Unknown tunnel leads to cost cut in school bids

An unknown tunnel under the former middle school annex and some change in the masonry work has reduced the cost of turning the building into the Early Childhood Center from $256,000 to $239,572.54.

Contracts were finalized for previously selected low bidders at a special board meet-

McIntosh a winner Incumbents upset in 2 village elections

Incumbent village council trustees were upset in 2 area villages Monday.

In Cass City, voters elected challenger Dale J. McIntosh to one of 3 available 4-year trustee seats. McIntosh, who ran as a Democrat, received 105 votes, while incumbent Republicans K. Michael Weaver and Leslie Karr garnered 91 votes and 90 votes, respectively.

Incumbent trustee Elwyn Helwig, also a Republican, lost his bid for reelection, receiving 54 votes. Winning 2-year terms were Village President L.E. Althaver (100 votes), Clerk-Treasurer Joyce A. LaRoche (113 votes for each office) and Assessor Dan Erla (108 votes). All 3 officials were unopposed. LaRoche reported a total of 143 residents cast ballots, or

Cass City Chamber hires Kay Warner

The Cass City Chamber of Commerce Board has hired the services of Kay Warner, D.B.A. Diversified Services, to handle the administration of the Chamber.

Board officials say the paid position is one in a series of actions that will allow the Chamber to move forward in its continued growth.

"The last couple of years have been very productive years for us," Warner stated. "We moved into our space at the municipal building, completed the large task of designing and getting new Cass City brochures completed, and have overall become a more active and productive Chamber."

Plans for the future include a Chamber Directory, a Web overseeing special area propage, more referrals of motions, including "Summer Chamber members, and Friends plan art show Benefit set for Marge Johnson

Art has been a big part of Marge Johnson's life for as long as she can remember, and nothing, not even cancer, has soured her enthusiasm as In fact, Johnson, 61, says has deepened her love of art. A group of Johnson's friends plan to celebrate that love by sponsoring an art show and benefit for the lifelong Cass City resident and artist.

The art show is scheduled for March 23-28 at Rawson

MARGE Johnson's battle against cancer hasn't dampened her enthusiasm for art.

Memorial Library in Cass City. An artist reception will be held Wednesday, March 25, from 6 to 9 p.m. During the reception, one of Johnson's paintings, entitled "The White Peacock," will be given away through a raffle.

The art show will feature a variety of Johnson's artwork, including portraits, landscapes and other subjects in charcoal and oils, and china painting.

Johnson's fight with cancer began last July. She underwent surgery in August, and just recently completed chemotherapy treatments. Next will be a series of hormone therapy treatments that will continue for 5 years.

Johnson said the cancer made an existing health condition - chronic disabling asthma — even worse by weakening her immune system.

Johnson was diagnosed with chronic disabling asthma about 6 years ago. The condition flared up over the weekend, resulting in her hospitalization Monday.

Because of the asthma, Johnson seldom ventures outside her Seeger Street home. She has been unable to work, but still finds a great deal of satisfaction in front of an easel. "It does bring me peace and joy. I try to keep my spirits up, and this helps," she said. "It's just a part of me.

"I've always loved to do this. Ever since grade school, when I got my homework done, I was always drawing," she added. "I put everything into the context of, that would make a good painting. It just makes me feel peaceful whenever I'm doing something with art. It settles me down."

A former beauty shop owner, Johnson has taught art in adult education classes in Cass City. She has also taught classes in Bad Axe and Caro.

She isn't teaching anymore. Instead, the self-taught artist is using her time to explore different aspects of art. "Just since Christmas, I've been doing quite a few charcoal (drawings) of Indians," she said, adding she has used original photographs of Geronimo, Chief Joseph and other American Indians to create her portraits.

"I like oils the best, but I'm finding I'm having a very good time with charcoal."

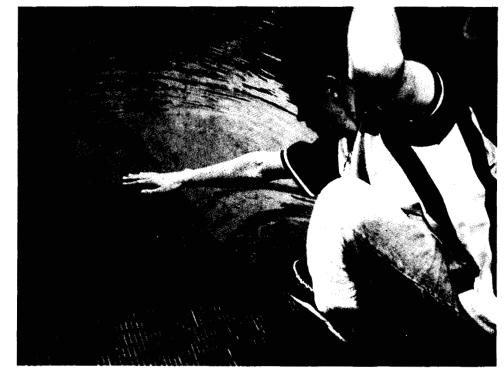

Johnson said she believes her talent as an artist, along with what she described as a strong faith in God, have increased since she began her battle with breast cancer.

"It makes me feel like there's a real purpose here," she concluded. "I'm just so glad to be alive."

THIS PAINTING, entitled "The White Peacock," will be raffled off in conjunction with an art show and benefit for lifelong Cass City resident and artist Marjorie Johnson.

Role reversal between parent and child is a subtle thing. It's hard to pinpoint just when it takes place.

When does the child you taught to tie her shoelaces and ride a bike start worrying about your health and safety?

For most of us, it happens overnight. One day you're instructing them to be careful crossing the street and not to open the door to strangers, and the next they're telling you how to drive and worrying when you don't answer the phone.

Whether from concern for her doddering parents or just as a thoughtful gesture, our daughter gave us a delightful and invaluable book as we embarked on our February adventure down I-75 to Florida

Author Dave Hunt obviously knows the route well, and "Along The Interstate 75" is a unique driving guide for those of us less familiar with it.

The 25-mile-per-page strip maps list the speed limits, warn of speed traps and give "escape routes" in case of traffic jams. They also tell you which lanes to stay in at heavy traffic areas where you could easily become confused

Every gas station, rest area, restaurant and lodging facility along I-75 is listed, as well as interesting side trips available within a few miles of the expressway.

We opted to sample something other than the old familiar chains on our trip. The motels we chose were not elegant, but comfortable and adequate for an overnight

The Dinner Bell Restaurant and Country Store in Lenoir City, Tenn., wasn't listed in the book, but offered a tasty, inexpensive buffet and a glimpse of local atmosphere.

worth something extra. That way caring for a new camp would be no problem and no heavy burden on anyone. And the people who use it would be the people paying for it. If the tax base were spread, then thinking about that new enclosed skating and activities building in the future would not be merely fantasy. Until then it's better to forget about adding to what we have and be sure that what we have is well taken care of.

The back forty by Roger Pond © 1997 Roger Pond like Eddie the Eagle and the

I guess I missed the Winter Olympics this year. Each time I turned on the Winter Games some news guy would interrupt to show California falling into the ocean, again.

Did they have a luge at the Games in Nagano? That's my favorite event, the luge, where they strap a person in a tub and send him down the mountainside feet-first. It reminds me of the things we used to do to my little brother, before he got bigger than the rest of us. (Readers will notice lugers are generally not very large.)

The closest thing I saw to a luge this year was that Italian guy heading for the net after falling down on the ski slope. He was making great time, but he'd do a lot better if he'd take off the skis and get in the tub like everybody else.

I missed the Jamaican bobsledders, too. Did they make it to Japan?

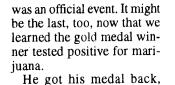

The last time I saw the Jamaican team was in New York or Calgary, or wherever they had the Games that year. The Jamaicans were pulling their sled up the hill mumbling, "We've just got to put some skids on this thing!"

How about Eddie the Eagle? He must have retired by now. Readers will recall Eddie was the famed skijumper from Great Britain. Eddie was famous for his unorthodox style. He would go sailing off the ski jump and land flat on his back, head over heels, elbows over tea-kettle — whichever was more convenient.

The last time I saw Eddie he was lying on the slope with a broken arm. When the medical team rushed over, Eddie said in his best British accent, I believe I may have damaged myself." Some folks thought Eddie was a lousy ski-jumper, but I think it went deeper than that. I believe he just didn't give a darn.

This year's Olympics was the first time snow-boarding though. The committee decided he didn't smoke the dope. He just inhaled someone's smoke.

The last time I heard that story, it was the other way around. Those marijuana folks seem to work together: Some of them smoke but don't inhale, and the others inhale but don't smoke.

Maybe I'm just getting older, but I think the Winter Olympics have lost some of their pizzazz. Competitors Jamaican bobsledders added an amateur touch to the Winter Games. I like to watch guys who learned to ski by sliding off the barn roof — or practiced the luge with their dad's grain shovel. We need some amateurs who think a shoe contract guarantees them a new pair every year.

The next Winter Games is in Salt Lake City, and the Olympic Committee has 4 years to find some real amateurs. They'd better not be smokers or inhalers, though. The folks around Salt Lake aren't going to swallow a story like that.

The class found the idea simple and to the point, but administrators thought otherwise. Colleen Cartwright originally proposed the idea to Kuntz a few months earlier. The class had no idea that they had raised such a controversy.

Throughout the 2 weeks that the idea was out in the public, many things happened. During the first week, Feb. 25, there were 4 letters written to the editor at the Chronicle. The letters were all in support of the class and thought their idea was a good one.

During the next week, March 4, the local television station was contacted by an unknown source. The WNEM TV5 camera crew Micklash, the rest of the senior class officers gathered with Kuntz to come to an agreement on what should be done. In the end, the class came up with the idea to have a song, a moment of silence, and possibly a short poem read during the ceremony. Tom Fulcher was chosen and agreed to sing a song. He was undecided on the song at the time of publishing. One of the student speakers during the ceremony will have the chance to read a poem of their choice.

Right now caring for the park requires major money. Budgeted this year for park and pool maintenance is nearly $200,000.

> It's major money for our tax base. With less than 2,500 persons in town that figures to be more than $80 per year for every man, woman and child in Cass City.

There are economic advantages for visitors camping at the park. It's certain that a few tourist dollars would be sprinkled around town. That's a benefit, but keeping retailers solvent is in the best interests of folks that live out of town, too. Over and over again, for instance, I heard complaints about how inconvenient it was not to have a lumber yard in town after Croft-Clara burned and before Self-Serve Lumber Co. filled the gap.

The solution is easy to see, but nearly impossible to come by. Form a recreational district to share the costs. A district with the same boundaries as the Cass City School District would fill the bill nicely.

If it were weighted so that more of the burden fell on folks in town that would be okay. Living in Cass City is GERTIE SAIGEON, 88, turns ordinary tin cans into works of art, including miniature chairs, rockers and cradles. It's a hobby the Decker area woman has enjoyed for some 30 years.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE - WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11, 1998

Gertie Saigeon recycles trash into treasures

One visit to Gertie Saigeon's Decker area home is proof that one woman's junk is another woman's treasure.

When a coffee can is emptied of its contents, most people see just another addition to the recycling bin or refuse can. For some, an empty tin can is an ideal storage container.

But ask Saigeon and chances are good she'll tell you that she sees an intricately fashioned miniature chair, love seat or rocker. Or, perhaps, a miniature grand piano, a baby cradle or kitchen dinette. "If you can imagine it, why, you can make," Saigeon, 88, recently commented in her kitchen as she looked over a host of tiny furniture she has created over the years. Since she picked up the hobby some 30 years ago, Saigeon has saved many a can from the garbage heap. And not just coffee containers. She has fashioned tin and aluminum baked bean cans, juice cans, bandage cans, spice cans — even ham cans — into unique doll house furniture.

"That's what I figured this is recycling," Saigeon said, chuckling. "Some people say they don't think they could make them, but to me, it's my most interesting hobby."

Saigeon's tools are simple; some tin shears, a hammer, needlenose pliers and finishing nails.

She starts with a clean tin can. marks a circle in the center of the lid, then begins making parallel cuts up to the outer edge of the circle, creating thin (about three-sixteenths of an inch) strips, which she uses to fashion legs, arms and the back of a chair or rocker, for example.

"I like them painted, but I have a sister-in-law and she doesn't like them painted because she wants people to see what they're made of," she said.

She recalled an auto accident at the corner of Deckerville Road and M-53 in 1966 that nearly cost her the use of one arm. The bone was crushed and the doctors said she probably wouldn't regain use of the limb, but Saigeon proved them wrong. And she's still going strong. "I don't know if I'll ever quit or not," she continued, adding she always enjoys meeting others who are interested in trying their hand at the hobby.

"It's my favorite, and I would show anybody how to a gift to somebody, well, it's make them."

was begun in 1996 by the Clinton Administration to create public-private partnerships aimed at developing financing for rural home buyers. The new round of funding is to provide $400,000 for home purchases in the counties of Tuscola, Huron, Lapeer and Sanilac. HDC also works with Independent Bank and the FHLB to provide matching funds.

USDA Rural Development anticipates that approximately 10 loans per organization will result from the combined USDA/private financing effort. "Rural Opportunities Inc., and HDC have demonstrated a strong commitment to helping individuals through the sometimes difficult maze of finding home loan financing,' said Donald L. Hawks drop battle at buzzer to Greater Thumb West champs

There was really nothing at stake Friday except pride when the Cass City Red Hawks travelled to Laker High for the final game of the regular season and another in a long series of confrontations between the schools on the basketball court. And that was enough to pack the Laker gym and the

In a game as close as the Laker clash, the results often hinge on a judgement call by the referee. Heath Zawilinski fouled out of the game when he was called for blocking Ryan Schulze. The call could have gone either way.

While the Hawks had 2 good chances to win or tie in regulation, the Laker rally from 7 points behind in the final quarter was made easier because the Hawks' 2 key rebounders, Zawilinski and Craig Emmert, fouled out of the game. When Emmert left at the 2:06 mark, Cass City was in front 49-45. It was a foul-filled game. The Lakers' Joel Maust fouled out with 5 1/2 minutes left to play.

With 41 seconds left, the Lakers had the ball and Cass City was ahead, 50-49. The ball was fed in to 6-7 Shane Schulz and with both Cass City's inside defenders on the bench, he scored an easy hoop from under the basket. Cass City fouled and the Lakers missed the free throw. The Hawks' Ryan Brinkman was fouled but missed the charity toss. Josh Bouverette made one of 2 free throws and the Hawks called time out with 14 seconds left.

Because Emmert and Zawilinski were on the bench, Coach Jeff Hartel decided to go for the 3-point shot to win. Andy Edwards took the shot, but was under severe defensive pressure and when he missed, the Lakers had the hard fought victory

New books at the library

New books at Rawson Memorial Library include:

Music in the Night by V.C. Andrews: For Laura Logan, life on Cape Cod has been exciting and wonderful. She enjoys the sea and time spent with her twin brother, Cary. But then life begins to sour as vicious rumors about the Logans are spread at school. Robert Royce befriends Laura and his helpful attitude lifts the shadows for awhile. But terrible revelations about the Logans' past plunge Laura into agony that is hard to recover from.

Over What Hill? by Effie Leland Wilder: Having become the unofficial "historian" of the FairAcres retirement community in "Out of the Pasture (But Not Over the Hill)", Hattie McNair is busy keeping up with her companions' adventures. Romance is in the air and new faces are added to the FairAcres family. Hattie continues to write the FairAcres Follies that tell of the humorous escapades of the people in this retirement community.

Chancy by Louis L'Amour: Otis Chancy started out with nothing. The young drifter sets out for adventure and comes up against crooked sheriffs, deadly gunmen and renegade Indians. He fights his way along back trails and through wideopen cow towns, learning the bitter rules as he goes along. Finally he becomes settled and the boss of his own outfit. But life has much more in store for him than a quiet life as a rancher.

Now, after 2 years of effort, the "Thumb Innovative Communities" group would like to report the results of their efforts to the Tri-County Community. A meeting will be held at the Franklin Inn in Bad Axe Tuesday, March 17, to report the group's successes. The evening will start at 6 p.m. with a short social hour and dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. The cost for the meeting will be $10 per person to cover the cost of dinner.

Following dinner, there will be a series of short presentations on the overall project, the Thumb Oilseed Producers' Cooperative, the Michigan Alfalfa Processing Project, an aquaculture venture, the small fruit initiative, and the possibilities for establishing a permanent Innovative Farmers site. The Monteis, 1745 Crawford Rd., Deford, recently learned their farm has been certified by the Michigan Historical Commission as a centennial farm.

And like the classic John Deere tractors Ronald restores and collects, the farm is rich in history.

In fact, the land has been owned by the same family for nearly a quarter of a century, according to the couple, who spent some time researching Kay's family history in order to track down ownership of the farm over the years. Kay said her great-greatuncle, John Cooper, was the first member of her family to purchase the farm, back in 1874. The Monteis were not able to find out how many acres Cooper originally bought, or how much he paid.

The farm was passed onto Kay's great-grandfather, James Cooper, in 1880. Kay's grandfather, Ernest Cooper, purchased the farm in 1903, and her parents, E.J. and Lucille, bought the property in 1950. We bought it in 1971,"

Kay noted. "We have farmed some ourselves and we have rented it to other farmers over the years," added Ronald, who said the farmland is currently registered in the Conserva-

Meanwhile, residents wishing to become Associate Members can also sign up for the program by contacting the sheriff's office.

The Associate Membership Program was begun to provide citizens with an opportunity to lend their support to more effective law enforcement and to better help local sheriffs protect the lives and property of citizens. "As the need for building stronger public-private law enforcement partnerships in this country continues to escalate, programs such as this continue to grow in importance," said Kern. "I encourage everyone receiving a membership appeal to consider joining forces with us by becoming an Associate Member. It is a valuable investment in our future."
