Court brings teachers to school

AN ESTIMATED 300 persons crowded into the cafeteria at Cass City High School Monday to voice opinions about the strike by the Cass City Teachers Association to the board of education. They learned that the teachers would be back in school Wednesday.

Injunction tells teachers, school to bargain daily

Cass City teachers will honor an injunction issued by Judge Patrick Joslyn late Monday afternoon in Tuscola County Circuit Court and return to class Wednesday morning.

The temporary restraining order was issued after it was requested by Gail Bennett and the Rev. S. Joe Robertson, residents in the district, and Geraldine Tibbits, a member of the negotiating team for the striking teachers, said that the teachers would honor the order and be in class Wednesday. She made the announcement to the school board at its regular session Monday night before an overflow crowd of more than 250 persons in the school cafeteria.

The order also requires that the school and the union bargain each and every day from 9 a.m. to 12 noon until a contract is reached. The order will be in effect until Monday, Sept. 22, when a hearing on the complaint will be heard.

Although the teachers will be instructing, it does not appear that the 2 sides are any nearer to a settlement of monetary issues than they were when the strike began. (See story elsewhere in this issue.)

In the open forum that was called to discuss the situation, residents favoring the teachers' position were heard. Comments ranged from Willard Dobson's remarks saying that the teachers should be happy to accept what the board offered, to one worker who said he was a boilermaker and earned more than the teachers, which he claimed wasn't right.

The majority said that under no condition did they favor a tax increase to raise salaries and said that the 2 sides should negotiate more and should have started earlier.

Both the teachers and board members said they were ready to bargain at any time and both blamed the other for failure to start earlier.

Supt. Donald Crouse told the group that unless the climate is right for a settlement, frequent meetings are totally unproductive. Unless there is some indication of a movement in established positions, negotiations are ineffective, he told the group.

One resident asked why substitute teachers were normally paid $45 per day and offered $145 for coming in during the strike. Crouse explained his reasoning to the group (see related story).

OTHER BUSINESS

Louis Horner was elected vice-president to replace Ken Micklash, who resigned from the board.

A committee was appointed to investigate legal liability insurance after it was announced that the premium for $1 million would increase from $649 per year to $4,106 per year. Serving, with the power to authorize a contract, will be Horner, Dick Wallace and Allan Hartwick.

A problem that has been of board concern for several months was settled as the board authorized the building of a sidewalk from the Seeger Street entrance of the subdivision built by Tom Herron to the spotlight in front of the Cass City Intermediate School.

The school will also pay for maintenance of the walk, including snow removal in winter. The walk is being established so children will not have to walk in the road or cross the street where there is no light or crossing guard to protect them. Cost of the 1,400-foot walk is estimated at $9,000.

Dave Lovejoy, adult education director, appeared before the board to secure approval for teachers in the high school completion program and to present a resolution for the board to consider adopting at its next session.

The resolution calls for a plan to consider goals and objectives for adult education, a pupil retention plan, and a follow-up and evaluation plan. If this is not done, Lovejoy explained, there will be a 25 percent reduction in state-federal funding.

Teachers, and subjects approved for adult education are: Don Markel, U.S. History; Judy Brown, accounting-typing; Kathy Tuckey, English; Dotty Scollon, consumer economics and speech; Don Schelke, government; Deb Hobbs, math; Marilyn Peters, reading improvement; Pam Roth, math.

A resolution was passed to qualify for incentive payments in the state school aid act. For keeping class sizes at 25 or under for kindergarten and first grade students, the school will qualify for $12 payment for each student. Last year the payment was $8.35. In the high school, the incentive is for class offerings and the payment is $29 per student, up from $28 paid last year.

The board heard a report from Gary Anderson, partner in Anderson, Tuckey, Bernhardt and Company, the school's auditors. Anderson told the board that the school was in good financial condition.

Loss in millions as area digs out after flood

Record breaking rainfall and flooding caused an estimated $22 million in damages in Tuscola County, said Emergency Services Director Jim McCann Monday.

Agricultural losses made up $18 million of the total amount.

Roads, bridges, crops, private and public property damages are included in the eight digit figure McCann submitted to the State government.

Loans from the federal government, state government and American Red Cross are being made available to flood victims.

In the Thumb and Saginaw Valley, roads washed out, drains overflowed and electricity was cut off in some places.

"The thing that was unusual about this rainfall was that it covered such a wide area," said Dan Houser, lead forecaster for the National Weather Service in Ann Arbor. "It was a couple hundred miles long and 150 miles wide. Usually it's very isolated."

Houser outlined the rainfall pattern. "There was an area of over 12 inches from west of St. Louis to Caro," Houser said. "There were over 10 inches from Midland to Pigeon just west of Bad Axe and down to just south of Vassar. Ten inches of rain came down from Pentwater to Bad Axe."

At least six inches covered all the Thumb. These figures are from 8 a.m. Wednesday to 8 a.m. Thursday.

"These are all new records," Houser said. "Most rivers all broke records. We're breaking new ground—or rather, washing it out."

Tuscola County Road Commission Clerk Jim Miklovic said a road damage estimate would run in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. It was too soon to tell a full estimate. He also said at least 20 bridges and culverts were out in Tuscola County.

"We're scrambling to get as many of the holes filled as we can," Miklovic said. "We've hired contractors to help."

Miklovic said the Vassar Road bridge over Goodig Creek would be out permanently. Parts of M-46 and M-15 at Vassar and M-81 east of Cass City were temporarily closed.

There were more large washouts in the Caro area. Akron and Deford had a lot of problems too, Miklovic said.

Gale Criner, a civil engineer at CHMP Engineering of Flint, was asked to survey damage of Tuscola County drains.

Criner said he had seen roads completely gone with only drains showing. One field eroded onto the road so it looked as if the road was plowed.

"The normal design (of drainage tubes) is based on a tube of 25 inches," Criner said. "When there's a storm of this frequency it exceeds the capacity of that tube."

Drainage ditches in Tuscola County were dug with tubing adequate for a normal storm, Drain Commissioner Stanley Henry told his secretary, Sarah Pistro. Pistro said the drains weren't adequate for a 125 year storm. The cost for those kinds of drains would overwhelm property owners.

Criner said officials are calling this storm a 125 year storm because the probability of this kind of storm happening in any given year is one in 125.

About 30 Vassar residents had their service disconnected while the area was flooded, said Detroit Edison Supervisor Graham.

"We had mostly isolated-type situations," Graham said. "Obviously there were problems in the Vassar area with the flooding. Most of the troubles have been from flooding."

Tuscola County's Red

Cross volunteers were helping Vassar area residents find shelter. Red Cross spokesperson Jim McLoskey said the Vassar Ambulance Service, the Vassar Eagles Hall and the Vassar United Methodist Church were set up to take flood victims.

McLoskey was working to get rented cots. Fifteen people used the shelters Thursday night.

Tuscola County's Amateur Radio Association was working to keep track of different water levels and road washouts, McLoskey said.

About 80 Camp Tuscola prisoners filled sandbags in Vassar, Caro, Fairgrove and around the prison, according to Supervisor Mike Flintoft. The two camp buildings had been separated by flooding from the Cass River.

"I've got the fire department out here pumping," Flintoft said. "Our woods are filled. Chambers Road is all washed out and the bridge is ready to give, too."

Tuscola County Agriculture Extension agent Bill Bortel said 25 to 33 percent of the dry beans will be affected by the water. In general, the other crops won't be nearly as bad.

Except in low areas, corn will be minimally affected. Bortel didn't think either sugar beets or soybeans would take a lot of loss, except, of course, in low-lying areas.

"Most sugar beets are in well tiled ground," Bortel said. "Most of the water will get away. I'm assuming the weather will get better. You have to be optimistic."

Bortel said more rain might mean farmers would be kept out of their fields for the rest of their harvest. It will take two weeks now, providing there's dry weather.

"In general, it's most miraculous how fast the water did get away," Bortel said. "I'd have never dreamt after 12 inches of rain that much water would move out of here by Saturday afternoon."

The flood waters are an added burden to farmers already facing depressed commodity prices.

"It's another severe blow," Bortel said. "If you lost another $20,000 to $30,000—and a lot probably will be losing, it will definitely have a real impact. Some will be forced to get out."

CASS CITY

Sometime Saturday night the Cass River crested at about 19 feet, four inches, according to Dave Erla at the Waste Water Treatment Plant.

By Saturday morning the river was 8 to 10 inches under the Cemetery Road bridge and dropping. At 10:30 a.m. Saturday the water was at 18 feet.

"She's coming down," Erla said Saturday. "We weren't supposed to get this rain today. It was kind of scary for a while."

Flood stage for the river is 17 feet, according to Rick Mohr at the treatment plant. The river rose to 14.1 feet by 11 a.m. Thursday. Please turn to page 12.

TIM AND CLIFF JORDAN paddled supplies from Jeff and Darlene Parsell's home to a car waiting in their driveway. The Parsells' Cemetery Road home is located next to the flooded Cass River. The Parsells had moved their furniture to the second story and the basement was completely submerged Friday, at the time the photo was taken.

Feedback is vital to anyone who writes. Without it, you can never be sure that the reader enjoys, understands, agrees or disagrees with what you're trying to communicate, or if, indeed, anyone is actually reading it.

It's gratifying when people tell me they read and enjoy my column. Equally appreciated are those who think it stinks, and have been kind enough not to say so.

Often, the feedback proves to be more interesting than the subject that provoked it.

This tale was related after a discourse on handbags: A friend of a friend, who swears it's true, spotted THE Paul Newman in an ice cream shop out east. Determined to maintain her composure and appear nonchalant, she calmly ordered her cone, paid for it and left. When she got to the car, she realized she didn't have the ice cream cone. Begging her fluttering heart to be still, she retraced her steps and told the clerk he'd forgotten to give her the cone. Whereupon the actor/idol, who had been looking on, interjected, "No, he didn't. You put it in your purse."

Another friend, a husband with a skinny wallet, confided that his wife had carried some of his fishing lures and tools in her handbag for years, and neither of them knew where they were.

A couple of former camp charges chided me for crediting their pranks to the Terrible Trio. "We masterminded a lot of those schemes," they claim. Would they have confessed so readily at the scene of the crime?

The truth is, I knew all along that there was more mischief perpetrated at camp than any 3 girls could personally accomplish. The Trio simply became the embodiment of camp rogues.

"If It Fitz..."

Could fall off the stool

By Jim Fitzgerald

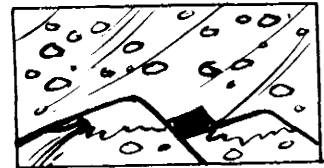

My favorite outdoors writer recently interviewed a Michigan resident who left his safe home and bravely made his way to Indiana to battle doves. I'm always impressed by the sense of adventure that compels some people to risk getting lost in rugged wilderness while stalking wild birds.

It was at a wildlife area in Mongo, Ind. Thousands of doves were there, attracted by the succulent sunflowers planted by courageous sportsmen who ignored the grave danger of luring more doves than could be killed before it got too dark to shoot them.

Numbered hunter stands constructed among the head-high sunflowers were occupied by more than 300 hunters, despite the terrible risk of the flowers tickling the hunters' noses and causing them to sneeze.

The tall sunflowers were arranged in long, narrow rows adjacent to strips of mowed grass in which it was easier to find dead doves. But there was no guarantee that downed doves would fall in the short grass. There was no avoiding the dreadful possibility that a hunter might be forced to forage low through the sneezy sunflowers to find some of the 12 doves he was allowed to shoot that adventure-filled day.

In arctic and alpine regions it sometimes snows red, due to tiny plants mixed in with the snow.

When the writer asked the Michigan hunter how he was doing, the answer was 10 doves killed on his first 10 shots. "This is terrific," he said. "Imagine driving just a short distance from home, sitting on a stool in the middle of a sunny field with a cooler of cold pop beside you, and having this kind of gunning. This is just outstanding."

Notice the stoic hunter didn't mention the risks. He could have fallen off his stool. Late in the long day, the pop might have become warm.

Sure, the thrill of the hunt can lift a hunter's spirit. And a hunter gains unique satisfaction from disregarding his own comfort and safety in favor of sitting in sunflowers to shoot little birds.

But people have been killed falling off stools.

Outdoor adventure is one thing, but foolish recklessness is something else. Dove hunters should make certain the reward is worth the danger. That hunter from Michigan missed on his 11th shot. No dove died, and a trigger pull was wasted. That would be something for him — and his family — to think about if he returned home from the hunt with a bellyache from drinking warm pop.

Michigan doesn't allow dove hunting, probably for the same dumb reason it doesn't forbid citizens to look at sunsets. But Michigan residents can accept the little-bird challenge without facing the awful risk of falling off a stool in Indiana. They can shoot pigeons in Hegins, Pa.

For 52 years, each Labor Day weekend, the Fred Coleman Memorial Shoot has attracted thousands of spectators and shooters to Hegins. The pigeons — more than 7,000 — are trucked in and stuffed inside small "release boxes."

At appointed moments, the birds are released. Bravely, the hunters don't shoot them until they're out of the box. This risk to the gunners is alleviated by the fact that they don't have to worry about falling off stools or sneezing from sunflowers. And cold beer is always available.

Also, there's no danger of hunters having to search for downed birds in tall grass. According to one eyewitness, youngsters gather up the birds and those only wounded are "dispatched by...pulling off their heads, beating them on the ground, wringing their necks, or stomping them to death...The biggest laughs of the day are for the birds whose death throes last the longest."

For hunters in quest of an exciting but fairly safe adventure, Pennsylvania's pigeons sound like a better deal than Indiana's doves.

And for those who wonder why these gunners don't go trapshooting, it should be noted there is no way for a clay pigeon to bleed, whimper or otherwise show it feels pain and loss of life. That's no fun.

Cass City residents for 15 years, Henry Ardler and his wife Jo left for North Carolina Friday morning.

Restaurant report:

Figlio's, pronounced fill-e-o's, on top of the Water Street Pavilion in downtown Flint, is a delightful dining experience, provided your taste runs to highly seasoned foods.

Figlio's pasta, fish and meat all are highly seasoned and offer something different than the usual restaurant fare. The barbecued entrees are cooked with an open flame wood fire. The desserts feature homemade ice cream and chocolate cake.

Figure about $10 to $20 per person, depending on your booze quotient.

A plus is that it's fun to browse the many delis and specialty shops on the way to the restaurant.

Did you catch the story about former Miss Americas in the Detroit Free Press? One of them was Patricia Donnelly Harris, 66, formerly of Cass City. There are still relatives of Harris living in the Cass City area, according to sharp-eyed readers who called to turn our attention to the article.

It's easy to knock the United States Postal Department when it takes a week for a letter to get 100 miles or so, as it occasionally (not often) does.

Compare that service with the fate of 3 letters sent to South America. Postmaster Bill Zinnecker said that Cass City had 3 letters returned last week from South America that were mailed in 1983.

Mrs. Danny Gee was the first of several persons to tell us that if the rain had been snow there would have been over 10 feet of snow on the level (no pun intended) to contend with.

Supt. Donald Crouse reported that one teacher in the system indicated a desire to return to the classroom if school reopened and Cass City teachers were still on strike.

He said that he advised the teacher not to come back unless several others decided to return also. That sounds surprising until you think about it. The reason the superintendent told the teacher to really think about the decision to come back is life after the strike ends.

If the teacher were alone coming to work, conditions would become intolerable after the regular staff returned. Intolerable at work and after work, too.

For in small town Cass City, it's virtually impossible not to be touched socially by persons you work with. They are in the churches and the clubs together. They are apt to meet in the retail stores and their children are friends. It's not like the large suburban areas where it's possible to go to work and come home and not have any other contact with the job.

Those same conditions are the ones that make the strike potentially devastating for the community. The last thing we need is a community divided into factions.

Hopefully that won't happen. But the longer the strike continues, the greater the chance that it will.

Although the school is hiring substitute teachers now, there is no thought of replacing the staff with the substitutes. At best, that is a stopgap measure to get the kids back in school and certainly won't provide the quality of education that the regular staff furnishes.

After talking to the teachers, it's my impression that they feel the community support for the strike is stronger than it really is. I would seriously doubt that any millage tied to a raise in teacher salaries would have any chance at all of passing. Although the district has never negotiated contracts on the basis of money available, in the long run it will be the determining factor in how much teachers will be able to receive at the bargaining table.

It appears that the board is determined to keep salaries competitive with other districts and equally determined to keep costs low enough so that additional millage will not be necessary.

It is the members' assessment that no new millage request has a chance of passing today and it's an opinion that this corner feels is correct.

NEA Vice-president Geiger rallies Cass City teachers

National Education Association Vice-president and Pigeon native Keith Geiger flew from Washington to rally Cass City teachers last Tuesday. Standing in a dimly lit former bowling alley with picket signs leaning against the walls and posters saying USA, Caro, Port Huron and Marlette schools send their support, Geiger talked to about 70 assembled teachers.

Geiger spoke of the two reasons there are fewer teacher strikes.

"Fewer strikes are due to most governors having made education a top priority over the last three to four years," Geiger said. "Michigan's governor and legislature have made education a priority."

Fewer strikes are also due to the sophistication seen at the bargaining table, Geiger said.

"Unfortunately for you, you don't see it at this district," Geiger told teachers.

From what Geiger understood of the Cass City strike, he said there really hadn't been a lot of bargaining. The superintendent hadn't been at the table.

"It's very difficult to get those at the table to reach a settlement," Geiger said. "Once he (Crouse) gets to the table it will be settled."

Geiger recommended a group of citizens or ministers get together and say they want the power brokers at the bargaining table. He said at one board meeting he had seen the public come with sleeping bags and surround board members. They didn't plan to leave until the board and district reached a contract.

"They always managed to settle," Geiger said.

Geiger didn't think wages were the real issue of the Cass City strike.

"I don't think it's fair to say that once salary is settled everything falls into place," Geiger said. "If you ask people who left teaching why they left, their reasons are about evenly divided between salary and conditions in the building."

In general, Geiger said the public is aware it is important to raise salaries in order to attract teachers. He used a Gallup Poll to illustrate.

"The latest Gallup Poll indicates 74 percent of the public is willing to raise taxes to support education," Geiger said. "Sixty-three percent of the business community is willing to pay increased taxes to support education."

Geiger went to school in Pigeon and eventually taught school in Livonia. He was president of the Michigan Education Association for seven years. He has been vice-president of the NEA since 1983.

STRIKING TEACHERS met Tuesday to receive support from visiting National Education Association Vice-president Keith Geiger. Geiger, a Pigeon native, was formerly president of the Michigan Education Association.

Commissioners propose senior millage change

If the Thumb Area Commission on Aging loses its appeal to remain the senior citizen services provider, the Board of Commissioners will have to ask voters to approve sending funds to HDC.

Board member Michael Green made it clear the millage proposal was not asking for more money. It would simply enable the county to direct funds to HDC. Green said it was important TACA win the appeal held Friday because if the proposal didn't pass, senior millage funds could not go directly to HDC. TACA would have to remain open in name in order to funnel money to HDC.

The board also passed a resolution to proceed with planning a new building to house the Department of Social Services. Green said the board had been assured by the State it could build it and the State would rent it. "We can bond enough money to have it built," Green said. "All bonds would be paid off in 10 years."

"It's not going to involve county funds or money," Green continued. "At the end of 10 years we'll own the building."

Building plans would include space for Community Mental Health and the Public Health Department. CMH applied for funds to take part in the new building.

The board extended payment on two Sheriff's Department deputies in Secondary Road Patrol. Sheriff Paul Berry said the board's payment would last until the end of December. Berry said he's applying for next year's Secondary Road Patrol grant. Departmental spending requests for the 1987 budget totaled $5.88 million but the board set an initial revenue guideline budget at $5.4 million. Last year's budget was $5,380,000.

"Now we'll try to fit the expenditure requests in the initial revenue guideline," Controller Michael Hoagland said. "It will be discussed in committee and we'll look at each individual department."

Because of the drop in State Equalized Valuation, property tax revenue loss totals $184,000 for next year Hoagland said.

"In order to have a budget equivalent to last year, we'll have less operating revenue," Hoagland explained. "We'll use more fund balance and federal revenue sharing."

Hoagland said because federal revenue sharing may be discontinued, the 1988 budget would be worked on without assuming the money will be there.

Although Irving Berlin wrote "God Bless America" during World War I, he waited until 1938 to have it published.

Novesta to try again for township road millage

Novesta Township is trying for road millage a second time. The proposal will ask for half a mill for 3 years to prepare roads for blacktopping, according to Township Clerk Nurse Kloc. The first millage request was defeated nearly 2 to one, she said. Fate of the millage will be decided at the general election in November.

The board approved Public Act 116, called the Farmland Agreement, for Robert Rabideau's 157 acres at their Sept. 9 meeting.

The act, Kloc explained, was started to preserve farmland by requiring the landowner to keep the acreage as farmland for at least 10 years. Kloc said that the act gives a tax rebate to participants. "Since property taxes have gone up, people have put their land in," she said. "There's not much land left in Tuscola County that hasn't been placed under the act," she added.

Fred Hicks appeared before the board with a petition from the Novesta Church of Christ. The petition requested a special meeting of the Township electors for the purpose of buying the Novesta Church of Christ property that joins the Novesta Cemetery. The special meeting will be combined with the next scheduled meeting, Oct. 6.

In other action, the board paid just over $9,000 to the road commission and have now spent over $44,000 of the $58,000 budgeted for roads. Kloc said that by the time they pay for 8 more roads that require grading and graveling, the road budget will be close to zero.

Kloc also reminded residents that cattle are not allowed on less than 10 acres of land.

Brinkman awarded sum in Huron court case

After a 2 day jury trial in Huron County Circuit Court Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 8-9, a Cass City man was awarded over $37,000.

Robert Brinkman was awarded $12,550 per year for a period of 3 years for lost wages caused, the suit claims, by a work loss due to a car accident in December 1984. The 6 person jury deliberated approximately 2-1/2 hours before handing down their decision.

He was originally asking for $18,000 per year.

The suit was filed on Nov. 12, 1985, according to court records, against the Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. which Brinkman says is his insurance company.

Under the no fault law, Brinkman said that he is entitled to lost wages but that his insurance company refused to pay. They did, however, pay medical costs, and replacement services, he pointed out.

Brinkman said he was farming before the accident but because of his injuries he is unable to continue this work. "I've got constant pain and numbness," said 56-year-old Brinkman.

He said that he is happy with the settlement though it would have been nice to see a little more. "I knew I had lost wages coming," he commented.

Brinkman was in a 2 car collision Dec. 8, 1984 in which Roy N. Wagg, 81, was killed and his wife Freda and Brinkman were seriously injured. According to past accounts of the incident, Wagg drove through the yield sign on Milligan Road and collided with a pickup on Dodge Road driven by Brinkman. After the crash, the pickup went into the roadside ditch and flipped. The Wagg car went into the ditch next to the pickup but remained upright.

O-G Seniors meet Sept. 4

The Owen-Gage Senior Citizens met at St. Agatha's parish Sept. 4. There were 52 members including guests Norman and Harriet Emery and Robert and Hazel Gracey, all of Florida, and Lella Martinez. Mary Lewis took 33 blood pressures.

Members were served cake by Louis and Irma Ouvry, who celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary. Brown paper bags were auctioned by Lloyd Finkbeiner.

President Mable Ondrajka called the business meeting to order. The Lord's Prayer and Pledge of Allegiance were said. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved. Thank you cards from the Mellendorf and Good families were read. President Ondrajka announced that the October dinner will be held Wednesday, Oct. 8, at the Gagetown Methodist Church. Members should sign up at the potluck dinner Sept. 18 for this dinner and also for the Oct. 1 Skill Center luncheon.

"Happy Birthday" was sung to Beulah Kretschmer, Margaret Beckett and Mable Ondrajka. Congratulations went to Homer and Beulah Kretschmer for their 45th wedding anniversary.

Mike Pisarek and Jenny Deneen won door prizes. After the meeting adjourned, members played bingo.

Hills and Dales OB unit healthy

The Caro Community Hospital board made a difficult decision Aug. 13 - to temporarily close the obstetrics unit at the hospital.

In the meantime, according to Pat Miller, interim administrator, the board is developing criteria in order to maintain the obstetrics area at a level that the board feels commensurate with the services that should be provided.

Miller feels that it was a difficult decision, but that it was a reasonable one for both the public and hospital. "They were concerned with the quality of services and made a very hard decision," he said.

There are a number of reasons for the close. There has been a decline in usage, increased insurance costs and difficulty maintaining trained staff because there have been fewer births.

Probably the biggest blow to the OB unit has been rising insurance costs, said Miller. "Michigan has lost a lot of obstetricians, and general practitioners who once delivered babies are getting out of it because the insurance has gotten out of reach," he said.

Miller said that this has had a large impact on the small hospital.

Dr. Alfonso Ferreira, president of Caro Family Physicians and '84-85 Chief of Staff at Caro Community, was against the decision and feels it is unrealistic to be able to restart the OB unit once it's gone. "You don't restart a unit overnight. It's a lot of hard work to develop," he said.

Right now it is unclear how caseload will be distributed, whether patients will travel to Saginaw, Bay City or Cass City. "You can't predict the long term impact," he said. But Ferreira does predict that Caro Community and Hills and Dales will develop a closer association as patients travel to Cass City to deliver.

"Right now we're treating patients as a whole and they will have to be referred to someone else for delivery," he said.

"We expect it to pick up some," said Nadine Lounsbury, director of nursing at Hills and Dales. It's basically a question of how many patients the current obstetrics doctors can absorb, she said.

Ferreira pointed out that Caro doctors would travel to Cass City.

"Many physicians involved in obstetrics are general practitioners, so it won't have a drastic impact on them," said Miller.

At Hills and Dales, the number of births has been up over the years, according to Ken Jensen, hospital administrator.

The current OB staff works only as needed. "Some days it will be empty and on others we've got a full house," said Lounsbury.

Jensen explained that it is staffed according to the number of patients. "It makes a lot of sense not to have anyone on staff if there is no one there," Jensen explained. "Of course you need a willing (flexible) staff to work in different areas," he added.

Jensen said that Hills and Dales' OB unit is reasonably busy in comparison to other departments, but it's not as busy as it could be, and cited the zero population growth as one of the factors. "It used to be you would have as many kids as you could to help on the farm. Then the ideal family was 4, then it was 2 and now I don't know what it is," Jensen said.

Unlike Caro Community, the OB unit is not that expensive to run in comparison to others, Jensen said. "The price of the equipment is less than in other departments."

Miller said that Caro's OB unit is on the high side because of the nursery and a separate labor area.

The future of the Cass City OB unit is secure, according to Jensen. "We've noted a rate of gain in a variety of areas. We're healthy and glad about that," Jensen concluded.

Small town life has been an education by Cymbre (How do you spell that?) Somerville

This is good-bye folks. Sept. 16 will be my last day here at the Chronicle as I'm off to another weekly paper in Saginaw.

I have been here for about 7 months and during that time have met many people and experienced the pace of a small town firsthand. I've petted a llama and seen the Thumb from the sky, drank Turkish coffee, become an expert on the Fourth of July celebration and had my camera chewed on by a cow.

Coming from Traverse City, my father was quite impressed when I went home and explained the difference between pre-plant and post-emergence fertilizers and forecasted crop yield for the season.

My first visit to Cass City was a couple of weeks before I came to work here and I drove through town and had to turn around and come back.

"This is pretty small. We just drove through town in a minute flat," I commented to my sister (the map reader). "But look," she said as we made our second pass through town, "they have a movie theater, a choice of banks and it's the home of Brewster Shaw."

I admit I was apprehensive about coming to a small town - afraid there would be the stereotyped cliquishness and I would be viewed as the "outsider" but that has been far from true. In fact, I feel right at home and could probably gossip with the best of them now. There is also something relaxing about driving in a town with only one stoplight.

I don't think I've been to one interview where someone hasn't offered me a cup of coffee or something to eat. In what other town can you be late for the village council meeting and they're waiting for you to get there!

I've enjoyed the friendliness of the town and have realized that it is the people here that make this town what it is and it's you who have made my stay here an experience to remember.

Oh, in case anyone is wondering how to pronounce my name it's sim'bra.

Sunday, Sept. 7, Chad Meininger, 10-year-old son of Agnes and John Meininger, suffered a broken leg when the family dog caused a fall. Chad was taken to St. Luke's Hospital in Saginaw for surgery.

GAS STATION DEMOLISHED

A change in the landscape of the village occurred during the past week, when the wrecking ball of the Rooney Company of Bad Axe destroyed the old

ST&H gas station at the corner of State and Gage Streets. The station has been out of business for several years and in a state of decay, but was a landmark for many years.

The late Jack O'Rourke and Wes Downing had the first building and in the early 30's when the present building was erected, the late Art Burdon and sons, Dick and Willard, were operators.

Later employees at the station were George Hendershot, Harry and Elmer Kehoe, Bill Stapleton, Arnie Witzke, Bud LaFave, Merton Hendershot and Bud Diebel.

WOMEN'S SOCIETY

St. Agatha Women's Society met Tuesday evening, Sept. 9, in the church hall. Since it was guest night, 40 members and guests were present.

President Arlene Enderle conducted a short business meeting during which discussion was held on the upcoming East Region League of Catholic Women luncheon, rules for use of the church hall, and plans for visitation and help at the Gagetown Senior Manor.

A social hour followed and society hostesses served coffee and cookies. Members donated layette articles for "Heartbeat" of Flint.

Mrs. Harlan (Helen) Hobart suffered a broken arm in a fall at her home last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Langlois and Mrs. Carl Land of Caro, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Birch of Bay City, Velma Helwig and Harry and Gen Kehoe attended the brunch last Sunday at the Methodist Church and spent the afternoon at the Kehoe home.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Seuryneck spent a few days with Evelyn and Wayne Gryerbiehl, of Mio, and last Monday accompanied them to the Petoskey Medical Clinic where Mr. Greyerbiehl underwent cataract surgery.

Mrs. David (Lisa) Merz and her mother, Mrs. Barbara Ambler of Ft. Worth, TX, spent a few days with Mrs. William (Mary Louise) Merz and family in Saginaw. Last Friday they visited Alma, George and Mary Wald. It was Mrs. Ambler's first visit to Michigan.

Mrs. Anita Cheshire of Indianola, Iowa, returned to her home last week after spending time here with the Lopez family during the illness of her sister, Domitila Lopez. Mrs. Mary Valdez of Wichita Falls, TX, also visited.

KEHOES CELEBRATE

The monthly breakfast at the Village Coffee Shop became a special occasion Wednesday, Sept. 10, when Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kehoe celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary.

The day began with a prayer service in the chapel at St. Agatha Church, conducted by Sister Nancy Ayotte, then several relatives and friends gathered with the Kehoes at breakfast.

The celebrating couple wore white carnations, the gift of friends, and Mrs. Kehoe wore the brown suede pumps she wore at her wedding.

They were married Sept. 10, 1941, at St. Agatha Church. They have 2 children, Steven Kehoe, Ann Arbor, and Carol Beith, Highland, and 4 grandchildren.

Al Goslin was transferred from Veterans Hospital, Allen Park, to Veterans Hospital, Saginaw, and then was released Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Burdon met with their son and daughter-in-law, Tim and Barbara Burdon of Midland, for dinner at the Elks Club in Bay City Friday evening.

Clare and Jeannie Comment hosted a family dinner Saturday evening at their home on Sand Point in celebration of the first birthday of their granddaughter, Erica Comment. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Todd Comment of Cass City. Among the guests were Mrs. Bert Bain of Drayton Plains, and served.

great-grandparents, Harr, and Dee Comment and Ila and Les Seuryneck. Mrs. Bain spent a few days with the Comments.

New books at the library

IT by Stephen King (fiction). Six adults, living separately in a blessed fog of forgetfulness, are summoned back to their hometown to complete the destruction of a horrific, shape-changing entity who breakfasts on the city's children. This same group first encountered the menace more than a quarter century before, as schoolchildren in the 1950s. Their quest breeds some riveting chase scenes as adults and children alike flee from an assortment of menacing humans and slaving monsters — most of which are manifestations of an evil so vile its true nature can never be known.

THE POISON TREE: a true story of family violence and revenge by Alan Prendergast (non-fiction). The author covered the trials of teenagers Richard and Deborah Jahnke in Wyoming for the murder of their father and writes an objective account of the case. A borderline psychotic, Janke senior subjected his wife and children to abuse both physical and psychological and, for a time, made sexual advances toward his daughter. Their residence became a house of terror, with the mother the most terrified of all, according to Prendergast. The children's feeble and intermittent attempts to acquaint outsiders with their situation were of no avail. Finally, with his sister's semi-connivance, Richard shot his father. The trials of the two, held separately, showed American justice at its worst: a prosecutor more interested in convictions than in finding the truth, and two inept and hidebound judges, one of whom would not admit evidence of child abuse. Deborah's sentence has now been commuted to one year of probation and Richard has been released on parole.

SIMPLE GIFTS by Joanne Greenberg (fiction). When a worker from a government agency called the Social, Cultural and Ethnic Life Placement Program visits the impoverished Fleuris on their ramshackle ranch, he urges them to join SCELPL in return for financial assistance. To participate in the program, Akin, Mary Beth, and their four youngsters must scuttle all contemporary amenities, live like homesteaders of the 1880's, and allow "participant-visitors" to vacation on their premises. Akin, a gruff narcoleptic, and Mary Beth, a dreamy eccentric whose walls are festooned with pictures from the New York Times, hospitably introduce their guests to wholesome, hearty Western ways. Unfortunately, one clan's arrival induces mayhem. Haughty Dr. Richard VanHoughton insensitively studies Akin's narcolepsy; his wife undertakes the sexual initiation of young Robert Luther Fleuris; their spoiled little girls furtively imbibe the Fleuris' bootleg liquor.

HEALTH TIPS

Using what we know reduces heart disease risk factors

Bad diet, lack of sleep, little exercise, more stress - sound like the average businessman? Not necessarily. An ever-growing number of women in the workplace now find themselves faced with health problems which were once the primary domain of the male executive.

Among these health concerns are the risks of cardiovascular disease. In addition to risk factors faced by men, women have some other cardiovascular risk factors to contend with.

Diet is one of the easiest elements to change in the cardiovascular disease risk profile. By following a diet low in cholesterol, saturated fat, salt and sugar, you can help lessen your risk. Such a diet can benefit your family as well.

Studies clearly show that diets high in cholesterol and saturated fats lead to high levels of fat in the blood. Atherosclerosis, the narrowing of the arteries to the heart, is caused by fat adhering to the artery walls. Eventually, this can lead to heart attack.

The solution is to avoid saturated fats and cholesterol - in particular, those from meats, egg yolks, poultry, fish, and whole milk dairy products.

To determine your blood cholesterol level, your doctor can draw a blood sample.

According to AHA guidelines, everyone should have their cholesterol level checked by age 30, and every 5 years thereafter. Those with a family history of heart disease should have theirs checked at 20, and then every 3 years.

Your doctor will determine whether your cholesterol reading is high or low. Generally, a 265 milligram reading (without other risk factors present) is high and can put you in a high risk category.

Another type of fat which may be detrimental to health is triglycerides. Triglycerides are manufactured in the body from carbohydrates and are used in normal body functions.

To avoid an elevated level of triglycerides, one should be careful not to consume too many carbohydrates and to avoid highly refined carbohydrate foods that have little nutritional value. Forty-five to 55 percent of all calories in the diet should come from carbohydrates. Most of these calories should come from complex carbohydrates. Excessive intake of alcoholic beverages and saturated fats may also elevate triglycerides.

A third dietary element recognized for its relationship to cardiovascular health is salt. Although salt itself doesn't cause high blood pressure, reducing salt in the diet may help lower it.

Busy working women who favor the convenience of fast food restaurants should think twice. Fast foods are generally very high in sodium content, as are many of the canned convenience items on the grocery store shelves.

Smoking is the most critical, preventable risk factor in heart attack and stroke. And unfortunately, while the number of male smokers decreases, the number of women smokers remains the same. Smoking is the most important preventable cause of premature death in the country. About 350,000 premature deaths each year can be attributed to cigarette smoking. Coronary mortality is greatly increased in smokers compared to non-smokers. The severity of a woman's risk is also related to the number of cigarettes she smokes each day.

Specifically, smoking can lead to heart attack, hardening of the arteries, stroke, emphysema, bronchitis, lung cancer and other lung ailments. Smoking also appears to suppress HDL cholesterol - a good form of cholesterol.

Women who smoke while using an oral contraceptive have a great increase in their risk of cardiovascular disease, including heart attack. Those who have high blood pressure and a mild form of kidney disease, or who are predisposed by heredity, are especially at risk.

Lack of exercise is another problem faced by the executive woman and housewife alike. Some women mistakenly believe that the exercise they get walking around the office or doing housework is enough. It's not. To improve your cardiovascular fitness, you should start an exercise program gradually and work up to at least three 15-to-20 minute sessions per week, reaching 60 to 75 percent of your maximum heart rate. Benefits from exercise include more energy, relief of stress, possible weight loss, improved appearance, better stamina and improved cholesterol levels.

Related to exercise and diet is obesity. While being overweight may not directly contribute to the incidence of coronary heart disease, few obese people have an ideal coronary risk profile. Obesity influences blood pressure, blood lipid levels (fat in the blood), and the risk of diabetes.

Fortunately, like smoking, diet and exercise, being overweight is a factor over which we have control.

Heredity also plays a role in the chances of a woman developing cardiovascular disease. If a woman's parents or relatives have high blood pressure, she should have her blood pressure checked every 6 months. This includes young girls, too, as children can also have high blood pressure. High blood pressure can cause stroke, heart attack or kidney disease.

Black women are predisposed to high blood pressure by virtue of race. Although studies show a higher prevalence of high blood pressure among blacks, the reason is unknown. A woman's best course is to have her blood pressure checked every six months, avoid salt, get regular exercise, and maintain good weight control.

Oral contraceptives have also been linked to an increased incidence of heart disease. Use of oral contraceptives tends to worsen the effects of the major risk factors. The pill may initiate high blood pressure or lipid abnormalities, impair sugar tolerance, and affect blood vessels. The risk of blood clotting is increased greatly if the woman taking the pill also smokes and is even greater for women over 35.

Although previous studies warned women of the possible serious side effects of estrogen use, it has now been determined that estrogen use might in fact reduce the risk of heart disease among post-menopausal women.

The incidence of heart attack among women increases at menopause when the level of natural estrogen is decreasing, prompting scientists to look more closely into how this hormone affects the women who take it. One conclusion suggesting beneficial effects of estrogen was that it tends to alter the cholesterol content of the blood.

The effect of estrogen use as related to the risk of stroke is not yet known.

Although menopause does not cause high blood pressure, the chances of developing it are greater after menopause.

Similarly, pregnant women who have never had high blood pressure can develop it during their pregnancy. Or, it could worsen in a diagnosed hypertensive. The safest way to prevent complications is to have it checked frequently during pregnancy and afterward.

Even a woman's behavior may influence her tendency for cardiovascular disease. People who are commonly called "Type A" show a higher incidence of coronary heart disease than more relaxed persons. Type A behavior is typified by a sense of urgency, drive and competitiveness. This type of individual seems to be greatly affected by the other major risk factors.

Drinking beverages containing caffeine may also contribute to coronary heart disease and some data suggests risk of cardiovascular disease may be increased in individuals who consume large amounts of caffeine. Interestingly enough, other data has failed to implicate the effect of coffee when the highly correlated use of cigarettes is also examined. However this is not to say that a cup of coffee and a cigarette is a good way to start your day.

By eating properly, not smoking, exercising, watching your weight, being aware of the effects of oral contraceptives, estrogen and menopause and avoiding excessive caffeine, you can help put the odds in your favor. The key in the battle against heart disease is to consciously use what we know to lessen those risk factors over which we have some control.

Rotary gives Donahue Paul Harris Fellow award

DR. HAROLD T. DONAHUE is presented a plaque signifying his selection as a Paul Harris Fellow. The award is granted when $1,000 is donated in his name to the Rotary Foundation. From left: Donahue, Mrs. Alice Donahue and Rotary District President Robert A. Brobst, Harbor Beach.

The presentation of a plaque to Dr. H. T. Donahue signifying that he is a Paul Harris Fellow was the highlight of a meeting of the Cass City Rotary Club and Rotary Anns Saturday night at the Rolling Hills Golf Course.

The presentation was made by Robert A. Brobst of Harbor Beach, the district 631 Rotary governor.

The award is earned by having $1,000 donated to the Rotary (scholarship) Foundation in the name of the recipient. The Rotary Foundation, which ranks among the top foundations, finances programs and completes the work with a highly motivated network of volunteers around the world. The Rotary Foundation has more scholarships with more countries participating and gives more money per participant than the Rhodes Foundation.

Over the next 3 years, Rotary Foundation will fund 190 group study exchange teams and 70 Health-Hunger-Humanity projects to help the needy.

After the presentation, the group participated in a sing-along, accompanied by Don Greenleaf.

The district governor was in Cass City Tuesday, Sept. 9, where he reviewed Rotary objectives with Cass City Rotary President Gary Vollmar and members of the various club committees. He addressed the Cass City club at noon during its regular meeting.

Full steam ahead with revitalized Main Street

By the time of the next Tuscola County Economic Development (EDC) meeting Oct. 14, Chairman Lambert Althaver expects to have committees in place and interested persons alerted for an all-out campaign to revitalize Main Street in Cass City.

The EDC was named the governing body in the campaigned at a meeting Tuesday, Sept. 9, at Cass City High School. An estimated 30 interested residents, including a dozen businesspersons and representatives from 3 of Cass City's financial institutions, attended.

The group heard Bob Terry, state coordinator of Michigan's Main Street Program from Lansing, explain the importance of the downtown business community and how it can compete in today's business environment.

He pointed out that a thriving downtown is important because it is the community's largest single employer and adds to the quality of life in the community, an important factor to industry when choosing locations or considering expansion.

Terry pointed out 4 areas of need in the revitalizing campaign:

First is an organization. People who care about the downtown need to get together and they must be willing to work, Terry said.

The design of the downtown is important and that doesn't mean just a new front on a store, Terry says. The downtown must be comfortable and inviting. About 80 percent of purchasing is impulse buying and you must make it a pleasurable experience for the shopper. Downtown should not compete with the malls. It has a niche of its own and should concentrate on it.

Downtown needs continual promotion. There should be something going on to keep calling attention to what it has to offer.

And, of course, there has to be economic restructuring. Business people have to be able to pay the bills.

Terry said that he will help the group with plans that have worked in other communities and give all the advice possible. However, he pointed out, you (interested residents) will have to do the work.

In other notes, Terry said that few communities have real parking problems. He said that parking meters is not the real problem in enticing persons to downtown.

He said that Friday night openings are passe. Friday night is not a good shopping night, he claims. Thursdays and Mondays are better night shopping hours.

Remember, he cautioned, do not compete with the malls. Work together as independent persons to make downtown a place where people want to go.

Taller Bearcats outscore Bulldogs

The Owen-Gage girls' basketball team hosted a much taller Uby Bearcat team and gave the visitors all they could handle before bowing out 39-34.

Coach Dean Roller's squad captured an early 4-3 lead before going stone cold and watching the Bearcats run off 11 unanswered points to end the first quarter trailing 14-4.

Owen-Gage's Susie Salcido and Jane Billy went to work for the Bulldogs in the second quarter scoring 7 of the team's 8 points. But some missed easy baskets by the Owen-Gage hoopsters found them trailing 23-12 at the half.

Owen-Gage's defense tightened in the second half and held the Bearcats to just 6 third quarter points. Cindy Enderle contributed 3 free throws in the third period to cut the Bearcat lead to 29-21.

Both teams loosened up in the final period, but the taller Bearcats were just too much to handle and hung on to post a 39-35 triumph.

Cindy Enderle and Susie Salcido were in double figures for the losers, scoring 11 and 12 respectively. Connie Bukoski led all scorers and finished with 14 points for the Bearcats.

Owen-Gage's Sept. 11, game against North Huron was postponed, because of the weather, and is rescheduled for Monday, Nov. 10.

Cass City golf team

Last week wasn't the best of weeks for the Cass City Red Hawk golf team. Coach Jim Fox's charges lost to Caro, 186-172, Monday and had Wednesday's game cancelled because of the rains. Scores in the Caro meet were high due to high winds and fast greens.

Medalist of the meet was Tim Werth of Caro with a 42. For the Hawks, Dave Miller and Dave Burnette shared scoring honors with 45's. Willie Grindye and Rusty Schneeberger posted 48's.

Other scores posted by the Tigers were: Tony Walker and Steve Turner, 43, Charles Ransford, 44.

Ronald Briggs, 10, hit by car Sunday

A Cass City boy is in critical condition at Detroit Children's Hospital after he was struck by a car Sunday.

Ronald Briggs, 10, 4195 West Street, ran behind a car stopped to make a left turn at the corner of Third and Maple streets and was struck by a northbound car on Maple, driven by Marcia J. Schember, 43, 4297 Maple. He was taken to Hills and Dales General Hospital and later transferred to Detroit with head injuries.

Richard Hendrick, 6711 Houghton, reported the theft of 4 hubcaps valued at $50 apiece. The hubcaps were taken off his truck sometime the night of Monday, Sept. 8. An apple was also shoved up the tailpipe and the end crimped shut causing the vehicle to stall.

Robert D. Sobczak of Bad Axe had the rear window of his car broken out while parked behind The Station Bar between 11 p.m. Friday and 2:15 a.m. Sunday. There are no suspects.

Nitz remains serious

Elmer Nitz, 3192 E. Cass City Road, was cutting a tree with a chain saw when it fell on him. The incident occurred on Elmer Road one and a half miles south of M-46.

Letter to the editor

Hospital workers voice concerns

Mr. Editor:

Are the professionals of Hills and Dales Hospital worth as much to our community as the employees of Walbro Corporation?

Our hospital is maintaining sound financial form due to the excellent management of the administration and Board of Directors. However, the vital contribution of our hospital employees to our continuing success is being completely overlooked. We make frantic efforts to complete the shift work load without overtime and still give quality patient care. We make special efforts to keep supply and maintenance costs down. Though we are not as cheerful as we would ideally like to be, we do take care of documentation demands, patient complaints of doctors' unwillingness to communicate, hospital routine, over-crowding, decreased linen use, shorter hospital stays, and visitor problems.

fight for a newborn's life, but they are all we have. We don't leave our patients at the hospital after eight hours. They are in our thoughts, dreams, and prayers at night.

We used to be proud of ourselves and our hospital. There's not much dignity in working for nothing. There's not much dignity in knowing the factory workers in our own community have more benefits and higher starting wages than licensed professionals at our own community's hospital. We don't have much, and we're not asking for more. All we want is to keep the small shred of dignity we still have.

Sincerely,

We ungrudgingly work a needed day off or stay home a day we desperately need to work to compensate for the fluctuating staff demand. We try to keep our frustrations repressed and our morale up while knowing our efforts are not understood or recognized by our administration. Because of the high stress level and low benefits, a very large sum of money is wasted each year to orientate new nurses who don't stay with us.

What value can be placed on human life? Our few benefits are poor compensation for all the unseen daily efforts, frustrations, and personal sacrifice made for the injured, ill, and dying of our community. Administration has no direct dealing or knowledge of these frequent situations. They close the office doors at the end of their day and go home for the evening, weekend, or holiday, free to give full attention to their families and themselves.

Our benefits do not compensate for the demand for extra effort needed to give quality care to an injured child, an abandoned Provincial House patient, an auto accident victim, or the

Bad Axe Hatchets next for high flying Cass City Red Hawks

The grid pundits who relegated the Cass City Red Hawks to a spot in the lower echelons of the Thumb B Association may have to take another look at Coach Don Schelke's charges. The underrated Hawks chalked up their second win in a row Friday by overcoming a couple of costly fumbles on the way to a very satisfying victory over visiting Caro Tigers, 15-14.

In addition, the Hawks will reign as favorites when they take to the road this week for the first time to face the Bad Axe Hatchets. If they win, it will mark the first time in several years that Cass City was off and running with victories in the first 2 league games.

The Hawks didn't get off to an auspicious start against Caro. For the second week in a row, Cass City lost the ball on a turnover on the first play from scrimmage. That gave the Tigers a first down on the Cass City 34, but the Hawk defense stopped the visitors after allowing a first down. It was a defensive effort that Cass City was to repeat time and time again as the game progressed.

Both clubs had trouble mounting any offense until late in the quarter when Coley Bagocius slipped behind the Hawk secondary and took a perfect pass over his shoulder to score without being touched. The play covered 48 yards. Another pass, this one to Ray Haughteling, was complete for the extra points and Caro was in front 8-0. It looked like that lead might hold up as the Hawks had just one scoring opportunity until there were 1:15 minutes left in the first half. Cass City recovered a fumbled punt on the Caro 20 yard line and moved smartly down the field for a first down on the Tiger 7. Two running plays moved the ball to the 3, but a fumble ended the drive.

It appeared certain that Cass City would leave the field at intermission trailing by 8 points. The Hawks took possession after an interception by Jeff Lefler that was returned to the Cass City 39. In just 5 plays, the Hawks scored. Ken Pasanski picked up 12 and 19 yards on 2 runs and Dan Ware caught a pass from Jeremy Capps good for 33 yards. The touchdown came on a pass from Capps to Jeff Sontag from the 12-yard line with no time remaining on the clock. A moment later, Capps ran the ball into the end zone for the extra points to tie the game.

The Hawks took the lead for good midway through the third quarter. The drive started on the Hawk 44. Cass City overcame a penalty in the drive on a Capps pass to Ware for a first down on the Caro 34. Moving smartly on the ground, the Hawks were at the Tiger 11-yard line with a first down. The first play lost 4 yards, but that didn't halt the drive. Dennis Ziemba slanted off tackle from the 6 for the six points. Lefler's kick for what proved to be the winning point was good.

A bad pass from center resulted in a fumble and gave the Tigers the ball on the Cass City 4-yard line. The Hawks kept the visitors out of the end zone for 3 plays but a pass to Mark Tomlinson netted the touchdown. The all important try for extra point was blocked by Dennis Steely and the Tigers were unable to mount any serious scoring threat in the 7 minutes and 11 seconds left in the game. Ziemba, with a net of 59 yards in 20 carries, and Pasanski, with 46 yards in 8 carries, led the Hawk ball carriers. Ware had 2 catches for 60 yards and Capps completed 5 of 10 for 87 yards. Eric Raymond led the Tigers with 38 yards in 8 carries.

Kingston slips by Bulldogs, 28-16

The Owen-Gage Bulldogs suffered their first setback of the season Friday when they let Kingston slip past them 28-16 on a rain soaked Cardinal field. The Bulldogs will have to bounce back for their home opener this Friday as they host Peck, who, observers say, has the most potent backfield in the North Central Thumb D League.

Coach Arnie Besonen felt it was a game his gridders could have won. But some costly penalties and a 55 yard pass from Shane Campbell to Kale Koehler just before the half ended, staked the Cardinals to a lead the Bulldogs couldn't overcome.

The Bulldogs took the opening kickoff deep in their own territory and could not manage a first down and were forced to punt, giving the Cardinals good field position on their first offensive opportunity. But the Bulldogs' defense proved up to the test and forced Kingston to punt after 3 plays.

After failing to sustain much of a drive, the Bulldogs were forced to punt from the back of their own end zone. A scuffed punt gave the Cardinals the ball on the Bulldog's own 18 yard line. The Cardinals wasted little time putting the game's first points on the board when Eric Lotter scored on a 5 yard run. Steve Root blocked Rob Lester's try for point after.

The Bulldogs got on the scoreboard early in the second quarter when Steve Root broke through the Cardinal line and blocked Kingston's punt. Root then tackled an unidentified Cardinal player in the Kingston end zone for a safety, making the score 6-2.

Owen-Gage blotched a perfect scoring opportunity when Billy Kuhl scampered 35 yards off a trap play, giving the Bulldogs a first down deep in Cardinal territory. But 2 encroachment calls on the Bulldogs, before they were able to take a snap, stalled the drive. The scoring in the remainder of the first half seemed to be over when Kingston found itself with long yardage and time winding down. But a perfectly thrown pass from Shane Campbell to Kale Koehler resulted in a 55 yard scoring strike. The same duo combined for the points after attempt and Kingston took a 14-2 lead into the locker room.

Kingston's coach Mike Rea was impressed with the younger Bulldog team.

Our offensive line got the ball off better this week, but we'll have to start out stronger if we want to beat Deckerville Friday. Take nothing away from that younger Bulldog team. They had their chances to win.

Kingston drew first blood in the second quarter when Carl Main scored from 10 yards out. Rob Lester's kick for point made the score 21-2 and foiled any chance of a Bulldog upset. Mark Reinhardt narrowed the Cardinal lead when he scored on a 9 yard jaunt. Reinhardt's pass for points after to Nick Pavlichek missed the mark and the third quarter ended 21-8.

The two teams traded touchdowns in the final period with Mark James crossing the goal line for the Cardinals on a 6 yard pass from Jeff Koehler. Kingston's PAT was blocked. Owen-Gage's Steve Root scored the final touchdown with a 10 yard run and Mark Reinhardt hit Stu Stirrett for the points after to close the scoring at 27-16.

Steve Root, for the second consecutive week, led the Bulldogs on defense as he was involved in 21 tackles. Stu Stirrett chipped in 17 tackles and intercepted a pass.

Carl Main led all ball carriers as he racked up 158 yards on 20 carries. Jay Susalla led the Bulldogs on the ground as he piled up 73 yards on 13 attempts.

Red Hawk cagers open with win

The Cass City Red Hawk girls basketball team invaded non-conference foe, Caseville, for their season opener and emerged victorious with a 40-30 win Tuesday, Sept. 9.

Although Cass City shot only 25% from the field, an area where Coach Daryl Iwankovitch feels the Hawks will have to improve to be competitive in the Thumb B, they were able to take advantage of a smaller Caseville squad and control the glass to seal the win.

Playing a tight zone defense, the Hawks jumped out in front 10-6 at the end of the first quarter. Coach Iwankovitch was pleased with the leadership and floor game exhibited by senior guard Shannon McIntosh, who set the tempo for the game and permitted Cass City to enter the locker room at the half leading 25-15.

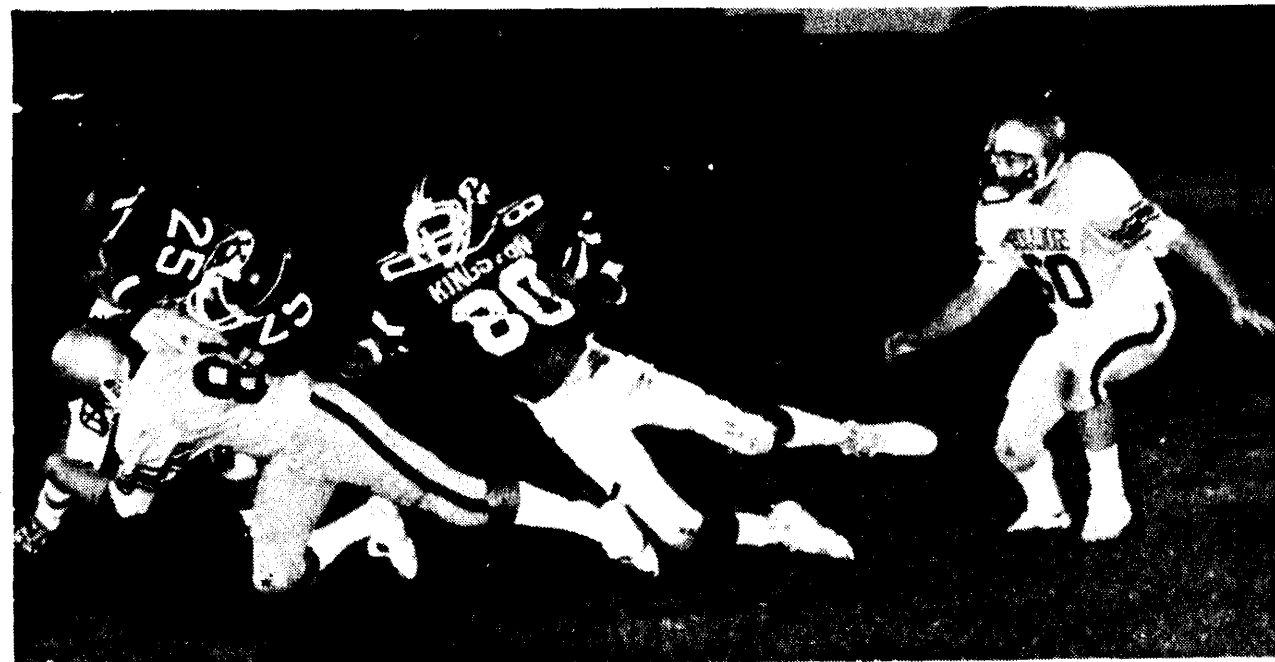

The third quarter started out sluggish, with both teams having a hard time finding the basket. Each team netted only a pair of buckets to end the quarter 29-19. Iwankovitch credited the Hawk "team defense," which didn't allow any fast break points, as the reason for Caseville's low point total as they shot a meager 19% for the game.

The Hawks outscored Caseville 11-9 in the final period and recorded a 9-point win. Sophomore Darlene Monroe showed great promise as she led the Hawks in both scoring and rebounding. Monroe netted 16 points and grabbed 14 rebounds. Christine Britt was the only other Hawk in double figures, as she recorded 10 points.

The Cass City JV team was also victorious, downing Caseville's JV, 26-24.

The Hawks' home and conference opener was played Saturday, Sept. 13, against the Caro Tigers, who handed the Hawks their first loss of the early 1986 season, 43-35.

Coach Iwankovitch's squad again had trouble finding the basket and a slow first period start, when the Hawks netted only 3 points, put the girls in a hole they wouldn't climb out of. Cass City played without the services of Shannon McIntosh, who is hospitalized with pneumonia, and lost Kelly Deering, who re-injured her ankle in the first period and is expected to be out of action for three weeks. Without the two

ERIC LOTTER scored on this 5-yard jaunt to put Kingston on the score board with the first points of the game with Owen-Gage.

It was the worst flood in history

WATER CASCADING across the bridge on M-81 at the Cass River, east of Cass City, was repeated on bridges all across the Thumb.

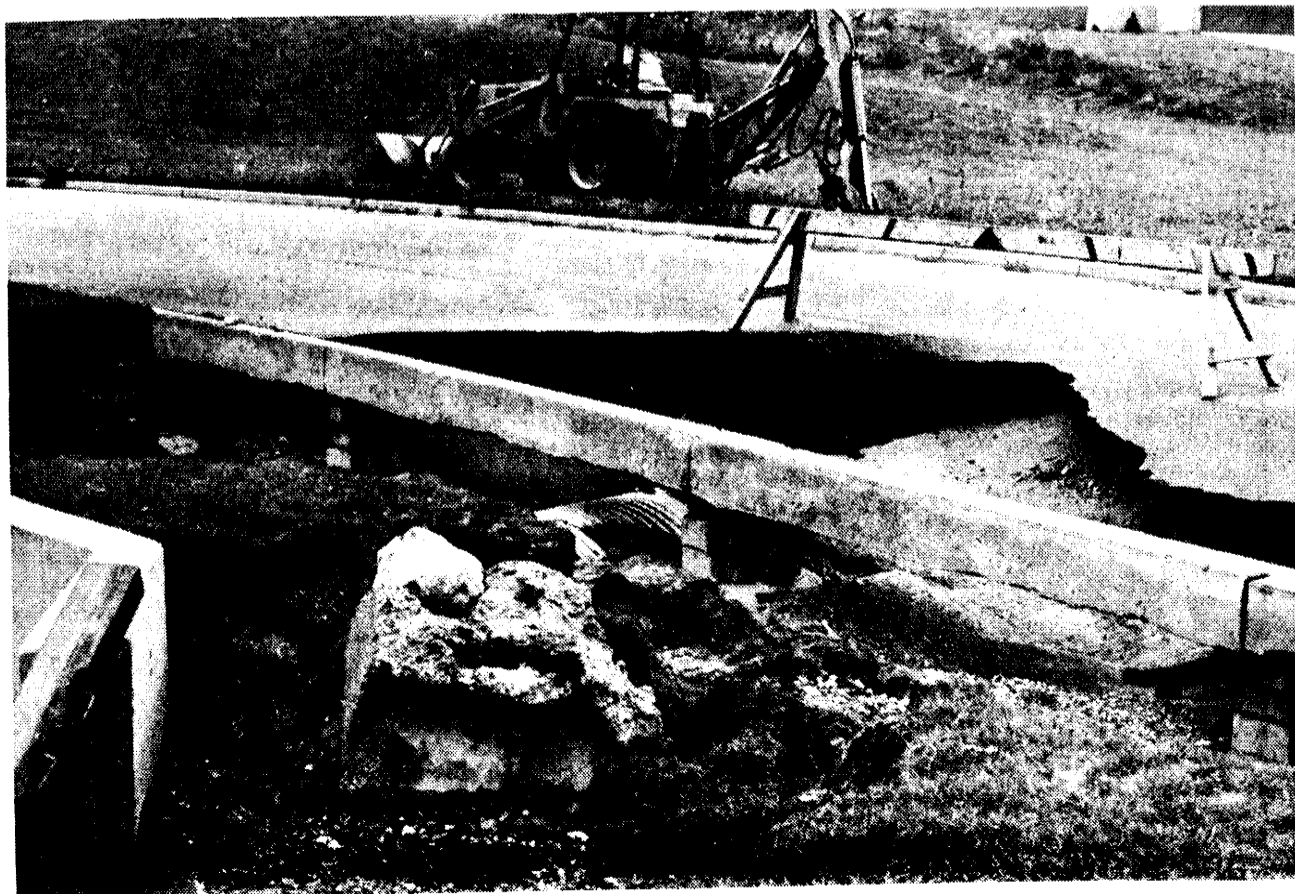

YOU COULDN'T DISTINGUISH the river from the park on M-53 in Sanilac County.

SATURDAY MORNING, water was about a foot and a half deep over M-81. Drivers of 2 vehicles followed the water instead of the road and ended in the ditch.

ALTHOUGH THE furniture in this home of the Jeff Parsells was removed, water damage inside the first floor of the home was minimal. A floor on one side was slightly damaged as the Cass River crested about 2 inches from the ground floor level.

WATER RAN DOWN Beechwood Drive, went over the curb and washed out the back of the headwall at this culvert in Northwood Estates subdivision. It will cost 2 to 3 thousand dollars to repair, said Village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie.

THE CASS RIVER flooded its banks and surrounded this house on the east side of Cemetery Road. Barb and Bob Crickon rent the house.

Flood loss set in millions

and to 17.4 feet Friday morning.

"I've never seen the water this high," Mohr said. "All the old records are going out the window."

The treatment plant processed 1.1 million gallons of sewage and runoff a day since the flooding started. A normal day's processing is 300,000 to 350,000 gallons.

"The plant has a two and one half million gallon capacity," Mohr said. "It's designed to handle a flow of one million gallons and we're handling every bit that's coming in. This kind of flow will probably last a day or two."

Village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie said sewer catch basins had just been cleaned two weeks ago and will have to be cleaned again. As far as streets are concerned, there wasn't that much damage.

The Doerr Road and Garfield Street intersection flooded, as well as Church Street and Oak Street. LaPonsie said there was nothing wrong with the sewer, just too much water.

The culvert at the Spruce Street and Beechwood Drive intersection caved in due to flooding water.

Roads and bridges in the Cass City area were blocked. M-81 east of town was shut down Friday morning when the river overflowed in two places around the bridge. M-53 between Argyle Road and Severance Road was also blocked.

Area schools canceled classes, including Saginaw Valley State College evening classes at Cass City.

L.J. Dillon of Unionville said Colwood Road between Akron Road and Elmwood Road was blocked off. The guard rail was hanging on the corner of Hurds Corner Road and Cass City Road, Dillon said.

Oscar Brooks of 6398 South Seventh Street had his tape measure with him at the Cemetery Road bridge. He said the river was 22 inches from the road at 11 a.m. Friday. He was looking for cracks along the road.

Nearby, Tim and Cliff Jordan paddled a canoe around the flooded yard of Jeff and Darlene Parsell's Cemetery Road home. The Parsells' basement was completely submerged. The Parsells had moved their furniture upstairs and the Jordans transported food from the house to the driveway.

FORCED OUT

Homes in lowlands and all along the Cass River suffered from the deluge, the lucky ones bailing out with minimum damage and the unlucky ones suffering major loss and forced evacuation of their homes.

Residents of 2 houses on Cemetery Road, just north and south of the Cass were among the families that were forced from their homes by the water.

Water a foot deep cascaded into the house of Barb and Bob Crickon, south of the river. We had about 3 feet of water in the living room, said Mrs. Crickon, and it was only through the help of "9 beautiful guys" that we managed to save our furniture.

Mrs. Crickon recounted how it came about. I had called into work at the Charmont to tell them that I wouldn't be in for work because of the rising water in the house. The guys were at the Charmont and heard about it and raced out to our house and took all but 4 pieces of furniture and placed it on the second floor. The remainder they placed on blocks to save it.

Mrs. Crickon isn't sure if she will be able to return to the house. It all depends on how much the owners want to do to restore it, she says. Right now the Crickons are staying at the Wildwood Motel. The Crickons have lived in the home for 6 years and never before experienced major trouble with flooding.

The Jeff Parsells, who live north of the Cass, were more fortunate, although it appeared almost certain at one time as the water was rising around their home that they would also have a living room full of water.

To be prepared, they took away all of the furniture on the ground floor.

The precaution proved unnecessary as the water crested just 3 inches lower than the level that would have sent the water all over the floor.

The basement in the Parsell home was filled and a furnace, water heater and pump knocked out of commission.

Tom Dewey, at Ryland and Guc Plumbing, said he had pumped out about 30 homes and anticipated doing 50 altogether.

"I put in sump pumps and hooked those up," Dewey said. "I blocked off heaters in basements so they don't get wet."

Bean fields on Fred Matthews' 4871 Hadley Road farm had 13 1/4 inches of water standing on them. Matthews said most of the water ran off except in low lying areas. He predicted it would be 10 days before he could even get into his fields.

"My beans are late but it will be two or three weeks before I can get them out," Matthews said. "Some are lying on the ground and will be subject to mold. When they're moldy it kills the plant and the bean in the pod no longer develops. It just shrivels away."

"We have to hope for the best," Matthews said. "We don't have more than 20 percent water kill."

Can claim loss

Taxpayers suffering property losses because of recent flooding may be eligible to claim a casualty loss on their federal income tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service said Friday.

For tax purposes, a casualty loss is the complete or partial destruction of physical property resulting from an identifiable event of a "sudden, unexpected, or unusual" nature. Damages caused by flooding are considered casualty losses.

Taxpayers must be able to substantiate the loss. The taxpayer should compile a list of those items damaged or destroyed and determine their value immediately before and after the loss occurred. Photographs of damaged property as well as photographs of the property before it was damaged, if available, are helpful. Judgments of independent appraisers will also help substantiate losses.

Plush bus

The Bus Boys go to the races in style

When the seven members of the "Bus Boys Racing Club" go to the big auto races around Michigan, they really go in style. They set out in their 34-foot (formerly 60-passenger) converted school bus with most all the conveniences of home. Two cushioned couches convert into beds, as do two large-size dining tables and seats that sleep eight comfortably. There's also: -- A three-burner and oven stove. -- A complete stereo system. -- An 8-by-12-foot seating platform to view the races topside. -- A large hand-made and designed ice cooler. -- An apartment-sized refrigerator. -- Self-contained toilet room with sink. -- Its own water supply. Those are just the obvious accommodations, of course. Planned for near-future installation are: -- A furnace.

-- Hand-finished cabinet and storage works. -- Its own power generator to provide the bus with 12-volt D.C. and 110 A.C. current for its electrical needs. It'll also have gas-operated lights. -- A television. -- Anything else that one of the members might think up, purchase, salvage or scrounge that may fit in.

Larry Haas, 4243 Seeger Street, president of the club, traced its inception back to January, 1985. "We're all a bunch of racing fans and liked to get together. We got to talking and the bus project came into being."

Other members of the club are Bill Druschel of Holland, Ohio, Doug Horner, Ypsilanti, Bill Learman, 6642 Huron Street, who is club secretary, Ron Moore, Delta, Ohio, James Skaggs, 7211 Deckerville Road, Deford, who is treasurer and vice president and stores the bus at his place, and Louis Salas, 6457 Garfield Street.

The club submitted a $700 bid to the Kingston school board to purchase a 1974 Ford school bus that had something like 140,000 miles on it, said Haas. "The bus' motor had been rebuilt and the bus was still in service by the schools when we bought it. It even had a state ticket on it saying it was safe for service." In July, 1985, the club formed a non-profit corporation to become official and registered with the state, mainly for insurance purposes. The Bus Boys Racing Club was recognized, and incorporated, officially July 19, 1985. Each member put up $100 and then voted a $20 monthly assessment for each member to pay for the bus renovation, maintenance and cost of operation.

THE BUS BOYS Racing Club members are, from left, Bill Druschel, Robert Haas, sitting in for Louis Salas, who was missing when the group shot was taken, Bill Learman, Ron Moore, Larry Haas, Jim Skaggs and Doug Horner.

Then the real work began. "We had regular work weekends when all of the members and their wives got together at the Skaggs farm to work on the bus," said Haas. "Sure had some nice parties."

The wives all pitched in. They got us pots, pans, dishes. Even collected money among themselves to pay for our club decals.

Druschel, who is a pattern maker, replaced some rusted fenders on the bus. We would drive various parts, that needed fixing, to Fenton, Mich., where we met Druschel, who brought finished parts back to us. Regular shuttle service.

Druschel did a lot of things at his home in Ohio and then would trailer the parts up here.

The bus is all self-contained now, pressurized water, sewage holding tank. "We bought an old pickup camper and salvaged a lot of the equipment to put in the bus, including the heater, which hasn't been installed yet. We're looking for an air conditioner now. "We got a nice awning for the price of a case of beer."

New bank holding company buys banks

A new bank holding company, Community Financial Corporation, has been formed to buy First of America Bank-Huron in Harbor Beach and First of America-Bay Area branch in Bad Axe which First of America must sell after purchasing 8 banks formerly owned by New Century Bank Corporation.

To fund the purchase a stock sale campaign is currently underway. Richard Gorz, secretary and board member of the new organization, said this week. The company has 142,500 shares in the initial offering which are priced at $20 per share and would raise $2.85 million before sales commission and $2.745 million net. The commission expense is expected to be earned by First of Michigan Corporation which is offering 75,000 shares. A total of 67,500 shares is offered by organizers and it is the hope of the group that they can be sold to investors in the Thumb.

In addition First of Michigan will be paid a consulting fee of $50,000 plus out-of-pocket expenses. Expenses for organization of the company are expected to total about $175,000. "We feel there is a niche for us to acquire small banks in the Thumb, Gorz said, which can benefit by belonging to our group while retaining local control with a local board of directors. While our initial plans are for only the banks in Harbor Beach and Bad Axe, we are talking with several other small banks and there is a definite interest. Cass City State Bank is not now a member of the new corporation, but is the size bank we are looking for in the future and the type which would benefit from belonging to a group.

There isn't a lot of time to complete the stock sale. Gorz says that the plan is to sell all the stock by the end of October with the new corporation assuming ownership Dec. 1.

Other officers include Jack A. Terrill, 45, of Harbor Beach who will be a vice president and director of Community Financial Corporation and president and chief executive officer of the Harbor Beach bank. Gorz is secretary and director of the holding company and will be a director of the bank.

Two other Cass City residents, both members of the board at the Cass City State Bank, will be members of the board of directors. They are Robert V. Wischmeyer and William Kritzman.

This space could be yours for as little as $1.75 per week.

Your neighbor says He's never seen this much rain

The tremendous amount of rainfall last week caused flooding all over the area. Many residents said they had never seen so much water.

"I've been here 30 years and have never seen it that bad," said Floyd Luettke of Cass City.

He said he came into town at 6:30 a.m. Thursday and Cass City was flooded. "The water was almost up to the doors of Old Wood Drug," he explained. The alley behind the Mobil station was like a river. Luettke saw a Chevette which had water to the middle of the wheels, water was to the bumper of an El Camino and Dr. Hall's office had water up to the basement windows, he said. "It was 8 inches deep in the alley and it ran down a block running over Seeger," he described.

He said that the station received a wrecker call to a house at Hurds Corner and Elmwood Road Thursday morning because a car there was flooded. "That was the first time I've ever had to wear hip boots to a call," he added. The water was up to the doors of the car and inside it.

Luettke said that he's only seen it this bad about 30 years ago when the town got 7 to 8 inches of rain.

He is the owner-operator of the Cass City Mobil Station. Luettke would not disclose his age, but it's somewhere over the half century mark.

Christian candidates

Nine Tuscola County churches will sponsor a special election-year meeting with candidates for public office Sunday, Sept. 21. The meeting will be called "Christians Meet the Candidates" and will be a question-and-answer session with candidates for county, state and federal offices. The program will begin at 3:00 p.m., and is open to the public. All 9 of the "fundamentalist" Baptist churches in the county are sponsoring this information gathering effort. Questions will be asked by 3 different moderators that reflect the special concerns of evangelical Christians, organizers said. Later in the afternoon, questions will be received from the audience. "Christians Meet the Candidates" will take place in the 600-seat auditorium of the Juniata Baptist Church, which is located at 5656 Washburn Road, between Vassar and Mayville.

SUBSTITUTE TEACHERS $145 Per Day

12-hour session brings tentative noneconomic issues agreement

A 12-hour bargaining session, with time out only for meals, resulted in the tentative settlement of noneconomic issues only as the strike by Cass City teachers represented by the Tri-County Bargaining Association entered its third week.

Ed Pasant, one of the 2 members of the Cass City Teachers Association to sit in the marathon session Sunday, said it was the first serious attempt by school representatives to negotiate. Geraldine Tibbits, the other teacher to bargain Sunday, said that it was too bad that the board waited so long to negotiate. Sheldon Markley, the professional bargainer for the union, was also present.

Representing the school were Don Crouse, superintendent, and members of the school board, working in shifts.

What was settled, according to Crouse, were several non-economic issues.

The concept that teachers will have a voice in class size was accepted, as an agreement was reached saying that class size will be reviewed by teachers subject to financial and facility needs.

The issue of split classes, 2 grades taught by the same teacher in the same room, will be studied by a joint committee of the union, school and citizens at large from the district.

Still to be decided are 2 other noneconomic issues.

The union wants teachers to lose seniority if they join the ranks of the administration. They do not lose seniority now. The school wants to have the benefits for health insurance specified in the master contract. Neither of these items appears to be a major stumbling block in ending the strike.

What is the major obstacle, and has been since the strike began, is the amount of raise that the school will grant and the teachers accept.

Pasant said that the union presented a plan Sunday that calls for a raise of 7 percent.

As it has in the past, the school says that the proposal is much higher than this because the offer does not include the raises granted for length of service. Crouse said that he has not run down the figures on the latest offer, but knows that it would cost the district well in excess of $150,000 per year. In the Cass City district, a mill raises about $100,000.

That offer is one that the board will not consider. No new negotiations were scheduled at the conclusion of Sunday's long session.

$145 offer brings teacher response

Supt. Don Crouse said today that the Cass City School District's advertisements for substitute teachers have resulted in applications from all over mid-Michigan and that 54 teachers with the proper certification have indicated a desire to fill the positions.

Many of them arrived this morning (Monday), he explained, and we expect many more Tuesday. The school has been advertising for substitutes at $145 per day. Ed Pasant said that was $5,000 more than he received for 180 days of teaching last year.

Crouse explained that the offer was determined by taking the total number of teachers in the system and dividing it into the total paid, which came to $137 a day. In addition, he said, our offer to the teachers this year was between $8 and $9 more per day and that was how we arrived at the figure to pay the substitutes.

Crouse also pointed out that the offer was for substitute teachers, not teachers to replace the strikers. The district still pays all the fringe benefits for the teachers in the system, he said.

Geraldine Tibbits, Cass City teacher who has been active in the negotiations, pointed out that the school would lose state aid if it used noncertified teachers.

"Everybody's finished with their summer activities and there's nothing left to do," said Krista Iseler, 16, a sophomore. "People are starting to get on each other's nerves," she added.

"It's boring for us kids," said senior Brent Kostanko, 17. He said he is working right now but wouldn't mind going back. "I wish we were in school. Today's my birthday and I'm usually in school for it," said freshman Suzy Britt, 15.

Jim Jeung, 16, a senior, said that he hopes it doesn't go on too long. "It's okay for a short time but I'm getting sick of vacation," he commented.

Students want to return to school

As the strike by Cass City teachers entered day 8, Thursday, one thing seemed clear - the students want to go back to school.

In a random, informal phone survey of students attending Cass City High School, the Chronicle found that overwhelmingly the response was, "We want to go to school."

A variety of reasons was given but probably the number one complaint was boredom.

"Everybody's finished with their summer activities and there's nothing left to do," said Krista Iseler, 16, a sophomore. "People are starting to get on each other's nerves," she added.

"It's boring for us kids," said senior Brent Kostanko, 17. He said he is working right now but wouldn't mind going back.

"I wish we were in school. Today's my birthday and I'm usually in school for it," said freshman Suzy Britt, 15.

Jim Jeung, 16, a senior, said that he hopes it doesn't

Record crop in jeopardy

Sun now enemy of bean farmers

Providing the weather stays cool and dry, in two to three weeks there will be plenty of bean soup in the pot - and not in the fields.

If it gets hot while the water from last week's storms is still in fields, it will cook the beans, according to County Extension Director Bill Bortel.

Bean growers didn't need Sunday's sunshine, Bortel said. He hopes it will stay overcast and cool. As it is, it will take two weeks before farmers can get back in the fields.

"Beans will be the most vulnerable of anything because beans are in the water," Bortel said.

Although it is hard to put a dollar figure on the amount of damage the rains did, Bortel said 25 percent to one-third of Tuscola County's dry bean acres will be affected.

"Some of it's going to be completely gone," Bortel said. "And others will be only 10 to 20 percent affected."

Bortel wasn't sure how prices would be affected because he didn't know how far the damage extended from Canada to Minnesota.

Monday's 2/3 to 3/4 inch of rain didn't help the assessment.

Before the rains, bean crop predictions were very optimistic.

We were expecting the best yielding crop we've ever had, said Valley Marketing Cooperative Vice-president James Ostrowski. The early harvested beans showed a very good yield.

"In North America as a whole, we had the potential to overproduce by one million bags," said Ostrowski, who is also Michigan Bean Commission's treasurer.

"Last year we had 7.2 million to 7.5 million bags. This year we were looking to produce 8.5 million bags. One dollar dropped off the grower's price ($14 to $13) only because the crop was looking so good and opportunities to sell were so limited."

In the U.S., dry bean planting was set at 1.72 million acres, 9 percent over last year and 15 percent above two years ago.

Michigan bean growers planted 475,000 acres this year and expected to harvest close to what was planted, according to Michigan Bean Commission Executive Secretary Jim Byrum. Last year 410,000 acres were planted.

"We have to wait a week to see how much the damage is," Byrum said. "It's conceivable we could have lost a lot. But if you're a farmer and lose 30 percent of your crop and prices go up 30 percent - it's a wash."

Selling beans remains a challenge for Michigan bean growers.

Domestic consumption has decreased 20 percent over the last 20 years, according to a paper by U.S. Agriculture Department Economist Neil Conklin. A change in lifestyles and a rising disposable income were two reasons for the decrease.

According to Byrum in the August 1986 Bean Commission Journal, "Consumers today aren't inclined to spend half a day soaking navy beans. If they want bean soup, they want to pull a package from the freezer, pop it in the microwave and eat it five minutes later."

Marketing strategies and ethnic convenience foods constitute two methods to increase consumption. Beans are also being touted as health food.

The October 1986 issue of Cyclist magazine pointed out the virtues of beans. They are cholesterol free, rich in protein, complex carbohydrates, B vitamins, iron, potassium and magnesium. They're also an excellent source of fiber.

However, a rising disposable income means most consumers get their protein needs from more expensive foods. People with low incomes who don't qualify for food assistance eat the most beans because they need less expensive protein.

"It's not a glamour food," Ostrowski said. "It's U.S. consumption) has been stagnant."

Michigan growers have recognized the need to market beans in other countries.

"We just had a trade tender in Africa," Ostrowski said. "They had a tender for 5000 tons - 110,000 bags and we were invited to offer on that tender."

A representative from the Michigan Bean Commission will go to a food and trade fair in Kenya later this year. There are a lot of people to feed in that part of the world, Ostrowski added.

A representative will also be at a Paris food fair. Most European canning companies will be there.

Ostrowski said the African countries are white bean consumers.

In Algeria, navy beans sold well when the difference between navies and Great Northerns was so great.

"The developing countries are where the marketing possibilities lie," Ostrowski explained. "But c. they have enough money to buy beans or will our government fund them?"

Ostrowski said there are two U.S. government funding programs. GSM 102 is a payment guarantee program and PL 480 is a food-relief program. GSM 102 allows foreign countries a longer time to repay the U.S. government.

Bean production was given a push by new exports to Mexico, Europe, Japan and Angola. U.S. bean production went from two billion pounds in 1979 to 3.2 billion pounds in 1981. Acreage since has been reduced because Mexican sales dropped and prices are lower.

"We have to start producing what the market needs: rather than trying to market what we produce," Ostrowski said.

go on too long. "It's okay for a short time but I'm getting sick of vacation," he commented.

"I think we should go back," said 16-year-old Lisa Nicholais. "We need an education."

Another concern was the fact that they remain helpless in a situation where they are directly affected.

Lisa Russell, 15, a junior, is upset about the strike. "We have no voice and we get the raw end of the deal," she said. She isn't happy with the prospect of making the time up in the summer either.

"It's not the student's fault so we should be able to go to school," commented junior Kathy Marshall, 16. Marshall and others pointed out the possibility of teaching without a contract.

"I think that they should negotiate while teaching," said Mike Jones, 16, and a junior. He said that from what he read the teachers are asking for a 19 percent increase in wages and he said that it is too much. "I think they should get an increase over the next 3 or 4 years," he added.

Stacey Capps, a sophomore, commented on the fact that a settlement can't be reached. "I think that if they are adults they should be able to sit down and decide something," she said. Capps, 14, added that she thinks that teachers deserve a little more because they do extra activities outside of school.

Caro man sentenced to jail

A Caro man was sentenced to one year in the Tuscola County jail Monday by Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge Patrick Joslyn.

Gary Woody, 23, was charged with attempted malicious destruction of police property while lodged in the jail. Woody allegedly damaged a trash can April 29. He was given 117 days credit for time served.

Edward Cain Jr., 22, of Vassar, entered an innocent plea to a charge of unlawfully driving away of an automobile. The charge stems from an incident Aug. 25. A pre-trial was set for Sept. 22.

Donald Tedford, 45, of Millington, entered a plea of guilty to a probation violation. Tedford told the judge that he consumed alcoholic beverages May 8, which violated an order of his probation.

Stephen Stricker, 19, of Caro was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail and 3 years probation on a charge of breaking and entering a vehicle with intent to steal over $5. He was also granted school release. Stricker was placed on a one-year delayed sentence Nov. 12, 1985. He was given one day credit for time served. Christine Bethway, 32, of Emmett, was sentenced to one year and one day in the Tuscola County jail on a charge of unlawful use of a motor vehicle. She was also ordered to receive psychiatric evaluation. Bethway was given 42 days credit for time served.

Joseph Jacobs, 30, was sentenced to from 13 to 24 months in prison for resisting and obstructing a police officer. He was given 115 days credit. The charge stems from an incident Jan. 4, when he was pulled over for improper plates. It was then discovered that he had no driver's license. When the officer attempted to put him into custody, Jacobs allegedly threw him to the ground.

TACA loses appeal

The Thumb Area Commission on Aging's appeal to Region VII Area Agency on Aging was denied Friday.

Following a TACA board meeting Monday, Director Alan Sward said TACA will take the appeal one step further to the State's Office for Service to the Aging. TACA has 10 days to submit an appeal.

"I guess they feel like they've got to try," said Tuscola County Commissioner Royce Russell (District 2).

Russell said he thought a couple people on the committee that heard the appeal had their minds made up before they walked in the door.

"I think the judge had his mind made up," Russell said.

Sward said he wished he knew why the appeal was denied. He said the appeal committee only said it would recommend to Region VII the appeal be denied.

Commissioner Michael Green (District 5) saw some form of TACA would be used as a committee to funnel money and be responsible for money being spent.

Language for a proposal to allow senior millage money to go directly to the Human Development Commission was being drawn up Monday and turned in the Tuscola County Clerk's office. The proposal will be voted on November 4.

Rent-a-Stork Delivers The Message

Birth Announcement Delivery Throughout The Thumb

Our primary service is the rental of the Rent-a-Stork outdoor display. This is usually delivered and placed in front of the new baby's home to tell friends and neighbors of the new arrival. Many people also order storks for the new grandparents, showers, offices and hospitals.

The adorable display, which is a character stork with top-hat and spectacles, holds a cloth bundle from its beak. The color of the bundle indicates whether the baby is a boy or girl.

The service typically has a seven-day rental charge and normally includes pick-up and delivery.

Red Cross declares major disaster areas

The American National Red Cross declared major portions of Michigan national disaster areas following devastating flooding from last week's storms.

Early estimates indicate over three million dollars will be needed to assist flood victims throughout the state, said Red Cross Wolverine Territory Field Service Manager Wayne Brennessel.

Red Cross disaster sites have opened throughout affected areas. Volunteers and staff provided victims with food and shelter. National disaster teams are arriving.

Michigan residents are being asked to assist the Red Cross by sending checks earmarked "Michigan Fall Floods" to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 22064, Lansing, MI 48909.
