TOTALLOSS -- Michael and Rona Essex peer into their Deford area home Sunday after fire gutted the structure Saturday night. The blaze remains under investigation.

4 years' work lost as fire guts Michael Essex home

by Tom Montgomery News Editor

A Deford area family lost nearly everything they own Saturday evening, when fire destroyed their 4-bedroom ranch style home.

The family, Michael and Rona Essex and their 3 young daughters, wasn't home when the blaze broke out at 4591 Shabbona Rd., according to Elkland Township Fire Chief Dick Root.

Root, who estimated damage at $50.000 to $55,000 for the structure and $20,000 to $25,000 for contents, said fire fighters were called to the scene a little after 10 cials last week won a small victory in their court battle with Pioneer Human Services Inc., and the owners of Kingston Hills Camp Inc., which are fighting to open a "work and learn" camp in the township. Tuscola County Circuit Judge Patrick R. Joslyn, during a lengthy show cause hearing Thursday, granted township officials the right to inspect the camp, located 1 1/2 miles south of Kingston, as part of the discovery process. The ruling, in effect, dissolves an injunction which has prevented such an inspection.

Also during the hearing, the Tuscola County Department of Public Works was dropped as a defendant in the suit.

The case is scheduled to reconvene at 8:30 a.m. July

Pioneer Human Services Inc. and the owners of the Kingston area camp filed a rehabilitation camp for juvenile offenders.

Officials at Pioneer Work and Learn Center, a division of Pioneer Human Services of Detroit, have maintained that the camp's planned use—a year-round rehabilitation facility for up to 50 teens convicted of non-assaultive crimes—has been "grandfathered" into the township's zoning ordi-

Township zoning officials, however, contend the camp has been and is in violation of township zoning because, they say, the use of the facility has been changed from a boy and girl summer camp to a rehabilitation facility for troubled youths.

That's the primary issue to be resolved in the case, but there are other issues as well, according to Sandusky attorney Anthony J. Sykora, who is representing the township.

facility.

"There's a technical ques-tion of whether (this) should be in court," Sykora said, adding the case may not belong in court at this time because Pioneer Work and Learn Center officials have not yet taken their case to the township.

According to Bob Gordon, an administrative assistant with Pioneer Human Services, there is no reason for camp officials to approach the township. "We feel a camp is a camp," he remarked, adding that Pioneer officials feel they are not

however, disagreed, adding the township has asked Pioneer officials on several occasions to apply for a special land use permit.

Sykora, who said Pioneer officials have skipped normal procedure for insuring proper zoning, explained that the purpose of the planned inspection of the camp by township officials is to investigate the extent of development at the facility since 1972, when the existing township zoning ordinance was adopted.

Before the weekend was all over some 15,000 people crammed the park and parade route to partake in the festivities hoped to heat up the holiday that grew hotter throughout its 3-day celebration.

Weekend activities began Saturday with the softball tournament, horseshoe contest, cruise night and lipsync competition.

While antique car owners congregated near the park, the inaugural lip-sync contest proceeded before about 100 spectators in the high school gymnasium. Three judges decided the first and 2nd place winners out of 8 entries. Mouthing the words to Labamba and sharing the $50 first prize was the Cass City group of Christopher Leipprandt, 5, Cody Leipprandt, 2, and Nicole Doerr, 5. Melanie Rae Joles, 11, took home 2nd prize in Festival activities halted for a few hours between the close of the Saturday night teen dance and the opening of Sunday's sun drenched activities which included ment. Other park activities Sunday included the pig roast at the Lions Club pavilion and the Sally Doerr Dancers in their first of 2 weekend performances.

Cass City residents and many out-of-towners arrived at the park early Monday morning to start the day at the Rotary Club pancake breakfast. At about 10 a.m. the 5th and last annual bed race competition ran for the crowds fighting for prime parade spectator positions. The team headed by Jeff Dillon captured first place in the men's division and Krista Numberger's team won the women's division competition.

Following the races, the beds were rolled away from Main St. making way for the over 70 unit parade. Again, the Michigan National Guard sent 2 jets to take 2 swipes over the village just a few minutes before the beginning of the parade.

Any one spot on the parade route was passed by about 70 minutes of various entries including antique cars,

Many event coordinators said that this Independence Day festival drew many more spectators and participants than last year's park events did. Despite the intense heat that cut down on the number of children's track events played, over 60 children ages 2-10 took home prizes in events including a sack race, shoe box relay, and 3 legged race.

The holiday weekend was far from quiet for Cass City Police officers, who were kept busy with a host of traffic violations and other complaints.

Police Chief Gene Wilson said officers wrote 24 traffic tickets, not including 3 arrests for suspected drinking and driving, and handled 2 incidents of suspected possession of controlled substances.

Police also handled 2 minor vehicle accidents, and complaints involving vandalism and the larceny of an American flag from the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post Hall in Cass City. An' 18-year-old Deford resident was arrested early Monday morning on suspicion of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, and transporting/possessing alcohol in a motor vehicle.

Clinton J. Massingale, 7101 Mushroom Rd., was stopped by police on Main Street near Weaver Street at about 12:35 a.m., reports

Also Monday, Michael D. Wright, 26, 1526 Decker-ville Rd., Caro, was arrested for suspicion of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. He was stopped on Church Street near Hill Street at 3:30 a.m., according to reports, which state that police spoke with Wright at the Cass Tavern prior to the arrest and told him not to drive. Also arrested for suspicion of drinking and driving over the weekend was Richard A. Gorski, 27, of Detroit, who was stopped by police Sunday at 11:55 p.m. on Main Street near Ale Street. Wilson stated that police are seeking arrest warrants in connection with separate incidents of marijuana and cocaine possession during the weekend. Names of the suspects were not being released as of Tuesday morn-

Vandalism complaints were filed by 2 area residents, including Cheryl Wilson, 5780 Shabbona Rd., Decker, who told police that a passenger side window on her vehicle was broken out Saturday.

The vehicle was parked at 4355 Leach St., Cass City, at the time of the incident, which is believed to have occurred between 9:30 and 10:15 p.m. Damage is estimated at $100.

Valerie A. Wesolowski, 6461 Main St., Cass City, reported a broken windshield on her vehicle while parked behind her residence Sunday. Damage is estimated at more than $100.

People make the home by Melva E. Guinther

As Stan and I jockeyed for position in the kitchen while preparing Sunday dinner, I was reminded of the tiny apartment we occupied when we were first married.

It was an "intimate" little place with a living room, bedroom, an extremely compact furnished kitchen and a bathroom across the shared with a hall, neighbor.

It occurred to me that although our kitchen today is undoubtedly 10 times larger than the first one, we still have trouble passing each other when the oven door is open.

Of course, the two of us occupy considerably more space these days than we did then, and the mass has strangely shifted toward the middle.

Looking back on those early days of marriage, it's pretty scary to realize how little we started out with. We had a bed and dresser, a borrowed table and 2 chairs, a secondhand car, 2 record players and 500 records. (Our record collection has dwindled to a mere 250 plus 300 cassette tapes.)

All we really had going for us was that we were young, had jobs, love and a lot of faith. If our kids had contemplated marriage under similar circumstances, we probably would have been orrified.

Despite the fact that we wouldn't want our kids to do it, I'm not sure we'd change things if the script could be rewritten.

The sense of accomplishment when we saved enough money to buy a new piece of furniture was equalled only by the satisfaction of finding a bargain at a household auction. (Garage sales hadn't been conceived yet.)

We learned to appreciate things, and we still do. However, possessions have never been a top priority with us.

One of the prime ingredients in making a marriage work, I feel, is a compatible set of values.

If it's important to a couple to have a nice house, fine furniture or a luxury car, then by all means, they should strive to those ends, and they should do it together.

It's possible to be equally miserable or euphoric in a mansion or a hovel.

Neither elegance nor meanness determines the true quality of life. It's the people that make the home.

"If It Fitz..."

Give us a break

By Jim Fitzgerald

There are a couple of things bugging me...

On a Friday afternoon at a downtown Detroit bank, I deposited a $200 check drawn on a Lapeer bank. And the teller warned that the check "won't clear for 5 business days."

How's that for friendly, efficient service in the age of computer science? Lapeer is only 65 miles from Detroit, but it would be a full week before I could spend or earn interest on my $200.

I'm increasingly bemused by the wide disparity between bank advertising and real life. The ads promise the bank is your most loving friend whose only goal is to make banking the most pleasant experience of your life. The reality is you have to stand in line for 15 minutes because 75 percent of the teller windows are always closed (why were they built?), and when you finally do reach a teller, she turns her back on you to wait on a fellow employe.

Thirty years ago, after quickly reaching the teller, you could complete your business in a minute. That was before the installation of several electronic machines designed to increase efficiency and print receipts that can't be read without the aid of a magnifying glass.

the teller to push dozens of buttons, and for the circuits kick into the action to rethey waste.

That's progress. I'd wait in line at an automatic teller machine except I worry too much about cheaters sneaking into the gaps the waiters always leave in the line so no one will think they're trying to sneak a neek at the secret automatic banking number of the person in front of

ODD BEHAVIOR AT RESTAURANTS

At a better-than-average Detroit restaurant, I paid $15 for my wife's crab legs and $12 for my steak. Everything was fine, except I ordered milk. And the waitress plopped down an empty glass and an unopened halfpint carton of milk.

If I'd ordered pop or beer, would I have gotten an empty glass and an unopened bottle? Of course not. All my life I've wondered why milk drinkers are treated so rudely in restau-

Now it takes 5 minutes cups nears empty, the because you have to wait for waitperson will be there to pour more. > Or if the milk does come on time, you'll break some fingernails trying to open the stupid carton.

> Or, in several decent restaurants, I've been told they were all out of milk. Did a restaurant ever run out of

I've asked big shots in the dairy industry why they don't demand that milk receive the same respect from restaurants as other beverages. The cow people say it's no use. They say milk is regarded as a children's drink and waitpersons don't expect adults to order it, so it's easy to forget they did.

Also, unlike coffee, unsold milk turns sour after a while, so restaurants avoid the possible loss by not keeping an adequate supply on hand. And, I suppose, they serve it in unopened cartons so the person screaming that the lousy carton can't be opened will be me, not a restaurant employe.

Those are all wimpy reasons for restaurants to make milk drinkers feel as welcome as cockroaches. Milk drinkers should arise and insist upon being treated as well as coffee drinkers. Give us a break — a milk break.

An object lesson in the futility of teaching specific skills in our schools rather than general knowledge and the ability to think can be graphically illustrated by the Chronicle's Mary

Mary's been at the Chronicle for almost 21 years now and in that time has been trained and retrained in 6 different typesetting machines. She started by punching tape that ran a hot lead machine. Her most recent switch was to a personal computer that sets the news and some of the ads, including this trivia you are now reading.

It was a last minute decision by the Cass City Rotary Club to sponsor 3 on 3 basketball as part of the July 4 Festival. With limited time for promotion, there were 29 teams entered.

That was better than the sponsors hoped for. The jubilation was tempered when it was learned that Croswell-Lexington staged a tourney and 68 teams were entered. Maybe next year?

As usual, you get conflicting reports on the number attending the Festival celebration. Some feel that the crowd was greater than last year's. Others maintain that it was smaller. Dick Root, who was in a good position to judge from the seat of the fire truck that he drives in the parade each year, says that it was greater. Wall to wall people all up and down the parade route, he added.

Suffice it to say that a great many persons were on hand to enjoy the parade and the day.

This is Thursday. The job is done and there's satisfaction in having a small, a very small, part in producing that all-new sparkling Cass City Rotary float that many of you by now will have seen on July 4.

Satisfaction tinged with maybe just a small nagging doubt. The Rotary float this year was built around the theme of "It's a small world" and calls attention to Rotary International's Polioplus campaign.

The campaign is designed to eradicate polio in undeveloped countries and has been underway 2 years. The money collected is impressive and has surpassed Rotary's ambitious goals. Internationally, over $220 million has been raised in cash and pledges. Cass City Rotary members have raised $11,000 in cash and pledges over 5 years.

The float is designed to illustrate the Polioplus program and materials in it cost well over $400. That's where the doubt sneaks in. It has been figured that 25 cents will inoculate 2 children in the program. That means that for the $400 dollars spent on the float, 3200 children could have been protected against the dread disease that ravages the unprotected. Like most things, there is no black and white answer here. Color it grey. There's no question that the $400 spent for inoculations is more beneficial than the $400 spent for crepe paper and other assorted decorations. On the other hand, how do you measure the publicity value? It wouldn't take much of a donation to more than equal the amount that the float cost.

Then, too, as a Cass City civic organization, Rotary has a responsibility to the community which it serves. Helping make the parade, a big part of the July 4th Festival, is certainly one of them.

So on balance perhaps the money was well spent. It's natural to want credit for success and Rotary is big on getting its message to the general population. There's a good deal of emphasis in the Rotary hierarchy on getting publicity for the club's many public service projects. Personally I've always felt that the satisfaction of doing it was enough.

it really isn't. Like it does for the Lions International Leader Dog program, publicity can be of decided use in promoting public cooperation and sup-

But in today's world I guess

Sometimes, I feel, all organizations have a too fond eye for publicity as a criteria of success.

But we should be able to put up with that when the results of the various philanthropic programs are considered.

If it takes a little puffery to get it done, so be it.

80 pupils enjoy special school days

Eighty elementary students from Tuscola Area Schools extended their school year when they were invited to participate in a special summer school called "Project Think." The school, in its third year, is sponsored by the Tuscola Gifted and Talented Consor-

Students were offered lessons in clowning, cookie judging, rocks, frogs and bubbles. Each lesson was comprised of a fun activity which led to several thinking activities.

Teachers from Caro, Cass City, Mayville, Millington and Vassar worked together in teams to present new lessons each day to third and fourth grade students.

The fourth and final day of the school featured a balloon launch. Students attached original poems and their addresses to the balloons.

The school is a joint effort of the Tuscola Gifted Consortium and the Tuscola Professional Development Consortium.

driven by Cora M. Parrott, THE GREENLANDERS by Jane Smiley (fiction). The story centers on the family of Gunnar Asgeirsson. Gunnar's sister Margret is married off to Olaf, but he fails to consummate the marriage, and Margaret begins a clandestine affair with a Norwegian sailor, Skuli Gudmundsson, who has stayed on in Greenland as a household retainer. Violence and tragedy ensue, and as Margret's unhappiness increases, her character hardens and she offers her labor as an itinerant servingwoman. A foil to Margret, but no luckier, is Gunnar's wife, Birgritta, who is gifted with second sight. It is she who sight up the overriding sense of futility: "We have come to me ending of the world, for in Greenland the world must end as it goes on, that is with hunger and storms and freezing."

> LOVE AND MONEY by Ruth Harris (fiction). This novel spans the years between 1944 and 1988. Russell Dahlen is an immensely rich New Yorker whose family gave its name to the venerable Wall Street investment firm of Lancome & Dahlen. When his daughter, Deedee is born, Russell's mistress almost simultaneously gives birth to his illegitimate child, Lana, in Massachusetts. Moreover, Dahlen is imme ately banished from Lana's life by the man who will become her stepfather. Years later, Deedee, Manhattan's reigning socialite, becomes engaged to Trip Lancome, the firm's intended president. But she impetuously rejects him to wed Slash Steiner, a Lancome & Dahlen employee intent upon making millions to help him forget his miserable childhood spent in an orphanage. Financial genius Slash builds a fortune while he and Deedee gain celebrity as trendsetters of the 1960s. Since Deedee's sense of self-worth derives almost solely from wealth, Slash must continue to keep her in major baubles. As for embittered Lana, she grows up abuse deprived and chillingly determined to achieve the affluence and respectability required to destroy both Russell and Hrycko explained that he chose to go to Japan because he "wanted to go to a place I felt was exciting, and that I could learn a lot from. Japan is rising," he said, adding, "Europe is old, a lot is known about it.'

Taking with him 6 months of language studies, the international economics major departed for Japan with what he believed to be little knowledge of the language or the land.

Upon arrival, Hrycko and the some 24 GLCA students he journeyed with were sent to a private hotel, Myoko-Kogen, in Nigata Prefecture for a one-month orientation.

After the hotel stay, the students acquired various living arrangements, either with host families as Hrycko did, or in private apartments, and began classes at Waseda.

American students were registered in classes in the social sciences, all taught in English by Japanese instructors, Hrycko said. American students did not take courses in math or science, but some did study the Japanese lan-

During his 3 terms at Wasedo, Hrycko took 2 courses in Japanese. "I was the worst student," he said, referring to the difficulty he encountered with the 3 Japanese alphabets. "Some of my friends learned Hiragana (native Japanese alphabet) in 3 days," he commented, adding "it took me a few weeks.

Hrycko explained that other than Hiragana, the easiest and first alphabet usually taught to beginning language students, 2 other Japanese alphabets are taught. Katakana, an alphabet that consists of the spellings of foreign words, exists and is not as difficult to understand as the complex Kanji. Words written in Kanji may hold 2 or more meanings, Hrycko stated.

The Kanji of a word may be interpreted into Chinese or Japanese meanings or may depend on the context in which it is used. "It's hard to learn," Hrycko said smiling, "but if you learn the Kanji of a word, it's easier to remember what it is (and) what it Hrycko explained that Japanese names in particular are easier to remember once their Kanji is understood. "Japanese want the best Kanji possible for names," he continued. The Kanji of his host mother's name in Chiba Prefecture just east of Tokyo, for example, could be broken down into 3 parts. Miwako means beautiful (mi) peace (wa) child (ko).

-Many Japanese women have names which end with ko, Hrycko pointed out. Knowing what the parts of names mean helps not only to commit a name to memory but to learn Kanji words.

Though Hrycko found some Kanji easy to remember in deciphering specific parts of words, he remarked that he was not upset in the least to learn that most Japanese signs and books are not written in Kanji.

Many signs were written in Hiragana, and "A lot of signs were written in English," he said, "especially in Tokyo. Also, "people love to try out their English (on Americans)," Hrycko recalled.

People in Tokyo and outside of Tokyo, Hrycko discovered, spoke English and encouraged him on his attempts at speaking their lan-

Court case

Mayer said the use being proposed by Pioneer officials is much different than the use grandfathered into township zoning. He compared the visitors of the earlier boy and girl camp to the juvenile offenders, who will each spend 6 months at the facility and won't be free to come and go as they like.

"The thing that upsets me, the thing that upsets everybody, is we're fighting our own money," Mayer commented, adding that money used by camp officials for legal services against the township was provided, along with a 90-day contract, by the Michigan Department of Social Services.

The court battle may become a moot issue in the near future as both the state House of Representatives and Senate have approved amendments to the state social services bill prohibiting the use of funding for 'work and learn" camps.

The amendments were introduced by Rep. Dick Allen (R-Caro) and Sen. James A. Barcia (D-Bay City).

themselves," he said, pointing out, "they (Japanese) want to know all about you."

Hrycko experienced the inquisitive natives throughout his travels of Japan.

In a rural part of Japan, Shimane, west of Tokyo, Hrycko spent about 3 weeks with a host family on an egg farm. During most of March he talked with the farmers there and got a chance to visit a Co-op.

The small farm he stayed at kept 15 thousand chickens, Hrycko said, and he received certain chores to attend to there. "They made a big deal about what I did, but it wasn't much," the American student pointed out, reiterating "everyone was so nice.'

Hrycko noted that when he classifies Japanese farms as small he means small. Farm country in Japan contains many farms of about one half acre in size, he said. "A 2-3 acre farm would be considered rather large.'

Most farms in Japan grow rice, and the land is sparsely populated, Hrycko stated, adding that all areas of Japan are not as congested as many foreigners may think. Hrycko noted, "Tokyo people are what most people know about Japan, but there are many people who don't live in Tokyo and they are often forgotten."

On his rural stay, Hrycko learned much about life there through the open attitudes of the people. Before he moved on to independent travel, Hrycko experienced Shinto services and people the least familiar with tour-

"I wish I could have gotten to know my rural host family better," Hrycko said, "I'd like to visit them one more time.'

After moving on from Shimane, Hrycko traveled first with an American friend, and then by himself, to various Japanese cities.

Hrycko spent his first 2 days of exploration in Hiroshima. There he traveled to Peace Memorial Park where he gazed on and photographed the Atomic Dome, a building left standing as a reminder of what Hiroshima underwent as a result of the August 6, 1945, bombing. "I thought it was sad because of all the destruction that went on," Hrycko recalled of viewing the dome and the exhibits at the Peace Memorial museums.

Bike safety program set for July 16

A bicycle safety program has been slated for 9 a.m. to noon July 16 in Cass City. The program, to be held at the Cass City Intermediate School cafeteria, will be geared towards kids ages 5 Participants who have bikes are asked to take them to the event, which will cover an inspection of the bicycle, including minor repairs and registration of ownership, a bicycle safety movie, and a road test.

There will be door prizes, free cookies and juice, and certificates for participa-

The program is being sponsored by the Rotary Club, Gavel Club, Lions Club, VFW, Chamber of Commerce, Cub Scout Pack 3594, Boy Scout Troop 594 and Girl Scouts in cooperation with the Cass City Police Department, Tuscola County Sheriff's Department and state police.

Kuhn seeks appeals court judge post

Oakland County Circuit Judge Richard D. Kuhn has announced that he is a candidate for the Michigan Court of Appeals, 2nd District.

In announcing his candidacy, Kuhn said he will base his campaign on his qualifications and experience, and the need to restore balance and respect to the court.

"I firmly believe a judge is a servant pledged to reflect the will of the people as expressed through laws written by their elected representatives, not a master using his position to impose his will upon the society he serves.'

Kuhn, a graduate of Michigan State University and the evenings at 7 p.m. in the Detroit College of Law, has been a circuit judge for more than 15 years. He served as its chief judge for 3 years, and as a visiting judge on the available by calling (517) Court of Appeals. Kuhn resides with his wife, Sally, and their 4 children in Waterford Township.

Kuhn is a member of the Michigan and Oakland County Bar Associations, the American Judges Association and the American Judicature Society.

Kuhn, long active in community and civic affairs, served as chairman of the Administrative Board of Central Methodist Church in Pontiac and was a past director of the Optimist and Kiwanis clubs of Pontiac. He has been active in the United Fund, Junior Chamber of Commerce and Chamber of Commerce.

Benefit softball tilt to help Toys for Tots

The WHNN-SUNNY 96 radio station ball team will be making its debut performance in the Thumb Area July 16 in Cass City. The WHNN "Air Aces" will be playing the host Thumb Area Consortium/ Growth Alliance "Terminators" team in a benefit softball game. Proceeds from the game will be donated to the 1988 campaign of the Toys For Tots Organization which serves Huron, Lapeer, Sanilac and Tuscola Counties.

Marvin Pichla, executive director of the Thumb Area Consortium/Growth Alliance explained, "This is a first for the Consortium/Alliance so far as organizing a ball team, plus this will be our first promotional game. and promises to be a funtime with all proceeds going to a charitable organization that helps to brighten the lives of many children. Spokespersons from WHNN and the Consortium/Alliance indicated that there is no predetermined spectator admission charge, but instead a voluntary con-

Fireworks cap 10th annual celebration

BEST SEAT IN THE HOUSE -- An unidentified mud volleyball participant beats the heat and enjoys the competition Monday as temperatures remained in the 90s.

THE EXPLOSION OF fireworks over Cass City Monday night marked the end of the village's 10th annual Fourth of July Festival, which attracted more than 15,000 persons.

THE ROTARY CLUB'S musical float received the Meredith B. Auten Award in the float competition.

PROVINCIAL HOUSE RESIDENTS, perched atop their election-year float, are pleased with their prize, the President's Award.

CMU airs honorary membership

Two former area high school students have been named to Central Michigan University's chapter of Mortar Board for the 1988-89 academic year.

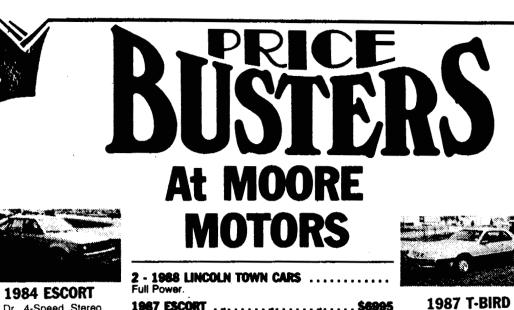

They are James Osentoski, the son of Jennie Osentoski and a graduate of Cass City High School, and Richard Bischer, the son of Eugene and Helen Bischer and a graduate of Ubly Community School. Osentoski is majoring in elementary education, while Bischer is majoring in finance.

Mortar Board is a senior honorary with more than 200 chapters nationwide. Membership, by invitation only, is based on scholarship, leadership and service. The 35-member chapter at CMU participates in community and university service programs. It also sponsors events for foreign students, children, senior citizens and high school students.

A LOT OF hard work went into the construction of a float entered by the First Baptist Church of Cass City. This float received the Dr. Harry Crandell Memorial Awrd.

Heat didn't hinder Cass City festival

NICOLE DOERR (LEFT) and Cody and Christopher Leipprandt teamed up to steal the judges' hearts during the festival's first lip-sync contest, held Saturday. The trio, which performed the song, "LaBamba," walked away with the first-place award of $50.

STILL POPULAR IN their sixth parade appearance in Cass City, the Sally Doerr Dancers, accompanied by the now-famous California raisins, treated parade crowds with their traditional kick line routine.

SPLASH! -- Pat Kerbyson of Yale powers his way into the mud bog course during action Monday in the 251 to 500 cc class.

BLOWING THE TABLE tennis balls down one length of the pool, these pool game competitors race against ripples and each other in one of many games coordinated by lifeguards for the Fourth.

OFF AND RUNNING -- the dog show obstacle course was run by 16 dog and master teams.

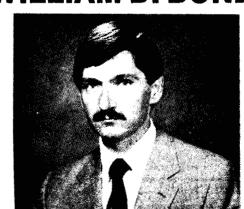

OVER 100 PAINTINGS were created by the young artists who dropped by the AAUW paint-in Monday.

TEAM CAPTAIN Rick Richards bats away a shot by opponent team captain Shawn McGuire during the open class 3-on-3 championship game. Richards' team won the game and the tourney undefeated in 6 games.

How can you insure only what your farm needs and save money? No problem.

If you have some very selective needs that you'd like to protect on your farm, Select-O-Pak from Auto-Owners is for you. The Select-O-Pak Policy offers seven optional coverage plans to make sure you're only paying for insurance that you require, nothing more. And, because it's selective, it's very affordable. Just ask your "no problem" Auto-Owners agent about Select-O-Pak for your farm. It could be exactly what you had in mind.

Rev. Heins chairs Lutheran convention

The Convention of the Michigan District Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, was held at Concordia College, Ann Arbor, June 26-29. The Rev. John Heins, president of the district, chaired the convention.

Dr. Ralph Bohlmann, president of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, preached at the opening service June 26. Dr. Bohlmann reported on the work of the Synod at each session.

This year's convention theme was "Year of Families." The theme has been emphasized throughout the year in the district's publication and the church's Bible studies. Emphasis has been placed upon the fact that we are in God's family by faith in Christ Jesus. As part of this family, members love and honor their human family and work and pray for its well being. Dr. Steven Carter, a former professor at Concordia Seminary, Fort Wayne, Ind., presented a study on "The Christian Family." Dr. Carter is now in charge of devotional materials for families at Concordia Publishing House, St. Louis, Mo.

All assistants to the president of the district in mission, social service, chaplaincies, Christian education, stewardship and evangelism presented their accomplishments and plans for the future.

Mr. Marvin Heinitz, manager of the District Church Extension Board, reported to the gathering on the society's work.

Mr. Nelson Willy was to represent Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Cass City, at the convention sessions as an elected lay delegate. Pas-

The Nuveen sentiments echo my own, printed in this column in days gone by.

It's a living for those who are labeled economists, and who actually get paid for their witchcraft mutterings.

Trouble with all these diagnoses is that they don't work as predictions. If trade balances or inflation figures or auto production or unemployment or drought or elections have made the market go up and down, then the medicine men out of Harvard Business school should be able to say in advance, "If Dukakis is (or isn't) elected, then the market will go up (down)." Then you'd know whether to buy or sell at the opening Nov. 9, day after the election. Of the thousands of ponderous pontifications of the pundits on the Oct. 19 crash, only one man hit the nail on the head, to explain the 30 percent drop in stock prices. It was John Kenneth Galbraith, and he said it in 4

A mutual fund's management and buying-and-selling costs run around .075%. That would be $750 for essentially the same services these brokers are offering for $3,000. Big deal.

It's hard to keep my mind on the typewriter this morning. I've just talked with my friend, Mrs. Emmett Stuart, of Arcadia, Mich. 49613, who makes 164 kinds of jams and jellies in her farm kitchen, as well as 36 varieties of chutneys, butters, pickles and relishes. I'd drop this writing job right this minute, except she'll be at some trade fair at Traverse City with her booth, and likely peddling $500 worth of her concoctions before the day is out.

She assures me she has already "put up" plenty of my favorite, strawberry-rhubarb, and there'll be some saved for me.

No kidding, she does make 164 varieties of jams and jellies, somehow without running out of names. She resorts to such designations as Zuctom Jam, Violet Jelly, Vera Juice, Sumac, Cow

Slip and Corn Cob. A post-card to her will bring you a booklet with all the products listed. If you get some and aren't delighted, write to the editor of this paper and ask him for a re-

Highway safety

Tuscola County Sheriff Paul Berry has announced that the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department is administering to law enforcement agencies in the county a $34,000 Federal Highway Safety Grant presented by the Office of Highway Safety Planning in Lansing.

The grant operation, which began the first week in June, will be a group effort of 11 local police agencies, including the Cass City Police Department. Their main enforcement efforts will be the 55 mph speed limit, posted speed limits and seat belts as well as child restraint laws.

Speed studies performed in early spring indicate that nearly 65% of motorists traveling in Tuscola County ignored the speed laws. Also, a substantial number of motorists are still not in compliance with the seat belt laws.

In its original form, the grant was to include additional patrols from the sheriff's department but a failed millage request in April, 1988, led to the subsequent lay off of the entire Labor Day.

Tuscola County Sheriff's Department Road Patrol.

This action was reviewed by the Office of Highway Safety Planning and their initial response was to scrap the entire grant monies available as it was felt that with the loss of the county's participation, the number of those areas where the 55 mph speed limit needed to be enforced was greatly re-

However, after further discussion and meetings with the Office of Highway Safety Planning, Sheriff Berry and project director Sergeant James Giroux convinced that agency that an alternative program was greatly needed and that the use of these federal funds at village and township levels would help to better enforce the traffic laws in those jurisdictions.

In his final presentation to the group, Sheriff Berry cited the availability of federal funds for these efforts and agreed to assign a member of his staff to direct the objectives of the program, which is in effect until

No one injured in 3 area vehicle mishaps last week

Police said a vehicle driven by Winifred S. Jensen, 5732

Bay City-Forestville Rd.,

Three minor vehicle accidents were reported by the Cass City Police Department over the past week.

Slight damage was sustained by 2 vehicles in a mishap Monday morning on Seeger Street at Garfield Avenue. Reports state the mishap occurred when an eastbound vehicle driven by Loren S. Armbruster, 816 Gilford right-of-way to a southbound vehicle driven by Jeffrey Raatz, 4693 State St., Gagetown.

Slight damage also was reported in a mishap Friday at a parking lot at Hills and Dales General Hospital.

Reports state that a neighborhood youth was responsible for painting 13 fence boards at the Ekiert residence. The matter was resolved via an agreement by the youth's mother to replace the boards.
