A knife wielding incident ered the case in closed sesinvolving 2 students in the Cass City Middle School last week galvanized a group of concerned residents to attend the regular meeting of the school board Monday night.

One of the group, John Maharg, Cass City, said that the group was very concerned that a small group of 12 and 13-year-old boys were intimidating students and teachers. Maharg cited a dance that was cancelled because of the fear of trouble. Supt. Ken Micklash said that as far as he knew, the knife incident was the first in the history of the school. That will not be tolerated, he said, and the case against the boy using the knife (see related story) has been turned over to the Juvenile Division of the Tuscola County Prosecutor's office for action.

The trouble is caused by a group of about 5 middle school and 4 freshmen students who dress alike and have similar haircuts. Cass City Policeman Craig Haynes said that not all of the boys who dress alike were involved in causing the trouble for school authorities and Cass City mer-

ENDORSE PROPOSITION A

The board officially endorsed Proposition A that calls for a 2-cent increase in the state sales tax and a reduction in the property tax.

At the same time, it approved several capital improvement plans contingent on the extra money available to the district under the plan. One of the plans was approved with the Proposition A money or, if it fails, by an added one-mill tax, if approved by local residents. > Student uses knife in fight

A Cass City Middle School student threatened another student with a small pocket knife during a scuffle last week.

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson said the fight occurred at about 8:30 a.m. Thursday in the middle school gymnasium and involved a pair of juvenile males. One of the boys pulled a small pocket knife and made a swipe at the other student, Wilson said, adding he then put the knife away and was struck several times by the other boy.

Coming home never meant so much to Veron and Lenora Gingrich.

A fast food hamburger never tasted so good, a trip to the grocery store was never such a treat, and a feeling of contentment and thankfulness was never so real.

The Gingriches returned to their Cass City residence

April 28 after spending a year in Togo, West Africa, where they served as short term missionaries through the Association of Baptists for World Evangelism organization.

The pair swapped jobs and houses with another area husband and wife, Dave and Janet Moody, who took a Unity and perseverance were the battle cries Monday night at the Tuscola County Intermediate School District complex in Caro. Teachers from throughout the Thumb gathered to support 80 Tuscola ISD professional staff members who have been without a contract since their previous 3-year pact expired Aug. 31.

Among those addressing the crowd was Michigan Education Association President Julius Maddox, who joined the teachers in an informational picket along Cleaver Road prior to the 7:30 p.m. Tuscola ISD School Board meeting.

Among those picketing were representatives of the able explanation for stealing a newspaper, the manufacturers' coupons, maybe?

My main interest in the Sunday paper is the 3 super crossword puzzles in it. Maybe the thief is a crossword puzzle buff.

It's hard for honest people to understand someone taking other people's property, whether it's a newspaper or something more valuable. Probably very few steal out of need. I think it's more the lack of a basic sense of right and wrong or respect for others. Most of us, fortunately, learned these values as children and wouldn't dream of taking something that doesn't belong to us.

Of course, there are less blatant, more subtle ways of stealing that may seem a bit less black and white.

For instance, if a store clerk undercharges you or inadvertently gives you change for a twenty when you gave her a ten, do you tell her? If you don't, aren't you taking something that's not yours? Here's an even touchier subject. If you goof off when your employer's paying you to work, aren't you stealing from him just as surely as if you embezzled funds or took company property home from work

Residents of Pentwater, where Robert moved after leaving the Owen-Gage School District, are recruiting people to have their blood tested for a possible match. A bone marrow testing day will be held in Pentwater May 30.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE - WEDNESDAY, MAY 19, 1993

It's been a year of "firsts" for Brazilian Daniele Pimenta

Daniele Pimenta has experienced a number of "firsts" since she moved in with Les and Barb Karr of Cass City last summer.

The friendly teen has enjoyed a first-hand look at rural, small town life, had her first taste of winter and even built her first snowman. She's taken her first trips to Mackinac Island and Chicago, and she loved her first visit to Disney World and Universal Studios in Orlando, Fla.

It's been a full year for the 17-year-old Brazilian, who says her time here through the Pacific Intercultural Exchange program has been everything she expected.

"I started out a few years ago to learn English and I really liked it. I wanted to see how people live in another country and see the difference," she recently remarked.

The exchange student arrived in Cass City last August and immediately discovered the true meaning of the phrase "small town," at least compared to her home, Belo Horizonte, a city of some 7 million people. But the cold has bothered her more than size difference.

"I like it. It's safe," she said. "You can go out and you don't have to worry about people coming and stealing your things.' People in the community seem very close, she added. Although Pimenta has a good command of English, she confided language was a bit of a problem at first.

"When I first came, I understood nothing. Like, people would talk for one hour and I would understand 5 minutes," she recalled.

During her stay, Pimenta has attended Cass City High School, where she'll graduate this spring.

NO CHOICES

The teen indicated she enjoyed the opportunity to pick her own classes. In Brazil, she explained, there are no choices. All students must take chemistry, physics, biology, Portuguese, English, history, math and geography. The school day is also different in Brazil, where students attend 5, 50-minute classes each day and attend from 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. or 1 to 6 p.m. There is no lunch hour because the noon meal is an important tradition and evervone goes home to eat with their families, Pimenta said. She noted people who work are given up to 2 hours off for lunch.

"We always eat rice and beans, and vegetables, and we have one kind of meat, chicken or beef or pork." Pimenta said she never tires of the menu. She giggled and added, "We just love it. We'd die if we didn't have rice and beans for lunch."

She said a typical breakfast in Brazil is composed of bread and tea, coffee or milk, while the evening meal usually is more of snack and may include soup or a fruit salad.

Food prices in Brazil are cheap compared to the United States, according to Pimenta. On the other hand, she pointed out, electronics and other items are cheaper here. A pair of Nike shoes costs $100 to $150 in Brazil, but a good pair of leather shoes only costs $10 or $15, she said.

SAME EVERYWHERE

Like many other exchange students visiting Cass City before her, Pimenta indicated young people seem to be about the same everywhere. In Brazil, teens spend a lot of time together, she said. However, she added, unlike American high school students, few Brazilian teens work or drive before graduating.

With her high school career nearly completed, Pimenta is looking forward to continuing her education. But she pointed out the road to college in her native home is paved with a difficult entrance exam.

Students study for up to a year for the comprehensive test, which covers all subjects and takes 3 days (3 to 4 hours per day) to complete. "It's very hard. There is a lot of competition," she continued, "but if you pass, the government pays for your education. You just have to pay for your books. food and transportation." If all goes well, Pimenta plans to attend medical school and pursue a career as a pediatrician.

In the meantime, she'll continue to soak up American culture until her year concludes in June. When she leaves, she'll take with her a newfound independence. Being an exchange student teaches you to do things that you might not have tried otherwise, she explained, adding it's an experience she would recommend to any young person.

choose carefully, however, says Oran Hesterman, Michigan State University Extension agronomist.

He and Jeff Andresen, MSU Extension agricultural meteorologist, developed a set of tables that growers can use when considering switching to a mid- or shortseason corn hybrid. The information is available at MSU county extension offices

"The tables were developed from 30 years of statistics (through 1991) on the expected `normal' growing degree-day (GDD) accumulation in 20 locations in the state," Hesterman says. "They are based on 5 hypothetical planting dates starting with April 20 and continuing at 10-day increments through June 1."

Growers can use the tables and planting date increments to calculate the odds of probable GDD accumulation before the first killing frost in their region.

"These tables can help growers decide when they need to switch to an earlier maturing hybrid and, if so, what characteristics of maturity they should be looking for when they make that switch," Hesterman says.

The decision to switch should be based on the corn hybrid's needed GDD rating to reach maturity. A seed depend on air temperature full-season hybrids should patterns throughout the growing season.

The designation (in days) used to signify expected corn hybrid maturity may not reflect the actual number of it will take that hybrid to reach maturity.

For example, a 95-day hybrid may not actually mature in 95 days. However, under similar climatic conditions and cultural practices - - planting date, soil type, tillage, fertility, etc. -a 95-day hybrid should mature 10 days earlier than a 105-day hybrid planted at the same location. Hesterman and Andresen rth say that the decision to switch to shorter-day corn hybrids as planting is delayed should depend on: - - The extent of delay in planting.

- - The grower's location. - - The availability of seed. - The grower's assessment of the odds that the crop will mature before frost.

- - The grower's desired or anticipated harvest schedule. Hesterman says that growers can spread their risk by planting a mixture of full-. medium- and short-season hybrids. "When that is done, the, grower should always plant the full-season hybrid first, followed by the midseason

EXERCISES TO KEEP YOUR BACK STRONG

Posture and proper lifting are things we don't think about much until it is too late. We develop poor work habits, improper posture when sitting and standing and we get overweight.

These things put a strain on our backs, and sooner or later, the back begins to ache. Here are a number of things to do to keep your back healthy and to help the pain go away.

1) The "pelvic tilt" exercise strengthens the pelvic and stomach muscles by drawing the stomach in and tilting the hips forward.

2) Knee-chest exercises are done by lying on your back and drawing a knee up towards your chest and holding it 3-5 seconds, alternating the knees.

3) Partial situps--just bringing your head and shoulders off the floor several inches strengthens the abdominal muscles. 4) Sleep on a firm mattress and put a pillow under your knees if you lie on your back, or between your knees if you lie on your side. 5) If you are standing for long periods, you should put one foot on a stool or ledge, or bend both knees intermittently.

6) Sit in firm straight-backed chairs and keep the knees level with the hips or slightly higher than the hips. When lifting, bend at the knees keeping the back straight. You should be careful not to twist while lifting, which is often what brings on an acute back strain. If you would like more information about back pain, posture problems, or good back maintenance, please feel free to contact Harmond Dillard, physical therapist, at the Hills and Dales physical therapy department, 872-2121, Ext. 251. Landeryou said the new track will be paid for through the sale of schoolowned property in the Hurford subdivision. He explained several lots have been sold over the years and those funds, well over $50,000 to date, have been earmarked for the track.

And there are several lots still available for sale, Landeryou said. "We're thinking when it's all said and done, the track will have paid for itself.'

Airport authority moves ahead; board organizes

The newly-formed Tuscola Area Airport Authority is expected to become the new owner of the Caro Municipal Airport, soon to be called the Tuscola Area Airport, within the next 6 months.

Transfer of ownership of the 240-acre facility from the village of Caro was among the issues discussed during an organizational meeting of the authority's board of directors, held last Wednesday at the Tuscola County Annex Building in Caro.

The board also adopted articles of incorporation, elected officers and outlined other preliminary steps to be taken.

Cass City Village President L.E. Althaver was elected chairman of the board. Caro Village President Wes Frederick, meanwhile, will serve as vice chairman, Almer Township Supervisor Gary Parsell was named secretary, and Roger Marshall, representing Elkland Township, was elected treasurer.

Also serving as officers of the board are Caro Village Manager W. Donald Duggar, Greg Biddinger (representing Cass City), and Kingston Village Trustee Floyd J. Heron.

Althaver reviewed the steps taken so far to create the authority, noting the goal behind the effort is to upgrade the airport in hopes of better serving existing industry in the county as well as attracting new business.

The village of Caro, which has operated the facility since the beginning, has done a good job, he said. However, he added, it's time to move ahead, and one municipality shouldn't be expected to bear that burden alone, especially when industry throughout the county is benefitting from the airport.

FUNDING

The authority will be eligible to apply for state and federal funding that will pay for 95 percent of improvements to the facility.

"That's tremendous leverage and it's pretty well guaranteed because there are billions of dollars in the (federal) Airport Trust Fund," Althaver continued. He said well-thought-out projects are funded on a regular basis, with the monies coming from a portion of sales of aviation fuel and commercial tickets. "The opportunity to expand the airport is very great." Before that can happen, however, the authority will however, the authority will have to spend $30,000 to $50,000 for a new airport master plan, according to Duggar, who said the expense, like future improvements, is eligible for grant funding. Duggar stated the latest master plan was drafted in 1982. Among the needs outlined then were extension of the main runway, from 3,000 to 3,800 feet, which has been completed, he said.

Other priority projects outlined but not completed are replacement of low intensity runway lights with medium intensity lights, construction of parallel taxiways, a new terminal building, and a new, 5,000-foot crosswind runway with a taxiway that would eventually become the airport's main runway. Duggar suggested many of these improvements will probably be adopted as priorities by the authority

OPERATIONS

Also during the meeting, Duggar familiarized board members with airport operations and the facility's annual budget. He noted the village of Caro contributed $25,000 this year, with a projected $32,000 subsidy needed in 1993-94.

That subsidy will now be spread across the authority membership, with each participant contributing funds based on their respective unit's state equalized valuation.

Initially, a break-down of those numbers set Caro's share at $7,178, followed by Cass City, $5,881; Indianfields Township, $4,699; City of Vassar, $4,572; Almer Township, $4,476; Elkland Township, $2,726, and Kingston, $468.

However, Indianfields and Vassar have declined to join the authority to-date, leaving a $9,271 shortfall, which Duggar indicated Caro will pick up.

The county also is expected to contribute some funding, although an amount has not been set. Althaver said county commissioners are supportive of the authority, but feel taking on full-fledged membership would be too great a financial burden at this time.

It's hoped the authority will pick up more support in time, remarked Althaver, who added other local units of government are welcome to join the effort at anytime. The 90-minute organizational meeting concluded with designation of regular meeting dates. Authority board members agreed on the second Wednesday of the month at 7 p.m. The meetings, to be held in the Caro Village Council chambers, are open to the public.

Public support of vets important

Memorial Day has long been a time to pay respect to the men and women who have served our country. This Memorial Day, Deford resident Dave Skiles will join the time-honored tradition of honoring America's veterans. Skiles said he will probably join those who honor our veterans by attending the town parade and services at the cemetery. He thinks such public show of support is important. "I've always had a lot of respect for veterans, but I don't think they get enough recognition in this country," he said. This 19-year-old also plans to give the veterans some of his thinking time.

"I'll take some time out to think about it like I usually do," he said.

Skiles said he has about 10 family members that are veterans. His thought and recognition for what these people have done for our country is something he does even when it is not Memorial Day.

Even if family members had not served, he said, he would still show his support.

"Any person willing to go over and risk their life for our country, regardless of what they do, if they have any part in protecting what America stands for, then I give them my support," he said.

Skiles is employed by Cass City Auto Shine.

Elkland Township okays $83,000 for road work

Elkland Township officials last week accepted road commission estimates for nearly $83,000 worth of road improvements.

Among the projects are resurfacing just over 2 miles of Schwegler Road, from Milligan Road to Reed Road and from Daus Road to Bay City-Forestville Road, Township Clerk Norma Wallace reported.

The township's cost for each project is estimated at $9,800, she said.

Another $63,300 will be spent on the following projects: ditching along a mile of during the Township

Huron Line Road, .2 of a mile east of Koepfgen Road; widening of the shoulder and culvert along Koepfgen Road, north of Wilsie Road;

Schwegler Road south of M-81; and gravel placed on portions of other roads, including Crawford, Voss. Wilsie and Grassmere. Also planned is graveling a little over a half-mile of Wilsie Road, from Koepfgen Road west. Cost of that project is to be negotiated, Wallace said. Turning to other matters

Board's May 10 monthly meeting, Wallace was authorized to advertise for the position of township zoning administrator.

graveling .3 of mile of The township's current zoning administrator, Anton Peters, is planning to resign. The position has paid $500 annually, but that figure will probably be increased because the job is more involved today than in the past. Wallace said, adding the zoning administrator's duties include enforcement of the township's junk ordinance as well as issuing zoning permits.

In other business, the board:

 Approved spending $1,300 for a voter registration computer program that will help Wallace keep tabs on and update the township's more than 2,000 registered voters.

Veron explained theft is a big problem. There are some who steal from one another as well as from Americans if they can get away with it, he said. "You had to be very alert." Aside from protecting the residence, the Gingriches' guard served as a guide and spokesman, and used his skills as a bargainer for them in the marketplace. His wife helped around the house. "They were very attentive to us," Veron said. "They helped us out immensely.'

In time, the Gingriches began to fit into life in Togo. 'We enjoyed it after we got settled in and got a routine built up," he said. "Everything fell into place."

The van, driven by David F. Chappel, 33, of Lennon, Mich., flipped onto its side in a ditch after impact.

Deputies said 3 othe southbound vehicles ran oft the road to avoid hitting Everts. Chappel also attempted to leave the roadway but was unable to avoid impact.

Everts, who was not wearing a seat belt, was transported by FlightCare Helicopter to St. Mary's Medical Center, Saginaw, where she died later.

Deputies are continuing their investigation of the accident.
