STUDENTS AT CASS CITY Schools are doing their bit to welcome back the troops from Saudi Arabia. They are creating posters to display in the windows of stores on Main Street with erection slated Thursday. A huge flag has been created by students in the first grade under the direction of Sherry Dillon, teacher, and Sue Sobczak, volunteer parent. Displaying the flag are 4 of the students who helped. From left, Summer Osentoski, Jonathon Bock, Kerry Shagena and Eli Healy.

Offer Kirby 1991-2 contract

Owen-Gage Board of Education members approved renewal of school Supt. Harley Kirby's contract for the 1991-92 school year, but tabled action on the district's developmental preschool program Monday night.

There was little discussion preceding a unanimous vote to offer Kirby another contract.

A committee composed of board President Jack Brinkman and trustees Tom Fritz and Bill Kretzschmer was appointed to make a recommendation to the full board regarding salary at a later date.

Turning to the preschool, the board was expected to outline details Monday regarding how the district plans to operate the program next year.

However, Kirby indicated a decision couldn't be made yet because school officials are waiting to receive word on the possibility of the Huron Intermediate School District taking over the program.

If ISD officials agree and Owen-Gage officials decide to go with that option, Kirby said, the local preschool program might be moved to Lakers due to an increase in the number of at-risk students that would be served in a county-wide program. He noted that the state provides some $2,500 in funding for each at-risk student.

In other business during the 90-minute monthly session, the board voted 5-1 in favor of hiring someone at a pay rate of $15 per hour to remove snow behind Gagetown Elementary School when necessary. Trustee Tom Fritz cast the lone dissenting ballot.

The vote came after a brief discussion in which a majority of board members and elementary Principal William Britt disagreed with Kirby's assessment that the school's tractor/snow blower could be used behind the school.

Britt indicated the school's snow blower doesn't work well in the lot behind the school due to gravel and uneven areas.

Also Monday, the board: *Adopted the Huron Intermediate School District's proposed special education curriculum for students in grades 9 through 12.

*Noted Brinkman and Kretzschmer have each accumulated at least 75 points in the Michigan Association of School Board's "Keys to Better Boardsmanship" program, making them both eligible to receive the association's Award of Merit.

*Tentatively okayed a request from Trip Club co-sponsor Faith Fahrner to allow 20 high school students to take a trip to Toronto April 29-May 1. The trip, which will be funded by the students, is subject to final approval from the superintendent and high school principal.

*Approved the recommendation of Debbie Thorpe as the high school's "student of the month."

Rawson library moving into electronic age

Finding a specific book, magazine or video title at Rawson Memorial Library will soon be as easy as punching a few computer keys.

Officials currently are implementing an automatic circulation system and on-line catalogue at the Cass City library.

The computerized system, funded by a $14,837 Library Service in Construction Act grant, initially will be used primarily to check materials in and out, according to library Director Barbara Hutchinson, who said the system eventually will replace the library's card catalogue.

In fact, Hutchinson added, one computer station will be available soon for patrons interested in using the computerized catalogue right away.

Currently, volunteers are busy attaching bar codes—similar to those used at various stores—on all permanent library materials, including books, magazines and videos. In addition, all patrons are being asked to pick up an application at the library for new library cards, which will also bare bar codes.

With the new system, Hutchinson explained, a special light pen is used to "read" the bar codes, each of which is tied to a record in the computer's data base. Once read, information from a specific bar code will instantly be displayed on a computer screen.

For example, the bar code on a library card will reveal the patron's name, materials they've checked out, materials they've reserved, overdue materials, fines and other information.

It will take some time to attach the bar codes to all of the library's 23,000 to 25,000 materials, but Hutchinson indicated the task is proceeding smoothly. "Our target is to have everything on by the 15th of May," she said.

Implementing the computerized card catalogue will be the next step, she continued. "Probably within a year we'll do away with the card catalogue completely."

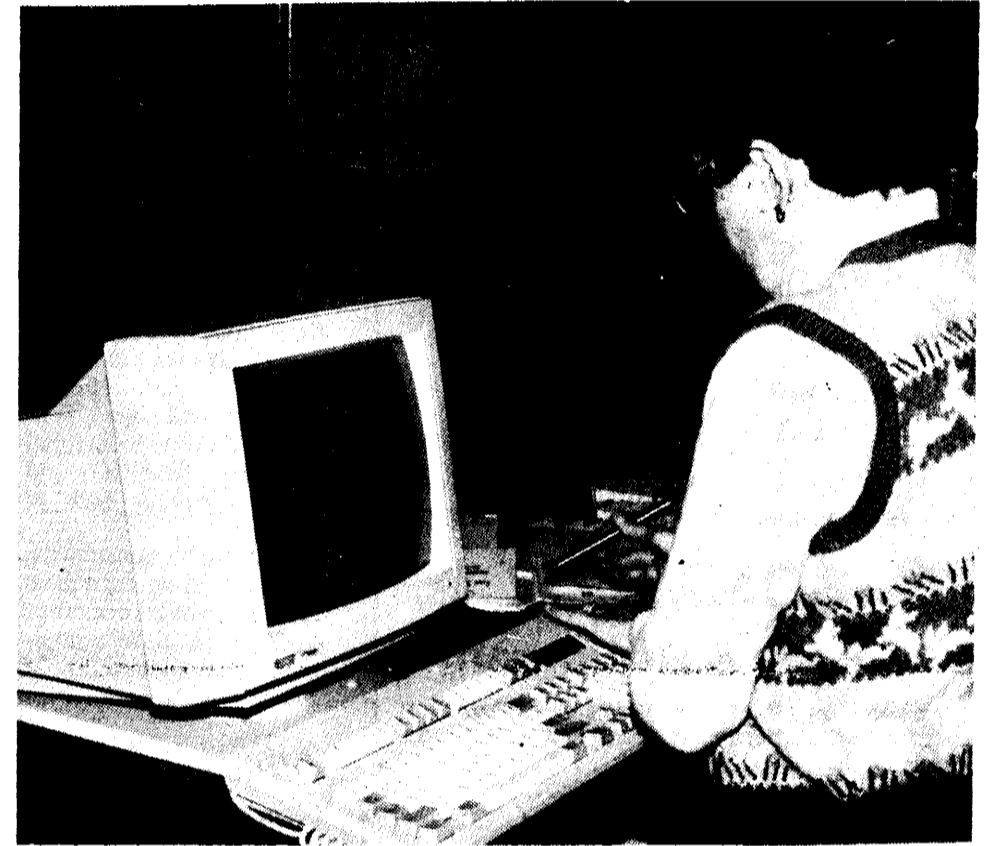

Having to use a computer "sounds scary to a lot of people, but we'll all be here to help, and although it all may seem intimidating at first, it really is very easy," Hutchinson remarked.

She said patrons will be able to search for materials on the computer by simply punching in an authors name or the subject or a key word from a title. The computer will then respond by listing all available materials.

Rawson Memorial Library is the third area library to implement an automatic circulation system. The others are located in Bad Axe and Kingston.

"The advantages are that you can find materials much easier," Hutchinson said, noting the computer instantly tells a patron what materials are available and what has been checked out. Aside from speed, she added, the new system will also save time now spent on tasks such as updating and maintaining the existing card catalogue. "It will definitely free up some (staff) time that we can use for programming, personal help to the patrons and so on."

At Campbell Elementary School

Volunteer work rewarding for Long

When it comes to finding a place and time to relax, probably few area residents would head for the nearest elementary school in the morning.

Ask Dennis Long, however, and chances are good he'll gladly say the clanging of lockers and the sound of children talking and laughing is music to his ears.

For the past 5 months or so, Long, 42, has spent 12 to 15 hours a week at Campbell Elementary School, volunteering his time as an assistant to Chapter I reading specialist Cathy Cooper each weekday morning before returning home and then, later, heading off to his second shift job at Michigan Sugar Company's Caro plant.

"It's a blast watching these little guys and gals," the Deford area resident commented Friday at the school as he worked on a batch of buttons to be given as awards to students. "Nobody has more energy at 9 in the morning than a bunch of 5-year-olds."

Friday marked Long's last morning at the school. He explained he recently was promoted to warehouse supervisor and was to begin working first shift Monday. "Unfortunately, I'm going to have to give up my day job here," he joked.

Long's "day job" has consisted of a variety of tasks; everything from clerical duties such as filing and stapling booklets to creating bulletin boards, word flash cards and special game boards designed to help students overcome their difficulty with reading.

ROLE MODEL

"I'm going to miss him greatly," Cooper said. "It's so nice for us to have a man showing such dedication—he's an excellent role model."

Cooper, who noted the local Chapter I reading program serves some 120 students in grades K-6, said she has appreciated Long's efforts, which have allowed her to spend less time on activity projects and more time helping students.

"There are just so many tasks that require a lot of extra time," she said.

And Long's artistic ability has been a big plus. "I wouldn't be able to begin to do this," Cooper commented. "He takes story characters and enlarges them so they come alive for the students."

The reading specialist said Long's efforts have made a difference.

"We have seen an increase in (students') motivation and their desire to do better. They find the activities fun to do; it isn't drudgery."

The same is true from Long's perspective.

"It's like free therapy," he said. "It's very relaxing—there's no pressure. Anything you do they appreciate so much."

Taking an active role in the school district isn't something new for the Long family, which has pitched in when Dennis would take an unfinished project home with him.

His wife, Carol, is a school bus driver and long-time 4-H leader who was hired in September as a special education aide. She previously volunteered her time to help Cooper out, which led to Dennis' involvement.

VERY WILLING

Carol was "keenly aware of the amount of materials we prepare," Cooper remarked, adding the Longs are "a family that's very willing to help benefit (the school), and with not a lot of glory."

"The way I like to think about it is I'm freeing (teachers) up" to work with the kids, Dennis, who recently became a grandfather, said. "Plus, our kids have used the various programs over the years. I'm just putting something back."

The Longs have 4 children,

Sabrina, 22, Anthony, 20, Shawna, 12, and Aaron, 10.

Dennis noted he's gotten plenty of help on his school projects at home.

"It's a family thing," he said. He grinned and added, "We're pretty dull—every weekend we sit around with magic markers."

"It's fun; we enjoy it (and it shows the kids at an early age that they can make a difference with little things."

Although Long plans to continue doing what he can to help at the school, his time will be limited with his new job. He suggested that other area parents might want to consider volunteering some time. "It's not that hard to do; anybody can do it," he said. "You don't have to be a certified artist to help out here."

"I'm going to miss it—all these kids running around," he continued. Cooper pointed out that the Please turn to back page.

"I'M JUST PUTTING something back," Dennis Long (above) says of his volunteer work at Campbell Elementary School over the past several weeks.

Door prizes were won by Orville Mallory and Audrey Cummins.

Local students still lead in stock market game

Cass City High School remains in first place in a regional and state stock market simulation after 2 weeks of competition.

The first-place team is composed of Brad Gray, captain, and members Kent Winter and Jeff Jeung. The students are taking part in the simulation in Ron Nurnberger's classroom.

The Cass City students have traded primarily in Chrysler, First City Bank of Texas, HomeFed Corp., LA Gear and SPX Corp., and have accumulated a portfolio value of $143,582 in 2 weeks.

The stock market competition is coordinated through the Center for Economic Education Offices at Central Michigan University. Participating students are given a simulated account of $100,000 and can trade stocks on the New York, American and over-the-counter (NASDAQ) exchanges.

The winning team after 10 weeks will receive lunch at the Detroit Economics Club, tours of the Detroit Free Press, Roney & Company and the Federal Reserve Branch Bank in Detroit, and will be recognized at the Securities Traders Association banquet next year.

"If It Fitz...."

Growing old

By Jim Fitzgerald

The man on the phone, in Maine, said he'd call me back, so I gave him my 7-digit number. He asked for my area code. Oh, Lord. The area code isn't printed on my new office phone. I hurriedly hissed to the young woman at the next desk: "What's our area code number?" She gave me a strange look that demanded an explanation of how I possibly could be so dumb I didn't know my own area code. I wanted to slap her young face.
It took a minute to wheedle the number out of the young woman, and the man in Maine surely interpreted my hesitation as stupidity. So now there were two people astonished by the incredible fact that I could live in the Detroit area all my life, use the phone regularly as an integral tool of my profession, and not know the area code for Detroit.

Kennedy...was nuts over the girl singer in my band in Chicago. One of the great BLEEP men of all time. Except for me."

JFK was my hero, and Jerry Lewis was my idea of a world champion loud-mouthed jerk. And 30 years later I learn they were wom-anizing best buddies, with an assist from the tax-supported Marines. I'm not sure I wanted to live long enough to see the last shreds of Camelot flushed down the sewer by Jerry Lewis.

As for my area code, what's depressing is that I knew it the day before I didn't know it, and I knew it again the next day. I know it right now — 313. But when that man from Maine asked for it, the only phone number I could bring to mind was 22651. That hasn't been my phone number since 1944 when I moved out of my parents' home at 1020 Pine Grove Ave. in Port Huron. We had that same number when we lived at 928 Huron Ave. in the same city. I can remember all those 45-year-old numbers easily, but today's numbers keep slipping away.

WHY THE KEY WOULDN'T FIT

Because I'm about to take a long motor vacation, I'm reminded of perhaps my most embarrassing loss of memory. A couple of years ago I stopped at a Holiday Inn in Alabama. When the room clerk asked for my auto license number, I'd forgotten it. I would have read it to him from the car registration in my wallet, but I'd forgotten my reading glasses.

I would have asked the clerk to read the number off my registration, except I'd forgotten my wallet. When I went out to the car to get my glasses and wallet, I'd forgotten where I parked.

After the obliging clerk finally reunited me with my car and got me safely into a room, I left to drive across town for a dinner engagement. When I returned to the Holiday Inn, my door key wouldn't fit the lock. When I complained to another obliging room clerk, I learned I was at the wrong Holiday Inn.

Onward and Upward.

AGING ATTIRE OF THE STARS

It's all part of growing old. For people my age, several facts of aging are depressing. For example, it is depressing to see June Allyson on television selling diapers for people my age.

Forty years ago, I would have hooted and scoffed at the ridiculous prediction that cute, perky, forever-young June Allyson someday would appear on television to suggest that she wore diapers for important social occasions, and maybe I should, too.

Also depressing was a recent Esquire article in which Jerry Lewis bragged that he and president John Kennedy chased women together. "The best years in my life I had with JFK," Lewis said. "I used to get on a Marine chopper, and they'd fly me to the South Lawn so that I could bypass the press.

The Haire Net

When I breezed into town some 40 years ago people were talking about the weather and parking meters. They still are.

It's still either too hot, too cold, too wet or too dry, or on those rare spring days when everything comes alive, just right.

The parking meter debate swirled around whether to install meters in the 1950's. It was a hot issue then and it's fairly warm now.

Meters were installed by the council in a "special meeting" with a voice vote. A meeting like that today would be cause for a lawsuit, but that was a different time.

As might be expected the installation was received with mixed emotions by business people in the community although the majority probably thought that they were okay. For most of them the endorsement was lukewarm at best.

The vast majority of the shoppers were disappointed when the meters started to operate.

But these same shoppers were annoyed, before the meters came, because folks who lived in upstairs apartments and businessmen themselves (would you believe it?) parked on Main Street.

One benefit of the meters is the revenue produced has established off-street parking lots for convenient free parking.

Today the meters produce about $300 a month and a lenient control policy makes it unusual, except for the more flagrant violator, to be ticketed.

Several business owners tell customers if they get a ticket while shopping in their store to bring it in and they will pay it.

That doesn't mean that all of them wish the meters were no more. Those that favor meters say that the meters keep the parking spaces open for those who are spending money in town.

Others say that there is no parking problem in Cass City and point to the parking available when the meters are covered in December each year. They also see that most neighboring towns have discontinued the meters as have major shopping meccas such as downtown Bay City.

During the turbulent 40 years under discussion, the debate sometimes has been fierce, with each side sure that it was correct.

You don't find that very much now. Most folks just aren't that sure which is right, meters or no meters.

You can count this writer among them. We just don't know how much of a deterrent to business these meters are.

It's sure that they don't help any. The fact that community after community has pushed them into the ash can is strong motivation for following suit.

Right now there is no strong push to take meters away and, like the weather, we'll probably just continue to jaw about it and wonder which is the right path to take.

Have we told you lately how important you are?

Letters to the editor

Coach faulted for some of year's woes

Hi! I'd like to console this year's Cass City basketball team. You weren't as bad as your record indicated this season. I've been watching basketball in the Thumb for 25 years or so, which makes me feel kind of ancient.

Anyway, the competition in the Thumb this year was probably as good as it's ever been. This year's Cass City team was probably the best 2-19 that I have witnessed. I've seen some lousy teams, teams that couldn't bring the ball up the court by themselves. As my coach used to say, "They couldn't score 100 points if they were out there alone."

I thought that the team played as hard as they could in every game that I saw. To be quite truthful, I thought that some of this year's woes were the fault of the coach. Not taking anything away from Ron, because he has been successful in the past. But, times have changed. Basketball in the Thumb is a little more wide open and aggressive than it was 10 years ago. The control game which worked say, with Tonti and Comment, is out of date. Every single time that the coach "took the air out of the ball this year," it back-fired. This year I've seen a coach that almost deliberately disrupted the flow of a game. Why do you have practice if you have to bark out signals the whole game? Can't you, for once in your life, just sit back and let the kids play, like the Lakers coach, or that lady from Harbor Beach? She was impressive, I thought.

You're the coach, a grown man; you're supposed to build character, but as far as I can see, you destroy it. They're just kids. You can't have guys quitting every year. Somebody's got to give, that's their only chance in life to play basketball. Just because a kid doesn't meet your expectations is no reason to chase him off. I'm sure that when you were in high school, you had a few differences of opinion from your coach.

Better luck next year, guys. That's all I have to say.

Kritzman opens repair business

There's a new business in the Schneberger building on Main Street, where Mike Kritzman has purchased the repair service that he operated for Schneberger's for 2 years.

Kritzman brings both practical and theoretical experience to his business. He has been involved in electronics for 12 years. Before specializing in electronics, he was an electrician.

Kritzman has an associate degree in electronics from a Florida college, where he lived before joining Schneberger's.

Coming to Cass City was almost like coming home for the new owner. He is a native of Bad Axe. Helping with the business is Kritzman's wife, Cheryl. An experienced associate in the business is Pat Peters.

Thank-you for support

To whom it may concern, I would like to thank the town of Cass City for the support and letters and cards I received from Old Wood Drug and Mr. and Mrs. Doug VanAllen.

Your support of the Armed Services is one of the most important things to me while I was in Saudi Arabia and now while I'm in Turkey. The only thing more important to me was the love and support of my family, Mother, Father, Grandma, brothers and sister.

Once again I would like to thank you for your support.

Sincerely,

Thank-you, Cass City

I would like to thank the people of Cass City for their support. We didn't ask for this war; we are just doing our jobs.

Now I may not agree with the President on how this was handled. Now all I can hope for is a speedy end and to come home.

Again I would like to thank the schools for the packages. Also to all the people that have written over the last 6 months.

Hopefully, this will be over soon, so all of us over here can be back home with our families.

Your neighbor says

Cass City needs a children's store

The Cass City Chamber of Commerce has formed a committee to try and find out what shoppers in the area feel that the community needs to better serve its customers.

The Chronicle asked this question of your neighbor, Mary Bellew, a Cass City resident, as she was shopping Monday afternoon.

See, she said, I'll have to think about that. Really, it's hard to come up with something on the spur of the moment, she added.

But after several moments of reflection, Bellew did tell what she felt was needed most. The mother of 2 small children, Jessica and Derek, she feels that Cass City could use a children's store, one that sells quality children's clothing, she explained.

Bellew's husband, Craig, is a pharmacist at Hills and Dales General Hospital, where he is active in community affairs and a member of Cass City Rotary.

The family has lived in Cass City for about 3 years.

Hawks upset effort falls short, Marlette wins in overtime

Besides being one of those years when the talent was thin, the 1990-91 basketball season will be remembered as one where everything that could go wrong did.

Cass City bowed out of the district class C tournament at Sandusky Thursday when the team lost in overtime to Marlette, 55-53.

The loss was typical of the way the season went in close games. The Hawks found a way to lose in the closing minutes. It happened with Caro, Lakers and North Branch this season. Cass City was in front until the dying moments and then lost.

If there was a silver lining to all of this for Cass City fans, it was that the team with only 2 wins all year kept trying and improving, Coach Ron Nurnberger said. The players could have packed it in but they didn't.

The game was a series of spurts for both teams all night. It looked as if the final Hawk spurt was going to carry them to an upset. With Al Dadacki and Chris Herringshaw carrying the scoring load and the Hawk guards handling the Red Raider press well, the teams battled to a stand-off in the first period with Marlette in front 14-13 after the first 8 minutes.

In the opening moments of the second quarter Cass City staged its first spurt of the night, outscoring Marlette, 6-3, in the first 4 minutes to take a 19-16 lead.

Marlette countered that to run off 6 unanswered points to go in front 22-19. At the half the Raiders were in front 27-23.

Cass City moved to within a point midway through the third quarter but Marlette answered the challenge to take a 37-33 lead going into the final quarter.

Cass City played some of its finest ball of the season for the first 6 minutes of the last quarter. Here's the way the rally went. Herringshaw scored and the bucket was countered by Jason Bell. Steve Tuckey slipped in a 2-pointer from the pivot and Herringshaw knotted the score at 39-all with 5 1/2 minutes left.

Chris Storm temporarily stopped the rally by canning 2 free throws. Mark Irrer then ripped in a 3-pointer, Herringshaw added 2 more buckets and Troy Perry then pushed the Hawk lead to 49-41 with a bucket and 2 free throws.

With 2 minutes to go it looked as if Cass City was going to spring a major upset.

The Red Raider outside shooting, which had been held in check all night, suddenly came to life. Chris Gallagher hit a 2-pointer.

The Hawks missed the front end of a one and one and Brent Wehner hit a 3-pointer. Cass City missed a shot instead of holding the ball as instructed. Gallagher then hit a 3-pointer to tie it.

Cass City held the ball until the final 10 seconds, but was unable to get a decent shot. In the overtime Cass City scored first on a bucket by Perry. Marlette tied it on a bucket by Mark Lefler. Perry put the Hawks in front again with another basket. Gallagher then hit a 3-pointer to put Marlette ahead by a point.

Mark Irrer was called for traveling in a call that Nurnberger said the film showed was in error.

Cass City then fouled and when only the front end of the one-and-one was converted, had one last chance to tie or win. The shot bounced off the rim.

Gallagher led all scorers with 23 points. For Cass City Herringshaw netted 15 and Greg LeValley, 9. Tuckey and Perry scored 8 each. Tuckey also led the team with 8 rebounds. Other scorers for the Hawks were Irrer, 7, and Dadacki, 7. Cass City was exceptional at the free throw line, sinking 18 in a row before the critical misses at the end of the game for a 90 percent average.

Mini-fair set for Sanilac 4-H'ers

Gagetown man hurt in crash

A Gagetown man sought his own treatment for minor injuries following a one-vehicle accident Saturday in Denmark Township.

Thomas M. Halasz, 18, 7110 Huron Line Rd., was driving west on M-46 near Bradford Road when he lost control of his vehicle on the icy roadway, according to Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies, who reported his vehicle left the north side of the road and struck some road markers, then crossed Bradford Road and hit a guard rail.

Halasz was wearing a seat belt at the time of the accident, reports indicate.

CLOSE CHECKING BY the Cass City Red Hawks held Marlette in check for most of the game until crunch time. Applying the pressure to Brent Wehner is Cass City's Greg LeValley.
