Church. The concert, slated to begin at 2:30 p.m., is open to the public at no charge, although donations will be accepted for youth ministries at the 4 host churches.

Interestingly, Sward pointed out, Cass City was offered the opportunity to host the German musicians because of the village's Bach Festival, which celebrated its 10th anniversary last Thanksgiving.

Special programs to key Memorial Day observances

Memorial Day is a day of honor and tradition. Cass City, as well as Grant and Novesta townships, will continue this honor and tradition with annual festivities in remembrance of lost loved ones.

Day ceremonies slated at the Novesta and Elkland Township cemeteries. Also, local historian Ottomar Sting will give a brief history about the township cemetery, and Lawrence Summers will read the minutes of the Memorial Association's first meeting.

Cass City will host its annual parade starting at 10 a.m. Local historian Jack Esau will continue a 30-plus year tradition of serving as master of ceremonies. The parade route will start at the Cass City State Bank on West Street, proceed east on Main Street and end at the Elkland Township Cemetery, where an outdoor-service will take place.

Cholesterol test results worry health officials

by Tom Montgomery News Editor

The results of a recent free blood cholesterol screening offered in Cass City has Hills and Dales General Hospital officials concerned about the health of area residents.

Steve and Al Wright are among the more than 270 persons who took advantage of the screening, conducted May 11 at the hospital.

tions, however, have set the recommended maximum level at 200.

"We've got a major problem here," Hills and Dales Administrator Ken Jensen said last week. "We're very, very concerned."

Jensen, who indicated he's confident the results are accurate based on the thoroughness of the testing, suggested that those who made the effort to be tested probably represent a segment of the community that is better informed regarding the dangers of high cholesterol.

EVEN SCARIER

"That's even scarier," he remarked. "If this group is showing this result... what (about) the general population?"

According to Jensen, the average age of those tested is 35 to 40 years, which represents a disturbing trend being seen in the health field.

"We're seeing people in their 20s and 30s having heart attacks," he said. "We have kids under the age of 10 who have higher than the normal (cholesterol) limits."

Jensen and Bonnie Johnson, a registered dietitian at the hospital, agreed diet is among the biggest culprits, with a healthy combination of the 4 basic food groups having been replaced in recent years by so-called "fast food."

Jensen recalled a typical dinner, when he was growing up, consisting of chicken, potatoes, bread, green beans, dessert and a glass of milk. "Today," he continued, "we buy a bucket of chicken and eat 8 pieces of chicken and maybe a couple glasses of milk."

INCONVENIENT

"Eating a balanced diet, to some degree, isn't convenient," he said, adding the younger population could take a lesson in good eating habits from many older persons.

"People have got to forget about this convenience stuff and take time to peel some fruit and take time to prepare some vegetables."

"Also, certainly part of our problem today is our sedentary lifestyle," Jensen continued. He noted that many kids and adults alike avoid exercise, even a short walk, if at all possible.

"The end result is we don't do very much physical labor anymore."

Although exercise and diet are extremely important, Johnson pointed out that many other factors, including smoking, excessive alcohol consumption, stress and diabetes, also affect cholesterol levels.

"The more these things are out of control, the more cholesterol (the body) seems to make," she said. "That's what makes it so complicated. People have all these different concepts and perceptions about who should and shouldn't have high cholesterol."

"It's very much like high blood pressure, which we call the silent killer." Johnson explained that the body normally manufactures and needs a certain amount of cholesterol.

PROBLEMS

It's abnormally high levels that cause problems, she said, adding a level of 200 or higher warrants diet therapy, while persons with counts in the 300s are "walking time bombs" and should see a doctor. In extreme cases, a physician may prescribe medication in conjunction with a strict diet.

"We have the resources" to help residents, Jensen remarked. "But the community is going to have to turn around. We'd like to start doing something right here in Cass City, Michigan."

Both Steve and Al Wright have already made their decision to turn around.

Steve, whose wife urged him to be tested before starting to run with her, remarked he's even more determined to remain on a diet he began on the day he went for the cholesterol screening.

"What I'm on now is quite drastic," he said. "It's principally vegetables and fruits. What it is is eating the right combination of foods instead of the wrong combination of foods."

NOT EASY

It hasn't been easy, according to Steve, who observed that changing eating habits is hard because Americans, particularly young Americans, have gotten used to a poor diet.

No accord seen in Tuscola Co. inter-office feud

A copy machine quarrel and the battle for control that led up to the recent dispute between Tuscola County commissioners and circuit court.

The prospects for a quick solution to the disagreement, over equipment in the Friend of the Court office, don't appear good, one commissioner said Monday.

The dispute stems from the county board's approval for purchase of 4 copy machines, including one for the Friend of the Court office, from Galaxy Office Machines in Caro April 11. According to commissioners, Friend of the Court Nancy Moriarty had asked to be included in the purchase.

A feud erupted earlier this month, however, when Moriarty refused to accept delivery of the machine, and later purchased a machine from Stockton Office Systems, Grand Blanc, commissioner Terry Houthoofd (R-Akron) said.

Two weeks ago, commissioners ordered that the Stockton machine be removed and replaced by the Galaxy machine. But attempts by county personnel to remove the Stockton machine the next day were met with physical resistance, Houthoofd said, adding Sheriff Tom Kern intervened and the machine was removed.

Judge Joslyn responded May 12 by cancelling regular motion day proceedings and filing a larceny complaint with the state police post in Caro. He also contacted the Regional State Court Administrator's Office in Mt. Pleasant, which issued an opinion to commissioners via letter stating that the judge by law has control over operations, including equipment purchases, in the FOC office.

Commissioners, however, have obtained an opinion from Attorney Thomas Abbey, Caro, stating that the board has authority over county property in this circumstance.

LOCKS CHANGED

Joslyn also ordered all locks on doors into circuit court and the FOC office changed and restricted access to court personnel. Neither Joslyn nor Moriarty could be reached for comment on the matter.

"I'm afraid it's far from over," Houthoofd, a member of the Buildings and Grounds Committee, remarked Monday. He said the board's purchase of a copy machine for the FOC office was based on an understanding that the office needed a machine, that the purchase would be cheaper by buying several machines at one time, and "we wanted to keep it local."

"We were not told that she (Moriarty) had a particular machine in mind," he continued. Houthoofd said he proposed a solution during a meeting last Wednesday with Moriarty and attorneys representing the county and the FOC office, but "it doesn't look like they're going to accept it."

NOT SERIOUS

Houthoofd said Moriarty and Joslyn don't appear serious about solving the dispute.

"When we were negotiating, they were bringing in another machine. I don't look for it to be resolved, not when that's going on," he said.

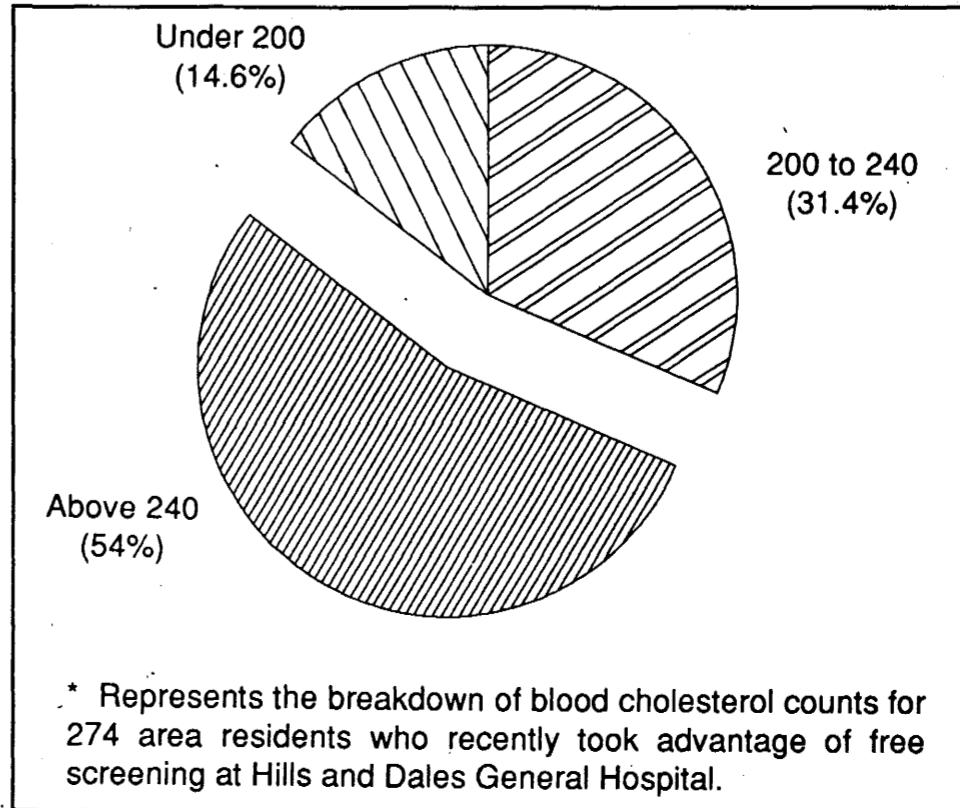

Houthoofd declined to be specific about the proposal, but said it would "allow both sides to settle our differences and would be acceptable to the general public."

Currently, he continued, the plan is to look at the county's legal options.

Houthoofd acknowledged that the dispute, the first outward sign of bad blood between the board and Joslyn in months, goes far beyond a piece of equipment.

"It's not just a squabble between the board... and the judge," he said. "There's got to be a center of command, (and) it's our attitude and feeling that we control

Pink slipped

By Jim Fitzgerald

Suddenly I felt threatened. I didn't know the exact nature of the danger, but I realized I was surely at risk. I was surprised at this abrupt awakening of an old fear that had obviously remained dormant deep in my subconscious mind for dozens of years.

The sharp warning came from Emily, "Grandpa, you are going to get a pink slip if you don't watch out," she said, swerving her eyeballs to direct my attention to several uniformed authority figures standing vigil nearby.

We were on the sidewalk outside Irwin Elementary School in Lapeer. Three-year-old Tricia and I had walked over to meet Emily as she completed that day's studies in the first grade. Tricia is one of those children you can take anywhere if you are out of your mind. Her favorite thing to do is escape.

In this instance, Tricia broke from my grasp and sped across a wide lawn toward the playground behind the school. I was about to chase after her when Emily invoked the dreaded pink slip.

TRIP TO THE PRINCIPAL

Later questioning confirmed my initial fear. A pink slip would command my presence in the principal's office. One of the vigilant authority figures — a safety patrol boy or girl — would escort me there to be disciplined for walking on the grass.

When I was in first grade, the principal was a nun whose name I can't quite recall. Mother Ontario, I think — one of the Great Lakes. To be summoned into the presence of that mother was to risk being whipped with the rubber hose concealed in the voluminous folds of her habit. No one I knew had actually seen the hose, but it was surely there because why would she wear such an awkward garment if she didn't have something terrible to hide?

For many years I've been a social acquaintance of Irma Gelhausen, principal of Irwin School, but have never been officially brought before her. These are enlightened times, and I'm sure she'd never whip a small child, let alone an old poop. Nevertheless, the tone of Emily's voice forewarned that, even all these years later, a trip to the principal's office is still no day at the beach.

Besides, only a few days earlier, Emily had received a pink slip for talking in the cafeteria ("My friend and I just let it carried away," she later explained to her mother). Because it was a first pink offense, principal Gelhausen let Emily off with no permanent chastisement entered on her record. But, if I appeared before the principal so soon after my granddaughter, Gelhausen would surely spot a pattern of inherited misbehavior and be loathe to grant amnesty to the old poop who started it all.

(Gelhausen might discover from 30-year-old school records that I saved on family dental costs by sending Emily's aunt to Irwin with instructions to have her loose teeth pulled by a multi-talented janitor. And Emily's mother was often late for classes because she was embarrassed by my unusual panel truck — the passenger seat was an orange crate — and she made me leave her off a block from school.)

THE RIGHT THING

Fortunately, Emily's pink-slip warning came just in time, and I used the sidewalk route to chase Tricia to the playground. This allowed her enough time to fall off 2 swings and grievously dirty one dress, but I didn't have to go to the principal's office.

There is another thing I want to tell you about this latest baby-sitting stint. In the home of Tricia and Emily there is an architectural quirk that allows a person sitting at the far west end of the family room couch to see through a series of rooms and hallways and half-open doors into a bathroom corner where the toilet is located. This allowed me to see Tricia sitting on the john and shaking her head vigorously.

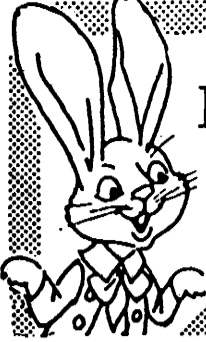

"Why are you shaking your head?" I hollered.

"Because I'm shaking my buns," she hollered back.

I had to tell you this because, a couple of weeks ago, a 2-year-old Detroit girl was raped and thrown in a trash bin. And I felt a great need to write something foolish that would keep me from screaming and remind me of how lucky I am.

A QUILT MADE by Faye Stoll, Kingston, is one of 30 on display by the Thumb Thimbles Quilt Guild this week at Rawson Memorial Library. The last of 3 quilting demonstrations will be held today (Wednesday) from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Rabbit Tracks

By John Haire
(And anyone else can get to help.)

Maybe Keri Santos is the one. The odds are against it, but hope springs eternal. In 38 years of watching athletes in the Upper Thumb, never has one I know of been good enough to play regularly on a major college team.

There have been many talented enough to play a notch below the Big Ten, a significant achievement in itself. Cass City's Lloyd Schinnerer is the best of the bunch when it comes to making the grade in big time college athletics. He was on the University of Michigan basketball squad.

But he received very limited playing time during his career. I had high hopes that he might break the mold when I watched him play in high school at Bad Axe.

So when an athlete pops up with unusual ability the speculations always begin. Will he or she be good enough? When someone like Santos breaks the conference record in the 300-meter run as a freshman, it gets your attention. In a hurry.

There's plenty of natural ability there. That's obvious. But to make it on the college level requires more. Desire is paramount. There have been a couple of athletes that I can recall that I figured might have a chance, but they decided that college was not for them.

In the past few weeks the Chronicle has had 2 instructors from Ferris State University expanding our knowledge about printing and the use of electronic equipment.

Ferris has the only 4-year course in printing in Michigan, but its instructors aren't book learned theorists. Both of the men that visited came to Ferris with long experience in the field. They offered us not only the theory of the work, but added practical tips that could only have been learned through the school of shirt-sleeved, on-the-job training.

We learned of the service offered by the college when we inquired about the availability of a clinic for training of persons already working. Live and learn. If we had known about the in-shop help it would have been used long before now.

No matter what the calendar says, summer starts next week with the arrival of Memorial Day Monday. Because of the holiday, the Chronicle will publish a day later than usual, with papers on the newsstands Wednesday and arriving by mail on Thursday. Deadlines, except for late breaking stories, remain unchanged.

For youth corps work

Honor Thumb consortium

Governor Blanchard has announced the awarding of a Michigan Youth Corps Blue

The Blue Ribbon Project award is recognition for an outstanding innovative endeavor which links Michigan Youth Corps workers with work experience, education and literacy to better prepare them for today's highly competitive labor market.

A total of $36,500 was received by the Thumb Area Consortium/Community Growth Alliance to support a "Literacy Laboratory" in Huron, Lapeer, Sanilac and Tuscola Counties. The laboratory is designed to assist Michigan Youth Corps participants to become proficient in basic literacy skills.

Marvin Pichla, executive director of the Thumb Area Consortium/Growth Alliance, indicated that the Blue Ribbon Project demonstrates the Thumb Region's highly competitive market for jobs through literacy attainment.

The Literacy Laboratory concept, he said, provides flexibility in allowing Michigan Youth Corps workers to participate in literacy activities without a loss of time from their assigned worksite.

Additional information about the Literacy Laboratory can be obtained by calling the Thumb Area Consortium/Growth Alliance Central Office in Marlette at (517) 635-3561.

Health trends are like the stock market. Everyone has a theory and they change almost as often as Michigan's weather.

That's contrary to the popular conception of the medical community, which likes to be pictured as the ultimate in wary scientific skepticism before advancing programs designed to make us all healthier and longer lived.

A couple of long held theories handed down as fact recently went down the drain. The first was cholesterol. A reading over 300 was an invitation to a heart attack, prepare your last will and testament. Now a story appears that a high cholesterol is not the real culprit. In fact an elevated cholesterol can be helpful if it's the right type. It's probable that most doctors don't subscribe to this theory, at least not yet, and given a choice I will take my chances with a reading under 200.

It's common knowledge that there are 2 types of personalities, A and B. A's are hyper, gung-ho persons with the drive associated with captains of industry and other movers and shakers. B's are passive, take-it-easy persons who go with the flow and never seem unduly upset about anything.

The A's were said to be heart attacks waiting to happen and the B's ready to celebrate a long, long life. It's been that way for 25 years. But just the other day I read a review that said, no, this theory is all wrong. There's no real advantage in the personality after all.

The article went on to talk about stress and how it is a factor, but I've forgotten just what this latest theory proclaims.

As I said in the beginning, this reminds me of the experts' view of the stock market. They take the known facts and form a theory to support them. When the stock market reacts differently they come up with another set of reasons to explain the phenomenon.

No matter what the theory, it can only deal in tendencies. Regardless of what the averages are, there will be plenty of exceptions to the rule. Take smoking. Smoking is not healthy and there has been enough research to indicate that there won't be a reversal such as the one concerning personalities and health is going through. You smoke and you're a cancer or heart attack candidate.

Yet, all of us know of the rare individual that smoked all of life and died of old age when in the 90's or beyond.

There's never been a study that I know of that takes a significant group and looks for the persons who never left the home area and never wanted to. The people who were supremely content with what they were doing and their life styles.

It's my opinion that these people live longer than any others. That's an ultra scientific survey based on 6 persons that I know.

When you get right down to it, one constant in all these health tendencies is that your chances for a long life are a whale of a lot better if mom and dad lived long, robust, healthy lives.

And even better if your grandparents did, too.

Volunteer field surveyor

Haag discovers prehistoric burial site in farmer's field

by Matt Bach
Staff Writer

A Cass City volunteer archaeological field surveyor recently discovered the burial of a prehistoric man after the bones were plowed up by a Thumb farmer.

Approximately 3 weeks ago Maurice Haag was exploring a farmer's field when he found bones from a prehistoric person. After some research it was determined it was a special burial done only by a certain culture at a certain time and Haag concluded that the skeleton may be about 1,500 to 2,000 years old.

Also after having a few studies done on the jaw structure and the bones, he said the skeleton was a man whose age was approximately 45 to 50 years old.

Haag isn't Sherlock Holmes, but he does attempt to investigate and solve mysteries - the mysteries of history.

For the last 10 years Haag, one of 300 to 400 volunteer surveyors for the Michigan Archaeological Society, a state-wide nonprofit organization designed to disseminate archaeological information, has been exploring the Thumb, documenting and recording prehistoric sites and artifacts. It was during one of his explorations that he found this extremely rare burial site.

"Archaeologists don't dig up graves," he explained. "Two thousand years ago someone gets buried four feet or five feet under the ground. Eventually, with rain, wind erosion and the deep farming process, the ground is gradually being lowered. Now the farmer is plowing and he hits some bone and brings it up. This compels the archaeologist to do something he would not normally do."

To save the bones from eventual destruction, Haag said he conducted a salvage excavation. The excavation took him 4 hours. From it he discovered two interesting elements about the burial.

"Prehistorically there are three main types of burials," Haag explained. "There is the prone burial or full length burial."

Next, is the fetal burial in which the body is placed into the ground in a ball-like fetal position, he added. "Third is the bundle burial or reburial."

He pointed out in this third type of burial the person would have died in the winter when the ground was frozen or during some other condition that forced the people to leave the body and come back at a later time to bury it. When the people returned to bury the body, much of it had decomposed, Haag commented. They then wrapped the bones in a bundle and placed them in the ground.

This is the type of burial Haag said he has found. In addition, he found something more interesting about the bundle burial. "What made this even more significant is it was a Red Ocher bundle burial. Red Ocher is a red pigment that had a religious significance. Only in a certain time period and a certain culture utilized this method."

From this discovery Haag figured the approximate age of the skeleton.

The second discovery about the burial was equally interesting. "A bear's jaw was found with the burial," he reported. "The left and right sides of the bear jaw had been cut and polished and, according to initial thoughts by professional archaeologists, it could have possibly belonged to a 'Shamon' or medicine man."

Haag added the bear was quite revered by tribes during that time period.

PROCEDURES

According to Haag, he went through the standard procedures necessary in an archaeological finding of this type.

First, he informed the Michigan History Department, the state archaeological director and the state police. He showed the state police, by dentist reports done on the teeth found, that the skeleton was prehistoric and not a modern skeleton. "Then I contacted the officials of the local Native American organization."

He pointed out that he still has to do the third step, which is having a university pathologist examine the remains scientifically. After this step "the skeleton material will then be returned to me and I will give the skeleton to the Native Americans for reburial in a safe burial site."

"This way the scientific community gets information and the Indian community provides a safe burial for it," Haag added. "In the Indian community time is irrelevant. They look at any ancestor as sacred and earning respect. We honor that wish."

Haag said the volunteer archaeologists "are actually investigators trying to investigate the past. From cumulating cultural materials from a site it is possible to determine the living pattern."

Haag does the majority of the volunteer field surveying for the Thumb area. He added he is the newly elected president of Saginaw Valley chapter of the Michigan Archaeological Society, which was formed in the early 1900s.

Field surveyors "read the soil, the geographical area and then combine it with the cultural material that is found," Haag explained. "We can determine the proximate age of habitation, whether it was primarily a nut or seed harvesting tribe. We can also usually determine by the remains and tools whether it was a seasonal occupation or whether it was year round."

Although Haag does have a large number of artifacts in his possession, he acknowledged he is not an artifact collector. "There are a lot of artifact collectors, but there's a difference in arrow head collectors and archaeologists," he added. "Collectors are not interested in reporting or preserving sites."

The main difference in archaeologists and collectors is how they place the value of artifacts, he said.

Properly documented and reported prehistorical artifacts are invaluable to the scientific community, Haag pointed out. "But collectors place a value on it. Once an artifact is removed from a site and it is not recorded, the scientific value is gone. It's not for me to say if collecting is good or bad."

He added the location of all his prehistoric sites are confidential to preserve the existing artifacts on the locations. Also Haag "got permission to go on the site from the landowner and he would probably not appreciate collectors out there."

Eventually Haag concludes all his artifacts will go into a museum somewhere in the Thumb area.

HAAG'S INTEREST

His first interest in Michigan prehistoric archaeology came through his interest in archaeology of the Bible Lands, Haag remarked. "It was interesting to me to see how archaeology and the Bible go hand in hand."

He emphasized he didn't need archaeology to prove his beliefs in the Bible. However, he reported "tens of thousands of things have been found and they all prove everything that the Bible says."

It was not feasible for Haag to go to the Bible Lands so he said he took another route to archaeology. "The opportunity for me to contribute to the scientific community would have been difficult to do since I don't live there. So I've decided to do the next best thing, which is to do archaeological work in the area which I live."

Haag told of a few other reasons why he does field survey work.

"I get a lot of exercise," he commented, while laughing. "You meet a lot of nice people you wouldn't meet under normal circumstances."

After he developed his interest in archaeology he said he has learned a lot of things about the field through hands-on experience, reading and researching.

He said he works about 100 hours per summer surveying fields. In the past ten years he has surveyed approximately 1,000 fields in the Thumb. Haag also has a farm in Sebawaing but he still manages to spend as much time as he can surveying.

One reason for his drive to do the surveying is the destruction of the prehistoric sites. He added the excitement of his work also pushes him on.

"It's exciting to find things and that's what keeps you going. You get the excitement of finding something that hasn't been seen or touched in a thousand years."

MAURICE HAAG, Cass City resident, shows the bones of a leg from a prehistoric man. Haag found the burial in many pieces and he is slowly putting them together. This leg was in several parts before Haag assembled it.

Bucholtz urges farmers not to bank on normal growing season

Dairy farmers should be planting a forage crop that can be harvested this summer to guard against a serious forage shortfall next fall and winter, according to Herbert Bucholtz, MSU Cooperative Extension service dairy nutritionist.

The coming growing season is supposed to be near normal, "but don't bank on it," Bucholtz says.

"Last year, a lot of farmers did not have sufficient amounts of forage to carry them through the winter, and for some, that has caused a major disruption in their feeding program," he adds.

Bucholtz says many farmers are out of alfalfa and are dipping into silage reserves that should have lasted until October.

"Farmers have to get back on their standard feeding program, but they will not be able to do that until they can harvest sufficient reserves of alfalfa and corn silage. The best way to do that is to obtain some other type of forage that will allow them time to restock their quality forage supply."

He suggests that farmers plant a summer annual - Sudan grass, sorghum-Sudan or forage sorghum - this spring and not gamble on a good growing season.

"I recommend a sorghum-Sudan forage crop because it grows readily, is fairly drought and atrazine resistant, is inexpensive to plant and yields quite heavily," Bucholtz says. "This type of crop usually requires little fertilizer - sometimes none if fertilizer carryover is sufficient - and requires little in the way of weed control."

He says the only disadvantage is that it does not have a high nutrient value. At 3 to 4 feet tall, sorghum-Sudan will have a protein content of about 8 percent.

"But it is a decent feed when supplemented correctly, particularly for young cattle and dry cows. That strategy will save the good quality forages for the higher producing cow and, at the same time, give the farmer a little leeway in rebuilding forage supplies that will be needed next winter."

Bucholtz says that if field space is a problem, farmers should consider planting the supplemental forage crop in set-aside land.

"There is no indication at this time that the government will allow the harvest of set-aside even though it has been allowed during the past few years," he adds. "But planting it is worth the risk. Even if harvest on set-aside is not allowed, it is land that needs to have a cover crop. I'd look at this as an insurance policy that might turn out to be quite valuable if growing conditions in Michigan are not adequate for a good forage crop."

Bucholtz predicts that sorghum-Sudan seed supplies in Michigan should meet demand. He says that the crop can be planted anytime between May 1 and June 15. Ideally, the soil temperature should be in the low 60s.

Following contamination

Ag department announces testing

The Department of Agriculture has announced it is testing milk from 31 northwestern Michigan farms after contamination of a potential carcinogen were found in 23 instances, but Agriculture Director Paul Kindinger said chances of any contaminated milk reaching consumers were "extremely small."

The farms found to be contaminated are located in Missaukee, Osceola and Wexford counties.

Positive tests for alfatoxin were first reported in a routine milk screening test last week. The alfatoxin, which is found in cottonseed and cottonseed supplement used for animal feed, has been traced to seed imported from Cottonseed Incorporated of Corinth, Miss., and distributed by the Falmouth Co-op in Falmouth.

Statewide tests for cottonseed have turned up negative in 13 samples, Kindinger said. The department has issued an advisory to farmers that they abstain from feeding cottonseed or cottonseed meal to dairy cows until all tests are completed.

"The milk which tested positive did not reach the food chain," said Burton Cardwell, Department of Agriculture chief deputy director, "and all indications are that the state's milk supply is safe."

But Kindinger, while saying that "chances of (contaminated milk reaching consumers) are extremely small" because of the department's sampling procedures, there is "no way to guarantee" that some of the milk did not reach the marketplace.

The contamination levels in the feed is anywhere from 20 to 300 plus parts per billion, well above the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's tolerance level of 1/2 part per billion for alfatoxin.

Alfatoxin is a naturally occurring fungus that is carcinogenic in animals and poisonous to humans. Possible effects on humans over a period of time include poisoning and increased incidence of liver cancer.

Department officials said the levels found in the contaminated feed should not harm the animals.

Kindinger added that department officials are still trying to figure out why only one area of the state has been affected by alfatoxin. Mississippi officials have told the department the feed in question met testing requirements before it was shipped. "We don't have all the answers yet," he said.

Bostrom begins pastoral internship in Cass City

DAVID BOSTROM and his wife, Laura, recently moved from the Chicago area to Cass City, where he'll be serving as a pastoral intern at the Evangelical Free Church.

A young Chicago area resident and his wife recently began a pastoral internship at the Evangelical Free Church in Cass City.

David and Laura Bostrom arrived in the area about 3 weeks ago to begin the internship, the final requirement for David's master of divinity degree from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, Deerfield, Ill.

David, who earned a bachelor's degree in health care administration from the University of Illinois, said the internship will cover a variety of ministry responsibilities.

Aside from assisting the Rev. Eldred Kelley, pastor of the church, David plans to take part in starting a church-sponsored small group ministry in the community focusing on support and Bible study. He'll also develop a children's program for Wednesday nights and preach one Sunday a month.

David said the internship is supposed to last 6 months, but noted he and his wife hope to stay longer. "They recommend a year just for the added experience," he said.

Following the internship David expects to receive a master's degree and become licensed. The nomination requires pastoring to hold a license 3 years before they're ordained.

The couple, who are expecting their first child in September, hope to eventually begin their own ministry.

"We both have an interest in starting new churches," David remarked, "so, soon or later we'd like to be involved in starting a church."

CATHRYN JOHNSON, Cass City, was among the winners at a Special Olympics competition held May 16 in Caro. She won second place ribbons in the softball throw, 50-meter dash and long jump.

Farmers warned of sales scam

Sales pitches from outside of Michigan are trying to offer farmers good deals on herbicides.

The problem is that the products are worthless, according to Jim Kells, Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service agronomist.

These sales pitches have been made throughout the state before. Most of the calls this spring seem to be originating from New York and Florida, and the products are being described as good as Roundup but cheaper, Kells says.

Several named products have been sold in Michigan. These include Conkill, VegKill, Weedrol, Weed Killer and Complete.

Most recently, cases have involved 2 products: Vegetation Killer (L&M Products, Masapeque, N.Y.) and Sidekick (Royal Chemical, Fort Lauderdale, FL). These products are not registered for sale in Michigan, Kell says.

The best way to handle these telephone sales pitches, he adds, is to hang up.

If the product arrives at the farm anyway, farmers should refuse to accept delivery and not pay anything, Kells advises.

"These companies are very aggressive and have been known to send an unordered shipment COD or simply ship the product and demand payment. Legitimate herbicide sales are simply not conducted over the telephone from outside the state."

This type of telephone sales pitch for a herbicide or other farm supplies that sound too good to be true should be reported to the Michigan Department of Agriculture by calling (517) 373-1087.

Kells says that such organizations that misrepresent agricultural products are difficult to prosecute because they move from state to state periodically.

Local students headed for "Student Congress"

Cass City High School students are learning forensic skills and how the state government works by earning an opportunity to participate in a fictitious session in the Michigan Legislature.

Five Cass City students are among 200 Michigan students who have qualified to attend "Student Congress" next fall, and 3 others may also have qualified, according to Jane Reif, director of the high school's forensics program.

"Student Congress is a 3-day legislative experience that takes place in the state capitol," Reif remarked. While at the legislature, she explained, students will discuss policies and vote on them. Of course, none of the proceedings are real, but it's a good experience in learning communication skills, she added.

"All the way through it is designed to give students a variety of speaking opportunities."

Reif, who teaches 11th grade English and advanced speech, noted students became qualified by participating in the Regional Discussion Festival, May 17 at Carmen Ainsworth High School.

The students must receive a rating of superior, which is 63 or above out of 75 points total, at the regionals to be eligible for the legislature. Scores from 50 to 62 are rated as excellent.

Five Cass City students received ratings of superior and three earned ratings of excellent. They are respectively junior Brent Sturtevant, junior Chris Folk, sophomore Amiee Cooper, sophomore Dana Johnson and sophomore Jody Joles. Sturtevant had a score of 73, while the high score at the regionals was 74. Obtaining ratings of excellent were junior Wendy Hercliff, junior Judy Matthews and sophomore Jennifer McNaughton.

Reif pointed out that students who receive ratings of excellent also may go to Lansing. She said it depends on the number of students receiving ratings of excellent compared to the overall number of students allowed to attend.

During the regionals students from 8 schools participated in 3 rounds, each lasting 3 hours and 15 minutes, Reif remarked.

"In round one the students discussed the policy question, 'How can the federal government best reform prisons and jails in the United States,' by identifying which was the most important problem." The students were given the question several months in advance to research and prepare their answers.

"In round 2 the students discussed the potential solution to the policy question developed in round one, culminating in a brief written group position concerning the question." In the 3rd round students explained and justified the group solution to the policy question, she concluded.

The individual students are rated, by a judge in the forensics program, in each round for their communication skills; knowledge of the subject; analysis of the subject; reflective thinking process; group oriented behavior and position defense, the latter is only judged in round 3.

Reif commented that the program, sponsored by the Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association, isn't competitive, and she likes that a lot.

"You can get so tied up with winning or losing. I don't look at it that way; it's an individual experience and the opportunity to participate in forensic activities."

Hawks meet Uibly in pre-district tilt

The Cass City Red Hawks finished the regular season Thumb B Association baseball competition Thursday by splitting a doubleheader at Vassar, the Vulcans taking the opener, 4-2, and the Hawks nabbing the nightcap, 7-6.

All that is left now is the state tournament where the Hawks will meet Uibly Friday in Cass City in the district tournament. Cass City drew a bye in the pre-district.

Cass City ended the regular season with a 14-6 mark and an 8-5 record in the league. In the opener against the Vulcans, Jeff Krol pitched well enough to win most games, but James Farnum was even better as he allowed 5 scattered hits and didn't walk a batter.

The Vulcans touched Krol for 8 hits, 3 of them coming in the first inning, when Vassar scored a pair of tallies. Cass City was in the game all the way, closing the gap to a single run when Jason Robertson walked and came riding home on a hit by Krol.

Vassar put the game away in the top of the fifth with another 3-hit inning that netted a pair of runs and a 4-1 lead. Cass City got one of them back in the last inning when Robertson singled and came around to score on an error. Robert Grimshaw and Don Owens led the Vulcans with 2 hits each. No Hawk got more than one hit.

The nightcap was even closer than the opener. The Hawks came from behind in the last inning to win it, 7-6. Robertson, who pitched the last 2 innings in relief of Brent Sturtevant, got the win.

The rally started when Krol pinch hit and was hit by the pitcher. Brent Hall followed that with a single. Greg Graham then collected the key hit of the game, a single that scored the tying run.

An error on Jeff Constas' grounder to the shortstop let in the winning run. The Hawks ended the regular season in third place behind league champion Imlay City and second place Bad Axe.

The league record was 9-6 and the overall mark, 14-6.

Hawk girls meet Lakers in tourney

The Cass City Red Hawk softball team will close out the season Wednesday with a non-league game at Mayville, but most of the team's attention will be focused on the pre-district game slated Friday at 4 p.m. at Cass City, when the Hawks meet the Lakers.

The winner of that game will move on to the districts slated at Laker High Friday, June 2.

The Hawks tuned up for the tournament with a pair of wins at Vassar Thursday. In the opener it was a laugher all the way for Cass City in a game cut after 5 innings with the Hawks in front 20-0. Beth Powell pitched the win, allowing just 3 hits although she walked 8.

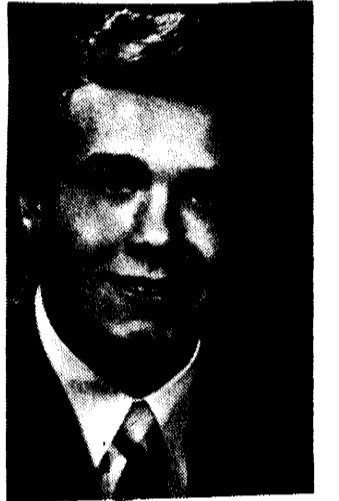

The Hawks had their hitting togs on, touching McCrumb and 2 relief pitchers for 20 hits. Every Hawk in the lineup got at least one hit and Darlene Monroe had a field day with 3 hits and a walk in 4 trips, including a pair of home runs and a triple. Other stickers with 3 hits were LeAnn LaRoche, Sue Papp, and Vicki Robinson.

The Vulcans went with McCrumb in the nightcap and she took her second loss of the afternoon, but was much more effective than in the opener. She allowed 8 hits, but suffered from poor defensive play by her mates, who were charged with 8 errors as the Hawks chalked up a 7-5 decision.

Vassar jumped off to an early lead as Terri Gibson was victimized by 3 errors in the third of an inning she pitched. Jan Erlen came on in relief and allowed one run in 3 2/3 innings. Beth Powell pitched the final 2 innings to get the victory when her mates rallied from 4 runs down to win it.

The 6-run rally was the result of 5 hits and 4 errors. Leading hitters were LaRoche and Robinson, with 2 hits each.

Your neighbor says 3 enter pleas, 3 sentenced

Television violence in circuit court Friday affects children

Flip through the channels on a television set these days and chances are good a scream or gunshot will be heard.

For example, the TV show "A-Team" has at least 5 people shot, blown up or stabbed per episode. On "Miami Vice", it seems police detectives Crockett and Tubbs wouldn't be satisfied if at least one bad guy didn't die during that program.

Such violence on television has raised heated arguments on both sides of the issue.

Some people say TV violence can be educational and if approached properly can be an example to the younger generation of what not to do. Others say it has a direct negative impact on children today.

Your neighbor, retired bus driver Edsel Connell, agrees with the latter argument.

"It definitely affects children and it's not for the better," Connell remarked, adding he watches enough TV to see how violent some shows are. "I've turned on 'Miami Vice' and that show seems extremely violent. I make a point of it not to watch it. I saw some study that said there's more shootings in one show of 'Miami Vice' than an ordinary policeman would see in his entire life."

He said he's especially concerned with violence on television because he has 3 grandchildren and one great-grandchild that may be affected.

Connell explained, "When you see so much killing it becomes a common thing. When kids see it they see that it's a common thing."

Connell retired in 1978 after working 37 years in Detroit as a Greyhound Bus driver. He and his wife, Fern, now live 9 miles southeast of Cass City. They have 2 children, Edsel "Bud" Jr., who lives in California, and Sally Ann Allen, who resides in Bay City.

Three persons were sentenced and 3 others entered pleas Friday in Tuscola County Circuit Court.

Jeffrey Bullard, 19, of Sebawaing, was sentenced for pleas of guilty to 2 counts of attempted breaking and entering an unoccupied dwelling with intent to commit larceny.

Bullard was sentenced to 4 years probation and ordered to pay a $100 fine, court costs of $300 and restitution of $316.19 for the first count, and 365 days in the county jail, 4 years probation, $845.46 in restitution and $200 in costs and fines for the second count.

Court records state the first count stems from the Aug. 12 break-in of a Unionville gas station, while the second count stems from the Aug. 17 break-in of Farver's Market in Wisner Township.

Raymond L. Philo, 21, of Millington, was sentenced to 365 days in the county jail, with credit for 143 days already served, for a plea of guilty to malicious destruction of property over $100.

Philo also was ordered to serve 5 years probation and pay court costs and fines totalling $800 plus restitution of $250 and attorney fees. The court also recommended participation in a substance abuse program.

Court records state Philo damaged a station wagon belonging to Lenore Philo Dec. 2, 1988, in Millington. Fairgrove resident Aaron J. Sauseda, 19, was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail, with credit for time served, for his plea of guilty to fourth degree Criminal Sexual Conduct.

He also was ordered to serve 2 years probation and pay $400 in costs and fines plus attorney fees.

Records state Sauseda used force or coercion to engage in sexual contact with another person Jan. 8 in Gilford Township.

PLEAS ENTERED

A plea of guilty to larceny by conversion, entered by Timothy W. Wilson, 28, of Grand Rapids, was taken under advisement by the court.

Sentencing was slated for June 30. Bond was continued at $10,000.

Wilson is charged with converting U.S. currency belonging to Dawn M. Diebold July 29 and Aug. 1, 1988, in Vassar Township, court records state.

4-H Dairy Days slated July 11-13

Young people interested in dairy cattle and the dairy industry may want to attend 4-H Dairy Days, July 11-13 at Michigan State University.

"This event is a great opportunity for young people to meet others with similar interests," Hal Hudson, Extension 4-H Youth agent for Sanilac County, remarked. "Dairy Days gives 4-H'ers in the dairy project a chance to show off what they've learned and compare their work against that of others from across the state."

A multitude of events offer young people the chance to have fun and learn more about dairy cattle through judging, fitting and showing, and dairy quiz bowl competitions.

Participants whose animals are outstanding milk producers, according to Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) records, will receive awards in the milk production contest. All Dairy Days exhibitors whose animals produced at least 33 percent above their breed average will receive certificates.

A dairy food demonstration, science exhibit and Speak-up-for-Milk contests allow participants to creatively communicate their ideas about the dairy industry, from the Guernsey to the grocery store.

Nicole J. Cadotte, 23, of Vassar, entered a plea of guilty to attempted malicious destruction of property over $100.

Her sentencing was set for June 30. The court also ordered a pre-sentence investigation and continued bond at $2,500.

Records state Cadotte damaged interior doors, a stove, refrigerator and carpeting belonging to Lawrence and Patricia Pittman of Mayville Dec. 27.

A motion to dismiss a charge of malicious destruction of a structure, located at 2940 O'Brien Rd., Mayville, also belonging to the Pittmans, was taken under advisement.

Also Friday, William V. Lixey, 34, of Davison, entered a plea of guilty to fourth degree Criminal Sexual Conduct.

Sentencing was set for June 30 by the court, which ordered a pre-sentence investigation.

Court records state Lixey engaged in sexual contact with a person at least 13 years of age but under 16 years Aug. 12 in Watertown Township.

HEALTH TIPS

High blood pressure requires adjustments

What you don't know about high blood pressure can hurt you.

About 57 million American adults have or are being treated for high blood pressure. Almost half of these people don't know about their life-threatening condition, according to the American Heart Association.

Since high blood pressure, or hypertension, is a major risk factor for other medical problems such as stroke and heart attack, the American Heart Association is concerned that many persons having high blood pressure don't understand the disease or its potentially serious effects, says Jeanine Sheppard, R.N., member of the state stroke committee, of the American Heart Association of Michigan.

Blood pressure is the push of blood against the walls of the arteries. According to the American Heart Association, high blood pressure exceeds 140mm Hg systolic pressure and 90mm Hg diastolic pressure, or 140/90. The systolic pressure is the maximum pressure in the arteries when the heart beats. The diastolic pressure is the minimum pressure in the arteries between heart beats.

High blood pressure indicates the heart is straining to pump blood through the arteries. High blood pressure is unhealthy because it can result in an enlarged heart, congestive heart failure, kidney disease, increased hardening of the arteries, and other medical problems. "These ailments can lead to stroke or a heart attack, perhaps causing disability or death," indicates Sheppard.

"Despite modern treatment methods, many high blood pressure victims either don't know about their condition or are aware of it and take it too lightly," says Sheppard.

The American Heart Association also stresses that because high blood pressure doesn't show symptoms, it can only be detected through an accurate blood pressure test using a sphygmomanometer. This device records the amount of force when the heart is at rest. Coin-operated blood pressure machines are not recommended because they are not all regularly inspected for reliability and accuracy. Therefore, the information given to the user may not be useful or correct.

High blood pressure can usually be controlled, but in 90 percent of the cases it cannot be cured. Most high blood pressure patients use control methods for the rest of their lives.

Even people with normal blood pressure should have their blood pressure checked yearly to detect any change in pressure.

The American Heart Association urges high blood pressure patients to control their condition and offers ten commandments to help.

1. Know your blood pressure. Have it checked regularly.
2. Know what your weight should be. Keep it at that level.
3. Don't use excessive salt in cooking or during meals. Avoid salty foods.
4. Eat a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet according to American Heart Association recommendations.
5. Don't smoke cigarettes. Smoking can increase your chances of having a stroke or a heart attack.
6. Restrict your drinking of alcoholic beverages.
7. Take your medicine exactly as prescribed. Don't run out of pills even for a single day.
8. Keep your appointments with the doctor.
9. Follow your doctor's advice about exercise.
10. Make certain your parents, brothers, sisters and children have their pressures checked regularly. High blood pressure can be hereditary.

"High blood pressure may require some adjustments, but it's nothing to be afraid of since it can be treated effectively," says Sheppard. "The best treatment plan is to follow your doctor's advice and keep him or her informed of any difficulties so that changes in treatment can be considered. The death rates from cardiovascular diseases and stroke have decreased significantly in recent years. This improvement may be a result of earlier and better treatment of high blood pressure."

For more information on high blood pressure, contact your local American Heart Association of Michigan or (313) 557-9500.

Exemption from covered truck law sought

A House committee in Lansing is working on legislation to provide farmers expanded exemption from having to cover truckloads of farm commodities being transported on public roads.

According to Michigan Farm Bureau legislative counsel Ron Nelson, the covered load law is designed to prevent material from flying off a moving truck and damaging cars, but farm loads are a special case.

"The problem is that agriculture transports many products, often seasonal commodities that, even when they escape from the truck, there is going to be minimal or zero damage; for instance, onion skins or feathers," he said.

Nelson said that even if farmers get an exemption from covering loads, they will still be liable for damage caused by material that falls off their trucks.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

The stock market is doing pretty well - around 2400 on the Dow averages - if you believe figures don't lie. But if you look at that regular feature in The Financial Weekly, "The Constant Dollar Dow," you might want to re-think the whole matter.

The half-page has 3 lines. They start in 1920, and trace 3 movements:

1. The Dow Jones Industrial Average - DJIA - the one people always refer to as "the Dow."

2. The Consumer Price Index. Cost-of-living, if you please.

3. The Dow averages then adjusted for "Constant Dollars," - in other words, stock prices with inflation or cost-of-living extracted.

This extraction is painful for those who believe in the myth that stocks are an inflation hedge. For stocks at the 2400 level, in constant dollars are lower than they have been since 1920 except for 5 periods. These 5 chunks of time add up to only 20 years in the past 69. Only 3 of these periods were of any significant length. They were:

1. Three months in late summer, 1929, before the Crash.
2. 3 1/2 years 1958 to mid-1962.
3. 1963 to 1969.
4. 1970 to mid-1973.
5. Summer of 1987.

The averages themselves - without extracting cost-of-living, or the inflated dollar - have never been higher than they are now except for the summer of 1987, before the modern-day crash of Oct. 19 that year. They have risen from a low of 41 in July of 1930 to wherever they are now.

The Constant Dollar at the depths of the depression, July 1932, was 30. Now it is 190 (rounding slightly).

While the stock market dollar has gone up 6x, the Constant Dollar has gone up a little over 3x. Some inflation hedge!

Cost-of-living was pegged at 100 in 1982. That went from 12 in the depths of 1932 to 124 currently. If it cost you $5,000 a year to live in 1932, then it costs you about $52,000 for the same life style today.

Incidentally, that 1932 standard of living didn't change much until the war years. I remember at the end of the war, the president of First National Bank in Lapeer was getting $3600 a year, the same as the sup.'t of schools. I drew $50 a week as editor, and allocated $100 a month for household expenses.

There were printers at the newspaper who earned $35 a week during those years, bought houses and put their kids through college. Cost of a year at University of Michigan was $700. Michigan Staters got by for $600, because upperclassmen didn't wear derby hats and gray gloves and carry canes.

Let us move from dreary financial subjects to the area of fine food. Here is a recipe appearing in print for the first time.

I came by it in a restaurant long, long ago called The Old Gin Mill, on the little island of St. Eustatius (locally called Statia) in the Dutch West Indies. The concoction was so good that I asked the manager if I could have the recipe. He said no.

The next day I sneaked into the kitchen and tried to worm it out of the chef. No luck. When I got back to Florida I wrote about it in a column in the Boca Raton News, and recited my failure to get the makin's of this dish. I sent the column to the manager and he relented and sent me the formula, but asked me to keep it private for say, a generation, until he was no longer in business.

Well, the time's up, and here it is.

GRAPEFRUIT SOUP

(Don't laugh - it's delicious. Read on.)

For 3 or 4 people.
Dice 1/4 of a large onion and saute in vegetable oil with one chicken bouillon cube until cube has melted and all is transparent.

Add 3 1/2 cups of tomato juice and 2 1/2 cups of orange juice (the sweetened kind) and heat.

Put segments of fresh grapefruit in bowls, and pour the hot soup over it.

If you don't agree that it is truly great, there is something wrong with you and you ought to see a doctor.

Bill Myers is a retired editor and investment counselor.

STAN BEACH became a Paul Harris Fellow Tuesday, May 16, at a Rotary meeting held at Rolling Hills Golf Course. The award is earned when $1,000 is pledged in his name to a Rotary program. Presenting the award to Beach, left, was Ken Jensen. Another highlight of the meeting was a talk by an FBI agent from Saginaw, arranged by Dr. H. T. Donahue.

Area cholesterol screening results disturb officials

"We eat whatever we want. We're under a lot of pressure and we eat a lot of greasy foods. If they (kids) can't throw it in the microwave and cook it in 10 seconds, they don't want it."

"It's been kind of hard on me; I'm kind of a hamburger man," the father of 2 continued, (but) I'm going to try to stay with it."

So is Al, whose cholesterol count warranted a trip to his physician.

"I went to the doctor the next day," he said. Diet, exercise and medication were prescribed, he added.

"I'm supposed to go back and get tested again in 30 days."

Al noted his wife, who works in the billing department at the hospital, urged him to be tested initially.

"I wasn't really crazy about it, but she pushed me," he said. "I'm glad I did now."

Unlike his brother, Al reported he hasn't had much trouble getting used to his diet. "It's just changing your habits," he said.

Easy or not, Steve pointed out, the decision to change is important. He added, "You have to do it if you want to live."

Editors note: For additional information about cholesterol related programs and other resources available at Hills and Dales General Hospital, contact Johnson at 872-2121.

German orchestra choir slates visit to Cass City day, and then go on to Lansing to present their final concert.

The choir and orchestra is one of 11 European musical groups that will visit Michigan this year as part of Blue Lake's International Exchange Program, which began in 1970.

Since then, nearly 5,000 high school musicians wearing Blue Lake uniforms have visited 500 communities in England, France, Italy, Germany, Austria, Luxembourg, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Liechtenstein.

In return, nearly 7,000 members of 175 European and Japanese bands, orchestras, choirs and dance groups have come to Michigan to perform.

Blue Lake is best known for the fine arts camp operates each summer at sites about 6 miles east of Whitehall. More than 4,000 young musicians—mostly from Michigan and other mid-western states—are expected to attend the camp this summer.

the buildings. If we can't control certain things - the buildings and the property - I've got to wonder what we're doing here."

"It's still the people's property. Are the people going to keep control of the property or not? I think that's the question."

There's also a question of cooperation, Commissioner Robert Russell (D-Vassar), who chairs the Buildings and Grounds Committee, remarked.

"We feel like we haven't been getting any cooperation. We feel like we're bending over backwards, and it's like we're slapped in the face," he said. "He (Joslyn) wants to discuss the matter of another judge," Russell continued. "It's going to cause problems with the whole board if he's not going to work in the spirit of cooperation."

It's very discouraging, Russell added. "It's unfortunate that it went that far. It looks bad in the public eye."

If you need only a few drops of lemon juice, prick one end with a fork and squeeze the desired amount. Return the lemon to refrigerator and it will be almost as good as new.
