

Moth infestation strips Buehrly's woods

It's as if fall arrived weeks ago in some sections of a woodlot behind Dale Buehrly's Greenland Road home, about 3 miles northeast of Cass City.

Several poplar, cottonwood and willow trees there stand bare or nearly bare of leaves, though the trees are still very much alive.

A closer look reveals clusters of cocoons and fuzzy brown gypsy moth caterpillars, slowly but methodically stripping limbs clean, leaving only jagged bits of leaves here and there.

The story is the same just west of Buehrly's property, across the river where his son, Larry, and his family live.

"Everybody was saying we don't have them (gypsy moth caterpillars) in this area, but we do," Dale remarked Monday as he walked through a portion of the 75-acre tract of woods behind his home.

He pointed out several caterpillars, but noted he saw many more over the weekend.

"They were on there by the handfuls," he said. "You could hear it like rain—the (caterpillar) droppings coming down."

The Buehrlys are among a growing number of Tuscola County residents beginning to see significant destruction caused by gypsy moth infestations. And like many others, the Cass City area residents are concerned.

"Just last year was the first year I noticed them, (but) you couldn't hardly notice any damage," he said. This year, he added, the caterpillars have done a lot of damage.

His son, Larry, agreed. "It's really a mess back there—they've been eating them (trees) up."

According to Tuscola County Cooperative Extension Service officials, residents like the Buehrlys, who know of gypsy moth caterpillar infestations in the county, should report the problem to the county Cooperative Extension office (673-5999).

That call should be made soon, according to Extension Director Dennis Stein, who noted plans are set to conduct a gypsy moth caterpillar egg mass count this fall.

The count is designed to give officials an idea of the extent of the problem and where spraying should be done in the spring. It also is required to qualify for federal dollars to help pay for a gypsy moth suppression program in the county.

Reports from citizens are needed in order to ensure the egg mass count is conducted where the problem exists, according to Stein, who pointed out that funding simply isn't available to send scouts all across the county looking for the caterpillar infestations.

Stein indicated such a widespread search would be difficult because the gypsy moth larva, which were hatched in the spring, are now in the process of entering the cocoon stage of their life cycle. That means trees that were defoliated will have time to grow new leaves and, by fall, appear as if little damage was done.

Stein, who estimated 10,000 to 20,000 acres in Tuscola County have sustained defoliation to some degree to-date, suggested that a spraying program, if approved, would focus on populated areas.

"I'm anticipating between 3,000 and 5,000 acres will be sprayed under some cost-shared program" in the spring, Stein said. He explained the spray that would be used is a non-toxic but effective bacteria known as Bt.

Stein explained that roughly half the cost of the program will be offset by federal dollars. The other half, he said, will have to be generated locally via a millage, landowner assessments or other means.

The cost locally would probably run $10 to $12 per acre, Stein estimated.

In any event, it's going to be more expensive than it used to be, according to Stein, who noted the state recently decided to stop providing funding (some $500,000 a year) for such spraying programs.

Owendale boy dies in ORV crash

An 8-year-old Owendale boy died Friday after the off-road vehicle he was driving struck a tree in northwestern Grant Township.

A spokesperson with the Huron County Sheriff's Department identified the victim as Adam Joseph Warack, 5750 Canboro Rd.

According to reports, the boy was northbound on Farver Road, 3 miles east and a mile north of Owendale, at about 11 a.m. when he lost control of his vehicle, which struck a tree on the east side of the roadway.

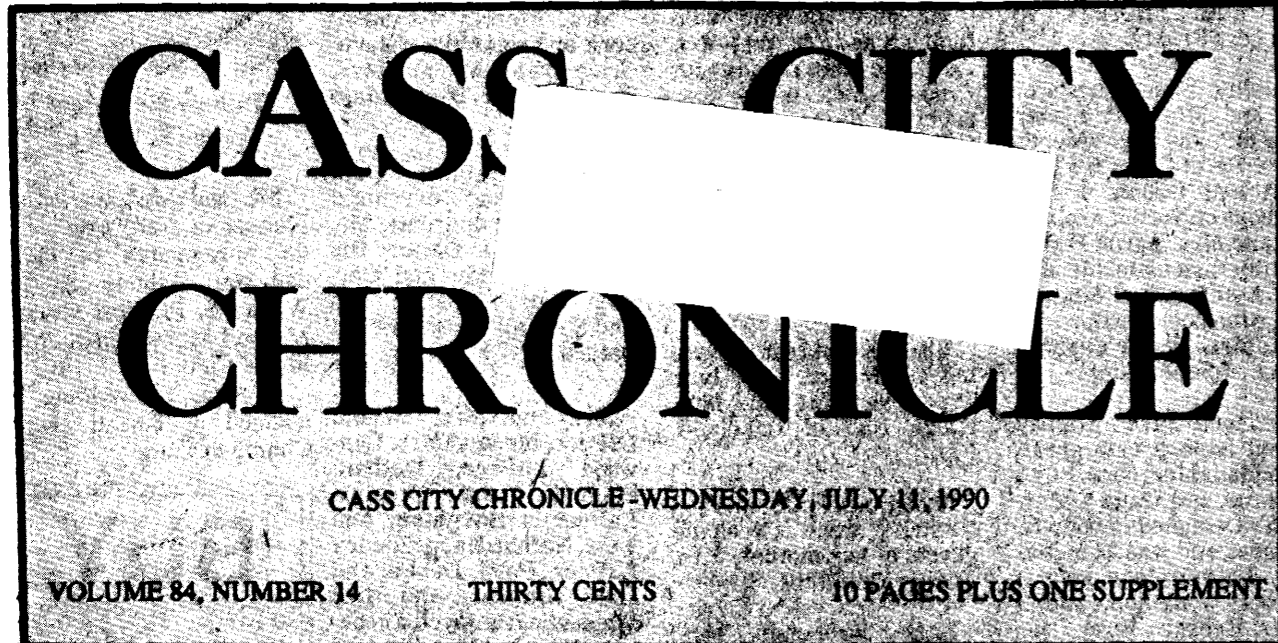

Deputies reported the section of road involved is an unimproved gravel road.

OBITUARY

Joseph was born May 17, 1982, in Cass City, the son of Joseph and Mary (Andrews) Warack.

He lived near Sebawaing until 1987, when his family moved to Grant Township.

The youngster would have entered the third grade this fall at Owendale-Gagetown. Please turn to page 5.

Board sets Cass City-Deford areas

The Cass City School Board set the boundary for students attending Deford School and Campbell Elementary School at the middle of Argyle Road at its regular monthly meeting Monday at the high school.

Previously the dividing line between Deford and Evergreen had been Robinson Road.

Supt. Ken Micklash said that this division would equalize the travel distance for students in Evergreen Township now that the Evergreen building is closed.

While the new boundary solves the problem of distances, how much furor the new system will create is uncertain. Already one family with 2 children that would have attended Evergreen and now are scheduled for Deford have requested a transfer to Campbell Elementary.

Mrs. Denise Puterbaugh asked the transfer for her 2 children. She feels that the children have a conflict with Deford Principal Dorland Kuntz. However, Kuntz is not scheduled to teach either of the Puterbaugh children this year.

On a motion of Dan Ulfing, the request was tabled until the August meeting. The board wants to see how many other requests for transfers will be submitted by the August deadline before reaching its decision.

The Puterbaughs asked Micklash what the procedure was for transferring his 800-acre farm to the Sandusky district.

A transfer of 2 students from Deford to Caro was approved for Jim Dorland. The children spend half the time in Caro with the mother and half the time in Deford with the father, and the board continued to approve sending the 2 to Caro during the time spent with the father.

NEW BUILDING

Seven bids were received for a new bus garage, 48x72x14-feet, and the low bid of Elmer Francis was accepted, but not without debate.

Ulfing told the board that quality of construction should be considered and that he knew several of the bidders and that they would do a very fine job. Francis bid $27,395.90 for the building, plus $5,047.39 for interior finish and insulation, a total of $32,443.29.

The bid was $4,470 lower than the next lower bid. Bids ranged to a top of over $51,000. The bid was accepted unanimously.

The low bid was within the estimate that Micklash told the board when the work was under discussion.

COURSE CHANGES

Wayne Dillon, co-op coordinator, explained state-mandated changes in the program and they were adopted.

Next year all students must be in school for at least 5 classes daily, instead of the 3 that was required this season.

That means, Dillon said, that there will be few co-op students next fall and the amount of co-op credit earned could be reduced. Instead of working 3 hours daily for 1 1/2 credits a semester, a student can work an hour a day for a half credit, 2 hours for a full credit, or 3 hours for 1 1/2 credits.

The same 5 hours daily in class will be required for senior students who are also in dual college enrollment, regardless of whether or not they have already earned enough credits to graduate.

The changes are necessary for the school to receive state aid for the programs and is the reason they were approved.

Brinkman new O-G school board head

The annual election of officers on the Owen-Gage Board of Education highlighted activity during a combined re-organizational/monthly meeting Monday night.

Veteran Trustee Jack Brinkman stepped down as board treasurer after 16 years at that post to accept election as president. He replaces Trustee William Kretzschmer as head of the school board.

In other elections, Trustee Ron Good will continue as board vice-president, while Walt Swiastyn was selected as the new treasurer. Kretzschmer was named vice-treasurer, Tom Fritz was elected secretary and new board member Rick Ziehm, vice-secretary.

Also, Joseph (Nick) Warack was chosen to serve another term both as the board's liaison officer and representative to the Huron Intermediate School District Board, with Swiastyn as the alternate.

The board also voted to continue with First America Bank and First National

Church dinners feed dollars to church

by Kristine L. Renaud
Staff Writer

Although church dinners are fairly common occurrences, it seems like every place of worship has them, each is unique in personality and purpose. Some churches are large and wealthy enough to host such events just for fun, and other parishes need them to survive.

Fraser United Presbyterian Church in Ubyl falls in the latter category. However, the afternoon meals also provide a gathering place and a source of entertainment. I discovered this last Tuesday while enjoying lunch in the church basement.

The Women's Association, formerly Fraser Ladies Aid, sponsors a family-style dinner in the church at 12:15 p.m. every first and third Wednesday throughout the year. Those attending pay for their meal by free-will donation; giving what they can afford or what they feel is appropriate.

About 50 parishioners belong to Fraser, group member Marge Battel said, and the lunches supplement what the parish can't make in offertories.

I was surprised to discover the church can remain open despite the small number of registered people. As a metropolitan Detroit native and a Catholic, I'm used to hearing about churches closing due to decreasing numbers and income.

Because Fraser was the first Presbyterian church in the Thumb, established in 1876, and is the favored place to worship for those not attracted by larger parishes, the women's organization wants to keep the parish on its feet.

Along with the twice-monthly dinners, the group also earns money by quilting every Wednesday, selling various goods as fund raisers, through donations and by other means.

For the meals, volunteers prepare meat entrees, hot vegetable dishes, salad, potatoes, breads and a variety of homemade pies. Each family-style dinner is different, Battel said.

"We plan our menus according to what the supermarkets have on sale and what our gardens produce," she explained.

PROFITABLE

The organization is able to make a profit on the meals because many goods are donated, such as fresh vegetables, tea, coffee and other fixings.

Profits go into the Women's Association fund, from which money is donated to the church and distributed among many charitable causes. Fraser receives aid from the group in paying fuel bills, buying cleaning supplies and paying for repairs and renovations, Battel noted.

Outside of the money they raise for Fraser, the group also makes donations to orphanages, emergency aid causes, special Christmas programs and sets up small college scholarships.

According to Battel, the dinners inadvertently grew from social affairs built around the association's meetings into the well-attended events of today.

Beginning about 1929, the Fraser women began an organization dedicated to doing church work. Ladies gathered in each others' homes for their meetings, Battel's mother-in-law told her, where the hostess would provide a meal for the group prior to the meetings.

Around 1949 they decided to start meeting in the church's basement. At that point, other area organizations asked if they could join the Fraser group for lunch. From then on the dinners evolved into a regular affair, Battel noted.

Primarily senior citizens, individually and by car-pool, come for meals. Some attend because they live alone and wouldn't cook such a meal for themselves, others because they can get a home-cooked lunch without having to cook, Battel remarked.

PLEASE PASS THE DESSERT—The Women's Association of Fraser Presbyterian Church hosts a mid-day dinner every first and third Wednesday. The main meal differs each time, but homemade pies are always on the menu.

Steve Grainger, publisher of the Frankenmuth News, says that there is a word for 125th anniversary. He said that the word is quasiquintennial and that Frankenmuth came up with the word after a little research in 1970.

If that's a word, it has yet to make any dictionary that we can locate. Could it be a manufactured word by those masters of publicity and public relations in Chicken City?

What's harder to understand than Einstein's theory of relativity? It's what long distance phone service will cost from various companies. The Chronicle had to make a decision by July 25 or be assigned a company at random. In an effort to sort out the facts, I called an industrial executive about it.

In one of the company branches it has one of the newer companies in the business. He said that he has been trying to find out which is actually cheaper, but no one has been able to come up with any numbers that prove one is more economical than another.

After learning this we decided to stay with AT&T - which I am sure will keep executives of all of the rest of the competing companies unable to sleep nights.

We wrestled with another letter from the same author for a couple of days before deciding to run it.

It's certain that opinion will be split on this issue. It's also certain that the letter would carry real impact if the readers knew where it was coming from.

One of the most useless uses of time is writing (or speaking) about the abortion issue. Now that the issue has been hashed and rehashed, most folks' opinions are etched in stone.

A review of a book written by Laurence H. Tribe in Newsweek talks about some of the issues and does it so well that it inspired this time wasted column.

A pro-choice advocate, the review points out inconsistencies in the laws covering abortion.

The article says, "Similarly, he views laws permitting abortion only for victims of rape or incest as more hypocritical than compassionate. Since the fetus is innocent in both cases the purpose seems to be to distinguish between women who are blameless and women who are guilty - but of what?"

Which brings us to one of the reasons this writer is pro-choice. It's always been the belief that it's worse to bring unwanted, uncared for children into this world than it is to have a pregnancy terminated.

Another thought expressed is that "most people intuitively resist equating the early loss of embryonic life - whether by miscarriage or an abortifacient birth-control device like IUD - with the death of a baby."

There's agreement here in Tribe's belief that laws requiring teens to notify a parent before receiving an abortion are poor laws. "Minors on good terms with their families talk to them anyway. Only when the children resist does the law intrude."

The article then tells about a 13-year-old who was shot and killed by her father after she was forced to inform him that he had made her pregnant.

The article doesn't talk about another compelling reason for legal abortions. They are better than illegal abortions that were with us from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., and the VFW Hall in Kingston, Aug. 15 from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The senior health screening will consist of Hematocrit testing, tetanus-diphtheria boosters, a health style appraisal and blood pressure readings upon request.

Nurses will be present to explain the screening results. There is no cost for these services.

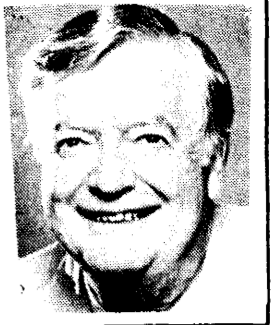

Senior citizens are welcome to stay for lunch at the meal sites and are asked to call the Human Development Commission for reservations.

Additional information is available by calling the Tuscola County Health Department at 673-8114.

"If It Fitz..."

I didn't shoot anyone

By Jim Fitzgerald

Joe Grimm, assistant to the Free Press executive editor, takes reader complaints over the phone. His desk is next to mine, and I occasionally overhear him responding to gripes about my column. Sometimes, while the reader remains on the line, Grimm relays questions to me and then relays my answers to the reader. Is that instant customer service, or what?

Another thing Grimm does is enter a transcript of his conversations into the office computer system, along with succinct comment. This allows all employees to immediately learn what's on readers' minds. Last Monday, one reader's mind was on me, and I was on hand to supply Grimm with instant answers. The following is his verbatim report:

YOU AND WHAT ARMY?

A St. Clair Shores man says that Fitzgerald's column opposing anti-flag burning amendments is a terrible disgrace to the country and to veterans. "I bet he was never in service."

"He was."
"When?"
"World War II."
"Where?"
"Europe."
"What part?"
"France and Germany."
"Well, what did he do over there?"

"He was in the infantry."
"Well, did he shoot anyone? If he didn't shoot anyone, he wasn't doing his job."

Fitz says he TRIED to shoot someone, but missed. Caller also says that Pages 6B and 6E were all blanked out in his paper. We agreed that if the presses had messed up Fitz's column, we'd just have one problem — and a less irritating one, at that.

SOLDIERLY DELIBERATIONS

All of which reminds me that I was in Germany when American soldiers often used the cliché: "To the victor belongs the spoils." But maybe not for keeps.

Last week the New York Times reported out of Dallas: "A court-ordered inventory of safe deposit boxes belonging to the heirs of a U.S. Army officer has turned up other art objects apparently taken from France and Germany during the final months of World War II . . . The officer is believed to have stolen artworks from Quedlinburg, Germany."

Stolen? That wasn't the operative GI word in 1945. The operative word was liberated. Many a conquering soldier liberated whatever he could lift. In case of furniture, perhaps a bed, it sometimes took 2 soldiers to lift it.

It was never called a bed, though. It was a war souvenir.

POSTAL COMPLICITY

I was never comfortable with all that liberating but, as an 18-year-old, late-arriving replacement, I kept my doubts to myself. It was easy to rationalize. After all, German families were regularly ousted from their homes to make room for U.S. soldiers, and if it was OK to liberate someone's house, why not the silverware and linens inside it?

The New York Times said it wasn't known how the artworks were transported from Germany to Texas. I could make a good guess: by mail. Parcel post. During the few weeks immediately before Germany's surrender, the GIs assigned to mail duty didn't much care what their buddies mailed home.

There was even a report of a dismantled Volkswagen going to Brooklyn, each part individually boxed and gift-wrapped. It was probably an apocryphal model, but maybe not. Certainly it's easy for me to believe a few liberated paintings could have been mailed from Quedlinburg to Dallas.

Forty-five years later, I remember riding a half-track through Quedlinburg, where I didn't do my job. I didn't shoot anyone.

Offer equal access to Cass City area GTE customers

Equal access, which lets telephone customers make calls over any long distance company's facilities by dialing a 5-digit access code and the number being called, will be made available to GTE customers in Cass City starting Sept. 29, according to Joe E. Philabaum, GTE eastern division manager.

Pay telephone customers in this area will also experience changes when placing certain types of long distance calls because of equal access. Owners of premises with pay phones (pay phone agents) will be selecting a long distance carrier to handle certain long distance calls.

In addition to simplified dialing procedures, equal access provides improved quality connections and the ability to use a long distance company with either a rotary or touch call phone.

The affected customers and pay phone agents are those whose telephone numbers begin with the 872 prefixes.

Equal access is being offered only in areas where switching equipment has been adapted to provide it and where long distance companies other than AT&T have asked for the service, Philabaum said.

Customers and pay phone agents affected will begin receiving information about equal access during June, 1990. A bill insert alerting them to the new service will be followed by a letter giving full details of the program, including a list of long distance companies and information for ordering service.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR GENERAL EQUAL ACCESS DIALING

According to Philabaum, customers will be asked to select a preferred long distance company. Callers can use that company's service by merely dialing "1" and the called number. "At the present time, customers dialing "1" plus a long distance number are automatically connected only to the GTE or the AT&T network," Philabaum explained.

Those who do not select a preferred long distance company will at some later date have a carrier selected for them at random. That choice will then determine the carrier that will be reached when the caller dials "1" and the called number.

At pay phones, "0+" long distance calls will be routed automatically to the long distance company selected by the pay phone agent. To reach another carrier, callers will have to use an appropriate access code furnished by that carrier. If a pay phone caller just dials "0" and waits for an operator to answer, a GTE operator or one from another local exchange company will answer and can instruct the customer on how to complete the call. Any "1+" long distance call from a pay phone will be unaffected.

HEALTH TIPS

Calcium and exercise important for teens

Teens, especially females, who exercise regularly and consume adequate amounts of dietary calcium improve their chances for a lifetime of good health...and improved appearance.

"There is no question that the muscle and bone mass teens develop when they exercise and get adequate dietary calcium make them look better. And it's definitely healthier," says Dr. John Anderson, professor of nutrition at the University of North Carolina's School of Public Health.

Calcium and physical activity are equally important if teens also want an attractive posture during the rest of their lives. As Dr. Connie Weaver, professor of foods and nutrition at Purdue University, warns, "If teens can envision themselves in the future as having a hump back and low mobility because of a hip fracture, they may make food choices today that give them enough calcium." She adds that getting enough calcium as teens may help prevent disability and decreased mobility later in life.

Calcium intake - particularly during childhood and adolescence when new bone is being formed - influences a person's total bone mass and subsequent risk of osteoporosis. Other lifestyle factors such as exercise also have a significant impact on bone health.

EXERCISE BOON TO BONES

In studies of college-age women, Dr. Anderson found that low calcium intake and/or low levels of physical activity were associated with lower bone mass. However, women with higher or even moderate activity levels, combined with reasonable calcium intake, always had higher bone mass.

"The message is clear," Anderson says, "if we start developing optimal peak bone mass in the teen years, we might be able to delay hip fractures or perhaps prevent them entirely in some women."

The residents of Alaska move from one home to another more often than residents of any other state.

"Bone strength comes from exercise," Anderson says. Tests show that exercise may even cause bone to lose less tissue and actually build up more mass and may promote calcium retention. Anderson emphasizes that the exercise should be weight-bearing so that it stresses the bone.

According to Anderson, "Aerobic exercises are the best because they tend to use all the body structures. They include things like cheerleading, jogging, walking, aerobic dancing, gymnastics, calisthenics, rope jumping and moderate weight lifting. And any of these are good for girls."

Bone tissue responds to physical activity at any age, but in younger people it may respond more readily. "We know that younger people who were physically active as teens as well as in college invariably had better bone mass than those who weren't active," Anderson says.

Teens and young adults can easily hit their 1,200 mg/day RDA target for calcium by drinking milk - be it whole, lowfat or skim - with each meal (300 mg per eight-ounce glass) and substituting "nutrient-dense" dairy products for "empty calorie" foods as between meal snacks. One cup of yogurt provides 345-415 mg of calcium and an ounce of Cheddar cheese 204 mg of calcium.

2 local women attend Zonta convention in Texas

Two area women represented Cass City at the 50th Zonta International Convention, held June 23-28 in Dallas, Texas.

They are Connie Schwaderer and Betty Hurst, who drove the distance with Janet Francis, also of Cass City, who helped with the driving and then visited with her son and his family in Fort Worth.

According to Schwaderer and Hurst, 2,417 Zontians and their families, representing 54 countries worldwide, were greeted at their first meeting by a letter from President George Bush and a video from First Lady Barbara Bush commending them on their literacy program. The group also was welcomed by the mayor of Dallas.

"The opening ceremonies started with the traditional Parade of Flags," Hurst remarked. "Each country presented (its) flag in native dress."

The keynote speaker was Madam Jehan Sadat, widow of the late Anwar Sadat, president of Egypt. Hurst noted that Sadat, an honorary Zontian, has been active in programs affecting women and children in her native Egypt.

"As the meeting proceeded through the week, we met with the candidates for the new International Board and elected a truly international one, with a president from Australia, a vice president from Switzerland and a treasurer from our own Michigan," Hurst said, adding members of the Board of Directors are from California, Taipei, Australia, Finland, Colorado and Texas.

In other business during the convention, participants discussed by-laws at length, listened to an environmental presentation by Dr. Jane Pratt of the World Bank and heard a report on the UNIFEM program sponsored by Zonta through the United Nations.

Hurst explained the project contributed $600,000 for the 1986-88 biennium for the education and training of women in Argentina, Botswana, Mexico, Thailand and Zimbabwe.

An additional commitment of $400,000 was set for 1988-90 to assist women in Brazil, Honduras, the Philippines and Sierra Leone, and a new pledge of $500,000 will be used in projects in India, Togo and Egypt.

Convention participants also enjoyed an evening at the Circle R Ranch, a "south of the border" dinner and entertainment, and a closing banquet celebrating installation of new officers.

Hurst concluded, "We all left feeling that we had accomplished a lot, and that Zonta's 1,055 clubs around the world would be willing to work for the goals of Zonta as brought out during the convention—Zonta means business, Zonta means service and Zonta means fun, and doing it will mean a better world for many women all over the world."

Students to learn about insurance

Cass City driver education students will learn about Michigan's no-fault insurance law and how they can save money through safe driving at Cass City High School, at 10 a.m. Monday, July 9, AAA Michigan reports.

"The programs will demonstrate the high cost associated with unsafe driving," said Steve White, AAA Michigan safety education consultant. "We will show students they can control their insurance costs by maintaining good driving records."

For instance, if a 16-year-old driver pays a 6-month premium of $322, conviction on a single alcohol-related offense or several speeding tickets could raise the cost to $428.

Teenage drivers have the highest insurance rates of all age groups. Statewide statistics show high school students make up 8 percent of Michigan's drivers, but are involved in nearly 14 percent of the fatal traffic accidents. Also, they are involved in 11 percent of all fatal accidents when alcohol is a contributing factor.

White also will explain how Michigan's no-fault insurance law works, including a summary of mandatory and optional coverages.

Your neighbor says

There are options besides abortion

Abortion debates received additional attention last week when the US Supreme Court ruled on laws in 2 states.

An Ohio law requiring pregnant girls under the age of 18 to inform at least one parent or a judge before seeking an abortion was upheld by the Court's 6-3 vote. Justice Anthony Kennedy reportedly said the Court found "no constitutional defect" in such a law.

In a second case, justices voted 5-4 to approve a Minnesota statute requiring minors planning abortion to notify a parent or obtain a judge's consent.

Earlier this year, Gov. James Blanchard vetoed a proposed parental consent law for Michigan. The suggested bill would require pregnant girls, age 17 and younger considering abortion to receive written permission from one parent or a waiver signed by a judge.

Due to the efforts of Michigan's abortion opponents, the statute may bypass Blanchard next time and go before the state Legislature for rejection or approval.

Your neighbor, part-time Rawson Memorial Library page Mary Shagena applauds these decisions as positive steps toward eliminating legalized abortion. All humans, no matter how minute, are living beings and deserve a chance at life, she remarked.

"Sure the mothers have rights (in abortion cases), but what about the kids?" asked this 18-year-old Cass City native. "There are other options besides killing the baby," such as adoption, Shagena noted.

In cases involving minors, parents should be made aware of their daughter's intentions because abortions are surgical procedures, she commented.

Shagena pointed out the difficulties she encountered trying to have her ears pierced just prior to her eighteenth birthday. The store wouldn't perform the procedure without parental consent because it's considered minor surgery, she said. "How many people die from ear piercing and how many die from botched abortions?"

June 16 in Cass City

Pair charged in break-in

A pair of Cass City men have been charged in connection with the June 16 break-in of a Cass City floral shop.

Joseph L. Racine, 20, 6766 Deckerville Rd., and David A. Chrzan, 20, 6450 Main St., were arraigned recently in Tuscola County District Court on charges of breaking and entering an unoccupied dwelling with intent to commit larceny, and larceny in a building.

Bond has been set at $1,000 for Racine, who faces a preliminary examination on the charges at 8:30 a.m. July 20. A preliminary exam for Chrzan, meanwhile, is set for 8:30 a.m. Friday.

His bond is set at $10,000.

Court records state the men are charged with breaking into Cass City Floral, 6450 Main St., Cass City, and stealing an estimated $100 in cash.

Cass City police, who investigated the complaint, arrested the suspects at different times and locations July 7.

Report stolen wheel cap covers

Cass City police investigated one complaint of larceny from a vehicle over the past week.

According to reports, Luanne M. Etimani, 4408 West St., Cass City, told police someone stole 3 wheel cap covers from her 1979 Chevrolet Blazer late Friday or early Saturday morning. The vehicle was parked at her residence at the time of the theft, reports state.

No dollar estimate on the value of the caps was available.
