it comes to gang-related problems miles away from Detroit, Flint, Saginaw and other large cities, according to a survey conducted in March by the Prosecuting Attorneys Association of Michigan.

In the survey, released last week, law enforcement agencies report at least 300 youth gangs in more than half of the state's 83 counties, from southern lower Michigan to the Upper Pen-

Membership ranges from a half dozen to hundreds, and gang activity from painting graffiti to drive-by shootings. Tuscola County is among the counties listed, with the types of activities present including graffiti, vandalism, assault, and breaking and entering.

The survey also reports a drive-by shooting in the county, however, Sheriff Tom Kern and First Lt. Doug Lautner, commander of the Michigan State Police post in Caro, say they aren't aware of any such incident taking place.

The survey confirms gang problems are not just a big city problem anymore, although the severity and frequency of youth crimes here pale in comparison to large urban areas.

In Tuscola County, Cass City and Reese appear to be ing problems with apparent try to make their presence gang activities, according to Kern, who believes a majority of youths making trouble are "wanna-bes" influenced by what they hear and read about gangs in other areas.

"We have had a problem with one kid (in a trailer park west of Reese) trying to get kids from Reese involved." Kern said. He noted the activities there have been limited primarily to graffiti.

NOTHING SERIOUS

"Nothing real serious at this point," he added, "but it has been making people sit up and take notice and keep their eye on things.'

In Cass City, the latest gang-type incident took place late last month in the village park, where youths painted graffiti on the walls and set a fire in a sink in the men's room at the village

According to Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson, the term 'gang' is being used locally to describe a loose group of youths involved in various crimes. The problems began more than a year ago, when a handful of teens, dressed alike in gang garb, began to hang around storefronts in town.

Complaints from business owners prompted a crackdown on loitering, and the youths seemingly disappeared from Main Street.

SIGN OF THE times? Gang-related graffiti and incidents involving vandalism and other crimes have been on the rise in Cass City since signs of gang activity began to appear more than a year ago. Above, a vacant building in the village bears the mark of a Saginaw-based gang.

Weather cooperates, new events draw large crowd to Festival

The weather provided a happy medium for Cass City's 16th annual July 4 Festival weekend activities Thursday through Saturday.

Although small bursts of rain put a slight damper on the Friday events, for the most part the weekend stayed dry and gave Cass City the opportunity to host another enjoyable celebration of Independence Day.

"I don't think you're going to get 3 days together in Michigan any better than that," said Della Poirier, who helped organize the weekend-long activities at Northwood Shores Golf Course and Restaurant.

Festival Co-chairman Jim Ceranski was especially thankful that the village was able to avoid rain during Saturday's activities, which raise the majority of the money which allows the festival to return every year.

Festival-goers could enjoy the activities from the midmorning parade to the latenight fireworks without being concerned about overwhelming heat, Ceranski remarked. "The absence of heat helped everybody," he explained. "It didn't sap us of our energy.'

Most of the crowd on Main Street termed the expanded 10:30 parade Saturday a success. With the addition of the Northern Aurora Drum and Bugle Corps of Saginaw, the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps and the Tittabawassee Fife and Drum Corps, the parade was stronger and more impressive, said Festival Coordinator Jane

The float winners were showcased during the parade. Tendercare, for the 2nd consecutive year, won the President's Award. Cass

City First Baptist Church was awarded the Harry Crandell Memorial Award, Trinity United Methodist was honored with the Belle Schwaderer Memorial Award and Hills and Dales General Hospital was granted the Meredith Auten Memorial Award.

Saturday ended as brightly as it began, added Hittler, because the fireworks show was bigger and better. Festival Co-chairman Alan Sward approached several area businesses and corporations Saturday in an effort to expand the fireworks display. The collections sparked an additional finale.

The cool temperatures especially helped the day-long sports activity Saturday. The 3-on-3 Fire in the Sky Tournament entertained the crowd throughout the day, according to event organizer Matt Prieskorn. And, new events also were successful.

The Poker Walk sponsored by the Michigan Athletic and Rehabilitation Center will continue and grow due to its positive reception from the crowd, said event Chairwoman Jan Daniel.

More than 40 kids squealed with delight during the return of the greased pig contest Saturday afternoon, which awarded Matt Little a $10 prize in the 8-10-yearolds category. Casey Spencer received the same prize in the 11 and 12-year-olds division after a messy fight with the pig, which was covered with Crisco oil.

But, the Little Miss Pageant Thursday put the first kick of success into the weekend with its country/ western theme in the Cass

City High School cafeteria. The 6th annual event crowned three age categoranked their on-stage talent and personality performances. In the Tiny Miss division (pre-school through kindergarten) Sarah Overdier received the grand bouquet. The Little Miss (first-through third-graders) category awarded Candi Rhodes top honors after her stunning performances and in the finale of the Junior Miss (fourth-through sixthgraders) competition, Nicole Doerr captured the first place crown.

Meanwhile, 2 runners-up also were named for each division. Choosing among Tiny Miss pageanteers was difficult for the judges. A tie breaking vote was cast, leaving Kelcie Sweeney the 2nd Karr in the third place runner-up position. In the Little Miss category Adrienne Warju impressed the judges for a 2nd place runner-up trophy and Jessica Caister took the slot directly behind her. For the Junior Miss division, Sarah Taylor stepped into place as the older division's 2nd place runnerup and Danielle Guilds cause of the high caliber danced into the 3rd place winning spot.

Prosecutor drops charges against David Moore

The last in a series of breaking and entering and larceny charges filed against a Cass City man have been dismissed in Tuscola County Circuit Court.

David H. Moore, 28, Cass City, had been scheduled to go to trial next month in connection with the Jan. 12 break-in of a residence at 4897 Northwood Circle, Cass City.

Moore was accused of breaking into the home and stealing money, guns, a VCR, television and camera. According to court records, the charges were dropped because a co-defendant's testimony did not prove

6-year old hit by car, avoids serious injury

A 6-year-old Cass City boy was struck by a car after the annual July 4 Festival fireworks display in the village Saturday night.

The boy, Kyle C. Sieradzki, 6204 Cedar Dr., was transported by Cass City-Mercy Ambulance to Hills and Dales General Hospital, where he was treated and released following the 10:37 p.m. accident.

Cass City police reported the youth darted out in front of an eastbound car, driven by Matthew A. Shay, 19, of Caro, on Church Street near Ale Street. The boy apparently was watching another pedestrian and didn't see the vehicle, reports state.

For 75 years or more a printer could walk into any print shop and the machines in use would be familiar, regardless of whether it printed the New York Times or the Cass City Chronicle.

Naturally, a big paper had bigger, faster presses and more gadgets on the typesetters of the time, but basically the process was the same as when my grandfather ran the Boyne Citizen in Boyne

About 30 years ago that changed as the process called offset started filtering into print shops. It trickled into the business and now is a computer-aided flood that changes almost monthly. We have obsolete typesetting machines that become that way in less than 10 years. Before the revolution, typesetters were used for 40 years or more because the technology never varied. Experts in the field are making widely different predictions on what's ahead in the business. No one knows except that the changes will be significant and perhaps as revolutionary as the one generated when computers became industry workhorses.

We should live longer and more comfortably with the advances in science that have become commonplace.

All of these advances flashed by as I read a metro paper last week. Two stories that captured my attention made me think of the arenas I visited in Rome where the Christians were slaughtered by the lions and the gladia-

The stories concerned the request of Donald Evans, sentenced to death for murdering and raping a 10-yearold girl, and a suspect in 60 other murders, who was willing to plead guilty if his execution could appear on television.

The second concerned papers that indicated the United States Energy Department had experimented with radiation on 1,200 persons without their knowledge or consent.

You could say that Evans was a kook and his antics are not indicative of where we are today.

That may be true, too. What is also true is that if Evans succeeded in getting on the Phil Donahue show, his TV ratings would skyrocket to an all time high.

We don't know if the viewers would stand up and cheer like the spectators did when the lions chewed the Christians, but there would be thousands who would be glued to the TV and later announce with satisfaction that the rapist-murderer got exactly what he deserved.

That's different than what happened in the arenas 2,000 years ago but it's only a matter of degree. It still shows that we have not lost our voracious appetite for watching gory spectacles, and basically people haven't changed much since the dawn of Christianity.

When I was a young boy, around 55 years ago, my barber was continually asking me what I learned in school that day. Because I spent most of my class time hiding behind larger students so the teacher couldn't see me and ask me to talk, I couldn't think of an intelligent answer. Besides, I didn't think the barber was really interesting in my schooling.

So I limited my answers to one syllable, mumbled. Or sometimes I pretended I didn't hear him.

My father went to the same barber. One day they talked about me, and Dad came home to say: "The barber says you are a remarkable boy. He says he cut your hair 3 times before he realized you were a deaf mute."

My father was a garrulous man. He was forever giving after-dinner speeches and toastmastering various functions. If he were alive today, he would surely agree when my wife says my quiet demeanor could easily be mistaken for boobish rudeness.

Annual book sale slated at library

An annual book sale sponsored by the Friends of the Library is scheduled for July 13-16 at Rawson Memorial Library in Cass City. Books will be sold during regular library hours.

Used hardcover and paperback books, many in like new condition, will be included in the sale. While some books are library discards, most have been donated.

The sale is a good opportunity to find those "oldies but goodies" that are no longer in print, and an especially large group of children's books have been donated for sale.

Other items offered include videos, talking books, magazines and miscellaneous articles.

The 4-day sale will feature the popular "Buck-A-Bag" sale on Saturday.

Donations of books in good condition will be accepted until the sale begins. Westerns are in high demand.

Along with the book sale, the Friends will have small, miscellaneous items for sale.

Additional information is available by calling the library at 872-2856.

Sr. Citizens' Menu

Senior citizens are asked to make reservations on the day of the meal between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. by calling Berenice Sowden, 872-2397.

Garage Sales give the summer more sizzle for one Cass

Most people don't realize the amount of preparation associated with smoothly running a bargain palace. "A lot of work goes into setting them up," said Audrey Frankowski --- and she knows her garage

Her involvement with garage sales doesn't end there though. The Arkansas native also participates in a huge annual family sale at one of her 3 sons' homes.

Then, when Thursdays roll around, the Frankowskis are themselves on the bargain hunt. The couple usually tries to go to the majority of sales within Cass City, but doesn't like to travel too far outside of town, she added.

So far this season, their bargains have been scarce. Mrs. Frankowski commented that she usually likes to at least pick up an item or 2 at every garage sale, but this year she hasn't accumulated as many treasures along her way. "I just haven't been able to find anything interesting," she plaint. "The worst thing we know has happened, is we took a sawed off shotgun from a group of them a year ago,' Wilson said. "It was never used. They got a hold of a single shot shotgun, sawed off both ends, and were parading around the neighborhood.'

Some adults confiscated the weapon and handed it over to police, the chief noted.

While area law enforcement agencies are taking any form of gang activity seriously, officials say they're also concerned about blowing the incidents out of pro-attention, they want to be heard," Lautner commented. While gang activity is always a concern, he added, "it hasn't been of the violent magnitude we hear about in other areas."

Wilson suggested a number of kids join gangs in order to get the attention they lack at home. Locally, he said, most of kids involved are wanna-bes who are borrowing the names and looks of Saginaw gangs.

Wilson said he doesn't believe the problem will get out of control in the area as long as police continue to come down hard on young violators.

He acknowledged the types of crimes seen here are a far cry from those experienced in more urban areas, but added, "If we ignore it and let it go, it could escalate

With 43 years of experience behind him, the new pastor at Cass City's Salem United Methodist Church is half way to retirement.

Last month, the Rev. Bob Garrett and his wife, Charlene, retired. This month, they popped into town to begin serving their 12th congregation.

After "a lot of begging" from the district superintendent, the parents of 4 agreed to split their week into segments of relaxation at their Port Austin retirement home and of service at another new home, Cass City.

And, they're glad to be in both places at once.

"I don't think we're ready to stop serving people yet," Mrs. Garrett said. Although Mondays, Fridays, and Saturdays, the couple primarily will be enjoying retirement, the reverend stressed, "if there is something going on, I'm going to be there."

Before retirement and Cass City, the couple served in Blissfield. Prior to that, however, the big city natives made their home in Port Austin for 21 years. There, they raised their children while serving at the Port Austin United Protestant Church.

Now, the Garretts are looking forward to both of their new lives. The pastor said he simply wants to try to meet Cass City's needs, as well as rake the yard and mow the lawn at his Port Austin "acre in the woods with 100 Oak trees."

Mrs. Garrett, likewise, is getting acquainted with the

Moore initially was charged in connection with several break-ins in the Cass City and Gagetown areas in early 1993. However, prosecutors failed to convince juries of his guilt. Moore also faced one count of breaking and entering in Huron County, but the charge was dismissed early this year due to insufficient evidence.

In Tuscola County, a 2-day trial last April ended with a verdict of innocent.

The case, which stemmed from the break-in of a home at 6708 Lincoln St. Gagetown, and the larceny of shotguns and a VCR Jan. 23, 1993, was originally tried in September. But the 3-day trial ended with the jury's announcement that it could not reach a verdict.

Other juries found him innocent in the Jan. 13 breakin of a home at 4242 Woodland Ave., Cass City, the March 19 break-in of a Novesta Township residence, and the Dec. 30 theft of property from another Cass City home.

5 face charges in district court

The following people were recently arraigned on felony charges in Tuscola County District Court

•Daniel E. Willette, 44, Millington, faces 2 counts of assault with a dangerous weapon (knife) and a charge of resisting and obstructing a police officer. The charges stem from a July 3 incident in Millington Township, according to court records.

Bond in the case was set at $20,000 and a preliminary examination was scheduled for 9 a.m. July 15.

•Timothy J. Guinther, 19, Caro, was arraigned on charges of unlawfully driving a motor vehicle and conspiracy to unlawfully drive away a motor vehicle June 21 in Caro.

A preliminary exam will be held at 9 a.m. Thursday. Bond was set at $3,000.

•Ronald M. Foster, 22, Caro, is charged with larceny of money from a building Feb. 11 in Caro.

Bond was set at $2,000 and a preliminary exam was slated for Thursday morn-

•Billy J. Baize, 29, Akron, faces one count of delivery and/or possession with intent to deliver less than 50 grams of cocaine. The offense allegedly took place in the spring of 1992, according to court records, which state the charge stems from a Multi-County Citizens Grand Jury indictment.

Baize's bond was set at $2,500. His preliminary exam is scheduled for Thursday morning.

•Dale D. Gilmore Jr., 23, Mayville, was arraigned on a charge of first degree criminal sexual conduct involving a child under the age of 13 years June 16 in Fremont Township.

Bond was set at $25,000 and a preliminary exam was scheduled for Thursday morning.
