Employees "satisfied"

Provincial House okays new pact

Union officials representing employees at 21 Michigan nursing homes owned by Beverly Enterprises, in-cluding Provincial House in Cass City, say they're happy with a contract ratified by union members

Details of the 3-year contract were released last week by representatives of Service Employees' International Union, Local 79, following several weeks of negotiations, which were stalled in April when officials of both sides couldn't agree on the union's 3 major concerns--staffing, wages and insurance.

Union officials in April mailed a letter to the families of nursing home residents explaining their dissatisfaction with negoti-

"We're very pleased with it. We were pleased not only to get a settlement, which we think is a good settlement, but that the company. . .took our concerns seriously and tried to establish a relationship which will enable us to solve problems in the future," union business manager Dale Ewart remarked. Among the most important victories for the union, Ewart said, is elimination of different contract expiration dates for the various nursing homes. "All 21 homes have a common expiration date--June 1990," he said.

According to Ewart, the union, whose members include about 75 Provincial House employees, addressed each of the union's major demands.

Ewart said Beverly Enterprises officials agreed in the contract to meet state staffing requirements or tive Cora Remsing, who has better if the minimum standards are deemed in-adequate. The company also agreed that employees will not be given patient care duties until they have successfully completed training and orientation.

pany agreed to hold meetings at the facility level and, if necessary, discuss the problem with senior union and company officials in the state. A final measure would be to discuss the matter with union and department of public health officials.

While the union didn't get its wage request of an additional 50 cents per hour per year of a then-proposed 2year contract, the raise agreed upon is "a pretty good wage increase," Ewart

"We received wage increases on the scale which will give employees 20 to 25 cents per year for the contract," he noted, adding the raise totals 65 cents over the 3-year period.

In a related matter, the company agreed to provide pro-rated holiday benefits for part-time employees, who previously received

Regarding health insurance, Ewart pointed out that the company agreed to provision employees participation in a Health Maintenance Organization as an alternative to the company's insurance. "We felt that was a very big victory," - he

As with the regular insurance, the company will pay 75 percent of the cost of participation in an HMO, Ewart noted.

The concession is important, according to union officials, who stated in April that the company increased insurance premiums by 27 percent over the past year. The company also raised $250 for individuals and

Rain is "fantastic" for crops, but more needed very soon

Thumb area farmers' fears were alleviated and tensions eased as Sunday and Monday morning brought much needed rain for their crops.

"It was fantastic for the crops, about what the doctor ordered. Now if we could get about 3/4 inch rain every week for the next 2 months, it'd fill the rest of the doctor's prescription," Tuscola County Extension Director Bill Bortel remarked Monday.

The Caro and Vassar areas received about 2 inches Sunday. Rick Mohr, superintendent at Cass City Wastewater Treatment Plant, said .92 of an inch was recorded from 8 a.m. Sunday through 8 a.m. Monday.

Sanilac Extension Agricultural Agent Martin Nagelkirk said Sanilac County farmers received

"With the lack of rain, a farmer would cut it and 2 days later it'd be ready to process," said Huron Extension Agricultural Agent Amy Duffield.

Second cutting alfalfa was coming slow before the rains and should be helped. However, rain shortage may not be the only problem alfalfa is experiencing.

'An agent from Saginaw County told me it looks like it's not growing but if you look at the alfalfa plant, you can see the bugs that have about an inch of rain Sun-day. eaten the plant as fast as it's growing," Duffield re-marked. TOO LATE FOR SOME he added. About 75 percent of the dry bean crop was planted by last week, with the rest of the farmers waiting for rain to help the crop emerge, Duffield said. 'They'll be planting the rest now," she added.

The rain was timely for crops such as second cutting alfalfa, corn, sugar marked. beets and soybeans, Nagelkirk said.

"It was real timely for the corn, but we're going to need more," he said.

If the rains fall right for the crops for the rest of the season, the yields for beans, corn and sugar beets should make up for what lost emergence.

"The crops were put in the earliest it's been in a long time and that could make up for what was lost due to water shortage," Huron Extension Agricultural Agent Jim LeCureux

COULD USE MORE

Fortunately, the Thumb area didn't receive the flash flood warnings various parts of the state did, but the rain won't help the crops in Huron County for too long, LeCureux rewe received between 1 and 3/4 of an inch. I walked across a field today where it was dry 3 inches down. It helped but if we don't get more real quick it'll only get us by for a couple of days, then we'll be back to where we were before. We could use another inch easy," he concluded.

Nagelkirk agreed, saying, "We could use another inch in about 5 days."

From April 1 until Friday, the Thumb area received anywhere from one inch to 4 inches, Nagelkirk said, with the average rainfall for that period being 6.7 inches, or about 50 percent below normal.

"Not only that, or that period, this area averages between 1-3 degrees above normal every day. That might not sound like much, but to farmers, it's plenty.'

Not fair. Not all my leisure hours are devoted to sitting and doing nothing. Sometimes I expend energy in the pursuit of being just me. For instance, 5-yearold Emily recently learned close-order drill from her cheerleader cousin. So she marched me up and down her backyard and around the house 50 times. And in the middle of the "hut-twothree-four" instructions. without breaking cadence or missing a beat, drill sergeant Emily suddenly pointed sharply downward and barked:

There's a newspaper confab slated in July in Dallas, Tex., and there's an urge to attend. It isn't the meeting that is all that attractive. It's the location.

During World War II, 34 months of my life were spent at an air field about 100 miles from Dallas. There's an urge to go back and see what changes the years have wrought.

Two of the dogfaces that were in the office with me pushing papers in the finance department lived in Sherman-Denison (twin cities), before entering the service, which was about 7 miles from the base and both had jobs there to come back to after they were discharged.

It's funny, but I can remember both their names. How can that be when I have trouble remembering names of persons that I come in contact with frequently?

It's true, I know, that time changes everything. I heard a rumor that the base has been closed. I don't know how I learned that or whether it was true. It probably was. There wasn't much need for a basic flying training camp after the end of World War II.

Still, it would be fun to talk to these guys and see the area that all of us Yankees cussed and discussed to break the monotony and ease the boredom that were ever present for most of us marking time in service.

Chances are better than good that I won't get to Texas next month. Over the years I've thought about visiting the area again. but it's like a fishing trip to South America or New Zealand, something that has been a back burner idea for many, many years.

Then why hasn't it happened? The cost is not so

SLEEPING WITH THE ENEMY by Nancy Price (fiction). This thriller follows the metamorphosis of Sara Burney, an abused, submissive and battered wife whose daily goal has been to keep her brutish husband Martin from still more violent assaults. Presumed dead when she is swept overboard from a sailboat in Manhasset Bay, Sara seizes the opportunity to escape from her husband and begin a new life. She rides the bus from Boston to the small university town of Cedar Falls, Iowa, where she finds a job as caretaker to Dr. Hazel Channing, a professor who is recovering from an accident that has left her both mute and paralyzed. Sara (nown known as Laura Pray) gradually edges into independence. She reads Henry James to Dr. Channing and awakes her to sprightly dialogue. She finds the strength and the wisdom to councel another woman in crisis. And she begins a tentative but promising relationship with her next-door neighbor, a perceptive professor. But her desire to visit her mother in a nursing home enables her murderously psychotic husband to trace her.

THE PANIC OF '89 by Paul Erdman (fiction). The hero, Paul Mayer, resembles the author; both are eminent economists and natives of Sweden now living in the U.S. As 1989 looms, Mayer contemplates a grim future, with troubles amassing, since the second term of America's "luckiest" president, blameless and unworried during his last days in office. The stock market drops out of sight. Banks are falling like dominoes. Foreign countries default wholesale on huge loans to the U.S. These are among the possibilities Erdman graphically spells out, sending shock waves through the reader. International conspirators include Arabs and Venezuelans, a Swiss banker, a motley gang with designs on each other and on the main objective, the Bank of America.

THE CELESTIAL BED by Irving Wallace (fiction). The story focuses on sex therapist Arnold Freeberg's efforts to treat his dysfunctional patients by using sexual surrogates. Driven from Arizona by state law, Freeberg moves his practice to presumably libral California, taking his best surrogate, Gayle, with him. The new clinic is soon under fire from foam-at-the-mouth religious fanatics, muckraking journalists and ambitious politicians. Gayle and fellow-surrogate Brandon hardly meet before they fall

Flood recovery answers

Q. My neighbor seems to cry easily lately. As a farm wife and mother, I know she's under a lot of pressure. I am concerned about her, but what can I do without being a nosy neighbor?

A. Tears can be one of the earliest indicators of a stress reaction. It isn't necessary to pry into your neighbor's affairs to be able to help her. Listen to what she's telling you. Let her talk, you just listen. Getting anger and frustration out of her system is an important part of the healing process. Don't be quick to offer advice. If you have a solution to a specific problem, offer it, but don't be offended if she chooses her own solution. Just be her friend. Offer to watch her children so she can get away for an afternoon. Invite her to go shopping or to lunch with you. Ask her if she'd like to go for a walk with you in the evenings after the children are in bed. Just continue to be the caring friend you obviously are.

Q. The other day, I got your survey in the mail. You listed a bunch of things I might be interested in. Job Club sounds interesting, but what is it exactly?

A. Job Club is a federally funded program to help displaced farmers or farm workers get back into the work force. The club will help you write a resumé, prepare you for an interview and provide job leads. If you need further skills, they can help with on-the-job training, and up to 2 years of college. If you think you qualify, Job Club meets at the Co-Op Extension office in Caro every Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. For further information, call 673-8575.

We would like to answer your questions dealing with Flood Recovery concerns. Please address them to: Flood Outreach Recovery Team; Broadcast House, Suite 100, 1184 Cleaver Rd., Caro, MI 48723, 673-8565.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Pastor John R. Wood, First Baptist Church, Cass City

A school employee was having difficulty with a child who would not behave. In discussing the problem with one of the parents, the parent commented, "It is the school's responsibility to make my child behave, not mine". Would you agree with that?

While many parents would say it is the school's responsibility, the correct answer is "NO". Parents who relinguish such responsibility to others create a serious vacuum in True, in many instances we can find others, such as the state, who would like to take over control of your child. A few years ago the revised Education Code, Ohio School

"The natural rights of a parent to custody and control of their children are sub-

Laws providing for the education of children are for the protection of the state

Perhaps the real question, or the bottom line, is... who owns the child? If one is willing to accept the Bible as an authority, as is this writer, then parents own their children and are responsible under God to "train up a child in the way he should go". The psalmist

"Lo, children are an heritage of the LORD: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth.

According to scripture, fathers are to bring their children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. "Children, obey your parents". God severely judged Eli the priest because he did not restrain his sons when they made themselves vile. Our Lord, when a child, was subject to Mary and Joseph. God praised Abraham because he would command his children and his household. Joshua gave his entire family direction when he said, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord". He did not leave the decision

May I ask a few disturbing questions before I close? Especially for parents reading this article. Do you take time everyday to talk with your child and play with him/her? Do you take time to answer their questions or do you give them evasive answers? Do you put your arms around them and tell them you love them? Do you show them how to live honestly, or do you merely tell them? Are the two of you, as parents, a good example to your children? Do you want them to grow up to be just like you? (They probably will!) Do you teach them about God? Do you send them to Sunday School, or do you bring them?

Beaches, on furlough, describe mission in Chad

Cass City natives Ross time because of a nearly and Mary Evelyn (Inky) Beach have returned to the United States for a year's furlough after spending several years of missionary work in the African country

The Beaches returned to the U.S. in early May and are residing in East Lansing during their furlough. They will return in May 1988 to Chad, a small landlocked country in north central Africa, where they have been missionaries with The Evangelical Alliance Mission (TEAM) since 1974.

The Beaches, long with TEAM, created an agricultural evangelistic ministry called the Chad Christian Cooperative in 1976 to help the local farmers help themselves. More than 95 percent of the Chadians make their living by subsistent agriculture, Ross Beach said.

The Cooperative wanted to help the farmers in-crease their standard of living while at the same time giving the church a tool for evangelism to reach those outside the church.

Much time was spent studying the situation, and the conclusion made was that poor marketing prac-tices was one of the largest contributing factors to the low income of the farmers.

The average farmer had nonexistent transportation system, lack of adequate storage facilities and an urgent need for cash to pay outstanding debts.

In the trial first year, about 100 bags of grain were stored and the farmers were paid the current market price. They were stored for 4-5 months and sold to a grain dealer at 40 percent over the original purchase price.

The well-publicized drought and famine in Ethiopia also affected Chad, where its inhabitants depend on their rice crop to eat. The "grain bowl" of Chad is in the southern part of the country, where the cooperative is based in the community of Moundou. The northern half of the country consists solely of desert, Beach added.

To help the families through the famine, the cooperative gave 100,365 families 20 kilograms, or about 44 pounds of seed rice. Widowed families were given 13 kilos (almost 29 pounds). The program went out to 193 villages and each family was asked to return the same amount of seed to the cooperative at harvest time.

If it had not been for the program, many families would have had no seed to plant at planting time, Beach said. "The farmers around here can relate to

"She was too old and feeble to work a field and so had not been been included in those receiving seed. We explained that this seed was to plant and it had 'medicine' on it which, if she ate it, would make her sick, maybe even die."

"Her reply was, 'give me some anyway. I'd rather eat it and die with a full stomach than to die because I have nothing to eat.'

The harvest season runs from October to December and produced a good harvest crop. The Chadians had enough to eat, could return the seed given and could sell the rest, Beach

The planting season had

they will be attending meetings with the Mission, and explaining the program and the Evangelical Church of Chad in this country. When the year is up they will return to Chad, he The Beaches had been

years when the situation changed there and the Evangelical Church of Chad had been asking and praying for help in a country where 50 percent of the children born will die before their sixth birthday.

'They needed somebody with an agricultural education background to go as the missionary and I graduated from Michigan State in that area," Beach

"We thought about it and it finally came to us that our original decision to serve the Lord shouldn't change because of the country, language (the official language in Chad is French) or climate. We couldn't say no on likes and dislikes, so my wife and I together," explained.

The Beaches have a daughter, Bethanne, 21, who will be a senior this fall at Wheaton College, Il-

Partial public financing of legislative elections similar to the system now used in gubernatorial races, and a continued low threshold of contributions which must be reported has been proposed by Common Cause of Michigan.

Acting Executive Director of the public interest group, Cele Friestater, said proposals in the House Oversight Committee to increase the reporting threshold to end reporting of loans which are repaid during a reporting period are invitations to concealment.

And, she said, "In light of the present crisis of confidence in the relationships between legislators and lobbyists, any effort to reduce reporting of contributions or financial transactions could be regarded by the voters of Michigan as an attempt at a partial cover-up.

Friestater said she hopes the "crisis" - stemming from an alleged bribe attempt of a legislator by a lobbyist — makes people more aware of problems in various campaign financing and lobby laws.

Legislation in House committee would increase the $20.01 floor for candidates to report contributions to $25, which a committee aide said would make the amount consistent with itemizing requirements in other sections of the law.

However, some legislators favor a higher threshold to $30-$35, more in line with common prices for fundraising tickets. Friestater said partial public financing, in which a candidate receives matching funds for private contributions, would help reverse the trend toward increasing reliance on political action committee (PAC) money by legislative candidates. A Common Cause study showed the percentage for all legislative candidates increased from 42 percent in 1978 to 54 percent in 1982. And among members elected to the House in 1984, the percentage was 57 percent, while 27 of the 100 members received at least

70 percent of their campaign funds from PACs.

House Oversight Committee Chair Maxine Berman (D-Southfield) said there may be too much PAC money, but even then, she believes the bulk of the money is aligned more with like philosophies than trying to influence lawmakers opinions.

"You're looking at a system which clearly has its flaws, but it's difficult to figure out how to change it. The disclosure laws are very adequate. The bottom line is if somebody wants to break the law, they will find a way to do it," she said. Berman defended increasing the individual contribution limits and tying future increases to inflation, saying the trend to increased PAC money is, in part, due to limits on individual contributions that were never raised after 1978. Her package of bills would not change the PAC contribution limits, but would raise individual limits to $2,150 from $1,700 tor a governor's race, $600 from $450 for a Senate race and $350 from $250 for a House race. She said public financing would be a great idea for legislators to reduce PAC influences, but does not believe it to be realistic because of the potentially tremendous cost for the 148

Friestater opposed increasing PAC contribution limits, as well as providing automatic increases linked to inflation. She said it would only fuel the trend to more expensive cam-

She also favored requirements for reporting all transactions of Political Action Committees, which under current law are not required to report unless they are directly involved in spending for election campaigning. Contributions between PACs are not necessarily reported, and she and other critics say that makes it harder to trace movement of money.

Part of the package before the House Oversight Committee would require quarterly reporting of all activity by PACs. Berman said the 30-bill package will probably be taken up this

MAKING A SALE -- John Williams sells a snow cone to 10-year-old Charity Ross who had just left the pool in pursuit of something cold to ease her thirst.

He'd be selling ice cream to all the good little boys and girls on the street corner and the one watching TV would wish he'd drive down his own neighborhood street.

Last year that wish came true for Cass City kids, young and old.

John R. Williams, 3883 Hadley Rd., Decker, moved with his family to this area in 1983 after living in the city all his life. He was employed with a couple of area businesses, but due to layoffs found himself unemployed in 1986.

It's a cool bet that it's realized there was no one selling ice cream in the truck like they do in the city," said 41-year-old Williams.

'My family and I started talking to people and came to the conclusion that kids and adults need an ice cream fix from time to time," he added.

He knew a man in Mount Clemens who was at one time selling "Good Humor" ice cream from 3 trucks, but the business had gotten so competitive that he had his last truck for sale.

The "Good Humor" truck was in pretty good shape, with only a tune-up needed and the truck to be filled with ice cream when he made his first route later that month, he said.

His wife Coralee and his 'I looked around town 2 daughters, Deanna Lynn, 18, and Donna Lee, 13, help find for a job when I out when they can by help-'With the kids out of school, they'll ride along with me some and my wife's been ill, so it'll be at least a month before she can help more," he remarked.

Williams' truck doesn't have canned music, but has bells signalling his arrival by pulling a rope inside the convertible-roofed truck.

"A lot of people think this truck has no roof, but I have one I can pull down when it rains," he noted.

The size of the truck's freezer is between 75-100 cubic feet and is kept at -10 degrees Fahrenheit. With a freezer that size, it can be difficult to defrost.

"It doesn't take long to cool everything and once every month I have to put all the ice cream in a separate freezer and hose it down while I stand on something to reach everything,' he remarked.

The freezer has a rubber plug on the bottom to drain the water and ice chunks, he added.

an- able for affected Michigan May 27 which makes assistance program, which Traxler pushed through Congress following recordbreaking September 1986 flooding in Michigan.

Traxler said the bill contains 3 provisions of interest to Michigan farmers. The bill provides the "0/92" program for winter wheat farmers, allows for dollar for dollar payments for disaster loss and eliminates the comparisons between sugar beet losses for 1985 and 1986 crop years.

"This bill is helpful to winter wheat farmers by providing the "0/92" program to growers who were unable to plant last fall because of the flooding or for those who only planted a portion of their crop because of the storm," he

Under the bill, eligible farmers will be able to receive deficiency payments for their winter wheat as if they had planted 92% of their acreage, he said.

"The bill also insures that farmers will receive dollar for dollar payments for their eligible disaster loss once appropriations are made," Traxler said. "Earlier, USDA had been paying out only 74 cents on the dollar in a pro-rated payment.'

Finally, Traxler said the bill will eliminate comparisons between 1985 and 1980 sugar beet crops so that los ses covered by the disaster program will be based on what was actually planted

"I have argued consistently that some growers received bigger contracts, and other growers received new contracts as a result of expansion by sugar companies which qualified them for one of the exempt tions to this 1985 acreage limitation," said Traxler.

The bill signed by the president only authorizes these modifications, but does not provide the actual dollars needed to make the program more equitable and the actual funding must come in an Appropriations bill, he said.

"It's very important to note that the most essential step in making these changes is yet to come, said Traxler. "I have included funding for these modifications in a Supplemental Appropriations bill which is still being consis dered by the Senate, and I am hopeful that this bill will be sent to the president for his signature within the next few weeks."

Zmierski joins DNR Cass River fish kill protest

"If it ain't broke, don't

The old adage has become a battle cry over the past several months for a number of area anglers who have voiced their opposition to a fish kill proposed by the Department of Natural Resources for the Cass River.

A series of public input meetings on the project is set to be held this summer. The fish kill, if approved, would be conducted sometime in the spring. Area fisherman Mike Zmierski last week joined the fight against the proposal. And he's backing his arguments with proof.

"I've gotten 5 pike in the past 3 days, and the smallest was 24 inches," Zmierski, who brought 2 pike to the Chronicle office June 16, remarked. "That's average--I always get a pike out of there," he

"I've been getting real nice pike in the Cass. I get about 15 pike every summer, and I always have a lot of fun doing it," he said.

The 27 year-old Cass City resident acknowledges there are a lot of "rough" fish, such as suckers and carp, in the river. But he maintains that the Cass also holds some excellent fishing for pike, bass and rock bass.

'There are a lot of game fish in that river. I've talked to a lot of people and they say, 'just leave the river alone; we're getting plenty of fish out of there right now','' Zmierski, 8910 Grassmere Rd., continued.

Zmierski joins other area fisherman, including Cass City resident David Dunn, in his hopes that the fish kill proposal will be dropped.

Dunn has spearheaded a The Reds triumphed over campaign against the pro-

"We serve the fishing public and we try to provide them with the type of fishery they desire. We know we can do a good stroke of work there," Nurenberger continued.

The biologist acknow-ledged a complete kill-off of fish isn't the only option regarding improving the Cass River fishery, but said that the alternatives, such as killing off fish at certain sections of the river, would not be very effective.

"Right now, our game olan is to do the entire (Cass only serve to ruin fishing in the river for 2 years and public input will weigh plants to do the entire (Cass River) system-that would be the most effective."

Lois D. McBean, M.S., R.D. Nutrition Technical Advisor Dairy Council of Michigan

For the first time ever, a coalition of 3 national organizations of health professionals, namely the American Dietetic Association (ADA), the American Institute of Nutrition (AIN), and the American Society for Clinical Nutrition (ASCN), along with the National Council Against Health Fraud, a consumer health protection group, has issued a joint statement to guide consumers on the safe use of vitamin and mineral supplements. "Americans should get their nutrients from food rather than pills whenever possible," said Alice said Alice Smitherman, R.D., current president of the ADA, the organization spearheaded the coalition. The American Medical Association's (AMA) Council

on Scientific Affairs reviewed the statement and found it consistent with its official statement on dietary supplements.

HEALTH TIPS

Coalition says nutrients should come from food not pills

The joint statement was prompted by concern about the skyrocketing use of vitamin and mineral supplements and their potential for harmful effects. Supplements are overused and misunderstood, according to the coalition.

'Meeting nutrient needs by choosing a variety of foods in moderation, rather than by supplementation, reduces the potential risk for both nutrient dificiencies and excesses," according to the consensus statement. The statement goes on to add that there are no demonstrated benefits for self supplementation with nutrients beyond 100% of the Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDA).

Sales of supplements have more than doubled in the past 10 years and now reach $2.6 billion/year with projections to $10 billion by 1990. Sales of calcium supplements in particular are soaring to an estimated $200 million this year, up from $47 million in 1983.

Not only are many Americans consuming nutrients in supplements, but some are consuming these nutrients at many times the RDA. Nearly 40% of adults are ingesting at least one supplement product daily, according to a Food and Administration (FDA) study carried out by Alan S. Levy, Ph.D., a consumer science specialist with the FDA. Moreover, Dr. Levy reported that heavy users of supplements obtained 777% of the RDA, or nearly 8 times the RDA, for nutrients in the supplefindings have led the FDA to ask physicians nationwide to begin recording and reporting patients' symptoms associated with high doses of single nutrient supplements. The statement also warns ments alone. These types of consumers to avoid vitamin or mineral abuse. "Nutrients are toxic when ingested in sufficiently large amounts," said C. Wayne Callaway, M.D., chairman of the public information committee of both the AIN and the ASCN. Overdoses of vitamins A, B-6, C, and D, and minerals zinc and selenium are of particular concern because of their high potential for toxicity and severity of overdose symptoms. High-dose vitamin and mineral supplements not only can be toxic per se, but they also can interfere with the body's use of other nutrients. This can increase the risk of nutrient excesses or deficiencies. High doses of calcium, for example, can reduce iron absorption. Similarly, large amounts of zinc can interfere with the body's use of copper, explained Callaway. Many supplement users rely on high-dose, single nutrient supplements to promote health or prevent diseases such as cancer, osteoporosis, or heart disease, said Mary Abbott Hess, R.D., chairman of the ADA Task Force on the Safe Use of Vitamin and Mineral Supplements. Despite promotional implications, there is little scientific evidence that high doses of vitamins and minerals will prevent these diseases, Callaway stated. In contrast to the potendangers associated with the improper use of supplements, a daily multivitamin and mineral supplement or any other supplement which does not exceed the RDA is associated with minimal health risks, according to Callaway.

Further, supplements may be helpful for specific groups. These include: *Women who are pregnant or breastfeeding *Women who have excessive menstrual bleeding *Persons consuming very low calorie diets *Štrict vegetarians who eliminate all meat and dairy foods from their diet *Individuals whose nutrient needs are altered by illness or medication The coalition statement advises that "individual recommendations regarding supplements and diets should come from physicians and registered dietitians." However, for consumers who want to evaluate their own diet for its adequacy and shortcomings, a new consumer brochure is available. A copy of this brochure, cal-"Alphabet Soup: Nutrients from Food and Supplements," can be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1 to Supplements, Dept. 33AS, The American Dietetic Association, 430 N. By Bill Myers

When the 17-year-old West German pilot landed his Cessna in Red Square we all had a good horselaugh on the Russians. Meanwhile we applauded the German lad for his imagination and daring.

It recalled to me a similar feat of daring in World War I, told to me by the late Ben Colman, a golf partner, great friend and confidante of many years back in Michigan. Ben was in training in the Canadian Air Force just across the border from New York State. He and his friend wanted to go to New York City and have a day on the town.

The friend was Earl Carroll, later of Earl Carroll's Vanities.

So what did they do but borrow a training plane, fly it across the border and land in Central Park, right in the middle of New York

New York City, unlike Moscow, didn't get excited about a foreign army plane landing in the middle of town. In fact, nobody paid any attention to these 2 young bucks in uniform. They parked the plane, got a cab and did the town. Earl had a lot of friends there.

Came time to leave, and there was a little problem. The open space in the park was long enough to land in, but somewhat short for a takeoff. So they got some bystanders to hang onto the wing tips, while Earl revved up the engine to the company will 'The realize a reduction in its income tax expense due to the tax reform act of 1986 and will pass on the savings to its customers, as approved by the Michigan Public Service Commis-Gary E. Olmstead, SEM Gas secretary-treasurer.

Gas rates to decrease next month

Gas rates will decrease, starting in July, for customers of Southeastern Michigan Gas Company (SEM Gas).

"SEM Gas revenues will be reduced $800,000 annually, which will be a yearly reduction of about $8.24 per average residential customer using 150 Mcf," Olmstead said. SEM Gas customers also will benefit from a one-time refund of $187,574, due to the tax reform act, which will be paid to customers later this year pending MPSC approval. Each residential customer will receive an average $2.10 credit to their gas bill.

SEM Gas serves about 72,000 customers in the southeast and south central portions of Michigan.

"The plane fairly shook," Ben recounted. "It wanted to go into the air right there. Then we gave the sign to the people holding us back, and away we went!

"We still just skimmed the trees before we got out of the place.'

After the war, Ben went on to become vice-president of Evans Products, famed as a builder of railroad cars. Off the job he confined his flying to the backs of horses in the hunt field. He was the best horseman I ever saw.

No question about it, the cost of college has gone sky-high. The Ivy League schools quote figures of $18,000 a year while out on the Pacific Coast at Stanford it costs about as much. "It costs so much they're becoming places only for the elite," said my New England friend, Charley.

Charley and I argue a lot. So far neither of us has ever changed his mind as a result of any of our word-bat-

'O.K., so they cost a lot," I said. "But who's being kept out for lack of money? Scholarships are all over the place. Student loans are available for rich and poor. The rates are low, and apparently there's no pressure to pay back the loans.

"If the Ivy League costs so much, there are other colleges -- state ones, for example. gan ... California ... they're pretty good schools. Go there for half as much as Harvard and Yale and that bunch.

"Well, no wonder," said Charley. "They're statesupported; tax-payers

'So what? You're paying taxes anyhow for state schools. Might as well get something back for your

"And what's more, Charley, where do you get this stuff about 'the elite' being the only ones who can afford college? You mean the rich. The rich are not always the elite. furthermore. there are quite a number of other things the poor can't get because they don't have the money, and the rich can. That is a strong incentive for working hard and getting to be well-off.

"There's another system, where there are neither rich nor poor. There nobody gets anything. The place is Russia. Another is China.

"Another thing, I don't think college amounts to much for most people, anyhow.

There! That ought to fix

Well, it didn't. He just gave me his haughtiest look that only a New Englander can give a country boy from the Midwest, and turned away and motioned to the

Karr promoted to assistant prof at MIT

A Gagetown couple's son recently was promoted in the department of ocean engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass.

Dale G. Karr

Dale G. Karr, the son of Marge and Leonard Karr, 6078 W. Huron Line Rd., has been promoted to Associate Professor of Ocean Engineering at the institute.

Karr, a 1974 Michigan State University graduate, received his MS degree in 1977 from the University of Tennessee and a PhD in 1983 from Tulane University. He was an adjunct professor at Tulane University before his move to MIT in 1983 as an assistant profes-Karr's research has been directed mostly towards the solution of important problems relating to arctic engineering. He has focused on predicting the mechanisms of ice/structure interactions.

Walbro's gift key for 4-H programs

Tuscola County youth will have the opportunity to gain some new skills thanks to a contribution to the state 4-H foundation from Walbro Corporation.

'A portion of the annual gift has been earmarked for some unique programming here in Tuscola County, John Wurm, Tuscola County Extension 4-H youth agent, remarked. He added that $200 of Walbro's $2,500 gift to the state foundation will be used for new programs in Tuscola County.

The unique programming will include introduction of the new 4-H Aerospace Program, which is being conducted in conjunction with NASA. A series of 3 video tapes will be the major focus of the presentation. Youths will have the opportunity to learn about space suits, food in space and gravity and its effects. Participants also will have a chance to build and launch their own rockets.

Another program offering is a Career Exploration Day, which includes a trip to the county courthouse and a tour of Walbro Corporation facilities. Youth will learn firsthand what valuable contributions are being made by Walbro locally, Wurm remarked.

Other programs are classes in clowning, bicycle safety, nutrition and fitness, calligraphy, and drug and alcohol abuse preven-

According to Wurm, Walbro's donation has been matched by the Tuscola County 4-H Council. The money will be used to offer scholarships to 4-H youth to attend state 4-H activities such as summer camp, Washington Focus, Exploration Days, Capitol Experience, Snow Camp and other events.

Each day they attend, participants will have the chance to win scholarships.

By attending 5 of 7 days, youths will double their chances for scholarships.

'This is a great concept for distribution of the money," Wurm commented. "The youth not only get the education at the programs, but the many scholarships encourage participation at the . . . state programs The are scheduled to meet Tuesdays, beginning June 30, through August 18 with the exception of the week of the county fair. Participating youth aged 6 through 19 can pick which weeks they wish to attend, with an open registration in the mornings.
