CASS CITY, MICHIGAN - WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 2014

75 CENTS ~ 16 PAGES - 1 SUPPLEMENT

MEMBERS OF the Cass City Public Schools' 8th grade Peer to Peer Support group enjoyed an outing Saturday at the Thumb Area Animal Shelter, where they interacted with the "residents" and volunteered for a few hours. Peer to Peer is a program that utilizes students to assist their peers with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) by helping them navigate social challenges in and out of the classroom.

Awareness of autism key to understanding

by Tom Montgomery Editor

Cass City students navigating the strong ally in Paula Garrett.

Talk to Garrett about those students for just a few moments and it becomes clear she has a passion for working with them. She's familiar with their challenges and at the same time understands each child is unique.

Garrett, a Tuscola County Intermediate School District (TISD) speech and language therapist who has worked in the Cass City School District for the past 15 years, also has a passion for spreading the word about Autism Spectrum Disorder in an effort to raise awareness throughout the community.

And this is the ideal time — April is Autism Awareness Month.

"These students need to be understood so their behaviors are not misinterpreted. You can say, 'They should know how to act'. No, they don't," said Garrett, who pointed out that ASD is neurological. In other words, the brains of students with Autism Spectrum Disorder are literally "wired" differently.

For example, Garrett said most people automatically interpret gestures and facial expressions when communicating with others. "These kids are not seeing that," she added. "They have to be taught.'

Students with ASD tend to see life in terms of black and white — no gray area. "They just aren't able to adapt (easily). They're not flexible thinkers," Garret said. "(They) typitive functioning' — the part of the States.

As a result, she continued, "They challenges presented by Autism have a lot of trouble navigating Spectrum Disorder (ASD) have a socially through the world, and everything today is social."

COMPLEX DISORDERS

ASD and autism are both general terms for a group of complex disorders of brain development. These disorders are characterized, in varying degrees, by difficulties in social interaction, verbal and non-verbal communication and repetitive behaviors

ASD can be associated with intellectual disability, difficulties in motor coordination and attention and physical health issues. At the same time, many persons with ASD excel in visual skills, music, math and art, average to above average intellectual abilities.

Autism appears to have its roots in very early brain development. However, the most obvious signs and symptoms tend to emerge between two and three years of age.

Autism statistics from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) identify roughly one in 68 American children as being on the autism spectrum — a 10-fold increase in prevalence in 40 years. Research indicates the increase is only partly explained by improved diagnosis and awareness. Studies also show that autism is four to five times more common among boys than girls, with an estimated one out of 42 boys and one in 189 girls diagcally have difficulties with 'execu- nosed with autism in the United

Are you a stay-at-home mom? You're not alone

by Tom Montgomery

Are you a stay-at-home mom and proud of it? If so, the Chronicle's editorial staff invites you to contact us to be interviewed for an upcoming story focusing on how you made that choice and why you believe it's important for your family.

According to a new survey, nearly three in 10 American mothers are now stay-at-home moms who don't hold a job outside the home, reversing a long-term decline that hit its low point in 1999.

Those findings and more were recently released by the Pew Research Center, a non-partisan "fact tank" that provides information on the issues, attitudes and trends shaping America and the world.

The survey found the percentage of mothers of children under 18 who don't work outside the home has risen over the past decade to 29 percent in 2012, up from 23 percent in 1999. Two-thirds of them are "traditional" married stay-at-home mothers with working husbands, according to the survey, but a growing number are unmarried.

Area moms willing to be interviewed by the Chronicle are asked to contact us by phone (989-872-2010) or via email at tom@ccchronicle.net. We look forward to hearing from you!

"In the Cass City Schools, we curorganizing, initiating, regulating rently have 12 students that are diagnosed with ASD. That's quite a few for a district of this size," Garrett said, adding the students range in grade level from Young 5s all the way up to high school upperclass-

> "It really is a spectrum," she said, referring to the many forms ASD can take. "The primary difficulties with students on the spectrum are communication and socialization. "The majority of students identified in the Cass City Schools with Autism Spectrum Disorder have Asperger's Syndrome," Garrett explained. 'These are students on the spectrum which have normal to above normal intelligence and possess adequate language skills, but exhibit difficulty understanding social thinking concepts, conversing and interacting with others, have restricted patterns and an estimated 40 percent have of interests, and have difficulty understanding the 'hidden curriculum' — those unwritten rules that most of us pick up innately by observing the environment and others' behavior.

"These individuals want to have friends and relationships with others, but it is difficult for them to understand and navigate through the social nuances that occur all day long."

Huron Co. officers arrest two following heroin investigation

by Tom Montgomery Editor

Huron County law enforcement officials have taken another bite out of heroin trafficking in the Thumb.

Huron County Sheriff Kelly J. Hanson announced Thursday that a several-month-long investigation came to a head the day before as Huron County District Court. deputies were involved in a surveillance operation targeting two Elkton suspects' apartment, with scales, a area residents suspected of traffick-

"At approximately 1:45 p.m., our deputies and Elkton Police Chief Scott Jobes confronted the suspects after they parked in the parking lot of Oliver Township, and syringes, pre-Elkton's McKinley Street Apartments. Shortly thereafter, nearly five grams of heroin was located in the suspects' 1997 Pontiac Grand Prix," said Hanson, who added the heroin, when broken down into tenths of a gram, has an estimated street value of between $50 and $100 per tenth.

"This find led to the arrest of the adult male and female suspects on heroin charges. Both reside at the apartment complex," Hanson said. "They were transported to our jail and lodged on the heroin charges, with bonds set at $10,000 cash."

Two minor children in the company of the suspects were turned over to relatives, according to the sheriff. He said Department of Human Services (DHS) officials were called heroin during another lengthy probe in and are investigating.

"Besides the seizure of the heroin and the arrest of the suspects, their vehicle was confiscated and forfeiture proceedings are taking place," Hanson said.

He noted the arrests resulted in deputies executing three search warrants authorized by the Huron County Prosecutor's Office and by "The first warrant was served at the white powdery substance, syringes and other drug paraphernalia being seized," Hanson continued. second search warrant was served at a residence on Myrtle Drive in scription pills and other drug paraphernalia was taken from there. Future charges may result from that search, and DHS is also being contacted because of minor children being involved.

"The last search warrant was for the suspects' vehicle," he added. "That search ended with the seizure of $33 in cash and packaging material."

The suspects, Angela L. Palmer, 29, and Brad A. Labombard, 22, both of Elkton, were formally arraigned Thursday in district court on charges of possession with intent to deliver heroin.

Bond for each defendant was continued at $10,000. They remained lodged in the Huron County Jail.

Farmers forced to hurry up and wait

To no one's surprise, farmers will be planting Michigan's big-acreage row crops a bit later than normal this year.

Their rites of spring will have to race through a compressed schedule as soon as conditions allow — meaning as soon as some sun, wind and warmth make the fields firm enough to work up.

Below-normal temperatures also have farmers sidelined, but with technology on their side, nobody's yet sounding the alarm.

Most farmers, especially in Michigan, are equipped to plant their spring crops in about a 10-15 day window," said Bob Boehm, manager of the center for commodity, farm and industry relations at Michigan Farm Bureau (MFB). "The longer this pattern lingers on into April, the more concern will begin to rise.'

With a long growing season and the ability to germinate at soil temperatures in the 40s, sugar beets are traditionally the first Michigan row crop to be planted in the spring. Seasonal rains threaten their earliest stages of development, though, and re-planting flooded sugar beet fields is a fairly common

Farm Bureau field staff report "nothing going on" in the rich, but waterlogged, fields of the Thumb and Saginaw Valley, where sugar beet cultivation is centered. Optimistic producers had hoped to be planting by April 15, but most realists were eyeing the 20th at best.

Corn planting follows next, as soon as soil temperatures reach the 50s. Even with advanced hybrids to maximize maturation speed, corn has a long growing season that barely fits into Michigan's scanty warm-weather win-

TUSCOLA COUNTY Sheriff Lee Teschendorf recently presented his department's 2013 Officer of the Year Award to 20-year department veteran Deanna Marshall.

Teschendorf: Marshall has earned "officer of year" award

Tuscola County Lee Teschendorf recently presented his top honor to a veteran deputy whose service with the department spans two decades.

Teschendorf selected Deputy Deanna Marshall to receive the department's 2013 Officer of the Year Award.

"Your 20 years of loyal and dedicated service to the office and citizens of the county are recognized with this special honor," Teschendorf

Marshall started out working as a part-time dispatcher from November 1993 through March 1994. Then, she started working in that department full-time. She served in that position until transferring to criminal records March 2, 1999.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Denim Day offers victims support

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month, an observance that will be highlighted Wednesday, April 23, with Denim Day, a day set aside to promote awareness of misconceptions about sexual assault.

The idea was launched following a 1998 court case in Italy, where a teenage girl was raped by her driving instructor. The case went to court and her perpetrator was convicted. However, the conviction was appealed to the Italian Supreme Court and her assailant was found not guilty after the defense successfully argued the sex was consensual because the girl was wearing tight jeans and had to assist in removing her jeans during the crime.

The case underscores the misconceptions behind sexual assault and the still-common desire to blame the victim, the same way some folks figure there is one "correct way" to react in the face of an assault, or when someone questions a rape if the victim doesn't fight back.

Thumb Area Assault Crisis Center officials say it's important to challenge such misconceptions and to bring awareness to the issues surrounding sexual assault.

We agree, considering an estimated 40 percent of women in Michigan have experienced some form of sexual violence, ranging from unwanted touching to forcible rape since the age of 16, and a majority of the reported rapes involve cases in which the victim knows the attacker.

However, sexual assault is a vastly unreported crime nationally. U.S. Department of Justice statistics show that in 1999 alone, only 28 percent of victims reported the assault to police.

A better understanding of sexual assault and the myths behind the crime paves the way to an improved understanding of survivors and ways to empower them, according to experts, who say it also helps to combat stereotypes and discrimination of victims.

Which is why the Thumb Area Assault Crisis Center is joining the national campaign by accepting donations from employees who wear jeans to work April 23. Contributing is as easy as calling the center at (989) 672-1744.

It's a simple gesture, but one that offers an opportunity to shed some light on a devastating crime that not only leaves its victims scarred for life, but also forces many to defend themselves when they should be treated for what they are: victims.

Backside bling

I grew up in an era where cool jeans came outfitted with a tiny red rectangular tag and a number somewhere in the 500s. The choices were straightforward – boot-cut or straight leg, stonewashed or regular. Mom jeans hadn't been invented, because those of us wearing them weren't moms yet.

It was a simpler time – when jeans were jeans. They covered what they needed to cover and served as a practical staple in one's wardrobe. Times have changed. Hip, fashion-forward folks make statements with their derrieres by way of fancy stitching, rhinestones and other gaudy adornments. Bling, baby – it's hit our rear ends and it's hit them hard.

I'm not merely talking about the attire of twentyish trendsetters – although they also follow the fad. I'm referring to moms, like me, bedazzling their backsides in ostentatious splendor – no ifs, ands or buts about it.

You can imagine my reaction when I initially observed other soccer moms and their flashy posteriors. I was shocked and came to an immediate conclusion: I had to get me some of that splash!

I went jeans shopping and discovered people spend big bucks on their big butts. Trendy denim makes us pay for our bling - ka-ching! While most of the embellished pants sat well beyond my budget, I stumbled on a generic brand of less-expensive bling – which is sort of an oxymoron if you think

I made my purchase and drove home feeling mighty hipster. I was officially a rhinestone cowgirl, ready for her first rodeo – or at the very least a local youth sporting event.

When I wore the new jeans, people commented on the sparkle and I thought, "What in the H-E-double-toothpicks was I thinking?" Decorating your derriere can have but one foreseeable outcome: it will make people notice not only your bling, but the size, scope and girth of your back pockets. I'd gone and called attention to the one part of my anatomy that needed no undue scrutiny.

Since then, I've become comfortable with my flash-in-the-pants. I wear them often for one main reason: they are comfortable. Most of the time. The other day, however, I ran into a little glitch with my fancy-pants jeans.

Weather conditions were wet, and unbeknownst to me, droplets of moisture fell onto the fake leather interior of my vehicle. A puddle pooled and was soon met with the rhinestones on my rear. As I drove, my jeans reacted like a paper towel and by the time I arrived at the grocery store my vehicle's seat was dry – mine was not. I hoped my denim water spot wasn't visible to the naked eye. Just in case, I rushed through my shopping list, anxious to make a quick exit.

I stood in the checkout line feeling edgy and damp. I shifted uncomfortably, hoping the wet spot didn't show and praying it didn't look like I'd had more of an accident than I'd actually had. Then I heard a voice behind me.

"Excuse me..."

I turned to see an elderly lady beckoning for my attention. "I couldn't help but notice the back of your jeans," she said.

I nearly fell over.

She paused before continuing, "I was wondering, can you feel those gems on your pockets when you sit down?'

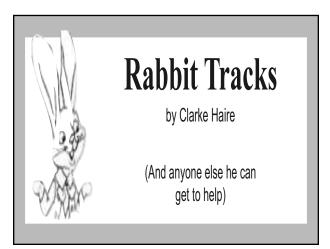

I breathed a sigh of relief and told her I couldn't. She continued to admire my wet backside.

"They sure are pretty," she said. "Those diamonds aren't real, are they?"

I wanted to say, "No, but the fat is." Instead I shook my head and tried to look dry.

Since then, I've come to an important conclusion. While jeans are a necessary staple to most wardrobes, beautifying your behind may not be such a clever decision. But you know what they say: hindsight is always 20/20.

Flooding can contaminate private wells

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) is urging residents whose private water wells are at risk for flood-related contamination to test well water prior to using it.

Floodwater contains bacteria and viruses absorbed from soil, organic debris, and sewage systems in addition to fertilizers, pesticides, and other chemical contaminants. If your well has been flooded, you should immediately refrain from using its water.

Contaminants can enter a well when flooding occurs around the well or through the well cap or vent when floodwater rises over the top of the well.

Water from contaminated wells should not be used for drinking, cooking or brushing teeth until the floodwater recedes and the wells have been tested and found to be free of coliform bacteria. Owners of potentially contaminated wells should use bottled water for drinking, cooking and brushing teeth. Information on protecting your

My son has a way with pets

> by Tom Montgomery Editor

My son Brandon is well on his way to earning a degree in computer technology and has proven himself up to the task — and then some when it comes to handling the responsibility of living on his own. But he still perplexes me at times.

He can confuse me into oblivion in a New York minute by trying to explain the process of writing the most basic of computer codes, and yet he couldn't remember to bring his dirty dishes to the kitchen if his life depended on it.

What really impresses me, however, is Brandon's ability to keep things alive, often without even working all that hard at it.

Take the few pets he's owned over the years. I shudder to think of all the little turtles, gerbils, guinea pigs, etc., I went through during my childhood. In spite of my best efforts, sooner or later, I was looking for another shoebox and planning a funeral for my latest little furry friend. Not Brandon.

It's been a few years now since he took on the responsibility for his goldfish, which has already outlived nearly every childhood pet of mine. He still totes it back and forth from college during breaks (I'm not exactly sure why. I mean, he doesn't really pay much attention to this fish, which has no name and lives in a glass bowl with the slogan, "Don't believe the fish's lies" written on the outside).

As I recall, he obtained the fish via a trade with one of his nephews, who brought it home from a carnival.

And then there's Brandon's pair of ball pythons, Jeffrey and Jasmine which, it turns out, are apparently both female. When he bought them, they were about a foot, maybe 18 inches long. Today they're closing in on five feet.

Granted, Brandon put some effort into learning about creating an environment suitable for these unusual pets, but he wasn't prepared when a particularly aggressive rat — meant to be dinner — viciously attacked one of the snakes, leaving several deep wounds we were certain would be fatal.

Brandon cleaned the wounds and applied an antibiotic cream, and several months later you wouldn't even know the snake had been attacked. Even Brandon's plants seem to have nine lives.

About three years ago he planted a pepper seed in a small planter. Although scraggly and thin — nothing like the robust peppers in his father's garden — it grew. He treated it like a house plant. It produced only a few tiny peppers, but the thing lived for three years.

I haven't figured out Brandon's secret to success with the wonder of (pet and plant) life, but I'd sure like to.

Fat chance. I can't even figure out how to get him to take care of his dirty dishes.

The afterglow hung on for most Cass Cityans in the wake of President Richard Nixon's visit to the village Wednesday, April 10, with residents recalling where they stood and what they thought as the Chief Executive passed by. Most citizens interviewed agree it was an historic occasion-one that may never be duplicated again in their lifetimes. Whether or not the trip influenced voting didn't seem to matter as much as his actual being here. Kenneth Eisinger of 4663 Huron St. said she thought the visit would help get out the vote in the special congressional election and said she hoped it would influence the outcome. "I was standing near the platform," she said. "I got down there at 9:30 a.m. but then I had to leave for a few minutes, so I ended up with not as good a spot." She added that a man standing at least six feet tall stood in front of her most of the time, so she actually only caught glimpses of the President.

Her daughter, she said, was in the high school band which played for the occasion and had a front-row spot for the whole thing. Another Cass Cityan who was impressed by the event was Mrs. Eugene Hofstedt of 6764 Main St. She said she stood at one point about 15 feet from Nixon and her daughter got close enough for snapshots. "We put out our flag in respect of the Presidency, trees for beautifying school grounds said. "It was truly an historic occa-

She added that the trip probably did not change many voters' minds. Postman Dick Root said Thursday that the trip was a good thing and good for Cass City because it got people working together. He said it probably aided in Republican James Sparling's drives for the House seat. One Cass Cityan who missed the festivities completely was Pat Rabideau, who was at work at the post office. "I was sitting right here when he came," Rabideau said, pointing to his swivel chair behind the counter. He was one of the few, however, for most of Cass City's work force and residents were on hand. The courthouse closed at 11:00 a.m., as did most county departments. One such worker was District Court Probation Officer Roland Price, who said afterward he felt a sense of awe at having seen the Smokey the bear was a visitor to the President of the United States. Price, a native of Belize in Central America (formerly British Honduras) has had the privilege of seeing other notables in recent years. He has seen Princess Margaret, Queen Mother Elizabeth and Archbishop of Canterbury, but never a President of the U.S. "I felt very, very impressed with having seen him," Price said Thursday. "I felt very fortunate at having been able to see in person the President of this country." He said while he had corresponded with senators and congressmen in his work, this was a unique experience for him in Cass City. "I think it was an opportunity for me to look at him as a man instead of an office and to feel a little compassion for him," Price said. Price said whichever way the election goes, rationales can be drawn finalist in the Miss Michigan Teen both ways regarding the effect of the Governor Ferris has issued the following proclamation: "One of my dearest memory pictures is father sitting in the cooling shade of a beautiful pine that he and I planted long years ago. The sweet plaintive music of this tree comes back to me in moments of solitude. Trees are real friends of man, beast and bird. In recent years we have come to realize this. It is hoped that Americans will acquire enthusiasm in preserving useful and beautiful trees in both city and country, that they will plant every year useful and beautiful trees by the roadside, in school yards, about their homes, in parks and farm fields. Let us cherish a loyalty and love for our feathered songsters; a tender regard for the birds who can't sing, birds that destroy in the aggregate millions of destructive insects. The economic and aesthetic value of bird life is beyond calculation. The hearts of boys and girls and 'grown ups' become more human, more helpful, as they come to read aright the Creator's message in the lives of trees and birds. Therefore, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate May 8th, 1914, as Arbor and Bird Day, and do request that this day be observed by all schools, public and private, and other educational institutions by the planting of able exercises for promotion the spirit of protection to trees and birds."

Farmers forced to hurry up and wait this spring

According to recent figures from the USDA National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), Michigan farmers anticipate planting roughly the same amount of corn as they did last year, approximately 2.60 million acres.

Echoing a national trend, Michigan soybean plantings this year are expected to increase to 2.1 million acres from the previous year's 1.9 million. If realized, that would mark the second-largest acreage on record, according to Jay Johnson, director of the NASS Great Lakes Regional Office.

Plantings of dry, edible beans will be up this year as well, from 175,000 acres last year to 185,000 acres.

Michigan leads the nation in several varieties of edible beans, including black, cranberry and small red beans. The state is second only to North Dakota in navy beans and total dry bean production.

Dry beans are the last of the major row crops to be planted in Michigan, thanks to a relatively short growing season.

Michigan kicks off healthcare coverage enrollment campaign

Human Services (DHS) recently kicked off the state's Healthy Michigan Plan enrollment activities to begin providing healthcare coverage to nearly half a million more Michigan residents.

"Today's launch marks a significant milestone in our ongoing efforts for a healthier Michigan," said Gov. Rick Snyder. "The Healthy Michigan Plan is about improving the health and wellbeing of our citizens, saving money for taxpayers and job providers and ensuring our state's continued comeback. I encourage all eligible Michiganders to enroll by going online, calling or visiting a local DHS office."

Maura Corrigan were on hand in Detroit to begin enrolling Michigan residents into the Healthy Michigan Plan. MDCH is kicking off the program in conjunction with a comprehensive enrollment campaign.

"In making Michigan a healthier, stronger state, we have placed a significant focus on improving the health status of residents," said Haveman, director of the MDCH.

Blast from the past...

AREA HISTORY buff Tyler Perry recently submitted this photo, which he found while going through a box of old postcards. "It was taken on Houghton Street, between Maple and Sherman streets, probably in the late teens or early 1920s. The man is Henry Nowland," Perry said. "The fact that there are no leaves on the trees, and the muddy and rutty road indicate it was probably taken around this time of year."

THE GIFT OF GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD — Romans 6:23

Resurrection Ready?

In 1799 the armies of Napoleon swept over Europe. General Massena suddenly appeared on the heights above the town of Feldkirch with 18,000 men. It was Easter Day and the town council was hastily called together to decide what should be done.

After much frantic discussion, the old Dean of the church rose and said, "My brothers, it is Easter Day! We have been reckoning in our own strength and that fails. Let us turn to God. Ring the bells and have services as usual, and leave the matter in God's hands." They agreed and from the church towers of Feldkirch rang out joyous peals in honor of the Resurrection as the streets filled with worshipers hastening to the house of God.

The French heard the sudden clanging of the bells with surprise and alarm. Concluding the Austrian army had arrived to relieve the place, Massena broke camp, gave the order to march, and before the bells had ceased ringing, there was not a Frenchman in sight.

This illustration shows in a very practical way the power of Christ's resurrection. For once the townspeople of Feldkirch became "Resurrection Ready," they were freed from the fear of death. On the other hand, had the French army been "Resurrection" Ready," and realized it was Easter Sunday, they would not have fled in fear. Likewise, to know Jesus Christ and the power of His resurrection allows us to stand strong and removes the fear of death for all who believe! Romans 6:5-9 says:

- For if we have become united with Him in the likeness of His death, certainly we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection,
- knowing this, that our old self was crucified with Him, that our body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves to sin;
 - for he who has died is freed from sin.
- Now if we have died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him,
- knowing that Christ, having been raised from the dead, is never to die again; death no longer is master over Him.

As we look at the Power and the Purpose of Christ's resurrection, we find that if we will identify with the likeness of Christ's death, we will also be identified in the likeness of His resurrection. Or, as verses 6-8 testify, if we are willing to allow the old self be crucified, i.e., the natural man (our sin nature), we have the promise from God that we shall also live with Christ in the glory of His resurrected state. Which state is that? The same state in which we see the Lord after He walked away from the grave. As you recall, He came out with the same body, but now it was "resurrection ready." Thomas put his hands in the nail prints and wounded side. He appeared as before because the disciples recognized who He was. After the resurrection, Jesus ate and drank and breathed and spoke and walked, and did all of those physical things He did before He died. But now He could also pass through walls, appear and disappear at will, and travel great distances in a moment. Though He was the same, He was now transformed and possessed a new body that triumphed over death and decay – a body fit for heaven! The fifth verse of our text assures us "...if we have become united with Him in the likeness of His death, certainly we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection." The Bible promises that we too shall possess a magnificent, transformed body fit for heaven. Now that is resurrection power!

The resurrection of Jesus Christ not only guarantees the Christian eternal life, but its purpose is to make known to all the world that those who put faith in Him have been justified before God. This justification is seen not only here and now but will be witnessed for all eternity.

The resurrection of Christ is a historical fact. It is foundational to Christianity. Without it there is no faith and "we above all men are most miserable." All founders of all other religions are still in their graves, but Jesus Christ is alive and well at the right hand of God the Father. And because He lives we possess all things and have no fear of death!

Arthur Brisbane once pictured a crowd of grieving caterpillars carrying the corpse of a cocoon to its final resting place. The poor distressed caterpillars, clad in black, were weeping and grieving, but all the while the beautiful butterfly fluttered happily above the muck and mire of earth, forever freed from its earthly shell.

At this special season, have you identified with the crucified Christ, had your sins forgiven and made yourself "Resurrection Ready?"
