Deadline near for candidates to file

Area residents interested in running for a board of education seat have less than 2 weeks to file the necessary paperwork with their local school district.

Nominating petitions and affidavits of identity must by filed by 4 p.m. Monday, April 10, with the secretary of the board in the school district's main office. Petitions may be picked up from the same office.

To be eligible, candidates must be a registered voter in the school district where they are seeking election, be at least 18 years of age, a U.S. citizen, a Michigan resident for at least 30 days, and be a resident of the district for at least 30 days prior to the Monday, June 12, school board election.

Area school board trustees whose terms are expiring this year include Cass City Board of Education Trustees Beverley Auten and David Knight. Both have indicated they intend to seek reelection to 4-year terms.

Voters in the Owen-Gage School District, meanwhile, will elect candidates to a pair of 4-year terms and one 2-year term

The terms of Trustee Jeff Faist and veteran board member Ron Good are expiring. Faist plans to seek reelection, but Good has announced he will step down after 32 years of service on the board. The lone 2-year term represents the remainder of a 4-year term held by former Board President Paul Hunter, who recently resigned.

In the Kingston Community School District, the 4-year terms of Trustees Ben Boyl and Ray Wolak are expiring.

Voters in the Ubly Community Schools will also fill a pair of 4-year terms. Incumbent Donald Koglin plans to seek reelection, while Incumbent Martin Kubacki has indicated he will not be running.

Passing the torch...

CASS CITY Village President L.E. Althaver (right) passed the gavel on to new President Les Karr Monday night, signaling a change in council leadership. Althaver has served the council for 37 years, including 31 years in the president's seat.

The Cass City Village Council Monday revised a pair of ordinances in an effort to eliminate a conflict of interest on the local planning commission and to put an end to partisan village elections.

Althaver said the campaign largels state officials efforts to take away local control in a number of key areas, including zoning, land use and law enforcement. The campaign is proposing an amendment to the Michigan Constitution to require two-thirds vote in both the House and Senate on any bill that would preempt or limit local laws. Still, he said, it's important that local units of government maintain control over local issues. After all, it's that same government that local voters have placed their trust in, and who are in a better position than someone in Lansing to do the job. Also Monday, the council:

Cass City Schools

Judging by the conversation at the regular meeting of the Cass City School Board Monday at the school, there is strong support among the school's teachers for the discipline regulations adopted this year. There is also support among the board members for changes in the policy.

Trustee Danny Haag said his concern was the reduction of grade-point averages for one unexcused absence a semester. The student is also allowed 9 excused days per semester without penalty. Both Haag and Trustee David Knight admitted that they had not read carefully enough the provisions of the current policy before approving it.

Teachers were adamant in support of the policy without change, citing how much the new discipline policy had reduced sharply the number of students absent or tardy this year as compared to the policy in force last year.

Haag said that one of his concerns with the policy is that it has no appeal provisions. If one is adopted, he stressed, I believe that students affected this year should be allowed to have their cases reviewed. In a previous meeting, Haag said that he was against any discipline policy that cost a student a chance for a scholarship. An unexcused absence does not reduce a student's average a full grade, but, as an example, could change an

"Given this composition, there are potential conflicts of interest on the part of both the village president and village manager/zoning administrator," Downing said.

"By this I mean, the village manager, who also serves as the zoning administrator, works with applicants and developers on matters related to planning and zoning and the village council, who will from time to time be required to act upon recommendations of the planning commission."

The council adopted a revised ordinance stating the planning commission shall be comprised of one village council member and 8 other individuals who are appointed by the village president. Best of the best Ubly students headed for nationals

The Ubly Community Schools Chapter of Business Professionals of America (BPA) has earned a reputation for its tireless volunteer work in the community in recent years.

Thanks to a strong showing at the State Conference and Competition earlier this month at the Renaissance Center in Detroit, the student organization has also strengthened its reputation as a competitive power.

Three Ubly students walked away with top honors in their respective competitions at the state conference, held March 17-19, and have earned the right to compete at a national competition to be held in Minneapolis at the end of April.

Senior Candi Gliniecki, daughter of Gary and Donna Gliniecki, placed first in Document Formatting; junior Bobbie Sierzputkowski, daughter of Robert and Annette Sierzputowski, placed first in Extemporaneous Verbal I; and junior Nathan Prill, son of Alex and Theresa Prill, placed third in Extemporaneous Verbal II.

Prill was also elected state parliamentarian by the 300 voting delegates who represented the more than 4,800 students attending the conference.

Another Ubly student, sophomore Ashley Klee, daughter of Dennis and Bonnie Klee, received the Statesman Torch Award. The award recognizes her work as a BPA officer and historian as well as her accomplishments in a number of areas ranging from leadership to volunteer work.

In addition, Ubly alumna Crystal Smalley, now a freshman at Michigan State University and member of that school's BPA organization, has also qualified for the national competition in 4 events.

Deb Osentoski, who along with David Jaroch serves as BPA advisor, said the students' recognition was especially satisfying because they competed against schools of all classes along with tech centers from throughout Michigan.

This isn't the first time Ubly will be represented at nationals - Gliniecki attended last year - but this is by far the BPA chapter's best showing at the state competition, according to Osentoski.

"It was exciting. There were so many people there to meet," Prill commented.

Sierzputowski agreed. "It was exciting," she said, noting the competition is only a small part of the conference. Students network with one another, there's a formal dance and banquet, and it all takes place in a very professional atmosphere, with everyone dressing appropriately, she explained.

For Prill, the experience also included a busy schedule of organizing and running a campaign leading up to his election as a state parliamentarian. The work ranged from ordering supplies to giving speeches to undergoing an interview by state BPA officials.

"It was a lot of hands to shake in 2 hours," said Prill, who will now represent Michigan at the national level. "It's (campaign) very hectic and strenuous, but well worth it.'

Gliniecki, Sierzputowski and Prill said they put little practice time into their respective events, although Sierzputowski and Prill are both active in forensics, which is similar to the BPA competitions.

Cass City is being targeted for some big time publicity. Librarian Barb Hutchinson was contacted last week by the New York Times. The august newspaper was to send a photographer in connection with the Barn Again! program. Saturday's exhibition and Octagon Barn tours were to be photographed for a feature entitled, "Museums on Main Street.'

It reminds me a little of the days in the 1950s when Cass City, as "Christmas Town", was a mecca for newspapers all over Michigan, including the 3 Detroit papers.

The publicity then was much more intense, but as far as I know, never attracted a reporter from the Times.

I marked my 50th consecutive year of attending the Michigan High School Athletic Association basketball state finals last week. It was enjoyable 50 years ago and it remains that way today.

Over the years, the tournament has increased in fan attendance and popularity and the talent of the athletes increased exponentially.

In the early days, one admission was good for all 4 games. Today it takes 3 admissions to see the finals. It's still a huge bargain. Entertainment for a full day and evening for a total cost of $15.

Incidentally, Michigan State fans can rejoice. Marcus Taylor, who is signed to attend State, was everything he was billed to be. He took charge in Lansing Waverly's drive to the Class A state championship, earning comparison to the "Magic" Johnson days at MSU

"Trippers" in the FranDor shopping center in Lansing, is a typical sports bar. It's loaded with a dozen or more television screens and also has a half dozen pool tables.

At noon, when our group attended, it was at capacity. We used it for soup and sandwiches. The food is tasty if you want hamburgers, fries, steak, etc. It is upper moderately priced. The cost was shared among all of us. I paid $12 for a huge burger, fries, soup and a glass of beer.

While it was busy when we attended between high school games, it was nothing compared to the crowd when MSU was on the tube. A Detroit paper reported that customers were sitting on the floor while the game was in progress.

The sport of fishing gets more complicated each year. Times have changed since the day I walked into the hardware store to buy my first fly rod.

I was earning 50 cents a week in those days, and Dad agreed to pay me several weeks in advance to put me in the market for a fishing outfit. I hiked down to the hardware store after school and selected an 8-foot fly rod with an automatic reel made by South Bend. Then, I bought some E-level line and a bunch of flies with beads on their heads.

There's no question that was the most miserable set of fishing equipment a kid has ever assembled. The line was much too light for the rod and those automatic reels were just like a runaway window blind.

I kept the reel wound as tight as I could get it — and each time I hit the retrieve lever that reel would guzzle line like an anteater eating spaghetti.

My rod cost $10, and the reel was about the same, bringing the total outfit to around $20. Looking back I can see the rod and reel cost me almost a year's salary --about the same as fishing costs me today.

I caught fish on that rod, though, and the reel would bring them in, too. One squeeze on that retrieve button, and I had a fish with a rod tip half way to his belly button.

Those were the days before everyone had a bunch of fancy equipment. We just grabbed a pole and a few worms and rode our bikes down to the fishing hole.

Nowadays folks spend 2 days gathering up equipment and drive 300 miles looking for a place to fish and a dock big enough to unload a 20foot boat. Then we zip around the lake wondering where the fish are.

I can't speak for others, but I've learned a curious thing about fishing. I've noticed the more equipment I get the philosophy of an old Swedfewer fish I catch.

e 2000 Roger Pond

The back forty

by Roger Pond

I thought this was a coincidence at first; the fishing probably isn't what it used to be. Maybe I'm fishing in the wrong places.

The fact remains, though; the more I get, the less I catch.

Cass City High School Close Up Students will be getting up close and personal with Washington, D.C. Close Up leaves Sunday, April 2, and will return Saturday, April 8.

Close Up is a governmental study program where students are presented with a variety of opportunities for learning. This year 10 members will be attending.

While in Washington, the students' activities will include seminars with leaders from the Pentagon, media and foreign embassy officials. They also have the opportunity to explore memorials and monuments with instructors teaching the history as well as Washington. D.C., trivia. This isn't something that everyone has a chance to learn about.

The students even get to meet with James Barcia in his office and will be able to ask questions and share with him their concerns.

One of the best and most fun parts of the week is the opportunity to live with students from all over the United States and its territories. Many students keep in contact with their friends for years after they return home. Along with the education

Caro man charged in district court

A Caro man was recently arraigned in Tuscola County District Court on 4 counts of criminal sexual conduct.

Kevin J. Dicks, 23, was charged with one count of second degree criminal sexual conduct, involving a victim under the age of 13 years, and 3 counts of third degree criminal sexual conduct involving a victim at least 13 years of age but under 16 years. Court records state the offenses allegedly took place between July 1999 and February 2000 in Indianfields Township.

money from the beginning of the year to help reduce the cost of the trip.

Mrs. Tuckey, Close Up advisor, said, "It's fun to take students and have them experience Washington. They have fun and share ideas with students from all over the country.' Kristie Haag, a member of Close Up, said, "I think it will be interesting to see the government up close and where our tax money goes." Justin Miller said, "I'm looking forward to going. It should be a lot of fun trip." "I'm excited to tour and meet people. It should be a lot of fun," said Cari O'Hara. Cari and Justin are also members of the Close Up

Club. Mrs. Tuckey's final comment was, "The neatest thing was that students told me many times that they felt good that their opinions were important."

I hope all the Close Up members have a good time. I've always heard good responses about Close Up. It should be a lot of fun.

Letters to the editor Village meters are just fine

Response to the "Down the town Drain" article:

That is probably a good part of the problem. I reported a water leak to the village last summer. Water was and still is slowly coming to the surface there. I would be willing to bet that is not the only leak in the system.

How do you account for the water used in flushing hydrants. I have seen the hydrants (several at a time) opened and shut off fortyfive minutes later. There was no meter on the hydrants. Are you reading all your meters? Example: Just because a business or building is vacant does not mean someone is not using water there. I have seen a business in town locked up tighter than a drum, a "For Sale" sign out front, and someone watering the grass there twice a week. Example: The new home I recently purchased had water service in 1996. The meter wasn't read until 1999. You are proposing to replace all the water meters with a "state of the art radio wave metering system. It would allow village officials to read all meters from a computer at the municipal building." To justify the expenditure you claim "savings on man hours would be significant. It would pay for itself in three years."

1. The meters now in use are extremely dependable. They require no servicing once installed.

2. The "state of the art computerized system" would surely require a service contract. You are willing to replace a city employee who lives, works and spends his money in Cass City with a company who would only be as our throwaway society continues to fill up existing improved waste reduction spaces.

Surrounding counties are limiting what can go into their landfills in order to ensure space for future generations through ordinances that mandate recyclable material isn't disposed into the landfill or that certain percentages of recyclables are separated from the garbage before landfilling. Since our counties don't have comprehensive waste reduction programs like these counties require, we are shut out from using their landfill space.

How does this affect you? Well, if you live in Lapeer or Tuscola County, you might find it very difficult to find a location for your trash. Either you'll pay large fees to transport your trash to counties in the far north or you'll have to spend a day of your time to drive there yourself. If you live in Huron or Sanilac counties, once your landfill is full in 10-15 more years, you'll be in the same boat. If transportation becomes a large issue, siting a new landfill in your community will become a reality.

The Multi-County Solid Waste Task Force (MCSWTF) is an intergovernmental cooperation between the counties of Huron, Lapeer, Sanilac and Tuscola. This group meets bimonthly, on the third Monday in Marlette or more as needed. The focus of MCSWTF is to dents to participate in its solve waste issues in the meetings in order to hear

Backyard composting bin sales, providing household hazardous waste disposal, and improving/restoring recycling collections to underserved areas are among the group's top priorities. Indirectly, the group works on coordinating the 4 counties' Solid Waste Plans to ensure waste is disposed in a safe and proper way and that the counties have enough disposal space for the trash we create. So why is the MCSWTF important to the local resident? The inter-county cooperation allows for more control over what is being "dumped" in our communities. The programs and services provided by the MCSWTF are better than what each county would be able to provide. The 4county cooperation also allows our rural region to be a more influential grant applicant when it comes to acquiring state or federal funding for waste reduction and education programs. Thus allowing for more services and programs. Community involvement in this group is the key to its success in the future. The MCSWTF needs local resi-

Innovative Farmers hold annual meeting

The Thumb Area Innovative Farmers held their annual meeting March 10 at the Ubly Heights Country Club in Ubly. Over 80 members attended the session, which focused on the transition from field plot efforts to value-added efforts.

Jim LeCureux, Extension value added agent, reviewed the results of the 6-year "Integrated Cropping System Project" conducted at 2 locations in Huron County. The goal of the project was to determine if a corn, sugar beet and dry bean rotation could be economically produced and competitive with the traditional fall plow system, he noted.

"After 6 years and data from 2 sites (equivalent to 12 years of data), the fall chisel system generated the most profit per acre, with the zone till system coming in second, followed by the trans-till system and fall plow finishing last," LeCureux said. "Based on the data collected, the group discovered that, in fact, the rotation could be produced economically with the reduced tillage systems."

A short slide presentation highlighted changes made in the planter, the attachments used and how to implement the system. Other benefits from utilizing the reduced tillage system were improving surface water infiltration and less surface ponding, re-ducing soil bulk density and better over-all soil tilth. Dr. Richard Harwood and his staff at Michigan State University will be preparing a final report on this project and its impact on soil tilth. The 1999 Innovative Farmer Plot Report is available at the MSU Extension-Project Office, located in the USDA Service Center west of Bad Axe. Chris Peterson, MSU Agriculture Economics Department, presented his views entitled "21st Century Agriculture: Working Together for Profit." He outlined future certainties, producer options, and discussed why farmers need to work together rather than stay the independent producer of the past.

Peterson laid out several scenarios for Michigan agriculture, from foreclosure of the industry to where producers are connected and innovative in approaching new markets and opportunities. In conclusion, he stated how Michigan agriculture will look is dependent on how the producers respond to changing markets. Ross Voelker, Innovative Farmers president, presented a plaque to Joe Green, representing Donald L. Hare, director of the USDA Rural Development Agency, for their continuing support to the Innovative Farmers value-added efforts. Over the last 2 years, the Innovative Farmers have received $114,000 from the Rural Development Agency to be used in the development of the Thumb Oilseed Producers' Cooperative, Michigan Alfalfa Processors' Cooperative and Michigan Edible Bean Cooperative.

Following lunch, the group heard from Tim DuFault, farmer from Crookston, Minn., and a board member of the Spring Wheat Bakers Cooperative. The Spring Wheat Bakers is comprised of 3,200 growers across the Northern Plains. Their $18 million processing plant is located near Atlanta, Ga., and is producing partially baked frozen dough products. They are in the process of selecting a second site somewhere in California, with the goal of having 4 pro-cessing facilities within 5 years. The last speaker was Brent Sorenson, executive director of FarmConnect, a program designed to connect the farmer with end users, processors and markets. FarmConnect is a joint effort of the commodity groups, Department of Agriculture, University of Minnesota Extension and Research, Ag Utilization Research Institute and others. The ultimate goal of FarmConnect is the same as the Innovative Farmers and there are already examples of the Innovative Farmers and FarmConnect working together. These 2 groups, along with several other farmer alliances, have formed the US Ag Producers Alliance (USAPA) across 8 states. LeCureux is a member of the initial start-up board. USAPA's goals are to look for marketing opportunities for the members, establish a network of farmers to put together farmer-owned cooperatives and establish relationships with end users. The Innovative Farmers are currently conducting a membership drive across the state through April 1, with 2 levels of membership. Phase one has a $50 annual fee, which will provide the member with newsletters, help with meeting expenses and other related information. Phase 2 has a one-time, $700 membership fee, which will go into the Cooperative Development Fund. The goal of the fund, currently at $180,000, is to be used for marketing studies, feasibility studies and other efforts used in developing new ventures

tioned by the school, is expected to join the Greater Thumb Conference as a high school sport next season.

Among the Hawks with playing experience are the team's tri-captains Johanna Hoelzle, Crystal Sattelberg and Rebecca Rockwell. Hoelzle and Rockwell will see duty mostly on the midfield line, while Sattelberg is a defensive specialist.

Cass City will also look for leadership from the squad's only senior players in Tracy Talaski and Christina Kababik. Both are expected to contribute on the defensive line, while Kababik will see some duty between the goal posts.

Rounding out the Hawks' team members with prior game experience are Emma Witkovsky, Jesika Ferris and Sharon Finkbeiner.

"These girls give us experience in the field and bring extensive knowledge and enthusiasm to the new girls on the squad," says Tunstall. Newcomers that should see plenty of playing time, according to Tunstall, include Kaylee Bell, Laura Laming, Lyndi Trischler and Tara Bryant.

"These girls bring overall speed and quickness and an extreme amount of athleticism to the team, along with a physical presence,' says Tunstall.

Tunstall sees Bad Axe and Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port as the teams to beat in the Greater Thumb Conference, but feels his squad will be competitive in every game. "The only concern I have is overall lack of game experience. It may take us a couple of games to really calm down and understand what's going on with our squad."

Moth battle

A homeowner's springtime battle against gypsy moths often comes down to placing burlap skirts around tree trunks, where young caterpillars can be easily removed. But U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists have found that applying a latex coating of chlorpyrifos insecticide beneath the skirts can kill more than 60 percent of the pests. Combining the skirts and coating exploits the pests' natural tendency to seek daytime shelter before emerging at dusk to feed high in the tree's canopy.
