Family escapes through window as fire guts home

An area couple and their 5 children climbed out a bedroom window early Thursday morning to escape smoke and flames that claimed their double-wide mobile home about 3 miles northeast of Cass City.

Floyd Morrish, 31, said he awoke shortly after his wife, Ethel, sat up in bed and began coughing.

"She was really, really hacking bad," he remarked. "The room was pretty well filled with smoke at that time."

"Our first concern was the kids, to make sure they were alright," the Rail Car Specialties employee continued, adding he and his wife quickly got up and began rounding up their 5 children, whose ages range from 20 months to 10 years.

"We tried to go down the hallway, but there was a lot of smoke. (It) was so bad you couldn't see," Morrish recalled. He said he then climbed out his bedroom window, through which his wife handed him the children.

A smoke alarm in the home, located near the corner of Ritter and Grassmere roads, wasn't working, Morrish said.

Elkland Township firemen were called to the scene at about 1:35 a.m.

Chief Dick Root, who called the home a "total loss," estimated damage at $45,000.

"It started in the kitchen area from all indications, and it blocked all exits," he remarked, adding the blaze was difficult to extinguish because the structure's walls were heavily insulated.

The specific cause of the fire remains undetermined, although it's believed faulty electrical wiring may have started the blaze.

Elkland fire fighters, who didn't clear the scene until after 6 a.m., were assisted by the Elmwood-Gagetown Fire Department, which contributed men and a tanker, Root said.

The home and contents were insured, according to Morrish, who along with his family is residing with his father in the Cass City area.

He noted friends and family have donated clothing, furniture and other items to help the family start over.

Okay 2nd school vote for millage

Supt. Ken Micklash outlined options available to the Cass City school board to make up the $200,000 projected 1989-90 school operating deficit at the regular meeting of the board Monday night at the high school. After listening to the options available because voters turned down by 26 votes a request for 2 additional mills, the board voted to submit the proposition to the voters again.

A special millage election will be held Tuesday, Aug. 8, the board decided. In the discussion, Trustee Ben Hobart said that he felt that the request should be resubmitted at the first available opportunity. He took that position after hearing the alternatives outlined by Micklash.

Micklash said that the school could operate for a year with program cuts that would reduce the potential deficit to about $100,000. The deficit would eat up about half of the available fund balance by the end of the school year. He said that running a full program and using all the available fund balance was not something that he felt was viable.

Micklash explained that $100,000 could be saved by cutting the amount spent for library supplies and cuts in the health program, athletic program and advertising. He also said that some savings could be achieved by cutting back on bus routes where busses now travel a quarter of a mile or more and then backtrack. That's not required by law and the children could walk that distance, he pointed out.

Significant savings could come from the elimination of 2 teaching positions, which would mean class sizes of around 35 or more in several classes.

LESS FOOTBALL

Because of the financial condition of the school, Athletic Director Don Schelke and Don Markel, football coach, have withdrawn their request for a junior high football team next fall, although they still support the concept.

That means that there will be one less football team at the school next year as the freshman team will be discontinued. It was originally planned to substitute the junior high team for the freshman.

In other activities concerning sports, the board voted to join the Michigan High School Athletic Association again next year. Membership is necessary to compete in various state tournaments.

Various medical personnel will be sent letters of appreciation for helping with student athletic physicals.

OTHER BUSINESS

A curriculum study on the effects of reducing teaching hours from 6 to 5 daily in the intermediate grades and high school was presented. It revealed that starting this program would require 6.4 additional teachers. The study was required in the contract settlement with the Tri-County Bargaining Association. The board heard the report without comment and without taking any action.

Martha Butcher, elementary teacher for 20 years in Cass City, was granted a leave of absence for the 1989-90 school year. Under the master contract she will have first option on any open post she is qualified for when she returns. However, she will not be able to bump any teacher to get her job back, including the teacher that is hired to replace her during her leave.

Gil Freeman, a custodian and bus driver at Deford for 24 years, has resigned. His replacement has not yet been selected.

The July meeting of the board is the one in which officers are elected and the reorganization must be accomplished by the second Monday of July. For that reason the board's July meeting will be the second Monday of the month instead of the third Monday, the normal meeting date.

A revised budget was presented and adopted. It was virtually the same as the final one adopted for 1988-89 and will probably be revised when more is known about how much state and local revenues will be. It was adopted to comply with state law, which requires a budget be adopted by July 1.

Scholarships

Application deadline for college grants is July 31

Applications for the first Collier Foundation scholarships are being accepted until July 31, the foundation's board of directors announced Friday.

The Foundation was established by the late Ethel C. Collier, a Snover native who devoted her life to teaching, to defray expenses of higher education for eligible college or graduate school students from Tuscola and Sanilac counties.

Applications for the renewable awards are available from high school guidance counselors in both counties, or by writing to the Collier Foundation, 35 S. Elk St., P.O. Box 311, Sandusky, MI 48871.

The number of scholarships to be given this year and the award amounts won't be determined until after the first set of applications have been reviewed, Deford resident Gerald Hicks, Collier's nephew and one of the foundation's 5 directors, remarked.

Also serving as directors are Sandusky attorneys John

Norcross ignores odds, battles back from crippling injury

by Tom Montgomery-
News Editor

Up until about a year ago, hard work and determination were simply a way of approaching life for George Norcross.

Those traits became especially important last June, however, when the Owendale area resident damaged a defective vertebra in his neck. The injury caused an already growing feeling of weakness in his limbs to turn into full blown paralysis from the neck down.

Despite the seriousness of the damage and the surgeries which followed, Norcross is now looking forward to returning to work this fall.

But recovery hasn't come easy.

"It's been a long road," the 47-year-old remarked recently while undergoing physical therapy at Hills and Dales General Hospital, where he's worked to improve his strength and endurance over the past several months.

"I'm not going to be able to run and jump and throw a baseball the way I used to, but I'm going to be able to keep up," he said.

Norcross' battle with paralysis climaxed last June, when he broke a defective vertebra in his neck while working on his son's car. He said said the pressure exerted on his spine while pounding on a brake caliper caused the injury.

"I thought I just had a stiff neck," he recalled, adding, "About 11 years before that, I noticed the body slowing down, and I kept neglecting it. I kept saying to myself, 'I'll go to the doctor later on'."

After hurting his neck, Norcross, a snag grinder at Huron Casting, Pigeon, for 10 years, could no longer ignore the symptoms.

NO STRENGTH

"At that time there was no strength in the legs or arms," he recalled, noting his limbs were numb.

Surgeons operated twice, and after 2 weeks of rehabilitation - geared towards re-teaching simple tasks such as how to shave, dress and eat - Norcross returned home, in a wheelchair and wearing a neck brace.

"When I got out of the hospital, I couldn't tie my shoes. I couldn't even reach high enough to comb my own hair," he remarked. "When I first got home, I felt like a real burden."

Norcross' wife of nearly 30 years, Leta, recalled those days.

"There was a lot of anxiety," she said, noting her husband could do little more than crawl during the first several days. She added, "I wasn't used to waiting on him, and he didn't like me waiting on him."

STRESS

Aside from emotional stress, Norcross faced a prognosis for recovery that was uncertain at best.

"The doctors said it might work out and it might not, don't count on it," he said.

Harmon Dillon, physical therapy director at Hills and Dales, agreed when he first saw Norcross in January.

"When I came in, I questioned his ability to go back to work. I couldn't say it was possible," Dillon, who began to work with Norcross about 6 months into his therapy at the hospital, remarked. "A lot of people, when they have that kind of damage, never come back."

"He had a significant amount of weakness still in both arms and legs. He needed support to walk," Dillon continued.

"It didn't seem like he would go back to the same kind of work, but this guy surprised me," he added.

Mayville man dies in crash

A 35-year-old Mayville man was killed early Sunday morning in a one-vehicle accident about 6 miles southwest of Caro on Chambers Road.

Troopers from the state police post in Caro reported John E. Clouse Jr., 2905 W. Snover Rd., drove off the west side of Chambers Road just north of M-46 at about 2 a.m.

Reports state the vehicle entered a ditch, struck a tree, with the passenger side front tire, turned sideways and then flipped over into a creek bed filled with about 3 feet of water.

Clouse, who wasn't wearing a seat belt, was still in the vehicle when the accident was discovered, troopers said.

OWENDALE AREA RESIDENT George Norcross, who a year ago could barely crawl after losing most of the strength and feeling in his limbs, practices a form of therapy that simulates the job he left at Huron Casting. He hopes to return to work this fall.

alone

by Melva E. Guinther

Prompted by the great spring weather and the bathroom scales, I took up walking about a month ago.

As for walking alone, it's not that I'm unsociable. I know plenty of walkers, but they're all morning people. You know, the disgustingly good-natured sort who bound out of bed smiling and whistling. If they didn't go walking, they'd be doing sit-ups or something equally ridiculous.

Trust me. We're not compatible. I have trouble getting downstairs for my cup of coffee in the morning. There's no way this kid could hike a mile before 10 a.m.

Unlike some converts to a cause, I'm not going to insist that everybody start walking, but if you decide to, here are a few tips.

>Wear comfortable, supportive shoes, even if they're ugly like mine. (Your knees, back and ankles will turn on you if you don't).

>Try to walk uphill or into the wind at the beginning of your walk. (The strength of the wind and the steepness of the hill increase in direct proportion to the distance walked).

>Start with a short walk and gradually build up endurance. Keep in mind that while you may be in fine fettle early in the walk, you have to double the distance to get back home. (It's humiliating to have to borrow a phone to call somebody to pick you up).

Seriously, walking is great exercise. Besides benefiting the heart and lungs and burning up excess calories, it's enjoyable because of the scenery. Before walking,

I missed the lovely flower gardens along Huron Street and the neatly landscaped lawns along Maple and Sherman, not to mention the Helwigs' splendid vegetable garden on Pine.

We celebrated our anniversary with dinner at Greenfields in Pigeon, and it was a delightful experience.

The food was delicious, the service excellent, and the prices reasonable. Possibly because it's so rare, the service especially impressed me.

There were enough employees to take good care of the patrons and they were obviously well trained.

The only disappointment was that they were temporarily out of their homemade bread, and my medium-well steak was a bit rare for my taste, but I would recommend Greenfields.

Even the "kitty bag", containing a couple pieces of meat that were more than we could eat, was wrapped in foil sculpted in the shape of a swan. An extra touch of class.

Rabbit Tracks

by John Haire
(And anyone else he can get to help.)

A great human interest picture bit the dust when a shot of the Dana Trueman and Tom Dorland children with a wild baby duck wasn't clear enough to print. The baby duck was an orphan wandering down Church Street in Cass City that Tom saved from an approaching cat, and the families had no idea where it came from.

After the children were through oohing and ahing, the baby was shipped to the Broecker farm, east of Cass City, where it joined a couple of other ducks cared for by Robert Broecker, and last week was reported as doing well.

Lots of Cass City area folks will remember Toshiyuki known here as Toshie) Arai, the Japanese exchange student who spent a year here and attended Cass City High School. He was in the news recently. His picture ran in the Detroit Free Press because he was the first native Japanese attorney to be admitted to the Michigan Bar.

A little restaurant tucked away against the west side of the Saginaw River, just a half block north of Lafayette Street, offers something that hasn't been available in the community.

It's a deli-type restaurant. Called Wanagan's, it features probably 25 different types of corned beef, beef, pepperoni and similar sandwiches on a variety of breads to suit your taste. Several different soup varieties are also on the menu.

I wasn't as enthusiastic about it as the people who recommended it to me, but it was satisfactory. The big plus, of course, is that it offers something that I was unable to find north of Detroit in the past.

Police looking for driver

Cass City police are continuing their investigation of a one-car crash Thursday in which the driver apparently fled the scene.

Reports state a vehicle owned by Michael Horne, 4118 Seeger St., Cass City,

The government could put Orbital in orbit. Orbital is the 2-cycle engine on which Walbro Corporation is working to fine tune carburetion for mass production. The success or failure of the engine is inextricably wound with politics. Here's why.

It would be easier to make water run uphill than get American motorists to voluntarily subscribe to the latest proposal out of Washington to solve our air pollution problems.

The president wants a half million cars and trucks to be powered by methanol by 1995 and to jump to a million 2 years later. That's a tiny amount when compared to the number of cars on the road, but one that the administration regards as significant to put methanol on the road (pun intended). Experts have figured that to run a car on methanol would cost motorists double what it costs to drive the same car on gasoline. It was suggested that an engine could be developed that would run on methanol or gasoline.

You don't have to be too long in the tooth to remember how the public reacted when lead-free gas was required and lead-free was more expensive than regular.

Drivers by the hundreds of thousands ripped off pollution control devices and rammed through the narrow opening in gas tanks so that the car could run on regular and save 5 to 10 percent per gallon.

What kind of a market is out there for a car with an engine that doubles the cost of fuel? It doesn't take a genius to figure that out.

One of the delays in getting the Orbital engine into mass production is its cost-benefit in the marine market.

It was figured that the Environmental Protection Agency would be cracking down on engines in the marine market and that boat manufacturers would be looking for an engine for the larger boats that solves the pollution problem and still is economical to run.

Orbital solved this problem, but it also costs more than the marine engines now in use. Since boats are run perhaps 100 hours a year, a little savings in fuel was not enough to compensate for the more expensive engine. But the EPA has focused its attention elsewhere and unless that changes, a marine application for the motor seems to be years away.

That's bad news, of course. But this week's action by President Bush is good news. For Orbital has the type engine that fits hand in glove with the administration's proposal. The engine was taken for fuel system development by Walbro because it is expected to solve the pollution problem. It's light, it's less expensive than conventional engines and, best of all, it is made to run on most any kind of fuel, including methanol and ethanol.

Last week General Motors signed an agreement with Orbital to test its engines, and Ford of Europe has had a program underway for some time.

Given the lead time that the auto companies need, it isn't likely that Orbital will create any production jobs in Cass City in the immediate future, but there is hope.

A tiny share of the huge market for auto engines would be a huge boost for Walbro, its shareholders and the community.

There was no one at the scene, according to police, who said Horne denied being the driver.

Also last week, a vehicle driven by Diane P. Battel, 6910 Ritter Rd., Cass City, backed into a parked vehicle, owned by Elaine Zalut of Kingston, in the Walbro Corp. parking lot north of Schell Street.

Minor damage was reported in the 7:48 a.m. mishap.

"If It Fitz..."

Not just my kids

By Jim Fitzgerald

The most remarkable TV coverage of Tiananmen Square showed a brave Chinese man briefly halting the progress of a column of tanks. Everybody was talking and/or writing about it for several days afterward. It was a highly dramatic scene, and there is no denying that it belonged at the top of the news.

But there was another televised moment that, even though it generated no further comment from the news media, will stick with me just as long as the picture of the young man standing in front of the tanks. It was a short interview with a young American woman who had fled Beijing when the bleeding began.

The interviewer suggested the woman must be feeling pretty good now that she was many miles away from the shooting. She conceded she was fortunate, but added: "I feel good for me, but what about those dead Chinese students who didn't escape?" And she was sobbing as the camera pulled away.

I'm a sucker for those people who never forget to care about what happens to other people, especially when those other people are strangers, perhaps citizens of a foreign country thousands of miles away.

firepower: "One time, 24 crews took off, but only 3 came back."

McCullough lamented that the Allied victory in World War II didn't have the result he was fighting for: "Isn't it a shame we've had 2 wars since? We always felt we were doing this so when we have children some day, they won't have to do this, and fortunately my children haven't."

"But I had it in mind for everybody, not just my kids."

Not just my kids.

Did you see the photo of half-naked, 2-year-old Sonia on the back page of Thursday's Free Press? She lives in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, in a hut made of sticks and plastic on the side of a hill. She was crying because her mother had left her alone to go into town to beg for money to keep Sonia fed and clothed. Her mother goes begging every day.

Sonia isn't my kid, or your kid.

cause, it is alleged, Williams sold us 708 missile engines made by another contractor, adding $36,000 to the price of each engine simply for acting as middleman.

There's nothing more lucrative than doing business with the Pentagon, or with any government agency that spends our money and never has to worry about going broke.

There's nothing more dismaying than wondering how many Sonias might be fed and clothed if $19 million were invested in, say, agriculture instead of in nuclear weapons that could wipe out the world.

I know 2 American journalists currently risking their lives covering the battle for democracy in Beijing. They are 2 very talented, brave and interesting people. I've enjoyed conversations with them, and I'm looking forward to seeing them again. Naturally, I worry about them.

But I should worry about more people than a couple of fellow journalists I happen to know personally. Like Bill McCullough and the young American woman who escaped Beijing, I should care — and cry — about what happens to strangers thousands of miles away, or just on the other side of town.

Onward and Upward. I should have everybody in mind, not just my kids.

CORPORATE IMPLICATIONS, TOO

On the front page of the same newspaper there was an article about Williams International Corp., a Commerce Township defense contractor that allegedly has charged taxpayers as much as $19 million more than necessary for cruise missile engines. The U.S. Navy wants to get out of a contract with Williams be-

Your neighbor says

Family relationships used to be closer

Over the years there have been many developments that have changed how people see and do things.

Technological breakthroughs, such as the automobile and television, have made things easier for people. Some people say that these things have changed the family structure.

Your neighbor, home-maker Evelyn McFarland, said family relations "were closer when I was a kid. I guess this is because of television. There are so many things to do and places to go. We stayed home in my family and I think our relationships were closer."

McFarland added that she was remarried 13 years ago to Rev. A.E. McFarland and together they have 14 children and 49 grand and great-grandchildren. McFarland pointed out that her family still has good relations today. "We still are close but I think it stems from when I was young."

Many of the advances in the society have allowed younger people to have more things, she remarked, adding, "I'm glad kids have what they have."

However, McFarland explained that she is concerned because the younger generation doesn't seem to appreciate what they have. "Things don't make you happy but giving and sharing does."

McFarland was raised in a big family, 11 brothers and sisters, and she said she is thankful for that. "I'm glad I was raised in a big family. I didn't have a lot of things but we had each other and we were close."

The large family allowed McFarland to have a full childhood. But, "kids grow up too quick nowadays. They miss the fun of being a kid. They hardly enjoy life like it is."

Aging services officials seek deserving seniors

The Michigan Office of Services to the Aging is looking for a few good older women and men deserving of statewide recognition for hard work and leadership in their communities.

Presented each year on Senior Citizens Day at the State Fair, the Senior Citizen of the Year Award recognizes an older adult man or woman for their commitment, dedication and work for the benefit of their community in either the service or leadership category. Persons worthy of this award must be nominated by an organization and the nomination must be endorsed by the organization's presiding officer.

This year's presentation will be held Aug. 28 at the State Fair in Detroit. Nominations must be submitted on official Senior Citizen of the Year applications, available from the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging. The deadline for submission of nominations is July 28, 1989. Applications may be requested via phone by calling (517) 373-8230, (517) 373-4096 (TDD).

Applications should be mailed by the July 28th deadline to the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, PO Box 30026, Lansing, MI 48909.

Upon nomination by a local organization and submission to the State Office on Aging, nominees are evaluated by a selection committee comprised of state level aging officials and State Fair officials. Winners will be notified in writing and are not required to attend the award ceremony, to win. This award is sponsored by the Commission and Office of Services to the Aging and the Michigan State Fair.

Mock disaster tests response

It's 2:30 p.m. Thursday. A storm packing high northwest winds hits the area, downing an electrical pole in the Walbro Corp. parking lot. A van carrying 2 50-gallon drums of polyurethane foam veers to avoid being struck. The van flips over and the driver, thrown clear, lies unconscious in the lot.

Chemicals from the drums ooze into the parking lot. Electrical sparks are flying—power is out at the hospital and inside Walbro.

Across from the plant, a passing motorist veers off the roadway and hits a fire hydrant, tearing it off its base and causing water to gush into the street.

Sparks from the electrical wires ignite the chemicals from one of the barrels, releasing toxic fumes into the air. Some passersby collapse.

If such a disaster occurred in Cass City, would local emergency services and village personnel be prepared to respond adequately?

Area police, fire, ambulance, hospital and other officials attempted to find out last week, when they participated in a mock disaster drill designed to better prepare emergency personnel to handle a toxic waste spill.

"Overall, we think it went very well," Jean Anthony, co-coordinator of the drill, remarked Friday. "I think everyone learned a little something."

Anthony, a registered nurse at Hills and Dales General Hospital, explained Thursday's 1 3/4-hour drill was one of 2 held each year in the village.

The drills consist of realistic situations that might occur during a specific type of emergency, she said, adding the exercises begin with the initial call for help, followed by response to and treatment at the scene and ending with evacuation and treatment at the hospital.

"The purpose is to see how fast we can respond; how we handle the situation," she remarked.

Aside from local agency representatives, the county emergency services director and a Dow Chemical representative attended last week's drill and offered help in critiquing local efforts afterwards.

Discussing what was done well and what could have been done better is a vital part of the exercise, according to Anthony, who noted the hospital sponsors the drills in compliance with requirements of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

Overall, she continued, the drills are important because they help various agencies to be more aware. "You hope it never happens, but if it does..."

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson and Fire Chief Dick Root agreed.

"It's worthwhile, it really is," Wilson remarked, adding mistakes made during the exercise are valuable for all personnel who participate.

Root, whose department is planning to start working with Dow Chemical on chemical emergency procedures, remarked, "It's a very important drill. It serves the purpose of us learning how to handle toxic materials (and) what we are to do in a case like this."

"There were a lot of mistakes, but we could have gotten by on those," he continued, adding that's the point of practicing.

"If we just walk into an accident (like this), one whiff could be the end of us," he said. "You can read about it, but it's better to go through the drill. 'It's too late to practice' during the real thing."

Root, whose department is planning to start working with Dow Chemical on chemical emergency procedures, remarked, "It's a very important drill. It serves the

Owen-Gage seniors air meet

The Owen-Gage Senior Citizens met Thursday in Gagetown for a potluck dinner, attended by 34 members and guest LeRoy Evans.

President Elma Miklovich conducted a brief business meeting, which included discussion of a motion to change the group's meeting date from Thursdays to Wednesdays. The measure failed.

Also during the meeting, Johanna Miklovich took 14 blood pressure readings.

Blanchard committed to adding 100 state police

Governor James J. Blanchard said he is committed to adding 100 State Police troopers to freeway patrols, fulfilling a pledge made in 1987 when a surcharge was imposed on speeding tickets to boost traffic enforcement.

Top aides said the additional patrol force should be in place by next spring.

While saying the department has been hampered by attrition through early retirement, Blanchard said he was surprised the additional troopers were not added — and in fact, trooper strength is now lower than at that time — and was surprised he was not told about it earlier this year before he read news accounts of the issue.

"What we need is 100 more real live patrols on freeways," the governor told reporters.

Management and Budget Director Shelby Solomon said transfers would be sought this year to free up sufficient funds to begin hiring more troopers, and said a schedule will be developed based on attrition due to early retirement and "ensure there will be 100 more troopers on the road than the (1987) benchmark."

State Police had 1,139 troopers assigned to patrol duties in 1987, and 130 vacancies were reflected in the current year when numbers were slightly below that, despite hiring 211 persons over the last 2 years.

STATE'S PRISON POPULATION

Michigan's prison population is expected to rise dramatically through the end of 1991, leading to a projected shortage of over 7,400 beds by then, according to updated automated prison population projections released by the Department of Corrections.

The problem will be eased somewhat in 1992 when 4 new prisons add 2,104 beds to the system.

The projections indicate end-of-year prison populations will rise from 29,806 this year to 36,560 by the end of 1991.

With prison expansion leveling off in early 1990 through 1991, the shortfall in prison beds is projected to fluctuate between 3,500 and 6,000 until the second quarter of 1991 and then grow to a shortage of 7,413 beds by the end of that year.

The number of prisoners is 5,345 more than the department's last projection of October, 1988, and the bed shortage is worsened because the 4 1992 prisons were expected to be ready in 1991.

Terry Murphy, chief of the research division for the department, said the projections are up from last year's forecast because there has been no slowdown in admissions as was previously expected.

The 69-bill crime package passed by the Legislature last year is expected to increase admissions, and the state's demographics do not suggest a decline in the prison population "over the next several years," he said.

The new forecast abandons an assumption that admissions will decline.

At the present rate, the state will take in 12,700 prisoners this year, up significantly from the 10,700 admission rate in 1988 when the last record was set.

"At this time, it is difficult to explain the continued increase in the prison population because of several potentially significant 'unknowns' that may influence commitments," Murphy said.

Those include effects of the "crack down" on drugs and jail overcrowding and the rise of "short-termers" with sentences of 12 months or less, he said.

The report showed 25.7 percent of the admissions during 1989 were of prisoners with minimum terms of 12 months or less, nearly double the 14.5 percent rate of 1987 when 1,025 prison inmates had such terms.

Corrections Deputy Director Leo Lalonde said the projection "shows we have to come up with creative ways to deal with prisons."

One of the things which will help, he said, is the governor's proposal to give counties money to build jails for state prisoners with minimum sentences of 12-24 months and to charge counties to put those offenders with sentences of under 12 months in state prisons.

Lalonde said the community corrections act with alternative programs for probationers, and increased use of such things as tether programs should also help.

GTE seeks big increase in all telephone rates

GTE Telephone Operations in Michigan filed Friday with the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) for a general rate increase which will produce $22.8 million in additional revenue plus a 3-year plan to shift $9 million from a long-distance carrier surcharge to local service charges. Although rates will vary, the increase for residential will be 14% and for many businesses, 16% in the first year. It will increase again in the following 2 years if approved.

The announcement was made by H. Max Preston, vice-president and general manager for GTE in Michigan.

The proposal would increase GTE's annual intrastate revenues by $22.8 million or approximately 9 percent. The additional $9 million will be a shift in revenue source from the temporary surcharges applied by the MPSC in 1984 to interexchange carriers (long-distance companies) to assure that local telephone companies could maintain revenue while making the transition from subsidized local service rates toward cost-based local service rates.

Although the transition in revenues from the long-distance company surcharge to local rates will not produce additional revenue for GTE, it will be reflected as an addition to local service rates, Preston said.

The company is proposing 2 types of local service pricing, reflecting the technological and competitive changes the industry continues to undergo, Preston said.

One pricing structure (Type One) applies to GTE customers served by exchanges with conventional switches or with multi-party customers remaining in exchanges with computerized switches. A second structure (Type 2) applies to GTE customers served by exchanges with all one-party service and Stored Program Control (computerized) switches. (More than 40 of the company's 178 exchanges will be classified as Type 2 by 1990). It does not include the Cass City exchange.

Residential one-party customers in Type One exchanges will see average monthly access rates increase from $9.09 to $12.36 the first year and subsequently to $13.34 in 3 years. Business one-party rates in those exchanges will go from $18.77 per month to $21.84 in the first year and to $22.82 by the third year.

Business key system rates will move from $28.77 to $32.45 and PBX rates from $34.05 to $32.45. Both will move to $33.43 in the third year.

Type 2 exchange residential customers, because of the technology involved, will have a choice of 3 local service packages: "Unlimited Calling," "Econo-Pak 0" and "Value Pak 60". Most business customers in these exchanges will pay a lower network access charge and then will pay 8 cents per outgoing call.

Major elements of GTE's proposal call for: * A change in the way business customers are billed from flat rate to metered service in exchanges with all one-party service and Stored Program Control (computerized) switches. Monthly network access charges for business one-party customers would change from the present range of $14.85 - $21.25 to a proposed $15.55 and customers would pay 8 cents for every completed outgoing call.

* A reduction in the number of rate groups from the present 9 to 3. (Rate groups identify the monthly network access rate charged to customers in an exchange and are based primarily on the number of customers there are in the local calling area).

* The introduction of 3 levels of local calling service including 2 economy packages for residential customers served by exchanges with all one-party service and Stored Program Control (computerized) switches. The economy services provide for a reduced network access charge (basic monthly rate) and a per-call charge of 4 cents. "Econo-Pak 0" features a network access charge of $9.15 per month and 4 cents per local call. "Value Pak 60" service has an $11.19 monthly charge, 60 "free" calls, then a 4 cents per local call charge. Unlimited local calling service for a flat rate will also be available in these exchanges. The monthly cost will be $12.66 for rate group one, $13.67 for rate group 2 and $14.74 for rate group 3 customers.

* The introduction of a Lifeline program for limited income customers, basically those at 130% of the poverty income level or below as determined by the Michigan Department of Social Services. Features include a $2.00 credit to the monthly network access charge, an associated $2.00 credit to the monthly Federal Subscriber Line Charge of $3.50 and a proposed reduction of 50% in the one-time service hook-up charge if Michigan's Link Up America plan is accepted by the Federal Communication Commission.

* The introduction of a 40-cent per call per month local directory assistance charge after 4 calls per month.

* The introduction of "incentive regulation," a process which will allow GTE some freedom from the current regulatory request process in establishing earnings levels but requires that customers share in the benefit of earnings above a MPSC-established percentage.

* The ability for GTE to be flexible in the rates it charges for intraLATA long distance calls to accommodate competition-driven rate changes without having to proceed through a lengthy rate application process each time.

Peace Corps volunteers

Clarkes find Africa study in contrasts

Lyle and Jean Clarke are retired teachers. Lyle was the agricultural teacher at Cass City High School. Both are Peace Corps volunteers who teach at Mochudi, Botswana, Africa.

Dear John,
Life in Botswana is mostly one of extremes. There are ultra modern buildings ten stories high complete with glass walls, air conditioning, and computer communications. A few miles away are "rondavels," small, round, thatched roofed homes with walls of dung, mud, and/or cement in various states of preservation. There are modern supermarkets with frozen food, plastic wrapped meat, and rows of prepared food, and tiny "general dealers," with a few basic essentials. You can see Mercedes and donkey carts on the same road, TV antennas and outhouses in the same yard, and have your dinner cooked in a modern restaurant, or outside in a big, black pot. Coke and beer are available everywhere, their modern, bright colored cans litter the streets and highways along with countless plastic containers and grocery bags. There is little or no provision for garbage.

These are the signs of a developing nation. The people are well aware of modern living. They desire a better way of life, but lack the education to achieve it. In addition to knowledge, they do not have the influence of generations of work ethics to spur them on. Time has always been abundant. Why do today what could just as well wait till tomorrow. The equalizing economic concept of communism is an ever present political possibility. Therefore democratic nations pour millions of dollars, yen, francs, and pounds into the economy to educate, improve the standard of living, and create jobs. But there are not enough jobs and productivity is extremely low. Leaping from the bush to the modern world is a bewildering, disillusioning process. They have no idea of the work involved in our modern way of life. They only see and desire the results.

You can see Mercedes and donkey carts on the same road, TV antennas and outhouses in the same yard. There is little or no provision for garbage.

Our village of 20,000 people is 20 miles from the capital city of Gaborone. It has few modern buildings, but does have water piped throughout the area. Most families carry the water in pails on their heads from the community water taps. Electricity is available to those who can afford to pay for it, but there is no sewage disposal system.

We live in a small, cement block house with electricity and running water. We have a refrigerator, gas cooking stove and indoor bathroom. We can purchase, in Gaborone, almost anything you can in Cass City, but it takes us 1 1/2 hours to get there by bus and everything must be carried by hand. We are not allowed to own a car. We could have a telephone, radio and TV set, but we have not been very successful at learning the language, so we have little use for them. Our home is owned by the Botswana government, our salary of about $200.00 each, monthly, is paid by the U.S. government and is adequate for this area. There are no street lights nor sidewalks in the village, the roads are winding, rough and rocky. Drivers are careless and drive very fast in vehicles that are not kept in good repair. Buses quit running at about 8 o'clock, consequently we have been out a total of 4 evenings in the 6 months we have been here.

Lyle teaches at one of four local secondary schools. Out of 50 weekly periods of 40 minutes each, he teaches eight periods and supervises 12 periods of gardening and 5 periods of study hall. I am assisting 2 other women and a cook in a day care center that has about 40 children enrolled. The children are mostly the sons and daughters of teachers and represent the more affluent, educated people in society. We spend a great deal of time reading, and Lyle has a 2000-piece puzzle he has been working on for 3 months. But as tourists, life can be real exciting at times.

During the first school break we flew to the northwest corner of Botswana to the town of Maun. There we rented a four-wheel drive vehicle (from Avis car rentals) and drove over a dirt track for about 4 hours to reach the Moremi Wildlife Reserve. The rainy season was supposed to be over, but it rained the night we arrived. There are no fences, gas stations, stores or people living in the reserve. There are 3 camping areas where water and toilets are available. As we approached the first camp we saw giraffes, zebras and various kinds of antelope. Because it was almost dark and we were uneasy about the wildlife, we decided to sleep in the truck that night rather than set up our tent. The next day we started our 50 or 60-mile drive around the perimeter of the reserve. We hadn't gone far before we saw a herd of elephants. One took exception to our being in his territory, raised his trunk, flapped his huge ears, and started toward us. We escaped! We saw many more animals before noon when we crossed a partly submerged, rickety log bridge which we were sure we didn't want to try to cross again. A short time later we rounded a curve and a huge elephant stood squarely in our path. He decided to come and investigate our vehicle. Lyle shifted into reverse and we backed up pausing only long enough to see if the elephant was still coming. He finally gave up. We crept ahead and eventually saw the whole herd off to the side of the road, but got by them with only trumpet calls to warn us away. The next bridge we came to was occupied by a full grown male lion. We exchanged silent, solemn looks (his eyes were bright orange) and Lyle took his picture while I rolled up my window. Then the lion casually walked away without a backwards glance.

As the afternoon progressed, we saw lots of other animals, but the track turned into mud and we often weren't sure which way to go. We finally reached the second camp, put up our tent, and then, that night it rained again. Now we were at the far end of the reserve and the road was really bad.

The next morning we started out and almost immediately turned left when we should have kept to the right. Eventually we realized there were no other truck tracks on the road and the mud was getting worse, so we turned around to go back, but the wheels sank into the mud and we were stuck.

Five hours later I had put all the tree branches under the wheels I could, as Lyle jacked up the truck inch by inch. We were wet, muddy and tired when we thought we heard another vehicle. I ran down the road and sure enough, 2 trucks were coming. Fortunately the drivers had been in the area before and got us headed in the right direction. They escorted us through rivers, across lakes, and around mud holes to the last camp. The next day we chose a well travelled, semi-dry road back to Maun.

Now we are back at school, quietly reading books and working on the puzzle, but the next school break is only a few weeks away and again we can adopt our tourist role to see the Africa most Americans fancifully believe is the norm.

Sincerely,
Lyle and Jean Clarke

LYLE CLARKE

The Michigan Farm Bureau is urging the state's grain and bean farmers to sign a petition authorizing a referendum on the new Agricultural Commodity Insurance Programs that will protect them from the bankruptcy or insolvency of grain dealers.

The program was signed into law last December by Gov. James J. Blanchard, but requires an up-front producer referendum before a check-off to fund the program is assessed.

"It's important for farmers to understand that the sooner we get the petitions signed to present to the Michigan Department of Agriculture, the sooner the referendum can be conducted and growers will be able to vote on whether they want the program," said Robert Craig, manager of Michigan Farm Bureau's Commodity Activities and Research Department.

Petitions must be signed by at least 2,000 grain and bean farmers before MDA initiates the referendum. Craig said farmers can sign the petition if they produce dry edible beans, soybeans, small grains, cereal grains, corn, grass seed or hay and legume seeds.

"There has been a similar program operating in Ohio for about 5 years and it has provided a great deal of protection for farmers there," Craig said. "It's really a very inexpensive protection when a handler declares bankruptcy or insolvency. Reimbursement is based on a valid claim with payment at 100 percent of the first $20,000 loss, and 80 percent of any amount exceeding $20,000."

Craig said the Michigan Farm Bureau is aiming for July 1 to have the petitions signed by the required 2,000 farmers.

Decision weeks away

Attorneys for Camp Kingston, township wrap up hearing

by Tom Montgomery
News Editor

Attorneys presented their closing arguments Thursday during the final session of a hearing that will resolve, at least temporarily, a drawn-out zoning battle over the use of Kingston Hills Camp.

But that decision, like the hearing itself, isn't expected to come soon.

The hearing began more than 3 months ago and is a part of a Tuscola County Circuit Court order issued last July. The order gave the township Zoning Board the authority to pursue a hearing in front of the township's Zoning Board of Appeals to present its case against the camp.

Zoning officials charge that use of the facility as a year-round "work and learn" camp, opened last fall by Pioneer Work and Learn Center under contract with the state Department of Social Services, constitutes an illegal non-conforming use.

They say the camp was grandfathered into the township's zoning ordinance as a seasonal recreation facility, but that use has been changed with the opening of Pioneer Work and Learn Center -- an intense, 6-month rehabilitation program for juvenile delinquents on a year-round basis.

Detroit attorney Samuel E. McCargo, who is representing the camp, indicated he's confident he has proven otherwise.

"The zoning question is a use question," he remarked, adding, "There's (been) absolutely no changes in the use of the property over the years."

McCargo said witnesses testified that the camp has been used by various groups -- the VFW, Boy Scouts and others -- year-round. The attorney, who noted he also presented records indicating the camp has been used throughout each year, argued that the use of the camp isn't changed simply because Pioneer Work and Learn Center is operating at the facility.

ANTAGONISM

McCargo admitted that, going into the hearing, he believed the proceedings were "more form than substance" because of what he called a position of antagonism in the township towards both the camp and Pioneer Work and Learn Center.

He added, however, that information provided during the hearing about the camp and the camp program may have altered some attitudes.

"I don't have any real feeling as to how the appeals board will go at this stage, (but) I think it's quite possible some minds were changed... on some aspects of the case," he said.

In contrast to McCargo's remarks, zoning board attorney Anthony J. Sykora, Sandusky, said he believes zoning officials have presented a solid case.

"I feel that we presented all of the proofs that pertain to the distinction of what was going on before and what was going on after" the opening of Pioneer Work and Learn Center, he commented.

Aside from physical changes made at the camp, Sykora said he focused on "the uniqueness of the (work and learn) program. Never before did they have 50 kids plus 50 counselors just living there year-round. Never were there people living there as their residence," he continued. "That's why I think the odds are strongly in our favor."

SUPREME COURT

Still, the attorney predicted, "This is going to the Supreme Court one way or another."

Sykora and McCargo indicated they don't expect a decision by the appeals board until after Aug. 30, when written summaries are due from both attorneys.

For Zoning Board Chairman Russell Mayer, the decision can't come too soon.

"It's just been dragged out and dragged out. It's just ridiculous," he remarked last week.

Mayer stated much of the camp's testimony centered on information about the camp program, which he said isn't relevant to the case. What is at question, he said, "is a loss of our right to govern ourselves. It's the state taking precedence over local ordinances, and that's what they're trying to do."

"That's the key to the whole thing," Mayer added. "It's not whether we like the camp."

McCargo agreed the work and learn program itself should have played a small part in the overall proceedings, but pointed out that the information needed to be presented because of widespread efforts to influence the community via negative rumors.

Regardless, Mayer indicated his mind hasn't been changed.

"I hope that they (appeals board) rule against the camp," he said. "They are in violation of the zoning ordinance and they have not convinced me that they are other than that."

Koylton residents face millage vote

An Aug. 8 millage referendum may decide whether Koylton Township will continue its fight against Pioneer Work and Learn Center over an alleged zoning violation.

That's when residents are scheduled to vote on whether to approve 2 additional mills for 3 years for operating expenses.

The millage would raise about $25,000 per year for the township, which currently levies 1.65 mills.

The township board called for the election during a regular meeting earlier this month, according to township Clerk Winford Groner, who said the money is needed to offset legal fees spent in the township's fight to close the controversial juvenile detention facility.

Groner indicated he isn't optimistic regarding the chances of passing the millage. He pointed out, however, that legal proceedings have already cost the township some $20,000. He said residents will have to dig a little deeper if they want the township to continue the battle.

"They want us to keep fighting it," he remarked. "If they don't want to give us the money, we'll quit."

HEALTH TIPS

Can vitamins ward off cancer?

Can the vitamins in our foods help protect us from cancer? Dr. Seymour L. Romney, Director of Gynecologic Research at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, is investigating that possibility in a research on cervical cancer, funded by the American Institute for Cancer Research.

Dr. Romney is investigating whether 3 common vitamins, beta-carotene, ascorbic acid, and folic acid, may help reverse cervical dysplasia, the abnormal cells which sometimes develop into cervical cancer in women.

All 3 vitamins are part of most diets, found in many common foods. Common sources of beta-carotene include deep orange fruits and vegetables, and many dark green leafy vegetables. Our bodies convert this nutrient to vitamin A. Ascorbic acid, more commonly known as vitamin C, is found in citrus fruits and vegetables such as tomatoes and green peppers. Folic acid is one of the B vitamins, found in many green leafy vegetables.

In previous research Dr. Romney and others found that women with cervical dysplasia have lower concentrations of these 3 vitamins in their blood. Other studies suggested that the abnormal cells of the cervix may also contain lower levels of beta-carotene and folic acid.

In a double blind, placebo controlled study, Dr. Romney and his colleagues are studying 200 women with moderate cervical dysplasia who will be taking supplements of these 3 vitamins in an attempt to reverse this condition. If successful, future studies would consider whether all 3 vitamins are necessary, or if only one vitamin, or 2 or more in combination, can produce the desired effect.

Dr. Romney cautions that it is too early in this research to make any recommendations regarding supplements of these vitamins for cancer protection. Most health agencies, including the American Institute for Cancer Research, recommend eating a variety of fruits and vegetables to ensure adequate supplies of these and other important nutrients.

For now Dr. Romney supports the current consensus of opinion which advises pelvic examinations, including Pap tests, for early detection of cervical cancer.

The Pap test is effective in detecting this form of cancer. Women who have reached the age of 18 and are sexually active should have an annual Pap test and pelvic examination. For women who have a stable sexual relationship, after 3 or more consecutive, normal, annual Pap tests, examinations may be scheduled less frequently.

It is estimated that there will be 13,000 new cases of cervical cancer this year in the United States, and an estimated 6,000 deaths. Early detection is still the best means for preventing and fighting this disease, but with additional research such as Dr. Romney's and his colleagues, there may some day be dietary recommendations to help prevent such cancers.

Health officer resigns

Citing personal reasons, Tuscola County Health Department Health Officer Ed Golson recently resigned after 3 1/2 years at the post.

The health board has appointed Michael Green as interim health officer. Nursing Director Gretchen Tenbusch, RN, meanwhile, has stepped in as administrator of the department.

Applications for first Collier scholarships set

S. and Leonard J. Paterson, Sandusky School Supt. James R. Nolan and Decker-ville School Supt. Ozzie D. Parks.

Hicks noted the dollar amounts will be selected with the idea of helping students obtain higher education rather than providing full payment. "Her intent was to help worthy students go to college who otherwise wouldn't be able to," he said, adding that at the same time, his aunt wanted the students to have to "dig a little bit" on their own.

Students will be selected to receive scholarships following a 30-point rating process.

Applications received by the foundation will first be screened through a 20-point rating system for academic achievement and financial need. The directors will then schedule interviews with the top scoring applicants, who will be rated in the area of character for up to 10 more points.

Recipients of the grants will be awarded ongoing scholarships throughout their college education, including graduate and post-graduate students, provided they comply with the foundation's requirements.

Once the expense for maintaining the continuing grants and administrative expenses are determined each year, projections will be made as to how many new grants can be made.

According to Hicks, the foundation board currently is studying long-term investment proposals designed to give the scholarship fund a long life.

As of April 15, he said, the scholarship fund includes $900,000 in one-year Certificate of Deposit investments. Another $647,000 in the fund is not invested at this time.

A Cass City High School junior is going below the equator for one year as a Rotary International exchange student to South Africa.

Kathleen Bolton, 16, is looking forward to leaving in August, for Trichardt, South Africa, because, "it's not a common place for people to go to."

"All the South Africans I've met are interesting, outgoing, they're wild," she remarked. "You can have fun with them in whatever you do."

Even though there is much controversy concerning South African apartheid, Bolton said it does not worry her. "It doesn't bother me." She pointed out some of her relatives are concerned and others are happy for her. "My immediate family is real excited. The rest of my family is worried. My grandmother was scared, but she likes to brag about it anyway."

Her mother, Sandra, pointed out that she didn't want her daughter to go at first. "It was nothing I was encouraging. I didn't want my girl to go away. But now I see it as a broadening of her horizons. I think she'll learn about herself being on her own."

Bolton agreed with her mother that she'll learn from the trip. However, South Africa was not the first country she selected. When Bolton was interviewing to be an exchange student she had to pick from a list of 39 countries in which she would like to live.

Her first pick was Australia. South Africa was her second choice and number 39 on the list was India. "I didn't know much about India."

After she was assigned to South Africa, Bolton did some investigation on the country and made a list of things she hopes to do there.

"I want to go to see the Kruger National Park; it's like a safari. They have wild animals there. I would also like to see Johannesburg. It's got a large shopping center," she remarked, laughing.

Bolton pointed out there is a tour along the coast of South Africa which she would like to take. Most of all, however, Bolton wants to "see how they live. I hear they have a high standard of living."

The high level of living is shown by the South African people's dress, which includes the school uniform Bolton will have to wear. "That's something different that they don't do around here much."

In addition to getting used to wearing a uniform, Bolton will have to adjust to being away from home. "It's my first real big time away from home." She added this trip will be just as if she were away at college, so it will prepare her for when she does go to college.

Whether or not Bolton does get homesick, her mother remarked she is planning to visit her daughter in June, 1990.

Another thing Bolton will have to adapt to is the Afrikaans language. She explained Afrikaans is a mixture of Dutch, German and French. The people in South Africa also speak English, so Bolton shouldn't have too many problems communicating.

While in South Africa she will submit monthly reports to her high school so she can receive credits while abroad. In addition, she prepared a slide presentation about Michigan to show during her stay in South Africa, and plans to prepare a slide presentation of South Africa to show her friends when she returns.

KATHLEEN BOLTON, 16, will be leaving for South Africa in August as a Rotary International foreign exchange student. Here Bolton is wearing her Rotary jacket filled with various buttons, which she'll trade with students in South Africa.

second of 2 walking canes, is now walking 3 miles a day and has begun to drive again.

Dillon, who's quick to point to the skilled hands of the surgeons who repaired Norcross' injury, as well as the support offered by his family, commented, "Therapy for George, right now, is a vocation - that's all he does."

"I've been surprised at the amount of progress he's made. We are hoping to get him back to work in September."

Norcross' therapy includes exercises that simulate what he does at work, according to Dillon, who noted it's hoped the next step will be more specialized therapy in Owosso or Saginaw, where Norcross can actually practice doing the same things he does at Huron Casting.

"They're anxious to get him back," he added. "He's a good worker."

For Norcross, the idea of getting on with his life is what's kept him going over the past year.

GIVING UP

"Several different times I've felt like giving up, but there's no sense in giving up everything you've worked for," he said.

"I couldn't stand the thought of being in a wheelchair," he added. "I can't see sitting around for the rest of my life; I've got 17 good years of work left."

"If it hadn't been for the people helping me, I wouldn't be where I am today," Norcross continued. "I don't really keep track of it (progress); I just keep working as hard as I can."

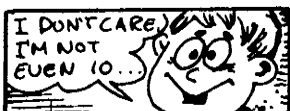

"His progress is a tribute to his hard work," Bauer remarked. "It basically comes down to George's hard work and determination."

No Sweat!

One of the ways our bodies eliminate excessive heat is through the process of sweating or perspiration. But sweating often produces an offensive odor, particularly under the arms. The odor is caused by bacterial breakdown of secretions of the apocrine sweat glands. To help fight under arm wetness and odor, the majority of adults in North America routinely use antiperspirants. Sales from antiperspirants in the United States approach one billion dollars each year.

Antiperspirants are thought to reduce odor by either inhibiting bacterial growth on the skin or reducing secretions from the sweat glands. Antiperspirant product ingredients judged to be safe and effective by the United States Food and Drug Administration include aluminum chloride, aluminum sulfate, the aluminum chlorohydrates, and the aluminum zirconium chlorohydrates.

All individuals do not respond the same way to identical antiperspirant preparations. Product formulation differences can also affect the effectiveness and acceptance of antiperspirants. Apply antiperspirants to under arm areas that are clean and dry. Do not put on clothing until the antiperspirant has had time to dry.

Commissioners table service bills for disputed Friend of Court copier

An ongoing dispute between Tuscola County commissioners and Friend of the Court Nancy Moriarty over control of equipment purchases remains on hold, but the issue continues to surface during bi-monthly board meetings.

Commissioners, following an 80-minute executive session, last week agreed to table 2 Stockton Finance Service bills totalling about $922, pending a recommendation from counsel. The bills are related to a copy machine purchased by the friend of the court from Stockton Office Systems, Grand Blanc.

The machine is at the center of the dispute, which began in April when commissioners took bids from Galaxy Office Machines, Caro, for 4 copy machines, including one for the FOC office.

Moriarty, however, refused to accept delivery, saying the Galaxy machine didn't meet specifications she had outlined earlier. She then purchased the Stockton machine, which commissioners ordered moved and replaced with the Galaxy machine. Another Stockton machine has since been installed in the FOC office.

Although commissioners agreed on holding the bills, they couldn't come to a consensus on the contents of a letter to the editor which, following a 5-2 vote, was published last Wednesday in the Tuscola County Advertiser.

The letter was written in response to a letter written by Moriarty on the dispute and published a week earlier.

Casting the "no" votes were commissioners Michael Green (R-Mayville) and Kim D. Glaspie (D-Cass City), who said he thought the letter could have been presented in a more professional manner. "I guess I wanted to set forth the facts as we perceived them" in an objective way, he added.

Glaspie said he doesn't believe the media is the place to settle the dispute, which, he noted, remains unchanged at this time.

"They've got the copier they want up there. It's still a continuing question about who controls (county) property and buildings, but that's been an ongoing question for a long time."

IN OTHER BUSINESS

In other business during the June 13 session, the board:

*Accepted low bids of $2,254 from Thumb Office Supply for office supplies and $3,313 from Reid Paper for paper supplies. A low bid of $8,142, from PTI Asphalt for resurfacing the Cooperative Extension parking lot, also was approved.

*Approved a request from the equalization director to establish an overtime account because of additional hours needed in the office due to computer program training.

*Approved spending up to $532 from the Delinquent Tax Administrative Fund for secretarial chairs and file cabinets.

*Authorized implementation of a policy whereby certified checks or bank drafts are required to pay for delinquent property beginning 2 weeks before the tax sale.

*Approved paying a small, one-time telephone company programming charge that will net the county an estimated $2,000 per year in phone cost savings at the courthouse.

*Went on record in favor of remaining in a class action lawsuit related to state financing of the court system.

*Approved a request for use of the courthouse lawn during the Pumpkin Festival.

Taking stock

By Bill Myers

Stein Roe mutual funds sent me a do-it-yourself psycho-analysis kit. It was designed to "find your investment personality."

Multiple choice questions examples:

1. Age
2. How much emergency savings have you set aside?
3. If you own your home, how much is it worth?
4. How much money invested for non-retirement uses?
5. What percentage of your income do you save?
6. How important is...
 - a. Current monthly income?
 - b. Capital appreciation?
7. How much time a week do you spend on investments?

In all the questions numerical ratings ran from 0 to 8. Higher numbers were for higher figures, such as age, income, investments, time spent on them, etc.

In most of them my numbers were at the top end. After scoring the thing I found myself classified as "Aggressive-one who holds, or should hold, growth funds."

I was far away from their bracket labelled "Conservative."

Whatever Harvard business school PhD wrote the test, they couldn't have missed the mark further than they did with this kid.

I don't own "growth" funds, and don't plan to. My investment philosophy would delight a Vermont bank trust officer. I buy only bonds, hoping to find underpriced ones, and buy mostly long ones. Yet Stein Roe says the test shows I should own:

Money market funds 20%
Bond funds 40%
Growth & Income funds 30%

Growth Funds 10%
Why should I have 20% in money market funds? If I need cash I call up ol' John Grant at T. McKinnon and ask him to loan me some at margin.

Bond funds? Why should I pay a load charge of say 5% plus management costs of 1% a year? I just buy some bonds and keep an eye on them. And not 40% of my assets (excluding the house) but 100%.

Growth and Income funds? Again, why pay a load charge and a management fee? And who knows when if ever this growth syndrome sets in. Only key to growth I know is steroids.

One of these "Tax Hotline" services lists a number of "Loopholes" which of course attract almost everybody. One is:

Buy a vacation home instead of renting one every summer. Then you can deduct mortgage interest and real estate taxes.

O.K. Let's try one on for size.
Cost of renting a $200,000 summer place for 10 weeks ...$10,000.

Cost of owning: Assume you can't find a renter for the winter season or some of the relatives pre-empt the place just before and just after the season. At 10% on your full-worth mortgage (to make figuring easier) - $20,000 interest cost. This is deductible, so you save 28% tax, and net cost is $14,400.

Property tax $5,000
Insurance 500
Off-season care 500
Painting, roof, furnace, appliances 1,000

Total these items $7,000
So you have laid out $14,400 in net interest cost, plus $7,000 in taxes, insurance and upkeep. Total $21,400.

Cost of renting for the summer - $10,000.
So it costs you $11,400 extra to be one of the landed gentry. Some honor! Some loophole!

Another of Hotline's "Loopholes":
Buy rental property—a 2-family or 4-family house and actively manage it.

You have to be active as a manager to keep it out of "passive" income.

Hotline says you can deduct up to $25,000 in losses against your salary and other income.

Big deal. So you lose $25,000 a year but it can offset regular income. The 28% tax on $25,000 is $7,000, so your net loss is $18,000, which has come out of your hide.

Once again, wearily we say unto you: You can't buy groceries with business losses.

You had a $25,000 offset against income, but you saved only $7,000 from it. You were out $18,000, and you also had a daily headache from the tenants. You have to be a landlord to find this out. Meanwhile, ask any landlord you know if he is enjoying life.

Hoffman named center director

Cass City native Randy Hoffman has been named director of the newly-formed Center for Corporate Health at Rockingham Memorial Hospital, Harrisonburg, Va.

The center will be a resource for area businesses to help meet a broad range of health care needs, Hoffman, son of Arlington and Ruth Hoffman of Cass City, remarked.

As director, his responsibilities will include coordinating services from all hospital departments to meet the needs of corporate clients.

Hoffman, who along with his wife, Jackie, reside in Weyers Cave, Va., joined Rockingham Memorial Hospital in 1983 as director of cardiopulmonary services. He received his associate's degree in respiratory therapy in Detroit in 1978, then worked 6 years in cardiopulmonary services. He worked the first year in Detroit before going to St.

Mary's Medical Center, Saginaw. During 5 years there he served first as a shift supervisor and then as an assistant department director.

In addition to his work responsibilities, Hoffman is working toward a bachelor of business administration degree with a concentration in finance at James Madison University.

Farm Bureau sets ag celebration day

The Sanilac County Farm Bureau will host a "Celebration of Agriculture" Friday at HWR Farms, owned by Harold, Wayne, and Randall Wood, in Marlette.

Sanilac farm leaders will be extending appreciation to the State of Michigan for its support of the agricultural industry; to Michigan State University for the land-grant system that brought scientific, educational and social information to the state's farms and rural communities; to their local Cooperative Extension Service for 75 years of commitment to agriculture, and to the county board of commissioners for supporting their CES.

State and national elected officials and MSU dignitaries are on the guest list.

Vacation Bible School scheduled

"Joy Trek: Journey With Jesus Through Time and Space" is the theme of a free, 5-day Vacation Bible School program slated for next week at the Cass City Missionary Church.

Bible discovery sessions, supervised craft projects, singing and other events will be included in the program, which will start Monday and run from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. each night through June 30.

The church van will be picking up kids ages 2 years through the sixth grade. Additional information is available by calling 872-2729 or 872-3963.

Activities will start with a 1 p.m. welcome and presentations, followed by a short farm tour. A pig roast and social activities will begin at 4 p.m.

Classes for expectant parents set

Expectant parent classes are slated to begin Aug. 3 at Hills and Dales General Hospital, Cass City.

A total of 6 classes will be offered. The sessions, taught by registered nurse, Faith Fahrner, will run from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays during the entire month.

Topics to be covered are male and female anatomy, fetal growth and development, changes during pregnancy, breast and bottle feeding, nutrition during pregnancy, labor and delivery, cesarean section, breathing and relaxation techniques, contraception, and care of the mom and infant after birth.

A fee will be charged for the class. Pre-registration, which is required, can be done by stopping at the Out-Patient Department at Hills and Dales. Financial arrangements may be made.

Participants, who are asked to take a permission slip from their doctor to the first class, can obtain more information by calling the hospital at 872-2121.

KEITH POBANZ, General Sales manager of Board Chrysler/Plymouth/Dodge, hands over the keys to Cass City's driver education teacher, Ron Nurnberger. Also taking delivery of the Board courtesy car, a Chrysler Dynasty, are instructors Dave Hoard and Jim Hobbs.
