminary interviews, leading to purchase of right-of-way, will begin at the July 30 meeting.

Because no formal presentation will be given, property owners or interested citizens are invited to stop in at any time during the indicated hours.

Further information and assistance on the project is available by calling the Department's Transportation Planning Services Division, (517) 373-9534.

LaBelle crowned queen

spent quite a bit of time deliberating after each portion of the pageant. The 3 judges this year were Paula Boitel, Sherry Leipprandt and William Bond.

Each girl was awarded points based on a short interview with the judges before the pageant, a Fourth of July speech, a production number and evening gown competition.

Pauses between the entertainment were filled by Dillon with stories, announcements and at least one of his notoriously bad jokes. "He did a fabulous job. I couldn't have done it without him," said Sally Doerr, one of the coordinators of the event. Barb Doerr and Michelle Zdrojewski also put many hours into the pageant.

In a special award the contestants chose Lisa Nicholas in a secret ballot as Miss Congeniality.

Doerr said that she thought the pageant was a real success. "It was absolutely fabulous. I was very pleased with the turnout and to see the support from Cass City." She said that she was also pleased with a comment from one of the judges who told her that it was one of the most wholesome, professional and well-organized groups she had seen.

VILLAGE PRESIDENT Larry Davis crowns a smiling Katie LaBelle, winner of the queen's pageant Wednesday, July 2.

THE SALLY DOERR DANCERS must move carefully on the moving flat-bed.

Governor's task force identifies air problems

A governor's task force to identify ways to improve air service heard progress toward that end with survey results outlining a series of complaints regarding current carriers.

The voluntary survey involving 824 passengers in a 6-week period complained most about baggage problems, canceled flights and late departures.

The passengers said about 20 percent of their flights were not on time, while 43 percent said overall service was no better than average.

Simmons Airlines, the largest regional carrier in the state, led the complaint list, although passengers overall rated regional carriers about as well as national ones.

Expanded air service was reported at Traverse City, with 3 airlines initiating service from Chicago's O'Hare and Midway airports and Detroit Metro airport, and another making a Chicago link non-stop.

A new Saginaw-Grand Rapids-Minneapolis route was added, and new service between Detroit City and Cleveland Burke Lakefront airports was begun.

4th Festival is successful despite rain

One minute Main Street was wall to wall people, the next it was nearly deserted, with parade watchers running for cover. It looked like the day's activities would be cancelled, but with a little cooperation from Mother Nature, the skies cleared and the lunch hour downpour was history. Soon the park was teeming with life with the various activities going on as scheduled.

Concessions such as the Rotary Club's didn't see the success of previous years because of the noon rain, but for them, as with most, business remained steady. The Lions Club reported their annual chicken barbecue a success, selling out the 720 chicken halves. Mike Bigelow said that they had almost all the chicken cooked before the rain started and once it stopped, business remained steady. He said that the Lions also sold close to 400 bratwursts after the chicken ran out.

Sandy Nicholas, coordinator of the arts and crafts display, said that those selling told her it was the best year they've had in Cass City, with some doubling their take. She said that there were about 78 booths this year.

Something new at the festival this year was a dunk tank, an event that fell together at the last minute. The Gavel Club and Cass City High School Cheerleaders co-sponsored the event, with the cheerleaders taking the dive. Dick Wallace, coordinator of the event, said that he thought it was a money maker, with the Gavel Club and cheerleaders splitting the profits.

Fifteen teams participated in the popular mud volleyball, according to Ron Nurnberger, coordinator of the event. There were no specific team names. The winners in the men's division were Craig Tonti, Kent Wischmeyer, Tim Fahrner, Dave Johnson, Tom Dorland and Pete Werron (a Chicago resident who said it was his life's goal to get his picture in the Chronicle.) Women's division winners were Beth Howard, Kally Maharg, Kelly Dillon, Sally Lowe, Shellie Miller and Michele Fahrner. Junior team winners were the team of Ronda Behr, Jennifer Patrick, Tom Pasek, Carmon Christen, Lynn Beach, Mike Fishell, Kevin Korth, Jim Fleming, Char Durand and the team of Kelly Deering, Jane Dickinson, Terri Summers, Colleen McIntosh, Shannon McIntosh and Jennifer Palmer.

The fireworks went without a hitch and Alan Sward, coordinator of the event, said that for the amount of money spent, he felt it was a good show. He said he was pleased with the number of people that came back after the rain. "If we hadn't got clobbered by the rain I think that everything would have gone great," he said.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

Let's suppose the final tax bill kicks out IRA's for 10 million people who now enjoy this tax loophole, people who already enjoy another loophole -- namely, pensions paid by the employer.

Among the crumbs that may be thrown to the non-pension group would be deferring income under IRA's, but not the tax deduction for the original investment.

That's less than half a crumb. You can get tax deferral on US Savings bonds now -- always have been able to. Same as IRA cash-ins, you don't pay on income until you take out the money.

Why tie up your savings in an IRA, with penalties for early withdrawal, with a separate account and a trustee and all that nuisance?

If you can't deduct original investment, why not just get a zero-coupon tax-free bond? You will pay no tax at all, on capital gains or on income, nor on the value of the bond when you cash it in. You've already paid. Your original investment was after-tax, remember.

This column has long touted the virtues of zero-coupon bonds. Most rank high in quality. Your interest rate, compounded, is guaranteed for the life of the bond. Since the equivalent of interest is paid when the bond comes due, you have no annual income, and the problem of re-investing such dubs and dabs.

Lately some of the shine has rubbed off tax-free zeros. Several housing bonds have been called for obscure reasons that investors had not expected, and who lost money as a result. Indeed, a call on some Mass. Housings was so inequitable that E F Hutton refunded clients money they lost on this screwy early redemption. It isn't often that brokers make such refunds, so don't expect one next time.

A lot of us have a dim view of Housing bonds that now sell for more than the original issue value, adjusted for imputed interest earned since. Some Alaska Housings were called under an "unexpended funds" clause, and investors took a licking when bonds that had been worth 108 and 110 were called in at par.

So be sure your broker understands these things.

At this season I prefer tax-free zeros issued by utilities that usually don't have the excuse of "unexpended funds" due to cancelled projects. At least not, so far.

Let's look at what a $2,000 investment can do for you, to substitute for the IRA that may be forbidden you next year:

A 25-year bond (there were several at this writing in the Blue List of offerings):

Cost for $15,000 par value, yielding approximately 8.15%, maturing 7-1-11, $2,000. Your investment multiplies 7 1/2 times in the 25-year span. Say you're 40 now, that's at retirement time.

Take two other age brackets.

Two other examples and amounts at maturity you can buy for $2,000 now: 35 years out... 8.65% yield -- $40,000 in 2021. 15 years out -- 8% -- $7,000 in 2001.

These figures are rounded a little.

Now that inflation is not a factor, the non-savers are hard put to find an excuse not to produce these nice nest eggs. Some still rationalize that interest rates are going higher, and of course, bond prices lower, so now is not the time to buy.

Maybe so, but 8% tax free is darned attractive. I recall school bonds in the little old town of Lapeer, Mich. selling in 1947 to yield 1.62%.
