Rawson receives top state award

by Tom Montgomery

Rawson Memorial Library in Cass City may be considered a small fish in a big pond among Michigan libraries, but when it comes to service, Director Kate VanAuken and her staff are giants.

At least that's the opinion of the Library of Michigan Foundation, which last week named Rawson Memorial Library the 2007 State Librarian's Excellence Award winner for exemplary public service.

The foundation annually presents the prestigious honor, which includes a trophy and $5,000 in privately raised funds to be used for library service, to one Michigan library

A benefit spaghetti dinner, craft show and bake sale are scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 17, at the Cass City VFW Hall. The craft show will run from 9 a.m.

All proceeds will go to Cass City native Kirk Peters, 36, now of Allegan, according to family members Pamela and Barry Uhl of Deford, who are head-

Pamela Uhl, Peters' aunt, said Peters is the son of the late Roger Peters and Judi Spencer-Peters, also formerly of Cass City and now living in Allegan. He became ill about 2 weeks ago, and the illness progressed to pneumonia, she explained, adding Peters developed sepsis shock, making it impossible for him to be moved because the condition causes dangerous increases in blood pressure. He is currently listed in critical condition at Borgess Medical Center in Kalamazoo, where doctors have placed Peters in a medically-induced

Uhl said Peters lives with his mother and was laid off from Allegan Metal

Anyone interested in making a donation can learn more by contacting Uhl at Finishing Co. when he became ill. She noted he has no medical insurance.

The award announcement was made by state Librarian Nancy Robertson during the Michigan Library Association annual conference Thursday in Lansing. Awards were also presented to libraries in Sault Sainte Marie and Marquette.

"Especially in these difficult economic times, libraries matter more than ever, and these 3 are shining examples of why library use increases during tough times," Robertson said.

"These libraries, and many others across the state, continually strive to find the best possible way to meet the ever-changing information needs of Michigan residents, whether it's helping people find jobs, improve their health, expand their knowledge, achieve educational success or simply enrich their lives."

"When I first received the mailing in August describing this award, thought that a class 3 library would have no chance of winning and I almost threw the application away," VanAuken recalled. "Then I thought about my community, staff and board, and I thought I owed it to them and myself to go for it.

"In many ways I am fortunate that my library is in a small rural community, because everyone knows the library and its reputation. In these (past) 5 years we have passed 2 library millage renewals and one new millage. That speaks volumes about the support our library receives from the community," added VanAuken, who noted several members of the community wrote letters in support of the library's application for this year's excellence award.

"I truly believe that our commitment to customer service for our district and beyond is a testament to my sup-portive library board and incredible, dedicated staff," she said.

Robertson agreed. "Though a relatively small library in a relatively small community, the Rawson Memorial District Library in Cass City has demonstrated a big-time ability and dedication to thinking outside the box,'

In partnership with a bookstore, the library has created its own online bookstore, an idea that began as a way to fill a need for rural patrons. Now, for its initial cost of a $300 annual fee to the book company, the library provides the community with access to more than 6 million newly published items for sale, and earns 10 percent of all the sales.

Smith: CO work dangerous, rewarding

by Tom Montgomery

Among law enforcement careers, Jason Smith probably couldn't have chosen a more dangerous job, largely because more often than not the people he encounters day in and day out are armed.

Still, Smith, 36, enjoys being a Department of Natural Resources (DNR) conservation officer (CO).

"I tell people it's the best job in the state of Michigan. It is a great job," said Smith, an Oakland County na tive who is now among a handful of COs who cover an expansive area in the Thumb and beyond.

It's also a unique job.

Conservation officers are fully commissioned peace officers, empowered to enforce all laws of the state of Michigan, and with good reason. They support and assist state and local law enforcement agencies in a variety of domestic, traffic and public safety situations.

COs have to know constitutional law, but they also need to be able to identify every species of Michigan fish. They must be able to make a felony arrest as well as field dress a whitetailed deer and load it into a patrol truck by themselves.

COs wear the standard gray and green police uniform with special shoulder patches. They travel in marked patrol trucks and carry weap-ons similar to what the Michigan State Police have. They work out of their homes, answering calls from dispatchers and the Report All Poaching (RAP) hotline, as well as from concerned citizens.

And, they make their own schedules, which include working all hours of the day and night, often in inclement

Smith, who has worked as a CO since "I started in Sanilac County and worked out there, but the Thumb is one whole area," he added, noting the region covers Tuscola, Sanilac, Huron and Bay counties. "Three years ago I transferred over to Tuscola County.'

Smith said his job is demanding, especially considering CO numbers have dwindled over the years, forcing those officers still on duty to cover more territory.

Add to that the fact that each officer is basically a one-man department, handling everything from confronting suspects to processing a scene to requesting an arrest warrant.

"When you figure that we're given 80 hours a pay period (2 weeks), we are on far less than 24-hour schedules. On any given day, there's something I could be doing, or a call can come in at any time," he said. "I can't tell you the last time I worked an 80hour pay period."

Smith said spring and fall bring the most demanding workload, and the upcoming regular firearm season will add to the mix of calls he receives son) it's going to be a whole lot of road-hunt complaints, and a lot of trespassing complaints," plained, noting hunters with loaded firearms in their vehicles, and those shooting onto another person's property are big safety concerns because someone unfamiliar with another's property could easily be shooting at a home they can't see.

Because of the sheer size of their territories, COs often can't make it to the scene of a reported hunting violation in time to catch the violator redhanded.

"With our reduced numbers and increased responsibilities, we're put into a situation where we have to prioritize our calls," said Smith who indicated incidents involving firearms are high on that list. And, he pointed out, "We do rely heavily on other law enforcement departments" to assist us. "We also rely heavily on the good sportsmen, doing things the way it should be done, to call

Calls made to the RAP hotline - 1- $800\mbox{-}292\mbox{-}7800$ - get Smith's attention and determine, to some extent, where he concentrates his time and energy.

Even then, he finds himself traveling fair distances to respond. On Thursday for example, his log sheet including a "shots fired" call at 1:15 a.m. in Watertown Township and another, involving an "on-going suspi-cious situation" in Koylton Township. He also received a call involving a hunter with an illegal number of deer in Dayton Township, and a reported injured hawk in Saginaw County

Smith acknowledged the personal risk involved in his job. In fact, national statistics show that COs are the most likely law enforcement of ficers to be assaulted.

"I can't tell you how many police" officers tell me I'm nuts," he joked. But the potential for getting hurt is real when dealing with some individuals. "Everybody has a weapon, whether it's an edged weapon or firearm. I expect everyone I come into

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

bRegular readers of this trivia know that items about finding pennies have been frequent visitors, sandwiched among many other inconsequential notes that sometimes brings a chuckle or 2.

Many of the most interesting have been contributed by readers. The following poem was provided by Marilyn Erla, Cass City.

I found a penny today Just lying on the ground But it's not just a penny This little coin I've found.

Found pennies come from heaven That's what my Grandpa told me, He said Angels toss them down Oh, how I loved that story.

He said when Angels miss you, They toss a penny down, Sometimes just to cheer you up To make a smile out of a frown

So don't pass by that penny When you are feeling blue, It may be a penny from heaven That an Angel tossed to you.

P.S. Attached to the card with the poem was a shinny penny. P.P.S. I kept it.

Cass Cityans who have a summer home or live on the shores of Saginaw Bay in the Sleeper State Park area can attest that right now, at least, there is stark evidence that the water is receding. There is now 8 to 10 feet more shoreline than there was earlier in the year

The snag is to find a topic that is appropriate for a small town newspaper. That most times rules out items of a national scope for 2 reasons. One, it is ably reported by television and big newspaper writers and 2, readers don't turn to hometown weeklies for earth-shaking news events.

What they come to papers like the Chronicle for are stories that touch people they know, or the local community at large.

All of this is prologue for commentary about a story in the Detroit News. When first scanned it provided a pleasant surge because the headline read, "Few extra pounds may block

I always look forward to deer season, but I'm not real concerned about shooting a deer. My son always gets one, and his wife doesn't like venison, so we get to eat most of his. That's fairly common, I guess. A lot of wives don't like venison. Maybe they were spoiled as children, or maybe someone is giving them some

I do my own cutting when I get a deer — and help my son with his. It's a job the way I do it. It takes me half a day to get ready and the other half to cut the deer. (A good butcher would do it in about an hour.)

I'm one of the few people who cuts meat in his office. This has surprised the UPS folks a few times.

Some of my cuts may not show up in a meatcutting manual, but I get the job done. Once in awhile I'll make an especially interesting cut of meat and Russ will ask, "What do you call 'Venison," I tell him.

I have an old extension service bulletin that does an excellent job of describing how to bone out a deer. I used to read it, but now I just lay it on the table for good luck.

My friend Bud came over to watch me cut venison one year, but he never came back. Maybe he learned everything a person needs to know?

I took one look at my booklet, picked up a knife, and just went berserk. I used to shear sheep the same way. I

by Roger Pond

The back forty tried to make fewer cuts, though. Cutting venison is easier than shearing sheep, but there is a learning curve. I've learned how many bones there are in a deer, for example. I don't know why they need so many. They sure get in the way when you cut up the venison.

I've noticed the front leg of a deer has several round bones, a flat one and a couple of diagonals. I just call them leg bones and cut the meat for hamburger.

I've learned the back of the deer includes the loineye muscle, or "back strap" as the hunters call it. I butterfly this and call it chops.

I told Bud, "If I cut around this leg bone, I can separate the meat from the pelvic bone, or whatever that is. Then I can cut and pull these muscles

'I cut most of this into round steaks. Everything that doesn't make steaks or chops goes into hamburger.

Any part of the deer that doesn't look good goes to the dog. I learned that from a butcher years ago.

The butcher said a fellow brought in a deer a few days earlier, and the neck was really messed-up. The hunter admitted his deer was hang-ing too low in the barn, and the dog had been chewing on the neck. "That's O.K.," the hunter said. "I'll give that to my mother-in-law. She likes to make mince meat.

MENTAL ILLNESS

It's not about blame; It's not about shame.

It's not about guilt, weakness, or failure; It's not about self control.

It's not a character flaw; And it's not a lack of self-discipline.

Mental Illness is about illness; It's about people.

It's about medical care; And it's about time we treated it that way;

Mental Illness - How we treat it; makes all the difference.

tic, stressful, fun, easy, and (sometimes) hard year.

A senior has the responsibilities of an adult and yet is still treated like a child. Some seniors have to apply to college, schedule college visits, have a job, apply for scholarships, keep their grades up, prepare for the workforce, have fun with friends, and find themselves

:Scarlett Helland, an 18-year-old senior, is planning on attending one of her "top 3" colleges: MSU, GVSU, or CMU. She is planning on studying business management at one of those places.

"I'm nervous about the application process...I'm kinda worried, because I'm getting married next year too...so, I'll be starting school and a family, she said. Even though she has a lot of work and all; she still manages to have fun as a senior. But Helland says she will miss some people, her family.

Heather Moore, 18-year-old senior, wants to go to either Baker College or Saint Clair. She wants to study to be an elementary school teacher.

Heather claims she isn't nervous, No, not at all... I can't wait (to leave), she said. Ready for college, Moore is anxious to go and, as a senior, she smiled and told me she can't stand being a senior, "I can't wait to leave!" But, in the meantime, she is keeping herself busy with work, school and

Letter to the Editor

This movie was not appropriate for kids

Recently our child wanted to see a show at the theatre in town, so I called and talked to the owner to find out the rating for the movie "Heartbreak Kid". The owner told me it was rated R and said it wasn't appropriate for anyone under 12 - he said it was ok for anyone 12 and older.

After hearing what the owner had to say, we figured the R rating was for violence and language - the owner never said anything about the R rating for sexual content. We went with our child to watch the movie and were disgusted with the sexual content of the movie. Three of the scenes in the movie were not appropriate for anyone 17 years old and under, let alone anyone age 12.

When questioned about the sexual content, the owner said that kids these days know more than we think they do, but we feel that any child under 17 should not view that kind of sexual content, especially in a public

If we would have been told of the sexual content for the R rating, our child would never have been allowed to go to the show. The owner should have told us of the sexual content when we called so we could choose what was appropriate for our child to

To renew a driver's license early, residents need to bring to a branch office their driver's license and glasses or contact lenses if they are needed to drive. Residents must also pass a vision screening before the renewal

Residents can also renew license plates online, by touch-tone telephone, mail or at a self-service station up to 45 days before the plates expire. Online, touch-tone telephone and self-service station renewals require the use of a personal identification number (PIN), which is printed on the renewal notice.

"The Taste of Ink"

A permanent display of art on your skin can be one of the best or worst experiences of your life.

Tattoos can be argued on so many different levels, but one large subject is with tattoos involving teenagers. Tattoos seem to give teenagers a sense of control and an outlet for individual expression, but parents are more concerned with the health risks and if their teenager is ready to make such an important decision dealing with their bodies.

The generation our parents were brought up in is a completely different era than teenagers know today. Parents were typically raised when tattoos and piercings were generally seen on criminals, gang members and bikers. These groups of people didn't get tattoos to individually express artwork upon themselves, but to look rebellious and tough.

"Tattoos show independence," said Ben Viers. "Why not get one?"

Many tattoos back then weren't sterile to have done. They were done in prison cells or seedy parlors without even thinking about safety. Parents these days are very strict with safety. and anything that could affect their child in such a negative way or harm them will not go over well. While parents may seem dead set against tattoos, there are many ways to convince them otherwise.

Obviously, as I have stated above, parents are concerned about infec-tions and diseases that could come from getting a tattoo. What they don't know is that most tattoo and Don't forget piercing studios today are cleaner than the average doctor's office. Tattoo artists are even trained extensively on safe handling and disposal of equipment. Meaning that getting a tattoo isn't as dangerous as it mig have been during a past generation Another concern is that tattoos a permanent.

Of course, you can get them r moved at a later age, but for a prid much larger than you paid to have done. Making this type of a decision to get a tattoo at such a young ag isn't what parents think might be as propriate. There are even laws a some states that if you're a minor yo can't get a tattoo or piercing, even with parental consent.

Even with all of this positive information about getting tattoos, parents are very likely to deny any requesto get one. The best thing to dwould be to wait until it's legal f you to get a tattoo. It may seem lil a long time, but at least there will the plenty of time to find out which tat-too you'd like and where you want it.

It's a very important decision to per-manently place a work of art on your body, something that needs to be thought about depending on how large or small it might be.

In my opinion, I think tattoos are a good way of expressing ourselves. They show that you can take some kind of pain to be able to get one, and depending on what tattoo you get, that tattoo can show the kind of person you truly are on the inside. People are encouraged every day to be an individual, to think outside of the box. Tattoos are exactly that, they're a way to set each person apart from everyone else and show the creativity and thoughts that are racing inside their head. Tattoos are a form of expression that should never be looked down upon.

BRAZILIAN EXCHANGE student Guilherme Felippe Plichoski is spending a year in Cass City under the auspices of the Cass City Rotary Club. He is currently staying with Jim and Debra Kranz, the first of 3 host families that have agreed to share their home with him.

Guilherme Felippe Plichoski still struggles with his English, but the personable 16-year-old is adjusting quickly, considering he's so far from his own home and the Portuguese he is used to speaking. Plichoski is an exchange student spending a year in Cass City under the auspices of the Cass City Rotary Club. He has been in the United States for about 3 months and is currently living with Jim and Debra Kranz, the first of 3 host families he will have during his stay

"A lot of people say it's (exchange program) a good experience, and I think so. I learn a lot of things - culture, and experience one year away from home, and to learn good English, too," said Plichoski, who hails from Sao Bento do Sul, Brazil, a city of about 80,000 people.

Plichoski attends a private school in Brazil and has studied English for 3 years, but he acknowledged the English spoken by his classmates at Cass City High School has taken some getting used to. "In the beginning it was a little challenging. It was difficult," he said. 'When I came here, my English was very bad. Not bad - it was just, I was needing to practice. It's easier now,' he added. "I think it's good to learn," he said. "These are things I don't learn in private school." The teen is also getting accustomed to a new school schedule. At home, the school day begins at 7:30 and is over by noon, he said, which leaves the afternoons to spend time with friends at a mall or each other's homes. On the weekends, he said, young people gather at various clubs in the

KKIDHKIDHKITKKITAKHIWAIIIKKAHIKKAHIKKAHIKOODOOODOO

Like many other exchange students, Plichoski has found his classes in the United States to be much less challenging than at home, where students aren't allowed to use calculators in classes such as physics, and notes are never allowed when taking an exam. "It's easier here, but it's long, he said of his classes here. "It's almost all day.

Plichoski is making friends at school and getting involved in athletics, which are not part of school activities in his native Brazil. He was a member of the Red Hawk junior varsity football team and plans to compete in wrestling this winter.

'I am getting more healthy, I think. I have gym every day, we lift weights," Plichoski said, adding he enjoys eating salad for lunch each day instead of grabbing a bag of French fries.

He confided, however, that Brazilians love meat and plenty of salt. He smiled broadly and added, "This country is the best in sweets - I love the cookies.

Plichoski, who enjoys chatting with friends on his laptop, reading and weekly guitar lessons with Gagetown area resident Brian Mallory, is looking forward to a Michigan winter. 'I've never seen snow, actually. I'm pretty excited," he said. "I really want to do snowboarding and ski-

Before arriving in the United States, Plichoski tried not to have any expectations, and that attitude is paying off. "I tried to not expect so much. When you don't expect, you look for new things and everything's good, he said.

Plichoski has had the opportunity to experience some travel as well as various activities with his host family, including attending some concerts and a haunted house, and visiting Interlochen, where the Kranz's son, Adam, attends school. He's even made it to an MSU football game.

In the process, he's learning more about himself and the difference a year abroad can make in a young person's life.

"I think when we come back, our minds are so open. We grow," he said. "They (host family) take care of me, but it's like more independent."

The Kranzes, who have previously hosted 2 other exchange students, say the Rotary program provides students with an opportunity to not only experience life in another country, but to also experience life with more than one host family:

"This way, they get to see 3 different views, and each family lives a little differently," Jim Kranz commented. "It's enjoyable (for us). These exchange students are social, bright kids, and I enjoy showing kids

Plichoski said he would definitely recommend that his friends consider participating in the exchange pro-

"They will have a lot of fun and experience of life," he said. "I like it because I am treated like I am here like I belong here. This, I like

Final results of the Michigan Education Assessment Project (MEAP) tests for the Cass City High School class of 2002 have been released. Principal Jon Good reports that 76 members were merit award winners and qualified for $2,500 scholarship award. Good reports that final figures were delayed until this fall because of changes in the system. This year, he predicts that the 2003 award winners will be known in the spring. To earn the grant, students must have earned level 1 (exceeds Michigan standards) or level 2 (meets Michigan standards) in each of 4 proficiencies. There are 5 subject areas in the test. Added for 2002 was social studies. It was not included in the requirements for a MEAP scholarship

Western Michigan University's last home game last Saturday, against Ohio University, ended with a 16-7 win for the players' fathers who were honored at Waldo Stadium. Larry Caper galloped 40 yards for the fourth quarter touchdown that clinched Western's victory. The triumph gave the Broncos a record of 7-2-1 overall. and 5-2-1 in the MAC. For the first time since 1966, Western won all of its home games. Mark McDonald, an Owendale-Gagetown High School graduate, leads his team in tackles for loss and is second on the team for tackles overall. He has been voted "Bronco of the Week" two times during the season. Mark's parents, Bud and Jeannette McDonald of Owendale, were in attendance at the game and among the parents of the seniors who were escorted onto the field by their sons just before game time, walking through an arch made up of all dads of the Broncos team. Another Cass City alumni moves up the ladder. Dave Binder former head basketball coach at Mattawan High School, has been appointed to the coaching staff at Kalamazoo College as assistant to head cage mentor Ray Sleffen. Binder lettered in baseball, basketball and football at Cass City and played two years of varsity baseball at Central Michigan University He gained state-wide fame in 1971 when he coached his team to a stalling 8-overtime win over Parchment, 10-8. A funny thing happened at the final football game of the year for the undefeated Cass City Red hawks Friday night...Cass City fell behind early in the first quarter and no one seemed really worried. And as the game unfolded, all the confident Hawk players, coaches and fans proved to be: right. Cass City walked away from Reese High School with a 37-20 victory to complete an undefeated seas: son. Maybe the reason for the lack? of concern was that in three previous games this year against clubs rated stronger than the Rockets, Cass City was able to come back to wing Anyway, it started as a "fun night" for the Hawks and after a brief flurry in the second and third quarter it ended that way as the winners coasted in for the victory.

The Thumb's first and only lady basketball official is Mrs. Harriet Richards of Cass City. Not only is she the lone lady official in the Thumb, she may be the only woman anywhere who works basketball games with her husband as a co-official. The effervescent Mrs. Richards came up with the idea by herself and talked her reluctant husband into doing it with her. Russ wasn't all that eager to start. After all, his daily responsibilities as principal at Cass City, High School kept him busy, busy, busy. Still, athletics has been a part of his life for more years than his life in administration so he said he'd give it a try. It's worked out fine, the graying Richards said with a grin. It's a change of pace, a family outing. Our boys go along with us. They are our biggest critics. For Richards it's been fun, but for Harriet it's been a ball. She's registered with the Michigan High School Athletic Association and the Central Michigan University board of women officials. own boundaries, the library - in partnership with the Tuscola County Economic Development Corporation uses grant funds for a traveling Business Resource Center that includes a collection of reference publications and a wireless Internet-accessible laptop loaded with financial forecasting software that rotates to 6 participating libraries in the county. Examples of the kind of customer support the library offers, Robertson noted, include home delivery and

"Its very successful young-adult section, initiated by a patron's suggestion, has grown from a small cart of 22 fiction novels to a 170-squarefoot area with more than 750 books, magazines and paperbacks and seating 14 people," she said. "This renovation has sparked interest in a young-adult book club that is now in its fifth year and has been recognized in the 2007 "The Kids Book Club

The local library's programming also yond the community, with the Friends of the Library group organizing an annual event in which more than 50 people board a bus for a day of antique hunting or other adventures, including trips to Dow Gardens and Petoskey

According to VanAuken, Rawson Memorial Library's 11 public-access computers and 2 children's computers are all in use constantly. Since 2002, she said, computer use has increased by 210 percent, and the library is now a wireless hot spot used by students from nearby Baker College and their visiting families, and students from other colleges and universities returning during vacation breaks.

The criteria for the State Librarian's Excellence Award are: demonstrating that the library provides new, innovative and superior services to its customers in a cost-effective manner, with a "can do" attitude and by always delivering on promises; demonstrating the library's commitment to high standards of customer service through staff dealings with customers and synergy within the staff through a coordinated approach to supporting customers; and demonstrating that the library is a team player through its collaborations in the community.

VanAuken indicated that people and the community will always be the bottom line for the staff at Rawson Memorial Library.

"In a small public library, it is all about the patron for us. It has to be," she said Thursday. "We care about them and they care about us. We listen to them and they appreciate it.

"As someone who has worked with students with developmental disabilities for two decades, I am worried about chemicals causing neurological problems in addition to asthma, cancer and other diseases. I support fast action on legislation to fight these toxic threats, including outright bans on the worst chemicals. We must act quickly to make sure that the law catches up to science for the sake of our health and safety."

Brown, son participate in 7-state study on toxins

State Rep. Terry Brown (D-Pigeon) said Thursday that the results of tests for toxic chemicals performed on him and his 12-year-old son as part of a 7-state project show the need for more awareness of the prevalence of toxins in everyday products and the need for stronger laws to protect people from the long-term health hazards they pose.

"It is very disturbing that my son and I - and most likely every other typical Michigan resident - are walking around with toxic chemicals in our bodies, just from leading our regular lives," Brown said.
"The reality is that chemicals in products like baby bottles, toys with lead paint and vinyl shower curtains can become pollution in people. We need to become more aware of that - and we need to fight to ensure the substances that companies put into the products they sell do not put human health and safety at risk. This project really brought home the chemical burden we are all carrying, and the toxic legacy we are creating for our children.

Brown and his son Bryan, 12, were among 5 Michigan residents participating in an innovative project intended to show the degree to which toxic chemicals from everyday life have found their way into the bodies of average Americans. Toxins were found in all 35 participants in the 7 states. The results of the project were announced at a press conference at the Capitol that Brown attended along with Genevieve Howe of the Ecology Center and Michigan Network for Children's Environmental Health.

Although no results on Brown or his son raised alarm, 2 findings were unusual and point to 2 major concerns: First, that chemicals can last for decades in the body, and second, that industrial chemicals are so ubiquitous that we often cannot even identify the source of our exposure.

Bryan Brown, an honor student in the seventh grade at Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port Laker Jr. High in Pigeon, said he was proud to participate in the project. Science is one of his favorite subjects.

"I feel lucky that I was able to participate in an important scientific project like this," he said. "Most kids my age don't get to do something that could help so many people."

Results and further explanations of the project are available at the Michigan Network for Children's Environmental Health Web site, w w w . m n'c e h . o r g / campaigns.biomonitoring.php. The full national report is available at www.isitinus.org.

"We need to open up the flow of information about these toxins and do a much better job of testing and regulating these chemicals so we can protect our health and safety," said Brown, who worked as a school social worker and principal of the Hu-

As Thanksgiving approaches, the Corn Marketing Program of Michigan (CMPM) wants to educate consumers about one of America's first and most bountiful crops - corn.

Corn versatile crop

Corn has long been an important commodity to American consumers. Because it was one of the first crops settlers learned to grow in their fields. The Native Americans helped teach many of the new settlers how to plant, raise and harvest corn, which helped them survive in the new land. Today, corn is not only a tabletop favorite and staple, but also an integral part of many other products. Now corn cannot only be served on your Thanksgiving plate, but can be a primary component of that plate.

"Polylactic acid, or PLA, is a cornderived polymer that can be used to create degradable plastics. Nearly 80 billion pounds of plastics are produced in the United States every year, and these plastics have traditionally relied on petroleum-based feed-stocks. PLA offers a 100 percent renewable alternative to petroleumbased plastic," said Clark Gerstacker, CMPM vice president and member of the National Corn Growers Asso-Eciation (NCGA) Corn Board. "In the past few years several companies have announced their switch to cornbased plastic products. Some of these products include plates, clamshell containers, bags, film and plastic wrapping."

Even when the holiday season is over, corn still plays an integral role in everyday life. "Through the checkoff program, Michigan corn farmers invest in research that focuses on new uses and expands new markets for corn. This research has led to the Edevelopment of corn-based plastics, fabrics and packing materials," explained Noel, who is also a corn grower from Leslie. "And of course you can always choose ethanolblended fuels when filling up at the gas station or replace your propanefueled furnace with a cleaner-burning corn heating unit.

In addition to all new corn-based products, it is essential to remember how important corn is in traditional holiday meals

"Thanksgiving and the holiday season are times for family get-togethers, which always means numerous fill-ing meals. Many of the products on consumer's dinner tables have ingredients made from corn. For example, an important ingredient in fresh bread and rolls is dextrose, a corn sugar, which helps preserve bread and keeps it from staling. Corn syrup is also used in salad dressings to make the product smoother and easier to pour, and many favorite fruit and vegetable side dishes contain corn sweeteners and other corn products, said Lyn Uphaus, CMPM president and a corn grower from Manchester.

While many food products contain corn or ingredients derived from corn. many other products could not be in existence without corn," explained Jody Pollok, CMPM executive direc-

"Many beef, pork, and poultry products are value-added forms of corn. The livestock industry is the largest market for Michigan-grown corn. With an increase in ethanol production in the state, livestock producers now have a cheaper feed alternative to corn, dried distillers grains (DDG).

THIS YEAR'S Cass City Community Thanksgiving Dinner is slated for Thursday, Nov. 22, at the Cass City United Methodist Church just north of town. A small army of volunteers will start serving the expected 300 or so people at noon.

Volunteers keep community dinner tradition going

A host of Cass City businesses, organizations and volunteers, young and old, know how to put the "community" in a community Thanksgiving dinner. And you're invited.

The annual Cass City Community
Thanksgiving Dinner is slated for Thursday, Nov. 22, starting at noon at the Cass City United Methodist Church, 5100 N. Cemetery Rd.

According to Scott Mills, now in his 14th year of heading up an all-volunteer committee, the community diner has become self-driven in a sense, thanks to a handful of faithful area residents who organize the event, and to several others who join in to wash a dish, serve up some turkey and dressing, or clean up afterwards.

But that doesn't mean Mills isn't looking for more folks to lend a hand.

"We're always looking for volunteers. We don't turn people away," said Mills, who added plans for this year's gathering are coming along.

"As always, we're trying to figure out how much food we need. Is there going to be enough? Will there be more people this year because of the economy? And, of course, you always wonder about the weather," Mills said.

The free community Thanksgiving dinner dates back more than 20 years, and organizers have been very successful in promoting the meal for what it is - an opportunity to celebrate the holiday as a community, especially those residents who might otherwise spend Thanksgiving alone.

The committee has also done an

The committee has also done an admirable job of explaining what the dinner is not - an all-hours restautions and those who show up later in the afternoon may be out of luck) or a soup kitchen for the poor.

"The idea grew out of people having to sit home, alone, people who don't have family in the area," Mills explained. "The purpose was to sit as a family and community."

The idea proved popular. About 80 dinners were served that first year, and attendance has grown steadily since, with some 300 people typically attending in recent years.

The dimner has remained a community affair. All the food and labor is donated. The Knights of Columbus, for example, has purchased the turkeys for a number of years. Local high school students, meanwhile, have prepared the dressing, which is cooked by employees at Hills and Dales General Hospital. Some area businesses also donate to the cause, and most of the local service clubs and churches are involved in one way or another.

5 from area named to dean's list

Five area residents have been named to the academic honors list at Ferris State University, Big Rapids.

They are Ashley Barrigar of Cass City, and Kala Briolat, Luann Laming, Keith Lewinski and Heather Ludwig, all of Ubly.

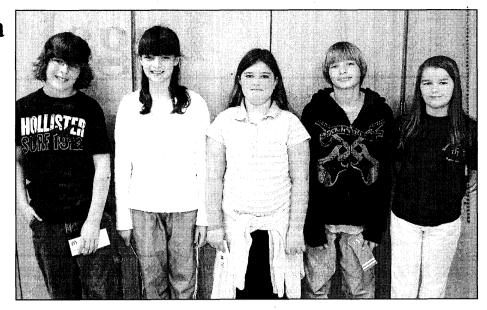

To be named to the list, a student must have accumulated a minimum 3.5 grade point average in no fewer than 12 credit hours of coursework during the semester.

Movies set for seniors at library

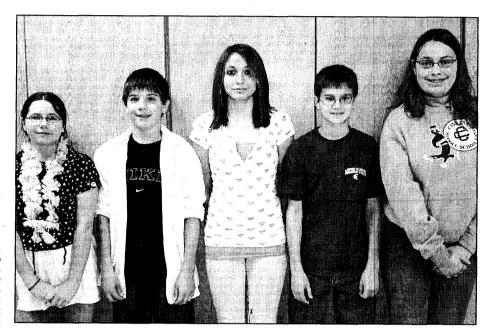

Rawson Memorial Library, Cass City, will show the following Senior Citizen Movies Friday, Nov. 16 at 1:30 p.m.

Steve Irwin, The Crocodile Hunter, Ocean's Deadliest: Ocean's Deadliest is Steve Irwin's last documentary and probably his most powerful message to the world. Lurking below the surface of Australia's coastline are some of the most dangerous animals on the planet. For thousands of years, venomous snakes, saltwater crocodiles and massive sharks have patrolled these waters. Now, in the hope of studying nature's most dangerous creations, two adventurers of legendary reputation and pedigree embark on an epic mission to discover some of the ocean's deadliest.

The Curse of the Bambino: In 1918 the Boston Red Sox won their fifth World Series, thanks in great part to a young pitching and hitting sensa-tion from the slums of Baltimore, named George Herman Ruth, a.k.a. the Babe, or the Bambino. Following the 1919 season in which the team failed to make the Series, Red Sox owner Harry Frazee sold the Babe to the New York Yankees. The Yankees went on to dominate the game of baseball, not just during the Ruth era but for decades afterwards, winning a total of 26 World Series since. The Red Sox, who had won 5 of the first 15 World Series ever played, have never won another since. Told with humor in the face of heartache, this acclaimed documentary combines archival footage with contemporary interviews and focuses not on the players who have come and gone. but on the diehard fans who live their entire lives lamenting what some have come to call "The Curse of the Bambino." (60 minutes)

CASS CITY'S FIFTH and sixth grade K of C Spelling Bee winners are (from left) Brennen Winter (fifth place), Erica Martin (fourth), Sara Roberts (third), Curtis Dickinson (second) and Kayla Zmierski (first). VETERAN MARK ZMIERSKI salutes fellow veterans in attendance Friday at Cass City Middle School where students paid homage to the veterans for a 17th consecutive year.

CASIMIR BARTNIK, seated, was one of the oldest veterans honored at the Cass City Middle School assembly Friday. The World War II veteran is 85 years old.

If it's not in the newspaper, how will the public notice?

Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals These are just a few topics where government actions can affect your life and community. Imagine if government no longer had the legal obligation to publish this information in your newspaper. How would public notices get noticed? In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. It should not be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, when to look or even to know what you're looking for to be informed. It is government's responsibility to publish and deliver public notice information as it becomes available. So take notice. Your right to know is being served... right here in your newspaper.

DNR CONSERVATION Officer Jason Smith is based in Tuscola County, but works throughout the Thumb, enforcing Michigan fish and game laws. It's a job he says is demanding, dangerous and rewarding.

contact with to have a weapon," he said.

The stakes can be high for violators who are caught. The penalty for taking a deer illegally, for example, includes restitution of $1,000 plus court costs and fines, a minimum 5 days in jail, loss of hunting privileges for the remainder of the year and for the next 3 years, and the loss of their hunting gear.

When dealing with someone who could face charges, instinct and preparation are both important for a CO. "We rely heavily on our training, and we do a massive amount of training," he noted.

training," he noted.

At the same time, Smith said he understands that he's dealing with many people who are simply out recreating, hunting or fishing, and he tries to be friendly and professional on the job.

Sometimes the biggest challenge, he pointed out, is discerning between a felon and a sportsman who is simply nervous when approached by a CO. That individual may not have done anything, but they're nervous and not listening to the CO's instructions to put down their firearm. They may also be sending out the same sort of physical signals a guilty individual might, such as moving around.

Smith indicated he takes no chances. "My goal at the end of every shift is to go home. I owe it to my family," he said. "If that means rubbing a couple people the wrong way because they're not listening to me...unfortunately, that's a small price to pay, in my book, to make it home safety."

Smith, who has not been injured while on duty, said some of the most seemingly dangerous situations turn out to be nothing, but they're enough to raise the hair on your neck, such as looking through some binoculars and seeing a gun pointed at you by a hunter who is using his scone as binoculars.

scope as binoculars.

"As far as dealing with bad guys and bad situations, there's a way to handle every situation," Smith continued. There are many instances in which the best approach is to not confront a suspect(s) until adequate back-up is available. "That being said," he added, "There are times when you don't know you're over your head until you're over your head until you're over your bead."

In spite of the risks, Smith indicated he loves his work.

"Most of us knew long before we were in a position to be hired, that that's the job - conservation officer for one reason or another," he said.

Training, skills are key

COs are among the most highly trained law enforcement officers in the nation, receiving regular in-service training in precision driving, watercraft, snowmobiles, off-road vehicles, firearms, legal issues, search and seizure, survival tactics, use of force, and technology.

Their duties vary from season, with day-to-day work consisting primarily of dealing with persons outdoors. COs work varied shifts, often outside in inclement weather, observing and checking hunters and anglers; enforcing regulations governing the operation and use of snowmobiles, off-road vehicles and watercraft; enforcing laws that protect the environment; participating in outdoor recreation safety training; and writing criminal case briefs and giving court testimony.

As peace officers, COs often deal with people possessing firearms and, on occasion, make physical arrests of individuals who may be intoxicated and/or disorderly.

There are about 230 COs at various positions and levels throughout the DNR. COs in the field are assigned to one of Michigan's 83 counties as their primary work location, depending on DNR operational needs. The entry-level salary is about $36,500, and after 5 years of progressive step increase, reaches roughly $52,500.
