3-county fire loss over $5.7 million

Fire calls handled by the Elkland Township Fire Department this year are keeping up with 1987 levels to date, but the number of serious fires are down, according to Chief Dick Root.

The "Fire in Michigan 1987 annual report" compiled by the Michigan State Police Fire Marshal Division and released last week lists a total of 44 fires handled by Elkland Township firemen. The figure, which includes 2 incendiary and 3 "suspicious" fires, translates into a total dollar loss of $92,050.

Root said Monday that the 44 fires were among 69 calls received by the department last year. The calls this year to date total 51, compared to 53 at the same time in 1987.

Root, who noted calls such as false alarms are not included in the state report, pointed out that Elkland Township firemen responded to more serious house and trailer fires in

This year, the department has had only 2 serious fires, not including an assist to the Caro Fire Department in January on a $40,000 house fire. The other 2 fires, Root said, were a $60,000 house fire north of Deford July 2. and a blaze that gutted th Classic Auto Salvage build-ing just south of Cass City Aug. 14. Damage in that fire is estimated at $45,000 to $50,000.

"We've had a lot (of fires this year) that could have been bad, but we've been very fortunate in getting them out," the fire chief remarked.

Root noted that Tuscola County is among a few select counties chosen by the Fire Marshal Division to participate in a program this year in which all structure fires over a certain period in the select counties will be investigated. # Meeting Thursday "Players" need new players

Despite the resounding success of the first play presented by the Cass City Players, an organized effort is needed to keep the young organization viable, Michelle Zdrojewski of the Cass City Community Education Department said this week.

It's not money that is of principal concern, she said, but persons interested in taking an active part. We need bodies to help with all of the work of the Players.

Statewide, Michigan fire departments reported 183,219 alarms in 1987, a decrease of 13.4 percent from the previous year. The alarms included 67,054 fires, 52,946 rescués, 18,627 non-fire emergencies (power lines down, gas leaks, etc.), 20,961 false alarms and 23,631 other non-fire runs (including public service and good intent calls). The figures represent decreases in all classifications from 1986.

There was no significant change in the fire related death toll. A total of 240 civilians lost their lives as a result of fires in 1987.

Nine fire fighters died in the line of duty.

Fires involved 6,603 comoccupancies, mercial 19,470 dwellings, 16,128 mobile properties and 24,853 other classifications. The estimated value of property and contents involved in fires totaled about $14.3 billion, with the estimated fire loss being $298.6 mil-

Fire department investigators reported 5,167 incordiary fires with a loss of $28.5 million. Additionally, 8,560 suspicious fires, with a combined loss of $37 million, were reported during the year. These combined figures represent a 16 percent decrease in incendiary/ suspicious acts over 1986,

O-G looks to cut cafeteria deficit

Financial matters, including an audit report and approval of the district's 1988 tax levy amounts, dominated a monthly meeting of the Owen-Gage Board of Education Monday night.

Walt Moore of Laine, Appold and Co. presented Owen-Gage's 1987-88 audit represents a clean bill of nances, particularly considering the revenue losses sustained by the district via dropping land values.

Following his presentation, Moore suggested that the board consider some action on the district's hot lunch program, which over the years has built up a deficit of some $17,000.

He noted that Owen-Gage isn't alone in its struggle to operate such a program on a debt-free basis, but added Act 621 prohibits municipalities from operating in a deficit position.

Moore pointed out that the board's options may include possibly "forgiving" the debt, owed to the General Fund. He also suggested that the board approve separate budgets for both the school service fund (including the hot lunch program) and the debt service fund.

School Supt. Harley Kirby stated that although measures have been taken over the past 2 years to reduce the deficit build-up, further action to trim costs will have to Koylton Township zoning officials have postponed a hearing set for Oct. 12 to hear arguments over whether the controversial "work and learn" camp at Kingston Hills Camp is in violation of township zoning laws.

Township Zoning Board member Russell Mayer said Monday that the Zoning Board of Appeals, which will preside at the hearing, has granted a request for an extension from an attorney representing the camp.

eeping the attention of a group of kindergarteners can be a real challenge, but Sgt. Brent Woodward makes it look easy.

That's important to Woodward, whose work with upper Thumb youngsters over the past 8 years has probably prevented countless tragedies.

Woodward's job? Well, officially his title is director of safety programming with the Huron County Sheriff's Department. Kids, however, know him as the tour guide of a little town called 'Safetyville.'

Woodward, who spent several hours Sept. 22 guid-

All persons interested in helping prepare the mirsery rhyme display, under the direction of Lloyd Vyse and the sponsorship of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce, are asked to attend the initial workshop of the season Tuesday, Oct. 11, at the Cass

City Cultural Center. Workshops will be held each Tuesday and Thursday following the original meeting, Vyse reported, and anyone interested is welcome to come to any of them.

Work to be completed will include refurbishing last year's scenes and the creation of 2 or 3 more scenes to be added to the display.

He sits down with the youngsters, face to face, and talks to them in a polite, cheery tone. He wants them to know that police officers are good guys—that they do more than hand out tickets and make arrests.

He covers the basics of street safety in a brief talk before the tour, often asking his guests to "do him a favor" and be sure to look both ways-twice-before crossing a street, to never take chances near railroad tracks, and to be wary of strangers. He also explains the "eyes and ears" program in which children in trouble can get help from persons driving utility and county vehicles displaying a special

With few exceptions, his audience is wide-eyed and attentive.

"Do you know, boys and girls, that nothing bad ever happens in Safetyville. . and the reason is as long as you're in Safetyville, I'll protect you," he told his first groups of pupils Thursday. 'And when you go into your hometown of Owendale or Gagetown...I want you to be just as safe."

The Safetyville program, developed in Huron County by Woodward 8 years ago, is sponsored by the Huron County Sheriff's Department and made possible by donations and funding from the Office of Highway Safety Planning.

A similar program also is offered by the Tuscola County Sheriff's Depart-safety are stressed. The display, which covers some 3,000 square feet of gymnasium floor, incorporates a number of authentic looking child-size props, including traffic signals and signs, parked cars, a school bus, buildings, a railroad crossing, streets and sidewalks. Following a brief introductory talk, Woodward and some volunteer crossing guards guide the youngsters through the town both on foot and on push pedal tractors (equipped with seat belts, of course).

Woodward, a 23-year veteran of the department who also serves as school liaison officer in Huron County, noted that the hands-on concept of Safetyville is a key in the program's effectiveness. The kids, who participate in the program twice (in kindergarten and first grade), "really remember it," he added. "Running them through it as first graders after they've had it as kindergarteners gives me a handle on how much they've learned," he continued, adding that after 8 years, many of his earlier pupils are now junior high students who, according to road patrol officers, "have total respect" for traffic safety and police officers.

"We've gotten comment after comment from teachers and administrators,' Woodward said of the program. He noted that parents have told him that their children, after visiting Safetyville, couldn't stop talking

"I feel it's a great asset," Gagetown Elementary Principal William Britt remarked. The children, he added, get a lot from Safetyville. "The teachers and any parents I've talked to are really happy with it. They're not alone in recognizing the Huron County program, which in 1985 was named the number one child safety program in the United States by the National Traffic Safety Institute. Having spent countless hours on the program, Woodward, who along with his wife spent more than 800 hours building many of the Safetyville props back in 1980, seems pleased with the results of the program.

"It's paid off in the long run," he concluded.

SGT. BRENT WOODWARD of the Huron County Sheriff's Department guides a group of Gagetown Elementary School students through "Safetyville" during a recent visit to the school. In his 8 years of presenting the program, Woodward has shared Safetyville with some 14,000 students in 25 public, parochial and country schools in Huron County.

Labret's latest call came last Wednesday, 3 weeks after my last remaining car disappeared. I wondered what he'd been waiting for. When the first Olds was swiped, he'd phoned the next morning. In fact, I didn't suspect the car was missing until Labret said he had the clubs from the trunk.

Labret apologized for the delay. He'd been on vacation and hadn't noticed my clubs until Sept. 26, although one of his clerks purchased them Sept. 7, the day after the theft. I said I'd forgive him if he promised to call quicker the next time my clubs came back.

At the risk of sounding egotistic, I should admit my golf clubs are fairly easy to identify because my name is written in huge script all across one side of the bag. It wasn't my idea. As it also says on the bag, I played in the 1975 Tony Lema Memorial Tournament on Marco Island in Florida. The sponsor, Deltona Corp., gave everyone in the tournament a bag with his name on it.

This was one of those "celebrity studded" events while trailing an errant drive into the wrong fairway. I was almost hit by a ball clubbed by Jackie Gleason. Jack Parr and Joe Dimaggio also were there. And I've always treasured that colorful bag as a fond reminder that the only reason I was allowed to play in such famous company was that I was an old friend of a Deltona public relations

Cass City's newest addition to the revitalization of the downtown shopping area is the luxury of a center turn lane at the intersection of Main and Seeger Streets.

And although the project was funded and completed under the State's jurisdiction, some of the public feel that the turn lane is more of a nuisance than a convenience.

Houghton Street resident Paul Brown is one of them. The (center) lane causes a problem because it makes the outside traffic lane too close to the curb. It could cause an

There's a television commercial that is inundating the airwaves aimed at trying to influence the vote regarding state-paid abortions. One of the lines in the commercial says something to the effect that the issue wasn't about abortion, but who should pay for the procedure. It's a cheap trick and says again that the end justifies the means. It doesn't go as far out of bounds as the protesters who are bombing or unlawfully picketing abortion clinics, but it's cut from the same cloth.

In the first place it's not true. Knowledgeable persons have said that the cost to the state for a mother on welfare to have a baby is more in the first 2 weeks than the cost of an abortion.

There could be respect, if not agreement, for a commercial that came out and said what is true. One that said we feel that you should vote against state-funded abortions because we feel abortion is wrong and keeping abortion from this group would be one small step in the right direction. I can't help but think that the commercial's theme reflects the fear among its sponsors that the polls are right. That over 60 percent of the population are prochoice in this raging battle.

student returns as attorney he Cass City Rotary Exchange Program has played a big role in the life of Toshiyuki ("Toshi") Arai. A former exchange student, Arai spent the 1973-74 school year in Cass City soaking up the local culture while completing his senior year in high school.

Now, 15 years later, the 31year-old Japanese attorney has returned to Michigan with his wife, Kaori, and the couple's children, Lisa, one, and Leina, 3. Interestingly, Arai's return was sparked by another exchange program, but this time he's here as the first Japanese attorney to join a law firm in the state.

"It's good to be back in Michigan and I thought the people in Cass City may be interested to know what has come out of the student exchange program," he remarked during a recent phone interview from his office in Southfield, where he works with the law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman.

"I've had always this strong desire to return to the United States. I have friends and family here," he said, adding his exchange experience in Cass City "really formed the basic personality of my life.'

Cass City is "very international as far as international interaction is concerned. It's quite unique. I was talking to an investment banker (last year) in London. She was an exchange student in Cass City from New Zeal-

"I still keep in touch with my host families and my host brothers and sisters. I was happy to attend the wedding of Kris Proctor," Arai, who has made 5 return trips to Michigan over the past year, continued.

During his exchange year in Cass City, Arai lived with the families of Tom and Elaine Proctor, Mike and Toby Weaver, and Richard

Three of the host parents recently recalled their impressions of the Japanese teenager who briefly shared their lives.

VERY BRIGHT

"He's obviously very bright. When he first got here, we were impressed with his English," Elaine Proctor said. "He was always very easy to get along with.'

"He's kept in touch with us, as have his parents," she continued. "He is special to us and we're, of course, delighted he's so close.'

Arai's return has sparked a unique set of memories for Mike Weaver. "I was about 31 years old when he got here, and I had 2 girls, ages 2 and 5. Now he's 31 and has 2 young daughters. It's so close to my situation," he said, adding, "That's what sticks out in my mind, and, of course, he's done very well now.

"He's a super good kid," Mike's wife, Toby, remarked. "He was one of these kids who are always happy, never complain."

She noted that Arai embraced American culture and made an effort to be part of the families he lived with. That included doing what was popular with kids then, she recalled.

"I can remember the long hair, and I can remember telling him, 'Toshi, get your hair cut before you go home. Your parents won't understand. He didn't, and they didn't."

WORRIED

"I remember him as being very intelligent. Even then his English was impeccable," Toby recalled, adding Arai told them he wanted to study law and return to the United States. "He worried a great deal about getting

After graduating from Cass City High School in 1974, Arai returned to Saitama, Japan, where he completed another year of high school before enrolling at the University of Tokyo. There, he earned bachelor's degrees in economics and business management over a 6-year period.

He then studied at Japan's Institute of Legal Research and Training, earning his law degree in 1985. He was admitted to the Tokyo Bar the same year.

After working for 2 1/2 years at one of Tokyo's largest law firms, Arai headed for upstate New York, where he received a master's of law

SPECIALTY

Arai, who joined the law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman only 2 months ago, said his specialty is transactional law-negotiating and drafting contracts, for example. He added, "I do a lot of financial law, namely securities and banking.'

Having already been admitted to the New York State Bar, Arai has now set his sights on the Michigan State Bar. "If all goes well, I'll be admitted in this state no later than next summer.

"Among Japanese attorneys it's been very popular and prevalent that we take American Bar exams." he tance is important for those involved in various areas of international law.

That strategy fits in well with Arai's new employer, whose corporate practice includes considerable work with international businesses and financial transac-'tions.

Charles Clippert, a partner firm, which in the ! has 190 attorneys and is one of the largest such firms in Michigan, remarked that Arai fits in very well.

"He is a bright person and it is obvious that Cass City taught him both fluent English and a good understanding of American culture," he

Clippert noted that for its part in the exchange, Dickinson, Wright has sent Tim Hazlett, a 1983 graduate of Michigan State University and a 1986 honors graduate of Georgetown University Law Center to work at the Tokyo firm of Anderson, Mori and Rabinowitz, Hazlett was also a Rotary scholar, having earned a master's degree in economics at the University of Exeter in England. While Hazlett will stay in Tokyo for 2 years, Arai's exchange period will last only one year. What will happen after that remains uncertain, he says.

He added, however, that he has become very attached to life in the United States, particularly Michigan.

"I have this very strong feeling about being willing to go back to (this) part of the state. No one can really resist feeling comfortable here."

Owen-Gage runs by Caseville for easy homecoming victory

Owen-Gage celebrated their homecoming Friday with a lopsided victory over visiting Caseville, 29-0. With the win, the Bulldogs remain in the hunt for the North Central Thumb League crown and a possible Class D play-off bid. The Bulldog record is 5-1.

To capture the NCTL championship, the Bulldogs will need a little help from the Kingston Cardinals, who travel to Deckerville (the only team to defeat the Bulldogs) this Friday to decide first place in the league. Both squads are undefeated in conference play.

> To expand their season into the State's play-off picture, the Bulldogs control their own destiny. And it begins Friday when they host the Peck Pirates.

"Peck will be a lot bigger

> For the Pirates to hold down the Bulldog ground attack they will have to slow down Marc Reinhardt, who rushed for 135 yards on only 10 carries against Caseville.

If the Pirates are able to contain Reinhardt, something that hasn't happened all season, the Bulldogs will rely on the improving arm of quarterback Chad Stirrett.

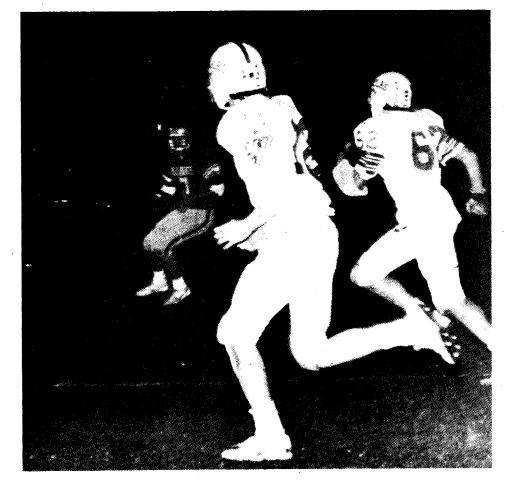

Stirrett's last 2 games have been the best of his career. The lanky junior connected with speedster Jay Susalla for the Bulldogs' opening score on a pretty 51-yard pass play. Nick Pavlichek's kick made the score 7-0 with over 8 minutes remaining in the first quarter.

On the punt, Pavlichek, who has blocked 2 punts and one PAT attempt this season, bolted through the line to record the Bulldogs' first safety on the year.

Stirrett put the game on ice when he scored his first of 2 touchdowns after receiving Caseville's safety punt. Pavlichek's kick failed but the game was well in hand as the Bulldogs led 22-0 at the Leading the defensive charges for the 6th consecutive week was Reinhardt, who recorded 12 tackles and one pass interception. He was followed by Bill Ehrlich's 12 stops and Pavlichek's 7 tackles.

Owen-Gage steamrolled a rebuilding Kingston squad Thursday, 52-27, on their own floor, despite a poor first quarter showing. The win improves Coach Dean Roller's cagers' record to 10-1, while keeping their North Central Thumb League record unblemished

The Bulldogs will begin the second half of NCTL action this Thursday when Port Hope comes to town to tangle with the league leaders. Owen-Gage shouldn't be challenged by the Blue Stars and won't be until they run into Akron-Fairgrove next Tuesday.

The winless Cardinals played the talent rich Bulldogs even for most of the first quarter as Roller's cagers were caught napping out of the gate.

The Bulldogs woke up in the second stanza and outscored the visitors 24-6. to take a 32-10 advantage, into the intermission.

Most of the damage was inflicted by the Bulldog defense, which caused numerous turnovers off their

Farmers may find themselves under increasing pressure in the future to reduce phosphorus and sediment runoff from their

The need is 2-fold: to help protect surface and groundwater from phosphorus contamination and to stop soil erosion. Phosphorus contamination and erosion are non-point pollution

"Of the many surfaces of non-point pollution, row crops on fine-textured soils contribute the greatest amount of phosphorus and sediment to the Great Ted Loudon, Michigan State University Extension water quality management specialist,

Loudon is the MSU Extension project leader for the Michigan Energy Conservation Program for Agriculture and Forestry. The program is to help farmers and foresters reduce energy costs and environmental pollution through practical conservation practices.

Extension specialists and Agricultural Experiment Station research agronomists have been conducting cropland run-off studies in the Saginaw Bay area for the past 4 years. The studies show that where conventional tillage was used in fields with finetextured soils and little slope, the sediment losses were about .2 of a ton per

Where conservation tillage was used in the same fields, the sediment run-off was about .05 of a ton per

Annual phosphorus losses in those fields were about 0.6 pounds per acre with conventional plowing and 0.4 pounds per acre with chisel plowing. The annual phosphorus losses from both conventional and conservation tilled fields was less than one percent of the phosphorus applied to the fields each year.

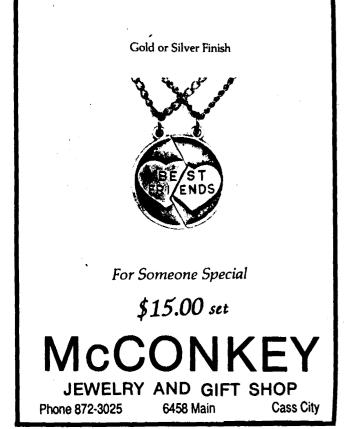

In conventionally tilled fields, the phosphorus loss was due to overland flow, which can carry unacceptably high amounts of soluble phosphorus into surface waters.

Soluble phosphorus lost from the surface of a field under conservation tillage will likely be absorbed into the lower layers of the soil before it reaches the tile

Chisel plowing in heavy, tile-drained soils appears to be a beneficial water quality practice. The chisel plow treatment seems to increase water infiltration and reduce run-off and the potential for pollution.

Tile drainage is necessary to gain the most benefit from conservation tillage in terms of soil water retention and the reduction of soil nutrient loss.

In other business during the 1 3/4-hour meeting, Kirby noted that Owen-Gage, as expected, will receive "membership" state aid for the first time. A total of $89,228 in membership aid is expected in the 1988-89 school year, despite a decline in enrollment of 6 pupils from the previous vear, he said, adding the 1988 enrollment totals 347 students.

Kirby pointed out that the district lost $5.56 million in state equalized valuationa decline of 16.65 percentfrom 1987 to 1988.

Despite gaining "in-formula" status, the district still faces a decline in revenue of $138,753, which officials hope to cover with money in fund equity, Kirby said.

In a related matter, the board approved the district's 1988 millage levies. The district will again levy the maximum allowed by the state for operations (41 mills), plus 4.5689 mills for debt retirement.

Also Monday, the board heard a brief presentation from 2 representatives of First of America Bank on municipal investment fund programs available to the school district; approved nomination of Andrea Mandich as the "student of the month" for September; learned that a Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) pilot reading test will be administered in the district Nov. 1, 2 and 3, and were reminded that board meetings will

HEALTH TIPS Phobias can affect the whole family

"As a youngster, I always felt angry and neglected when my mother couldn't attend the school play I was in," says Carolyn.

"Not until I was 37 years old did my mother reveal to me that she was phobic about being in large auditoriums with the lights out," Carolyn continues. "She always had plausible excuses for what she avoided. But I sometimes thought she didn't love me enough. I realize now that her phobias humiliated her and made her believe that anyone who knew about them would think she was crazy. But covering them up did more harm to our family than being candid would have done. An estimated 11 million American adults have phobias in any 6-month period. They're the most common of all psychiatric problems.

'While phobias themselves have received increasing media attention, their effects on the families of phobic people have not," says Jerilyn Ross, president of the Phobia Society of America, "The phobia of one individual can have a profound impact on an entire family." The whole pat-tern of family life may be distorted to accommodate the limitations of the phobic individual. Indeed, those severely hampered by a phobia may have no social life at all.

Family Vacations: No Days Off From Phobias Even phobic people who confide in their families may wish to conceal their condition from the outside world. As a result, the family may cover up, excuse or even blame the phobic member for the disability and the inconvenience it causes. Family vacation time, for example, can be a particularly trying period because there's no vacation from phobias. They may prevent people from traveling in planes, trains, buses or cars, from crossing bridges, from entering restaurants or shopping centers or even leaving home at all.

Some phobic people will venture out only in the company of a particularly close friend or family member - the "phobic partner." This relationship places an undue burden on that individual, who may be just a child. It's not unusual, in fact, for a child to serve as caretaker for a parent housebound by a

This and other studies were conducted by a group headed by David H. Their findings support the contention that family and friends can assist in recovery, especially when they participate in treatment sessions.

"Fortunately, recovery is entirely possible even for phobic people who don't have spouses or close family members to assist them," says Jerilyn Ross. "But when phobic people have support systems - - friends and/or family members willing to help them face the situations they fear - - these generally give a boost to the process.

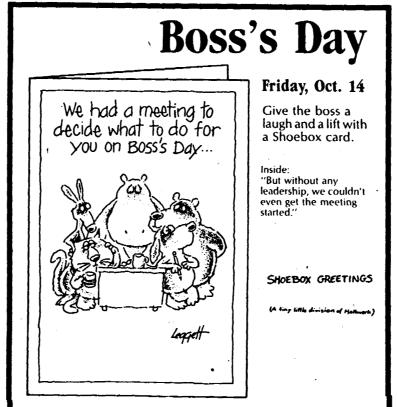

Thanks to the existence of skilled therapists, effective treatment options and other resources, today's outlook for most people with phobias is excellent - - especially those with supportive family or friends.

Today, most com-munities, small or large, their business to the big city 40 miles away, they have trouble attracting new business enterprises which there are few of, and they think they have a nagative think they have a negative image. Every time we move, I hear the same quality. A few miles later I

> Truly, a community is the image of its people. That's what sets Cass City apart from other small towns, its people. Cass City people are friendly, respectful of each other and of their town. They have pride in and maintain their homes, churches, hospital, school and local government. Finally, they do shop locally when possible and they do participate in projects that support and promote the town. Not every small town is full of people like this, but

EDITOR

I don't know what is wrong with so many of our senior people. They seem to have bad memories and be ready to vote for the party and not the record, especially in the presidential election.

The National Council of Senior Citizens and other groups that work for our benefit have rated George Bush and Dan Quayle as no friends of ours. Bush voted to freeze the cost of living increases for seniors on Social Security while he was vice-president. Our friends on the House-Senate Conference Committee later removed the freeze from the bill, but Bush would have left us helpless in the face of rising prices.

Quayle has a 10 percent record of support for issues that benefit seniors during his years in the Senate. He may have been born with a silver spoon in his mouth, but the rest of us haven't. Many of us need help with just food and shelter, but he doesn't care.

Too many of our senior people here in the Thumb vote Republican without even thinking about it. The Republicans have fought against every advance made for older people, from Social Security through Medicare to their stalling and arguing against the need for decent care for old people who can't take care of themselves.

Mike Dukakis will do the same thing Democrats have always done, stand up for older people and make sure they get what they need.

Yours truly,

Edward J. Goralewski 203 W. Congress Caro, MI 48723

BEULAH, MICH .- -- The season is winding down, and now it's back to the tropics. Crystal Lake has scarcely a boat on it. Even the hardy wind-surfers have gone. The water is too cold for swimming. (For me it always is.) The maples are turning scarlet and gold in a glorious finale to their annual outdoor stage show.

Frank Foster, next door, has taken in his dock and his boat. John Robson and I had a farewell sail down to the trailer ramp, and our sloop, "Lickety Split," has been bedded down in Mike McDonald's boat warehouse.

We've eaten the refrigerator bare except for the mayonnaise. The cupboard is empty except for canned peaches. For some reason, they're always left over.

Today I made a few 'last calls' downtown. Perry Ely wasn't at his market. He had gone to Las Vegas, and so far hasn't phoned his brother, hundred for getaway who is running the store, for money, but I feel guilty money to come home. # Children concern of 2 teachers

Mr. Haire.

How dare you imply our motive for writing to you last week was because we are working without a teaching contract! Our argument was with you for allowing inaccuracies to be printed as facts in your newspaper. It was not with the school administration.

Our motivation is based on the concern we have for the parents and children involved in our special education program. Your inaccurate reporting seemed to imply all the students are which is not the case. Would you want your child labeled "mentally impaired" if he/ she weren't?

Why should our motives for writing to you be questioned simply because we are teachers?

Here is one final fact for you. We are proud to be teachers with or without a contract!

Proudly,

Mary Anne Cross Laura Schinnerer Sp. Ed. Teachers

Editor's note: For clarity it should be pointed out that the story in question did not name any student in the program.

John would reply, calmly. "I'll be over with a shovel."

Among the things and people we hate to leave. Switching to more cultural selor.

You take a quart of vodka, a activities, we have a nice quart of Damson plums, and letter from Roger Jacobi. a quart of sugar. Put this in a president of Interlochen two-quart container, and let Center for the Arts (better the stuff restall winter on the known as the music camp).

At the camp this summer there were 2,100 youths between 8 and 18 from some 41 countries who came to study music, art, drama and dance. Their performances were a joy to watch. If your faith in young people is sometimes shaken, this is the place to have it restored. They added to Interlochen, 27 years ago, a year-around high school. This year 435 students from 43 states and 17 countries are enrolled. and this is a little over capacity. Interlochen has a reputation for discipline and a quest for excellence matched by few private schools. I hope my grandson can attend there some 10 years hence.

It's another gem in this great section of Michigan.

So we say Goodbye, Beulah, baby. We love you, but the season's over.
