Cass City School Board

Liability risk nixes sponsorship request

Potential liability problems prompted the Cass City Board of Education Monday night to take no further action on a proposal to sponsor nonschool groups, particularly providing bus transportation.

Also during the 2-hour monthly meeting, the board learned that an additional one-mill request may need to be considered in the near future as a result of a $100,000 budget deficit.

School Supt. Donald Crouse told the board that he checked with the school's liability insurance company regarding transportation for nonschool groups via sponsorship. The action stems from a request from the local Girl Scouts organization.

"The thought made the underwriter very nervous; the underwriter felt the school would open the door for potential liability (and) there would be a substantial increase in the liability premium," he explained.

Crouse added that the company representative "alluded" to the possibility of the school losing its liability coverage.

During an investigation, Crouse noted that he learned the Harbor Beach School District is currently revising its transportation policy, while the Reese School system has and probably will continue to sponsor such transportation.

Girls Scout Service Unit Director Kay Warner argued Monday that some school-sponsored events already are not covered by the school's liability coverage. She told the board that "possible liability" shouldn't be enough reason to reject the Girls Scouts' request.

"There's potential liability in anything you do," she remarked. "If we sat down and said, 'what if . . .', the school wouldn't do anything."

Crouse indicated that school-sponsored groups are covered by existing liability coverage.

Also brought up was a concern that school sponsorship in terms of transportation would mean the school is sponsoring all Girl Scout activities.

Board member Ben Hobart urged the board to allow the request to die, saying, "I don't feel we can put (our) insurability at risk."

BUDGET DEFICIT

Concerning the budget deficit, Crouse presented a proposed revised 1986-87 budget for board action. He outlined the plan, noting that a total of $200,000 is going for asbestos abatement over the next 2 years.

The money is from a one-mill, 2-year request approved by voters last spring.

The 1986-87 fund balance, set at $371,322 as of June 30, 1987, will be reduced to $271,322 because of $100,000 to be used this year for the project.

The revised spending plan, adopted by the board, calls for total revenues of $4.213 million, up by $334,977 from the budget adopted June 16, 1986. Expenditures are set at $4.212 million, up by $265,427 from the previously adopted budget.

Crouse stated that the school "will have to raise an additional mill for operations" within a couple of years to erase the deficit.

In other business Monday, the board approved a low bid of $82,948, including trade-ins, for 3 new buses from the McFadden Corporation.

Lamco Corp. of Standish bid $87,194, while body-only bids were submitted by Great Lakes Coach Sales Co. ($13,835) and the Carpenter Co. ($14,260).

POLICIES

The board adopted a policy stating that transfer students are not required to take the Michigan Assessment test if they only need 6 or fewer credits to graduate.

Also approved was an addition to an existing policy regarding students who miss a certain number of school days being required to pass a comprehensive examination to receive credit for a class.

The amendment adopted by the board states that the exam must be successfully completed within the student's first semester.

THE ACTION AT Ivan Paladi's ice rink 3 nights a week is fast and furious as the younger skaters challenge the older skaters in friendly games of hockey. The 135-foot x 75-foot rink is located behind Paladi's residence just east of Deford.

Committee work on July 4th celebration underway

Visions of mud volleyball, bed races, a dunk tank and similar activities probably aren't dancing in the heads of area residents lately, with snow and nippy temperatures dominating the local weather pattern.

And, admittedly, Cass City's annual 4th of July celebration is still another 136 days away.

But a 6-member committee in charge of the 9th annual event has already begun active preparations to insure that the expected thousands of spectators aren't disappointed.

The committee during an organizational meeting last week assigned responsibilities and discussed plans for the upcoming festival.

According to member Geraldine Prieskorn, the committee is hoping to include a number of old and new fundraisers to help cover festival expenses and eventually build up a fund

"cushion." The money, she added, could be used to fund a band for the annual parade, for example.

Also, the increasing cost of obtaining liability insurance would be less of a burden in terms of planning special programs and events for the celebration, Prieskorn noted. Liability coverage for the event currently runs about $1,000.

Fund-raising activities to be repeated this year include a T-shirt design contest at Cass City High School, entertainment by the Detroit-based Irish Gaels, arts and crafts stands, a teen dance and service club concessions.

The parade, plenty of food and fireworks, an annual crowd pleaser, also are being planned. The fireworks display will probably be similar to last year's, Prieskorn said, adding, "20-minutes for $2,500."

"We're rehashing what everybody's done before, and what we need to do next," Prieskorn continued. She added that the committee is looking into some new ideas, including asking astronaut Brewster Shaw to be grand marshal of the parade.

Other possibilities include planning some activities for Sunday, July 5, such as an ecumenical service at the village park.

"We encourage people to come help and enjoy the event with us," Prieskorn remarked. "We can use some help with planning, and new ideas."

The committee's next meeting is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. March 17 at the Charmont.

Committee members and their 1987 assignments are Margo Donahue, Irish Gaels; Sandy Kozan, arts and crafts; Gary Jones, parade; Lota Hartel, concessions; Duke Sward, fireworks; and Prieskorn, advertising.

Revitalization of Cass City Chamber announced

Picture Cass City without Walbro Corporation, without General Cable, without Anrod Screen Cylinder, and without the remainder of the small plants that furnish the jobs that provide the economic lifeblood of the community.

All of these plants in Cass City can be directly traced to the efforts of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce. It was the Chamber that organized the group that provided for the first industrial development site which started Cass City's industrial growth.

While the history of the Chamber is sprinkled with enough achievements to make everyone appreciative of what it has accomplished, it's no secret that interest and participation have waned in recent years.

In today's competitive times a strong and active Chamber is deemed essential by persons interested in the future of the community.

To get forging ahead again, as it did in years past, the Chamber last week reorganized. New officers were elected headed by Tom Herron, president. Also working closely with the group is Lambert Althaver, chairman of the Cass City Economic Development Corporation.

A 2 pronged attack is underway. The first is to widen the base with more members. The board hopes to exceed the 100-plus members that belonged to the Chamber when it was most active. To do this they have organized a sliding scale of dues for members. There are 10 different categories including one for just $10 for individuals interested in seeing more jobs and a better Cass City.

We want interested individuals to join the Chamber, members said, so that we can tap them for ideas and help in projects that help the community.

The other 9 categories are arranged by businesses, and the number of employees determine the amount paid from a top of $200 to as little as $30.

Several plans for improving the community are already on the drawing boards by the new board. They include:

New welcoming signs at the entrances to the village.

A refurbishing system for the alleys and back entrances to stores.

A return to Cass City as "Christmas Town."

The reestablishment of "welcome baskets" for all new arrivals.

The establishment of a Chamber of Commerce building on Main Street.

Regular and special meetings of the Chamber will be announced and all members will be urged to attend, Herron said.

County asked to pay back $44,741 in federal funds

Whether or not Tuscola County owes some $44,741 due to a decision to move Emergency Services Director James McCann out of his office remains unclear following discussion between county and federal officials Friday.

The County Board of Commissioners, during a rescheduled meeting Friday, were told that the federal dollars will have to be refunded if the Emergency Services Office isn't manned by its director.

The commissioners in December voted to move both the Emergency Services and Veterans Counseling offices to the Health Department building on West Caro Road.

McCann, who is director of both offices, previously worked out of the basement of the county jail.

But District Emergency Management Coordinator Ben Sizemore told commissioners Friday that he believes moving McCann out of the office is a violation of an agreement between the county and federal government.

Milk production down

Deford dairy farmer lauds buyout program

It's been a year of changes for area dairy farmer Gerald Hicks.

Nearly a year ago, he submitted a bid in the federal dairy herd buyout program after more than 43 years in the business.

The Deford native, whose bid was one of 18 in Tuscola County accepted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has between March 1 and Aug. 31 to sell each of his 45 milkers and 45 heifers.

The 6-month period marks the third and final phase of the buyout program, which Hicks says has been an excellent move for both himself and the state's dairy industry.

"They told us that if you're 60 years old and intending to go out of the business in the next 5 years, then (the buyout) is tailor-made for you. I think they were right," Hicks remarked in a recent interview.

"We decided if we could put in a bid and end up with some money in our pocket, that we'd do it," he continued.

Hicks said his bid amount was in the "upper third" among acceptable bids, the maximum amount of which was $22.50 per hundredweight.

"The buyout plan is working. There are fewer cows and less milk in the market," Hicks noted that a significant reduction in milk production—3 to 4 percent—has occurred since the buyout began. "And we're only 60 percent into the 18-month buyout period."

Another part of the program's success to date, he said, is increased emphasis on advertising of dairy products.

An area of the program which hasn't been publicized enough, according to Hicks, is how the program is being funded.

"There's been very little printed in the newspapers about the money (40 cents per hundredweight) that's being taken out of farmers for the program," he noted.

OPTIMISM

Hicks' optimism concerning the buyout appears to reflect the current situation, according to Tuscola County Agricultural Agent Dennis Stein.

"I'm more optimistic now than I was in the beginning," Stein said, adding that grade I milk has increased in price by about $1 per hundredweight during the past 9 months.

The buyout was designed to cut the annual milk surplus nationwide by 50 percent—from 20 million pounds to 10 million pounds—by September. "If the trend continues, we should be about where we want to be," the livestock specialist predicted.

Stein pointed out that a drop in the milk supply since the program began also is the result of 2 other factors. There's a shortage of grade II (manufactured) milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin, where Michigan's market order price is set, and a drought has plagued the southeastern portion of the country, he explained.

Stein, who estimates the buyout is responsible for 60 to 80 cents of the milk price increase, cautioned that expansion of dairy herds and similar measures by farmers after the buyout ends would probably void the program's positive results.

Although Hicks is satisfied with his decision to take part in the buyout, he admits that change of any kind seems alien.

He still lives in the house he was born in nearly 62 years ago, and he's never changed milk haulers, milk companies or farm organizations. He's always attended the same church, and has "spent the past 40 years married to the same woman."

AREA DAIRY farmer Gerald Hicks is satisfied with his decision a year ago to take part in the federal dairy herd buyout program, which he says is working. Dairy farming has been a way of life for the 61-year-old area native, who will sell his entire herd by the end of August.

Time clocks
by Melva E. Guinther

Thanks to the wonders of technology, we can now program the coffeepot to provide a savory fresh brew when we get up in the morning.

A handy little electric heater also starts up at the predetermined time, so the kitchen is cozy and warm while we drink our morning coffee.

We can preset radios, VCRs, lights, etc. Now why can't the world of science come up with something to get people started when the alarm goes off?

"Morning people" will never understand what it's like to drag oneself out of bed when neither the spirit nor the flesh is willing.

Only sheer determination and the ritual of routine allow us to make it to the kitchen for that uplifting cup of coffee that gives us the strength to continue.

People who leap out of bed before dawn to go walking or jogging, and women who clean the house and do the laundry before going to work at 8 are incredible.

While I admire them, I'll never join their ranks. My inner time clock is indelibly set to function between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. unless science intervenes.

Here they are -- the long awaited answers to last week's mental flexibility test. (Oh, no! You did WHAT with last week's paper?)

(And anyone else he can get to help.)

Last week the Chronicle installed a new (to us) commercial printing press. It weighs 3 tons or so and was moved here by Marv Winter.

He was unloading it by himself (I was there but Marv's too smart to let me get close to any machinery) and Don Ball walked by. Without being asked he grabbed a pry bar and worked for about a half hour getting the press off the truck and into the shop.

He sauntered off before I could properly say thanks. Where else but a small town can you find good neighbors like this?

We noticed at one station in town (there may be others) where you pay a quarter to get air. I know this will bring negative comment, but it shouldn't.

This is the day of self-serve and the old-fashioned service station is as dead as the passenger pigeon. Dealers have to make a living somehow.

Annual Michigan Bean Shippers Association meet set for Feb. 25

Michigan dry bean processors will convene in Frankenmuth next week for the Michigan Bean Shippers Association's 94th Annual Meeting.

The meeting, scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 25, will be held at the Bavarian Inn Motor Lodge. Industry officials expect over 200 to attend the all-day meeting.

Delegates from the United Kingdom, Canada and as far west as California will join the Michigan contingent to review the aftermath of the weather ravages that destroyed or forced abandonment of nearly two-thirds of the state's 1986 dry bean crop.

The ripple effects of the bean products that were lost as a result of unprecedented rainfall during the months of September and October are still being sorted out by the various sectors of the trade.

Estimates from the Federal and Michigan Agricultural Statistics Service show Michigan's 1986 Navy bean production at approximately 1.5 million cwt., only a third of the crop garnered the previous year.

Total bean production in Michigan for 1986 has been pegged at 2.7 million cwt. The last time a crop of this size was harvested in Michigan occurred in 1945.

"If It Fitz..."

Olds woes

By Jim Fitzgerald

It really hurts me to type these words. It hurts because I fell down and injured both hands while running after my 10-year-old Oldsmobile and a tow truck.

You remember that car. I recently wrote that it was seldom driven and the only reason I still owned the awful-looking rust bucket was because a dealer wouldn't give me anything for it when I bought a 1984 model. I shouldn't have written that. The auto gods beyond The Twilight Zone were angered and that 1977 Olds has been making a fool of me ever since.

It began when I used the old Olds to give my wife a ride home after she had to leave the newer Olds at the auto repair shop because I'd recently added air to its right front tire. You may recall I wrote about that, too.

I was angry because the nozzle of the air hose couldn't be affixed to the tire valve stem unless the wheel cover was removed. This required a key and the tire jack handle. I couldn't find either one, but I did find a small boy who took pity on my embarrassing ignorance. He also took $3.

Subsequently, an interesting new rattle was added to the inside of my top desk drawer. Several readers sent me little metal gizmos called "valve stem extenders." A few of these readers were kind enough not to insult me for not knowing that the extenders make it possible to put air in a tire without removing the wheel cover. But most of the extender donors wanted to know how I could possibly live so long and be so stupid.

Anyway, a few days later my wife said the 1984 Olds had to go to the auto repair shop because it wasn't "riding right." Ultimately, a mechanic said the small boy had put so much air in the tire I "was lucky it didn't blow right off the rim." But first there was the ugly sight of my spinning the wheels of the 1977 Olds and going nowhere.

It happened outside the auto repair shop while I was waiting for my wife to park the 1984 model. I was blocking the shop entrance through which a shop employe wanted to drive a car. He waited with increasing exasperation while I gunned the 1977 motor but didn't move. I blamed the ice on the driveway.

The shop employe finally looked inside my car and blamed the emergency brake, which was on. I said I couldn't understand that as I never pulled the brake handle because it made the hood pop open. He said I should get out of my car and let him move it. Which I did.

My wife was watching my bumbling humiliation. "You looked like The Poor Soul on the old Jackie Gleason TV show," she said, and when she later tried to describe the scene to our children, she got laughing so hard she couldn't talk for five minutes (a world's record for her).

Fortunately, she wasn't looking a few mornings later when I fell in the parking lot behind our apartment building. I'd been alerted that my 1977 Olds was being towed away and, in a barely-too-late rush to rescue it, lost my footing. It is not pleasant to see a 60-year-old poop fall on cement — although the building manager didn't seem too upset by the sight.

He explained that the parking lot was needed to accommodate the equipment of a roofer due to begin work that morning. Residents had been warned to move their cars via notices posted in the elevators late the previous afternoon after I was through riding elevators for the day. A building employe who summoned me to the scene had suggested the car be unhooked because I was on my way from the 26th floor, but she was ignored because the tow truck driver wanted his fee and this is often an impatient, to-hell-with-you world.

My first inclination was to attack the building manager. But then I decided it wasn't his fault. My old Olds is punishing me for writing nasty things about it and other cars, not to mention Roger Smith, and it's no use fighting back. The only question is what humiliation will next be delivered to The Poor Soul from beyond The Twilight Zone?

Help! I am trapped inside a Stephen King novel.

The Haire Net

There has been an avalanche of what I call "smart" remarks lately. The kind that sound good, but really have little if any relevance to the topic under discussion.

They remind me of the little guy who has been pinned to the wall by logic and then blurts, "If you're so smart, why ain't you rich?"

Cut from the same cloth is a statement issued by Sen. Dan DeGrow, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, last week. He says that we have a problem with teen pregnancy and prescribing birth control devices is saying we give up on the problem. He advocates financially penalizing school districts that opt for clinics that give out birth control prescriptions.

I have serious reservations about that, but at least it is a pertinent observation.

We part company when he says, "We have a problem with teenage drug addicts, too, and we don't say, 'Here's your cocaine, go down the hall and use it.'" Now that's a pretty speech, but think about it. What he's saying is that taking drugs is the same as practicing birth control, conveniently forgetting that one is illegal and the other is not. Forgetting that one is life threatening and the other is not. Talk about comparing apples and oranges.

It should be remembered that at the present time parents and the community have the final say about access to birth control information at schools with clinics. Most schools in the Thumb are not ready for sex education classes and we have no quarrel with that. We suggest that those barriers will be weakened in the months and years ahead.

Sex education is more than a moral question these days. The threat of AIDS hangs overhead like a sword suspended on a thread and according to the experts we are going to have to come to grips with it. Advertising for condoms on television has started and is sure to saturate the air waves.

No matter how great the health threat, the position of the rabid minority will not be swayed.

Most times because the majority isn't concerned enough to demand changes, the minority opinion carries more weight than it should. That won't be the case if AIDS becomes the threat right here in the rural Thumb that the experts predict.

Rather than say no sex education classes, perhaps we would be better served by studying the issue to devise a class that will protect our youth and still stay within the boundaries that are acceptable to the community.

We don't need to have clinics that write prescriptions for birth control, perhaps, but we do need to inform our youngsters of the dangers and responsibilities that are connected with sex.

Civil War "soldier" shares love of history

The Cass City Intermediate School's industrial arts room was standing room only Feb. 13, as 52 fifth and sixth graders came to listen to a Civil War foot soldier speak about army life in the 1860s.

Jim Martin, 27, from Bay City, an authentic Civil War actor, entertained the children for an hour with his stories about what life was like for the soldiers during the war between the North and the South.

He entered the room completely outfitted in an 1862 army issue uniform, carrying a backpack and a musket. He talked about the equipment he carried, the gambling that went on among the soldiers, the loneliness they felt, the terrible food the army issued them, and then answered many eager questions asked by the children.

The subject that seemed to entrance the students was Martin's musket. The long brown rifle was a re-make of the 1863 Springfield rifle used during the Civil War. When asked why he didn't own an original rifle, Martin said that he would be afraid that he would break it and "then something in your history would be lost." However, the rifle he owns is fully operational.

Another issue that seemed to delight the children was when Martin discussed the food in the Civil War. He said that the main staple of food was hardtack. "It's like eating a brick. The soldiers called them worm castles," he said. He held up a white thick cracker and made a face. "It doesn't taste like anything, but it lasted a long time if it didn't get wet."

The problem with hardtack, Martin said, was that it would become infested with bugs and soldiers would have to dip it in their coffee to soften the cracker and get rid of the bugs.

However, as the war went on the soldiers' diet became a bit better. The soldiers were supplied with tins of evaporated milk and salted beef and pork. "They used so much salt to preserve it that the salt would burn men's tongues so they couldn't taste anything for a week," said Martin. The food eaten by the men was lacking in vitamins and nutrients.

BACKGROUND

Some students inquired how Martin became interested in the Civil War. He said that when he was 17 he vacationed at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, with his parents and walked through the battlefields and read the monuments, but didn't become hooked until the guide told him that over 53,000 men died in the Civil War.

When he returned to Bay City after college, he went to work for the Bay City Historical Museum. He joined a group of people who were interested in the Civil War, but they weren't authentic. "There's about a fourth of a million actors who reenact the Civil War in the United States," said Martin. "I don't know how many are authentic, however."

Martin is now a foot soldier in the Third Michigan Volunteer Regiment Company A, which has 25 members. He participates in the reenactment of battles each summer to celebrate the 125th anniversary of the Civil War, which started last year and will run until 1991. Each summer the great battles of the war are reenacted by these men. Last year it was held at Bulls Run, VA, the scene of the first Civil War battle, and this summer it will be held in Tennessee.

"You live, eat, sleep the Civil War," said Martin. For a week Martin and the other men lived as the soldiers did in the 1860s. Martin said he wrote letters to his wife by candlelight with a quill pen and inkwell and lost 5 pounds. "Everything we wear is authentic," said Martin. "Our standards are so high, we are authentic right down to our 1855 army issued underwear."

Martin said he learned about the life in the 1860s as he went along. "It's an endless amount of reading" and learning from other people, Martin said. "You must live it." He has been reenacting the Civil War foot soldier for 5 years.

Martin has spoken, individually and with others from the Third Michigan, at schools, colleges, clubs. "You name it, I've done it," he said. Martin, who was laid-off by the museum 3 years ago, hopes to get a job in Gettysburg.

JIM MARTIN, an authentic Civil War actor from Bay City, speaks to fifth and sixth graders at Cass City Intermediate School about how life was for a foot soldier during the 1860s.

Millington man pleads guilty in Circuit Court

A 19-year-old Millington man's plea of guilty to the charge of receiving and concealing stolen property over $100 was accepted by the Tuscola County District Court, Feb. 8.

Donald W. Nugent, 5169 W. Millington Rd., faces a maximum of 4 years and/or $2000. Sentence is to be set.

On Sept. 23, 1986, he was charged with receiving and concealing stolen "Mechanics tools, property being of a value in excess of $100," the court report stated. Nugent had also been charged with larceny in a building, but the charge was later dropped.

Steven W. Johnson, 27, 9801 State Rd., Millington, pleaded guilty to larceny by conversion over $100, Feb. 8 in circuit court. Johnson, a habitual offender, was sentenced to 3 months to 7 years "to run concurrently with sentence previously imposed," according to a court report.

Johnson pleaded guilty to "converting to his own use" a vacuum cleaner belonging to the Kirby Company in May of 1986. On Nov. 8, 1976, Johnson was convicted of unarmed robbery. A case was dismissed, Feb. 8, against a 24-year-old Deford man who was given a delayed sentence on March 3, 1986.

Kevin E. Terry, 6508 E. Deckerville Rd., was charged with larceny from a motor vehicle and, according to a circuit court clerk, "If he stays clean for a year, then the case would be dismissed."

Terry was sentenced to complete 80 hours of community service work, $500 in costs, and "had to seek and maintain employment or be in an educational/vocational program," according to a court report. The clerk said that Terry had stayed within the guidelines set down by the court and the case was dismissed.

PROBATION VIOLATION

A 19-year-old Cass City man pleaded not guilty to violating his probation, in circuit court, Feb. 8.

William C. Pomeroy Jr., 2034 Keilitz Rd., was arrested Jan. 17 by the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department when he was observed "driving a motor vehicle in a reckless manner" in a Caro parking lot.

According to a court report, when police stopped Pomeroy he "smelled of alcohol...eyes bloodshot...slurred speech," and "had an open 12-pack in his car."

Pomeroy's bond was set for $5,000 and a hearing is to be set.

Pomeroy had been sentenced to 6 months in jail with work release on March 17, 1986, when he was found guilty of larceny in a building.

A 26-year-old Caro man was found competent to stand trial, in circuit court Feb. 8, for criminal sexual assault in the second degree.

Bill L. Willson, 1757 Van Geisen Rd., faces a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison if found guilty of "engaging in sexual contact with another person being under the age of 13 years," according to a court report.

Willson's bond was set at $15,000.

DISTRICT COURT

Curtis Wynn, 25, 6940 Moriarty Rd., Decker, was sentenced Feb. 11 in district court to fines and costs totaling $500, 2 months probation and his license revoked for 6 months, when he was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

In a Jan. 14 trial, Wynn pleaded no contest to the charge. According to a court report, Wynn was arrested Nov. 8, 1986, when driving on Leach Street, while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Elkland board will "take time" in the chief search

The Elkland Township board held its monthly meeting Feb. 2 and, according to Norma Wallace, clerk, the board "didn't do much of anything."

Wallace said that the board spent most of the time paying bills, but did "okay" the installation of an antenna on top of the fire house. Wallace didn't know how much the antenna and the installation would cost.

The board also decided to take their time in deciding who will replace Jerome Root as Elkland Township fire chief. Root is planning to retire, but hasn't given the board a definite date yet. Root was the first to hold the position as fire chief.

"We don't want to rush into it," said Wallace. "We want to look at the position and see if there are any changes that we would like to make."

The board, which used to meet the second Tuesday of every month, has changed their meeting time to the first Monday of each month, because Supervisor David Milligan has other meetings to attend. "It is just for this year," said Wallace. The board will decide at the end of the year if they will change their meeting back to the original time.

Voided license ends in arrest, ticket

A 17-year-old Deckerville youth was arrested in Cass City Friday for operating a motor vehicle while his license was suspended. Timothy J. Patterson, 2020 Downington Rd., also was ticketed for failing to transfer his license plate to the vehicle he was driving. According to the report, officer Steve Ladd observed Patterson driving towards Cass City High School on N. Seeger Street. Ladd stated that he was informed by another officer that Patterson's operator's license had been suspended. Patterson's license was suspended for failure to appear on a ticket—no proof of insurance—out of Sandusky, the report stated.

Mishaps down in Cass City area

The number of vehicle accidents in the area was down over the past 9 days, as only 2 mishaps were reported to the Cass City Police Department. A Cass City woman was ticketed for failure to yield following a mishap Feb. 9, which resulted in minor injuries to herself and a passenger in her vehicle.

Daniel W. Gilliam, 274 Froede Rd., Deford, was attempting to park on the south alley west of Seeger Street when it struck a parked vehicle, causing slight damage. The owner of the second vehicle is Ida M. Jewett, 6557 E. Elizabeth St., Cass City.

Althaver optimistic on chamber rejuvenation

Beryl M. Bliss, 6785 E. Main St., who was eastbound on Main Street at the Seeger Street intersection, had stopped at a green light in preparation for a left turn, the report stated. Bliss indicated that she could not see around a westbound vehicle, which also was making a left turn, when she turned into the path of another westbound vehicle driven by Craig W. Kelley. Both vehicles sustained light to moderate damage, according to the report, which stated that Bliss and her passenger, Bob Bliss, were treated for minor injuries at Hills and Dales General Hospital. Kelley, 4326 Woodland Avenue, Cass City, was not injured. A minor damage accident involving a parked car was reported Feb. 11. A vehicle driven by

The recent revitalization of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce dominated discussion at a Cass City Economic Development Corporation meeting Feb. 10. Revival of the chamber, according to CCEDC Director Lambert Althaver, means both the local chamber and EDC can be more effective concerning improvement of economic strength in the village. Area farmer's pleased with buyout

Hicks can't remember a time when he wasn't involved in the dairy business which was passed on to him by his father, Archie Hicks, and grandfather, William B. Hicks, who settled in the Deford area in 1897. Archie also was born at the existing Hicks' home at 192 Crawford Rd. Like his father, Hicks became involved in the Michigan Milk Producers Association. He attended meetings from the time his father joined the cooperative in 1945. It was in that year that he initiated a major change at the farm; switching from production of grade II milk to production of grade I milk. "I figured we were doing as good a job as the inspected farms were doing, so we changed over," he added.

milk, there are no short-cuts. You do the job and you do it well," he explained. "We have a good product (and) I'm proud to have been a part of it."

Even so, Hicks says he's "had enough" of the hectic schedule required of dairymen. "Do you realize what it's like to work 7 days a week for 44 years? I'm looking forward to some weekends and holidays," he commented.

Hicks said the only plans he has at this time are to continue farming wheat and corn for feed grain. "The farm's got the makings of a good beef cattle farm, but at this point in time, we have no concrete plans."

FAMILY IS KEY

Although Fred recently has been the most active among the Hicks' children concerning the family business, family cooperation has always been a golden rule.

Hicks and his wife Elsie raised 2 daughters in addition to their son, and all 3 "took their turns helping dad with the chores. The girls didn't appreciate the cows on the nights they had school activities, but they took turns every morning and every night helping to get the cows in the barn, clean the floors, empty the milk..." He reminisced.

The Hicks' daughters are now both teachers; Eileen in Bloomfield Hills and Linda in Cass City.

Elsie, meanwhile, remains active as Tuscola County clerk, a post she's held since 1970. She was preceded in the job by her father-in-law, who was clerk for 9 years. Said Hicks of his wife, "A good, supportive wife like I've had is pretty important in a 40-year farm."

Continuing a tradition of farming will remain part of

PARTNERSHIP

Now, several years later, Hicks has 220 acres, which have been farmed by himself and, for the past 14 years, his son, Fred, 34. Participating in the buyout program "was more of a decision for (Fred)," Hicks said. The pair had 2 weeks to decide whether or not to sell the herd. "It was an extremely short amount of time to make such a big decision. It was really too short," he added.

There are no regrets, he says, with the possible exception of leaving a 29-year membership in the MMPA. He officially joined the association in 1957 and was promptly elected president of the Deford local. He attended his last MMPA event—the local's annual meeting—Saturday.

Hicks also served for 12 years on the MMPA District board, the state Resolutions Committee and is in his 5th year on the county Soil Conservation Board.

Retirement from the dairy business is welcome, he commented, although the business has always been a source of pride. "With inspected (grade I) ity cooperation, Althaver remarked, adding, "We want that to happen again."

"Economic development of the downtown is community wide. Ideally, we'd like every adult in the community to be a member" of the chamber, he continued. Creation of individual membership dues, and possibly holding regular full membership meetings in addition to chamber board meetings, are changes which are hoped will generate interest by individuals. Althaver pointed out that the EDC has some limitations due to its being a 9-member board which operates as a support to the Village Council. "The EDC took on revitalization of the downtown area as one of its goals. Certainly the chamber will (now) take on that project," he said. "I think... the EDC's intent all along was to get the chamber revitalized because there are things (it) can do that the EDC can't do."

While the chamber will begin work on new projects designed to improve the area's economic appearance and strength, the EDC will again concentrate its efforts toward encouraging businesses to locate in Cass City.

Moreover, according to Althaver, the EDC will try to help facilitate moves by interested businesses by assisting in exploring financial opportunities, such as grants

Committee plans local history update

Cass City's Sesquicentennial Committee has decided to update the history of the village area in book form. The project is one of several discussed recently by the committee, which noted that it's been 25 years since the Pinney Bank edition was produced. Committee members say they believe that a lot of recent history should be included in the updated book.

Persons interested in volunteering to work on the project may contact either Tom Proctor (872-2075) or Barb Hutchinson (872-2856). Also being considered is an "All Sports Banquet" for past sports team members. A number of old silver trophies have been cleaned and polished for a display at the school and downtown.

The committee is scheduled to meet with the 4th of July Committee March 17. Several ideas relating to the Sesquicentennial celebration will be suggested for the annual celebration.

Larry Seale, 15-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Seale, Cass City, was recently awarded the National Rifle Association's "Distinguished Expert Award." This is the highest honor in the junior category. The February meeting of the Cass City Junior Woman's Club was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Ryland. Mrs. Russell Ayres was co-hostess for the meeting. Mr. Don Erla, Mrs. Marvin Hauck, Mrs. Dan Erla and Mrs. Ryland were named to a bake sale committee.

35 YEARS AGO

At a meeting of the directors of the Cass City Red Dane Breeders' Association held at the home of Edward Golding Tuesday, the following officers were named for 1952: President, Lloyd E. Karr; vice-president, Roy Wagg, and secretary-treasurer, Edward Krohn. Bigham's Dairy and Fort's Dairy announced today that milk prices will be advanced a penny a quart. The raise will bring the price of delivered milk to 20 cents a quart. Ruth Seuryneck, Bonnie Pine, Joan Schwartz and Judy Hool from St. Agatha's school were cheerleaders at the basketball tournament in Owendale. They won the cheerleader trophy. Mrs. Harold Perry, Mrs. Arnold Copeland, Mrs. Edward Allen and Mrs. Don McLachlen attended a dinner meeting of Girl Scout leaders in the Warren Ave. Presbyterian Memorial Hall in Saginaw Thursday evening.

New books at the library

BROTHERS by William Goldman. The story begins with the resurrection of a character presumed killed in Marathon Man, a nearly superhuman intelligence agent who "remainders" other agents when they outlive their usefulness. Code-named Scylla, he has been keeping his strength up on a Caribbean isle until the Division, most powerful of all U.S. spy firms, needs him—which is now. He sets off on a trail of mayhem, all the while hopping about the globe, recalling rather than actually eating great meals. As he proceeds, he uncovers several weird scientific schemes by the good guys to get the bad guys (Commies, of course), each one more outre than the last, culminating in the escapes of the brothers.

LIGHTHOUSE by Bill Pronzini (mystery). An isolated lighthouse, a college professor and his artist wife, and a small town filled with bitter locals make the ingredients for this mystery. Jan and Alix Ryerson are working together on a history of lighthouses and set off to live in one off the Oregon coast while they finish their book. But they soon run afoul of nearby villagers, most of whom are unemployed, cliched "redneck" types. When Jan Ryerson accidentally kills a dog belonging to one of the locals and the dead bodies of two young women are found near the lighthouse, the Ryersons come under assault by the townsfolk. Prof. Ryerson's periodic blackouts leave the couple wondering if he is, in fact, the killer.

PATIENCE OF A SAINT by Andrew Greeley (fiction). A smack over the head from a "cosmic baseball bat" completely transforms Red Kane, a hard-drinking, irascible columnist for the Chicago Herald Gazette. Flush with rediscovered faith in God, he becomes positively pleasant to his co-workers and children and courts his bewildered wife with inspired zeal. Tucked between numerous marital spats and sexual romps is a far more exciting subplot involving the disappearance of Red's mentor, Paul, years before, and the sadistic murder of a teenage prostitute at the hands of Harv Gunther, an aging civic leader. The investigation succeeds in damning Gunther forever, but only at great cost to Red and his family.

AROUND THE FARM

Farmers must stop converting wetlands

By Bill Bortel

Michigan farmers must stop draining and converting wetland areas for cropland use if they want to remain eligible for certain USDA program benefits.

"The 'swampbuster' provisions of the 1985 farm bill is designed to prevent the needless conversion of wetlands to cropland," says Bill Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director. "By draining and farming these areas, farmers not only deplete valuable fish and wildlife habitats, but they also contribute to existing commodity surpluses."

Wetlands are areas where water stands or the soil is saturated during part of the growing season. Wetlands will naturally support water-loving plants.

Wetland areas are valuable because they help control floods by temporarily storing water during storms. They also trap pollutants, help recharge aquifers and provide recreational opportunities.

Wetland areas that were converted to cropland use before Dec. 23, 1985, are exempt for the swampbuster provision of the farm bill. Farmers who converted wetlands after that date, but on or before June 27, 1986, are eligible for USDA benefits for 1986 only. To remain eligible for USDA programs, farmers must stop producing agricultural commodities on wetlands that were converted after Dec. 23, 1985.

Farmers who ignore the swampbuster provision risk losing eligibility for certain USDA benefits on all the land they farm, not just the converted wetland area. USDA programs they will be ineligible for are: price and income support programs, crop insurance, FmHA loans, Commodity Credit Corporation storage payments, farm storage facility loans, Conservation Reserve Program annual payments and other commodity-related payments.

When a farmer applies for any of these USDA farm programs, he must certify that he is not producing crops on wetlands that were converted to cropland since Dec. 23, 1985.

Farmers who are not sure if an area is a wetland should consult their local Soil Conservation Service. Agents will help determine if the area is a wetland by consulting soil maps or by visiting the site.

If a farmer does produce a crop on a wetland that was converted after Dec. 23, 1985, he or she can regain eligibility for USDA if the guidelines recommended by SCS are followed.

Farmers get good news

Seven hundred area farmers received their best financial news in months recently, and it came from an insurance company.

Sebewaing Mutual Fire Insurance Co. has sent every one of its farm policyholders a renewal invoice for 1987 stamped "paid in full."

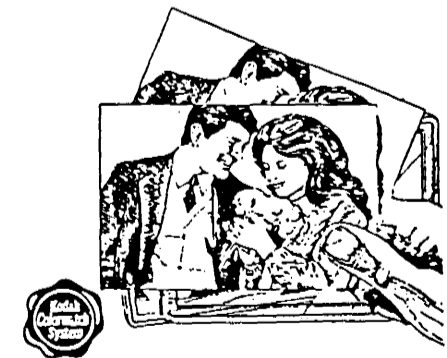

The company's board approved what amounts to one year of free insurance in November. Farmers benefitting from the $100,000 company contribution live in Huron, Tuscola and Sanilac Counties.

Under the company charter, all policyholders have the same renewal date — Feb. 28.

Jack McAlpine of Fairgrove is president of the company's board. Earl Gettel of Sebewaing is vice-president, and Ray Fiebig of Sebewaing is secretary-treasurer. Board members are Earl Gettel and Loren Winter of Sebewaing, Paul Findlay and John Goodchild of Caro, Roger Root of Cass City, and Paul Leiprandt of Pigeon.

Quality bean seed needed

"Dry edible bean producers who have not secured seed for planting for 1987, may have a tough time finding seed of suitable quality, let alone high quality seed," states Bill Bortel, Tuscola County Extension Director.

"Growers who are still in the market for seed should select only the best quality since we are going to see poorer than normal germination and vigor seed for the coming year," states Bortel.

Larry Copeland, Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service seed specialist, ranks seed that may be available from higher to lowest quality as follows:

--Western (Idaho, California, etc.) certified seed with a germination rating of 90 percent or higher.

--Western uncertified seed (it will likely have a green tag) with a germination rating of 85 to 90 percent or better.

--Certified seed from North Dakota or Minnesota (sold as MinDak) that has Michigan blight test results.

--Michigan uncertified seed that was harvested before wet weather and has a germination rating of 90 percent or better. Insist on blight test results.

--Michigan certified seed harvested during or after the wet weather. Select on the basis of best germination and vigor ratings available.

--Michigan uncertified seed harvested after the onset of wet weather. Select on the basis of best germination and vigor available. Insist on blight test results.

Tobacco

Smoking Tobacco is associated with approximately 30 percent of all cancer deaths—over 130,000 per year. Today, one in three Americans smokes. Those who smoke two packs a day or more face a death rate 20 times higher than do non-smokers. The NCI seeks to reduce to 15 percent or less the proportion of all smokers.

HEALTH TIPS

Immunization not just for children

Immunizations are not just for children. While it is true that the vaccine-preventable diseases of childhood, such as measles and diphtheria, have been brought to record low levels, there is no reason to assume, as many people do, that adults no longer suffer from these and other contagions. The fact is that a large proportion of the deaths and serious illnesses that we are seeing today and that could have been prevented are occurring among older adolescents, adults and the elderly. Many of those affected either escaped the disease or were not immunized against it in childhood. Others require immunizations because of their special health conditions, occupations, behavior or increasing age.

There are seven diseases for which millions of adult Americans should be immunized. They are influenza, pneumococcal disease, hepatitis B, tetanus, diphtheria, measles, and rubella. Influenza and pneumococcal infections pose particular problems for the very people who are least able to cope with the disease, such as the elderly or those with chronic heart or lung diseases. The influenza virus can cause major epidemics of respiratory disease, as we see nearly every winter, and it is responsible for thousands of excess deaths in this population. Ten thousand or more deaths have been associated with influenza epidemics in 17 of the years from 1957 to 1984. More than 80 percent of the excess deaths attributed to influenza epidemics occur among persons 65 years of age or older. Attack rates during outbreaks in nursing homes are as high as 60 percent, with fatality rates of 30 percent or higher.

Pneumococcal infections are important causes of severe illness and death in the same groups threatened by influenza. About a half million cases of pneumococcal disease are estimated to occur annually in the United States. The case rate increases with age and the fatality rate in those 60 years old and older is 25 to 35 percent. Safe and effective vaccines are available for both of these diseases. Flu shots are needed annually by this group. Only one shot is needed to provide protection against pneumococcal disease. Appropriately used, these vaccines could prevent literally thousands of deaths each year. Unfortunately, available data indicate that very few adults in the target populations have been immunized.

Younger and currently healthy American adults also are at risk of being unimmunized against vaccine-preventable diseases. About 85 percent of all hepatitis B cases occur in persons 20 years of age or older. The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) estimates that about 180,000 or more cases of hepatitis B occur in adults in the U.S. each year, and more than one million people are chronic carriers of the hepatitis B virus in the United States. About one-fourth of these chronic carriers can be expected to die of chronic hepatitis, cirrhosis or liver cancer.

Groups at greatest risk of acquiring hepatitis B include homosexually active males, and users of unlawful injectable drugs. Health care personnel, because they care for people with the illness, also are at greater risk than the general population. Unfortunately, data indicates that no more than 20 percent of the people in these two high-risk groups have received hepatitis B vaccine. A fear of AIDS may have contri-

Hockey fan's heaven

"Ivan's pond" is area skaters' hangout

It's Thursday night, about 7 p.m. as a procession of cars begins to roll in to Ivan Paladi's driveway. The vehicles pass the small farm house on their way to a makeshift parking lot at the rear of the residence, just east of Deford on Englehart Road. The visitors are as young as 11 or 12 years old and as old as 40-plus, but they all have one thing in common: they've come to play hockey. Paladi plays host to more than 15 friends and neighbors on Monday, Thursday and Saturday nights. The stocky 42-year-old, an avid hockey fan and player, loves the game so much that he decided a few years ago to build his own ice rink. Dressed in a camouflage shirt and faded jeans, Paladi took time off before a typical 3-hour session recently to talk about his local skating club. He mentioned that attendance on this particular evening would probably be down because of school exams. "I guess we'd try (to skate) more often, but they'd probably get in trouble. And we older guys, we'd have trouble with our wives," Paladi remarked with an infectious chortle. "If we could find some way to get out of studying, we'd probably skate every night." Many of the "regulars" who play are high school-aged hockey enthusiasts from Cass City, Deford and surrounding areas. But a significant contingent of "older" guys show up to challenge the younger skaters. Age aside, everyone seems to have a good time, which was Paladi's intention when he dug the 20-foot-deep pond 6 years ago.

ranging in age from 13 years to 18 years. His wife, Arlene, would have preferred the pool. Paladi said he investigated building a pool, but added a pond was less expensive. "And, of course, I wanted a place to skate. Besides, how could we do this in a swimming pool?" "I didn't realize it would get to be this popular," Paladi continued. "Each year we pick up kids we didn't have before. It's fun to see them improve" from year to year. The ice rink has turned into an $8,000 investment, including homemade nets, a score board, lighting and a wall—donated by a neighbor—which surrounds the rink. Friends, like Cass City resident Jim Guinther, help out with maintenance of the facility. "Jim comes out when there's work to do,"

Paladi added. While his guests enjoy use of the 135-foot X 75-foot rink free of charge, they, too, have made a significant investment. "Fun costs money," Paladi observed. "There's no getting out of the expense of it. That's probably the worst thing" about hockey. Paladi says he encourages use of safety equipment among the skaters. Standard equipment consists of leg pads ($30), helmet ($60), skates ($60) and a stick ($10-$15). Further, Paladi has established some informal rink rules, particularly keeping sticks on the ice at all times. Accidents to date have been limited to a broken leg and a few lost teeth. FEW MISHAPS Fortunately, there have been few serious mishaps among the skaters, whose skill levels range from beginner to advanced. Paladi pointed out that regardless of talent, he believes the players appreciate the opportunity to pursue the sport. Without the local facility, the kids "probably would have to go clear to Saginaw to skate," he added. "That's what discouraged me" when I was in school. "I always wished I'd had a place to skate." Paladi, a 1962 graduate of Cass City High School and now a GTE facility technician, said there's another positive factor to having a rink in the area. "The kids are here. It seems a lot of kids are getting into trouble," he explained. "We sure know this group won't." Paladi, whose 17-year-old son, Linn, enjoys hockey, added that the rink could lead to bigger and better things in the future for one or more of the local skaters. "This group of kids we got last year skates a lot harder and faster than past groups," he observed. "They play like the game means more to them." "Who knows, maybe one of them will make the IHL, and then they can say, 'I skated at Ivan's pond.'"

Ivan Paladi

Area man cited following mishap

A 35-year-old Cass City man was issued a citation for failing to stop in assured distance, by the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department, Feb. 13, when he hit a car in front of him. John S. Nicol, 4320 Robinson Rd., was southbound on M-81 when he came over a hill and saw a car, owned by Elwood J. Shard, 58, 125 E. Gamble St., Caro, with its brake lights on. According to the report, Shard had slowed down when the van in front of him was turning to a restaurant. Nicol stated he was unable to stop and hit Shard's car in the rear. There were no injuries reported and only slight damage to both cars. Michael K. Essex, 24, 4591 Shabbona Rd., Cass

City, was driving east on Little Rd. Feb. 8, when he hit snow that had drifted onto the road. He was not injured and there was little damage to his car. DEER/CAR MISHAPS There were 4 deer/car mishaps recorded by the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department during the past week and in all cases the drivers were unable to avoid hitting the animal. Richard M. Hollis, 25, 6620 Third Street, Cass City, was southbound on Cemetery Rd. Feb. 10 when a deer came out from the east side into the path of his car. Hollis was not injured and the damage to his car was minimal. A 34-year-old Deford man was traveling north on Cemetery Rd. Feb. 13, when a deer came into the path of the car and was struck. Charles E. Mester, 5270 Shabbona Rd., suffered no injuries and the mishap did only minimal damage to his car. Michael J. Stewart, 36, 5018 Maple, Fairgrove, was travelling west on Mayville Rd. Feb. 12, when a deer ran from the south and struck the left front of the car. The incident occurred at 3:15 p.m. and police found hair on and around the car, which was only slightly damaged. Stewart suffered no injuries. On Feb. 9 at 1:25 p.m., Brent D. Connell, 47, 6026 Greenland Rd., Cass City, was driving on East Cass City Rd. when a deer came out from the south side of the road and ran into the side of Connell's car. The damage to the car was light and Connell suffered no injuries. Carol A. Long, 2941 Cemetery Rd., Cass City, filed a report with the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department when a pickup passed her school bus when she had stopped to let children off.

Long stated that she drives a bus for the Cass City school system and that on Jan. 29 she stopped on the south side of Decker-ville and Crawford Roads. She said that she had activated emergency lights and she also had her right turn signals on. According to Long, she had checked her emergency lights that day and all were working properly. She had let the two students off when she noticed a reddish-orange pickup drive by her bus. She stated that she did not know the driver, but two of the students did. During the police investigation, some of the students were interviewed and contact was made with the suspect, who had allegedly driven around the bus. The police could not set up an interview when they called the suspect and when they tried again Feb. 5 at 8 a.m., there was no one home. According to the police report, the case will remain open until the follow-up is completed.

STATE POLICE A 49-year-old Cass City man was not injured when his car slid sideways and struck a vehicle that was stalled in the road on Feb. 14 at 6:50 a.m., according to a State Police report. John R. Clara, 4857 Crestwood Circle, was traveling south on W. Caro Rd. and stated that when he saw the stalled vehicle, which had been plowing snow at a business on M-81, he applied his brakes. Clara slid sideways and said he tried to swerve around the truck, but was unable to do so and hit it. His car was damaged slightly. Gregory C. Fessler, 27, 1395 Higgins Rd., Caro, stated in the report that he had backed across M-81 while plowing and his truck had stalled. Fessler was uninjured; however, his truck suffered moderate damage.

Lecture set on osteoporosis A free lecture, film and discussion on osteoporosis, a disease in which bones become fragile, will be held beginning at 7 p.m. Feb. 25 at Hills and Dales General Hospital. The event is being offered as a community service by Cass City physician Dr. Beatriz Martin, who, along with a dietician, will answer questions about the disease, which affects about 25 percent of white women over the age of 65.

Intermediate School board ponders Highland Pines' woes

The decision to find solutions for the dilemma facing Highland Pines School was put off for a month by the Intermediate School Board of Education, Monday, until the members had a chance to familiarize themselves with the possible solutions.

The school for mentally and physically impaired children is trying to rectify the growing problem of expenditures exceeding revenues. The problem stems from the decrease in enrollment of state institutionalized children and the SEV rates, which dropped 15 percent this year in Tuscola County.

The board had asked for feedback from the 9 school districts on the possible solutions. Mayville and Cass City were the only two that didn't respond. According to Bruce Dunn, superintendent, no two letters were identical. "One or 2 said they would support a millage up to 1 mill and others said 'yes' they would support it (an increase in millage)," said Dunn. However, all the schools said that they would like the Intermediate School District to continue paying back money for the Local Education Agency which runs the special education classes at the public schools. Some schools even asked for an increase in the pay back. The school district last year paid back the local schools a total of $200,000.

The Caro School Board of Education suggested that they wait a year before making a decision. Dunn said they couldn't wait, because they didn't have enough in their fund equity to support the school for the 1987-1988 school year. "We would have to borrow money and pay interest on it if we wait until January 1987 to make a decision," said Dunn.

According to Jerome Thienes, deputy superintendent and business manager of the school district, the fund equity for the school must remain at about $400,000 so the school doesn't have to borrow.

"I think that if we raised the millage 1 mill and got it, we would be able to carry on the type of program we have for another 5 years," Dunn told the board. "Unless something comes down the pike that we can't foresee." The school has not raised its 1.6 mills in 11 years.

According to Dunn, since the steady drop of land values, especially agricultural valuation, raising the millage "won't raise the revenues too much" from what the school already gets.

Dunn and Thienes also gave the board other solutions, such as stopping the LEA pay back and cutting out the three nonmandatory programs offered at Highland Pines. According to Dunn, the school wouldn't save any money the first year if they cut back the physical education, aquatics and musical therapy programs, because they would have to pay unemployment. He also said that cutting back these programs would do away with the therapy that is offered to the severely physically handicapped. "It (the therapeutic programs) is essential to this type of youngster as reading and writing is to a regular student," said Dunn.

But Thienes pointed out that even if the board decides to do away with the LEA pay backs and the programs not mandatory, the school would still be in the red more than $160,000.

Dunn said that the decision must be made soon, so that if the board decides on extra millage there will be time to set up for an election. Dunn and Thienes want a July election so that it won't conflict with other elections coming up. Reese plans to hold a millage vote in March and there are many elections in June, said Dunn. "There is no good time to vote for millage," he said.

Board member Arthur Krumnauer said that if the LEA is taken away from the 9 school districts it may block the way for a successful millage election. Krumnauer made a motion that the board wait a month so they can look over the solutions and Thienes can give the members more concrete figures. The motion was approved.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

My friend Jeff called. "Bill—I got these folders in the mail. Mutual funds with Ginnie Maes, paying 10%. I thought you told me that 8.5% is about the yield to expect. Is someone ripping you off?"

"I've been ripped off a time or two," I replied, "but in this case you're the ripee."

Then I told him why. Ginnie Maes are nothing but mortgages, most of which were issued when mortgage rates were 11-12-13%, even more. And a mortgage is like a bond. The issuer is an individual, and he contracts to pay off the bond or mortgage at a fixed rate of interest.

A difference creeps in here, in that a small payment on the principal is made along with the interest payment. The interest rate stays the same, and ordinarily the total payment stays the same. But part of the payment is credited against the principal, so you are getting some of your own capital (investment in the mortgage) back each time. The rate, however, stays the same.

If you bought the original GNMA mortgage when it came out at $25,000 and the rate was 12%, it stays at 12%, but of course it's figured on the unpaid balance, which gradually gets smaller. So far so good, and still simple.

ing what the yield to maturity will be—not the current yield. With Ginnie Mae mortgages—or any other kind—which may be paid off ahead of time, another element of uncertainty is thrown in.

At present rates, if somebody offers a Ginnie Mae fund yielding over 9%, the salesman is kidding you as to the true yield.

A while ago the Wall Street Journal reported on a hair-growing medicine brought out by Upjohn.

Naturally it wasn't available in the United States.

I really didn't need any, because I am still fairly hairy. But I was curious to find out about it, because I have a number of balding friends, not as well preserved as I am.

A Canadian buddy got some in Toronto (even there it's a prescription) and brought it to me.

Before you get too interested, here's what the folder with the medicine says:

1. Use it only if you are a man between 18 and 65.

2. Don't use if you are sensitive to minoxidil, propylene glycol or alcohol.

And then—

CAUTIONS:

Discontinue the stuff (Rogaine) and see a doctor if you have any of these reactions:

- Rapid heart beat or palpitations
- Rapid weight gain of 5 lbs. or more
- Swelling of hands, face, ankles or stomach
- Dizziness or fainting
- Blurred vision
- Worsening pain in the chest
- Severe indigestion
- Severe scalp irritation.

If you are still interested, there are a couple caveats:

1. It may be four months before you see any results.

2. The regrown hair may disappear 3 or 4 months after stopping treatment.

If you haven't already said to hell with it, let me add that the stuff costs $50 for a month's supply. (My batch of it I will trade for a 1984 calendar.)

My curiosity, often a curse, has just cost me 50 smackers.

Area band pupils attend festival

About 14 Cass City High School band members participated in the District Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association Solo and Ensemble Festival held Saturday in Caro.

According to David Daggett, substitute band teacher, the students put in a lot of hours after school with him and the accompanist. "I would like to give my special compliments for the hard work they have done," said Daggett.

Ten of the 14 students placed in the three divisions. The divisions, according to Daggett, are like first, second or third place given at any competition.

Three students placed in Division 1 and received blue medals. Senior Rick Guilds, 18, was awarded a medal for his alto sax solo and seniors Deb Blue and Kim Wing, both 17, played a flute duet which earned them a medal.

In the second division, six students placed: A clarinet duet played by juniors Stacey Patera and Julie Wrona, both 16; sophomores Melissa Knowlton, 15, and Wendy Mellendorf, 16, also placed with a clarinet duet; Blue won a red medal for her flute solo, and sophomore John Wright, 16, placed with his trombone solo.

Freshman Judy Matthews, 14, played a flute solo that won her a place in the third division.

dent's first 2 weeks of attendance after the end of the semester when the absences occurred.

School counselor Dick Partlo gave a brief report on the status of the intermediate guidance program, including his work with students in a new "Group Insight" program.

Community Education Director Dave Lovejoy presented a revised adult education plan which complies with state guidelines.

The board, which passed a resolution in October to have the plan in place by April 1, indicated it will review the document and act on it next month.

High School Principal Kenneth Micklash presented several proposals for awarding academic letters. The proposals were drafted by staff, administration and students, he said.

The proposals include basing awards on grades in core areas, such as math, English, social studies and science; basing awards on overall grade point averages, and determining awards by a combination of GPA and a percentage of students' MEAP scores.

The board indicated it would prefer not to include MEAP scores in the formula because the exam is only given to high school sophomores.

The board approved a request from basketball coach Ron Nurnberger to practice on a Sunday during the district basketball tournament if Cass City is scheduled to play on a Monday.

Hobart volunteered to represent the board at the Tuscola Intermediate School District's annual budget hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 25.

Board members Richard Wallace, Fred Matthews and Louis Horner were appointed to a special ad hoc committee to examine the Co-Op program. The committee was formed in conjunction with recently discussed board goals.

County board asked to refund federal dollars

matters concerning emergency services, noted that the money in question is related to federal grant funds used to purchase equipment for the county's Emergency Services Office.

The figure quoted by Sizemore is based on 25 years depreciation.

He pointed out that the office must be manned by its director. "If you plan on doing this—if you plan on sticking with this—then the state and federal government is going to ask you to pay back $44,741."

"When you accept federal dollars, you accept the federal strings, that's what I'm told," Sizemore continued.

Commissioners indicated that no action will be taken until Sizemore produces written proof in the form of a contract stating that the county has agreed to man its Emergency Services Office.

Commissioner Michael Green (District 5) stated that Tuscola County is not alone in not having its Emergency Services director in an office designated for emergency services.

"We can't find anything, anywhere that doesn't allow us to" place the director in another location, he remarked. Green added, "That center is there to be used when an emergency occurs."

Board Chairman William Worth (District 7) pointed out that the Health Department building is only 5 minutes away from the Emergency Services Office. McCann previously worked in the Emergency Services Office only 2 1/2 days per week, he added.

Health Director Ed Golsen commented that with the move, McCann has the help of a full clerical staff.

"Now, technically, it's (the Emergency Services Office) manned 5 days a week," he said.

Commissioners Terry L. Houthoofd (District 1) and Kim D. Glaspie (District 2) also questioned Sizemore's contention that the county is in violation.

Houthoofd asked Sizemore if he has a contract or statute relating to the agreement between the county and the federal government. "Obviously, we don't want to do something we agreed not to do," he remarked, adding that the board will do everything in its power not to pay the $44,741.

Glaspie agreed, and asked why the board hasn't received a notice relating to noncompliance with a specific statute.

Sizemore, who stated that he will provide the board with necessary paper work proving the county is in violation, noted that the dispute doesn't affect federal money received by the county for a portion of the Emergency Services director's salary. The money owed by the county is based solely on equipment, he said.

IN OTHER BUSINESS

In other business Friday, the board approved signing a lease contract between the county and the Tuscola County Building Authority for the new Department of Social Services building.

Project Manager Paul Lefler explained that the action is a preliminary step in financing for the project, which now must be published in a local newspaper.

The board approved a resolution which provides for the county treasurer to borrow money to pay local taxing units for delinquent taxes. Individuals who haven't paid their taxes will, beginning in mid-February, owe the taxes plus interest to the county.

A contract between the county and a computer service business for 2 months of training and a 3-month trial period was approved.

The contract, for use of Manatron financial and payroll computer software, includes a down payment of $1,300, which is refundable if the county decides not to purchase the software, County Controller Michael Hoagland explained.

The county will not be refunded for training costs, which haven't yet been determined, he said.

The board briefly discussed county drain-at-large costs, which are expected to total some $318,000 next year.

The possibility of the county financing its share of the costs over a 4-year period, as opposed to one year, was suggested by the finance committee. Generally, drainage costs in the county are covered by the township (25 percent), property owner (50 percent) and the county (25 percent).

The board approved general fund revenue and expenditure budget amendments showing receipt of hotel/liquor tax monies received by the county.

The board endorsed the equal division of $27,500 of hotel/liquor tax money—about half of the total amount received—between the Tuscola County Health Department and Community Mental Health. The board also requested that the agencies provide the board with a combined program proposal by June 1.

Also approved was $2,500 to the county Economic Development Corporation, which is a portion of its budgeted amount, purchase of a copy machine, and creation of the line item accounts of "employee training" and "travel" to departmental line item budgets.
