Wheeler's awarded $1.7 million from A.O. Smith

JIM AND PAUL WHEELER were the first farmers in Michigan to have a model "3189" Harvestore silo (left). The Snover farmers were less than satisfied with the structure, and last week were awarded $1.7 million in a lawsuit against A.O. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc., over milk and feed losses they attribute to the 3189.

Jim and Paul Wheeler are tired. Not so much physically as emotionally, but exhausted nonetheless. Despite the weariness evident on the Snover dairy farmers' faces, however, they speak with a certain confidence, partly because they've beaten "Goliath" in a modern day battle waged in a federal courtroom.

The Wheelers, who own Will-O-Wheel farms, last week were awarded $1.7 million by an 8-member jury in Detroit following a 5-week trial involving a major corporation. The award in the suit, filed in June 1985 by the Wheelers against A.O. Smith Harvestore Products Inc., of Illinois, and Blue-water Harvestore Inc., Marlette, totals some $2.1 million with interest.

The 2-year legal battle stems from the pair's lease/purchase of a $175,000 "3189" Harvestore silo. The structure, the first of its design in Michigan, is billed as the world's largest haylage silo.

The Wheelers stated in their suit that the silo was designed poorly and led to substantial milk production losses and spoiled feed. Damage sustained by use of the structure led to the pair's decision to file for bankruptcy in August 1985.

ALLEGATIONS

According to Sandusky attorney John S. Paterson, who represented the Wheelers, the legal battle was based on a number of problems involving the silo.

"It was our belief that the thing was improperly designed and improperly installed," he said, adding, "The structure was warranted to work and to be able to feed the dairy herd; it did neither."

"We asked for an unspecified amount" (in damages) because of the nature of the case," Paterson continued. "We presented evidence that our client had in excess of $1 million in damages, and the jury believed us."

Paterson noted the jury was composed of 7 men and one woman. Federal court Judge Avern Cohn presided over the trial, which began May 6 and ended June 3.

Paterson explained that the Wheelers began operation of the silo, which is supposed to be capable of storing more than 2 million pounds of haylage, in July 1982. A few weeks later, representatives of the manufacturer went to the farm at 3262 Deckerville Rd. to investigate problems the Wheelers were having with the silo's delivery of haylage, the attorney said.

SECOND VISIT

Paterson said company officials again inspected the structure in the fall of 1983 and agreed to cover the Wheelers' lease payments while investigating the problems. During that time, the attorney said, officials ripped up the silo's foundation in an attempt to find out what was wrong.

Paterson, who noted the company paid the lease from September 1983 through January 1985, added company officials discovered that the floor of the silo was improperly welded to the structure.

The officials, who "knew a lot was wrong and didn't tell them (Wheeler's)," Paterson remarked, asked the area farmers to sign a release freeing A.O. Smith of liability in the matter. The release was signed, but the jury didn't honor the document, he added.

Company officials left the site in January 1985 and the Wheelers abandoned use of the silo in February 1985.

An appeal by A.O. Smith is expected, according to Paterson, who noted the firm "spared no expense" in presenting its case.

"A.O. Smith appeals every adverse case against it," he said, adding that the firm was represented by 6 attorneys during the trial proceedings. "They've spent a fortune trying to tell these farmers they've built a better mouse trap, so what can you do?"

"The only thing unusual (about the trial) was A.O. Smith from the beginning tried to tell the jury that 2 plus 2 doesn't equal 4. We always maintained that 2 plus 2 equals 4," Paterson maintained.

RELIEF

For the Wheelers, who have seen their herd and milk production drop between 1982 and 1986, as well as faced severe financial difficulties, last week's decision is more than welcome.

"It was a long, tiresome affair on everybody," Jim, 34, remarked. "It's just a relief to get it over with." Paul, 31, agreed, adding, "The stress was very hard on the family."

Particularly tiring for the Wheelers was the daily commuting to Detroit for the trial. A typical day during the proceedings saw the brothers taking care of farm chores beginning at 3 a.m. Trial proceedings, held Monday through Friday, would begin at 8:30 a.m. and continue through

Teacher certification law concerns area schools

Area Christian school officials have set their sights on legislation in the state Legislature following the Supreme Court's recent decision not to hear a case challenging Michigan's teacher certification requirements.

The Supreme Court let stand a ruling by the Michigan Supreme Court that the state can require certification for teachers in religious schools.

That ruling stems from a case brought 8 years ago by the Sheridan Road Baptist Church in Saginaw and the First Baptist Church in Bridgeport. Both churches' schools are threatened with being shut down by the Michigan Department of Education.

The legislation now under consideration, which would exempt church schools from teacher certification requirements, was passed by the Senate last week and is now slated to be discussed in the House Education Committee, according to John Lazet, administrative aide to Sen. Harmon Cropsey (R-Decatur).

Cropsey introduced the bill to the Senate Education Committee March 11.

The bill as approved by the Senate covers all non-public schools rather than only religious schools as originally introduced. Under the measure such institutions have 2 alternatives to state certification.

The first is to hire teachers considered "qualified" under the bill. Among those considered qualified are ordained ministers, formally certified instructors and persons who have college bachelor's degrees.

The second alternative is to annually administer nationally-recognized tests, or the Michigan Educational Assessment Program exam, to their students and report the results to the state.

The measure would require schools deciding not to register with the state to inform the education department of their decision annually.

AREA OFFICIALS

While area Christian school officials say they're keeping close tabs on the legislation, they're unwilling to comment extensively on how the certification requirements affect them.

Ilene Satchell, principal at Thumb Christian Academy in Bad Axe, echoed the comments of a number of nonpublic school officials.

"Right now we're just waiting. We're disappointed in the Supreme Court, but (the legislation) is of greater interest to us," she remarked. "We just hope we can continue as we are."

Satchell said there currently are 4 teachers at the academy, which has 45 students in grades K-12. She stated that she is certified, but declined to say whether the other instructors are certified. She added, "all of them are experienced and trained."

"We know from our personal experience that people who have been trained and college educated, but not certified, are

Turner wins in Cass City

Most millages pass in area school elections

Voters approved millage requests in 4 area school districts, including 2 renewals of existing millage and a 9.5-mill increase at Owendale-Gagetown. One of 2 requests for additional millage at Ubyly was defeated.

In addition, members of the various school boards were elected in the vote held Monday at school sites.

CASS CITY

Cass City School voters easily approved a renewal of 16.9 mills for operation for 5 years, 409 yes, 146 no, keeping the total millage in the district at 28.9 mills.

In the race for school board seats, challenger James G. Turner led the 4 candidates for the 2 open seats with 315 votes. Incumbent Edward C. Scollon was second with 292 votes. Defeated were incumbent Louis E. Horner, 250 votes, and Martin R. Daniel, 189 votes.

In the race for the one-year term, incumbent Beverly Auten won with 306 votes to challenger Kay Warner's 228 votes.

OWEN-GAGE

Owen-Gage School District voters gave their board of education a $536,282 vote of confidence Monday, approving by 17 votes renewal of 6 mills plus an additional 9.5 mills for operations.

Approval of the request, 270-253, brings the total levy to 41 mills, the maximum amount the district is allowed to levy by law.

Incumbent school board member Patrick Goslin, meanwhile, won his 4-year seat, after running unopposed, with 358 votes. Write-in candidate Joe Salcido Jr. received 2 votes, while Tom Reehl, another write-in candidate, received one vote.

"We'd like to thank all the people for voting; we're glad it passed," school Supt. Harley B. Kirby remarked during the board's monthly meeting Monday night.

"It could have gone either way, but they're (district voters) a bunch of fighters around here," he commented after the meeting.

Kirby attributed the successful millage campaign to moves by the school board to cut expenses, resident input and informational meetings on the request, despite low attendance at the meetings. The district also sent out newsletters on the request.

Had voters not approved the additional millage, the district would have faced extreme financial difficulties, according to the superintendent, who said the school system under those circumstances would not have been able to operate past the first semester of the 1987-88 school year.

The Owen-Gage district over the past 2 years has sustained a drop of 28.5-29.5 percent (nearly $13.3 million) in the state equalized valuation of agricultural land. None of the loss is made up with state aid because Owen-Gage is an out-of-formula district.

Kirby Monday night pointed out that the district would begin to be in-formula if the SEV drops another 10.5 percent (about $3.6 million).

He also indicated that he hopes the state will be successful in its efforts to create a method of equitable funding for education.

KINGSTON

Incumbent James Green was elected with 164 votes.

Marlene Powell received 88 votes. In addition, voters approved a renewal of 16 mills for 5 years with 183 yes votes and 72 no votes. Total millage at the school is 29.5 mills.

UBLY SCHOOL

Ubyly voters again refused to grant additional millage for operation, but did approve one mill for 5 years for operation of buses. A total of 891 votes were cast, which is 29 percent of the 3,060 voters in the district. A mill for buses passed 484 to 399 while 2.2 mills for operations was defeated 524 to 362. The school now raises 26.6 for operation.

In the race for 2 vacant school board posts, incumbent J. Kevin O'Connor led with 677 votes. Harold Swartzentruber was elected with 460 votes. Roger Kincaid received 316 votes.

O-G board increases charge for school bus use

The Owen-Gage Board of Education set a budget meeting date and approved supporting a resolution on continuing county delinquent tax revolving fund programs, during a monthly meeting Monday night.

A meeting to begin discussion of the 1987-88 spending plan will be held beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Gagetown Elementary School cafeteria.

On the resolution regarding delinquent tax revolving funds, the board indicated it supports a resolution in favor of continuing such funds.

The funds are used to pay various local government units, including school districts, delinquent taxes which the unit would otherwise be forced to wait several months to receive.

The funds have been placed on hold because of questions raised by the Internal Revenue Service regarding whether tax exempt bonds sold by the counties are in fact tax exempt.

The Owen-Gage district expects some $200,000 in such taxes from 1986 taxes, school Supt. Harley B. Kirby pointed out.

In other business during the 2 1/4-hour meeting, the board approved borrowing money on anticipated taxes for operations in the 1987-88 school year. The amount to be borrowed will equal 50 percent of the district's 41 mills multiplied by the district's 1987 SEV.

The board last month approved a similar resolution which included only the 25.5 mills the district was assured at the time. The board decided to expand the borrowing following voters' approval Monday of an additional 15.5 mills.

PARENTS' REQUEST

A request by district residents Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hofmeister for approval of a waiver to allow their children to attend Reese Schools was approved by the board.

Kenneth and Andrea Hofmeister asked that their 2 children, aged 7 and 9 years, be allowed to attend Reese Schools because of circumstances surrounding travel and baby-sitting. Andrea Hofmeister, a former part-time teacher at Owen-Gage, is now a teacher in the Reese School District.

The request was approved for one year. Kirby noted that a waiver is necessary so that the Reese district, an in-formula school system, can include the Hofmeister children in the annual Fourth Friday count. Such districts receive state aid for each child in school on that day, he pointed out.

The board approved a 40 cent per mile charge for use of school buses by non-school groups. The charge is in addition to gas costs and the hiring of a driver, both of which are the responsibility of the group using a bus, the board said. Policies regarding bus Please turn to page 14.

Private places

By Jim Fitzgerald

Serious people in TV dramas often explain their presence at unlikely secluded sites by saying: "This is my private place where I often come alone to sort things out."

These private places are usually beside a quiet stream or in the middle of a pasture. I often wonder why my wife doesn't have a private place for sorting things out. She is always sorting things out.

She does it at the dining room table, with no privacy at all. I can see her sorting and hear her mumbling. Anyone who visits our home or flies by the window can see her. The things she sorts out are coupons to take to the supermarket.

"Why don't you do that in the middle of a pasture?" I asked one evening. "Everyone needs time to sort things out, and everyone knows it's easier to do in private. James Brodin did it just last night on 'Hotel.'"

She didn't respond. She takes sorting coupons seriously and doesn't like to be interrupted. She clips the coupons from newspapers and magazines, or receives them in the mail. They are good for discounts on certain merchandise on certain dates in certain stores. She keeps the coupons in a box, the contents of which she sorts before each shopping trip. It takes her eight hours to sort and two hours to shop.

It can be embarrassing to reach the checkout counter without the required coupon. The other day a large woman waiting in line behind my wife asked if she had the coupon that would allow her to a discount on the bag of tomatoes in her cart. Sheepishly, my wife admitted she didn't.

"Honey, there are coupons in the produce section; go back and get one or you won't get the discount," the woman said. My wife demurred, pointing out that she was almost up to the cashier and she'd rather pay full price than hold up the line.

"You go get that coupon!" the woman demanded. "I'll unload your groceries and make sure the cashier waits for you."

My wife protested further, but it was no use; the large woman was determined that no discount be lost. My wife finally did as she was told, saving four cents. She was still shaken by the experience when she described it to me several hours later, and my attitude didn't comfort her.

My attitude is that supermarkets should simply advertise bargains for everyone for money only, instead of forcing shoppers to clip coupons and sort things out, especially shoppers who don't have time to go to the middle of a pasture.

And is it fair to make coupons available in the store for shoppers too uncommitted to clip them at home from a newspaper or handbill? It's the same as buying a ticket to a football game because it isn't on TV, and then at the last minute it is on TV. The ticket buyers — and coupon sorters — feel like suckers.

My wife says my trouble is I'm not properly serious about the serious money she saves by sorting things out. Also, she says, saving money via coupons gives shoppers a serious sense of accomplishment that can't be gained by simply paying the same prices offered to people not dedicated enough to clip and sort.

She may be right about my inability to be serious about serious things. A few weeks ago, during a nuclear arms protest march, an earnest young man engaged me in serious conversation about the dreadful state of the world. He concluded by asking: "Where do we go from here?"

Later, my wife explained that he was speaking rhetorically, wondering where civilization will go if anti-nuclear protests fail. Which is probably why the young man looked puzzled when I answered his deep where-to-now question by pointing down the road, the way the other marchers were going.

Backward and downward, or something. If I took time to sort things out in the middle of a pasture, I'd step on second base.

Church tour a group effort

The Cass City Historical Society's tour of area churches Sunday was aided by a number of area residents, who presented histories of the various churches.

James Bolton provided historical information about the First Presbyterian Church, the group's first stop on the tour. Lyle Clarke, meanwhile, presented the history of the Church of Christ. Jack Esau was in charge of giving a brief presentation on the history of Salem United Methodist Church; the Rev. S. Joe Robertson provided a chart on the Trinity United Methodist Church; Nina Davis gave the history of St. Pancratius Catholic Church; Judy Esckilsen told of the Nazarenes coming from California in 1899, and the Rev. Clifford Jordan and James Tuckey Jr. handed out historical information on the Missionary Church. The historical group also made stops at the Evangelical Free Church, Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Church of God and the First Baptist Church.

Esau guides students on Petroglyphs trip, tour

Area resident and Cass City Historical Society member Jack Esau guided a group of second graders from Campbell, Deford and Evergreen schools on a trip to the Petroglyphs in Sanilac County June 3. Aside from providing historical background of the area, Esau also gave students a tour of a historical cabin where his great-grandparents once lived.

Let's stir the stew a little and see what comes up as seen from the bird's eye view at the corner of Oak and Main.

The traveling salesman is rapidly becoming as extinct as the dodo bird and the slapstick comedy scenes of the guy thinking of ways to circumvent the prim secretary in the outer office are history. Today's high costs keep them off the road, especially when the destination is small-town America.

But the wily salesman is not dead and he has not faded away. Instead of trying to get a foot in the door, he tries to "see" his customers via the telephone. In person or by phone, the problem remains the same: how to get in to see the boss.

Believe me, I never had so many friends I never heard of. The "old friend" approach is one used by many. Is John there, please? Who's calling? Just tell him Sam Jones, he'll know. At the very least he sounds like a long lost buddy from college or someplace instead of what he really is. A guy you wouldn't know and who doesn't know you.

Another is the curiosity gambit. This is the Whahoo Investment Corporation calling Mr. Haire, about the investment he has asked us to tell him about.

Until a couple of years ago, when the phone rang and somebody wanted to talk to someone, it was automatic to connect them. You can't do that anymore and get anything done, although we reluctantly adopted the "big city" approach in little old Cass City. It's hard to have to ask for an identification and then find out it's the guy you played golf with the day before.

Since it's harder for the salesmen to get through to the persons they want, a new strategy has been adopted. The real eager beavers call you at home. In recent months we've been offered super stock plans, water softener reviews, energy analysis, gold and silver investment opportunities and several more that have been forgotten.

It's harder to say, who's calling? when somebody calls at 8 p.m. and you expect it naturally to be a friend. We don't normally do that at our house, but we do give abrupt answers to the salespersons. We'd be even less courteous except that we know the caller is just trying to make a living and deserves a little compassion in a very tough job.

Did you happen to catch the details of the James Donovan story, the cabinet member who was found innocent of criminal charges brought by the United States government?

One of the items that stuck out was that protecting himself in court cost about $15 million. We don't know how accurate that figure is, but it's large enough to illustrate a point.

Donovan can probably survive the huge expense. But what if it were you or I? It's sure that most of us wouldn't have the same protection that Donovan was able to purchase. There should be some alterations in the system so that persons found innocent can recoup the outlandish costs that can accrue in our court system.

There were a couple of other items that I figured to expound about but the allotted space is gone so I'll save them for another day. I'll bet you can hardly wait.

Rabbit Tracks

by John Haire
(And anyone else he can get to help.)

A friend accused the publisher of not being on speaking terms with his wife when he saw the car traveling down the road with her in the back seat.

He shook his head sadly when he was told that the passenger side of the front seat was occupied by our dog, Fozzie. The dog is an Airedale and he's big with a mind of his own.

He wants to be directly in front of the air conditioning and doesn't mind sitting on top of whoever happens to be in the way.

With the front seat, back seat arrangement, all of us have our private space.

It's alright to laugh if you want to.

Just finished voting. Can anyone tell me why the ballots are numbered in the corner with the perforation? I can understand the numbering, but why tear off the corners? Seems to me it would be a more reliable check if the ballots were deposited with the numbers intact. After the corner is removed, there's nothing left to say when that ballot was placed in the ballot box.

(Proof readers tell me that the reason for the system is to assure privacy for the voter.)

Charles Becker of Lake Orion is a familiar figure to members of the Town and Country Square Dance Club of Cass City. The 72-year-old man was the caller for the club for many years.

A new caller will now be necessary because Becker has quit. He had been serving 3 other clubs in addition to Cass City.

Tent meetings June 15-17 in Millington

Three Tuscola County Baptist churches will be sponsoring "Old-Time Tent Meetings" with Evangelist Carl Hatch, June 15-17.

The big tent will be set up on Depot Street in Millington. The special services will be held nightly beginning at 7:15 p.m. and will include special music by a large choir and preaching by the evangelist.

The public is invited to attend all of the meetings. The pastors of Fostoria Baptist Church, Juniata Baptist Church and the Community Baptist Church of Millington have been working together on plans for the "tent meetings" for many weeks. The 3 congregations will join forces in all aspects of the revival campaign. The choir will combine all 3 church choirs.

Carl Hatch, the special speaker for the campaign, is a nationally-known evangelist who has roots in Michigan. For several years he lived in Flint and worked for Buick Motors. During this time he was converted to Christ from a life of alcoholism.

The Depot Street location of the revival tent is just east of M-15 in Millington. Adequate parking will be provided, as well as a nursery service.

Whip kills pain

Here's a whip that actually may lessen pain - sea whip. Scientists recently have extracted a new class of painkilling and anti-inflammatory drugs from this Caribbean soft coral. According to International Wildlife magazine, the new substances are more potent than commonly prescribed anti-inflammatory drugs. They also relieve pain at least as well as morphine but without its narcotic and addictive side effects. The drugs may one day be used to treat such diseases as arthritis.

HEALTH TIPS Skin changes with pregnancy

During pregnancy, most women anticipate and deal with certain changes in their bodies, such as weight gain and mild swelling. But the most visible part of your body where the changes may not be expected and may be annoying is the skin.

Like many of the changes of pregnancy, increased amounts of the hormone estrogen can cause differences in skin chemistry. For some women acne tends to improve during pregnancy; in others, pregnancy may aggravate the acne and cause other skin blemishes.

Over-the-counter acne preparations that are applied to the skin are generally safe during pregnancy, but check with your doctor before buying them. If you've been treated for problem acne in the past with prescription medication such as antibiotics, don't treat flareups without checking with your doctor, because they could be very dangerous to the fetus.

Stretch marks are probably familiar to most pregnant women. These are pink or purplish streaks that commonly appear later in pregnancy on the abdomen, thighs, and breasts. They are caused by small tears that happen in the lower layer of the skin as you gain weight. Stretch marks seem to be hereditary - if your mother had them, chances are you will too. They are also common in women who are blond, overweight, or pregnant for the first time. There's no way to avoid them, regardless of the claims of skin cream manufacturers; but they will fade after delivery.

While skin creams won't get rid of stretch marks, they can be helpful in relieving the itching related to the pregnancy. Again, this appears to be caused by a combination of overstretching of the skin and increased levels of estrogen. The itching will disappear with delivery, but if it is very annoying, ask your doctor about possible medication.

The hormonal changes cause an increase in skin pigment for many women, especially brunettes. Dark patches called the "mask of pregnancy" may appear on the face, and a dark line may be seen on your lower abdomen. These will fade after delivery, but in the meantime you can use a sunscreen when you go outside to prevent further darkening. "Spider veins," tiny red patches with veins radiating out from them, also are common in pregnancy. They are not a medical problem and usually disappear after delivery.

Like most changes in pregnancy, those of the skin usually disappear after delivery, whether it is the "mask of pregnancy" or a pregnancy "glow." But if any of your skin changes worry you, talk to your doctor.

Marketing series for farmers set

A series of informational meetings to advise Michigan Farmers Union and Michigan National Farmers Organization members on how to utilize marketing advantages created by the joint grain and livestock marketing agreement are slated at 5 locations throughout the state June 15-19, according to National Farmers Organization President DeVon Woodland.

The meetings are a follow-up to both organizations signing the agreement May 13 in Weberville. The agreement will allow Michigan Farmers Union members to market grain and livestock through NFO's collective bargaining system.

Michigan Farmers Union President Carl McIlvain said "we are confident this new working relationship will benefit both organizations and their memberships by providing more marketing alternatives and higher farm incomes," and he encouraged all Michigan Farmers Union members to participate in these meetings.

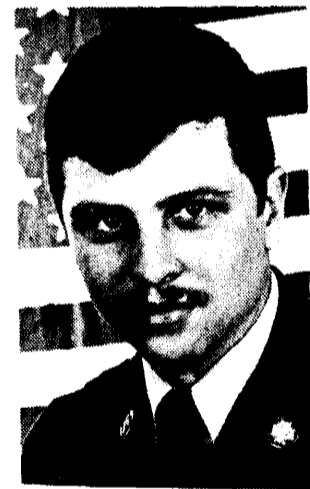

The meeting-site scheduled for this area will be June 19 at Wildwood Farms Restaurant and Lounge, Cass City, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting is open to the public.

For Elkland Township Fire Department

Root replaces Root as new fire chief

There are 2 pegs on the Elkland Township Fire Department wall that will have to get used to different uniforms hanging from them.

Jerome Root Jr. resigned his post after serving as fire chief for 5 years, to serve as a firefighter one more year before retiring at age 65. The Elkland Township board hired his brother Richard to replace him as chief June 1.

Richard has been a volunteer firefighter since May 1952. He was awarded for 35 years of service in January. He was fire chief from 1972-74 and served as an officer from then until 1985 and has served as a firefighter again until last week.

Jerome Jr. joined the fire department in the fall of 1958 and was volunteer chief from 1969-71 and has served as the first paid chief since 1982.

Jerome Jr. said he resigned as chief in order to give the new fire chief time to get accustomed to the position before he resigns from the department "after a year or so."

"I wanted to be able to assist the new chief with any questions he might have before I retire. I'll be 65 and I want to be able to do a little traveling," he explained.

"It takes more time than people realize to be a firefighter. Just because it's a small volunteer fire department doesn't mean it's an easy job," he added.

Although there is no state law on mandatory retirement for volunteer firefighters, many laws have changed since Richard and Jerome Jr. started on the Elkland Township Fire Department.

"The only records I used to have to make out were truck runs, which we kept at the firehouse. Now the state requires us to make out a lengthy report and in any arson fire we have to fill out a form for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he said.

"The state and federal government has more regulations for volunteer fire departments than there ever has been," Richard added.

A proposal law would require any volunteer firefighter to receive 132 hours of training within a year of being admitted as a firefighter.

"It would discourage volunteers from coming in because of the time they'd have to spend away from their families for that first year," Richard said.

If firefighters have enough training and meetings to attend, the fire chief has more than enough.

NEWLY HIRED Elkland Township Fire Chief Richard Root, (l), replaces his brother Jerome Jr., who will stay on as a volunteer firefighter.

"With the Right to Know Law passed this year, there's always some type of meeting the fire chief should attend," Jerome Jr. said.

When Richard started on the fire department, the techniques and equipment used in fighting fire were a lot different than they are now.

"When I started, all we had were 2 pumpers. We didn't have any (air) tankers at all. The department bought one in 1957," he explained.

"Before we got the tanker we lost many fires. The department didn't even make rural runs until 1949, when it got the second pumper," he remembered.

The latest purchase was a rescue unit bought a few years ago. Now the fire department is raising money toward a paging system, commonly known as "beepers."

With the pagers, we won't have the problem of having to try to get hold of the men on the telephone or through the siren, which at times in certain areas in town can't be heard.

"We won't have to have the siren blow on and on. In the night we may not have to blow it at all and disturb the neighbors," Jerome Jr. said.

He added that the development of equipment for firefighting has changed the way fires are fought. The chemicals now used in everyday use have made fires more dangerous, though.

"There's more chemicals on the roads and fields and different fabrics used in homes giving off toxic gas. No firefighter can go into a fire without using a (self-contained breathing apparatus anymore)," Jerome Jr. lamented.

Richard related how he came to be on the fire department. "I guess not too long after the war (WWII) that the Civil Defense was asking young people to help in their communities."

"I remember Grant Patterson was fire chief at the time and he asked if I would serve on the auxiliary, which is where the firemen were trained before actually qualifying for the regular fire department and I said 'yeah, you can put me down,'" he said.

A few years later, they expanded the fire department and Richard was asked if he wanted to join and he said yes.

Jerome Jr. was in construction and he remembered the fire department needed men and "they kept after me until I finally got on."

As dangerous as firefighting can be these days, it can be hard on the firefighters' spouses and families, they agreed.

"My wife and I have been married for 40 years," Richard said, "but she says I've been married to her 5 years and married to the fire department the other 35."

"The wives of all the firefighters deserve much more recognition than they get. It's asking a lot to be married to a devoted fireman who will answer any call no matter what he's doing with his family," Jerome Jr. agreed.

With their brother Donald serving as captain in the Elkland Township Fire Department, and his son and grandson serving on the Gagetown Fire Department, it looks like the Root family decided they could give.

Establish new medical free phone service

The Rehabilitation Institute and the Kenny REHAB Foundation have launched ACCESS line, a toll-free, telephone information line for rehabilitation topics and services. By calling the number, 1-800-23-REHAB, people can learn of services and programs offered by agencies, support groups and hospitals throughout Michigan.

The informational line provides needed information to healthcare professionals, handicappers and others, according to Leonard F. Bender, M.D., president of the Rehabilitation Institute, and Franklin C. Hazard, executive director of Kenny REHAB. Topics range from rehabilitation services, legislation, regulation, recreation, special events, equipment loans, education, handicapper rights and rehabilitation care.

The ACCESS line is staffed by Kenny REHAB from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. At other times, the Rehabilitation Institute provides recorded information.

Seek volunteers for bird watching

Area bird lovers are being asked to volunteer their time in the Michigan Breeding Bird Atlas project, designed to determine the distribution and abundance of each bird species nesting in the state.

According to Mayville resident Myles Willard, who serves as the project's regional coordinator for the Thumb, the 6-year project is slated to be completed in 1988, when information gathered by volunteers will serve as the foundation of a long-term statewide plan for the management and protection of Michigan's bird life.

Additional information on the program is available by contacting Willard at 843-6453.

Mike and Mary Score live, work with Mennonites in Zaire

The current "presence" emphasis of Mennonite Central Committee programming in Africa has proven to be a good approach for Mary and Mike Score, formerly of this area, who are in Zaire.

In its "presence" emphasis, MCC encourages volunteers to listen and Husband, wife receive diplomas in Kentucky

Two Deford Christian Academy graduates, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Willis, graduated from Kentucky Mountain Bible Institute in Vanceve, Ky., May 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Willis

Both received Associate of Arts degrees in religion. Jeff, a 1983 Deford graduate, is studying to be a minister, while Connie, who graduated from the Deford school in 1984, is studying Christian education.

Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cummings of Gageton, and Juliana Milligan and Donald Willis of Cass City.

learn from the people they live and work among and to leave behind as much as possible, their predetermined North American solutions and programs.

The Scores, both of whom have bachelor's degrees in crops and soil science from Michigan State University in East Lansing, are assigned to work as agriculturists with 2 Mennonite groups in Kahemba.

With local leaders the Scores focus on a variety of activities that encourage traditional farmers and church life in general. Their activities involve other Protestant groups, Catholics and several Muslims.

"Occasionally I am amazed at how naturally our presence here is accepted and, in fact, welcomed," Mary wrote in a recent report. "I am quite aware that I am not the bearer of all agricultural knowledge. And, should I begin to forget that fact, somebody working with me in the fields is sure to remind me when she calls cheerfully to a passer-by in Chokwe, which she thinks I do not understand: 'We're teaching Mama Mary how to farm bit by bit.' My self-proclaimed grandmother has given herself the title of 'Mary's consultant.'"

"But despite the apparent contradictions, people are openly proud of us as agriculturists and they congratulate and encourage us for taking on the work we do," Mary continued.

In September 1986 she planted a field of groundnuts so that she could relate more closely to other women doing the same thing. Mary says that by working in the fields, she also affirms manual labor.

"Many discussions take place in households between parents and 'educated' children, husbands and wives, old grandmas and their 'modern' daughters, about my daily trips to the fields," Mary says. "The main theme is usually: How is it that this educated white person who is used to tractors can go out and produce some food in the field, while you see hard, dirty work as beneath you? A few women came to thank me for shaming them into planting."

Score also joins the church and community in places other than the field. She sings with the choirs, washes clothes and fishes with baskets at the river, visits the sick, carries loads on her head, helps the kitchen crew prepare food for special church meals, welcomes visitors and accepts the hospitality of others.

Earlier in their MCC term, the Scores worked in Nyanga, Zaire.

Lagos "tapped" into honorary service May 1

Cass City resident Terri S. Lagos, 1040 Plain Rd., was one of nearly 70 students "tapped" into the service honorary Tower Guard in traditional May Morning Sing ceremonies at Michigan State University.

Unsuspecting initiates were awakened by current Tower Guard members at 7 a.m. May 1, blindfolded and taken to MSU's Beaumont Tower, where family, friends and Tower Guard members waited to honor them in the annual induction ceremony.

Tower Guard was established in 1935 as a service honorary to help handicapped students at MSU. Its main activity is reading to blind students.

Outstanding freshmen are chosen on the basis of academic ability, character and willingness to serve. They are selected by a secret process and notified of their acceptance with the annual "kidnapping."

May Morning Sing ceremonies included a performance by the MSU Singing Statesmen and a breakfast at the MSU Union to honor the inductees.

ADULT GRADUATION exercises were held Tuesday, June 2, at Cass City High School. This year there were 14 graduates.

Standing: Judy Wing, Randy Peruski, Jeff Parrish, Cheryl Lester, Morley Griffen, Ben Hoffman and Dusty Gibson. Absent was Bill Finkbeiner.

DONNA KEYS received a bonus after graduating with the adult class at Cass City High School. She was awarded a scholarship worth up to $4,320 to attend Detroit College of Business. Congratulating her is Cari Skirlo, the college coordinator.

Larceny of jacket, cash investigated in Cass City

Cass City Police are investigating larceny of a $65 jacket and $130 cash from a Cass City High School graduate during commencement exercises Thursday evening.

Clayton Hobart, 2558 Hobart Rd., Gageton, who filed the report, stated that someone took his coat and wallet, which were located in a family car parked at the high school. The larceny occurred after 7:45 p.m. and before 10:30 p.m. Also reported by the department was the arrest early Saturday morning of a 25-year-old Cass City man on suspicion of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Richard Szarapski Jr., 5485 Kelly Rd., was traveling west on Main Street when police observed him weaving and crossing the road center line twice between Doerr and Koepfgen roads. He was arrested after failing sobriety tests, police said.

MEAT NUTRI-FACTS

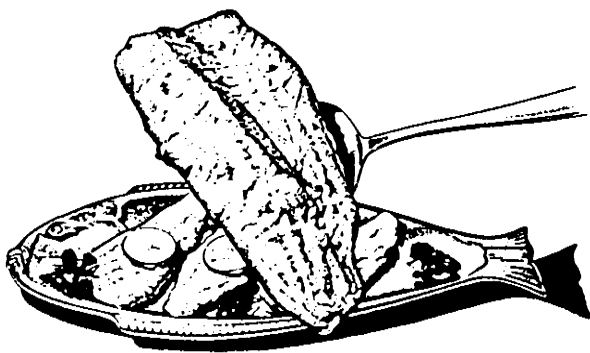

This Weeks Feature:

LEMONY BEEF STEAK

1 pound beef top round steak, cut 1 1/2 inches thick
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon oil
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 to 1/4 teaspoon dill weed
1/2 to 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Combine water, lemon juice, oil, salt and dill weed. Place steak in plastic bag or utility dish. Pour marinade over steak, turning to coat. Tie bag securely or cover dish and marinate in refrigerator 6 to 8 hours (or overnight, if desired), turning at least once. Remove steak from marinade and press pepper into surface of both sides. Place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 4 to 5 inches from heat and boil to rare or medium (25 to 35 minutes), turning and brushing with marinade. Carve steak in thin slices. 4 servings.
