ELKLAND TOWNSHIP Fire Chief Glenn Guilds (center) stands with 2 of his officers — Lead Captain Jeremy Somerville (left) and Assistant Chief Scott Wright — in the fire hall Friday morning. The trio discussed the department's activities over the past year and agreed 2010 brought its share of difficult memories as well as success in terms of building unity among its members.

Elkland Township firemen look back on eventful year

Editor

The past 12 months have not been uneventful for the Elkland Township Fire Department and first-year Fire Chief Glenn Guilds.

Cass City fire fighters found themselves responding to a rare fatal house fire early in the year near the corner of Severance and Warner roads, for example, along with a fatal motorcycle-deer collision just south of Cass City.

The department also lost a veteran fireman in Bill Younglove, a 30-year veteran who lost his battle with cancer, not to mention the resignations/retirements of a few other members, including department volunteer Janet Hurley and Ron Pawloski, who served as fire chief for the past several years. On the other hand, Guilds saw 5 or 6 new members join the ranks of volunteers with the Cass City department, and he's been pleased with what he describes as a growing sense of unity among local fire fighters and an increased effort to be more active in the community.

"When I took over, I was nervous as heck," confided Guilds, who was named the new fire chief at the beginning of 2010 and has 21 years of service in with the Elkland Township Fire Department.

"But these guys make the job > smooth." Guilds said the department fielded 97 calls this year, 30-plus more runs than in the previous year. He was quick to say he liked what he saw in terms of the overall effort Cass City fire fighters put forth in 2010. "The guys work their tails off at fires, and it's nice to see other departments noticing that," he added.

> "I think, too, we wanted to get more camaraderie (within the department). People are just coming together more as a group, I think," commented Assistant Chief Scott Wright, who has 20 years with the department plus another 7 years before that with the Elmwood Township-Gagetown Fire Department, where his father, Charles "Chuck" Wright served for 50 years, including several years as chief, prior to his retirement last

"One thing I've noticed this year (of guys attending fire runs) we're getting this year. We're averaging 12 (guys), added Jeremy Somerville, lead captain for the Elkland Township Fire Department. Somerville, who has 9 years with the local department plus another 5 years of service before that with the Kingston Fire Department, noted that a dozen Cass City fire fighters easy," he added, referring to his were on hand when they were called

All 3 officers also agreed that average — are showing up for training sessions and meetings.

Training has been especially effective, with Jason Lermont, Huron County's fire fighting instructor, in charge of the program, according to Guilds, who indicated the motivation to take training seriously among volunteers is to play a key role in responding to emergencies. And without the training, some members may not be qualified to take on certain roles. "No one wants to be a gopher," he said. "I think everybody wants to work. "They need to participate, is the whole thing," Guilds said.

"And it's been working out," added Wright.

But that's not the only motivation, Guilds said. "If your heart's not in the fire department, go find something else to do.

"It's the friendships you build, but the bottom line is you're serving the community. The reason you're on the fire department is you're needed by the community. It sure isn't the pay," he joked.

Truthfully, myself, I would do this for no pay," Wright said. "Like my dad says, you do it for the community. When they call, you go and do what you can.'

Guilds, who also credited the Elkland Township Board for its support of the fire department, noted fire fighters often pay emotionally for their service, especially when responding to an horrific fire or car accident.

"There are things you see that a normal person probably wouldn't want to see," he explained. "You can't get that stuff out of your mind — it just stays there.'

Aside from building unity within the department, Guilds and his officers say they have made a real effort to become more active in the community. Examples include continuing to host an annual golf tournament and entering a team in the Cass City PTO-sponsored donkey basketball competition this year (local fire fighters proved competitive, leaving the event with the title of champion). The fire department also took first-place honors in the annual Christmas in the Village Chili Cook-off in 2010.

Time to put up or shut up in Lansing

Michigan voters spoke loud and clear in the November general election, giving Republicans control of the state House of Representatives and widening their majority in the state Senate.

With the new year here, the state also has a new, Republican governor in Rick Snyder, a multimillionaire venture capitalist who has never held political office before.

We respect the voters' wishes. We also hope Snyder and our legislators are fully prepared to finally set partisan politics aside in this state and give their supporters what we all expect: visible signs of tax-related and other policies that actually provide the average taxpayer with some relief, and effective changes that will welcome industry to Michigan, rather than prompt prospective business owners to continue to flee for greener pastures beyond our borders.

In other words, voters have a right to expect change that they can take to the bank in a state that has floundered in red ink for years.

In all fairness, Snyder and our Legislature will need time to implement proposals such as the new governor's anticipated call to replace the business tax on gross receipts and income with a straight 6-percent tax on corporate profits, a plan that some state budget forecasters say could initially deepen Michigan's budget deficit.

We should also point out that Snyder is inheriting a financial mess — Michigan is already facing an estimated $1.5 billion budget gap this year — thanks to a sluggish economy, which for years now has depressed incomes, led to millions of dollars in home foreclosures, and stopgap measures in Lansing that have forced public schools and agencies throughout state government to make do with less.

But make no mistake, the Republicans' honeymoon will last only so long, because residents here are sick and tired of being asked to sacrifice in nearly every aspect of what used to be a great way of life in the Great Lakes State.

A prime example lies in our public education system. Legislators must reform the method for school funding so that administrators no longer have to put up with Lansing's repeated shell game of taking away $200 per pupil and then, later, giving back $75, as if school officials should be thrilled with having to make fewer cuts in budgets that are already as lean as they can be without cutting programs.

As it is, Proposal A ties the hands of schools when it comes to funding — they must rely on the majority of their income from the state and yet, when Lansing fails, they don't have the option of going to their voters for additional taxes to help cover operating expenses.

And, while they're at it, we wouldn't mind our new Republican majority taking a serious crack at tenure reform.

The bottom line is, voters are expecting some results in the coming years.

Towards that end, we'd like to remind all of our new (as well as veteran) legislators that the best path to another term in office is not by bowing to special interests, but by delivering on their promises.

 $oldsymbol{A}$ note from the cat

It's been a zoo around here. I've witnessed heightened and tore; in the end leaving nothing but shreds. activity. Destruction of paper. Feeding frenzies. Songs about catfrost nipping at your nose. The humans who live with me have been acting like a bunch of kittens that haven't learned how to handle their catnip.

Who am I to sound the alarm? I may be aloof, alluring and attractive, but beyond that, what do I know? I am only the cat.

Walk a day in my paws and you'd understand plenty. The things I see, the secrets I hear, they'd fill volumes if I were able to type at a rate faster than two words per minute. What I lack in opposable thumbs, I make up for in keen observation and (I like to think) witty sarcasm. That, and the aforementioned good looks. (I've been told on more than one occasion that I possess exceptional whiskers.)

The female adult human, the one they call "mom," usually sits at this computer and does the typing. (Calls it a "column" if I'm not mistaken.) As of late she's been wrapped up in the process of hiding boxes under a layer of red and green paper unwound from a tube. This behavior, in and of itself, wouldn't be cause for alarm. Humans waste time doing foolish things (when they could very well be napping) at an alarming frequency.

She spent all those hours arranging the paper, making sure it was smooth and neat; then a couple of nights ago she allowed the rest of the humans to go after each box as though it were the last mouse on earth. They ripped

And although Owen-Gage stands alone on top of the NCTL-North division, if Kingston's showing against the Bearcats is any indication, the Bulldogs' perfect NCTL mark could be in jeopardy. Matt Neff started the Cardinal run with back-to-back 3 pointers and then ended the frame with a half-court buzzer beater, lifting Kingston to a 14-7 advantage. Kingston continued to have its way over the Bearcats and jetted to a 23-8 margin as Neff continued his outside assault on his way to a gamehigh 17 points, which included 5 treys. Besides Neff, the Cardinals received 15 markers from Nathan Harneck while Seth Flikkie and Tristin Pennington each added 10. Dan Weber, Grant Pichla and Mark Recker all finished with 14 points to pace Ubly.

If you live in District 1 and are interested in serving as a county commissioner, please send a cover letter and resume explaining your qualifications to the Tuscola County Controller's Office at 125 W. Lincoln Street, Caro, MI 48723 or mhoagland@tuscolacounty.org by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, January 21, 2011. Also, answers to the following questions must be included with your cover letter and resume:

To qualify, candidates must live in District 1, be a registered voter, be 18 years of age and be a United States citizen. The Board will conduct interviews with candidates and make an appointment at their meeting on Thursday, January 27, 2011.

Even though an appointment may be made, an election must be held during 2011 for the District 1 commissioner position. This is an elected position and ultimately will be filled through election. Please contact the County Clerk for filing if you want to be included on the ballot (filing deadline to be on the ballot is February 8, 2011).

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
