ELKLAND TOWNSHIP firemen battled 2 blazes late Sunday and early Monday morning. The first was at the Walnut Trailer Park where an empty trailer was demolished. It was reported at 12:50 a.m. The heat was so intense that it blistered the paint on an adjacent trailer. The fire is under investigation. Before answering the call to the trailer fire, firemen answered another alarm. A pickup truck owned by Kenny Brown sprung a gas leak 4½ miles east of Cass City. It was reported at 11:50 p.m. Amount of damage was not immediately available.

Millington youth run over while lying on pavement

A 20-year-old Millington man was killed early Sunday morning in a car-pedestrian accident. According to the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department, James Hugh Moran was lying in Vassar Road at approximately 4:30 a.m. when he was struck and killed by a southbound car driven by Dean C. Hanlin, 23, of Millington. Hanlin told police that he swerved to avoid hitting Moran, who was lying with his head on the center line, and almost lost control of the car. Moran was killed on impact.

It is unknown why he was lying on the road. He was taken to Caro Community Hospital, then transferred to St. Mary's for a postmortem examination. According to the report, Moran had last been seen at a pig roast just south of the scene of the accident, which happened near the intersection with Millington Road. The incident is under investigation. Deborah D. Gilliam, 27, of Deford was northbound on Kingston Road Sunday when she stopped for a stop sign at Deckerville Road and then made a left turn in front of an eastbound car driven by Larry D. Bentley, 27, of Saginaw and he was unable to stop in time, according to the report. A car driven by Scott A. Schulz, 17, of Decker was westbound on Kelly Road Monday morning when he attempted to stop for the stop sign at Cemetery Road and found he had no brakes. He went through the intersection and was struck by a southbound car driven by Patricia O. Schneeberger, 29, 5457 DeLong Road, who was unable to avoid hitting Schulz. There was a break-in at the Kingston Lumberyard, 5498 E. Sanilac Rd., sometime between closing on Thursday and Friday morning, according to the State Police in Caro. Owner John Zalut discovered the break-in at 8 a.m. Friday. It appears that entrance was gained by prying the plywood off a rear window. A quantity of tools and building supplies were taken. No dollar estimates were available. The incident is under investigation.

Parent poll planned

Deford-Evergreen student bussing plan challenged

Just when the Cass City School Board was convinced that it had made a move sure to delight parents by eliminating split classes at Deford and Evergreen School, along comes a delegation of parents in the area protesting the proposed change at the 2 elementary schools. The protests were voiced at the regular meeting of the board Monday evening at the high school. What caused the protest was a plan to transfer students between the 2 schools so that no student would be required to learn in split classes where students in more than one grade are taught in the same room by the same teacher. We proposed this change because we have been hearing complaints about the system, Dick Wallace, board member, told the parents who attended. We suggested doing it to please them. It was apparent that the proposed switch did not suit all of the parents, especially those with students that would be housed in different schools and those who would have longer bus rides under the proposed new system. One of those was Dale Churchill who would have children in different schools. After discussion it was decided to have the Deford and Evergreen principals meet with Supt. Donald Crouse to devise a poll to contact the parents in Deford and Evergreen and if the results were decisive do whatever the majority wanted. If the results are close the board will hold a special meeting to decide the issue. The factors in favor of switching students is the class size. If combined, classes would have between 22 and 30 students all in the same grade rather than up to 27 in 2 grades in the same room. A longer bus ride for a few students and students from the same family in different schools are 2 of the negatives in the plan expressed by Churchill. The board is on record as favoring whichever plan that the parents desire. Two more in the flood of requests to transfer children from Deford and Evergreen to Campbell Elementary were reviewed by the board. For the first time trustees refused the requests which was a change from actions on similar previous requests. A request to transfer Aaron Bell from Deford to Campbell because both parents work and the youngster is cared for in a Cass City home was refused. A similar action was taken on the request of the George Hawleys to moved their daughters, Billi Jo in the fourth grade, and Ann Marie in the second grade, from Evergreen to Campbell because the children might be home alone for 35 to 45 minutes if the parents' medical problems force them to leave the home. SAFETY PROBLEM Tom Herron appeared before the board to outline a safety problem with children crossing Seeger Street from the subdivision in northwest Cass City. He said that there are now 18 children attending Campbell Elementary school from the subdivision and the problem is that there is no sidewalk connecting them with the stoplight and crossing guard at Rose Street which leads to the school. Supt. Crouse is reluctant to suggest erecting another stoplight and crossing guard to service the students. A sidewalk of about 1,000 feet connecting the subdivision with the Hills and Dales Subdivision would also solve the problem but would require maintenance. The matter was taken under advisement and will be discussed at another board meeting. OTHER BUSINESS A reduction in federal funds has resulted in a reduction in the remedial reading staff from one and a half to one teacher. Crouse told the board that revenues for the program will be cut from $93,129 to $87,979 this year and that information received indicates that another cut is in store for the following year. The federal funds pay for teacher aides as well as the teacher. It is expected that the teacher will have little time to spend with the children directly, spending most of her time directing the aides. While remedial staff has been cut the special education staff will be increased to a half teacher due to increased enrollment, Crouse reported. At the June meeting the board took under advisement a request from John Maharg to spray the high school grounds for weeds. Maharg, who owns Rolling Hills Golf Course adjacent to the school, offered to pay for the spray. Investigation revealed that the cost of the spray is about $120 and the cost of application is also about $120. The board gave its approval by a 5-1 vote with Trustee Fred Matthews voting no because he felt it was not necessary for educating the children. The district's annual

O-G superintendent search beginning

The Owen-Gage school board Monday night put a "Help Wanted" sign in the window in bidding good-bye to veteran Schools Supt. Ronald G. Erickson, who will leave Aug. 15 to take the helm of the Allendale School District. Wayne Wright, high school principal, was named interim superintendent of the Owen-Gage district while the board seeks candidates, through the placement office at Central Michigan University, to fill Erickson's post. A special board meeting was scheduled for this coming Monday, July 21, 8 p.m., at Gagetown school cafeteria to set up machinery to garner at least six promising candidates outside the district and to receive local applications for the important job. Erickson, in outlining the procedure for hiring a new superintendent, suggested that the board seek candidates with at least a master's degree in professional education, with at least six years' experience, three years in administration or management positions and three years' experience in classroom teaching. The job should be posted as soon as possible, said Erickson, with a possible deadline for applicants Aug. 1.

The process of screening applicants and culling the number to six could be done by CMU placement office. The six out-district candidates, and any local district applicants, would be interviewed individually by the board, a process that could take two weeks at least. Erickson said that although he plans to leave the superintendent's job Aug. 15, he would be available to consult with if called on by the board. No salary was discussed for the new superintendent at Monday night's meeting, attended by some 20 spectators. Erickson, under terms of his current contract, receives a salary of $36,400 plus $3,640 annually as the board's chief negotiator. The superintendent's pay also includes normal fringe benefits such as health, dental, life and vision insurance. The school board also pays premiums on a yearly $100,000 life insurance policy for the superintendent. Also written into the current contract is a proviso that "the superintendent, as a condition of employment, must live in the house at 3454 6th Street, Owendale, which is provided and maintained by the board." It was explained that the additional fringe benefit of the no-cost housing for the superintendent was in lieu of salary, somewhat lower than in comparable school districts, and can save tax money. The board did not set a figure it will offer potential candidates for the superintendent's job, but indicated this would be taken up at next Monday's special session at Gagetown. It was hoped that a key representative from CMU's placement center could be contacted and attend next Monday's session to help chart the job search. Also to be taken up, for possible action, will be sale of some $550,000 in tax anticipation notes to tide the financially stripped school district over the months until next tax money comes in. The board noted that the last full payday for teachers and staff was not paid, the third time in recent months "Payless Paydays" were instituted because the district hasn't got enough money on hand to meet the payroll. Also still to be paid is a $2,000 plus interest court-ordered settlement won by Nancy Polk, a former Owen-Gage teacher who filed a grievance for unemployment compensation when she claimed she was fired. The board argued that jobless pay was not warranted since she had been laid off, not fired. She won the settlement after a three-year legal battle and interest on the court-ordered settlement is amounting to $14 a month. The decision in her favor was made May 16 in Huron Circuit Court. Monday night's board session was a reorganizational meeting at which incumbent board president Ron Good was retained for another year; Joe Warack was named vice-president; Mary Ann Abbe reelected secretary; Jack Brinkman reelected treasurer; William Kretzschmer named assistant board secretary, and Pat Goslin named assistant treasurer. Mary Ann Abbe was named a delegate to the Huron County School Association. The Knights of Columbus of Gagetown and Cass City presented a check for $500 to the school board to be spent for computers and hardware for the special education program. At hand for the presentation and representing the K of C were Pat Davis, Grand Knight; Bob Gengler, past Grand Knight; Ed LaBelle, K of C lodge treasurer, and Thomas Reehl, K of C trustee. Wayne Wright, high school principal, was given board approval to buy 37 new math texts and 35 physics books to replace current out-dated and worn-out books. Wright also paid a belated compliment to the Owendale Women's Club for planting flowers and maintaining them in the high school's circle bed. "I drove past one night and noticed club women hard at work, hoeing, raking and planting the new flowers that looked wonderful during graduation week," said Wright. The board directed Wright to send a letter to the club commending the women for their efforts. In addition to accepting Erickson's resignation "with regret," the board also accepted resignation of Catherine L. Kropewnicki, high school special education teacher who also coached the girls' basketball team. She has accepted a new job with the Huron County Skill Center. She also submitted an application to keep the coaching job, but the board has not yet had time to post the position.

Years ago someone calculated that it's possible to make 4,367,428 typographical errors on a newspaper page. Perhaps the advent of computerized equipment has diminished the odds, but one thing remains constant. The 4,367,427 mistakes that weren't made don't count. Attention is inevitably focused on the misprint.

Just for fun, we've recorded some of the boo-boos that were caught somewhere along the line at The Chronicle...the typos that didn't get away. Whew!

Weddings seem to be especially susceptible, for example:

--The bride wore a crescent shaped hairpiece of sweetpeas, green daisies and baby's breath and carried a crescent shaped hairpiece of sweetpeas, green daisies and baby's breath.

Other brides: --carried long stemmed roses with daisies, --had a skirt of polyester and wood, --a bodice encrusted with lice and pearl accents, --wore an organza gown, derailed by lace, --had a burst skirt that fell from a lifted waist.

Adding to the poor bride's frustration: --the soloist sang "Time in a Battle," --the flower girl dropped pedals in the aisle, --the groom's moth wore a peach gown, --the best man was brother of the groom, --dinner and deception followed the wedding, --the reception was attempted by 350 persons.

Little wonder that "the fate of the wedding is indefinite." At one wedding, the bride wore a long white satin gown.

Health topics could have been a bit lighter, albeit confusing, had we printed: --girdles and bras can cause a rash, --Mary was released after a 10-day stay at a Saginaw restaurant and is recuperating at home, --the disease is found most often in persons 20140 years of age, --Mrs. F. has been a patient at St. Luke's Hospital for the past few eeks, --there is a program for physically handicapped citizens, --prostrate trouble is common in men over 5f --children should be tested against whooping cough, --if your doctor suspects gallstones, he may order certain texts.

Among the meetings covered were some by the democrats, the Ugly senior citizens and the Untied Methodist women.

At other noteworthy meetings: --Irene O. distributed cookbooks from pigeon coop, --a committee was in charge of arraignments, --the women met with men as quests, --local fabric sore owners were featured, --the group voted to purchase Julie R., --cards were singed to be sent to members who are ill, --the crows was small because of the weather, --Mrs. Doug B. was the door prize.

Possibly an indication of the desperate financial plight of school districts: The principal said should the board adopt a policy of stealing, he would have no problem with that.

Next time you find a typo that got past us proof readers, remember, benevolently, that we didn't print: Costumed actors will dramatize the story why the choir sins between the scenes.

"If It Fitz..."

Women can hench

By Jim Fitzgerald

I'm crazy about Bailey Quarters. My passion for her has something to do with Gabby Hayes and Smiley Burnette, who were henchmen in the cowboy movies of my youth. Quarters is a henchwoman on the TV sitcom "WKRP in Cincinnati," currently in reruns.

That is the first time I've seen the word "henchwoman." It's not in the dictionary. A henchman is often defined as "a trusted follower" or "a right-hand man." Can't a woman be a trusted follower serving at the right hand of a leader?

During the same years that Hayes and Burnette were movie henchmen, Patsy Kelly and Eve Arden were movie henchwomen. But no one ever called them that. Then — as now — there was no feminine equivalent for "henchman." You had to call them "best friends" as in: "Betty Grable's best friend wasn't pretty enough to get the leading man, so she had to settle for Ronald Reagan."

I'm not suggesting that Bailey Quarters and Gabby Hayes should be called "henchpersons." I hate those sexless words. I'm saying that women can hench as well as men, and they have a perfect civil right to be called henchwomen.

Yes, I'm aware that men who hench have not always been regarded favorably. Another dictionary definition of "henchmen" is "an unscrupulous, often violent member of a gang." Early in his acting career, Humphrey Bogart was Jimmy Cagney's henchman.

In prissy circles, it may be suggested that women followers have never been called henchwomen because it would be rude to use an often-derogatory term in describing a woman. Phooey. That attitude is just as sexist as saying Roy Rogers would never replace Gabby Hayes with Patsy Kelly because, no matter how trusting she might be, Patsy would still cry too easily once a month.

If all sexes are ever to have truly equal rights, it must be acknowledged that women can hench both good and bad — they can be as trusted as Gabby Hayes, but also as unscrupulous as the early Bogart.

Anyway, I always thought Roy Rogers and Gene Autry were too good to be true. Everyone was supposed to greatly admire them, but I took perverse pleasure in preferring their henchmen. I always regarded myself as a trusted follower — a private in the Foreign Legion, never a sergeant — with no heroically stuffy pretensions. It was much easier to identify with the foolish leering of Gabby Hayes than with the simpy posturing of a grown man who sang love songs to his horse.

Similarly, when "WKRP in Cincinnati" first hit the channels, everyone was supposed to greatly admire Jennifer Marlowe, the startlingly blonde character played by Loni Anderson. She got all the sexy publicity and even dated Burt Reynolds. No one paid much attention to Bailey Quarters as played by...you don't remember her name, do you?

It's Jan Smithers, I don't know what happened to her after WKRP folded. Apparently she now exists only in reruns, while Loni Anderson has been all over the place in absolutely dreadful TV shows and movies. It's enough to make a henchman like me sob and break a window with a remote control device. As mentioned, my affection for Bailey Quarters has something to do with the movie cowboy henchmen of my youth. She is a trusted follower who, if confronted with the unbelievable charms of Burt Reynolds, would have sense enough to laugh out loud.

But there's something else that also has to do with my high admiration for Bailey Quarters: She is completely gorgeous. In sweat shirt and jeans, she makes the over-decollete, super-simozoned Jennifer Marlowe look like a high-speed collision between a beauty salon and a cathouse.

I love my wife, but oh you henchwoman.

Rabbit Tracks

by John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

There are probably more folks around who don't remember when Detroit Edison had an office in Cass City than those that do.

Sunday the Haires spent the day wishing for the good old days when you could call Herb Ludlow and get action on a problem.

Sunday we spent the day trying to call the Enterprise number that is listed for emergency service as the power coming to the house was sharply reduced resulting in a warm refrigerator and no television and lights that alternated between below normal to very, very dim.

We started calling at 6:30 a.m. and quit at about 9 p.m. and no one answered the phone all day.

For $125 you can buy a horse. For $75 you bring a burro home. They will be offered for sale at Battle Creek by the United States Department of Interior Aug. 15-17.

These are young, healthy animals that have been inspected by a veterinarian.

The kicker is that they are wild animals taken from overgrazed public lands in the west and breaking them is up to the new owners.

Ron Erickson, the tempestuous, controversial superintendent is ending his stormy career at Owendale-Gagetown Public Schools.

The 11-year battle for school property will continue and the new head man will have to decide whether or not to continue the battle in the courts which has cost the district $500,000 or more over the years.

For anyone connected with Cass City, Erickson was a tough man to do business with. He refused to answer phone calls from the Chronicle to explain his reasons for spending the taxpayers' money.

On the other hand, he did keep the district afloat when it appeared destined to fold and all of the district residents who wanted to maintain Owen-Gage as a viable school district should congratulate him for that.

Frustrations of the news business: W.E. Walpole, chairman of the board at Walbro Corporation, entertained retirees from Walbro Corporation at a picnic at his home on Pringle Road and the Chronicle was there to take pictures.

For an undiscovered reason, the roll of film with the picnic pictures came out blank.

Some, like the trailer fire picture we were able to re-shoot. Others, like the picnic picture, were lost forever.

Job survey completed

GMI Engineering and Management Institute of Flint joined the Thumb Community Growth Alliance of Marlette to complete a several months long survey aimed at providing area business leaders with information and help in designing employee training programs.

The needs of business and industry in the Thumb area regarding the types of job skills required were spelled out in the survey, said Carl J. Osentoski, of the economic development group.

"It was a challenge working out the details on the project and the results will help us provide better and more efficient technical training to our business communities," Osentoski said.

The Haire Net

When it comes to frivolous court cases, it's hard to pinpoint which are the most senseless among those that are clogging court dockets and making cases of significance wait one, 2 or 3 years to get to trial.

While it may not be the most asinine to come before a judge in these days when suits for anything you can name, no matter how far out, are commonplace, there certainly is one that has generated the most publicity in recent years. It is, of course, the case in New York state about the 50-year-old law that allows men, not women, to appear topless in public.

In case you missed it, the case started when 7 women demonstrated against the law in a Rochester, New York, park by peeling of their shirts before a crowd of jeering spectators.

A district attorney is pressing charges and the women vow to take their case to the state's highest court if found guilty in the lower court, where they are awaiting trial.

The women maintain the law violates the constitution's guarantee of equal protection for men and women.

That may be. Who can tell what our courts will decide when opinions are reversed when the personnel of the courts are changed? It doesn't take a court case to know that the 7 are guilty of bad taste and, a cynic might say, stripping in search of publicity.

The whole affair would now have been long forgotten if the district attorney had just ignored the whole thing. Exposing the mammary gland quickly becomes old hat. A decade ago in California, topless bars were everywhere and were a novelty only to visitors. In one that we entered there were plenty of customers and all the women who worked there were topless. The patrons' attention was riveted...on a football game on the tube. No one paid the slightest attention to the women working topless.

The whole affair would be ludicrous except for a couple of sobering facts. The first is that taxpayers' money will be used as this case wends its way through the courts. The second is that it clogs our courts and serves no useful purpose.

When it is all over, the women could be assessed a minor fine. Women who believe that above the waist nudity is disgusting will continue to regard it that way. Those who don't will make personal decisions on how much clothing they wear in public and act accordingly.

They don't need a court case to decide the issue.

O-G school superintendent Ron Erickson to leave post

Ronald G. Erickson, veteran of an 11-year ongoing boundary battle with neighboring school districts, leaves his post as superintendent of the Owen-Gage School District Aug. 15 to take a similar post at Allendale.

He submitted his resignation to the Owen-Gage school board officially Monday night, but news of his leaving hit the press last Friday.

His resignation was "accepted with regret" by the board, which immediately set in motion efforts to hire a replacement for the $36,400 post.

"I believe that had it not been for Ron Erickson this school district would not exist today," Jack Brinkman, school board treasurer, was quoted as saying on hearing news of Erickson's decision to leave.

"We're going to have a hard time replacing him," Brinkman added.

Erickson, in officially announcing his resignation at Monday night's board session, held at Owen-Gage High School library, Owendale, said:

"In the 11 years I and my wife, Kay, have been here, our lives have been much changed. We hope and sincerely wish for your continued prosperity. We will always be proud to be from Owendale..."

Erickson's 11-year tenure at Owen-Gage has often been stormy.

He came here in 1975 and found himself and his school district embroiled in boundary disputes with neighboring Cass City and Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port school districts.

Millions of dollars in tax values were at stake when in 1976 the Michigan Department of Education approved transferring the 5,800 acre "Goslin parcel" from Owen-Gage to Cass City, on the owner's request.

Erickson, described as an "aggressive young superintendent" when he took over the Owen-Gage post, went on the attack, labeling the transfer of land value as well as the loss of students to the Cass City district as an illegal raid.

Verbal fireworks erupted between the fiery Erickson and neighboring school officials that eventually resounded in the halls of the state legislature as well as the U.S. Supreme Court.

While still waging an unsuccessful fight with the state board of education over the Goslin parcel transfer, the small Owen-Gage district was stung by another property transfer, with another large-scale loss of property values and students to Cass City.

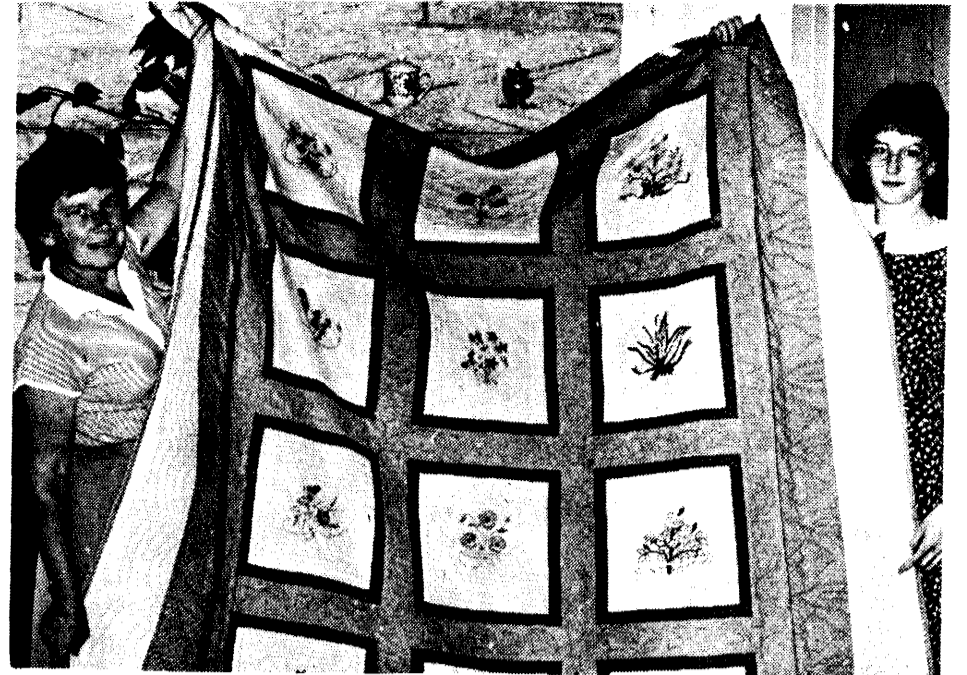

This involved the 1,400-acre "Belk parcel," which, at Erickson's strident urging, the district appealed all the way to the supreme court. The high court refused to hear the case. Reports were that some $500,000 was spent in the long, unsuccessful legal battles.

There was one success in the seemingly endless battle over property transfers. A dispute over property boundaries with Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port was settled earlier this year. It gave back to Owen-Gage a portion of property that had been transferred away.

Erickson will succeed Robert Elkins, who retired, as schools superintendent at Allendale district, located in Ottawa County near Grand Rapids.

Erickson described the Allendale district as similar in size to Owen-Gage, where a lot of local interest is centered on the schools. He also said the move will bring him and his wife closer to their families, who live in Indiana.

Sewage costs less for Cass City

Dear John:

Your comments in "Rabbit Tracks" last week concerning the comparative costs of the Cass City sewage disposal plant and the new Vassar plant are misleading. The fact of the matter is that Cass City built the first major new sewage disposal plant in the Thumb at a total cost of six million dollars. The residents of Cass City paid only twenty percent of the cost of the plant and financed it over a 40 year period with an FHA government subsidized rate of five percent.

The Vassar plant, on which residents will pay a greater percentage, by your own statement is financed at the rate of six percent. I am sure that the Vassar residents will be paying for the improvement for a long time, just as the Cass City residents will.

It seems to me that this is a clear indication that it does not pay to wait. Rather, with government mandated facilities, the sooner that the community and creates the resource, the less its total cost.

By the way, we were also ahead of Caro which is just in the process of constructing its new plant.

Sincerely,
Bert Althaver

Ridges take first prize in a Toledo quilt show

In the field of prize-winning quilting, Phyllis Ridge and her daughter Susan stand out.

They came home with a coveted first prize in the embroidered quilt division of the recent Glass City Quilt Show held in Toledo.

Master quilters and craftsmen from all over the Midwest competed for prizes in several quilt divisions.

The Ridge entry -- a queen-bed-size quilt with distinctive embroidered flowers of all sorts and colors set on a seafoam green background -- was judged the best of 150 entries in the embroidered quilt class.

"Oh, you're not going to write about it. How did you find out?" Mrs. Ridge, wife of George D. Ridge, 6611 E. Milligan Road, said when asked for an interview.

"All I did was make the background quilt," she said. "Susan did all the embroidery. It probably took her three years in all, em-broidering in her spare time. She should get all the credit."

Susan, 20, a junior at the University of Toledo who is home for the summer and working for Walbro Corp. in Caro, started embroidering when she was 16.

"The quilt isn't perfect by any means," her mother hastily explained.

"The judges at the show give a thorough critique on every entry. Oftentimes it's sort of cruel. But you learn a great deal from the critiques."

Phyllis was intrigued with several of the appliqued quilt entries. "They really take the prizes."

Displaying these artistically designed quilts at such competitive shows is a science in itself.

"No one should touch them without wearing soft gloves. The oil on one's hands might mar them. It's about the same as handling an expensive oil painting."

Phyllis said she first entered a quilt in the Glass City competition three years ago. "Didn't win a prize, but I sure learned a lot," she said.

The Ridges' prize-winning quilt will be retired from competition. "It's going to Susan. And she'll use it as a bedspread, won't put it up on the wall."

Phyllis is displaying "a couple" of her quilt creations at the quilt show and demonstration during the week's Downtown Sidewalk Days.

Committee considers 4th fete a success this year

After the Fourth of July festival, the committee took some time to catch their breath and regrouped Tuesday night, July 8, to evaluate the success or failure of the day.

Residents will be pleased to know that the Cass City Fourth of July celebration was considered a success and the committee discussed plans for next year.

Each event was evaluated in terms of the number of both participants and spectators, as well as location and finances.

There were very few complaints to report. Most people had a good time and many events showed a profit.

The tickets sales from the Irish Gaels made approximately $300, according to coordinator Margo Donahue. The committee agreed that they were well received and worth asking back next year.

Gary Jones reported that despite the rain the parade went well and was less expensive than last year. "It cost probably one-third as much," he said. He pointed out that some of last year's attractions which cost the festival money, such as Miss Michigan and some musical groups, were missing this year.

The lack of bands was noticed by many and Jones said that the problem is that they are booked months in advance. He said he started looking in February and even that was not soon enough. This year Jones plans to start earlier. "Just give me about 6 weeks," he said.

It was concluded that all of the events in the park were successful. Committee member Lota Hartel said that the Civil War encampment which was new this year always had a lot of people at it. The pet show had a good crowd and bingo reported a profit. Sandy Nicholas said that the softball tournament went well. "It was organized and professional," she commented. Nicholas also ran the teen dance and said that over 400 teens showed up and they made over $500 for the festival.

Of course some minor bugs were discussed, such as location changes, the need for earlier planning and advertising for some events. Other events, such as the bed race, can still be expanded upon. One suggestion for next year is to plan more activities in the evening hours.

Bills and money are still trickling in, so finances are not concrete, but it is expected that the festival made money.

New moneymakers this year were the T-shirts and place mats, according to Geraldine Prieskorn.

The committee had some suggestions for new events and can always use ideas and people to help. They will be starting the planning early this year, with a meeting in November.

I'm surrounded by two lunatics on this page. Who's that guy leering at me under a slicker nom de plume?

Slicker? What's that ... a moniker or a calling? He sounds mean. He thinks too much. Such men are dangerous.

Who needs him to step on our brains to make us think about mundane and specious topics he deems important, but don't amount to a hill of beans.

And this other bawoz who writes that "Dear Boss" drivelt. What a thief of frivolity.

I've known a flock of scribes like him who never let the facts stand in the way of a good yarn. But he spins the yarn out so far it eclipses itself. Talk about a lack of veracity.

I've never met those two bozos around town. What do they do, climb through the back window late at night, scrawl their imaginative nonsense, and then steal out of town before daylight?

What gets my craw is that advice that "Dear Boss" writing twirp spewed out the other day about NEVER piercing a steak before grilling it.

Anyone with two turns of the brain stem knows you ALWAYS poke a fork in a steak before grilling it!

It lets out the gas! I'm telling you, we're playing with fire with those two bozos running rampant. Those birds breed their ilk like flies.

The City Slicker

I met a very successful executive once in my travels who was rare and probably an enigma to us common folk.

If you could get into his executive suite, high above Manhattan, you'd probably find him staring out of his window, peering down over a muddy and busy river that ran through the town.

And, if you had enough courage to ask him a question, you'd be rewarded with either a grunt, or silence — both non-translatable.

He wasn't a big man in stature, nor particularly handsome. He emanated no electric sparks.

He wasn't taken with his own importance.

But when he spoke, the sidewalks far below his executive office shuddered. And things happened.

Maybe that's why he didn't speak often.

His companies flourished. They produced proud products. He touched gratuitously a multitude of people. And it was good.

The Henry Ford II exposure, and the so-called scandals affecting big-name families that some feel rule the country, notwithstanding. He was immune to that nonsense.

If you could describe him in any short, intelligible phrase, it might be: "He did his job, well!"

Looking out the big window of his executive suite, high above Manhattan.

County to celebrate birthday

Plans to involve Tuscola County residents in special days marking Michigan Sesquicentennial ceremony, which began officially June 14 and continues through Dec. 31, 1987, were formed at a July 9th meeting held at the 9th Municipal Office.

The meeting was chaired by Dorr Wiltse of Caro. Representing the district covering our area were Harold Perry, Jan Peter of Kingston, Martha Putnam, Novesta Township, and Jack Esau of Cass City.

It was brought out at the meeting that Jan 26, 1837, was the date that Michigan was admitted into the union as a state.

The area Sesquicentennial committee urged that all communities have special ways each can mark the occasion.

A video tape show, lasting about 20 minutes, is being made by Jim McCann of Caro. It will cover the history of Tuscola County and all districts in the county will get a copy to show school children, service clubs and organizations.

Churches are being asked to make special observances of the 150th birthday of the state in services Sunday, Jan. 25.

Two Thumb area businessmen have joined the board of directors of The Cass City State Bank, it was announced this week by the board of directors of the bank.

The new directors are Kenneth G. McLaren, of Sandusky, the owner of an insurance agency, and Richard N. Sykes, of Vassar, a railroad salvage operator.

50 participate in Cub Scout Olympics

More than 50 boys and adult leaders took part Saturday, July 12, in the annual Cub Scouts Olympics held at Cass City Recreation Park.

Cass City Cub Pack 3594 was well represented with 13 Cubs participating in various events. Dave Hoard, Jim Mastie and Cubmaster Connie Iwankovitch served as timekeepers.

Eight-to-nine-year-old Cubs competed in the 30-yard dash, a sack race, a tire roll, ball throw for distance, ball throw for accuracy and an obstacle course.

Ten-year-olds took part in the 50-yard dash, shot put, long jump, javelin throw, rope walk and discus throw.

Nathan Mastie won a fourth place trophy in the eight-year-old division, and Scott Iwankovitch won a first place trophy for the nine-year-old division.

A downpour at 10 a.m. interrupted the activities for a short while, but didn't dampen the boys' spirits. They got an early box lunch and were back competing in field events at 10:45 a.m.

The day's activities were completed by 1 p.m. with ice cream sundaes passed out and a closing ceremony.

Stars I cop all-star game

Four stalwarts of the undefeated Reds led their all-star team to a 16-8 victory July 8 in a game with star players made up from other teams who played in the recently completed Girls' Little League Conference schedule this summer.

The Reds, who claimed undisputed title in the league with a perfect no-loss season, contributed Leann LaRoche, Beth Powell, Jandi Hillaker and Jan Erla to the Stars I team.

Leann LaRoche garnered three hits and drove in five RBIs; Beth Powell got two hits and one RBI; Jandi Hillaker got two hits and drove in two runners.

The Reds' Jan Erla started on the hill for the Stars I team, giving up no runs, but three hits, walking one and striking out one in a three-inning stint. She was followed to the mound by Bobbi Fischer, of the third-place Hawks, who gave up six hits, five runs and walked three in her three-inning stay.

Leslie Navarro, of the fifth place Pirates, gave up three hits and three runs while walking six and striking out one to finish out the game.

Navarro also got three hits in the winning cause.

Completing the lineup for Stars I were Jodi Benitez, Pat Bouck and Christy Rutkoski, of the Hawks; Kim Morley, Dee Jackson and Ronda Fee of the Pirates; Alex Pakonen and Stephanie Leiterman of the Tigers.

Standouts for the losing Stars II team were Missy Nicholas of the Tigers, with two hits and two RBIs; Sandy Lockard of the Lions, who got two hits, as did Brandy Eason of the Cubs, who also added three RBIs.

Shannon Sapien of the Lions started on the mound for Stars II and gave up three hits, four runs, walked four and struck out two in her three-inning stint.

Brandy Eason hurled two innings, giving up five hits, six runs, and walking five. Terri Gibson of the Braves hurled three innings, giving up five hits, four runs, walking three and striking out four. Sue Papp finished up with one inning, giving up two hits, two runs, walking two and striking out one.

A picnic and awards presentation was held following the game. Each girl received a medallion and the champion Reds were awarded pins.

Elkland zoning meet uneventful

The Elkland Township Zoning Board held a public hearing Wednesday, July 9, to discuss its proposed new rural zoning ordinance.

"We had the entire zoning board and our consultant at the township hall to answer questions about the plan, but not one person showed up to talk about it," said

David J. Milligan, township supervisor, who said prior to the hearing he didn't expect much of a turnout.

The new zoning plan is to replace the current ordinance originally adopted in 1971 which is outdated and in conflict with recent legislation and court rulings, Milligan said.

With no one showing up to object to the new zoning plan, the board agreed to submit it to the Tuscola County Zoning and Planning Commission for its approval.

The county zoners meet later this month and Milligan expects no difficulty in getting it approved at that level.

If approved by the county zoners, the plan is re-submitted to the Elkland Township Board for its final approval. Then there will be another 30 days or so before it can take effect, after it is published several times in local media and legal papers, Milligan said.

The new zoning plan doesn't make "any drastic" changes in the current ordinance, Milligan explained.

Both he and Howard Kunding, deputy director of the Area Development Office, part of Saginaw Area Growth Alliance, who helped draft the new zoning plan, said any changes will not affect any current tax or assessment procedures.

The new plan has five separate zoning districts, while the current ordinance has three.

The current Agricultural -- Residential district designation was broken into separate Agricultural and Residential districts in the new plan.

A new Forestry Conservation district was added in the new plan. It covers swampland and woodland not suitable for farming or residential development.

The new plan also expands the Commercial district slightly on both sides of the district.

Dear Boss:

New smoker caused nothing but grief

Dear Boss: My outdoor grillery menu and recipe annotation is on permanent hold.

It's a sordid and tearful story I'm about to unfold. You remember my telling you about my new miniature smoker? Nothing but grief!

It took me two days, at least, to assemble the smoker after I finally got it out of the package it came with. Naturally, I ended up with my usual collection of interesting-looking nuts, bolts, screws, fasteners, and other odd doodads that the packagers add to the merchandise to confuse and mystify the assemblers. (I'm up to their game!)

This smoker, as I said, it's miniature like a toy, has a small electric burner plate that you plug in to get started. Atop this burner plate goes a small - tiny little - pan which you fill with sawdust and tiny fibers of cedar and other aromatic dried wood which makes the smoke. The smoke smokes the food, fish, eggs, mushrooms, anything edible. If you get the picture.

Simple! Leafing through one of the wife's antique magazines, I came across an article extolling smoked turkey, as it was prepared back in pioneer days. Naturally, my curiosity, and appetite, were both whetted.

I selected Sunday, a normally calm and placid day of the week, to prepare my own smoked turkey, utilizing my brand new miniature smoker.

My wife was away on her periodic sabbatical (she takes the kids with her now when I'm home on weekends) and I was virtually uninterrupted as I set about my preparations.

The turkey itself poses no problem in being prepared for the smoker. Just turn it upside down under the faucet and wash out the inside.

Turkeys come with a package of gizzard, heart, liver, etc. I've found it best to toss this out. There are no directions on what to do with this package. Better safe than sorry. Throw it out!

Most smokers, like my miniature smoker, come with an insert cage-like thing on which the smoker places the things he wants to smoke.

The book, that came with the smoker, says you put the cedar chips and sawdust into the pan, plug in the electric burner plate, slide in the pan, put the turkey in its cage inside, put on the lid and wait six hours until it's done.

(Boss: It's very important to follow directions right to the letter!)

Harrrrrrumpf! Well, I watched that miniature smoker for at least 20 minutes...and nothing happened! No smoke! No nothing!

No time to panic, I told myself. The cedar chips and sawdust must be wet or something.

What was needed was a little helper. Maybe some gas or something.

No gas around. Used it up last time I (wife) cut the lawn. Found an old jar filled with grain alcohol that one of the kids used to pickle a frog for science class.

Now alcohol runs race cars, I reasoned. Better than gas!

After carefully wetting the cedar chips and sawdust with the alcohol, it came to mind that if it took six hours to smoke the turkey I had plenty of time to drive out to the golf course and get in maybe an entire 18 holes before the bird was done.

But then, I reasoned, the alcohol-soused cedar chips and sawdust might burn too quickly.

My long experience in grilling steaks has taught me the importance of never over-cooking.

I needed something to dilute the burnability of the alcohol-soused cedar chips and sawdust.

Voila! I found a container of used motor oil I'd forgotten to dump after the last time I (wife) changed the oil in the sedan.

A topping of this over the pan of alcohol-impregnated cedar chips and sawdust liberally applied. And the pan then placed in position over the burner and the electric plug inserted.

Off to the golf course.

Boss, you'll never believe the chaos I walked into when I returned from the golf course. I never saw so many mad, incoherent and belligerent people - among them my uptight neighbor whose fence I had set the smoker against.

The smoker - what was left of it - was in shards of artistically fused and mangled metal. No one knew where the turkey went. I think I heard someone say he saw it rocketing across the neighbor's swimming pool.

The smoker's lid was never found, at least to my knowledge. A metal type object like a spear was seen in a telephone pole 2 blocks down the way. I avoid that area.

My uptight neighbor shouted something about seeing his lawyer. Fence damages.

Darn! Sure wished I'd been there when that smoker exploded. Must have been something.

Anyway, to the gist of this memo:

Considering the expenses, not to mention the aggravation, I've decided to put on hold any more outdoor cookery.

But, just between you and me, Boss, do you think I might have inadvertently come across a new solid rocket propellant? Think what NASA could do with this information.

It could be something big...BIG!

C.C. police respond to 3-car accident Friday

A car driven by 85-year-old Iva B. Smith, 6327 Houghton Street, was westbound on Main Street when she turned south on Leach Street into the path of a car driven by Freida E. Armstead, 43, of Saginaw at 4:10 p.m. Friday, according to the Cass City police.

Smith told police that she saw Armstead but thought that she had time to make the turn. Armstead said that she didn't expect the car to turn. According to the report, Smith did not have her turn signal on. When Armstead was hit she bounced into a car driven by John Wood, 58, 4644 Oak St., who was stopped on Leach Street waiting for traffic to clear on Main Street. Smith sought her own treatment in the mishap. Armstead was taken to Hills and Dales Hospital, where she was treated and released. Two passengers in the Armstead vehicle, Ralph, 15, and Mae Armstead, 79, were slightly injured. Another passenger, Amanda Pogroszewski, 4, was uninjured. Smith was cited for failure to yield right of way.

A patio umbrella valued at $100 was taken from the Clare Patton residence at 4454 Ale St. Saturday. It was found in the alley behind 6730 Pine St., damaged beyond repair.

Sue Ann Gibson, 4394 Oak St., reported that a 15x25 door glass was broken sometime between 10:30 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. Sunday. There was also toilet paper in the front yard trees.

Tony Yost, 27, of Decker told police that his pickup was vandalized Friday night in the Charmont parking lot. Someone broke off the mirror and kicked dents in the door. Police estimate the damage in excess of $200.

Iva E. Rockwell, 61, of Snover was westbound on Cass City Road, a half mile east of Gilbert Road, at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday, when she struck a deer.

Terry A. Hillaker, 29, of Bay City was eastbound on DeLong Road, a half mile east of Cemetery Road, Monday afternoon when a deer jumped into the path of his car.

Commissioners to monitor general fund monthly

At the regular meeting of the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners, Tuesday, July 8, the board approved the monthly monitoring of the general fund contingency account, which is something the board has not done before, according to Commissioner Royce Russell. He said this is an example of the new controller at work. Knowing the balance will be a lot of help, he said. "The contingency fund is for items that come up which are not budgeted and it is easy to lose track of the balance," he explained. With a monthly monitor, the board will know exactly what is in the account and what they can take out, he added.

In other board action, Mary Ann Vandemark, director of the Human Development Commission, appeared before the board and presented a Commission on Aging proposal which was supported by the group. This proposal and the Thumb Area Commission on Aging proposal will now go before Area 7, Russell said.

The board hired a new officer at the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department. Laurence Eaton started July 5 as a full-time certified officer.

The board also approved the extension of the general office clerk position in the Co-op Extension office until the end of the year to help Betty Pattullo handle the caseload of the dislocated farmer program, which has met with quite a success.

A telephone answering machine is being purchased for the animal shelter at a cost of $99.95. Russell explained that often there is no one in the office because they are out in the trucks. An answering machine would be less expensive than hiring someone to man the telephone. The money is coming out of the animal shelter's budget.

Bollingers study at B. Graham school

It was one of the greatest experiences of our lives," said Mrs. C. William Bollinger, returning home from a week-long study at the Billy Graham School of Evangelism at Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

Rev. Bollinger and his wife, of Kingston United Methodist Church, both received diplomas following their graduation from the course.

Some 500 persons attended the course from the 48 states, Canada and two foreign countries, Mrs. Bollinger said.

"I think our visit to the Graham Center was one of the biggest highlights. We went into a large room where giant mirrors created an illusion as if you were actually walking amongst the clouds, as various religious sayings and scripture evolved."

"One of the more personal things to me occurred when I asked one of the teachers about a special concern of mine," she said.

"I've seen so many people preparing to go out and play golf, or go fishing, or some other place on Sundays rather than go to church. And I asked the teacher how I might try and get them to go to church."

"He told me right out that I shouldn't intrude on their leisure, but should try and express my faith in such a way that some may want to attend church, to witness the power of talking with God, someone greater than they."

"It answered my personal question," Mrs. Bollinger recently was certified as a Conference Lay Leader by the Detroit Conference of the United Methodist Church and now, on request, can substitute for an ailing or vacationing clergyman at area churches.

Crippled killdeer

Ground nesting birds sometimes use good acting to protect their chicks, says Ranger Rick magazine. For example, a female killdeer will lure a predator away from the nest by acting as though it's crippled. After it entices its enemy safely away from the nest, the killdeer simply flies away.

Deer size of dog

The small irresistible deer, a native of Asia, is about the same size as a dog, has large eyes and tiny antlers, and it barks just like its rival.

Knights say it's the people that make square dancing fun

by Cymbre Sommerville

There was spinning and swishing of brightly colored skirts as couples of all ages moved gracefully along the floor, hands clasped in those of their partners at the 35th National Square Dance Convention.

Two Cass City couples attended the convention held June 27-29 at Indianapolis. Ephraim and Mary Knight have been square dancing for 32 years and this is the sixth year they have attended the national convention. Fin and Juanita Burk have been dancing 9 years and this is their third year at the convention, which is held in a different city and state each year.

Both the Knights and Burks climbed aboard one of the 2 buses which left Frankenmuth Wednesday, June 25, to arrive at Indianapolis' Convention Center.

It was wall to wall people in almost all of the Convention Center's 30,000 square feet, and they were dancing everywhere but in the hallways. The scene was far removed from the stereotyped barn dance decorated with haystacks and sawdust and the penetrating odor of livestock.

Women dressed in flouncing tiered skirts and men garbed in western shirts and fancy ties spun and wove patterns across the dance floor. They were square dancing, round dancing and clogging. Square dancing is usually done in squares of 8 people. Round dancing on the other hand is the ballroom equivalent of square dancing, with couples dancing together. "We just square dance," said Mrs. Knight. Mrs. Burk said that she went to a clogging room. This is a newer dance, somewhat like tap, which is done from the waist down. Her husband, who is a square dance caller, attended caller seminars to help fine tune his skills.

The convention is simply for the pleasure of the dance. There are no contests or trophies, no anxiety or need to be the best. This creates an easy-going atmosphere for all.

Both couples love to dance but they say it is the people who make it all worthwhile for them. "You have to like people," said Mrs. Knight. "Everyone is so friendly, you can dance with anyone," she added. She explained that most dancers come as couples but there is a solo room for those who come alone and are looking for a partner.

"We enjoy being with people...it's just wonderful," said Mrs. Burk. "You make such wonderful friends from all over the country. The minister at the invocation said that if the world was as friendly a place as this convention it would be a better place to live," she remarked.

Nearly the entire country as well as 13 foreign nations were represented at the convention. "There were people from Japan, France and New Zealand," Mrs. Burk said, just naming a few of the countries there.

She said that an official count Saturday recorded 27,176 dancers, aged 3 to well over 80.

At 6 p.m. Saturday night there was a parade of states with representatives of the participating state decked out in state colors. "Michigan wore blue and yellow. It was beautiful to see," said Mrs. Burk.

Convention spots have already been lined up for the next 4 years. Next year it will be in Texas and both couples would like to go

"We're already making tentative plans for next year," said Mrs. Knight. She said that you have to get your reservations in as soon as possible.

Both the Knights and Burks dance on a regular basis. "We dance twice a week and we also belong to a square dancing camping unit in the summer," said Mrs. Knight. She said that dancing keeps them busy but they have other interests such as their families. "They often call first to see if we'll be home," she remarked.

The Knights have traveled to a smaller international convention for the past 15 years. Locally they have helped clubs start out in Cass City, Bad Axe, Sebewaing, Caseville and Caro. "We were honored in a national square dance group as Square Angels--those who help people with lessons," she said.

The Burks also dance on a regular basis and enjoy it as much as the veteran Knights.

It may sound like all that square dancing can get very tiring, but not so. "We find it relaxing," Mrs. Knight said surprisingly, "...and it keeps the mind and body in shape."

THE KNIGHTS (left) and the Burks, dressed to dance, take time out from square dancing Friday evening.

Joslyn sentences 4 in circuit court

Judge Patrick Joslyn accepted a plea of guilty by a Marlette man to malicious destruction of property under $100 in Tuscola County Circuit Court Monday.

Marvin Jones, 32, was ordered to pay restitution of $850.41, stemming from an incident in Vassar April 23 in which he purposely backed into a car owned by Thomas Tolfree.

William Medberry, 36, of Fairgrove was sentenced to one year in the Tuscola County jail on a charge of second degree criminal sexual conduct. He was given 8 days credit for time served.

Gary Cain, 30, of Millington was sentenced for a plea of guilty to attempted breaking and entering, to 4 years probation. He was fined $300 and charged costs of $300. He was also sentenced to one year in the Tuscola County jail with 6 months deferred. The charge stems from a breaking and entering of a house in Millington Jan. 25.

Martin Willsey, 19, of Deford failed to appear and a bench warrant was issued for his arrest. Bond was set at $5,000 cash or surety. Willsey is being charged with the removal of the tire and rim from a vehicle belonging to the Michigan Department of Transportation Nov. 7, 1985.

Douglas Howell, 20, of Cass City was sentenced to 6 months in the county jail with 90 days work release on a charge of entering without permission and conspiracy to enter without permission. He was given 12 days credit for time served. The charges stem from the entrance of a church in Caro Nov. 2, 1985.

Bruce Johnson, 17, of Millington entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of malicious destruction of property. A pre-trial date of Aug. 11 was set.

DNR seeks to reduce fish kill by Consumers

Recommendations to reduce the fish kill at the Consumers Power pump storage plant on Lake Michigan and provide compensation for the fisheries damage have been approved by the Natural Resources Commission.

The fish are killed during the operation of the Ludington plant, which uses massive turbines to draw Lake Michigan water to an elevated storage pond, and releases it producing electricity during high demand periods.

"Our goal is to reduce the number of fish killed and seek compensation for past and future fishery losses," says NRC Chair, O. Stewart Myers.

The recommendations require the company to design and install a barrier, either nets or other technology, to prevent large fish from entering the facility; require the company to review any new technology to further reduce the loss of fish life and update the review every 5 years.

They also provide for use of a prior plan as a basis for the company to provide compensation for past and future fishery losses, and require the department to seek additional compensation for unavoidable losses.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

Ordinarily I don't have much use for mutual funds, for myself, that is, or for accounts that I manage.

I don't like load charges, for example, that run around 9% for investments up to $25,000. You can escape the "load" by buying a no-load fund, but often it is hard to resist the salesmen and brokers peddling their fund with fat commissions for themselves. That's the way they make a living. The no-loads you have to do the buying on your own.

(Performance, by the way, has never been proved better with the funds that add a commission, than the no-load mutuals.)

So say you go for a no-load, and there are many, many with decades of good performance and good reputation. For example: Scudder, T Rowe Price, Vanguard, Dreyfus, Fidelity.

And these are just a few. I could go on and on.

While these funds charge no commission for buying or for selling, they naturally have an expense charge for operating. Such charges are typically around 6/10ths of 1%. Some even hit 1%. Say it's a fund investing in stocks. Average yields on stocks now are under 4%. Take away 1% for expenses and you have depleted the return by one-fourth.

If it's a bond fund, chances are the expense ratio will be 6/10ths of 1%. And the income from bond interest will be around 8% on the long-term bond funds. So the expense is only 1/13th of the income. But it still cuts an 8% bond yield to 7.4%. That's significant in a field where you comb the list of bonds for sale to improve a yield by 10 or 20 basis points -- a tenth or a fifth of 1%.

The funds with just stocks in the portfolio point out that expert selection improves chances for capital yields. Quite often it does.

People running bond funds point to the diversification you can get by owning a fund with a couple of dozen different bond issues in it. That's true -- but who needs a big assortment of bonds, when you can buy an obligation of the state of Florida, for instance? Or any other state.

(We're talking about tax-exempt bonds now.) A Florida state bond has the taxing power of the whole state -- from Pensacola to Key West. If you have security like that, why do you need other bonds? Florida enjoys a AA rating, one step below the highest, or AAA, which has been assigned to:

Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah and Virginia.

Drop down a peg in coverage, to bonds of cities, and your choice is wider and the returns are greater. Mostly I'd stay away from large cities such as New York and Detroit, and you need to know a little more about the credit ratings of city bonds, but generally they're o.k. I wouldn't want to have all the eggs in one basket here. Anyhow, you don't need the mutual fund "experts" to buy them for you, if you have confidence in your broker or advisor.

Now that I've said all this, I confess I'm about to buy a mutual fund confined to short-term tax-exempt bonds for a friend turning over to me a hatful of cash from CD's that have matured.

It's an odd situation. My friend has a good salary now, but may retire in the next year, and Social Security is 3 years off. So her tax bracket may drop from 42% to the lower levels. Meanwhile for 1986 it will be at least 30%.

If we get all taxable bonds -- say Bell Telephone -- the yield would be around 9%, but after tax it would shrink to 6.3%.

If we get a fund with short-term municipals we can get close to 6% tax free. (Vanguard has one that recently yielded 5.83%.) It's a no-load fund, so it costs no commission to buy, or to redeem the investment. With short-term bonds, in return for lower yields, you are getting less volatility. The price can't move very far in a batch of bonds that will mature in four or five years. If my friend wants to switch to taxable bonds if she quits her job, market ups and downs won't affect such a fund as we are considering.

Meanwhile she can withdraw as she likes from the fund if she needs money for current living expenses. It would be costly to do this just owning bonds herself, outside a fund. She can even have a set amount sent to her every month, or quarter, or whatever. And fund income can be re-invested as it comes in.

By putting a good share of her fund in such a mutual we will avoid market fluctuation, and we can get out easily with no commission costs, and can tap it for what money she needs in the meantime. She can even invade her capital (oh! perish the thought!) with such withdrawals.

The rest of her savings I'll suggest a split of half tax-exempt bonds and half in telephone bonds of any of the Bell systems.

Lounsbury's are sure

Centennial farm to remain in family

On May 12, 1885 Nelson A. Perry bought a 40-acre farm 3 miles west of Cass City and it was here that he brought his bride of just 2 weeks. The land was still scattered with blackened and scorched stumps and logs from the fire of 1881.

Three or 4 acres had been cleared and on it sat a small house.

It's been over one hundred years since Nelson's wife first laid skeptical eyes on that farm and it has remained in the family ever since.

On Wednesday, July 2, Walter Allison, a marketing servicing representative for Detroit Edison presented the current owners of that original 40, Leslie and Lucille Lounsbury, with the familiar green and yellow centennial farm marker.

To be considered a centennial farm the Michigan Historical Commission asks for as much information and background about the farm as possible. Mrs. Lounsbury spent many hours researching the family, gathering information from family members and also abstracts and stories that Leslie's mother had written down. This is the story of the Lounsbury farm:

Nelson Perry and Georgiana Reese were married on April 28, 1885. After he bought the farm in May, he walked from Fenton (about 100 miles) to Cass City leading the cow that his father-in-law had given him. Georgiana arrived shortly after by train. "Knowing how particular she was, I imagine that it (the farm) must have been quite a site for her," said Lucille.

Nelson was a teacher so he spent his summers clearing the land using a team of oxen. He also used the oxen to pull the wagon into town for supplies. Georgiana went with him, but she was a proud woman, too proud to be seen sitting behind a team of oxen, so she would get off at the railroad track and walk the rest of the way into town and meet Nelson there. When it was time to return home, Georgiana would walk back out to the railroad tracks where Nelson would pick her up and she would ride the rest of the way home.

There was one story about his wife that Nelson told again and again over the years. "Every time he'd tell it she'd get mad all over again," laughed Lucille.

The family was on their way to church one Sunday, riding in the "Democrat", a 2-seated buggy pulled by a team of horses. Nelson and their only child Gladys were up in front engrossed in driving the team. Georgiana was alone in the back seat, a seat that could be removed so that the buggy could be used for other purposes. As they were moving along, a neighbor rode up along side and said "Hey Perry, go back and get your wife." They looked back to see that both Georgiana and the seat were gone. Both had fallen out backwards and landed in a mud puddle and neither of them had heard her cries (of outrage probably).

The farm has seen many changes. The 5-bedroom brick house which the Perry's built is gone.

Nelson went from oxen to horses to a Model T Ford purchased in 1917 and a McCormick Deering tractor bought in 1923. Electricity came to the house in 1936. Nelson bought a milking machine and Georgiana got a washing machine and electric iron.

According to Lucille the house, which is now just a memory, was added onto 3 different times.

She and Leslie came to live in the big drafty house with Nelson and Georgiana (Leslie's grandparents) soon after they were married in March of 1934.

Leslie is the eldest of Gladys and Emory Lounsbury's 9 children and was born on the farm.

Lucille said that to save the house would have meant total renovation. She explained that the basement was too small to put a furnace in, so the house was heated with space heaters which did little good when a wind was blowing.

"The wall at the west end of the house was only made of 2 brick walls with plaster over it. When the wind blew, it would come right through." She said that they had to put a bathroom in and there was no heat upstairs where their 5 children slept.

When Nelson died in 1940 at the age of 91, the original 40-acre farm had increased to 249 acres. In 1942 Georgiana moved into an apartment in Cass City to be on her own, where she lived until she passed away at 93 in 1958.

Leslie and Lucille farmed from 1934 until about 1961 according to Leslie, who worked for the county drain commissioner from 1961 to 1968. In 1960 Leslie purchased 80 acres of the farm. He has since sold 10 acres to one of his sons and rents out the rest.

In 1970 Leslie and Lucille built the house they live in now. "I went from 5 bedrooms to 5 rooms," Lucille jokes. The new house was built behind the old. "There are still holes in the front yard from the original foundation that I have to fill in," Leslie said.

The Lounsbury's are sure that the farm will continue to stay in the family, because their children have shown interest in it.

The qualifications for a centennial farm are that it has been in the same family for 100 years or more, must contain a minimum of 10 acres with an estimated annual sales of $50, or, if less than 10 acres, gross sales of $250. Only land and not buildings is considered in these qualifications.

More than 5,400 Michigan farms have been certified as centennial farms since the program was inaugurated in 1948, according to Secretary of State Richard Austin.

Those interested in listing a farm can pick up a postcard from Detroit Edison which is filled out and sent to the Michigan History Division of the Department of State.

According to Allison, there are approximately 300 centennial farms in Tuscola County. He said that he has presented 25-30 of the historical markers, many in the Cass City area. A complete list of centennial farms is in the main entrance of the Tuscola County courthouse.

Gap closing

It appears as if the gap between man and ape is closing, says National Wildlife magazine. A 5-year experiment at Central Washington University has shown that chimps can learn American Sign Language from each other. One young chimp, Loulis has learned over 50 signs from Washoe, the more famous female who acquired the language 20 years ago.

STONE 588 by Gerald A. Browne (fiction). A strange diamond's healing powers disrupt the world of gem dealer Springer and his girlfriend, Audrey. When the stone is stolen, Springer must orchestrate an intricate plan to recover it. The characters in the story are: Audrey's rich and ruthless Aunt Libby; her sexually twisted subordinate, Wintersgill, and Townsend, the diamond dealer who steals the precious stone. The race for the treasure heats up when Springer's son becomes dangerously ill. The final chase spans Fifth Avenue and the spires of St. Patrick's Cathedral before culminating in a truly bloody showdown at Libby's mansion.

LAST OF THE BREED by Louis L'Amour (fiction). In a daring act of espionage, a United States air force major is seized by the Russians and held captive in Siberia. Rather than risk revealing top-secret information on experimental aircraft to the enemy, Major Joe ("Joe Mack") Makatozi, an American Indian, escapes from the prison camp and faces the bleak, unrelenting harshness of a Siberian winter. In order to survive the inhospitable climate and evade the crafty Yakut (the Russian equivalent of the American Indian) commissioned to track him, Joe adopts the survival techniques and skills of his Sioux and Cheyenne ancestors. In a startling transformation, Joe reverts to type, becoming the noble savage of legend - an independent, self-reliant warrior pitted in a timeless struggle against both his enemies and the elements.

THE JUDGEMENT by Howard E. Goldfluss (fiction). Until now a man of good reputation, Judge Allen Sturdivant loses control and murders his mistress when she threatens to jeopardize his bid for the New York gubernatorial nomination in retaliation for his decision to end their affair. In a stunning irony, he is later called on to preside at the trial of the innocent man accused of the crime. As Sturdivant struggles with his conscience, he must watch defense attorney Marc Hammond try to zero in on the real killer.

Twilight meet at Ruggles farm

Production of barley as a feed source will be the topic of a twilight meeting Thursday, July 24, at the Ruggles farm of Kingston.

With the cost of feed production becoming a very important factor in livestock production, many producers are exploring the production of crops other than corn. As a feed source barley is as good if not better than corn in many feed rations. With barley production cost lower than that of corn, this may be a very real alternative crop.

Dr. Larry Copeland, Small Grains Specialist of Michigan State University, will be the featured speaker as he explains results of his trials with producing 100 bushel plus barley.

"Many cattle producers may find that barley is a good option that can fit into a crop rotation for forage and grain sources," states Dennis Stein, Tuscola County Agricultural Agent.

The plots are located 1 1/2 miles north of M-46 on Cemetery Rd., Kingston.

Any interested livestock producer is encouraged to attend. It begins at 7:30 p.m.

Charlotte LaPeer inspired to write about Cass City

Sitting at home one evening, Charlotte LaPeer suddenly felt the urge to put into words her feelings about Cass City and its people. The result was a poem entitled "Our Country Town" which was published in the Cass City Area Historical Society newsletter.

"I've never had such an experience," she said. "It just came to my mind and I had to get it down on paper."

Mrs. LaPeer, 64, was recently appointed to a 3 year term as the historical society president. She has an avid interest in the history of the area and its people, much of which started when she decided to go back to high school in 1963 at the age of 42. "I took every kind of history there was, world history and of course the history of Cass City," she said. Her daughter, Charlene, was in high school at the same time and took many classes with her mother. "Charlene and I graduated together in 1965. We were the first mother and daughter here to graduate together," she proudly pointed out.

At the time Mrs. LaPeer was earning her diploma, not very many adults went back to high school, but she said that being nearly 2 deacades older than the graduates was not uncomfortable. "I felt just like one of the kids. I was accepted by them. Some of the kids who hadn't passed a grade felt better having me in the class because there was someone there older than them."

She also said that she never stuck out in the crowd. "I am short so I would just get in with the crowd in the hall and go on my way," she laughed.

Mrs. LaPeer could best be described as a people person, with her family at the top of her priorities list. She spends many hours with 2 of her granddaughters who lost their 35-year-old mother (Charlene) a few years ago. Then the girls' father passed away a few months later leaving them parentless. Despite the tragedy though, Mrs. LaPeer is an energetic and positive person. She was taking her second batch of cookies out of the oven at 8 a.m., when many of us are still trying to find the bathroom. Then she was off to a picnic and that evening she was taking the family to Show Biz pizza to celebrate a birthday.

"I need people," she remarked and that is reflected in her community involvement. She is active in the church and has been a home extensionist for many years, serving on both the area and county councils. She also drove a school bus and worked for Dr. MacRae. She spends time hand stitching quilts and likes to travel.

Mrs. LaPeer said that she would like to write more poetry but time is hard to find. She has started writing her life history and is keeping records for the historical society.

She has lived in the Cass City area all her life. She and Gaylord, her husband of 48 years, lived on an 80-acre farm before moving into town 2 years ago.

OUR COUNTRY TOWN

We love our quiet country town,
Cass City is its name.
There are precious friendly people here--
Many are of fame.

The countryside around our town
just never could be beat.
In all our worldly travels
Cass City is a treat.

We thank God, our divine Creator,
For caring, loving people
Who built our many churches
As we can aspire to all the steeples.

Christmas Town, it has been called,
With many sacred displays
Of Christ the King and jingle bells
With toys and dolls and things.

The people who make up this town have come from far and near.
With all the caring loving people
We just never have to fear.

And God above looks down with love
Blessing our town every day--
We all give thanks for the people next door
Who truly are here to stay.

by Charlotte LaPeer

AT 64, CHARLOTTE LaPEER still has lots of get-up-and-go. She's president of the Historical Society and active in other community activities. This is one of the quilts she has made in her spare time.

Pastor to ride horse for cash

The Rev. Larry Van Slambrook, depicting a pioneer circuit rider, will travel 75 miles on horseback from Brown City to Bay Shore Camp at Sebewaing July 23 through July 25.

Purpose of the ride, which takes him through Shabbona, Cass City, Elkton, Owendale and Sebewaing, is to help raise funds for the camp.

He hopes to raise $7,500 in the ride alone through gifts from churches, groups within the church and individuals.

Cass City residents are invited to meet and talk with the circuit rider Thursday, July 24, when he arrives at Salem Methodist Church at 11 a.m. A lunch will be served for a free will offering, the proceeds going to Bay Shore Camp.

The rider will make an overnight stay at Shabbona, arriving there about 8 p.m. He'll depart Cass City about noon Thursday en route to Elkton, where he'll stay overnight. Friday noon, July 25, he'll ride through Owendale and on to Sebewaing.

A barbecue will be held at 6 p.m. July 25 to welcome his arrival at Bay Shore Camp, followed by a service.

Bay Shore Camp is marking its 75th year of ministry, said the Rev. Clare Patton, of Salem United Methodist Church, Cass City, who is marking his third year as camp president.

Diabetic cookbooks at hospital

Those waiting for diabetic cookbooks can now pick them up at Hills and Dales Hospital, according to nutritionist Bonnie Johnson.

The cookbook contains recipes that have been approved by the American Diabetic Association and the American Dietetic Association.

"It contains some modern recipes such as Mexican, Oriental and German dishes. It also has how-to's for parties, packing a lunch, canning and seasoning," she said. Each recipe is "legal," she said, and lists the food exchanges.

The cost for volume I is $14.95 and Volume II is $15.95. For more information, call Johnson at 872-2121, ext. 222.

HEALTH TIPS
Asthmatics may be allergic to roaches

Everybody hates cockroaches, but people with asthma have real health reasons for disliking these household pests. A recent study has shown that a high percentage of asthmatics are allergic to debris from cockroaches, dust mites and cats in their homes. Presenting his findings at the recent annual meeting of the American Lung Association -- the Christmas Seal people -- and its medical section, the American Thoracic Society, Thomas Platts-Mills, M.D., of the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville, said that he found a high concentration of specific antibodies to inhalant allergens -- including cockroach and dust mite droppings, and cat dander -- in blood samples obtained from a randomly selected group of asthmatic patients in the emergency room. Ironically, most of these patients did not report any knowledge of allergy to these substances when they were admitted to the emergency room for their asthma episodes. Asthma is a chronic lung disease caused by extra sensitive lungs that overreact to certain factors. Those factors, or asthma "triggers," vary widely among asthma sufferers -- allergies are but one culprit. "The relationship between allergies and asthma is not well defined," Dr. Platts-Mills said. "Estimates of the prevalence of allergies as an important contributing cause in adult asthma have previously ranged from 10 percent to 80 percent." "Interestingly, a strong positive response was found much more often among patients under 50 years of age," Dr. Platts-Mills said. "This reflects the fact that among older patients, the prevalence of chronic obstructive lung disease with bronchospasm is higher, so that the asthma symptoms in these patients can be accounted for by their underlying illness."

Dr. Platts-Mills evaluated 87 adult asthmatics and found a positive response, using standard tests, to at least one allergen in about two thirds of these subjects. In most cases, the response was very strong. In addition to cockroaches, dust mites and cat dander, both ragweed and grass pollen allergies were frequently detected. Both frequency of occurrence and the severity of positive responses were significantly higher in asthmatic than in nonasthmatic patients. For further information on asthma, contact the American Lung Association of Michigan at 403 Seymour Avenue, Lansing, Mich. 48933, or call toll free at 1-800-292-5979.

Your neighbor says

Athletic drug testing is okay

In recent weeks 2 promising young athletes had their careers cut short in what have been identified as cocaine-related deaths. Drug abuse among athletes continues and it has now gotten to such a point that the NFL is enacting a random mandatory drug-testing plan. Players will be tested at least once in the season for a variety of drugs, including cocaine and alcohol. Should this be done? Is it an infringement on their civil rights? "I think they should be tested. They're an influential source on the world," said Gary Schlicht of Cass

City. He said that kids look up to them and when they hear that their hero has been busted for drugs, it puts a block in their minds. According to news sources, even if they are tested positive the first time, they are reprimanded but continue to play the game. Is this fair punishment? Schlicht replied, "It's like working in a shop or any kind of business, if you're caught you're out. They shouldn't be allowed back in." Schlicht, 27, is single and works at Sebawaing Industries.
